the Mosaic ceremonies under the Gospel dispensation and worship. EUPHRATES, a large and celebrated river of Western Asia: it rises in Armenia Major near Mount Aba, and, after flowing by Syria, Mesopotamia, and the site of Babylon, it empties itself into the Persian Gulf. In Gen. xv. 18. it is called "the great river," which distinctive appellation it deserves in contrast with rivers generally, though not with the Nile. (Buckingham's Travels in Mesopotamia, vol. i. p. 54.) Like the Nile, at certain seasons of the year, the Euphrates inundates the flat countries on its banks, and renders them extremely fertile.

EUROCLYDON, a tempestuous wind common in the Mediterranean, and well known to modern mariners by the name of a Levanter. It is not confined to any one single point, but blows in all directions from the north-east, round by the north, to the south-east. The great wind, or mighty tempest, or vehement east wind, described by the prophet Jonah (i. 4. iv. 8.), appears to have been one of these Levanters. Of this description was the violent or tempestuous wind mentioned in Acts xxvii. 14. (Shaw's Travels, vol. ii. pp. 127, 128.)

EVE, the wife of Adam, and the common mother of the human race. (Gen. ii. iii.) The character of Eve is only known to us by her sin; in the commission of which we may observe the two fundamental passions, of which all the others are modifications; viz. pride-ye shall be as gods; and sensuality-the tree was good for food, and its fruit was pleasant to the eyes. (Gen.

EVIL-MERODACH, the son and successor of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon. He delivered Jehoiakim king of Judah out of prison, upon whom he conferred many favours. (2 Kings xxv. 27. Jer. lii. 31.) According to Archbishop Usher, he reigned only one year, and was succeeded by his son Belshazzar.

EUTYCHUS, circumstances of the death of, explained, 153, 154. EXCOMMUNICATION, punishment of, and its effects, 66. 106. EXECUTION of sentences, how and by whom performed, 57.

EXPLATION, day of, how solemnized, 127.

Exposition of Scripture, part of the synagogue worship, 106. EXPOSURE to wild beasts, a capital punishment, 68. St. Paul not thus actually exposed, 191.

Exes, putting out, a Jewish punishment, 66. Painting of the eyes described, 158.

EZEKIEL, the son of Buzi, of the house of Aaron (Ezek. i. 1.) was carried captive to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar, with Jehoiakim king of Judah. He is the third of the greater prophets. See a further account of Ezekiel, and an analysis of his predictions in pp. 283-287.

EZION-GEBER, a port in Idumæa, on the Elanitic gulf, whence Solomon sent ships to Ophir. (1 Kings ix, 26.) In later times it was called Berenice. Dr. Shaw supposes it to be the same port which is now called by the Arabs Meenah-el-Dsahab, or the port of gold. (Travels, vol. ii. pp. 118, 119.)

EZRA or ESDRAS, the son (or, according to Coquerel and others, the grandson or great-grandson) of Seraiah, was a priest and scribe or doctor of the law; who, returning from capiivity, with a full commission from Artaxerxes, to settle the church and state of the Jews, zealously exerted himself in rectifying all the disorders which had crept into their affairs during their captivity. See a further account of Ezra, and an analysis of the historical book which bears his name, in pp. 224, 225.

FAIR HAVENS, a place so called on the coast of Crete, most probably because it had good anchorage. (Acts xxvii. 8.) In the fourth century, according to Jerome, it was a large town.

FAMILIES, Heads of, 41, 42. FAMINES in the Holy Land, 40.

Fasts of the Jews, public and private, how solemnized, 132. Fast of the atonement, 127.

FATHERS, Jewish, power of, over their families, 164.

FEASTS of the Jews, account of, 121-129. Benefits resulting from them, 123. Notice of their funeral feasts, 202. See DEDI-CATION, EXPLATION, JUBILEE, NEW MOON, PASSOVER, PENTE-COST, PURIM, SABBATH, SABBATICAL YEAR, TABERNACLES, TRUMPETS.

FEET, washing of, 169, 170. Female ornaments of, 158.

Felix, procurator of Judæa, account of, 53. and 327.

FERTILITY of Palestine, account of, 35-38. FESTUS, procurator of Judæa, notice of, 53.

FIG TREES of Palestine, 36, 37.

FINES, various, imposed by the Jews, 65.

FIRST-BORN, privileges of, 163.

FIRST-FRUITS, presentation of, 119, 120. FLORUS, procurator of Judæa, notice of, 53.

Food and entertainments of the Jews, 171-173. Particular kinds of food, why allowed or prohibited to them, 171, 172.

FOOT-RACE, allusions to, explained, 192-194.

FOREST of Cedars, 36; of Ephraim's, ibid; of Hareth, ibid; of Oaks, ibid.

FORTIFICATIONS of the Jews, 88, 89.

FOUNTAINS in the Holy Land, account of, 28, 29.

FREEDOM of Rome, how acquired, and its privileges, 58, 59.

FUNERAL RITES of the Jews, 199, 200,

FURNITURE of oriental houses, 154, 155.

GAAL, the son of Ebed, who raised a revolt in Shechem against Abimelech the son of Gideon; but, being defeated by the latter, he was compelled to flee. (Judg. ix. 26-41.) It is not known who he was or what afterwards became of him.

GAASH, a hill in the inheritance of Ephraim, on the north side of which stood Timnath-Serah, memorable as being the place where Joshua was buried. (Josh. xxiv. 30.) At the foot of this hill, probably, were the brooks (or valleys) of Gaash mentioned in 2 Sam. xxiii. 30.

GABBATHA. See p. 21.

GAD.

 Gad, or Good Fortune, a Syrian idol, notice of, 137.
 Seventh son of Jacob, born of Zilpah: he gave his name to one of the twelve tribes; for the limits of whose allotment,

3. A prophet, the friend of David, whom he faithfully followed during his persecutions by Saul. After David's establishment on the throne of Israel, Gad was commissioned to propose to him one of three scourges, which was to punish the sinful numbering of the people; and afterwards directed him to build an altar in the threshing-floor of Ornan or Araunah. (1 Sam. xxii. 5. 2 Sam. xxiv.) Gad also wrote a history of David's reign, whence, perhaps, was taken the narrative of that census; and he transmitted to that monarch the divine commands concerning the establishment of public worship. (2 Chron. xxix. 25.)

GADARA was, according to Josephus (Bell. Jud. lib. iv. c. 24.), the metropolis of Peræa, or the region beyond Jordan: it was one of the cities of the district of Decapolis, and consequently under heathen jurisdiction, on which account, perhaps, it was destroyed by the Jews, but was rebuilt by Pompey, in favour of Demetrius Gadarensis, his manumitted servant, according to Josephus. The inhabitants of this city being rich, sent legates to Vespasian when he advanced against Judæa, and gave up this strong city to him; both the city and the villages belonging to it lay within the region of the Gergesenes, whence Christ going into the country of the Gadarenes, (Mark v. 1.), is said to go into the region of the Gergesenes (Matt. viii. 28.) The remains of the warm baths for which this place was anciently celebrated, and also of the tombs (among which the Gadarene demoniac abode) are still to be seen. Gadara is now called Oomkais, or Omkeis. The modern inhabitants of this place are as inhospitable as they were in the time of Jesus Christ. (Quarterly Rev. vol. xxvi. p. 389. Irby's and Mangles' Travels, pp. 297, 298. Madden's Travels in Turkey, &c. vol. ii. p. 311.) GALUS

1. A Macedonian, and fellow-traveller of Saint Paul, who was seized by the populace at Ephesus. (Acts xix. 29.)

2. A native of Derbe, who accompanied Paul in his last journey to Jerusalem. (Acts xx.4.) To him St. John is supposed to have addressed his third epistle.

3. An inhabitant of Corinth, with whom Paul lodged, and in whose house the Christians were accustomed to meet. (Rom. xvi 23. 1 Cor. i. 14.)

GALATIA, a province of Asia Minor, bounded on the west by Phrygia, on the east by the river Halys, on the north by Paphlagonia, and on the south by Lycaonia. This country derived its name from the Gauls, two tribes of whom (the Trocmi and Tolistoboii) with a tribe of the Celts, or according to Prof. Hug, Germans (the Tectosages), finding their own country too small to support its redundant population, migrated thither after the sacking of Rome by Brennus; and mingling with the former inhabitants, and adopting the Greek language, the whole were called Gallo-Græci. During the reign of Augustus (A. v. c. 529, B. c. 26.), Galatia was reduced into a Roman province, and was thenceforth governed by the Roman laws, under the administration of a proprætor. The Galatians seem to have preserved their native religion, to which they superadded the worship of the great mother of the gods. Their principal cities were Ancyra, Tavium, and Pessinus; the latter of which carried on some commerce. Callimachus (Hymn. in Delum, v. 184.) and Hilary (Hymn. Hieron. pref. in. ep. ad Galat.), who was himself a Gaul, represent them as a very foolish people; whence St. Paul says, (iii. 1.) O FOOLISH Galatians, who hath bewitched you? This church was so dangerously perverted, and almost overturned, by the Judaizers there, that the apostle, in his epistle to them, does not call them saints. See an analysis of his epistle to the Galatians in Vol. II. pp. 337, 338. Galatia was also the seat of colonies from various nations, among whom were many Jews; and from all of these St. Paul appears to have made many converts to Christianity. (Gal. i. 2. 1 Cor. xvi. 1. 2 Tim. 4. 10. 1 Pet. i. 1.) According to Josephus (Ant. Jud. lib. xvi. c. 6.), the Jews here enjoyed considerable privileges. Robinson, voce Гадата; Hug's Introd. vol. ii. pp. 363-365.)

GALILEE, Upper and Lower, 17, 18. The Galilæans were accounted brave and industrious, though the other Jews affected to consider them as not only stupid and unpolished, but also seditious, and therefore proper objects of contempt. (John i. 47. viii. 52.) They were easily distinguished from the Jews of Jerusalem by a pecculiar dialect; for a notice of which, see p. 17. and note 2.

Galilæans, sect of, principles of, 148. GALILEE OF THE NATIONS, 18. Galilee, Sea of, account of, 26, 27.

Gallio, a proconsul of Achaia, was the elder brother of the philosopher Seneca, and was called Marcus Annæus Novatus; but took the name of Gallio, after being adopted into the family of Lucius Junius Gallio. Before his tribunal Saint Paul was dragged at Corinth. His conduct on that occasion exhibits him in the character of a mild and amiable man; and St. Luke's account is confirmed by profane writers. See Vol. I. p. 79.

GAMALIEL, a Pharisee and an eminent doctor of the law, under whom St. Paul was educated. (Acts v. 24. xxii. 3.) He possessed great influence among the Jews, and is said by some to have presided over the sanhedrin during the reigns of Tiberius, Caligula, and Claudius.

Games, Olympic, allusions to, explained, 191-194. Gymnastic games in imitation of them among the Jews, 190.

Gardens of the Hebrews, notice of, 180.

Garments of the priests, 113. Of the high-priests, 113, 114. Rending of, a sign of mourning, 159. Great wardrobes of, GATES of cities, 155.; were seats of justice, 54. Gates of Jerusalem, 19, 20.

GATH, a city of the Philistines, one of their five principalities (1 Sam. vi. 17.), famous for having given birth to Goliath. David conquered it in the beginning of his reign over all Israel (1 Sam. xvii. 4.): it continued subject to his successors till the declension of the kingdom of Judah. Rehoboam rebuilt or fortified it. (2 Chron. xi. 8.) Uzziah reconquered it, as did Hezekiah. Josephus makes it part of the tribe of Dan; but Joshua takes no notice of it. Calmet thinks, that Mithcah, mentioned by Moses (Num. xxxiii. 29.), is the Metheg in 2 Sam. viii. 1. In our authorized version it is rendered, David took Metheg-Ammah, that is, Metheg the Mother, which, in 1 Chron. xviii. 1., is explained by—He took Gath and her daughters (or towns); Gath being the mother, and Metheg the daughter. But it may be that the district of Gath and its dependencies was called in David's time Metheg-Ammah; but this being unusual, or becoming obsolete, the author of the Chronicles explains it to be Gath and its villages. According to this idea, Gath of the Philistines, the birth-place of giants (2 Sam. xxi. 20. 22.), must lie far in Arabia Petræa, towards Egypt, which is confirmed by the author of the first book of Chronicles, who says, that the sons of Ephraim being in Egypt, attacked the city of Gath, and were there slain. (1 Chron. vii. 21.)

Jerome says, there was a large town called Gath, in the way from Eleutheropolis to Gaza; and Eusebius speaks of another Gath, five miles from Eleutheropolis, toward Lydda (consequently different from that which Jerome speaks of); also another Gath, or Gattha, between Jamnia and Antipatris. Jerome likewise, speaking of Gath-Opher, the place of the prophet Jonah's birth, says, it was called Gath-Opher, or Gath, in the district of Opher, to distinguish it from others of the same Gath was the most southern city of the Philistines, as Ekron was the most northern; so that Ekron and Gath are placed as the boundaries of their land. (1 Sam. vii. 14. xvii. 52.) Gath lay near Mareshah (2 Chron. xi. 8. Micah i. 14. Heb.), which nearly agrees with Jerome, who places Gath on the road from Eleutheropolis to Gaza. Gath was a place of strength, in the time of the prophets Amos and Micah, independent of the kings of Judah (Amos vi. 2. Micah i. 10. 14.); but was taken by Uzziah, king of Judah, while Amos was living; and afterwards by Hezekiah, in Micah's time. Gethaim (2 Sam. iv. 3. Neh. xi. 33.) is Gath. David had a company of Gittite guards.

GAULONITIS, District of, 18.

Gaza, a very celebrated city of the Jews, distant about 60 miles south-west from Jerusalem: it was one of the five cities of the Philistines, which fell by lot to the tribe of Judah (Josh. xv. 47.), and which offered their golden emerods to the God of Israel for a trespass-offering. (1 Sam. vi. 17.) Its gates were carried away by Samson (Judg, xvi. 2.), and hither he was conducted when taken by the Philistines (v. 21.), three thousand of whom, both men and women, were assembled on the roof of the temple of their god Dagon (27.), and perished when Samson pulled it down. (30.) "If any one should question the possibility of 3000 people being upon the roof of the temple in question, he may be referred to the accounts of the temples at Thebes in Upper Egypt, which have been given by all recent travellers; accounts, which, while they come to us authenticated in such a manner as to admit of no doubt in regard to their verity and correctness, at the same time present things apparently incredible, and contrary to all the philosophizing of most speculative and theoretical historians. The ruins of ancient Greece and Rome, so far as vastness and extent are concerned, dwindle into insignificance when compared with the astonishing remains of early architecture at Thebes. What is most confounding of all to that philosophizing, in which historians of a skeptical cast are prone to indulge, is, that these mighty ruins are, beyond all doubt, the relics of architecture designed and executed in ages, when (as some popular writers admonish us to believe) men were not yet weaned from contending with the beasts of the forest for their lairs and for their acorns, nor but very little elevated above them. The ruins at Thebes present evidences of control over physical, mechanical power; of skill in architecture on a scale of surprising magnitude; and of art in mixing and laying on colours, that are fresh as if painted but yesterday, after having been laid on for more than thirty centuries; which confound and put to shame all that the arts and sciences, and the experience of three thousand years, have since been able to accomplish. So much for the rudeness, and barbarity, and ignorance of the primitive ages. The Philistines, the near neighbours of the Egyptians, and their hearty coadjutors in polytheism, might well have, and doubtless had, large temples as well as they; large enough to afford room for three thousand, and some of them not improbably for many more, to stand upon the roof. As to the strength of Samson, in tearing away pillars on which such enormous weight rested;—those, who disbelieve any thing which is miraculous, will of course regard the whole as a mythos (or fable); those, who admit the reality of miracles, will doubtless be ready to believe, that there was some supernatural aid afforded him in the case under consideration. A heavy blow was inflicted upon polytheism by the event in question, and on its votaries, who were the enemies of God's chosen people." (Stuart's Hebr. Chrestomathy, pp. 189, 190.)

After destroying Tyre, Alexander the Great besieged Gaza, which was at that time held by a Persian garrison, and took it after a siege of two months. He appears to have left the city standing; but afterwards, B.c. 96, Alexander Jannæus, reigning prince of the Jews, took it after a siege of a year and destroyed it. Thus was Gaza made desolate agreeably to the prediction of Zephaniah. (ii. 4.) Subsequently Gabinius rebuilt this city, which Augustus bestowed on Herod the Great, after whose death it was annexed to Syria. (Schleusner and Robinson, voce Γαζα.) The city of Gaza is mentioned in Acts viii. 26. with the parenthetical remark,—that auth is the ispace—it [or the same] is desert : which has greatly exercised the ingenuity of commentators, some of whom refer airn to idec, and translate it by unfrequented; while others referring it to the city, explain it by deprived of fortifications: others again suppose the ancient city to have remained desolate, and that which flourished in the days of St. Luke to have occupied a somewhat different site nearer to the sea; and others consider these words to be a mere gloss which has found its way into the text. A passage, however, in Josephus, which has escaped the researches of most of the learned men, clears up the difficulty, and shows the minute fidelity of the sacred historian. A short time before the siege of Jerusalem, in consequence of a massacre of the Jews at Cæsarea, the whole nation became greatly enraged, and in revenge laid waste many villages and cities; and among these were Anthedon and Gaza, which they utterly demolished. Gaza therefore was actually ionmos, a desert, at the time St. Luke wrote. (Josephus, Bell. Jud. lib. ii. c. 18, § 1. Hug's Introd. vol. i. p. 25.) The neighbourhood of modern Gaza is described by Captains Irby and Mangles as being richly wooded with olives, sycamores, mulberries, cedars, fir trees, &c. &c. The country is enclosed by hedges of prickly pears, the hills gently rising to the view beyond each other, and the whole has a beautiful appearance. Excepting the perishable materials, with which the houses are constructed, stone being substituted for mud, the town partakes of the wretched appearance of those in Egypt. (Travels, p. 178.)

GEBAL, Mount, 31.

Gedeliah, the son of Ahikam, was left by Nebuchadnezzar in Palestine, after the destruction of Jerusalem, to govern the remainder of the people who continued there. He was treacherously slain by Ishmael the son of Nethaniah. (2 Kings xxv. 22—25.)

Gehazi, the servant of the prophet Elisha, who, contrary to his master's intention, fraudulently obtained presents of Naaman, the Syrian general, and was smitten with leprosy for his wickedness (2 Kings v. 20—27.); a judgment which ought to warn us not only of the curse which cleaves to ill-gotten wealth, but above all, of the just vengeance of God, which pursues all who, for purposes of worldly gain, bring a scandal and reproach upon their religion.

Gehinnon, or the Valley of Hinnon, 32.

Genealogies of the Hebrews, 79.; of the Herodian family, 51.
Gennesareth, a region 50 furlongs in length, and 20 in breadth; a very pleasant and fruitful place, abounding in the gardens of great men, whence it had its name from Gen and Sar, as being the garden of princes; it lay at the bottom of the Lake of Gennesareth, and gave that name to it. (Luke v. 1.)

GENNESARETH, Sea of, 26, 27.

GENTILES, court of, in the temple, 99.

GEOGRAPHY, not unknown to the Jews as a science, 187. Sketch of the historical and physical geography of Palestine, 13—40.

Gengesa, a town near Gadara, so called, either from the Girgashites, the posterity of Canaan (for neither did Zebulon nor Naphtali drive out all the Canaanites, Judg. i. 30. 33.), or from Gergishta, signifying clay, the soil being clay; it gave name to a region so called, which comprehended in it Gadara, Hippo, and Magdala. See Gadara, p. 423.

and Magdala. See Gadara, p. 423.

Gerizim (Mount), a peak of Mount Ephraim, over-against Mount Ebal; between the two the city Shechem was situated. (Deut. xi. 29. xxvii. 11, 12.) In subsequent times this mountain became the seat of the religious worship of the Samaritans, who erected a temple there; for a notice of which, see p. 101.

Gershom and Eliezer, the sons of Moses and Zipporah, were only simple Levites, while their relations, the sons of Aaron, enjoyed the highest honours of the pontificate.

General A. a son of Levi, who gave his name to one of the three great branches of the Levites. The office of the Gershonites was, to carry the veils and curtains of the tabernacle, on the western side of which they encamped.

Geseure, a country in Syria, the daughter of whose king David married, and by her had Absalom (2 Sam. xv. 8.), who, after the murder of his brother Amnon, retired to the king of Geshur his grandfather. (13.)

GESSIUS FLORUS, the procurator of Judea, notice of, 53.

Vol. II.

GI

Getrisemane, a garden beyond Kedron, at the foot of Mount Olivet, so called from the wine-presses in it: it is memorable in the evangelical history, as being the scene of our Saviour's agony. It is described by recent travellers, as being a small plat of ground, with a low hedge or enclosure of stones; no verdure growing on it, save six or eight venerable-looking olives, which have stood there for many centuries: they are highly venerated by the Christians here, who consider any attempt to cut or injure them as amounting to an act of profanation. (Missionary Register for 1824, p. 504. Jowett's Researches in Syria, p. 303. Carne's Letters, p. 290. Rae Wilson's Travels, vol. i. p. 212. third edition.)

GIBEAH, a city in the tribe of Benjamin, not far from Jerusalem: it is frequently called Gibeah of Saul, from being the birth-place of the first Hebrew monarch.

GIBEON, the capital city of the Gibeonites, who took advantage of the oaths of Joshua, and of the elders of Israel, on an artful representation which they made of their belonging to a very remote country. (Josh. ix.) Joshua and the elders had not the precaution to consult God on this affair, and inconsiderately made a league with these people: they soon discovered their mistake, and without revoking their promise of giving them their lives, they condemned them to carry wood and water to the tabernacle, and other servile work, as a mark of their pusillanimity and duplicity, as slaves and captives; in which state of servitude they remained, till the entire dispersion of the Jewish nation, A. M. 2553, B. c. 1451. Three days after the Gibeonites had surrendered to the Hebrews, the kings of the Canaamites being informed of it, came and besieged the city of Gibeon. (Josh. x. 3, &c.) The Gibeonites came to Joshua, and desired speedy help. Joshua attacked the five kings early in the morning, put them to flight, and pursued them to Bethoron.

The Gibeonites were descended from the Hivites, the old inhabitants of that country, and possessed four cities; Cephirah, Beeroth, Kirjath-jearim, and Gibeon, the capital, afterwards given to Benjamin, excepting Kirjath-jearim, which fell to Judah. The Gibeonites continued subject to those burdens which Joshua had imposed on them, and were very faithful to the Israelites. Nevertheless Saul, through what mistaken zeal we cannot tell, destroyed a very great number of them (2 Sam. xxi. 1, 2, 3, &c.); but God, as a punishment of his cruelty, in the reign of David, sent a great famine, which lasted three years (A. M. 2983, B. c. 1017); and the prophets told David that this calamity would continue so long as that cruelty remained unrevenged, which Saul had exercised against the Gibeonites. David asked the Gibeonites, what satisfaction they desired? They answered, "Seven of Saul's sons we will put to death, to avenge the blood of our brethren." The Gibeonites hung them up before the Lord. This happened early in the spring, when, in Palestine, they begin barley-harvest. From this time there is no mention of the Gibeonites, as composing a sort of separate people. But it is probable that they were included among the Nethinim, or Given, who were public slaves, appointed for the service of the temple. (1 Chron. ix. 2.) Afterwards, those of the Canaanites, who were subdued, and had their lives spared, were added to the Gibeonites. We see (Ezra viii. 20. ii. 58. 1 Kings ix. 20, 21.) that David, Solomon, and the princes of Judah, gave many of them to the Lord; these Nethinim being carried into captivity with Judah and the Levites, many of them returned with Ezra, Zerubbabel, and Nehemiah, and continued as before, in the service of the temple, under the priests and Levites. Gibeon was seated on an eminence, as is evidenced by its name. It was forty furlongs from Jerusalem (according to Josephus) north. It is called Gabaa. (2 Sam. v. 25. compared with 1 Chron. xiv. 16.) There is mention of the fountain and pool of Gibeon. (2 Sam. ii. 13.)

We neither know when, nor by whom, nor upon what occasion, the tabernacle and altar of burnt sacrifices made by Moses, in the wilderness, were removed to Gibeon; but this we certainly know, that toward the end of David's reign, and in the beginning of Solomon's, they were there. (I Chron. xxi. 29, 30.) David, seeing the angel of the Lord at Araunah's threshing-floor, was so terrified, that he had not time or strength to go so far as Gibeon, there to offer sacrifice, but Solomon being seated on the throne, went to sacrifice at Gibeon, because this was the most considerable of all the high places, where sacrifices were then tolerated, the temple being not yet built. (1 Kings

iii. 4.)

GIDEON, the fifth judge of the Israelites, whom he delivered from the oppression of the Midianites. (Judg. vii. viii.) He was the son of Joash, of the tribe of Manasseh; and, having destroyed the worship of Baal, was surnamed JERUBBAAL. (Judg. vi. 25-32.)

GIDEON, Ephod of, 137.

GIHON.

1. One of the four rivers of Paradise; which Bishop Patrick and Dr. Wells suppose to be the easterly channel of the two, into which the Euphrates is divided after its junction with the Tigris. Others, however, (and among them, Gesenius,) suppose it to be the Oxus or Araxes. Josephus considers it to be the Nile, (Ant. Jud. lib. i. c. 1. § 3.), which now is said to be called Guyon by the Abyssinians.

2. A fountain or watercourse near Jerusalem, where Solomon was anointed King by Zadok the priest and Nathan the prophet. (1 Kings i. 32-40.) It is supposed to be the same which was afterwards called SILOAM; for a notice of which, see p. 28.

GILBOA, Mountains of, notice of, 30.
GILEAD, Mountains of, notice of, 31. Balm of, 36.

GILGAL, a celebrated place on the east of Jericho, and on this side Jordan, where the Israelites encamped for some time after their passage over that river. A city was afterwards built there, which became memorable for many events. It was a seat of justice (or, as we should now term it, an assize-town): Samuel, when travelling in circuit through the land, went yearly to Gilgal. (1 Sam. vii. 16.) Here Saul was crowned king of the Hebrews. In subsequent times it was the seat of idolatry. (Hos. iv. 15. Amos v. 5.)

GIRDLES, notice of, 156. Military girdle, 88.
GIRGASHITES, an ancient people of Canaan, whose habitation was beyond the sea of Tiberias, where we find some vestiges of their name in the city of GERGESA or Gergasa, upon the sea of Tiberias.

Gon, crimes against, how punished by the Jews, 61, 62.

GOEL, or blood-avenger, office of, 67.

Gog and Magog, the accurate chronologer, Dr. Hales, thinks, are the general names of the northern nations of Europe and Asia, or the districts north of Caucasus, or Mount Taurus, colonized by Gog, or Magog, another of the sons of Japhet (Gen. x. 2.), called, by the Arabian geographers, Jajuie and Majuje. (Rennel. Herod. p. 112.) Gog rather denotes the people, Magog the land. Thus Balaam foretold that Christ would be "a king higher than Agag," or rather "Gog," according to the more correct reading of the Samaritan Hebrew text, and of the Septuagint version of Num. xxiv. 7.: and Ezekiel, foretelling a future invasion of the land of Israel by these northern nations, Meshech, Tubal, and Togarmah, styles "Gog their chief ' and describes their host precisely as Scythian or Tartarian; "coming out of the north, all of them riding on horses;" "bows and arrows" their weapons; "covering the land, like a cloud, and coming like a storm," in the "latter days." (Ezek. xxxviii. 1-17.) He also describes their immense slaughter, in the valley of the passengers on the east of the sea, thence called the valley of the passengers on the east of the sea, thence called the valley of Hamon Gog, "the multitude of Gog," (Ezek. xxxix. 1—22.) This prophecy seems also to be revived in the Apocalypse, where the hosts of Gog and Magog are represented as coming to invade "the beloved city," and perishing with immense slaughter likewise in Armageddon, "the Mount of Mageddo," or Megiddo. (Rev. xvi. 14—16. xx. 7—10.) Dr. Hales's Analysis of Chronology, vol. i. p. 463. (first edition). Golden Cale, worship of, 136. Golden calves of Jeroboam, ibid

GOLGOTHA, notice of, 19.

GOLIATH, a Philistine giant, a native of Gath, well known for his combat with David. (1 Sam. xvii.)

Gomen, the son of Japhet (Gen. x. 2, 3. Ezek. xxxviii. 6.), whose posterity peopled Galatia, according to Josephus; Phrygia, according to Bochart; but, according to Calmet and Gesenius, they were the Cimmerians or Cimbri, a little known and barbarous northern nation.

GOMORRAH, one of the four cities in the vale of Siddim, which were sunk in the Dead Sea. (Gen. x. 19. xiii. 10.)

GOSHEN (Land of), was the most fertile pasture ground in the whole of Lower Egypt: thence called Goshen, from Gush, in Arabic, signifying "a heart," or whatsoever is choice or precious. There was also a Goshen in the territory of the tribe of Judah, so called for the same reason. (Josh. x. 41.) Hence Joseph recommended it to his family as "the best of the land"

(Gen. xlvii. 11.), and "the fat of the land." (Gen. xlv. 18.) The land of Goshen lay along the most easterly branch of the Nile, and on the east side of it; for it is evident, that at the time of the Exodus, the Israelites did not cross the Nile. In ancient times, it was considerably more extensive, both in length and breadth, in consequence of the general failure of the eastern branches of the Nile; the main body of the river verging more and more to the west continually, and deepening the channels on that side. (Dr. Hales's Chronology, vol. i. p. 374. Madden's Travels in Turkey, &c. vol. ii. p. 182.)

GOVERNMENT of the Jews, under the patriarchs. See p. 40, 41. Under Moses and the judges, 41, 42. Under the kings, 42—48. During the Babylonian captivity, 49, 50. Under the Asmonæan and Herodian princes, 50-52. Under the Roman procurators, 52, 53.

Gozan, a city or country in northern Mesopotamia. (2 Kings xvii. 6. xviii. 11. xix. 12. Isa. xxxvii. 2.) By the geographer Ptolemy it is called Gauzanitis, now Kausehan.

GRAIN, threshing of, 178.

GREAT PLAIN, account of, 33.

GREAT SEA, 28.

GREAVES (Military), use of, 88.

GREECE, in the Scriptures, often comprehends all the countries inhabited by the descendants of Javan, as well in Greece as in Ionia and Asia Minor. Since the time of Alexander the Great, the name of Greeks is taken in a more uncertain and enlarged sense, because, the Greeks being masters of Egypt and Syria, of the countries beyond the Euphrates, &c. the Jews called all those Gentiles Greeks. In the Maccabees, the Gospels, and Paul's writings, a Greek commonly signifies—a Gentile. In the Old Testament Greece and Greeks are named Javan. Isaiah says (lxvi. 19.), that the Lord shall send his ambassadors to Javan, to the isles afar off. Ezekiel tells us (xxvii. 13. 19.) that Javan, Tubal, and Meshech came to the fairs at Tyre. (xi. 2.), speaking of Darius, says "that he shall stir up all against the realm of Javan." Alexander the Great is described by the name of King of Javan. (Dan. viii. 21. x. 20.)

GRINDING of corn, 178.

GUARD, military, of the Temple, 101.

GUESTS, reception of, 169, 170.

GYMNASTIC exercises of the Jews, 190.

HABAKKUK, the eighth of the twelve minor prophets, who foretold the captivity and restoration of the Jews. For an analysis of his predictions, see Vol. IV. p. 277.

Hadrach (Land of). This land, which is mentioned in Zech. ix. 1., occurs in no other part of the Old Testament. But a Syrian king, who is called Rehob in 2 Sam. viii. 3., is by Josephus named Ap205 or Ap2205, which Dr. Blayney thinks was his proper and real name; that of Rehob, or the charioteer, having been added characteristically on account of the number of his chariots. (2 Sam. viii. 4.) This prince reigned over that part of Syria which was called Zobah; so that, if by the land of Hadrach or Arach be meant the kingdom of Zobah, the three capitals of the state tal kingdoms of Syria-Zobah, Damascus, and Hamath, will then be cited for the whole. (Blayney on Zechariah, p. 37.)

HAGAR, an Egyptian woman, handmaid of Sarah, and mother of Ishmael. (Gen. xvi. 1. xxv. 12.) In Gal. iv. 24, 25. St. Paul applies this name by allegorical interpretation to the inferior condition of the Jews under the law, as compared with that of Christians under the Gospel.

HAGARITES OF HAGARENES, the descendants of Ishmael. (1 Chron. v. 10.) They constituted a tribe of Arabians, who are supposed to have settled in the vicinity of Mount Sinal.

Haggar, the tenth of the minor prophets: he exhorted the Jews to febuild the temple. For an analysis of his predictions,

HAT. See AI, p. 404. of this Index.

HAIR, Jewish mode of dressing, 156, 157. Plucking off, a punishment, 66. Forbidden to be cut in certain forms, 142.

HAM.

1. The youngest son of Noah, from whom, according to Gen. x. 6-20, most of the southern nations were descended. According to Gesenius the name literally denotes warm or south-

2. Land of Ham, a poetical name for Egypt, probably (says Gesenius) of Egyptian derivation, but to the Hebrew presenting the same signification as above. (Psal. lxxviii. 51. cv. 23. 27.

HAMAN, a Persian nobleman, celebrated as the persecutor of the Jews: he was an Amalekite by nation, and descended from the posterity of Agag. (Esth. iii.-ix.)

HAMATH, on the northern boundary of Camaan, a colony of Phonicians, and the residence of a king who was in friendship with David. (Num. xiii. 21. Judg. iii. 3. 2 Sam. viii. 9.) In Amos vi. 2. it is called Hamath the Great, and in 2 Chron. viii. 3. Hamath-Zobah. In Gen. x. 8. the inhabitants are called Ha-

HANANEEL, a prophet in the reign of Asa king of Judah, by whom he was imprisoned for his fidelity in reproving the monarch for forming an alliance with Benhadad king of Syria. (2 Chron. xvi. 7-10.)

HANDMILLS of the Jews, 154.

HANNAH, the wife of Elkanah, and the mother of the prophet Samuel, whom she consecrated to the service of God. (1 Sam.

HANUN, the son of Nahash, king of the Amorites. By the advice of evil-counsellors he maltreated, contrary to the law of nations, the ambassadors whom David had sent to congratulate him on his accession. (See p. 157.) This transaction led to a war, which terminated fatally for Hanun, whose army was utterly discomfited, his capital taken, and his subjects destroyed. (2 Sam. x. xi. 1. xii. 26-30.) Hanun is supposed to have perished during the war.

HAPHTOROTH, or sections of the prophets read in the synagogues, 104. Table of them, 105.

HARAN.

1. The eldest son of Terah, and brother of Abraham and Nahor, the father of Lot, Milcah, and Iscah. He is said by Moses to have died before his father (Gen. xi. 28.), a circumstance which to us may appear too minute to be recorded; but in those days, when life was longer, and subject to fewer diseases than at present, the death of a son before his father was an event of sufficient importance to be distinctly noticed. With the exception of Abel, Haran is the first man mentioned in the sacred history, whose father beheld him depart this life.

2. HARAN or CHARAN, a city in the northern part of Mesopotamia, where Abraham sojourned for a time in his passage to the land of Canaan. It was probably the same city, which the Greeks afterwards called Kappas and the Romans Carræ, and which became celebrated for the defeat and death of Crassus.

HAREM (Royal), notice of, 47.

HARETH, Forest of, 36.

HAROSHETH of the Gentiles, a city near Lake Merom, which probably derived its name from the number of Gentiles who resided in its vicinity. Here Sisera dwelt, whose troops were discomfited and pursued by the Israelites to its very gates.

HARP, form of, 184.

HARVESTS of Palestine, account of, 23, 177, 178.

HAVILAH.

1. Two districts in Yemen, the one inhabited by the descendants of Havilah, the son of Cush, and grandson of Ham (Gen. x. 7.), the other by descendants of Shem. (ver. 29.)

2. A gold country (Gen. ii. 11.), perhaps a general name for Arabia (and India), which accords best with the opinion of those who imagine the Pison to be the Ganges.

HAURAN, a district in the north-eastern part of Canaan, which derived its name from the town or city of Hauran. (Ezek. xlvi. 18.) It is the same with the Auranitis of Josephus and the ITUREA of St. Luke. (iii. 1.)—For its limits, &c. see p. 18.

HAZAEL, a general officer of Benhadad king of Syria, whom he treacherously murdered and usurped his kingdom. During a reign of more than forty years he was the vigilant and successful enemy of the Hebrew princes, whose territories he laid waste, and at length he laid siege to Jerusalem, whence he consented to withdraw, only on condition of the treasures of the temple and of the palace being delivered up to him.

HEAD, covering for, 156.

Heads of tribes or families, 41, 42.

HEATHEN NATIONS, account of their deities worshipped by, 139. Allusion to their idolatrous rites explained, 139-142.

1. The son of Salah (Gen. xi. 14.), from whom some critics and commentators have supposed that his descendants the Hebrews derived their name.

2. A descendant of Hobab, the brother-in-law of Moses, and husband of Jael, who killed Sisera.

HEBREWS OF THE HEBREWS, who they were, 108.

HEBRON, anciently called ARBA, and KIRJATH-ARBA, a city of Judæa, was situated on an eminence, twenty miles southward of Jerusalem, and twenty miles north from Beersheba. Abraham, Sarah, and Isaac, were buried near Hebron, in the cave of Machpelah. (Gen. xxiii. 7, 8, 9.) Near this place was the cak or turpentine tree, under which Abraham received three angels. (Gen. xviii. 1.) Hebron was allotted to Judah. The Lord assigned it to Caleb for inheritance. (Josh. xiv. 13.) Joshua first took Hebron, and killed its king (Josh. x. 3. 23. 37.), but afterwards Caleb again conquered it, assisted by the troops of his tribe, and the valour of Othniel. It was appointed for a dwelling of the priests, and a city of refuge. David, after the death of Saul, settled the seat of his kingdom here. At Hebron, Absalom began his rebellion. During the captivity of Babylon, the Edomites, having invaded the south of Judah, took Hebron; wherefore in Josephus it is sometimes made a part of Edom. Here Zachariah and Elisabeth resided, and John the Baptist was born. It is described, in 1823, as being a large town, with a Turkish mosque erected over the supposed burial-place of the patriarchs. (Carne's Letters, p. 280.)

HELIOPOLITAN Temple, notice of, 101. HELLENISTIC Jews, who they were, 110.

Helmer of the Jews, 87.

HERMOGENES, the name of a man who at first was St. Paul's companion, but afterwards deserted him. (2 Tim. i. 15.)

HERMON, Mount. See p. 30.

HEROD the Great, account of, 50, 51. Massacre of the infants at Bethlehem by his order, 51.; I. 419.

HEROD Agrippa, I. and II., account of, 52.

HEROD Antipas, account of, 52. Why he was at war with Aretas king of Arabia, I. 50.

HERODIAN FAMILY, genealogy of, 51. HERODIANS, sect of, account of, 148.

HERODIAS, the grand-daughter of Herod the Great, and sister of Herod Agrippa I. She was first married to her uncle Philip (Herod); but afterwards abandoned him, and connected herself with his brother Herod Antipas, whom she persuaded to put John the Baptist to death, because he had boldly denounced their incestuous union. (Matt. xiv. 3. 6. Mark vi. 17. 19. 22. Luke iii. 19.)

HESHBON, the capital city of the kingdom of Sihon, situated about 20 miles eastward of the river Jordan: it was given to the tribe of Reuben. It is supposed to be the same place which is now called Hhubhzan. Numerous ruins attest its ancient splendour. This town is situated on so commanding a position, that the view from it extends at least 30 miles in every direction; and, to the southward, where the prospect is most extensive, the eye ranges, probably, a distance of 60 miles in a direct line. (Buckingham's Travels among the Arab Tribes, p. 106.)

HEZEKIAH, the son and successor of Ahaz king of Judah: he was a wise and pious prince, who extirpated idolatry, and restored the worship of the true God throughout his dominions. For a notice of the disease with which he was afflicted, see p. 196.

HIDDEKEL, one of the four rivers which watered Paradise. (Gen. ii. 14.) It is generally supposed to be the same as the HIEL, of Bethel, rebuilt Jericho, notwithstanding the malediction denounced in Josh. vi. 26.; the effects of which he felt in his own family; his eldest son dying when the foundations of the walls were laid, and his youngest son when the gates were set up. (1 Kings xvi. 34.)

HIERAPOLIS, a city of Phrygia, in the vicinity of Colossæ and Laodicea (Col. iv. 13.), celebrated for its mineral waters, which now flow disregarded by the Turcomans. "Once there existed on the self-same spot a life-giving stream : but Epaphras and his successors, who said to the then countless multitudes of Hierapolis,- 'Whosoever will, may come and take of the water of life freely, have ages ago been silent in the grave." (Arundell's Seven Churches of Asia, p. 83.) The ruins of Hierapolis are still considerable: they are described by Mr. A. (Ibid. pp. 79—82.) This place is now called Pambouk Kalesi.

HIEROGLYPHIC STONES, forbidden to be worshipped by the Israelites, 139.

HIGH PLACES, account of, 101-103. 140.

HIGH-PRIESTS, functions, dress, and privileges of, 113, 114. Their succession, 115.

HINNOM, a person who is known only from the circumstance of his having given his name to a VALLEY, situated at a very short distance from Jerusalem; for a notice of which, see p. 32.

HIRAM I. king of Tyre, the ally or tributary of David, to whom he sent ambassadors to congratulate him on his accession to the throne. The dominions of Hiram are supposed to have extended over the western part of the chain of Mount Lebanon. When David was building a palace, Hiram sent him cedar timber and able artificers. (2 Sam. v. 11. 1 Chron. xiv. 1.)

HIRAM II., the son and successor of the preceding, who congratulated Solomon on succeeding his father on the throne of Israel. He also furnished Solomon with timber, stone, and artificers for his magnificent buildings, especially the temple at Jerusalem. He is known under the same name by profane historians.

HIRAM or HURAM, a celebrated artificer, was the son of a widow, belonging to the tribe of Dan, and a Tyrian. He was sent by Hiram II. to Solomon, for whom he executed the principal work in the interior of the temple, as well as several of the sacred utensils. (1 Kings vii. 1. 3. 2 Chron. ii. 14. iv. 11.)

HISTORICAL Geography of the Holy Land, 13-22. HISTORICAL WRITING, cultivated by the Jews, 185, 186. HITTITES, the descendants of Heth, the second son of Canaan.

They dwelt in the south part of the promised land, near Hebron. HIVITES, a tribe of the Canaanites. They seem to have been the same with the Avim, whom the Philistines expelled. Driven from the south-west of Canaan, part of them appear to have set-tled about Avim, Gibeon, and Shechem, whose inhabitants are called Hivites in Josh. ix. 11. 19. xvii. 23. Gen. xxxiv. 2.; and another part seem to have settled near Mount Hermon. (Josh.

HOBAB, the son of Jethro, and the brother-in-law of Moses, at whose earnest request he accompanied the Israelites as a guide through the wilderness. His family dwelt among them during the time of the first judges.

Holocausts, account of, 118.

HOLV LAND, the country of the Jews, why so called, 13. Sketch of its historical geography, 13—22. Physical geography and productions, 23—37. Testimonies of ancient and modern geographers to its fertility, 37, 38. Calamities, 38—40. Its present degraded state accounted for, 38. Its government in the patriarchal times, 40. Under Moses, 41—42. Under Joshua and the Judges, 42. Under the Kings, 42—47. Reason why the kingdom of Judah subsisted longer than that of Israel, 42. Its condition under the Asmonæan princes and sovereigns of the Herodian family, and under the Roman procurators, 50-53.

HOLY OF HOLIES, account of, 96. 100. Homicide, proceedings in case of, 63. Honey of Palestine, 36.

Норнкан. See Риакаон-Норнкан.

1. A mountain on the confines of Edom where Aaron died (Num. xx. 22-28.), whose pretended tomb is still shown to travellers; but, from its appearance, it should seem to have been rebuilt at no very distant period. The view from this mountain is extensive. (Irby's and Mangles' Travels, pp. 433—438.)

2. A mountain in Lebanon. (Num. xxxiv. 7, 8.)

Horer, a mountain in Arabia Petræa, so near Mount Sinai that Horeb and Sinai seem to be two hills of the same mountain. Sinai lies east, Horeb west: so that when the sun rises, the latter is covered with the shadow of Sinai. There are springs and fruit-trees on Horeb, but only rain-water on Sinai. At Horeb God appeared to Moses in the burning bush. (Exod. iii. 1, 2, 3.) At the foot of this mountain Moses struck the rock, and drew water from it. (Exod. xvii. 6.) Elijah retired here to avoid the persecution of Jezebel (1 Kings xix. 8.); and the cave or grotto, in which the prophet found shelter, is yet pointed out by tradition, the truth of which is confirmed by the appearance of the sur-rounding scenery. This cave "is as desolate a place of refuge as the fancy can conceive:-no brook or pool is nigh, to quench the burning thirst; not a shrub grows on the soil, but sad and useless precipices are on every side. Every part of the way was strewed with broken fragments of rocks." (Carne's Recollections of the East, p. 345.) It is frequently said in the Old Testament, that God gave the law at Horeb, though other places expressly name Sinai; because Horeb and Sinai in some sort form but one mountain. From its lofty summit nothing is to be seen on every side, as far as the eye can reach, but ranges of naked mountains succeeding each other, like waves of the sea. This mountain is now called St. Catherine's. (Carne's Letters from the East, pp. 197, 198.)

HORITES, a people who dwelt in Mount Seir (Gen. xiv. 6.), whence they were subsequently expelled by the Edomites. (Deut. ii. 12. 22.)

Horses, notice of, 175.

HORTICULTURE of the Jews, account of, 179, 180.

HOSEA.

1. The earlier name of Joshua, the servant and successor of Moses. (Num. xiii. 8. 16.)

2. The last king of Israel, who, having conspired against Pekah, slew him and usurped his throne. In his reign Shalmaneser king of Assyria invaded Israel, took Samaria, which he reduced to a heap of ruins, and removed the Israelites beyond the river Euphrates.

3. The first of the minor prophets. For an analysis of whose predictions, see pp. 260-262.

Hospitality of the Jews, 173. Notice of Tesseræ Hospitales, 173, 174.

HOT SEASON in Palestine, 24, 25.

Hours of the Jews and Romans, 72, 73.

Houses of the Jews and their furniture, 151-154. Leprosy of houses, 134.

HULDAH, a prophetess, the wife of Shallum, who was consulted by Josiah concerning the book of the law, which was found in the treasury of the temple. (2 Kings xxii. 14.)

HUR, whom some have supposed to be the husband of Miriam, and the brother-in-law of Moses, appears to have been one of the most intimate friends of the latter. During the battle between the Hebrews and the Amalekites, he upheld the weary arms of Moses, and when he was absent he shared with Aaron the authority over the Israelites. (Exod. xvii. 10. xxiv. 14.)

HUSBANDRY of the Jews, account of, 174-178.

HUSHAI, the friend of David; who, during the rebellion of Absalom, remained with that prince, and was of eminent service to David by infatuating the counsels of Absalom. (2 Sam. xvi.)

HYMENÆUS is supposed to have been a citizen of Ephesus; who being converted by St. Paul, afterwards fell into the heresy of those who denied the resurrection of the body, or, rather, who maintained that the term was to be understood figuratively in reference to conversion, as being a resurrection from their former death in trespasses and sins; and that no other resurrection was to be expected. (Valpy on 2 Tim. ii. 17.)

Hyssor, notice of, 35. note 7.

IBZAN, the eighth judge of Israel, governed seven years. His prosperity is indicated by the circumstance of his having thirty sons, and as many daughters; and his riches, by all of them being married. (Judg. xii. 8.)

Iconium, a city of Lycaonia, the chief of the fourteen belonging to that tetrarchy. Here was a synagogue of Jews and proselytes, to whom Paul and Barnabas preaching, and confirming their doctrine by miracles, converted many to the Christian faith (Acts xiv. 1, 2, 3.); and here the unbelieving Jews and Gentiles made an assault upon them, to use them despitefully, and to stone them. (ver. 5.) It is now called Konieh.

IDOLATRY, origin and progress of, 135. History of it among the Israelites, 135, 136. Different kinds of, and its punishment, 61. Idols worshipped by them, 136—139. Idols of Greeks and Romans mentioned in the New Testament, 139. Allusions in Scripture to the idolatrous rites of the heathen explained, 139, 140.

IDUMÆA, OF EDOM, country of, 18.

ILLYRICUM, a province lying to the north and north-west of Macedonia, along the eastern coast of the Adriatic Sea or Gulf of Venice. It was divided into two parts, Liburnia to the north (now called Croatia), which is not mentioned in the New Testament; and Dalmatia to the south, which region still retains the same name. Hither, St. Paul informs Timothy, Titus went (2 Tim. iv. 10.); and in Rom. xv. 19. he says that he preached the Gospel from Jerusalem round about unto Illyricum.

IMPRISONMENT, Jewish modes of, 65, 66. Ιματια, or Upper Garments, described, 156.

IMPURITIES, legal, purifications of, 134.

INAUGURATION of the kings of Israel and Judah, ceremonial

INCENSE, offering of, 119.

INJURIES (corporal), punishment of, 63, 64.

INTERCALARY Month, notice of, 74.

INTERMENT, rites of, 198-200.

IRRIGATION practised by the Jews, 176, 177.

ISAAC, the son of Abraham by Sarah, and one of the patri-archs of the Israelitish nation. He married Rebekah, and was the father of Esau and Jacon, by whom he was honourably interred in the cave of Machpelah, about ten years before Jacob went into Egypt.

ISAIAH, a celebrated Hebrew prophet, distinguished for the strength and sublimity of his conceptions and language. For a further account of Isaiah, and an analysis of his predictions, see pp. 262-269. In Acts viii. 28, 30, Esaias or Isaiah is metonymically put for the book or prophecy of Isaiah.

ISHBOSHETH, or ISHBAAL, the son and successor of Saul. He reigned only two years; his whole party being thrown into confusion on the death of Abner, and hunself being assassinated by two captains of his own troops. (2 Sam. ii. 1 Chron. viii. 33. ix.

Iscanior. See Judas, p. 432, infra.

ISHMARL, the son of Abraham and Hagar. On the birth of Isaac, Hagar and her son were expelled from the house of Abraham, at the desire of Sarah, and dwelt in the wilderness of Paran, to the south of Palestine. Of Egyptian origin by his mother, Ishmael married an Egyptian woman, by whom he had two daughters, one of whom Esau married, and twelve sons, who gave their names to as many tribes of Arabians, conformably to the predictions concerning Ishmael. (Gen. xvii. 20, xxv. 9, xxviii. 9. xxxvi. 5.) For a notice of these predictions and their fulfilment, see Vol. I. p. 122. Ishmael died, aged 137 years.

ISLES OF THE GENTILES (Gen. x. 5,), probably mean many of the maritime countries washed by the Mediterranean Sea. The Hebrews also used the word isles to signify all those countries which were divided from them by the sea. (Isa. xi. 10, 11. xl. 15.

Jer. ii. 10.)

ISBAEL, (that is, a prince of God, or a mighty prince,) the name given by the angel to the patriarch Jacob at Peniel. (Gen. xxxii. 24.) By Israel, in the Scriptures, is sometimes meant the person of Jacob, and sometimes his whole progeny, including both the kingdom of Judah and the kingdom of Israel, or the ten tribes as distinct from Judah.

ISRAEL, Land of, 13. Kingdom of, 17. 48. Mountains of, 31. ISRAELITES, the descendants of Israel. At first they were called Hebrews, from the patriarch Abraham, surnamed the Hebrew, from his having passed over the Euphrates into the land of Canaan. After the exodus from Egypt, they were generally called Israelites; and on their return from the Babylonish captivity, they were denominated Jews, from the tribe of Judah, the most considerable of the twelve tribes. Their political state from the time of Moses to the subversion of their kingdom by the Assyrians, 40-50. Idols worshipped by them, 136-139. Court of the Israelites, 99.

ISSACHAR, the fifth son of Jacob and Leah, and the head of one of the twelve tribes of Israel. For the limits of the canton allotted to which, see p. 17.

ITALY, an extensive and fertile region of Europe, bounded on the north by the Alps, on the east by the Adriatic Sea or the Gulf of Venice, and on the west and south by the Ligustine and Tyrrhene Seas, which names were formerly applied to parts of the Mediterranean Sea. Rome was its capital, and the seat of almost universal empire in the time of the writers of the New Testament. (Acts xviii. 2. xxvii. 1. 6. Heb. xiii. 24.)

ITUBEA, region of, 18.

JABBOK, Brook, notice of, 26.

JABESH, a city in the half-tribe of Manasseh beyond Jordan, generally called Jabesh-Gilead, because it lay in Gilead, at the foot of the mountains so named. According to Eusebius it was six miles from Pella towards Gerasa; consequently it must have been east of the sea of Tiberias. Jabesh-Gilead was sacked by the Israelites, because its inhabitants refused to join in the war against the tribe of Benjamin. (Judg. xxi. 8.) Nahash, king of the Ammonites, laying siege to Jabesh, proposed hard conditions to the inhabitants, from which Saul delivered them, A. M. 2909, n. c. 1094. They ever after showed great gratitude to Saul and his family: they carried off his and his sons' bodies, which the Philistines had hung upon the walls of Bethshan, and buried them honourably in a wood near their city. (1 Sam. xxxi. 11-13.)

Jabin I. king of Hazor, one of the most powerful Canaanitish chieftains, ruled over the northern part of the land of promise. After the ruin of the confederation formed against the Israelites by Adonizedek, Jabin assembled his tributaries near the waters was destroyed, as well as the preceding; and Jabin himself perished at the destruction of his capital, Hazor. (Josh. xi. 1-12.)

JABIN II. king of Hazor, was probably descended from the preceding sovereign. During one or other of the servitudes of Israel under Cushan or Eglon, the kingdom of Hazor, which Joshua had destroyed, appears to have been re-established; and Jabin must have possessed a powerful dominion, since he is said to have brought into the field 900 chariots armed with scythes. This Jabin oppressed the Israelites for twenty years. After the death of his general Sisera, who had been conquered by Barak, the war was prolonged for some time, but it was finally terminated by the ruin of Jabin. (Judg. iv.)

JACOB, the second son of Isaac and Rebekah, and the father of the twelve tribes of Israel. Having surreptitiously obtained his father's blessing (Gen. xxvii.), to avoid his brother's resentment, Rebekah sent him away alone into Mesopotamia, to Laban her brother, whose daughters, Leah and Rachel, he married. After serving Laban many years, he returned into the land of Canaan; having during his journey had an amicable interview with his brother Esau. He afterwards dwelt at Shechem, in a field which he had purchased of the Hivites; but being apprehensive of the resentment of the people, for the slaughter of the Shechemites by Simeon and Levi on account of the violation of their sister Dinah by Shechem, Jacob removed to Bethel, where he offered sacrifice, and God renewed his promises. Many years after this he went down to Egypt to his son Joseph, where he resided seventeen years, and died in a good old age, after giving his prophetic blessing to his sons. Jacob is, in Scripture, frequently put metonymically for his posterity, that is, for the Israelitish nation.

JACOB'S WELL, notice of, 28.

JAEL, the wife of Heber the Kenite. She killed Sisera, general of the Canaanitish army, whom she had received into her tent, by driving a nail into his temples: concerning this transaction, see Vol. I. p. 411.

JAIR, a Gileadite, who judged the Israelites for twenty-two years. He had thirty sons who governed thirty towns, which also bore the name of the towns of Jair.

Jairus, a ruler or presiding officer of a synagogue, whose daughter Jesus Christ restored to life by a miracle: the circumstances of which are considered in Vol. I. p. 105.

JAMES.

1. James, the son of Zebedee, and the brother of the apostle John: he was put to death by Herod Agrippa, about A. D. 44. (Matt. iv. 21, x. 2. Mark iii. 17. Luke vi. 14. Acts i. 13. xii. 2.)

2. James, surnamed the Less. (Mark xv. 40.) He was the son of Alphrus, and wrote the epistle which bears his name. For an analysis of which, and a further account of James, see pp. 359, 360.

JANNES and JAMBRES, two of the principal Egyptian magicians; who withstood Moses and Aaron by attempting to imitate the miracles which they actually performed. (Exod. vii. 11, 12. viii. 7. 18, 19.) As these names are not found in the Old Testament, the apostle probably derived them from tradition (2 Tim. iii. 8.), as they are often mentioned in the rabbinical books.

JAPHET, the eldest son of Noah, was a witness of the deluge, and one of those who were saved in the ark. His descendants first settled in the isles of the Mediterranean Sea, and on the coasts of Asia Minor and of Europe, whence they spread into the north and west.

JARHAH, the Egyptian slave of an Israelite named Sheshan, who gave him his daughter in marriage, and consequently gave him his liberty. It is not improbable that Jarhah was a proselyte to the religion of Israel. (1 Chron. ii. 34.)

JAVELINS of the Hebrews, notice of, 88.

JAZER, a city beyond the Jordan, given to the tribe of Gad: it afterwards became one of the Levitical cities. (Josh. xxi. 30. xiii. 25.) The SEA OF JAZER, (mentioned in Jer. xlviii. 32.), Dr. Blaney is of opinion is the Dead Sea, Jazer being in the north border of Moab.

JEBUS, the son of Canaan, and father of the JEBUSITES (Gen. ii. 16.), who dwelt in and around Jerusalem in the mountains, where they continued until the time of David, when Joab took the place. (2 Sam. v. xxiv.)

JEDUTHUN, a Levite, one of David's choristers. (1 Chron. ix. 16. xvi. 38, 41, 42. xxv. 1.) His sons were employed as musicians. (2 Chron. xxxv. 15. Neh. xi. 17.)

JEHOAHAZ.

1. Jehoahaz, or Shallum, the second son of Josiah king of of Meron, and summoned all their forces to arms. This coalition Judah, whom he succeeded on the throne. He reigned only three months, being taken captive and carried into Egypt by

Pharaoh-Necho. (2 Kings xxiii.)

2. Jehoahaz, the son and successor of Jehu king of Israel. He followed the evil example of Jeroboam I. during a reign of 17 years. His dominions were ravaged first by Hazael, and afterwards by Ben-hadad, kings of Syria: but, Jehoahaz humbling himself before God, he and his people were delivered by his son Joash.

JEHOASH. See JOASH.

JEHOTAKIM OF Eliakim, son and successor of Jehoahaz, king of Judah. After a wicked and inglorious reign of 11 years, Jerusalem was taken, and Jehoiakim carried as a prisoner to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar. (2 Kings xxiii. 34-37. 1 Chron. iii.

15.) He was succeeded by his son,

JEHOTACHIN, who was also called Coniah and Jechoniah. (1 Chron. iii. 16. Jer. xxii. 24. xxiv. 1.) After a reign of three months he was carried to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar, together with a multitude of his people, and all the spoils of the city and temple. (2 Kings xxiv. 8. 2 Chron. xxxvi. 9.) Through the kindness of Evil-merodach, the son and successor of Nebuchadnezzar, he was restored to his personal liberty, and was supported at Babylon by the king's bounty. (2 Kings xxv. 27. Jer. lii. 31.)

JEHOIDA, the successor of Azariah in the pontificate; who with his wife Jehosheba, preserved his nephew Joash from the massacre of the royal family by Athaliah, and placed him on the throne of Judah. He reached the advanced age of 130 years, and was honoured with a burial among the kings, in consideration of his piety and disinterested patriotism. (2 Kings xi. 4, &c. xii. 1, 2. 2 Chron. xxii. 10—12. xxiii. xxiv. 1—3. 15, 16.)

JEHOTARIB, the head of the first of the twenty-four classes of priests established by David (1 Chron. xxiv. 7.), from whom the family of the Maccabees were descended. (2 Mac. ii. 1.)

1. Jehoram, the son of Jehoshaphat king of Judah, with whom for a short time he was associated on the throne, and then succeeded him as sole monarch, B. c. 889. He married Athaliah the daughter of Ahab, who seduced him into idolatry. He began his reign by murdering his brothers, and was succeeded by Ahaziah, after a wicked reign of eight years. (2 Chron. xxi.) On the nature of his disease, see p. 196.

2. Jehoram or Joram, king of Israel, the son and successor of Ahab, whose impieties he followed. He was slain in the twelfth year of his reign by Jehu, B. c. 884.

JEHOSHAPHAT, the son and successor of Asa king of Judah: he was a pious prince; and in the third year of his reign he sent some of the chief officers of his court, together with certain Levites and priests, throughout his dominions, to instruct the people in the book of the law and their consequent duties. After a reign of twenty-five years, he died in peace, B. c. 889. (2 Chron. xvii.—xx. 1—34.)

JEHOSHAPHAT, Valley of, account of, 32.

Jehovah, the incommunicable name of the self-existent Being, for which the Jews substituted Adonai, in conformity with an ancient supersition. In our authorized translation, this word is rendered "the Lorn," in order to distinguish it from Lord, signifying a governor. Concerning the pronunciation of Jehovah, see Gesenius's Hebrew Lexicon, voce היהוה-Land of Jehovah. 13.

JEHU.

1. A prophet, the son of Hanani, who was sent to denounce the divine judgments against Baasha king of Israel. (1 Kings

xvi. 7.)
2. The son of Jehoshaphat, and grandson of Nimshi, who conspired against Jehoram, king of Israel, n. c. 884, and reigned 28 years.

JEMIMA, KEZIA, and KEREN-HAPPUCH, the three daughters of Job, born after his restoration to prosperity. They obtained a portion of their father's inheritance,—a privilege which in those days could be conferred only by very rich parents.

JEPHTHAH, the ninth judge of Israel, succeeded Jair in the government of the people, whom he delivered from the Ammonites, Concerning his vow, see Vol. I. p. 411. His administration lasted six years.

JEREMIAH, the second of the four greater prophets, was the son of Hilkiah, of the sacerdotal race, and a native of Anathoth. He was distinguished for an ardent love of his country, for the pathetic tenderness with which he deplored her fate, and for the ungrateful treatment which he received from his countrymen. The time and manner of his death are unknown. For a further account of Jeremiah, and an analysis of his Prophecies and Lamentations, see pp. 272—276.

Jекисно, a celebrated city in the tribe of Benjamin, of which frequent mention is made in the New Testament. It was the first city taken from the Canaanites by Joshua, who razed it to the ground, and denounced a severe curse on the person who should rebuild it. (Josh. vi. 20. 26. Heb. xi. 30.) This curse was literally fulfilled, in the days of Ahab, upon Hiel the Bethelite, by whom the city was rebuilt. (1 Kings xvi. 34.) After this event it was ennobled by the schools of the prophets, which were established there (2 Kings ii. 5.): and near it was a large but unwholesome spring, the waters of which rendered the soil unfruitful, until they were cured by the prophet Elisha (2 Kings ii. 21.); and from that time they have become exceedingly wholesome and fertilizing. In the time of our Saviour, Jericho yielded only to Jerusalem for its size and the magnificence of its buildings: it was situated in a bottom, in that vast plain which was named the great plain (which marks the propriety of the expression going down from Jerusalem, Luke x. 30.); and is 150 furlongs; about nineteen miles distant from the capital of Judæa. The country around Jericho was the most fertile part of Palestine, abounding in roses and palm trees (whence in Deut. xxxiv. 3. it is called the city of palm trees), and yielding also great quantities of the opobalsamum or balm of Gilead, so highly esteemed in oriental courts even to the present day; and which being an article of commerce accounts for the mention of publicans and of a chief publican in that region. (Luke xix, 2.) one of the cities appropriated for the residence of the priests and Levites, 12,000 of whom dwelt there; and as the way thither from Jerusalem was rocky and desert, it was, as it still is, greatly infested with thieves. A country more favourable for the attacks of banditti, and caves better adapted for concealment, than those presented on this road, can scarcely be imagined.1 This circumstance marks the admirable propriety with which our Lord made it the scene of his beautiful parable of the good Samaritan. (Luke x. 30—37.) Jericho is, at present, a wretched village, consisting of about thirty miserable huts, (compared with which the worst Irish cabin is a palace), so low, that at night, one might almost ride over them, without being aware of the fact. The once celebrated "City of Palms" cannot now boast of one of those beautiful trees in its vicinity. The plain that surrounded it (through which the Jordan flows) is watered by a beautiful fountain: it has ever been venerated as the same which the prophet Elisha healed (2 Kings ii. 19-22.), the water of which was naught (or bitter) and the ground barren. (Carne's Letters, pp. 322, 323. Three Weeks in Palestine, p. 83.)

JEROBOAM I., son of Nebat, and the first king of Israel. He was a wicked prince, who from political motives established idola-was a wicked prince, who from political motives established idolawas a wicked prince, who from political motives established idolawas a wicked prince, who from political motives established idolawas a wicked prince, who from political motives established idolawas a wicked prince, who from political motives established idolawas a wicked of the scenery is sufficient, on the one hand, to tempt to robbery and murder, and, on the other, to occasion a dread of it in those who pass that way. It was partly to prevent any accident happening to us in this early stage of our journey, and partly, perhaps; to calm our fears on that score; that a messenger had been despatched by our guides to an encampment of their tribe near, desiring them to send an escort to meet us at this place. We were met here accordingly, by a band of about twenty persons on foot, all armed with matchlocks, and presenting the most ferocious and robber-like appearance that could be imagined. The effect of this was heightened by the shouts which they sent forth from hill to hill, and which were re-echeed through all the valleys, while the bold projecting crags of rock, the dark shadows in which every thing lay buried below, the towering height of the cliffs above, and the forbidding desolation which every where reigned around, presented a picture that was quite in harmony throughout all its parts. It made us feel most forcibly the propriety of its being chosen as the scene of the delightful tale of compassion which we had before so often admired for its doctrine, independently of its local beauty. (See Luke x. 30—34.) One must be amid these wild and gloomy solitudes, surrounded by an armed band, and feel the impatience of the traveller who rushes on to catch a new view at every pass and turn; one must be alarmed at the very tramp of the 'horses' hoofs rebounding through the caverned rocks, and at the savage shouts of the footmen, scarcely less loud than the echoing thunder produced by the discharge of their pieces in the valleys; one must witness all t try (see p. 136.), and changed the order of the Hebrew calendar. He is never mentioned in the Old Testament, but in terms of detestation. He died after a reign of 22 years.

JEROBOAM II., the thirteenth king of Israel, succeeded his father Jehoahash. He reigned 41 years; and is recorded to have done evil in the sight of God, following the example of Jeroboam I.

JERUBBAAL. See GIDEON.

JERUSALEM (city), situation of, and the name by which it was called, 18, 19. Fortifications and walls, 19, 20. Its state before the war of the Jews with the Romans, 20. Remarkable buildings, 21. Temple, 98-101. Successive captures of this city, 21. Its present state and population, 22.

JESUS, that is, the Saviour, the name of the Messiah, the Son of God, and the Divine Author of the Christian religion, who is constituted by God the Lord of all things. He is called Jesus, because he came to save his people from their sins. (Matt. i. 21. Eph. i. 21, 22. Heb. i. 2.) The history of his life, miracles, doctrine, death, resurrection, and ascension, is related in the four Gospels. In 2 Cor. i. 19. Jesus is, metonymically, put for the Gospel or religion of Jesus.

JETHRO, or Raguel, a priest of Midian, and the father-in-law of Moses, to whom he gave the wise counsel, of instituting inferior judges (from him sometimes termed Jethronian prefects), to hear and determine minor causes; while questions of moment were brought before the Hebrew legislator himself. See p. 42.

JEWS .- After the captivity, most of those who returned and rebuilt Jerusalem and the temple, and restored the rites of the Mosaic worship, having sprung from the kingdom of Judah, the term JEWS became a general appellation for all the inhabitants of Palestine, and afterwards for those descended from them. (Dan. iii. 8. Esth. iii. 10. 2 Macc. ix. 17.) For the political state of the Jews, from the patriarchal times to their final dispersion, see pp. 40-53. Their courts of judicature, legal proceedings, criminal law and punishments, 54-57. The whole nation why accounted holy, 108. Account of the Jewish church and its members, 108—111. All male Jews required to be at Jerusalem, at the three great annual festivals, 122. Whither they travelled in caravans, ibid. note. Corruptions of religion among them, and their idolatry, 135—143. Their extreme corruption during the time of Christ, 148—150. Their mode of computing time, 72-77. Their private life, manners, customs, occupations, arts, and sciences, 150-187.

Jews of the dispersion, who they were, 109.

In the New Testament, the term "Jew" is employed,

(1.) With reference both to nation and religion. (Matt. xxviii. 15. Mark vii. 3.)

(2.) With reference to religion only. (Rom. ii, 28, 29, Rev. ii. 9. iii. 9.)

(3.) With reference to nation only. (Acts xix. 34. xxi. 39. xxii. 3. Gal. ii. 13.)

JEZEBEL.

1. The daughter of Ethbaal or Ithobalus king of the Zidonians, and wife of Ahab king of Israel. She was infamous for her idolatries, and for her cruel persecutions of the worshippers of the true God, particularly the prophets. She at length perished miserably, according to a prediction of the prophet Elijah. (1 Kings xvi. 31. xviii. 4. 13. xxi. 23. 2 Kings ix. 30—37.)

2. In Rev. ii. 20. Jezebel is put as a generic term for an idolatrous and infamous woman, the emblem of corrupt teachers.

Compare p. 462.

JEZREEL, a celebrated city, situated in a valley of that name, in the canton of the half-tribe of Manassch, on the west of the river Jordan, and on the confines of the tribe of Issachar. (Josh. xix. 18.) Here Ahab had a palace; and here the retributive justice of God overtook Jezebel. (2 Kings ix. 30-37.)

JEZREEL, Plain of, account of, 33.

1. JOAB, the son of Seraiah and the grandson of Kenaz (1 Chron. iv. 13, 14.), nephew of Othniel the first judge of the Hebrews, was the founder of a colony of artizans, or "craftsmen," at Ono, in the tribe of Benjamin, not far from the river Jordan. The valley, where he settled, obtained the name of the Valley of Craftsmen, an appellation which shows that the arts practised by them were of the first utility; and Nehemiah gave it the same appellation. (xi. 35.) The establishment of Joab, towards the time of the first judge, from whom he was descended, proves that the Hebrews had not forgotten the arts which they had acquired in Egypt, and shows in what estimation trades were held. The people, who had erected the tabernacle in the wilderness, we may readily conceive, would, in no long time, form establishments of this kind, after they were settled in Canaan.

2. JOAB, the son of Zeruiah, and nephew of David. With his brothers Abishai and Asahel, he commanded his uncle's troops against Abner. He was one of the greatest generals and most valiant men in David's army, but was of an imperious and revengeful disposition. Having conspired to raise Adonijah to the throne of his father David, Joab was put to death by command of Solomon.

JOANNA, the wife of Chuza, steward of Herod Antipas. She is enumerated among those women, who having been healed by Jesus, followed him out of Galilee, and assisted in supporting him. (Luke viii. 3. xxiv. 10.)

Joash, the eighth king of Judah, was the son of Ahaziah. On the massacre of his family by Athaliah, he was preserved by Jehoiada the high-priest and his wife Jehoshebah, and secreted for six years in one of the apartments of the temple, where he was brought up. At the age of seven years, the courageous fidelity of the high-priest placed him on the throne of his ancestors. During the life of Jehoiada, he ruled well; but on the death of that wise and pious counsellor, he listened to the advice of some of his courtiers; fell into gross idolatry; and at length put to death the son of his benefactor. From this time, his reign became disastrous; his kingdom was invaded by the Syrians under Hazael; his armies were totally discomfited by very inferior forces; and he could only save his capital, by delivering to the Syrians the treasures which had been consecrated by his predecessors, and those which he had himself offered in the temple. A lingering illness seized him: the blood of Zechariah, the son of Jehoiada, found avengers; and after reigning 40 years, Joash was assassinated by three of his servants. (2 Kings xii. 2 Chron. xxiv.)

JOASH OF JEHOASH, king of Israel, the son and successor of Jehoahaz. Possessed of more talents than virtues, by his fortunate wars he prepared the splendid reign of his son Jeroboam II.; and wanted nothing but piety. He reigned sixteen years, during which he "did evil in the sight of the Lord, and departed not from all the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made

Israel to sin." (2 Kings xii. 10-12. xiv.)

Job, an inhabitant of the land of Uz or Idumæa, whose piety and afflictions are celebrated in the poetical book which bears his name; for an account of which, and of the patriarch himself, see pp. 227-237. For a notice of the disease with which he was afflicted, see p. 196.

JOEL, the son of Pethuel, and the second of the minor prophets. His history is entirely unknown. See an analysis of his predictions, in p. 270.

JOHN.

1. John the Baptist, the son of Zecharias and Elisabeth, was the kinsman and precursor of Jesus Christ, and distinguished for the simplicity and integrity of his life. Notice of his dress, see p. 395. He was beheaded by order of Herod Antipas, whom he had reproved for his incestuous marriage. (Matt. iii. 1. xiv. 2-4. 8. 10.)

2. John the Apostle and Evangelist, was the son of Zebedee and Salome, brother of James the elder, and originally a fisherman. He seems to have been of a mild and affectionate disposition, and peculiarly dear to his Lord. His name is prefixed to the fourth Gospel, to three Epistles, and to the Apocalypse; for an analysis of which, see pp. 313-318. 364-377, 378-383.

3. John, surnamed Mark, the companion of Paul and Barnabas in their journeys.

4. John, one of the chief men among the Jews, a member of the Sanhedrin, and perhaps related to the high-priest. (Acts

JOKTAN, the eldest son of Eber, from whom many Arabian tribes were descended. (Gen. x. 25-30.)

JOKTHEEL.

1. A city belonging to the tribe of Judah. (Josh. xv. 38.)

2. The name which Amaziah king of Judah gave to Selah, an Arabian city which he took. (2 Kings xiv. 7.)

JONAH.

1. Jonah, the son of Amittai, and the fifth of the minor prophets, who was swallowed by a large fish, and continued three days and three nights in the stomach of the monster. See an analysis of his prophecy in p. 259.
2. Jonah of Jonas, the father of the apostle Simon Peter.

He was a fisherman. (John i. 42. xxi. 15-17.)

JONATHAN, the son of Saul, and the faithfully attached friend of David in all his persecutions. Jonathan displayed signal valour in the wars with the Philistines. He perished in battle with his father on Mount Gilboa; and his death is pathetically lamented by David in a funeral elegy which he composed in honour of both. (2 Sam. i.)

JOPPA, a sea-port of Palestine, on the Mediterranean, called also Japha, and now universally Jaffa, owes all the circumstances of its celebrity, as the principal port of Judæa, to its situation with regard to Jerusalem. It is situated on the side of a low hill, over the sea. "As a station for vessels, its harbour is one of the worst in the Mediterranean: ships generally anchor about a mile from the town, to avoid the shoals and rocks of the place. In ancient times it was the only place resorted to as a sea-port in all Judæa. Hither Solomon ordered the materials for the the mail Judga. Hither Solomon ordered the materials for the temple to be brought from Mount Libanus, previous to their conveyance by land to Jerusalem." (Clarke's Travels, vol. iv. p. 442. Jolliffe's Letters from Palestine, p. 198. Irby's and Mangles' Travels, pp. 186—188.) It is a place of very great antiquity; and it appears from the Acts of the Apostles (ix. x. xi.) that the Gospel was received here soon after Christ's ascension. Here also St. Peter restored Dorcas to life (Acts ix. 40.), and from this place it was that the prophet Jonah, many centuries before, had embarked for Nineveh. (Jonah i. 3.) The house of the British vice-consul (signor Damiani), in 1831, stood on the reputed site of the house which had been Simon the Tanner's, the host of the apostle Peter; and a portion of an ancient wall therein was pointed out, as a genuine relic of the original mansion. (Three Weeks in Palestine, p. 6. London, 1833.)

JORAM. See JEHORAM, 2. p. 430.

JORDAN, River, account of, pp. 25, 26. Region round about, p. 33. Thickets of, p. 36.

1. Joseph, the eleventh son of Jacob, born of Rachel. Hated by his brethren, he was sold by them as a slave to some Midianitish merchants, by whom he was carried into Egypt, and again sold to Potiphar. He subsequently became governor over all the land of Egypt, and sent for his father and brethren to Egypt, where he provided for them. On the departure of the Brachites, pursuant to his command, the remains of Joseph, which had been embalmed according to the Egyptian process, were carried into Canaan (Heb. xi. 22.), and, it should seem from Josh. xxiv. 31., after the conquest by Joshua, were interred in Jacob's field near Shechem. (Gen. xxxvii. 1.) Joseph is sometimes, metonymically, put for his descendants, that is, the half-tribe of Ephraim.

2. The husband of Mary, and the reputed father of Jesus. (Matt. i. 16, 18—20, 24, ii. 13, 19. Luke i. 27, ii. 4, 16, 33, 43, iii. 23, iv. 22. John i. 46, vi, 42.)

3. Joseph of Arimathea, a member of the Jewish Sanhedrin, and privately a disciple of Jesus Christ. After his death, Joseph requested his body of Pilate, and honourably entombed it in his own new sepulchre. (Matt. xxvii. 57—60. Mark xv. 43—45. Luke xxiii, 50. John xix, 38.)

4. One of the seventy disciples of Jesus, also called Barsabas and Justus. He was nominated as one of the two candidates for the apostleship in place of the traitor Judas. (Acts i. 23.)

1. A brother of James the Less, and a kinsman of Jesus. (Matt. xiii. 55. xxvii. 56. Mark vi. 3. xv. 40. 47.) He is the only one of the sons of Cleopas and Mary who did not become an apostle; which circumstance has been accounted for by Coquerel, who supposes that Joses was one of those brethren or kinsmen of Jesus Christ who distinguished himself by his want of faith in him (compare John vii. 5.), and therefore was deemed unfit for the apostleship. As it appears from Acts i. 14. that the brethren of Jesus were present at the meetings of his disciples, which were held between the ascension and the day of Pentecost, it is not improbable that Joses was converted after the resurrection.

2. Joses, surnamed Barnabas, the companion of St. Paul.

(Acts iv. 36.)

JOSHUA, the son of Nun, of the tribe of Ephraim, called Jesus by the Greeks. He was the minister or servant, and the successor of Moses; an office which he deserved to fill on many accounts: for not only had Moses discovered in him distinguished talents, but God himself had destined Joshua to be the commander-in-chief of his people, in which capacity Moses presented him to them a short time before his death. Joshua had dis-played both knowledge and courage during the life of Moses, whom he accompanied to Mount Sinai at the giving of the law. In the battle with the Amalekites, he had bravely commanded the Israelites, and had been blessed with victory. He had been one of the twelve spies, whom Moses had sent to explore the land of Canaan; and as Caleb and he were the only persons out of that number who had encouraged the people when intimidated by the report of the other spies, so they were the only Israelites who were more than twenty years of age that survived their forty years' wandering in the desert, and participated in the conquest of Canaan. Joshua died at the age of 110 years, after he had for seventeen years governed the Israelites. His earlier name was Hoshea, which Moses changed to Joshua, or, as it is pronounced in Hebrew, Jehoshuah, the import of which is the Salvation of God. Joshua has been considered as a type of our Saviour. As the Hebrew general vanquished the impious Canaanites by the aid of God, and introduced His people into the rest of the promised land, so Jesus (whose name in Greek is the same as Jehoshuah) will one day subdue and exterminate the enemies of his name and disciples, and will introduce his people into that place of rest, in which they will enjoy perfect and eternal happiness. For an analysis of the book of Joshua, see pp. 214-216; and for an account of the division of the Holy Land by him, see pp. 16, 17. of this volume; and for his government of the Israelites, see p. 42. Observations on the pile of stones raised by Joshua at Gilgal, I. 100, 101.

Josian, the son of Amnon and Jedidah, succeeded his father on the throne of Judah, at the early age of eight years, and during a reign of thirty-one years he endeavoured, with much success, to restore the worship of God to its original purity. Being a tributary or ally of the Assyrians, he refused a passage through his dominions to Pharaoh-Necho king of Egypt, who was marching into Assyria. The two armies met at Megiddo, where Josiah, entering into the battle in disguise, was mortally wounded by an arrow: he died at Jerusalem, deeply regretted by all his subjects. Jeremiah composed Lamentations in his honour. (2 Kings xxii.

xxiii. 2 Chron. xxxiv.)

JOTHAM, the eleventh king of Judah, exercised the regal authority during the leprosy which terminated the life of his father Uzziah, whom he succeeded on the throne. He is recorded to have done that which was right in the sight of God, and to have imitated his father's piety. "He became mighty, because he prepared his ways before the Lond his God." He discomfitted the Ammonites, and for three years received of them a rich tribute in silver, barley, and corn, which his father had imposed; but which that people had refused to pay. Magnificent erections distinguished his reign. The principal gate of the temple was enlarged and embellished; the hill of Ophel received new fortifications; and various buildings, both for habitation and defence, were erected in the mountains of Judah. After a reign of sixteen years he died, much regretted by his people, and was interred in the sepulchres of the kings, E. c. 742.

JUBAL, the son of Lamech and Adah: he was the father of all such as handle the harp and organ. (Gen. iv, 21.) In other terms, he was the inventor of musical instruments. By comparing his discoveries with those of Jabal, the institutor of the nomadic life, and of Tubal-Cain, the instructor of every artificer in brass and iron, we may perceive how soon the agreeable followed the useful arts.

JUBILEE, Feast of, how celebrated, 128, 129.

JUDAH.

1. Judah, the fourth son of Jacob and Leah, gave his name to the most numerous of the tribes of Israel; for the limits of the canton assigned to which, see p. 17. At the time of the revolution under Rehoboam and Jeroboam, this tribe also gave its name to that part of the kingdom of Israel which continued faithful to the house of David.

2. DESERT OF JUDAH, account of, 34.

3. Kingdom of Judah, 17. Causes of its duration for a longer time than the kingdom of Israel, 49.

4. LAND OF JUDAH, notice of, 14.

5. MOUNTAINS OF JUDAH, notice of, 31.

JUDEA, Country of, 18.

JUDAS.

1. Judas, surnamed Iscariot, (Heb. קרמת איש, Ish Karioth), that is, a man of Karioth or Carioth, one of the apostles of Jesus Christ. He seems to have possessed the full confidence of his fellow-apostles, by whom he was intrusted with all the presents which were made to them, and with all their means of subsistence: and, when the twelve were sent out to preach and to work miracles, Judas appears to have been among them, and to have received the same powers. He was accustomed, however, even at this time, to appropriate part of the common stock to his own use (John xii. 6.), and at length sealed his infamy by betraying his Lord for money to the Jews. Judas perished miserably, being driven by remorse to hang himself; but the cord broke, and he fell (probably from some elevated place) with such violence as to rupture the abdomen, and dash out his intestines upon the ground. (Matt. xxvii. 5. Acts i. 18.)

2. Judas, a Christian teacher, also called Barsabas, who was sent from Jerusalem to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas. Judas and Silas are termed prophets as well as Agabus: which title is given them in a two-fold sense, as zealous preachers of the Gospel, and as ministers of God, who were divinely inspired, according to the exigencies of the church, to predict future events.

(Acts xv. 22. 27. 32.)

3. Judas, surnamed the Galilæan in Acts v. 37. and also by Josephus (Ant. Jud. lib. xviii. c. 1. § 6. xx. c. 5. § 2. Bell. Jud. l. ii. c. 8. § 1.), who further calls him a Gaulonite (Ant. Jud. l. xviii. c. 1. § 1.), was born at Gamala, a city of Lower Gaulonitis, near the south-eastern shore of the lake of Tiberias. In company with one Sadok or Sadducus, he attempted to excite a sedition among the Jews, but was destroyed by Quirinus, at that time governor of Syria and Judæa.

4. JUDAS or JUDE, one of the apostles, also called Lebbeus and Thaddeus, the son of Alphæus and Mary, own brother of James the Less and cousin of our Lord. He was author of the epistle which bears his name; for an analysis of which, as well as a further account of Jude, see pp. 377, 378.

5. JUDAS MACCARIEUS, son of Mattathias, whom he succeeded in the office of captain of the Jews, during the persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes. (1 Macc. iii. 1.) After performing many heroic and glorious actions, he at length fell nobly in the field of battle, in an engagement with the Syrian army under the command of Bacchides, the general of Demetrius, the successor of Antiochus. (1 Macc. ix. 18.)

JUDGES of the Israelites, powers and functions of, 42. Judges appointed by Moses, powers of, ibid.

JUDICATURE (Jewish), courts of, and proceedings therein,

JUDICATURE (Roman), account of, 57-60.

Julia, a female Christian at Rome, who is supposed to have been the wife of Philologus. (Rom. xvi. 15.) It is not improbable that she was a freed-woman of the family of the Cæsars.

Julius, a centurion of the Augustan cohort, who conducted Paul to Rome, and treated the apostle with great courtesy and humanity. (Acts xxvii.)

Junias or Junia, a Jewish Christian, who is supposed to have been the wife of Andronicus. (Rom. xvi. 7.)

JUPITER, the supreme god of the ancient Greeks and Romans. He had a temple in the suburbs of LYSTRA, (which see).

JURISDICTION of Moses, 41, 42.; of Joshua and the judges, 42.; of the kings, 42-46.

JUSTICE, seat of, 54.

JUSTICE.

1. The surname of Joseph-Barsabas, who was one of those nominated to be an apostle. (Acts i. 23.) See Barsabas.

2. A Christian at Corinth, who hospitably received Saint Paul.

(Acts xviii. 7.)

3. Justus, also called Jesus, appears to have been known to the Jews by the former name, and to the Romans by the latter. He was a Jew by descent, and the friend and coadjutor of Saint Paul. (Col. iv. 11.)

JYAR, the eighth month of the civil year of the Jews; and the second of their ecclesiastical year. For a notice of the festivals, &c. occuring in this month, see p. 76.

KADESH, KADESH-BARNEA, or EN-MISHPAT, a city celebrated for several events. Here Miriam, the sister of Moses, died (Num. xx. 1.), and the Israelites murmured against God. (xxvii. 14.) It belonged to the tribe of Judah, and is supposed to have been situated about 25 miles to the south of Hebron. But Dr. Wells is of opinion that the Kadesh in the wilderness of Zin was a different place from Kadesh-Barnea in the wilderness of Paran. (Compare Num. xiii. 26. and Deut. i, 19.) Lightfoot, however, considers them as one and the same place. In the fourth century, the pretended sepulchre of Miriam was shown.

KADMONITES, ancient inhabitants of the land of Canaan, who dwelt beyond the Jordan, to the east of Phænicia, about Mount

VOL. II.

Lebanon. (Gen. xv. 19.) They derived their name from their eastern situation.

KANAH, Brook, 26.

KARIOTH OF KERIOTH, a town belonging to the tribe of Judah. (Josh. xv. 25.) Also, a town belonging to the tribe of Benjamin. (Josh. xviii. 28.) Of one or other of these places, the traitor Judas was a native. See Judas, 1.

KEDAR, a tribe of Arabian nomades, descended from Kedar. the son of Ishmael. (Gen. xxv. 13.) The habits of the Turcomans, a nomadic tribe who infest the inland portions of Asia Minor, are precisely those of the wandering hordes of Kedar, as described in the books of the Old Testament; and their black tents would fully suit the simile of Solomon (Song i. 5)., while their pastoral traffic is in every respect that adverted to in Ezekiel (xxvii. 21.), in his denunciations of destruction against Tyre. (Emerson's Letters from the Ægean, vol. i. p. 192.)

KEDRON, KIDRON, or CEDRON, Brook, account of, 26.

Kenites, a Canaanitish people, who, according to 1 Sam. xv. 6., compared with Num. xxiv. 20, 21., dwelt among the Amale-According to Judg. i. 16. iv. 11., they appear to have been descended from Hobab the brother-in-law of Moses, Kenizzites, an ancient Canaanitish people, who may have been descended from Kenaz, a grandson of Esau. Their place of residence cannot now be determined. (Gen. xv. 19. Num.

xxxii. 12.)

KETURAH, the second wife of Abraham, who married her after the death of Sarah; she bore him six sons. (Gen. xxv.)

Kines, person of, sacred, 44. Their powers, functions, and revenues, 43-46.

KINGDOMS of Israel and Judah, 17. Latent causes of the schism between, 48. Causes of the longer duration of the kingdom of Judah, 49.

Kin (or Cyrus), a river to the banks or vicinity of which Tiglath-Pileser, king of Assyria, sent the principal inhabitants of Syria, whom he had taken captive. (2 Kings xvi. 9.) At present it is called Kur by the Russians, and Kier by the Persians: it unites its waters to the Aras or Araxes, and empties itself into the Caspian Sea, under the 30th degree of north latitude. A people of foreign aspect, called Usbecks, dwell there to this time, who (Prof. Jahn thinks) may be the descendants of these captives. (Hist. of Heb. Commonwealth, vol. i. p. 140.)

KIR-HERES. See RABBATH-AMMON.

KIRJATH or KIRIOTH (קריה), a Hebrew word denoting a city. There was a place of this name in the canton of the tribe of Benjamin. (Josh. xviii. 28.)

The following proper names of cities are compounded of it:

1. KIRJATH-AIM, or the Double City.

(1.) The proper name of a city in the tribe of Reuben. (Num. xxxii. 37. Josh. xiii. 19.) It was afterwards possessed by the Moabites. (Jer. xlviii. 1. 3. Ezek. xxv. 9.) (2.) A city in the canton of the tribe of Naphtali. (1 Chron. vi. 61.)

2. Kirjath-Arba, or the City of Arba: an ancient name of Hebron, which see in p. 427.

3. Kirjath-Huzoth, or the City of Streets, a royal city of Balak king of Moab. (Num. xxii. 39.)

4. Kirjath-Jearim, or the City of Forests, in the tribe of Judah, on the western boundary of the tribe of Benjamin. Here the ark was lodged for many years in the house of Aminadab, until David removed it to Jerusalem. Urijah the prophet was a native of this place. (Josh. ix. 17. xviii. 5. Judg. xviii. 12. 1 Sam. vi. 21. 1 Chron. xiii. 6.)

5. KIRJATH-SANNAH, or the City of the Law, was a city in the tribe of Judah. (Josh. xv. 49.)

6. KIRJATH-SEPHER, or the City of Writing, otherwise called Debin; a city in the tribe of Judah, which was captured from the Canaanites by Othniel. (Josh. xv. 15, 16. Judg. i. 10-13.) Concerning the import of its name there is a difference of opinion; some supposing it to have been a seat of learning, while others, from Debir signifying an oracle, imagine that it was a seminary for the education of priests.

KISH, the son of Abdiel, who was also called Ner, and the father of Saul, of an obscure family in the tribe of Benjamin, was both a shepherd and a warrior, conformably to the custom of those ancient times. The Scripture eulogizes his valour. He sent his son in pursuit of some lost asses, and he returned to his father the first king of Israel. (1 Chron. viii. 30. ix. 39. 1 Sam. xiv. 51. ix, 1, and x, 2.)

KISHON, Brook, notice of, 26.

KNEADING-TROUGHS of the Israelites, 154.

Конати, the son of Levi. (Gen. xlvi. 11.) He was the head of the Kohathites, who were appointed to carry the ark and sacred vessels of the tabernacle, during the marches of the Israelites. (Num. iv. 1-15.)

KORAH, the son of Izhar, and grandson of Levi, who conspired against Moses. (Exod. vi. 21. Num. xvi.) From him were descended the sons of Korah, a Levitical family of singers, whom David appointed to guard the doors of the temple. (1 Chron. ix. 19.) Eleven psalms are inscribed "for the sons of Korah;" on the probable import of which title, see p. 239.

KORBAN, nature of, 119.

LABAN, the son of Bethuel, grandson of Nahor, brother to Rebekah, and father of Rachel and Leah. (Gen. xxviii.)—Also the name of a place beyond the Jordan, in the plains of Moab; it is otherwise unknown. (Deut. i. 1.)

LAKES in the Holy Land, account of, 26-28.

LAMB, Paschal, ceremonies of offering, &c. See pp. 123-126.

LAMENTATIONS for the dead, account of, 199, 200. LAND-SURVEYING, not unknown to the Jews, 187.

LAODICEA, a city of Asia Minor, about forty-two miles to the south of Ephesus, and in the vicinity of Colossæ and Hierapolis. Its earlier name was Diospolis or Cæsarea, but after being enlarged by Antiochus II. it was called Laodicea in honour of his wife Laodice. This city was often damaged by earthquakes, and restored either by the opulence of its inhabitants, or by the munificence of the Roman emperors. From the researches of modern travellers it appears to have been seated on a volcanic hill, of moderate height, but of considerable extent. Its ruins attest that it was large, opulent, and splendid; and there are still to be seen the remains of an amphitheatre, an aqueduct, and many other buildings. In the primitive times of Christianity, as appears from Saint Paul's Epistle to the Colossians, in which the Laodiceans are frequently mentioned, this place possessed a flourishing church. But the doom of Laodicea seems to have been more severe and terrible than that of the other six apocalyptic churches: and its present condition is in striking conformity with the rebukes and threatenings of God. Not a single Christian resides at Laodicea! It is even more solitary than Ephesus: the latter has a prospect of a rolling sea, or a whitening sail, to enliven its decay; the former sits in widowed loneliness. Its temples are desolate; the stately edifices of ancient Laodicea are now peopled with wolves and jackals. The prayers of the mosque are the only prayers heard near the still splendid ruins of the city, on which the prophetic denunciation seems to have been fully executed, in its utter rejection as a church. "Its erime was pride; its punishment desolation. The threatening is accomplished: it now stands rejected of God and deserted by men; its glory a ruin; its name a reproach." (Hartley's Visit to the Apocalyptic Churches, in 1826. Mission. Register, July, Arundell's Visit to the Seven Churches, pp. 84-1827, p. 296.

D. Emerson's Letters from the Ægean, vol. i. pp. 180, 219.)

Lasæa, a maritime city of Crete (Acts xxvii. 8.), which is of mentioned by any of the ancient geographers. Its exact not mentioned by any of the ancient geographers.

site cannot now be ascertained.

Law and the Prophets, tables of the sections of, as read in the Jewish synagogues, 105. The Mosaic law perverted by the Pharisees, 144, 145.

Laws, how promulgated, 47, 48. Lawrens (Jewish), account of, 146.

LAZARUS.

1. The brother of Martha and Mary, whom Jesus loved, and miraculously raised him from the dead. For an examination of the circumstances of this miracle, see Vol. I. pp. 105, 106.

2. The name of a person introduced by Jesus into a very instructive narrative or parable, to represent the poor and distressed in this world. (Luke xvi. 19—25.)

Lear, the daughter of Laban, and the wife of Jacob, on whom her father imposed her in lieu of Rachel. (Gen. xxix.)

LEBANON (Mount), account of, 29, 30.

LEBBRUS, a proper name of the apostle Jude, who was also called Thaddeus. (Matt. x. 3.)

Legal Proceedings of the Jews, account of, 55—57.

LEGIONS (Roman), notice of, 92.

LEPROST (Disease of). Symptoms and treatment of, 195, 196 Purification of lepers, 134. Leprosy of clothes and houses, ibid. LETTERS or Epistles, form of, 183.

LEVI.

1. The third son of Jacob and Leah. (Gen. xxix. 34.) He is known only as having participated in the revenge of Simeon against the Shechemites, for the violation of Dinah (xxxiv. 25.), and for having given his name to the tribe that was set apart for the priesthood and worship of God. For the functions, &c. of the Levites, see pp. 111, 112.

2. One of the twelve apostles, also called MATTHEW. See p. 436. infra.

LEVIES, Military, how raised, 84.

LIBERTINES, account of, 103. 109. I. 80.

LIBYA, among the Greeks, was used as another name for Africa, as it imports a part of it. It was divided into Libya Interior and Exterior: but the Libya mentioned by Saint Luke (Acts ii. 10.) is that by Ptolemy called Libya Cyrenaica: and by Pliny Pentapolitana Regio, from its five chief cities, viz. Berenice, Arsinöe, Ptolemais, Apollonia, and Cyrene. It is noted in the Old Testament for its chariots and horses used in fight. (2 Chron. xvi. 8.) But it is mentioned by Saint Luke, on account of the Jews, who, living in such vast numbers in Alexandria that 50,000 of them were slain at one time, may well be thought to have had some colonies and proselytes in this neighbouring country.

LIFE-GUARDS of the kings of Israel, 47.

LINUS, a disciple whose salutation Saint Paul addresses to Timothy. (2 Tim. iv. 21.) He is commonly supposed to have been the first bishop of Rome.

LITERATURE of the Jews, 184-187.

LIVER, divination by the inspection of, 143.

Locusts, natural history of, and of their devastations, 39. Were eaten by the inhabitants of Palestine, ibid.

Lors, a Christian matron, and the grandmother of Timothy, of whose faith the apostle speaks with great commendation. (2 Tim. i. 5.)

LORD'S PRAYER, collected out of Jewish Euchologies, 132.

LORD'S SUFFER, points of resemblance between, and the Passover, 123—126. It is a perpetual memorial of the vicarious atonement of Jesus Christ, I. 61.

Loт, the son of Haran and nephew of Abraham; after separating from whom, on account of the increase of their cattle, he chose the city of Sodom for his abode. On its destruction Lot and his two daughters escaped with their lives; but his wife, looking back, perished. (Gen. xix. Luke xvii. 28.) The Moabites and Ammonites descended from Lot.

Lots, when used judicially, 122. Notice of the Feast of Lots, 320, 321.

LUBIM, the Libyans. (2 Chron. xii. 3. xvi. 8. Nah. iii. 9.)

Lucius, a Cyrenian, one of the prophets or teachers of the Christian church at Antioch. (Acts iii. 1. Rom. xvi. 21.) By some he has been erroneously confounded with the evangelist LUKE.

Lub, the fourth son of Shem, whose descendants peopled the province of Lydia. (Gen. x. 22.)

LUDIM, a people of Africa, frequently mentioned in Scripture; probably the Ethiopians or Abyssinians.

LUKE (Acunas, contracted from the Latin Lucanus), was a Gentile proselyte who had embraced Christianity. He was the friend and companion of St. Paul in most of his journeys, and wrote the Gospel that bears his name, and the Acts of the Apostles; for analyses of which, see pp. 307—313.318—321. LYCANTHROPY, the malady of Nebuchadnezzar, 196, 197.

LYCAONIA (Acts xiv. 6.), a province in Asia Minor, accounted the southern part of Cappadocia, having Isauria on the west, Armenia Minor on the east, and Cilicia on the south. Its chief cities are all mentioned in this chapter, viz. Iconium, Lystra, and Derbe. They spake (ver. 11.) in the Lycaonian tongue, which is generally understood to have been a corrupt Greek, intermingled with many Syriac words: but Jablonski supposes it to have been derived from the Assyrian tongue. Why they were disposed to worship Paul and Barnabas, 140. Paul's address to them illustrated, 326.

LYDDA, which in later times was called Diospolis, and is now known by the name of Loudd, was a large village, and, according to Josephus, little inferior to a city for its size. This place is celebrated in the Acts of the Apostles for the miraculous cure of Eneas by the apostle Peter (Acts ix. 32. 34.): it was situated at no great distance from Joppa (ix. 38.), on the way from the latter place to Jerusalem. The soil of the surrounding country is said to be very rich.

LYDIA, a woman of Thyatira, who traded in purple cloths, for which that place was celebrated. She was a Jewish prose lyte, of a sincere and pious character, and prompt in acknowledging and professing the truth. She was converted to the Christian faith in consequence of the preaching of Saint Paul. (Acts xvi. 14, 40.) Coquerel and others suppose that Lydia, in this place, is merely a patronymic appellation, that is, a Lydian woman ;-most probably from the circumstance of Thyatira being situated on the confines of Lydia, a province on the western coast of Asia Minor.

LYSTRA, a city of Lycaonia, chiefly celebrated for the miraculous cure there wrought upon the lame man, which made the Lycaonians think the gods were come down to them in the likeness of men (Acts xiv. 10, 11.), and also for the circumcision of

Timothy. (xvi. 1.)

MAACAH OT MAACHAH. See ABEL-BETH-MAACHAH, pp. 401,

MACCABEES, government of, 50. Origin of their name, 50.

MACEDONIA, a province of Greece, formerly called Æmathia; and from the kings of Macedon, Macedonia. It was bounded on the north by the mountains of Hæmus, on the south by Epirus and Achaia, on the east by the Ægean, on the west by the Ionian and Adriatic Seas; and it is celebrated in all histories for being the third kingdom, which, under Alexander the Great, obtained the empire of the world, and had under it 150 nations. To this country, whose metropolis was then Thessalonica, Saint Paul was called by a vision (Acts xvi. 9.); and the churches, by him planted in it, are celebrated for their great charity, and ready contribution to the distressed Jews in Judæa (2 Cor. viii.

ix.), when they themselves lay under the extremest poverty.

Macherus, a city and fortress east of the Jordan, between six and nine miles from that river, and not far from its mouth. Here John the Baptist was imprisoned, and subsequently put to death by order of Herod Antipas. (Matt. ix. 2. xiv. 3-12.) place is not mentioned by name in the New Testament.

MACHPELAH, the name of the cave purchased by Abraham of Ephron the Hittite, for a burial place for his wife Sarah. (Gen. xxxiii. 8.) This cave has been covered by the Turks, "by a large and ancient mosque; and all around the soil is held inviolable. The cave is in the middle of the interior of the edifice; its dark and deep entrance only is visible, and it is rarely entered. The cave is said by the Turks to be deep and very spacious, cut out of the solid rock, and that the resting-places of the patriarchs still exist, and are plainly to be discerned." (Carne's Recollections of the East, pp. 158, 159.)

MAGDALA, a city and territory on the western side of the lake of Gennesaret, not far from Capernaum and Gamala; it is supposed to have contained within its precincts Dalmanutha; hence, while Matthew says (xv. 39), Christ came into the coasts of Magdala, St. Mark says more particularly (viii. 10.), that he came into the parts of Dalmanutha.

MAGI, an appellation given among the Persians to priests, wise men, philosophers, and others who devoted themselves to the study of the moral and physical sciences, and who particularly cultivated astrology and medicine. They enjoyed the highest consideration. The wise men from the east, who came to worship the infant Messiah, were philosophers of this description; according to some, they came from Persia, or, in the opinion of others, from Arabia, as the precious gums which they offered were the productions of Arabia.

MAGIC, prevalence of, 143.

MAGISTRATES, persons of, sacred, 44. Crimes against them, how punished among the Jews, 62. Magistrates under the Jewish monarchy, 47.

MAGOG. See Gog, p. 426.

MAHANAIM, a city beyond the Jordan in the tribe of Gad, near the tribe of Manasseh; it was assigned to the Levites. (Josh. xiii. 26. 30. xxi. 38.) Here two hosts or camps of angels met Jacob (Gen. xxxii. 2.), whence the name is derived.

MALACHI, the last of the twelve minor prophets. For an account of him, and an analysis of his predictions, see pp. 288, 289.

MALCHUS, a servant of Caiaphas the high-priest, whose name St. John has very naturally preserved, since he was acquainted with Caiaphas. Malchus was one of the company that was commanded to seize Christ in the garden of Gethsemane: Peter cut off his right ear, which was instantly restored and the wound healed by the omnipotent touch of Jesus, who thus conferred upon him a signal benefit at a most critical time. The miraculous healing of Malchus presents a union of justice, power, and goodness; and could not fail to convince the apostles of the truth of our Lord's declaration, that no man could take his life from him, and that he could lay it down and resume it again. (John x. 17.) It has indeed been asked, how such a miracle made so little impression upon the company which Judas conducted. The reply is easy. The whole transaction took place in an instant. Peter struck Malchus with a sword. Jesus stood still, with one hand stopped the apostle, and with the other healed the servant; while those who were present, in the middle of the night and by the pale light of torches, scarcely had time to perceive what was passing.

MALICE, crimes of, how punished, 64. MALTA. See MELITA, p. 436. infra. MAMHE, Valley of, notice of, 31.

Manaen, the name of a person who was educated with Herod Agrippa I. (Acts xiii. 1.) Perhaps he was the son of that Manaem (Μανικμος) mentioned by Josephus, who predicted the future greatness of Herod. (Ant. Jud. l. xv. c. 10. § 5.)

1. The eldest son of Joseph; who, being adopted by his grand father, inherited equally with the sons of Jacob. (Gen. xlviii.) For the limits of the territory allotted to the tribe of Manasseh, see pp. 16, 17.

2. Manassen, the fourteenth king of Judah, succeeded his father Hezekiah, at the early age of twelve years. In the early part of his reign, most probably misled by the profligate counsels of those who detested the reformation introduced by the pious Hezekiah, Manasseh was a most wicked and idolatrous prince; and for his various crimes was carried captive into Babylon, about the twenty-second year of his reign. But, upon his penitent confession of his sins, he was delivered out of captivity and restored to his country (it has been conjectured after about a year's absence), perhaps in consequence of some revolution in the Assyrian empire. The remainder of his life and reign was as exemplary as its commencement had been inauspicious and profli-The worship of God was restored; the fortifications of Jerusalem were repaired and strengthened; and military officers were placed in all the fenced cities of Judah. (2 Chron. xxxiii.)

MAN-SLAUGHTER, punishment of, 63. MAN-STEALING, punishment of, 63. MANURES of the Jews, notice of, 176, 177.

MARAH, a place in the desert of Arabia, so called from the bitterness of its waters. When the Israelites came out of Egypt, on their arrival in the wilderness of Etham, they found the water so bitter that neither themselves nor their cattle could drink it: on which account they gave the name of Marah or bitterness to this encampment. (Exod. xv. 23. Num. xxxiii. 8.) Most travellers attest that there are several bitter fountains not far from the Red Sea; and Dr. Shaw fixes these waters at Corondel, a place where there is still a small rill, which, unless it be diluted by dews and rain, still continues to be brackish. (Travels, vol. i. p. 104.) A later traveller, who visited this region a century after Dr. S., describing these waters, says, that "the Pool of Marah is of a circular form, about sixty feet round: it gushes forth from a rock at the foot of a barren mountain, and one or two palm trees spread their shade over it. This pool, the only one found for a great distance around, in spite of its clear and tempting appearance, is brackish and bitter to the taste, offering one of the greatest disappointments to the weary traveller, whose thirst indeed may be quenched, though the hope of a sweet and deli-cious draught is baffled." (Carne's Recollections of the East, p. 348.)

MARESHA, a fenced city in the plain of the tribe of Judah. (Josh. xv. 44.) Jerome and Eusebius call it Morasthi. The prophet Micah was a native of this city, near which was fought the memorable battle between Zerah king of Cush or Ethiopia, and Asa king of Judah, who obtained a most signal victory.

(2 Chron. xiv. 8-10.)

Mark, or John-Mark, the author of the second Gospel, was the nephew of Barnabas, and also the companion of Paul and Barnabas in their journey through Greece (Acts xiii. 5. Col. iv. 11.), and afterwards of Barnabas alone. (Acts xv. 37. 39.) He afterwards accompanied Peter. (1 Pet. v. 13.) As he was the son of that Mary, at whose house in Jerusalem the apostles were accustomed to meet, it has been conjectured, with great probability, that he was particularly instructed in the doctrines of the Gospel by Peter, who therefore terms him his son. (1 Tim. v. 13. compared with 1 Tim. i. 2. and 2 Tim. i. 2.) For a further account of Mark and of his Gospel, see pp. 304-307.

MARKETS, where held, 155.

ME

Manniages of the Jews, ceremonies of, 160-162. How dissolved, 162, 163.

MARTHA, the sister of that Lazarus who was raised from the dead by Jesus Christ. (Luke x. 38. 40, 41. John xi. 1, &c. vii. 2.)

Many, the name of several women mentioned in the New Testament; viz.

1. The Virgin-mother of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ: she was of the tribe of Judah, and of the royal house of David, as also was her husband Joseph. After the crucifixion of Christ, who had commended her to the filial care of John, she found an asylum in the house of the beloved apostle; and when the disciples and apostles were met together in an upper room, she united with them in prayer. (John xix. 25. 27. Acts i. 15.) The time, place, and circumstances of her death are uncertain.

2. A woman of Magdala is supposed to be the same, out of whom Christ expelled seven demons. (Luke vii. 36, 37.) She was one of those who followed him and contributed to his main-

3. One of the sisters of Lazarus. (Luke x. 39-42. John xi. 1, &c.) 4. The mother of James the Less and of Joses: she was sister to the mother of Jesus, and was the wife of Alpheus or Clopas. (Matt. xxvii. 56. 61, xxviii. 1. Mark xv. 40. 47, xvi. 1. John xix. 25.)

5. The mother of the evangelist Mark, at whose house the Christians in Jerusalem were wont to convene. (Acts xi. 12.)

6. Mary, an unknown disciple resident at Rome, to whom St. Paul sent his salutation, with this eulogy-she bestowed much labour on ws (Rom. xvi. 6.), or, on you, according to the Alexandrian and other MSS., and the Syriac, Ethiopic, Coptic, and Arabic versions. It is, therefore, uncertain, whether the apostle here speaks of services actually rendered to himself, or to the believers at Rome.

MATTHEW, also called Levi, the son of Alpheus, was a collector of the imposts when our Saviour called him to follow him and be an apostle. He wrote the first Gospel; for an account of which, see pp. 295-304.

MATTHIAS, one of the disciples who was chosen by lot to fill up the vacancy occasioned by the death of the traitorous apostle Judas Iscariot. (Acts i. 23. 26.) Of his subsequent labours and history, nothing certain is known.

MEASURES of the Jews and other nations mentioned in the Bible, tables of, 394.

MEAT-OFFERINGS, notice of, 119.

MECHANIC ARTS of the Jews, 187.

Medeba, a city in the tribe of Reuben, situated in a plain of the same name. (Num. xxi. 30. Josh. xiii. 9. 16.) According to Eusebius, it was not far from Heshbon. Here Joab gained a memorable victory over the Ammonites and Syrians. (1 Chron. xix. 7-14.) According to Isa. xv. 2. it afterwards belonged to MEDIA (Acts ii. 9.) was a vast region of Asia, having on the north the Caspian Sea, on the west Armenia and Assyria, on the south Persia, on the east Hyrcania and Parthia. It had its name from Madai the son of Japhet, mentioned in Gen. x. 2. In the Babylonian captivity, the Jews were carried captive into Assyria, and placed in the cities of the Medes. (2 Kings xvii. 6. and xviii. 11.) Hence we find many of them and their proselytes at Jerusalem, when the Holy Ghost fell on the apostles. The Medes or Medians were subject to the Assyrian monarchs until the reign of Sardanapalus. Arbaces conspired against him, compelled him to burn himself in Nineveh, and restored the Medes to liberty, A. M. 3257, B. c. 747. He is considered as the founder of the Median monarchy, to which Justin assigns a duration of three hundred and fifty years, but Herodotus only one hundred and twenty years. (Justin. Hist. lib. i. c. 6. ed. Bipont. Herod. lib. i. cc. 95—107. ed. Oxon. 1809.) The last-mentioned historian has recorded the names of only four Median sovereigns, viz. Dejoces, Phraortes, Cyaxares, and Astyages. Diodorus Siculus (lib. ii. c. 32. edit. Bipont.) enumerates ten kings; Eusebius and Syncellus, eight. Herodotus, however, acknowledges that the Medes had enjoyed their liberty for some time before they elected Dejoces to be their king, A. M. 3294, B. c. 710. He caused the city of Ecbatana to be built, and is said to have reigned fifty-three years. Phraortes his successor subjugated the Persians to the Median empire, and reigned twenty-two years, A. M. 3347-3369, B. c. 657-635. Phraortes was succeeded by Cyaxares, who took Nineveh, and considerably enlarged the Median empire, A. M. 3369-3409, B. C. 626-595. His son and successor Astyages reigned thirty-five years, A. m. 3409—3444, B. c. 595—560. No particulars of his reign, however, are recorded by profane historians, excepting his repulsing an invasion of his territories made by the Babylonian under Evilmerodah, the son of Nebuchadnezzar. On the death of Astyages, the crown devolved on his son Cyaxares II., whom the Scriptures call Darius the Mede, A. M. 3444, B. c. 560. Media is now called Irak Adjami, and forms (as it also anciently did form) part of the kingdom of Persia.

MEDICINE, state of, among the Jews, 194-197.

MEDITERRANEAN SEA, 28. Plain of, 33.

MEGIDDO, a fortified town of the tribe of Manasseh in the territory of Issachar: it was formerly a royal city of the Canaanites. The Water of Megiddo (Judg. v. 19.) is conjectured by Prof. Gesenius to be the river Kishon. Compare Judg. v. 21.

and iv. 13.

Melchiseder, king of Salem (which was afterwards called Jerusalem), a contemporary of Abraham, whom he met with refreshments on his return from the pursuit of Cherdorlaomer and his allies. (Gen. xiv.) After the manner of the patriarchal ages, he appears, as the head of his tribe or family, to have discharged the functions of priest, and to have offered sacrifices to the true God. By paying him tithes Abraham acknowledged him to be a priest of the Most High God. In Heb. vii. St. Paul exhibits the resemblance between Melchisedek as the type and Jesus Christ the antitype.

Melcom, an Ammonitish idol. See p. 137.
Melita, or Malta, an island in the Mediterranean Sea, on which St. Paul and his companions were wrecked. (Acts xxviii. 1.) Mr. Bryant, Dr. Hales, and some other eminent critics and commentators, have endeavoured to show that this island was in the Adriatic Sea, on the coast of Illyricum,-the same which is now called Meleda. That MALTA is the island intended by St. Luke will be evident from the following considerations:—The apostle left the island in a ship of Alexandria, which had wintered there, on her voyage to Italy; and after touching at Syracuse and Rhegium, landed at Puteoli, thus sailing in a direct course. The other Melita would be far out of the usual track from Alexandria to Italy; and, in sailing from it to Rhegium, Syracuse also would be out of the direct course. The fact, that the vessel was tossed all night before the shipwreck in the Adriatic Sea, does not militate against the probability of its afterwards being driven upon Malta; because the name Adria (see page 403.) was applied to the whole Ionian Sea, which lay between Sicily and Greece. (Robinson's Lexi-Con, voce Meastr.)
Memorials of events, account of, 79, 80.

Мемриіз. See Noph, p. 440. infra.

MENAHEM, the sixteenth king of Israel: he murdered the usurper Shallum, and in his turn usurped the throne. He was a wicked and cruel prince, who followed the impious example of Jeroboam I. He died after reigning about ten years.

MENI, or the Moon; a Syrian idol, worshipped in Palestine during the time of the prophet Isaiah. See p. 137.

Мернівовнетн, a son of Jonathan, whom David took under his protection, when he was peaceably seated on his throne.

MERCURY, in heathen mythology, the son of Jupiter and Maia. He was the fabled patron of eloquence (on which account the people of Lystra supposed Paul to be Mercury in disguise, Acts xiv. 12.), the god of travellers, shepherds, &c. &c., and the conductor of the souls of the dead into the infernal regions.

MERIBAH, the name of a spring in the desert of Sin, where the Israelites contended against God. (Num. xx. 13, 24.)

Rephidim.

MERODACH, the name of an idol of the Babylonians. Lowth and other commentators (on Jer. i. 2.) suppose him to have been an ancient monarch of Babylon, whom his subjects deified and worshipped. See BALADAN, p. 413.

Meron, waters or lake of, notice of, 27.

MESOPOTANIA, a region of country, situated between the rivers Tigris and Euphrates, extending from the Persian Gulf to Mount Taurus. The Hebrews call it Aram Naharaim, or Aram of the two rivers, because it was first peopled by Aram, father of the Syrians, and is situated between two rivers. This country is celebrated in Scripture as the first dwelling of men after the deluge; and because it gave birth to Phaleg, Heber, Terah, Abraham, Nahor, Sarah, Rebekah, Rachel, Leah, and to the sons of Jacob. Babylon was in the ancient Mesopotamia, till by vast labour and industry the two rivers Tigris and Euphrates were reunited in one channel. The plains of Shinar were in this country. It was often called Mesopotamia Syriæ, because it was inhabited by the Aramaeans, or Syrians; and sometimes Padan-aram (Gen. xxviii. 2.), or the plains of Aram: or Sedearam, the fields of Aram; to distinguish them from the barren and uncultivated mountains of the same country. Balaam, son of Beor, was of Mesopotamia, (Deut. xxiii. 4.) Chushanrishathaim, king of Mesopotamia, subdued the Hebrews. (Judg. iii. 8.) Some Jews or proselytes from Mesopotamia were at Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost. (Acts ii. 9.) For an interesting description of the modern state of this country, see Mr. Buckingham's Travels in Mesopotamia. London, 1827, 2 vols.

MO

MESSIAH, (Heb. pup, that is, anointed,) the same as Christ in Greek, the name given to Jesus our Saviour, by way of excellence; he being anointed by his Father, to execute for us the offices of Prophet, Priest, and King, for all which offices persons were anointed with oil, as being symbolical of the graces of the Holy Spirit, which qualified them for their respective duties. Jesus, indeed, was not anointed with material oil, such as was used under the law, but with the Holy Ghost and with power. (Acts x. 38.) For a view of the predictions respecting the Messiah, see Vol. I. pp. 126—129. 453—458. As a Prophet, whose office was to teach and reprove, Jesus has perfectly instructed us in the will of God, and has shown himself to be the teacher of the most sublime religion ever promulgated to mankind: and he wrought numerous illustrious miracles in proof of his divine mission. As a Priest, (whose office it was to offer sacrifices for the expiation of the sins of the people, to bless them, and pray for them,) Jesus, who was both priest and victim, offered himself a sacrifice to God, in order to expiate our sins; for in him we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace. (Eph. i. 3.) He has blessed us, in turning every one of us from our sins: and he ever liveth to intercede for us with God as our Mediator: for, if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous. (Rom. viii. 34. 1 Tim. ii. 5. I John ii. 1.) As a King,—not like the earthly sovereign whom the Jews expected to deliver them from the voke of the Romans, which they detested, and who (they believed) would make them the most powerful people upon earth,-Jesus reigns over souls illuminated by the light of his doctrine, and over hearts called to holiness. To his people, whom he hath purchased to himself out of all the nations of the world, he gives for their government laws which are calculated to make them permanently happy both here and hereafter; he defends them against their spiritual enemies, and he will judge them at the last day. His mediatorial kingdom commenced after his resurrection, when he entered into his glory (Luke xxiv. 26.): but it will not be eternal. The authority which he exercises as Mediator and Judge, is only a temporary dispensation referring to the actual state of the church, and which will cease when he shall have fulfilled his office, that is, after the last judgment. This Saint Paul teaches in a very striking and precise manner, which deserves the greatest attention. See 1 Cor. xv. 24, 25. 28.

METEMPSYCHOSIS, doctrine of, believed by the Pharisees, 144.
MICAR, the sixth of the minor prophets, was contemporary with Isaiah, Joel, Hosea, and Amos. See an analysis of his predictions in pp. 270, 271.

MICHMASH, a town in the tribe of Ephraim, about nine miles from Jerusalem, to the east of Beth-Aven. Contiguous to this place was a ledge of sharp rocks, two of which, named Bozez and Seneh, faced Michmash and Gibeah; the one north, the other south. One of these was ascended by Jonathan and his armour-bearer, who routed the garrison of the Philistines that defended the pass of Michmash. (1 Sam. xiii. 5. 23. xiv. 4—13.) In the vicinity of this place were caves, thickets, rocks, and pits, in which the Israelites concealed themselves from their enemies. (1 Sam. xiii. 6.) Rocks and pits answer to the present appearance of the place to which tradition has given the name of Michmash; but no thickets or bushes are to be seen. A succession of low and barren hills leads up to the higher one of Michmash, which commands a fine and extensive view. There are also several caves on the spot. (Carne's Letters, pp. 330, 331.) At present, this place is distinguished by the name of Beer, signifying a well; most probably from its containing a very delicious spring of water. (Rae Wilson's Travels, vol. i. p. 364. Third edition.)

MIDIAN, the land into which Moses fled from the Egyptians. (Acts vii. 29.) Here Jethro lived (Exod. xviii. 1.), and the people were descended from Madian the son of Abraham by Ke-turah (Gen. xxv. 2.), whence we have reason to believe they still retained the worship of the true God. It was in Arabia Petræa.

MIDIANITES, commerce of, 187. Account of this people, 15. MIGDOL, a frontier town of Lower Egypt, towards the Red Sea, between which and that sea the Israelites encamped. (Exod. xiv. 1.) It is there rendered by the Septuagint Magdolus; and there also Herodotus represents Nekus, or Pharaoh-Necho, as gaining a great victory over the Jews, when Josiah was killed, mistaking Magdolus for Megiddo. Jeremiah represents it as belonging to Egypt Proper (xlvi. 14.), and in the neighbourhood of Tahpanes, or Daphnæ.

MILETUS, a sea-port of Asia Minor, and a city of Ionia, where Saint Paul delivered to the elders of the church of Ephesus that affecting discourse which is recorded in Acts xx. 17—35. In this city were born Thales, one of the seven wise men, Anaximander his disciple, Timotheus the celebrated musician, and Anaximenes the philosopher. There was another Miletus in Crete, where St. Paul left Trophimus sick. (2 Tim. iv. 20.)

MILITARY DISCIPLINE of the Jews, 83-91. And of the Romans, 93, 94. Military Sports, 190. A military order established by David, 92.

MILLS, oriental, notice of, 154. MINES of Palestine, 37.

MIRAGE, effects of, 34, 35. and notes.

MIRRORS of the Jews, notice of, 158. and note.

MITTLENE was a large and beautiful city of the island of Lesbos, where Pittacus, one of the wise men, Alcaus the poet, Diophanes the orator, and Theophanes the historian, were born. The whole island was also called by that name; as also Pentapolis, from the five cities in it, viz. Issa or Antissa, Pyrrha, Eressos, Arisba, Mitylene. If it had that name in St. Luke's time, we may understand either the island or the city, when he says (Acts xx. 14.), We came to Mitylene.

MIZAR, a small hill not far from Zoar, once a place of resort for David; and where it appears from Psal. xlii. 6. that he experienced some peculiar manifestations of the divine goodness.

MIZPEH, a high place affording an extensive prospect. (Isa. xxi. 8.) Several places in Palestine bore this name, most probably from being situated on elevated grounds or hills; of which the following were the principal:—

 MIZPEH, a city in the tribe of Judah, to the south of Jerusalem (whence it was distant about eighteen or twenty miles); and to the north of Hebron. (Josh. xv. 33.)

2. MIZPEH, a place in Gilead beyond the Jordan. (Judg. x. 17. xi. 34.) In Judg. xi. 29. it is called Mizpeh of Gilead, to distinguish it from other towns or places of the same name.

3. MIZPEH, a city in the tribe of Benjamin, where assemblies of the Israelites were often convened: here Samuel dwelt, and here Saul was anointed king. (Judg. xxi. 1. 1 Sam. vii. 5—7. x. 1. 17.) King Asa strengthened it for a frontier fortification against the kingdom of Israel (1 Kings xv. 22. 2 Chron. xvi. 6.): and afterwards the governor Gadaliah had his residence here. (Jer. xl. 6. compared with Neh. iii. 7. 19.)

4. MIZPEH, a valley in the region of Mount Libanus, which was inhabited by the Hivites. (Josh. xi. 3. 8.)

MIZRAIM (Gen. x. 6.), a son of Ham, whose descendants are supposed to have peopled Egypt, which country derived its Hebrew name from him. Josephus makes the name to be of Coptic origin (Antiq. l. i. c. 6. § 2.): but Gesenius observes that nothing resembling it is found in the present remains of the Coptic language, in which this country bears the name of XnµL.

Moabites, a people descended from Moab, the incestuous off-spring of Lot. Their habitation was beyond Jordan and the Dead Sea, on both sides of the river Arnon. Their capital city was situated on that river, and was called Ar, or Rabbath-Moab, that is, the capital of Moab, or Kirheres, that is, a city with brick walls. This country was originally possessed by a race of giants, called Emim. (Deut. ii. 11, 12.) The Moabites conquered them, and afterwards the Amorites took a part from the Moabites. Moses conquered that part which belonged to the Amorites and gave it to the tribe of Reuben. The Moabites were spared Moses, for God had restricted him (Deut. ii. 9.): but the always was a great antipathy between the Moabites and Isratites, which occasioned many wars between them. Balaam seduced the Hebrews to idolatry and uncleanness, by means of the daughters of Moab (Num. xxv. 1, 2.): and Balak, king of this people, endeavoured to prevail on Balaam to curse Israel. God ordained that the Moabites should not enter into the congregation of his people, even to the tenth generation (Deut. xxiii, 3.), because they had the inhumanity to refuse the Israelites a passage through their country, and would not supply them with bread and water in their necessity.

Eglon, king of the Moabites, was one of the first that oppressed Israel, after the death of Joshua. Ehud killed Eglon, and Israel expelled the Moabites. (Judg. iii. 12, &c.) A. M. 2677, B. c. 1325. Hanun, king of the Ammonites, having insulted David's ambassadors, David made war against him, and subdued Moab and Ammon; under which subjection they continued, till the separation of the ten tribes. The Ammonites and Moabites continued in subjection to the kings of Israel to the death of Ahab. Very shortly after the death of Ahab, the Moabites began to revolt. (2 Kings iii. 4, 5.) Mesha, king of Moab, refused the tribute of a hundred thousand lambs, and as many rams, which till then had been customarily paid, either yearly or at the beginning of every reign,—which of these two is not clearly expressed in Scripture. The reign of Ahaziah was too short to make war with them; but Jehoram, son of Ahab, and brother to Ahaziah, having ascended the throne, thought of reducing them to obedience. He invited Jehoshaphat, king of Judah; who, with the king of Edom, then his vassal, entered Moab, where they were in danger of perishing with thirst, but were miraculously relieved. (2 Kings iii. 16., &c.) It is not easy to perceive what were the circumstances of the Moabites from this time; but Isaiah, at the beginning of the reign of king Hezekiah, threatens them with a calamity, which was to happen three years after his prediction, and which probably referred to the war that Shalmaneser, king of Assyria, made with the ten tribes, and the other people beyond Jordan. Amos (i. 13, &c.) also foretold great miseries to them, which, probably, they suffered under Uzziah and Jotham, kings of Judah; or under Shalmaneser (2 Chron. xxvi. 7, 8. xxvii. 5.): or, lastly, during the war of Nebuchadnezzar, five years after the destruction of Jerusalem: we believe this prince carried them captive beyond the Euphrates, as the prophets had threatened, (Jer. ix. 26. xii. 14, 15. xxv. 11, 12. xlviii. 74. xlix. 3. 6.), and that Cyrus sent them home again, as he did the rest of the cap-After their return from captivity, they multiplied and fortified themselves as the Jews did, and other neighbouring people; still in subjection to the kings of Persia, afterwards conquered by Alexander the Great, and in obedience to the kings of Syria and Egypt successively, and finally to the Romans. There is a probability, also, that in the later times of the Jewish republic, they obeyed the Asmonæan kings and afterwards Herod the Great. (Calmet, Hist. des Peuples Voisins des Juifs, &c. Art. IV. Dissert. tom. ii. pp. 410—413.) For an account (by recent travellers) of the fulfilment of the predictions concerning Moab, see Keith's Evidence of the truth of the Christian Religion from Prophecy, pp. 158-172.

Moloch or Molech, an idol of the Ammonites, worshipped by the Israelites. See p. 137. Monarchs. See Kings.

Money (Jewish and Roman), mentioned in the Scriptures, tables of, 394. Antiquity of money, 189.

Money-changers, notice of, 78.

Montenegrins, funeral rites of, 200, note.

MONTHS of the Hebrews, see pp. 73-76. Intercalary months,

MONUMENTS, and Monumental Inscriptions, account of, 200

MORDECAI, son of Jair, of the tribe of Benjamin, was descended from one of the captives, who were carried into Babylon, and resided at Shushan. He was the foster-father of Esther. through whose influence with Ahasuerus, on the fall of Haman, be became vizier, or prime minister to the Persian monarch. Prof. Gesenius thinks that this name, like that of Esther, is probably of Persian origin.

Morian, Mount, 19.

Moses, the son of Amram and Jochebed, and great-grandson of Levi, was born in Egypt, A. M. 2433. Providentially delivered from the general destruction of all the Hebrew male children, commanded by Pharaoh, and adopted by the daughter of the Egyptian king, Moses was instructed in all the literature and sciences of Egypt. In the eightieth year of his age, he was appointed the leader and legislator of the Hebrews, whom he delivered from their bondage. An account of his jurisdiction, as the viceroy of Jehovah, is given in pp. 41, 42. After conducting the Hebrews through their wanderings in the desert during 40 years, he died on the confines of the land of Canaan, aged 120 years, "when his eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated." For an analysis of the Pentateuch, or five books of Moses, see pp. 203-212. In Exod. ii. 10. there is given a Hebrew derivation of the name Moses, viz. drawn out, because the ark in which his mother had deposited him was drawn out of the river Nile: but his education among the Egyptians, Gesenius observes, would lead us to regard it as of Egyptian origin; and so it is interpreted by Josephus. (Ant. Jud. l. ii. c. 9. § 6.)

MOUNTAINS of the Holy Land, 29—31. In the immediate vicinity of Jerusalem, 19.

MOURNING for the dead, duration of, and how expressed, 199, 200. 202. Rending of garments, a sign of mourning, 159.

Mules, notice of, 175.

MURDER, laws concerning, 63.

Music and Musical Instruments of the Jews, 183, 184. MYRA was one of the six great cities of Lycia, situated near the sea; whence St. Luke says (Acts xxvii. 5.), that, sailing over the sea of Cilicia and Pamphylia they came to Myric in Lycia. It still preserves its ancient name; and there are many remains of its former greatness.

Mysia (Acts xvi. 7, 8.), a country of Asia, was bounded on the north by Bithynia, on the east by Phrygia Minor, on the west by Trous, on the south by the river Hermus; there, perhaps, St. Paul attempted not to stay, because, as Cicero notes, in his oration for Flaccus (cc. 51, 52.) they were a people despicable and base to a proverb.

NAAMAN, general of the forces of Ben-hadad king of Syria, Being afflicted by a leprosy, he was healed by washing seven times in the river Jordan, according to the command of the prophet Elisha. (2 Kings v.)

NABATHÆANS. See NEBAIOTH, p. 439.

1. the son of Aaron and the brother of Abihu: who, offering incense with strange or common fire, instead of that which had miraculously been kindled upon the altar of burnt-offering, was consumed together with his brother. (Lev. x. 12.)

2. The son of Jeroboam I. king of Israel, a wicked prince, who followed the evil example of his father. After reigning two years, he was assassinated by Baasha. (2 Kings xv. 25—27.)

Nahash, a king of the Ammonites, who laid siege to Jabesh-

Gilead, shortly after the election of Saul to be king of Israel. He refused to the besieged any terms of accommodation, but on the ignominious condition of every one losing his right eye, thereby for ever incapacitating him from using the bow. This barbarous capitulation was rejected; the besieged obtained a truce of seven days, on condition of surrendering if they did not receive succour: but Saul arrived, and Nahash, after seeing his army totally discomfited, made a shameful retreat. (1 Sam. xi.) Subsequently Nahash rendered some services to David, most probably by giving him an asylum: we may easily conceive, that the enemy of Saul would be the friend of David. (2 Sam. x. 2. 1 Chron. xix. 2.)

NAHUM, a native of Elkosh, the seventh of the minor prophets, is known only by his prophetic denunciations against the Assyrian empire, and particularly Nineveh; for an account of which,

NAIN, a small city or town of Galilee, not far from Capernaum, at the gates of which Jesus Christ raised to life a widow's only son (Luke vii. 11—15.); for an examination of which miracle, see Vol. I. pp. 101, 102. 105. Nain derived its name from its pleasant situation: it is now a decayed village, containing between one and two hundred inhabitants. From its situation on the declivity of a mountain "the scene of that miracle must have been rendered more striking as the funeral procession passed slowly out of the gate down the steep, on the bold breast of which the remains of the place now stand." (Carne's Recollections of the East, p. 55.)

NAKED, the Jewish notion of being, explained, 156.

NAMES, various, of the Holy Land, 13, 14.; of Jerusalem, 18, 19. When given to the Jewish children, 111.

NAPHTALI, or NEPHTHALIM, the name of the sixth son of Jacob, born of Bilhah. For the limits of the canton allotted to this tribe, see p. 17.

NARCISSUS, a freedman and favourite of the emperor Claudius, who possessed great influence at court. (Sueton. in Claud. c. 28. Tacit. Annal. l. xii. c. 57.) In his family or among his clients were some Christians whom St. Paul salutes in Rom. xvi. 11. does not appear that Narcissus embraced the Christian faith, though the Greeks have made him bishop of Athens and a martyr, and have even placed him in the number of the 70 disciples.

NATHAN, an illustrious prophet in the reign of David, whom he convinced and reproved by a beautiful and pathetic parable of the heinousness of his guilt in the affair of Bathsheba and Uriah. (2 Sam. xii.) He is supposed to have been the preceptor of Solomon, at whose court his sons held distinguished offices, and of whose reign, as well as that of David, Nathan wrote memoirs which have long since perished. (1 Kings iv. 5. 1 Chron. xxix. 29. 2 Chron. ix. 29.) In the book of Zechariah (xii. 12.) the house of Nathan represents the descendants or family of the prophets.

NATHANAEL, or NATHANIEL, one of the disciples of Christ, who is supposed to be the same person as the apostle Bartholomew.

(John i. 46-50. xxi. 2.)

NAZARITES, account of. See p. 130.

NAZARETH, a small city of Lower Galilee, celebrated as having been the place where our Saviour was educated, where he preached, and whence he was called a Nazarene. In the time of Christ it did not possess the best of characters. (John i. 46.) Nazareth, which is at present called Nassara, stands on the side of a barren rocky eminence, or hill, facing the south-east, which is environed by mountains. It was from this hill which overlooks the town, the inhabitants would have precipitated him headlong. (Luke iv. 29.) When visited by Dr. Clarke, in 1801, he found it much reduced. The town was in the most wretched state of indigence and misery; the soil around might bid defiance to agriculture; and to the prospect of starvation were added the horrors of the plague! In 1827, the population amounted to about 2000 persons, principally Christians. Here are numerous reputed holy places to which pilgrims are conducted. The vignette in p. 401. represents the grotto at Nazareth, which is said to have been the house of Joseph and Mary. (Carne's Letters, pp. 251, 252. Madden's Travels, vol. ii. p. 294.) The Rev. Mr. Jowett has given a very interesting description of the site of Nazareth, together with some observations, to account for the bad character which it bore in the time of Jesus Christ. (See his Christian Researches in Syria, &c. pp. 165-169.)

NEAPOLIS. See SHECHEM.

NEBAIOTH, the son of Ishmael, from whom the NABATHEAN tribe of Arabs is supposed to have been descended. (Gen. xxv. 13. xxviii. 9. Isa lx. 7.) During the several wars maintained by the Jews against the Syrians, under the Maccabean princes, the Nabathæans were the only neighbouring people who showed them any friendship. (1 Macc. v. 24-27.)

NEBO.

1. A mountain beyond the river Jordan, where Moses died.

(Deut. xxxii. 49.) It is now completely barren.
2. A city belonging to the tribe of Reuben. (Num. xxxii. 38.) It being in the vicinity of the country of Moab, the Moabites became masters of it; and it was in their possession in the time of Jeremiah. (xlviii. l.) The site of this ancient city can no longer be traced. Nebo is spoiled. (Jer. xlviii. l.)

3. A city in the tribe of Judah (Ezra ii. 29. x. 43.), which, in

Neh. vii. 33., is, by way of distinction, called the other Nebo.

4. A Babylonish idol (Isa. xlvi. 1.), which Calmet supposes to be the same as Bel or Baal, see p. 139.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR, king of Babylon, who destroyed Jerusalem, and carried the Jews into captivity. (See p. 412. col. 2.) Like other Assyrian and Babylonian names, this word is best explained from the Persian. According to Gesenius, after Lorsbach, it is the same as Nebu-godan-sar, that is, Nebo the chief of the gods. Concerning the nature of Nebuchadnezzar's malady, see pp. 196, 197.

NECHO. See PHARAOH-NECHO.

NEDER, or Common Vow, account of, 130.

NEHEMIAH the son of Hachaliah, was born at Babylon during the captivity, but his family and tribe are not known. Raised to the distinguished office of cupbearer to Artaxerxes Longimanus, whose favour he enjoyed, Nehemiah forgot not his desolated country. Having obtained a royal commission, he went to Jerusalem for a limited time, to repair its walls and gates, and to regulate many abuses which had crept into the administration of public affairs. He subsequently returned to Babylon; whence, by permission of Artaxerxes, he proceeded a second time to Jerusalem, where he died B. c. 420; having governed the Jews about 30 years. For an account of the book which bears his name, see p. 226.

NERGAL, an idol of the Cuthites (2 Kings xvii. 30.), which some suppose to be the planet Mars; and others, to be the sun.

NETHINIMS, office of, 112. NEW Moon, feast of, 122.

NIBHAZ, an idol of the Avites (2 Kings xvii. 31.), which, some Hebrew interpreters think, had the shape of a dog; but other expositors suppose it to have been the sun. The former opinion is the most probable, as vestiges of the ancient worship of an idol in the form of a dog have been discovered in Syria in modern times. (Ikenii, Dissert. pp. 149. et seq. 1749. 4to.)

NICANOR, one of the seven primitive deacons chosen by the church at Jerusalem and ordained by the apostles. (Acts vi. 5.)

NICODEMUS, a Pharisee and member of the Jewish sanhedrin. who came by night to Jesus, probably as a serious though timid inquirer. (John iii. 1. 4. 9.) He afterwards took the part of Jesus before the sanhedrin (vii. 50.); and at last joined with Joseph of Arimathea to give his body an honourable burial. (xix. 39.)

NICHOLAS, a proselyte of Antioch, who was chosen one of the seven deacons of the primitive church. (Acts vi. 5.) Many persons have supposed him to be the head of the NICOLAITANS, a sect mentioned in Rev. ii. 6. 15., who held that the divine nature of Christ descended upon him at his baptism, and redescended at his crucifixion, and who abandoned themselves to gross impurity and profligacy of life. Another Nicholas has also been supposed to be the founder of this sect. A better opinion, however, seems to be, that the appellation here is not a proper name, but symbolical; and that it refers to the same persons who are mentioned in Rev. ii. 14. as holding the doctrine of Balaam: since the Greek name Nuchaos corresponds to the Hebrew בלעם, which is formed from בלעם, that is אואבם, to conquer, and by, that is Azos, the people. The allusion according to Mr.

Robinson, to whom we are indebted for this article, is to false and seducing teachers like Balaam, and perhaps refers more particularly to such as opposed the decree of the apostles. Nicolaitans are conjectured to have been alluded to in 2 Pet. ii. and in Jude 7-19.

NICOPOLIS, a city of Epirus, upon the Ambracian Gulf mentioned by St. Paul in Tit. iii. 12. Others, however, suppose it to be Nicopolis of Thrace, on the confines of Macedonia, near the river Nessus.

NIGHT, Jewish and Roman divisions of, 73.

NILE, a celebrated river of Egypt, which formed one of the boundaries of the Holy Land. See p. 14. In Gen. xli. I. Exod. i. 22. ii. 5. iv. 9. vii. 18. and viii. 3. 9. 11., it is termed the River without any addition. On the turning of the waters of the Nile into blood, see p. 206.

NIMROD, the son of Cush, and founder of the kingdom of BABYLON. (Gen. x. 8, 10.) In consequence of the protection which he afforded to the people against wild beasts, he may by their own consent have become their leader and chief; or, turning his weapons of hunting against men, he may have compelled them to submit to his dominion. His name (which signifies a rebel) seems to favour the latter supposition. (Jahn's Hebr. Commonwealth, vol. i. p. 5.) In Mic. v. 6. Babylon is called the Land of Nimrod.

NINEVEH, the capital of the Assyrian empire, could boast of the remotest antiquity. It was founded by Nimrod, or (as the text of Gen. x. 11. may be rendered) by Ashur the son of Shem: by the Greeks and Romans it was called Ninus. According to some writers it stood on the eastern bank of the Tigris above Babylon, while others represent it as being erected on the western bank: it may very probably have occupied both. This city was very splendid, and of great extent; according to Diodorus Siculus it was 480 stadia or 48 English miles (others estimate it 60 miles) in circumference: in the time of Jonah it was "an exceeding great city of three days' journey," containing "more than six-score thousand persons that could not discern between their right hand and their left." (Jon. iii. 3. iv. 11.) Its destruction within forty days, which that prophet had denounced, was averted by the general repentance and humiliation of the inhabitants (iii. 4-10.), and was suspended for nearly two hundred years, until "their iniquity came to the full;" and then the prophecy (see Vol. I. pp. 125, 126.) was literally accomplished, in the third year of the siege of the city, by the combined Medes and Babylonians; the king, Sardanapalus, being encouraged to hold out in consequence of an ancient prophecy that Nineveh should never be taken by assault till the river became its enemy; when a mighty inundation of the river, swollen by continual rains, came up against a part of the city, and threw down twenty stadia of the wall in length; upon which the king, conceiving that the oracle was accomplished, burnt himself, his concubines, eunuchs, and treasures; and the enemy, entering by the breach, sacked and rased the city about B. c. 606. (For a copious description of ancient Nineveh, see Dr. Hales's Analysis of Chronology, vol. i. pp. 448-450.) Of this once celebrated city there are literally no remains. Four mounds, the largest running north and south, and the most southerly called after the prophet Jonah, whose tomb it is supposed to contain, exhibit all that can now be traced of the metropolis of Asia. (See a description of them in Mr. Buckingham's Travels in Mesopotamia, vol. ii. 49—51.

60.)
Nisroch, a Babylonish idol, notice of, 139.
No, No-Amon, or No-Amon, the Thebes of ancient geographers, was the metropolis of Upper Egypt. It is mentioned in Jer. xlvi. 25. Ezek. xxx. 14—16. and Nahum iii. 8. In the Septuagint version of Ezekiel No is rendered Διοσπολίς, the city of Jupiter; in Nahum No Amon is rendered Mepis Aumay. The latter appears to be an etymological explanation of the word after the Coptic. In that language NOH signifies a cord, or measuring line, hence a portion measured out; and No-Amon portio, possessio Amonis, that is, the seat of the god Amon, or the place where he was principally worshipped. (Jablonskii Opuscula, tom. i. pp. 163—168. Gibbs's Hebr. Lex. p. 406.)

Noah, the son of Lamech, and the father of the post-diluvian world, was born A. M. 1056. Being the only righteous man of his time, he was preserved together with his family in the ark during the deluge. (For a refutation of skeptical objections to which, see Vol. I. pp. 75, 76.) Noah lived 350 years after that catastrophe, dying at the age of 950 years, A. M. 2006. He left three sons Shem, Ham, and Japheth, by whom the whole earth was overspread or peopled. (Gen. ix. 18, 19. x. 32.) The seven precepts of Noah, see p. 109. note 2.

NOPH, or MEMPHIS, a very celebrated city, the same as Thebes and the capital of Egypt, until the Ptolemies removed the seat of government to Alexandria. By the modern Copts it is called MENΦ, MENOTΦ, and NOTΦ: whence we may explain both the Hebrew forms η (NOPH) and η (MEMPH), and also the Greek name Μεμφιε. Plutarch (de Isid. et Osirid. p. 639 ed. Stephani) interprets the name ορ μου άγνθων, from the Coptic meh, full, and nouphi, good; or rapov Origidis, from the Coptic mhau, a grave, and onphi, everyerus, a benefactor, as Osiris is called. (Jablonskii, Opusc. tom. i. pp. 137. 150. 179. tom. ii. p. 131. Gibbs's Hebr. Lex. p. 381.) The prophets often mention this city; and predict the calamities which it was to suffer from the kings of Chaldæa and Persia, &c. (See Isa. xix. 13. Jer. xliv. 1. Hos. ix. 6. Ezek. xxx. 13. 16.) Its ruins are very splendid. Jeremiah had foretold, ages before, that Noph should "be waste and desolate, without an inhabitant" (xlvi. 19.), and not a family or cottage is Nose-Jewels of the Jewish women, notice of, 158. NUPTIAL CEREMONIES of the Jews, 161, 162.

NURTURE of children, 163, 164.

Oaks, forest of, 36.

OATHS of the Hebrews, how taken, 81, 82.

OBADIAH, the fourth of the minor prophets: he probably was contemporary with Jeremiah. See pp. 281, 282.

Oblations, different kinds of, 119. Ordinary, ibid. Voluntary, ibid. Prescribed, 120, 121.

OFFICERS (military) of the Jews, 85. And of the Romans,

OFFICERS of the Palace, notice of, 47.

Officers of the Synagogue, 104.

OLIVES, Mount of, 19. Culture of Olives, 36. 179, 180.

OLYMPIC GAMES, allusions to, in the New Testament, 191-194. Qualifications and previous discipline of the candidates, 192. Foot-race, ibid. Rewards to the victors, ibid. Games in imitation of them instituted among the Jews, 190.

OMRI, general of the army of Elah, king of Israel, who was assassinated by Zimri at the siege of Gibbethon, and was succeeded by Omri. (1 Kings xvi.) He was a wicked prince, whose crimes surpassed those of his predecessors: he died at Samaria, B. c. 914, and was succeeded on the throne by his son Ahab.

ON.

1. A pleasant valley in Syria of Damascus, now called Un, and used proverbially for a pleasant vale.

2. On, Aun, or Heliopolis, a city of Egypt. The father-inlaw of Joseph was high-priest of On (Gen. xli. 45.); there rendered Heliopolis, by the Septuagint version, and noticed also by Herodotus; who says that "the Heliopolitans were reckoned the wisest of the Egyptians." This was the city of Moses, according to Berosus: and well accounts for his scriptural character, that "he was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians." (Acts vii. 22.) Heliopolis was the Greek translation of Beth-shemesh, "the house or city of the Sun," as it was called by Jeremiah, "Beth-shemesh, in the land of Egypt" (xliii. 13.), to distinguish it from another Beth-shemesh, in the land of Canaan. It was called Beth Aven, "the house of vanity," or idolatry, by the Jews. (Ezek, xxx. 17.)

Onesimus, a Phrygian by birth, and the slave of Philemon, from whom he fied; but being converted to Christianity through the preaching of St. Paul, he was the occasion of the apostle's writing the admirable Epistle to Philemon. (Col. iv. 9. Philem.

10.)

OPHIR, a country whither Solomon sent a new, and subjects of Hiram king of Tyre, and from which they brought back gold (1 Kings ix. 27, 28. 2 Chron. viii. 17, 18.), and also change trees and trecious stones. (1 Kings x. 11.) Not fewer ÓPHIR, a country whither Solomon sent a fleet, aided by the than fiften or sixteen countries have been assigned, by various commentators and critics, as the site of Ophir, but the most probable is that of M. Huet, bishop of Avranches, who is of opinion that it was on the eastern coast of Africa, by the Arabians termed Zanguebar; that the name of Ophir was more particularly given to the small country of Sofala on the same coast; and that Solomon's fleet went out from the Red Sea, and from the port of Ezion-geber entered the Mediterranean by a canal of communication; and doubling Cape Guardafui, coasted along Africa to Sofala, where was found in abundance whatever was brought to the Hebrew monarch by this voyage. The opinion of Huet is adopted by Mr. Bruce, who has confirmed it by various additional considerations.

ORATORIES of the Jews described, 102, 103.

Oratory cultivated by the Jews, 186.
Othniel, the son of Kenaz of the tribe of Judah, and a relation of Caleb, who gave him his daughter Achsah in marriage, on his taking Debir, otherwise called Kiriath sepher, from the Canaanites. (Josh. xv. 16—19.) After the Israelites had been oppressed for eight years by Chushan-rishathcum, king of Mesopotamia, Othniel was excited to levy an army against him. He overcame the Mesopotamians, and delivered his countrymen, who acknowledged him as regent or judge. During the forty years of his administration the Israelites remained faithful to their God and king, and consequently prospered. (Judg. iii. 8-11.)

Ovens of the Jews, 154,

PAINTING, art of, among the Jews, 183. Painting of the eyelids practised by the Jewish women, 158.

PALACE, officers of, 47.

PALESTINE, boundaries of, 14, 22. See HOLY LAND.

PALM TREE, notice of, 36. PALMYRA. See TADMOR.

Palsy, variety of diseases so termed, 197.

PAMPHYLIA, a province of Asia Minor, having to the south the Pamphylian Sea, mentioned Acts xxvii. 5., Cilicia to the east, and Pisidia to the north (whence we find Saint Paul passing through Pisidia to Pamphylia, Acts xiv. 24.), and from Pamphylia to Pisidia (Acts xiii. 14.), and Lycia to the west. cities mentioned in the Scriptures as belonging to it are Perga and Attalia. (Acts xiii. 13.) Here numerous Jews dwelt, and hence those of Pamphylia are mentioned among those who appeared at Jerusalem at the day of Pentecost. (Acts ii. 10.) Рарнов, the metropolis of the island of Cyprus (Acts xiii. 4. 6.), and the residence of the pro-consul. It was memorable for the impure worship paid to Venus, the tutelar deity of the island. Here Saint Paul struck blind Elymas the sorcerer, and converted Sergips the pro-consul. The Jews dwelt here in great numbers. (ver. 6.) Twenty-five or thirty miserable huts are all that remain of this once most distinguished city of Cyprus. See Cyprus.

PARADISE, a word of Persian original, signifying a park, garden, or inclosure, full of all the valuable productions of the earth. The word passed into the Hebrew form pane (pannes), which occurs in Sol. Song iv. 13. Neh. ii. 8. Eccles. ii. 5.; and in those passages it is rendered Ποριδεσω in the Septuagint version, and denotes a garden of trees of various kinds, a pleasure park, a delightful grove. In the New Testament paradise is applied to the state of faithful souls between death and the resurrection; where, like Adam in Eden, they are admitted to immediate communion with God in Christ, or to a participation of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God. (Luke xxiii. 43. Rev. ii. 7.) Of this blessed state St. Paul had a foretaste.

See 2 Cor, xii. 2. 4., where he states that he was caught up to the third heaven; and, again, that he was caught up to paradise. He was caught up to the third heaven that he might contemplate that scene of supreme felicity, which awaits the just after the resurrection; and he was caught up to paradise that his mind might be contented with a view of their nearer consolations. (Valpy's Gr. Test. on Luke xxiii. 43.)

PARAN, Desert of, notice of, 33, 34.

PARASCHIOTH, or ancient divisions of the Pentateuch, read in the Synagogues, 104. Table of them, 105.

PARCHMENT, notice of, 182.

Parents, crimes against, how punished. See p. 62.

PARTHIANS are mentioned in Acts ii. 9. in conjunction with the Medes. The empire of Parthia subsisted four hundred years, and disputed for the dominion of the East with the Romans. The Parthians were celebrated for their veneration of their kings, and for their way of fighting by flight, and shooting their arrows backwards. They dwelt between Media and Mesopotamia; in all which trans-Euphratensian places, except some parts of Babylon, and of some other small prefectures, the Jews abounded, and some of them were at Jerusalem when the Holy Ghost fell on the apostles.

PASSOVER, feast of, how celebrated, 123-125. Its spiritual import, 125, 126. A proof of the credibility of the Old Testament, I. 66.

PATARA (Acts xxi. 1.), a sea-port town of Syria, anciently of considerable note. Extensive ruins mark its former magnificence and extent. Its port is now entirely choked up by encroaching sands. (Col. Leake's Tour in Asia Minor, pp. 182, 183.)

PATHROS, a city and district of Egypt, mentioned by the prophets Jeremiah (xliv. i. 15.), and Ezekiel (xxix. 14. and xxx. 14.) The inhabitants of this country are called Pathrusim in Gen. x. 14.

PATMOS, an island in the Ægean Sea, whither the apostle and evangelist John was banished, A. D. 94, and where he had the revelations which he has recorded in the Apocalypse.

PATRIARCHAL government, nature of, 40.

PAUL, who was also called Saul, the distinguished apostle of the Gentiles. A Pharisee by profession, and a Roman citizen by birth, he was at first a furious persecutor of the Christians; but after his miraculous conversion, he became a zealous and faithful preacher of the faith which he had before laboured to destroy. See a copious account of the life and apostolic labours of Saint Paul in pp. 321-329.

PAT of Jewish soldiers, 87.

Peace-Offerings, notice of, 118.

PERAHIAH, the seventeenth king of Israel, succeeded his father Menahem, and followed the example of his predecessors in maintaining the idolatrous institutions of Jereboam I. After reigning about two years, he was assassinated at Samaria by PERAH, an officer of his guards, who held the throne about twenty years. He also "did evil in the sight of the Lord; he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin." (2 Kings xv. 27, 28.) Towards the close of his reign, his dominions were overrun by Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, who carried his subjects into captivity; and Pekah himself was assassinated by Hoshea. (2 Kings xv. 29, 30.)

PELETHITES, notice of, 46.87.

PENTECOST, feast of, how celebrated, 126. A proof of the credibility of the Old Testament, I. 66.

PEOR, or BAAL-PEOR, notice of, 137, 138.

PERÆA, district of, 18.

PERFUME boxes of the Hebrew women, 158.

Penga, a city of Pamphylia (Acts. xiii. 13.), memorable among the heathens for a temple of Diana built there; and among the Christians for the departure thence of John-Mark from Barnabas and Paul, to Jerusalem, which occasioned the rupture between them for a season. (Acts xv. 37. 40.)

Pergamos or Pergamus was the ancient metropolis of Mysia, and the residence of the Attalian kings; it still preserves many vestiges of its ancient magnificence. Against the church at Pergamos, was adduced the charge of instability (Rev. ii. 14, 15.); but to its wavering faith was promised the all-powerful protection of God, "The errors of Balaam and the Nicolaitanes have been purged away. Pergamos has been preserved from the destroyer; and three thousand Christians" (out of a population of about 15,000 inhabitants) "now cherish the rites of their religion in the same spot where it was planted by the hands of St. (Emerson's Letters from the Ægean, vol. i. p. 216.) Of these Christians, about 200 belonged to the Armenian commu-VOL. II.

nion; the remainder are members of the Greek Church. They have each one church, but the other churches of Pergamos have been converted into mosques, and are profaned with the blasphemies of the pseudo-prophet Mohammed. There are also about 100 Jews, who have a synagogue. Pergamos, or Bergamo, as it is now called, lies about sixty-four miles north of Smyrna. Its present state is described by Mr. Arundell, in his visit to the Seven Asiatic Churches, pp. 281-290.

PERIZZITES, the ancient inhabitants of Palestine, mingled with the Canaanites. It is very probable that they were Canaanites, who had no fixed habitations, and lived sometimes in one country, sometimes in another, and were thence called Perizzites, which term signifies scattered or dispersed. The Perizzites did not inhabit any certain portion of the land of Canaan. In several places of Scripture the Canaanites and Perizzites are mentioned as the chief people of the country. Thus, we read that, in the time of Abraham and Lot, the Canaanite and Perizzite were in the land. (Gen. xiii. 7.) Solomon subdued the remains of the Canaanites and Perizzites, which the children of Israel had not rooted out, and made them tributary. (1 Kings ix. 20, 21. 2 Chron. viii. 7.) There is mention of the Perizzites by Ezra, after the return from Babylon; and several Israelites had married wives of that nation. (Ezra ix. 1.)

PERJURY, punishment of, among the Jews, 62.

Persia, a country of Asia, bounded on the west by Media and Susiana; on the south by the Persian Gulf; on the north by the great desert that lay between it and Parthia Proper; and on the east by another still greater, that lay between it and the river Indus. Until the time of Cyrus, and his succession to the Median empire, it was an inconsiderable country, always subject to the Assyrians, Babylonians, or Medes. Its capital city was Persepolis, now Chelminar: lat. 30 degrees. In the neighbourhood of which, to the south-east, was Passagardæ, where was the tomb of Cyrus.

The ruins of Persepolis are remarkable, among other things, for the figures, or symbols, to be seen on the walls and pillars of the temple. Sir John Chardin observed there rams' heads with horns, one higher, and the other lower, exactly corresponding to Daniel's vision of the Medo-Persian empire: the lower horn denoting the Medes, the higher, which came up last, the Persians. (Dan. viii. 3.) A winged lion, with a crown on his head; alluding, perhaps, to the symbolical representation of the Assyrian empire, by "a lion, with eagle's wings;" denoting their ferocious strength and cruelty, and the rapidity of their conquest. (Dan. vii. 4.)

Sketch of the History of the Persian Empire, illustrative of the Prophetic Writings.

Crnus, who is deservedly called the Great, both on account of his extensive conquests, and also for his liberation of the captive Hebrews, was the son of Cambyses, a Persian grandee, and Mandane the daughter of Astyages king of the Medians. He was born A. M. 3405, B. C. 599. one year after his uncle Cyaxares the brother of Mandane. Weary of obeying the Medians, Cyrus engaged the Persians to revolt from them. He attacked and defeated Astyages his maternal grandfather, whose life he spared, and gave him the government of Hyrcania, satisfied with having liberated the Persians, and compelled the Medes to pay him tribute. Not long after, the latter rebelled against him; and involved Cyrus in a protracted war. Having again reduced the Medes, Cyrus directed his arms against the Babylonians, whose ally Crossus king of Lydia, having come to their assistance, was defeated and obliged to retire into his own country. Cyrus continued to prosecute the war against the Babylonians, and having settled every thing in that country, he followed Crossus into Lydia, whom he totally discomfited, and overran his territories. Thus far we have followed the narrative of Justin (lib. i. c. 7.): Herodotus relates events nearly in the same order (lib. i. c. 178.), but places the Babylonian war after the war with Creesus, and the entire reduction of Lydia. He says that Labynitus (the Bel-shazzar of Scripture) was at that time the king of Babylon, and that Cyrus, having subdued his other enemies, at length attacked and defeated the Babylonians, who withdrew into their city, which was both strongly fortified and amply stored with provisions. Cyrus finding that the siege would be protracted, diverted the course of the Euphrates, by causing great ditches to be dug on both sides of the city, above and below, that its waters might flow into them; the river being thus rendered passable, his soldiers entered the city through its channel. Babylon was taken, and the impious Belshazzar was put to death. (Dan. v. 30.) So extensive was that city, that the inhabitants of each extremity were ignorant of its capture, though the enemy was in its very centre; and as a great festival had been celebrated on that day, the whole city was absorbed in pleasure and amusements. Cyrus constituted his uncle Cyaxares (or Darius the Mede) king of the Chaldeans. (Dan. v. 31.) Cyrus immediately restored the captive Jews to liberty (2 Chron. xxxvi. 22. Ezra i. 1.), and commanded pecuniary assistance to be given to those who stood in need of it. He died A. M. 3475, n. c. 529, in the seventieth year of his age, though historians are by no means agreed concerning the manner of his death.

Cambyses, the successor of Cyrus, was one of the most cruel princes recorded in history. As soon as he was seated on the throne, he invaded and conquered Egypt, and reigned there three At the same time he detached part of his army against the Ethiopians, and commanded his generals to pillage the temple of Jupiter Ammon. Both these expeditions were unfortunate. The army which had been sent against the latter perished in the sands of the deserts; and that which he led against the former, for want of provisions, was compelled to return with great loss. Mortified at his disappointments, Cambyses now gave full vent to the cruelty of his disposition. He killed his sister Merge, who was also his wife; he commanded his brother Smerdis to be put to death, and killed many of his principal officers; he treated the gods of the Egyptians with the utmost contempt, and committed every possible outrage against them. Hearing at length that his throne was filled by an usurper, who pretended to be his brother Smerdis. and reigned at Babylon, he set out on his return to his dominions, but died at Ecbatana, a town in Syria, situated at the foot of Mount Carmel.

A. M. 3482, B. C. 522. After the death of Cambyses, the Persian throne was usurped by seven Magi, who governed for some time, making the people believe that their sovereign was Smerdis the brother of Cambyses. The Samaritans, who were always jealous of the prosperity of the Jews, obtained an edict from the pseudo-Smerdis (called ARTAXERXES in the Scriptures), prohibiting them from rebuilding the temple and fortifications of Jerusalem. (Ezra iv. 7. 16.) This interruption continued until the second year of Darius the son of Hystaspes.

A. M. 3483, B. C. 521. The imposition of the Magi being at length discovered, Darius the son of Hystaspes was acknowledged king. Having been informed of the permission which Cyrus had granted to the Jews to rebuild their temple, he allowed them to resume the work (Ezra iv. 24. vi. 1.), which they had commenced by the exhortations and encouragement of the prophets Haggai (i. 1.) and Zechariah (i. 1. Ezra v. 1.) This Darius is the Ahasuerus who married Esther and granted various privileges to the Jews. (See the book of Esther, through-

A. M. 3519, B.c. 485. Xerxes succeeded Darius in the Persian throne; but as no particulars are recorded of him as connected with the Jews, we pass on to the reign of his successor ARTAX-ERXES, who greatly favoured them, first sending Ezra into Judæa (Ezra vii. viii.), and afterwards Nehemiah, to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem. (Neh. ii. iii.) The Persian monarchy subsisted for many centuries after this event; but, as its history is not connected with that of the Jews, it would be foreign to the plan of this abstract to give the succession of its sovereigns. (Calmet, Histoire Prophane de l'Orient, § IV. Dissert. tom. ii. pp. 336 -341.)

Person, crimes against, how punished, 63, 64.

PESTILENCE OF PLAGUE, 38.

PESTILENTIAL BLAST OF WIND, 40.

Peter, one of the apostles, formerly called Simon: he was of Bethsaida, and was the son of Jonas, a fisherman, which occupation he also followed. When he was called to the apostleship by our Saviour, he received the name of Herpos, which signifies a stone (John i. 43.), probably in reference to the boldness and firmness of his character, and his zeal and activity in promoting his Master's cause. See a further account of Peter and an analysis of the two epistles which bear his name, in pp. 362-364.

Pharaon, a common appellation of the ancient kings of Egypt, who after the age of Alexander were in like manner termed Ptolemy. Jablonski states, that Phouro, in the common Egyptian dialect, and Pharro, in the very ancient dialect, spoken in the Thebaid, respectively denote a king. (Opuscala, tom. i. p. 376.) Mr. Weston derives this name from PIOVRO, which signifies my king, and which the Greeks rendered Φαραω. (Sunday Lessons on Gen. xii, 15.) The following are the principal sovereigns of this name, who are mentioned in the Old Testament:-

1. Phanaon, king of Egypt, and contemporary with Abraham. His officers having eulogized the beauty of Sarah, the patriarch's wife, Pharaoh sent for her to his harem, and conferred many presents on her husband, whom he imagined to be her brother. Pharaoh and his family being "plagued with great plagues" by the Almighty, he discovered his error, and restored Sarah to Abraham, whom he sent out of Egypt. (Gen. xii. 10—20.)

2. Pharaoh, the contemporary of Joseph; who, having interpreted his prophetic dreams, was rewarded with distinguished honours, and raised to the office of "ruler throughout all the land of Egypt." (Gen. xli.) Pharaoh participated in Joseph's joy, at his reconciliation with his brethren, and with noble generosity permitted him to invite his family into Egypt. On the arrival of Jacob and his sons, he gave them a hospitable reception, notwithstanding shepherds were held in abomination by the Egyptians, and assigned them a residence in the land of Goshen. And on Jacob's decease, he permitted Joseph to make a journey into Canaan, to bury him. (Gen. xlv. 16. xlvii. 1. l. 4.) This Pharaoh is the sovereign alluded to by Stephen in Acts vii. 10, 13,

3. Pharaon, a king of Egypt, gave one of his daughters in marriage to Mered, a descendant of Judah. (1 Chron. iv. 18.) This remarkable alliance must have taken place while the Hebrews were the guests and not the slaves of the Egyptians; and this prince must certainly have been one of the first successors of the master of Joseph.

4. Pharoah, king of Egypt, the contemporary of Moses, reigned at the period when Jacob's descendants had already become a great people. The genealogical lists of that period, which are extant, in harmony with the sacred historians, show how rapidly the race of Israel had multiplied. (1 Chron. iv. 1-27.) This prince adopted the false policy of oppressing the Hebrews in the manner related in Exod. ii., little thinking that his own daughter would save from the waters of the Nile the future avenger and deliverer of the Israelites. The recent discoveries, which have thrown new light on Egyptian antiquities, and which harmonize more and more with the sacred history, enable us to recognise the Pharaohs, who are mentioned in the Bible subsequent to the time of Moses. The king, during whose reign Moses was born, can only be Rameses or Ramses IV. surnamed Mei-Amoun, the last sovereign but one of the eighteenth dynasty. The first oppression of the Israelites (Exod. i. 11. 14.) most probably commenced under Thoutmosis III. a predecessor of this prince. But the succeeding narrative of the proscription of all the male Hebrew children, and the birth of Moses, relates only to this Ramses-Mei-Amoun. (Compare Vol. I. p. 88.)

5. Pharaon, the contemporary of Moses, had reigned about eighteen years, when Moses was commanded to return into Egypt, Ramses-Mei-Amoun and his personal enemies being dead. (Exod. iv. 19.) His history is contained in Exod. vi.—xii.: he perished with his army in the Red Sea. (xiv. 5—31.) This Pharoah is Amenophis or Ramses V. the last king of the eighteenth dynasty, and the father of Ramses VI. or Sesostris.

6. Pharaoh, the contemporary of David, received at his court, and honourably entertained Hadad, prince of Idumæa (to whom he gave his wife's sister in marriage, after the conquest of that country by the Hebrews. (1 Kings xi. 17—19.) He was one of the last kings of the twenty-first or Tanite dynasty, and most probably was a different person from the Pharaoh who is next to be noticed, because it is difficult to conceive how the protector of Hadad could be the father-in-law of Solomon.

7. Pharaoh, the contemporary of Solomon, gave the Hebrew king his daughter in marriage, with the city of Gezer as a portion. (1 Kings ix. 16.) This prince, the last sovereign of the twenty-first or Tanite dynasty, was probably dethroned and put to death by Shishak, who was contemporary with Rehoboam. M. Coquerel (to whom we are indebted for this account of the Pharaohs) thinks that Eccl. iv. 14. may allude to this event.

8. PHARAOH-NECHO, the contemporary of Josiah king of Judah, took up arms against the new empire of the Chaldwans, which was rapidly advancing and threatening Asia. He resolved to carry the war across the Euphrates into the very centre of the Chaldwan empire; but being opposed in his passage by Josiah, an ally of the Chaldsean monarch, to whom he in vain offered terms of peace, he totally discomfited the forces of the Jewish king near Megiddo. He then marched to Jerusalem, which city he entered by force or by capitulation; and, deposing Jehoahaz who had just succeeded his father upon the throne, he gave the crown of Judah to his elder brother Jehoiakim, and levied a heavy military contribution on the kingdom of Judah. Encouraged by these successes, Necho proceeded on his Asiatic expedition, taking with him Jehoahaz, whom he left prisoner at Riblah. He made himself master of Carchemish on the Euphrates; where, after three years' warfare with various success, he was defeated by Nebuchadnezzar, and forced to return into Egypt with the wreck of his army. On his return, he took the captive Jehoahaz with him. (2 Kings xxiii, 29-34, xxiv, 7, 2 Chron, xxxv, 20-24, xxxvi. 1-4.) The Scripture account of the war carried on by Pharaoh-Necho against the Jews and Babylonians is confirmed by an ancient monument discovered in Egypt by the late enter-Prising traveller Belzoni. (See Vol. I. pp. 89, 90.) Pharaoh-Necho, the son of Psammetichus, and the sixth king of the twenty-sixth dynasty, that of the Sa tes, is celebrated in profane history, for his project of digging a canal, to join the Nile to the Red Sea, and by the voyage of discovery which his vessels, manned by Phænician sailors, made round Africa.

9. PHARAOH-HOPHRA, the Apries or Vaphres of profane historians, was the son of Psainmis, and grandson of Pharaoh-Necho. He was the eighth king of the twenty-sixth dynasty, and contemporary with Zedekiah king of Judah, with whom he formed an alliance against Nebuchadnezzar. During the last siege of Jerusalem, Hophra took arms, and advanced to succour This diversion was useful for a short time; but, agreeahis ally. bly to the predictions of Jeremiah, the Egyptians notwithstanding their brilliant promises, withdrew without fighting, or at least without making any resistance. After the destruction of Jerusalem, when, deaf to the counsels of Jeremiah, Azariah and Johanan took refuge in Egypt, the prophet predicted to them the deplorable end of Hophra. (Ezek. xvii. 15. Jer. xxxvii. 5. xliii. 9. xliv. 30. xlvi. 26.) The prophet Ezekiel (xxix.) reproaches Pharaoh with his base conduct towards the king of Judah, and foretells that Egypt should be reduced to a desert, and that the sword should cut off both man and beast. This prediction was afterwards accomplished, first in the person of Pharaoh-Hophra, who was deprived of his kingdom by Amasis who usurped his throne, and subsequently by the conquest of Egypt by the Persians.

PHARISEES, tenets of the sect of, 144, 145.

PHARPAR, river. See Abana, p. 401.
Philadelphia, a city of Asia Minor, derived its name from its founder, Attalus Philadelphus, and is situated about twenty-seven miles to the south-east of Sardis. Not long before the date of the Apocalyptic Epistle, this city had suffered so much from earthquakes, that it had been in a great measure deserted by its inhabitants; which may in some degree account for the poverty of this church as described in this epistle. And its poverty may also in some degree account for its virtue, which is so highly commended. "Philadelphia appears to have resisted the attacks of the Turks in 1312 with more success than the other cities. At a distance from the sea, forgotten by the emperor, encompassed on all sides by the Turks, her valiant citizens defended their religion and freedom above fourscore years, and at length capitulated with the proudest of the Ottomans (Bajazet) in 1390. Among the Greek colonies and churches of Asia, Philadelphia is still erect—a column in a scene of ruins!" (Gibbon's Decline and Fall, vol. xi. p. 438. 8vo. edit.) Whatever may be lost of the spirit of Christianity, there is still the form of a Christian church in this city, which is now called Allah-Shehr, or the city of God. It contains about 1000 Christians, chiefly Greeks, most of whom speak only the Turkish language. They have twentyfive places of public worship, five of which are large and regular churches, with a resident bishop and inferior clergy. The remains of antiquity here are not numerous. (Hartley's Visit to the Apocalyptic Churches, in Missionary Register, July, 1827, pp. 324—326. Arundell's Visit, pp. 167—174.)
PHILEMON, an opulent Christian at Colossæ; whose slave

Onesimus having fled from him to Rome, where he was converted by Saint Paul, the apostle sent him back to his master with the admirable letter, which now forms the epistle to Philemon: for an analysis of which, see pp. 347-349.

PRILIP.

1. The son of Herod, misnamed the Great, by his wife Cleopatra; who, in the division of his father's kingdom, was made tetrarch' of Batanæa, Trachonitis, and Ituræa. (Luke iii. 1.) He enlarged and embellished the city of Paneas, to which he gave his own name, and called it Cæsarea, in honour of the emperor Tiberius.

2. Another son of the same Herod by Mariamne, daughter of Simon the high-priest. He was the husband of Herodias, who was taken from him by his brother Herod Antipas. Having been disinherited by his father, he lived a private life. (Matt xiv. 3. Mark vi. 7. Luke iii. 19.) As Josephus calls this prince Herod, and the evangelist Philip, it is not improbable, that, after the custom of the Herodian family, he bore both those names.

3. One of the apostles of Jesus Christ, a native of Bethsaida. (Matt. x. 3. Mark iii. 18. Luke vi. 14. John i. 44-47. 49. vi. 5. xii. 21, 22. xiv. 8, 9.) He was with the rest of the apostles and disciples who assembled for prayer in an upper room at Jerusalem, after the ascension. (Acts i. 13, 14.) Of the subsequent history of this apostle, nothing certain is known. He is said to have preached the Gospel in Scythia and Phrygia, and was interred at Hierapolis in Phrygia Pacatiana, where he suffered martyrdom.

4. One of the seven deacons of the church at Jerusalem. (Acts vi. 5.) He preached the Gospel at Samaria, where he performed many miracles, and converted many to the faith of Christ. Afterwards he received a divine command to go towards the south, to the road leading from Gaza to Jerusalem: here he met an eunuch of Candace queen of Ethiopia, whom he likewise converted to the Christian faith. (Acts viii. 5-38.) After baptizing the eunuch, Philip stopped some time at Azotus; and "passing through, he preached in all the cities until he came to Cæsarea," where he appears to have fixed his residence. He had four daughters; who, like Agabus, according to circumstances, received the gift of prophecy. (Acts viii. 40. xxi. 8, 9.)
PHILIPPI was a city of Macedonia Prima, or the first of the four parts into which that province was divided. (See Vol. I. p. 90.) It was of moderate extent, and situated on the confines of Thrace. It was formerly called Crenides from its numerous springs, and afterwards Datus from the coal mines in its The name of Philippi is received from Philip the father of Alexander, who fortified it, and made it a frontier town against the Thracians. Julius Cæsar planted a colony here, which was afterwards enlarged by Augustus, and hence its inhabitants were considered as freemen of Rome. Christianity was first planted at Philippi, by Saint Paul, A. D. 50, the particulars of which are related in Acts xvi. 9-40.

PHILISTINES, Land of, 15. Account of, ibid. Nature of the disease inflicted upon them, 196.

Philologus, a Christian at Rome, whom St. Paul salutes in his epistle to the Romans. (xvi. 6.) M. Coquerel is of opinion that he was probably a slave who had been restored to liberty, and who received the name of Philologus, in consequence of his having been instructed in literature and the sciences.

PHINEAS, the son of Eleazar, and grandson of Aaron, was the third high-priest of the Jews. He is greatly commended for his zeal for the glory of God in the affair of Zimri and Cosbi (Num. xxv. 7.): for which God promised that the priesthood should be given to his posterity by a perpetual covenant; this condition being included (as interpreters observe), that his children should continue faithful and obedient. The time of his death is not known.

PHEBE, a deaconess in the church at Cenchrea, whom Saint Paul strongly recommends to the Christians at Rome in his epistle (xvi. 1, 2.), for her hospitality to himself. The deaconesses in the primitive church were sometimes married women, but most frequently widows advanced in years, and who had been the wife of one man; that is, one who had not parted with one husband and married another, a practice which at that time was usual both among the Jews and heathens. (1 Tim. vi. 9, 10.) Their functions consisted in taking care of the sick and poor of their own sex, visiting the prisoners and martyrs, instructing catechumens, assisting at the baptism of women, and various other inferior offices. Phobe is supposed to have been the bearer of St. Paul's epistle to the Romans.

PHENICE, or PHENICIA, a province of Syria, which extended from the Gulf of Issus, where it bounded Cilicia on the north, along the coast southwards, to the termination of the ridges of Libanus and Antilibanus, near Tyre, where it met the border of Palestine. In breadth it only comprehended the narrow tract between the continuation of Mount Libanus and the sea. country was exceedingly fertile; and as a commercial nation, the Phoenicians are the most celebrated people of antiquity. They planted many colonies, and, among others, Carthage. The principal cities of Phænicia were PTOLEMAIS, SIDON, and TYRE, of which a notice is given in the subsequent part of this index. Idols worshipped by them, 138.

PHŒNICIARCHS, notice of, 140.

PHRYGIA is a province of Asia Minor, divided into the Greater and Lesser. The former had Bithynia on the north, Galatia on the east, Pamphylia and Lycia on the south, Lydia and Mysia on the west. Its chief cities mentioned in Scripture (Col. ii. 1.) are Laodicea and Hierapolis; and of this St. Luke seems to speak in Acts ii. 10. because he joins it with Pamphylia below it. In Acts xvi. 6. he means Phrygia Minor. The inhabitants are said to have been a servile people, kept in their duty best by stripes, and made wise only by sufferings. In all these parts of Asia Minor, even to Bythinia and the Euxine Sea, the Jews anciently were very numerous.

Phut, or Put, the name of an African people. According to Josephus (Ant. Jud. l. i. c. 7.) they were the inhabitants of Mauritania, where there is a river called Phut. (Plin. Nat. Hist. l. v. c. 1.) According to the Septuagint and Vulgate versions they were the Libyans. (Jer. xlvi. 9. Ezek. xxvii. 10. xxxviii. 5. Nah. iii. 9.) They are supposed to have been the descendants of Phut, the third son of Ham. (Gen. x. 6.)

PHYLACTERIES described, 156.

Physics, or Medicine, state of, 194-197.

Physics, or natural philosophy of the Jews, 186.

PIHAHIROTH OF HIROTH, without the prefix, a place on the Red Sea, where the Israelites made their second encampment. (Exod. xiv. 2. 9. Num. xiii. 7.) As the Israelites were properly delivered at this place from their captivity, and fear of the Egyptians (Exod. xiv. 5.), Dr. Shaw thinks that it derived its name from that circumstance. (Travels, vol. ii. p. 98.)
PILATE, Pontius, notice of, 53.

PISGAH, Mount, 31.

PISIDIA (Acts xiv. 24.), a country in Asia Minor, having Pamphylia on the south, Galatia on the north, Isauria on the east, and Phrygia on the west. Its chief city was Antioch in Pisidia (Acts xiii. 14.), so called to distinguish it from Antioch in Syria.

Pison, one of the four great rivers which watered the garden of Eden. (Gen. ii. 11, 12.) The author of the apocryphal book of Ecclesiasticus, speaking of a wise man, says, that "he filleth all things with his wisdom," or spreads it on every side, "as Phison and Tigris" spread their waters "in the time of the new fruits," that is, when they are swollen by the melting of the winter snows. Calmet, Reland, and others, suppose it to be the Phasis, a celebrated river of Colchis; Eusebius and Jerome, after Josephus, make it to be the Ganges, which passing into India falls into the ocean.

PITHOM, one of the cities built by the Israelites for Pharaoh. (Exod. i. 11.) Sir John Marsham imagines it to be Pelusium; but it is most probably the πατευμος of Herodotus. (Hist. l. ii. c. 158.), by the Arabians in later times called Fijum or Faijum (pronounced Faioum), which is also applied to the province.

PLAGUE, not unknown in Palestine, 38. PLAINS of the Holy Land, account of, 33.

PLEADING, form of, among the Jews, in civil and criminal cases, 55, 56.

PLOUGHING, Jewish mode of, 177. POETRY, cultivated by the Hebrews, 186.

Politeness, Jewish forms of, 168, 169. POLITICAL Divisions of the Holy Land, 15—18. Political State of the Israelites and Jews from the patriarchal times to the destruction of their polity by the Romans, 40-48.

POLYGAMY, why tolerated among the Jews, 160. Abolished by Christianity, ibid.

Pomegranate trees of Palestine, 36.

PONTUS, a province of Asia Minor, having the Euxine Sea on the north, Cappadocia on the south, Paphlagonia and Galatia on the east, and the Lesser Armenia on the west. It is supposed that Saint Peter preached in Pontus, because he addresses his first Epistle to the believing Hebrews, who were scattered throughout this and the neighbouring provinces.

Poors of Solomon, 29. Pool of Bethesda, 21. And of Siloam, ibid.

Poon, Jewish laws concerning, 83.

POPULATION of the Holy Land, 38. Of Jerusalem, 22.

Porce of Solomon, 99.

Possessions, demoniacal, reality of, 197.

POTIPHAR, the captain of Pharach's body guard, who purchased Joseph of some Midianitish merchants, and made him superintendent of his house. Afterwards, however, listening to the false charges of his wife, who accused Joseph of attempting to seduce her, he threw Joseph into prison, where he was rigorously confined. It should seem that this rigour was not of very long continuance; and that he restored Joseph to all his confidence, and intrusted him with the management of the prison. | Publius, an opulent governor of Malta, at the time of St. | Publius, an opulent governor of Malta, at the time of St. | Publius, an opulent governor of Malta, at the time of St. | Publius, an opulent governor of Malta, at the time of St. | Publius, an opulent governor of Malta, at the time of St. | Publius, an opulent governor of Malta, at the time of St. | Publius, an opulent governor of Malta, at the time of St. | Publius, an opulent governor of Malta, at the time of St. | Publius, an opulent governor of Malta, at the time of St. | Publius, an opulent governor of Malta, at the time of St. | Publius, an opulent governor of Malta, at the time of St. | Publius, an opulent governor of Malta, at the time of St. | Publius, an opulent governor of Malta, at the time of St. | Publius, an opulent governor of Malta, at the time of St. | Publius, an opulent governor of Malta, at the time of St. | Publius, an opulent governor of Malta, at the time of St. | Publius, an opulent governor of Malta, at the time of St. | Publius, an opulent governor of Malta, at the time of St. | Publius, an opulent governor of Malta, at the time of St. | Publius, an opulent governor of Malta, at the time of St. | Publius, and at the time of St. | Publius, an

(Gen. xxxvii. 36. xxxix. 19-23.) Potiphar is an Egyptian proper name, which has been explained by the Coptic HIQT ΦΡΡΟ father, that is, prime minister of Phanno, or Phanaoh. Some expositors have made a distinction between the master of Joseph and the keeper of the prison into which he was thrown. Others, however, have conjectured, with more probability, that Potiphar, after having punished Joseph in a transport of wrath and jealousy, acknowledged his innocence; but that, in order to avoid disgracing his wife, instead of restoring Joseph to his former office, he confided to him the command of the stateprison.

POTIPHERAH, governor, or, more correctly, priest of On, is known only from the circumstance of his having given his daughter in marriage to Joseph. (Gen. xli. 45. xlvi. 20.) Jablonski supposed it to be the same as the Coptic IIHONT-ΦPH, priest of the sun; and the recent discoveries among the Egyptian monuments have shown that his conjecture was not altogether without foundation. PE-THEPH-RE signifies that which belongs to RE or the Sun: this name was peculiarly suitable for a priest of On or Heliopolis, the city of the sun. Undesigned coincidences like these strongly corroborate the antiquity and authenticity of the Mosaic narrative.

POTTER'S FIELD. See ACELDAMA.

PRAYERS of the Jews, various appellations of, 131. Public prayers, ibid. Private prayers, ibid. How offered in the synagogues, 104. Attitudes in prayer, 131, 132. Forms of prayer in use among the Jews, 132. The nineteen prayers now used by them, 106, 107.

PREACHING, a part of the synagogue service, 106.

PRECIPITATION, a Jewish punishment, 68.

PREPARATION of the Passover, 123. Of the Sabbath, 122.

PRESENTS offered to superiors, 169.

PRIESTS, privileges and functions of, 112, 113.

PRINCES of tribes and families, 41.

PRAISCA OF PRISCILLA, the wife of Aquila, a converted Jew of Pontus. See Aquila, p. 407.

PRISONERS (Roman), treatment of, 58-60. Oriental mode of treating prisoners, 66. Probable origin of one being released at the Passover, 123. Eyes of, put out, 66.
Prisons (Jewish), notice of, 65, 66.

PRIVILEGES of the first-born, 163. PROCEEDINGS, judicial, forms of, 55-60.

PROCURATORS (Roman), powers of, 52, 53. State of the Jews under them, 53.

PRODUCTIONS of the Holy Land, 35-37.

PROMISE, land of, 13.

PROMULGATION of laws, 47, 48.

PROPERTY, crimes against, how punished, 62, 63. Disposal of property, 164.
PROPHETS, notice of, 47. 116. Punishment of false prophets, 62. Schools of the prophets, 184, 185. (See further the General Index of Matters, No. III. infra. article Prophets.) "The Prophets" an ancient division of the Old Testament, p. 213. of this volume. Table of the sections of the prophets, as read in the Jewish Synagogue, 105.

PROSELYTES, account of, 109.

PROSEUCHÆ or oratories of the Jews, 102, 103.

PSALTERY, a musical instrument, 184.

PTOLEMAIS, anciently called Accho (Judg. i. 31.), and now known by the name of ACRE, is a port and town situated on the shore of the Mediterranean Sea, on the confines of Lower and Upper Galilee. Here Saint Paul rested for one day on his journey from Ephesus to Jerusalem. (Acts xxi. 7.) As this port must always have been of great importance in time of war, the town has, consequently, undergone great changes. During the croisades this city suffered exceedingly both from infidels and Christians, between whom it was the scene of many sanguinary conflicts: at length it fell under the dominion of the late Djezzar Pacha, under whose government and that of his successor it has revived, and is now one of the most considerable towns on the coast. Acre has a beautiful appearance, when beheld from a short distance. This place is celebrated for the repulse there given to Napoleon Buonaparte, by the Turks under the command of Sir Sydney Smith, who, after a long and memorable siege, compelled the French to retire with great loss, and ultimately to abandon Syria.

Publicans, or collectors of the revenue, account of, 78, 79.

Why odious to the Jews, 79.

contiguous to his estate; and he most probably entertained the apostle during his three months' residence on that island. (Acts xxiii. 7, 8.) An ancient inscription found at Malta designates its governor by the same appellation—(1PPTOS or chief man which St. Luke gives to Publius. (Bloomfield and Kuinoel on Acts xxviii. 7, 8.) PUL, or PHUL.

1. The proper name of a people remote from Palestine. (Isa. The Latin Vulgate renders it Africa; according to Bochart, it was Philæ, an island of the Nile in Upper Egypt. Vitringa supposes it to be a place in the extremity of Egypt; it being the prophet's object, in the passage just cited, to designate the most remote parts.

2. The name of the first king of Assyria, who is mentioned in the Scriptures. He invaded the kingdom of Israel shortly after Menahem had usurped the throne, who gave a thousand talents of silver to support him in his kingdom. (2 Kings xv. 19, 20.)

PUNISHMENTS (Hebrew), design of, 64. Inferior punishments, 64-66. Capital punishments, 66-69.

PUNISHMENTS (Roman), mentioned in the Bible, account of, 69-72.

PURIFICATIONS of the Hebrews, account of, 133. Purifications of the leprosy, in persons, garments, and houses, 133, 134. Purifications in case of minor impurities, 134.

Purim, or feast of Lots, account of, 128.

PUTEOLI, a maritime town of Campania, in Italy, between Baiæ and Naples, founded by a colony from Cumæ. It was originally called Dicearchia, and afterwards Puteoli, from the great number of wells (putei) which were in the neighbourhood. It is now called Puzzoli or Puzzuolo, Here Saint Paul abode seven days, by the favour of the centurion, on his first journey to Rome. (Acts xxviii. 13.) It appears from Acts xxviii. 11. that Putcoli was the destination of this vessel from Alexandria; and we learn from the independent testimony of the Jewish historian, Josephus, corroborated by the geographer Strabo, that this was the port of Italy to which ships from Egypt and the Levant commonly sailed. (Antiq. Jud. lib. xviii. c. 7. § 4. c. 8. § 2. Strabo, Geogr. I. xvii. p. 793. ed Casaub.)

QUARTUS, a Christian resident at Corinth, whose salutations Saint Paul transmitted to Rome. He was probably a Roman, whom commercial affairs had led into Greece. (Rom. xvi. 23.)

QUICKSAND (Συρτις). Two syrtes or sand banks, on the northern coast of Africa, were particularly celebrated among the ancients; one of which, called the Syrtis major, lay between Cyrene and Leptis, and is most probably THN Eupray, THE Quicksand, alluded to in Acts xxvii. 17.; since a vessel bound westward, after passing Crete, might easily be driven into it by a strong north-easterly wind. The other (Syrtis minor) lay near Carthage. (Kuinöel on Acts xxvii. 17. Robinson's Lexicon, voce Συρτις.)

QUIRINUS or CTRENIUS (KUNVIOC, in Latin Quirinus), that is, Publius Sulpicius Quirinus, a Roman senator; who, after the banishment of Archelaus to Vienne in Gaul, and the annexation of Judæa to the province of Syria, was sent from Rome, as governor of Syria, to take a census of the whole province with a view to taxation. (Compare Acts v. 37.) This census he completed, A. D. S. This enrolment is alluded to in Luke ii. 2.; for an elucidation of which, see Vol. I. pp. 419, 420.

RABBATH.

1. RABBATH, RABBATH-AMMON, or RABBATH of the children of Ammon, afterwards cancer I managed and It was a place of Ammonites, was situated beyond Jordan. It was a place of Moses. When David declared war against the Ammonites, his general Joab laid siege to Rab-bath-Ammon, where the brave Uriah lost his life, by a secret order given by this prince, that Uriah should be forsaken in a place of danger. And when the city was reduced to the last extremity, David himself went thither, that he might have the honour of taking it. From this time it became subject to the kings of Judah. Afterwards the kings of Israel became masters of it, with all the rest of the tribes beyond Jordan. But towards the conclusion of the kingdom of Israel, Tiglath-pileser having taken away a great part of the Israelites from that country, the Ammonites were guilty of many cruelties against those who remained, in consequence of which the prophets Jeremiah and remained, in consequence of which the prophets Jeremiah and Jaffa to Jerusalem, made it necessarily a place of great resort; Ezekiel pronounced very severe prophecies against Rabbath, the and, from the fruitfulness of the country around it, it must have capital city of the Ammonites, and against the rest of the country, which probably had their completion five years after the destruction of Jerusalem. Antiochus the Greek took the city of Rabbath-Ammon about A. M. 3786. Some time before this, Ptolemy Philadelphus had given it the name of PHILADELPHIA. Which see in this index.

2. RABBATH-MOAB, or Rabbath of the children of Moab, the capital of the Moabites, otherwise An, or Aniel of Moab, and KIRRERES, or the city with brick walls. (Jer. xlviii. 31, 36.) This city was situated on the river Ar: it underwent many revolutions, and the prophets denounced heavy judgments against it.

RABBI, or RABBONI, import of, 185.

RABDOMANCY, or divination by the staff, 143.

RABSHAKEH, an officer of Sennacherib king of Assyria, who was sent with Rabsaris and Tartan to summon Hezekiah to surrender to his master. (2 Kings xviii. 17.)

RACA, a Syriac word of contempt, meaning a worthless person. (Matt. v. 22.) Those who applied this term to another were obnoxious to punishment by the Council of twenty-three. See p. 55. supra.

RACHEL, the youngest daughter of Laban, and the wife of Jacob. She was the mother of Joseph and Benjamin. In Jer. xxxi. 15. the prophet introduces Rachel as bewailing the exile of her posterity, that is, Ephraim; by quoting which language the evangelist Matthew (ii. 18.) in a similar manner introduces her as bemoaning the fate of the children who were massacred at Bethlehem. (Compare Vol. i. p. 317.) The tomb of Rachel is still shown to travellers, near the ruins of the village of Ramah. "It is one of the few places where the observer is persuaded that tradition has not erred.....The spot is as wild and solitary as can well be conceived; no palms or cypresses give their shelter from the blast; not a single tree spreads its shade where the beautiful mother [wife] of Israel rests." (Carne's Recollections of the East, p. 157.) Mr. Maundrell is of opinion that this may be the true place of Rachel's interment: but the present sepulchral monument can be none of that which Jacob erected; for it appears to be plainly a modern and Turkish structure. graves of the Moslems lie thickly strewn around this tomb.

RAHAB.

1. A woman of Jericho, who received into her house, and afterwards concealed, the two spies, whom Joshua had sent to explore that city and its contiguous territory. On the capture of Jericho, Rahab, with her parents, brethren, and all that she had, under the conduct of the two spies, quitted her house in safety. She subsequently married Salmon, one of the chief men in the tribe of Judah, and became the mother of Boaz. (Josh. ii. vi. 17, 22, 23, Ruth iv. 21. Matt. i. 5.) Much discussion has taken place respecting Rahab, whether she were a harlot or one who kept a house of entertainment for strangers. The same word in the Hebrew language denotes persons of both professions: for the same reason, the appellation of harlot is given to Rahab in the Septuagint version, from which the apostles Paul (Heb. xi. 31.) and James (ii. 25.) make use of the same expression: but the Chaldee paraphrast calls her by a word which signifies a woman who keeps a public house, without any mark of infamy. Since those apostles cite her as an eminent example of faith in God, and have ranked her with Abraham, we shall be justified in putting the most charitable construction upon the appellation given to her.

2. A poetical name of Egypt. (Isa. xxx. 7. li. 9. Psal. lxxxvii. 4. lxxxix. 11.) The Hebrew word signifies proud; and the name seems to have been given to Egypt from the pride and insolence of its princes and inhabitants.

RAINS, early and latter, importance of, in Palestine, 24. RAMA, RAMAH, or RAMATHAIM, was a small town or village in the tribe of Benjamin, about thirty miles north of Jerusalem: it is frequently mentioned in the Old Testament. As it stood in a pass between the kingdoms of Israel and Judah, Baasha king of Israel seized it, and began to fortify it, to prevent his subjects from passing that way into the kingdom of Judah. (1 Kings .v. 17. 21.) Here Nebuzaradan, the Chaldean general, disposed his Jewish prisoners after their capital was taken, which on sioned a great lamentation among the daughters of Rachel. (J xl. 1-3. xxxi. 15.) Oriental geographers speak of this place as having formerly been the metropolis of Palestine; and Mr. Buckingham informs us that every appearance of its ruins even now confirms the opinion of its having been once a considerable city. "Its situation, as lying immediately in the high road from been 'equally important as a military station or a depôt for supplies, and as a magazine for the collection of such articles of commerce as were exported from the coast. In its present state the town of Ramah is about the size of Jaffa, in the extent actually occupied. The dwellings of the last, however, are crowded together around the sides of a hill, while those of Ramah are scattered widely over the face of the level plain on which it stands. The style of building here is that of high square houses, with flattened domes covering them: and some of the old terraced roofs are fenced around with raised walls, in which are seen pyramids of hollow earthenware pipes, as if to give air and light, without destroying the strength of the wall itself. inhabitants are estimated at little more than five thousand persons, of whom about one third are Christians of the Greek and Catholic communion, and the remaining two-thirds Mohammedans, chiefly Arabs; the men of power and the military being Turks, and no Jews residing there. The principal occupation of the people is husbandry, for which the surrounding country is highly favourable; and the staple commodities produced by them are corn, olives, oil, and cotton, with some soap and coarse cloth made in the town. There are still remains of some noble subterranean cisterns at Ramah, not inferior either in extent or execution to many of those at Alexandria: they were intended for the same purpose, namely, to serve in time of war as reservoirs of water." (Buckingham's Travels in Palestine, p. 168.) (Buckingham's Travels in Palestine, p. 168.)

RE

Ramoth, a famous city in the mountains of Gilead, often called Ramoth-gilead, sometimes Ramoth, and sometimes Ramoth-mizpeh, or the Watch-tower. (Josh. xiii. 26.) This city belonged to the tribe of Gad. It was assigned to the Levites, and was one of the cities of refuge beyond Jordan. (Deut. iv. 43. Josh. xx. 8. xxi. 38.) It became celebrated during the reigns of the later kings of Israel, and was the occasion of several wars between these princes and the kings of Damascus, who had conquered it, and from whom the kings of Israel endeavoured to regain it. (1 Kings xxii. 3—36. 2 Kings viii. 28, 29. 2 Chron. xxii. 5.) Jehoram, king of Judah, was dangerously wounded at the siege of this place; and Jehu, the son of Nimshi, was here anointed king of Israel by a young prophet sent by Elisha. (2 Kings ix. 1—10.) Ahab, king of Israel, was killed in battle with the Syrians before this place. (2 Chron. xviii. 3, 4, 5. et seq.) It is now called Ramza.

READING, oriental mode of, 183.
REAPING, notice of, 177.
REBELS' BEATING, what, 67.
RECEPTION of visiters, 169, 170.
RECHABITES, account of, 116.
RECORDER, office of, 47.
RECREATIONS of the Jews, 189, 190.

RED SEA, that branch of the southern sea which interposes itself between Egypt on the west, Arabia Felix and some part of Arabia Petræa on the east, while its northern extremities touch on the coast of Edom. Edom, it is well known, in the Hebrew tongue signifies Red, and was the name given to Esau for selling his birthright for a mess of pottage. Both the country which was possessed by his posterity (Gen. xxv. 30. xxxvi. 31—40.), and the sea which was contiguous to it, were called after his name; but the Greeks, not understanding the reason of the appellation, translated it into their tongue, and called it Θαλασσα Ερυθρα, whence the Latins termed it Mare Rubrum, and we the Red Sea. It is also called Yam Suph, "the weedy sea," in several passages (Num. xxxiii. 10. Psal. cvi. 9., &c.) which are improperly rendered "the Red Sea." Some learned authors have supposed that it was so named from the quantity of weeds in it. But Mr. Bruce, who had seen and examined the whole extent of it, states that he never saw a weed of any sort in it; and remarks that a narrow gulf, under the immediate influence of monsoons blowing from contrary points six months each year, would have too much agitation to produce such vegetables, seldom found but in stagnant water, and seldomer, if ever, found in salt water. He is of opinion that the sea derives its name from the large trees, or plants, of white coral, perfectly in imitation of plants on land. One of these, which he saw, from a root nearly central, threw out ramifications measuring twenty-six feet in diameter every way. (Travels, vol. ii. p. 138.) This seems to be the most probable solution that has been hitherto proposed of the name. The tides in this sea are but moderate. At Suez, the difference between high and low water did not exceed from three to four feet, according to Niebuhr's observations on the tides in that gulf, during the years 1762 and 1763. (Voyage en Arabie, p. 363.)

Every one knows the celebrated mi acle of the passage over the Red Sea, when God opened this sea, dried it up, and made the Israelites pass through it, dry shod, to the number of 600,000, without reckoning old men, women, or children. The rabbins, and many of the ancient fathers, relying on Psal. cxxxvi. 13. (to him which divided the Red Sea into parts), have maintained that the Red Sea was so divided as to make twelve passages; that each of the twelve tribes passed through a different passage. But other authors have advanced that, Moses having lived long near the Red Sea, in the country of Midian, had observed that it kept its regular ebbing and flowing like the ocean; so that, taking the advantage of the time of the ebb, he led the Hebrews over; but the Egyptians not knowing the nature of the sea, and rashly entering it just before the return of the tide, were all swallowed up and drowned, as Moses relates. Thus the priests of Memphis explained it, and their opinion has been adopted by a great number of moderns, particularly by the learned critic and philologer, John David Michaelis, who in the queries which he sent to the Danish traveller M. Niebuhr, while in Egypt, proposed to him to inquire upon the spot, "Whether there were not some ridges of rocks where the water was shallow, so that an army, at particular times, may pass over? Secondly, Whether the Etesian winds, which blow strongly all summer from the north-west, could not blow so violently against the sea as to keep it back on a heap; so that the Israelites might have passed without a miracle?" and a copy of these queries was left also for Mr. Bruce, to join his inquiries likewise, his observations on which are excellent. "I must confess," says he, "however learned the gentlemen were who proposed these doubts, I did not think they merited any attention to solve them. This passage is told us by Scripture to be a miraculous one; and, if so, we have nothing to do with natural causes. If we do not believe Moses, we need not believe the transaction at all, seeing that it is from his authority alone we derive it. If we believe in God, that he made the sea, we must believe he could divide it when he sees proper reason; and of that he must be the only judge. It is no greater miracle to divide the Red Sea than to divide the river Jordan. If the Etesian winds, blowing from the north-west in summer, could keep up the sea as a wall on the right, or to the south, of fifty feet high, still the difficulty would remain of building the wall on the left hand or to the north. Besides, water standing in that position for a day must have lost the nature of fluid. Whence came that cohesion of particles which hindered that wall to escape at the sides? This is as great a miracle as that of Moses. If the Etesian winds had done this once, they must have repeated it many a time before and since, from the same causes. Yet Diodorus Siculus (lib. iii. p. 122.) says the Troglodytes, the indigenous inhabitants of that very spot, had a tradition from father to son, from their very earliest ages, that once this division of the sea did happen there; and that, after leaving its bottom some time dry, the sea again came back, and covered it with great fury. The words of this author are of the most remarkable kind: we cannot think this heathen is writing in favour of revelation: he knew not Moses, nor says a word about Pharaoh and his host; but records the miracle of the division of the sea in words nearly as strong as those of Moses, from the mouths of unbiassed, undesigning pagans. Were all these difficulties surmounted, what could we do with the pillar of fire? The answer is, We should not believe it. Why, then, believe the passage at We have no authority for the one but what is for the other:

it is altogether contrary to the ordinary nature of things; and, if not a miracle, it must be a fable." (Vol. ii. pp. 135—137.) Still, such skeptical queries have their use; they lead to a stricter investigation of facts, and thereby tend strongly to confirm the veracity of the history they meant to impeach. Thus it appears, from the accurate observations of Niebuhr and Bruce, that there is no ledge of rocks running across the gulf any where to afford a shallow passage. And the second query, about the Etesian or northerly wind, is refuted by the express mention of a strong easterly wind blowing across, and scooping out a dry passage, not that it was necessary for Omnipotence to employ it there as an instrument, any more than at Jordan; but it seems to be introduced in the sacred history by way of anticipation, to exclude the natural agency that might in after times be employed for solving miracles; and it is remarkable that the monsoon in the Red Sea blows the summer half of the year from the north, the winter half from 'the south, neither of which could produce the miracle in question. Wishing to diminish, though not to deny the miracle, Niebuhr adopts the opinion of those who contend for a higher passage, near Suez. "For," says he, "the miracle would be less if they crossed the sea there, than near Bedea. But whosoever should suppose that the multitude of the Israelites could be able to cross it here, without a prodigy, would deceive himself; for even in our days no caravan passes that way to go from Cairo to Mount Sinai, although it would shorten the journey considerably. The passage would have been naturally more difficult for the Israelites some thousands of years back, when the gulf was probably larger, deeper, and more extended towards the north; for in all appearance the water has retired, and the ground near this end has been raised by the sands of the neighbouring desert." (p. 354.) But it sufficiently appears, even from Niebuhr's own statement, that the passage of the Israclites could not have taken place near Suez: for, 1. He evidently confounded the town of Kolsum, the ruins of which he places near Suez, and where he supposed the passage to be made with the bay of Kolsum, which began about forty-five miles lower down; as Mr. Bryant has satisfactorily proved from the astronomical observations of Ptolemy and Ulug Beigh, made at Heroum, the ancient head of the gulf. (See his treatise on the Plagues of Egypt, pp. 371, 372.)

¹ Diodorus attributes this to an "extraordinary high tide." The fact, however, that "the ground was bare to the very bottom of the gulf" is admitted by this curious tradition.

REGION round about Jordan, notice of, 33.

2. Instead of crossing the sea at or near Ethan, their second station, the Israelites "turned" southwards along the western shore; and their third station at Pihahiroth, or Bedea, was at least a full day's journey below Ethan, as Mr. Bryant has satisfactorily proved from Scripture. (Exod. xiv. 2.) And it was this unexpected change in the direction of their march, which intimated an intention in the Israelites to quit Egypt; and the apparently disadvantageous situation in which they were then placed, "entangled in the land, and shut in by the wilderness," with a deep sea in front, the mountains of Attaka on the sides, and the enemy in their rear, that tempted the Egyptians to pursue them through the valley of Bedea, by the direct road from Cairo; who "overtook them encamping by the sea, beside Pihahiroth, opposite to Baalzephon." (Exod. xiv. 2—9.)

Niebuhr wonders how the Israelites could suffer themselves to be brought into such a disadvantageous situation, or be led blindfold by Moses to their apparent destruction: "one need only travel with a caravan," says he "which meets with the least obstacle, viz. a small torrent, to be convinced that the Orientals do not let themselves be led, like fools, by their Caravan Baschi," or leader of the caravan. (p. 350.) But the Israelites went out of Egypt with "a high hand," though led by Moses, yet under the visible guidance and protection of "THE LORD GOD of the Hebrews," who went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, and by night in a pillar of fire; and who, for their encouragement to enter the passage of the sea miraculously prepared for them, removed the cloud which went before the camp of Israel hitherto, and placed it behind them. (Exod. xiv. 8-20.) "And it came between the camp of the Egyptians and the camp of Israel; and it was a cloud and darkness to the one, but gave light by night to the other; so that the one came not near the other all the night." (Dr. Hales's Analysis of Chronology, vol. i. pp. 388—391.) The preceding elaborate view of this subject furnishes a most clear and satisfactory answer to the cavils of modern infidels.

Various ancient traditions among the heathen historians attest the reality of the miraculous passage of the Red Sea by the Israelites: to which we may add that it is manifest from the text of Moses and other sacred authors, who have mentioned this miraculous passage, that no other account is supportable but that which supposes the Hebrews to cross over the sea from shore to shore, in a vast space of dry ground which was left void by the waters at their retiring. (Exod. xiv. 16, 17, &c.) To omit the numerous allusions in the book of Psalms, Isaiah says (lxiii. 11, &c.) that the Lord divided the waves before his people, that he conducted them through the bottom of the abyss, as a horse is led through the midst of a field. Habakkuk says (iii, 15.), that the Lord made himself a road to drive his chariot and horses across the sea, across the mud of great waters. Lastly, in the apochryphal book of Wisdom we read (xix. 7, 8. x. 17, 18.), that the dry land appeared all on a sudden in a place where water was before; that a free passage was opened in a moment through the midst of the Red Sea; and that a green field was seen in the midst of the abyss.

REFUGE, cities of, 16.

REGAL GOVERNMENT of the Israelites and Jews, 42-46. Its duration, 49, REHOBOAM, the son and successor of Solomon. In his reign the kingdom of David was divided, the tribes of Judah and Benjamin retaining their allegiance to Rehoboam, while the other ten tribes became subject to Jeroboam the son of Nebat. Rehoboam died after reigning 17 years, and was succeeded on the throne of Judah by his son Abijah or Abijah, B. C. 954.

Religion, corruptions of, among the Jews, 135-143. Particularly in the time of Christ, 148—150.

REMPHAN, a Coptic name of Saturn, who was also worshipped under the name of Moloch. (Acts vii. 43. Compare p. 137.)

RENDING of garments, a sign of mourning, 159.

REPHAIM OF RAPHAIM, the sons of Rupha (2 Sam. xxi. 16. 18. Heb. and marginal rendering), a Cannanitish race of giants that dwelt beyond the Jordan (Gen. xiv. 5. xv. 20. Josh. xvii. 15.), from whom the gigantic Og king of Bashan was descended. (Deut. iii. 11.) In a wider sense, this word seems to have included all the giant tribes of Canaan. (Deut. ii. 11. 20.) In subsequent times, the sons of Rapha appear to have been men of extraordinary strength among the Philistines. (2 Sam. xxi. 16. 18. marg. rend.) The Vallet of the Refhaim (for an account of which see pp. 31, 32.) derives its name from this tribe.

REPHIDIM, a station or encampment of the Israelites in the desert (Exod. xvii. 1.), where the Israelites were miraculously supplied with water out of the rock of MERIBAH. It is an insulated rock, at the foot of Mount Sinai, about six yards square, according to Dr. Shaw, but Mr. Carne says that it is about five yards long, five in height, and four yards wide. This rock, which is of granite, is in Deut. viii. 15. rightly called a rock of flint, in consequence of its hardness: it lies, tottering, as it were, and loose, near the middle of the valley, and seems formerly to have been a part or cliff of Mount Sinai. The waters which gushed out, and the stream which flowed withal (Psal. vii. 8. 21.), have hollowed across one corner of this rock a channel about two inches deep, and twenty inches wide. There are also four or five fissures, one above the other, on the face of the rock, each of them about a foot and a half long, and a few inches deep, "the lively and demonstrative evidence of their having been formerly so many fountains." A remarkable circumstance is, that they run along the breadth of the rock, and are not sent downwards: they are more than a foot asunder. Neither art nor chance could be concerned, says Dr. Shaw, in the contrivance: inasmuch as every circumstance points out to us a miracle; and, in the same manner with the rent in the rock of Calvary at Jerusalem, never fails to produce the greatest seriousness and devotion in all who see it. (Shaw's Travels, vol. ii. pp. 109, 110. Carne's Letters, pp. 198, 199.)

RESTITUTION, in what cases enjoined, 65. RETALIATION among the Jews, 64, 65.

REUBEN, the eldest son of Jacob and Leah, gave his name to one of the twelve tribes of Israel; for the canton assigned to which, see p. 16.

REVENUES of the kings of Israel and Judah, 46. Of the Levites, 112. And of the priests, 113.

REVERENCE of the Jews for their temple, 100, 101. Of inferiors to superiors, 169.

Rezin, king of Syria, an able prince who knew how to avail himself of the divisions of his neighbours, in order to aggrandize himself. He formed an alliance with Pekah king of Israel against Ahaz king of Judah, whose dominions he invaded; and, after obtaining considerable advantages, he took a great number of prisoners, whom he sent to Damascus, and then proceeded to lay siege to Jerusalem, in which he failed. (2 Kings xv. 37. xvi. 5. 2 Chron. xxxviii. 5.) This check, which had been foretold by Isaiah (vii. 1—8.), frustrated the project formed by the allied princes for overthrowing the dynasty of David. Rezin was more successful in Idumæa, where he made himself master of the port of Elath on the Red Sea; an important conquest which gave him the command of the neighbouring country and sea (2 Kings xvi. 6.) His successes were of short duration; in the following year, agreeably to the predictions of Isaiah (viii. 4. ix. 10.), Damascus was taken by Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, who carried its inhabitants into bondage, and put to death Rezin, with whom the kingdom of Syria terminated.

RHEGIUM, a maritime city, near the south-western extremity of Italy, opposite to Messina in Sicily. Here St. Paul stayed one day, on his first voyage to Rome. (Acts xxviii. 13.) It is now called Rheggio.

REODES, an island and city in the Levant, which is said to have derived its name from the abundance of roses which grew there. When St. Paul went to Jerusalem, A. D. 58, he went from Miletus to Coos, from Coos to Rhodes, and thence to Patara in Lycia. (Acts xxi. 1.)

RIBLAH, a city of Syria, in the country of Hamath, which, according to Jerome, was the same with what was afterwards called Antioch in Syria. It was very pleasantly situated; and here Pharaoh-Necho stopped, on his return from the battle of Megiddo. (2 Kings xxiii. 33.)

RIMMON signifies a pomegranate tree.

1. An idol of the Syrians, supposed to be the Jupiter of the ancients, or, according to some writers, the sun. (2 Kings v. 8.) 2. A city in the tribe of Simeon, on the southern boundary of Palestine. (Josh. xv. 32. xix. 7. Zech. xiv. 10.)

3. A rock not far from Gibeah, whither the children of Benjamin retreated after their defeat. (Judg. xx. 45. 47. xxi. 13.) Hither also Saul and his men went. (1 Sam. xiv. 2.)

4. RIMMON-METHOAR (a round pomegranate), a city in the tribe of Zebulon (Josh. xix. 13), which is supposed to be the same as RIMMONO, which is mentioned in 1 Chron. vi. 62.

5. RIMMON-PAREZ (split pomegranate), the sixteenth encampment of the Israelites in the wilderness. (Num. xxxiii. 19.)

Rings worn by the Jews, 157, 158. RIVERS of the Holy Land, 25, 26. ROGEL or EN-ROGEL, fountain of, 28.

Rome, the metropolis of the world during the period comprised in the New Testament history. According to the chronology of Archbishop Usher, this city was founded by Remus and Romulus, A. M. 3966 of the Julian period, in A. M. 3256, B. c. 748, towards the close of the reign of Hezekiah, king of Judah. This city is so well known, that it is needless to give any account of it here. The later sacred authors of the Old Testament have not mentioned it; but it frequently occurs in the books of the Maccabees and in the New Testament. Saint Peter (1 Ep. v. 13.) has denoted it by the figurative name of Babylon. church that is at Bubylon, elected together with you, saluteth you. Saint John, in his Revelation (xiv. 8. xvi. 19. xvii. 5. xviii. 2. 10. 21.), points it out by the same name, and describes it in such a manner as can only agree to Rome: 1. By its command over all nations; 2. By its cruelty towards the saints; and, 3. By its situation upon seven hills. (Rev. xvii. 9.) St. Paul came twice to Rome: first, A. D. 61, when he appealed to Cæsar; and, secondly, A. D. 65, a year before his martyrdom, which happened in A. D. 66. Account of the judicature of the Romans, 57-59. Roman tribunals, 60. Powers of the Roman procurators, 52. Roman mode of computing time, 72, 73. Discipline and military triumphs, 93-95. Tribute reluctantly paid to the Romans by the Jews, 60.

Roofs of houses, 153.

RUDDER-BANDS, nature of, 188.

RURAL AND DOMESTIC ECONOMY of the Jews, 174-180. RUTH, a Moabitish woman, who returned with her mother-inlaw Naomi to the land of Israel, and became the wife of Boaz. (Matt. i. 5.) See an analysis of the Book of Ruth, p. 218.

SABEATH of the Jews, how observed, 121, 122.

SABBATICAL YEAR, account of, 128.

Sabtechan, a people or country of the Cushites; most probably Sabatha or Sabota, a considerable city of Arabia Felix, according to Pliny (Nat. Hist. l. vi. c. 28. § 32.), the principal city of the Atramites, a tribe of Sabæans, on the Red Sea.

SACKBUT, an ancient musical instrument, used in Chaldæa, supposed to consist of four strings, and to emit a shrill sound.

SACRAMENT of the Lord's Supper, points of resemblance be-tween and the Jewish Passover, 125.

SACRED OBLIGATIONS and DUTIES of the Jews, 129-134.

SACRED PERSONS, among them, account of, 108-116.

SACRED PLACES, account of, 95-107.

SACRED THINGS, account of, 116-120.

SACRED TIMES and SEASONS, account of, 121-129.

SACRIFICES of the Jews, divine origin of, 117. Selection of, and how offered, 117, 118. Different kinds of, 118-120. Their fitness and propriety, 120, 121. Unbloody sacrifices, 119. Allusions to the sacrifices of the heathens explained, 139-142.

Sadducers, sect of, tenets of, 145, 146.

SAGAN, or substitute of the high priest, 113.

SALAMIS, the chief city of the island of Cyprus, where the Gospel was early preached. (Acts xiii. 5.) It was situated on the south-east side of the island, and was afterwards called Constantia.

SALEM.

1. A name of the city of Jerusalem. (Psal. lxxvi. 2.)

2. Or Salim, a place on the banks of the Jordan, where John baptized. (John iii. 23.) Its situation cannot now be ascertained. SALMONE, a maritime city and promontory, which forms the eastern extremity of the island of Crete. (Acts xxvii. 7.)

SALOME, the wife of Zebedee, and the mother of the apostles James and John. She was one of those who attended Jesus Christ on his journeys, and ministered to him. (Mark xv. 40. xvi. 1. Matt. xx. 20. xxvii. 56.)

SALT, covenant of, 81. SALT SEA, account of, 27, 28. SALT, Vale of, notice of, 31. SALUTATIONS, forms of, 168, 169.

SAM OF SAMIEL, wind, notice of, 40. SAMARIA, the ancient capital of the kingdom of Israel, is very frequently mentioned in the Old Testament: it was situated on a hill which derived its name from Semer or Shemer, of whom it was purchased by Omri king of Israel, B. c. 921, who made it the seat of his government, and called it Samaria (Heb. Shomeron), from its former owner. By his successors it was greatly improved and fortified; and, after resisting the repeated attacks of the kings of Assyria, it was destroyed by Shalmaneser, B. C. 717, who reduced it to a heap of stones. (Micah i. 6. 2 Kings xvii. 6.) Samaria seems to have arisen again from its ruins during the reign of Alexander, B. c. 549, after whose death it was subject to the Egyptian and Syrian kings, until it was besieged, taken, and rased to the ground by the high-priest Hyrcanus, B. c. 129 or 130. It was afterwards wholly rebuilt, and considerably enlarged by Herod, surnamed the Great, who gave it the name of Sebaste, and erected a temple there in honour of the emperor Augustus (Sebastos) Cæsar. The situation is extremely beautiful and strong by nature. It stands on a fine, large, insulated hill, surrounded by a broad deep valley; which is environed by four hills, one on each side, that are cultivated with terraces up to the top, sown with grain, and (as the valley also is) planted with fig and olive trees. The hill of Samaria likewise rises in terraces to a height equal to any of the adjoining mountains. The population of Samaria, in 1819, was computed by Mr. Rae Wilson at nearly 10,000 souls, composed of Turks, Arabs, and Greeks, and a few Jews of the Samaritan sect. (Travels, vol. i. p. 377. Third edition.) For a notice of the idols worshipped in Samaria during the captivity, see p. 139. And for an account of the tenets, &c. of the Samaritans, see pp. 147, 148.

Samaria, Mountains of, p. 29. Region of, 18.

Samos, an island of the Archipelago on the coast of Asia inor. The Romans wrote to the governor of Samos in favour of the Jews, in the time of Simon Maccabæus, A. M. 3685, B. C. 139. (1 Macc. xv. 23.) St. Paul went ashore on the same island, as he was going to Jerusalem, A. D. 58. (Acts xx. 15.)

Samothracia, an island of the Ægean Sea. St. Paul departing from Troas for Macedonia, arrived first at Samothracia, and then landed in Macedonia. (Acts xvi. 11.) .It was anciently called Dardana and Leucania, and afterwards Samos; and in order to distinguish it from the other Samos, the epithet Thracian was added, which passed into the name Samothrace.

Samson or Sampson, the thirteenth judge of Israel, the son of Manoah, of the tribe of Dan. Before his birth he was consecrated to be a Nazarite, and was chosen to deliver the Israelites from the yoke of the Philistines. He was celebrated for his vast physical strength, and for the bravery and success with which he defended his country against its enemies. (Judg. xiii.—xvi.)

He judged the Israelites twenty years.

SAMULL, a celebrated Hebrew prophet, the son of Elkanah and Hannah, of the tribe of Levi. Having been consecrated to God from his birth, he received divine communications even in his childhood: he was the fifteenth and last judge of the Israelites. By divine direction, he converted the Hebrew commonwealth into a kingdom; and anointed Saul as the first king, and afterwards David. He is supposed to have been the first institutor of schools for the education of the sons of the prophets. He died at the age of ninety-eight years, about two years before the death of Saul. For an analysis of the two books of Samuel, see pp. 218—220.; and on the appearance of Samuel to Saul at Endor, see Vol. I. p. 95.

Sanctuary of the temple described, 100 SANDALS of the Hebrews, notice of, 157.

SANHEDRIN, or great council of the Hebrews, powers and functions of, 54, 55.

SAPPHIHA, the wife of Ananias, who, together with him, was struck with instant death, for attempting to deceive God the Holy Spirit. (Acts v. 1. 3. 9, 10.)

SARAH, the wife of Abraham, and the mother of Isaac, whom she bore at an age when she could little expect such a blessing. (Gen. xxi.) She died at the advanced age of 127 years, at Kir-jath-arba, afterwards called Hebron. (Gen. xxiii. 1. 9.) Sandis, the metropolis of the region of Lydia, in Asia Minor, was situated at the foot of Mount Tmolus, which commands an extensive view over the surrounding country. It was celebrated for the great opulence and for the voluptuous and debauched manners of its inhabitants. Considerable ruins still attest the ancient splendour of this once celebrated capital of Cræsus and the Lydian kings, which is now reduced to a wretched village called Sart, consisting of a few mud huts occupied by Turkish "A great portion of the ground once occupied by the imperial city is now a smooth grassy plain, browsed over by the sheep of the peasants, or trodden by the camels of the caravan; and all that remains to point out the site of its glory are a few disjointed pillars, and the crumbling rock of the Acropolis." Christians reside on the spot: two Greek servants of a Turkish miller, in 1826, were the only representatives of the church at Sardis, the present state of which affords a most striking illustration of the accomplishment of the prophetic denunciations against the church in that city. (Emerson's Letters from the Ægean, vol. i. pp. 201. 216-218; Hartley's Visit, Miss. Register, 1827, p. 326.; Arundell's Visit, pp. 176-182.)

Sarepta, or Zarephath (Luke iv. 26.), was a city in the territory of Sidon, between that city and Tyre. It was the place where the widow dwelt to whom the prophet Elijah was sent, and was preserved by her cruise of oil and barrel of meal that wasted not. (1 Kings xvii. 9.) It is now a small village called Sanson (Isa. xx. 1.), a king of Assyria, whom some critics and expositors have supposed to have been the predecessor of Sennacherib; while others have conceived him to have been Sennacherib himself.

SARON or SHARON, a town adjoining to Lydda, which gave name to the spacious and fruitful valley between Cæsarea and Joppa. Peter's miraculous healing of the paralytic Eneas at Lydda was the means of bringing the inhabitants of Saron to the knowledge of the Gospel. (Acts ix. 35.)

SAUL.

1. The son of Kish, of the tribe of Benjamin, and the first king of Israel. In consequence of his disregarding the divine commands, he was rejected by God, and David the son of Jesse anointed to be sovereign in his stead. Saul, after persecuting David for many years, was slain, together with his two sons, on Mount Gilboa, fighting against the Philistines. (2 Sam. i.) On the nature of his malady, see p. 196.

2. The Jewish name of the apostle PAUL.

SCAPE-GOAT, typical reference of, 127. SCEPTRE of the kings of Israel, 44.

Schva, a Jew, one of the chief priests, whose seven sons went from city to city, as many Jews did, to exorcise those who were possessed by demons. At Ephesus pretending to invoke the name of Jesus over the possessed, they were so severely treated by these spirits for their presumption, that they were forced to flee out of the house naked and wounded. (Acts xix. 14-17.) Schools of the Jews, particularly of the prophets, 184, 185.

Military schools, 87.

Sciences cultivated by the Jews, account of, 184-187.

Scorpions of the desert, 34. note 2.

Scourging, punishment of, how inflicted among the Jews, 64, and among the Romans, ibid. Could not be inflicted on a Roman citizen, 58, 59.

Scribes, account of, in the time of Moses, 42; and in the time of Christ, 146. Royal scribes, 47.

SCRIPTURES, reading of, in the Synagogues, 104, 105.

SEALS or SIGNETS of the Jews, 157, 158.

SEAS mentioned in the Scriptures. See pp. 26-28; and RED SEA, p. 446.

SEASONS of Palestine, 23-25.

Secre of the Jews, account of, 144-146.

SEED-TIME, notice of, 23.

1. Mountains of Seir, a ridge to the south of the Dead Sea, înclining towards Elath and Ezion-geber upon the Red Sea. Vol. II. 3 L

2. A mountain upon the frontiers of the tribes of Judah and SEIRATH, the place where Ehud stopped after the death of Eglon king of Moab. It is supposed to have been near Bethel. (Judg. iii. 26.)

Selah, the capital of the Edomites, which Amaziah captured, and changed its name into Joktheel. It is supposed to have derived its name (which signifies a rock) from its rocky situation, and to have been the city afterwards called Petra in Arabia. (2 Kings xiv. 7.)

Seleucia, a fortified city of Syria, situated on the sea-coast, a little north of the mouth of the river Orontes: it derived its name from Seleucus Nicator, and was sometimes called Seleucia ad mare, to distinguish it from seven or eight other cities in Syria of the same name. (Acts xiii. 4.) Seleucide, area of, 77, and note 4. SELF-INTERDICTION, vows of, 130.

Senate of Seventy in the wilderness, notice of, 42.

Sennacherib, a king of Assyria, who invaded the kingdom of Judah in the reign of Hezekiah. See Assyria, p. 410. col. 2. Sentences (Judicial), how performed among the Jews, 57.

Sepharad, a country or place where some of the Jewish captives dwelt. In the Latin Vulgate, it is rendered Bosphorus; in the Syriac and Chaldee versions, and by modern Hebrew commentators, it is rendered Spain. Both these explanations, says Gesenius, are undoubtedly false; but nothing more certain can be substituted in their place.

SEPHARVIM, a city under the government of the Assyrians, probably situated in Mesopotamia; whence colonists were sent into the country of Samaria. (2 Kings xvii. 24.)

SEPULCHRES of the Jews, account of, 200, 201.

SEPULTURE, rights of, 199, 200.

SERAB, nature of, 35, and note 3.

SERGIUS PAULUS, the Roman proconsul or governor of Cyprus, who was led by the preaching of Paul and Barnabas to embrace the Christian faith. (Acts xiii. 7.)

SERPENT, Brazen, worshipped by the Jews, 136, 137.

SERVANTS, different kinds of, mentioned in the Scriptures,

168. How hired and paid in Judæa, 167. Seth, the son of Adam and Eve, and father of Enos, was born after the death of Abel. He lived 912 years. His posterity, who were distinguished from the descendants of Cain by the appellation of the sons of God, preserved the patriarchal religion in its purity until the time of the deluge, after which it was transmitted by the race of Shem. (1 Chron. i. 1. Luke iii. 1. Gen. iv. 25. v. 3. vi. 2.)

Shadow of Death, Valley of, notice of, 34. note 3.

SHALMANESER OF SALMANESER king of Assyria. See As-SYRIA, 410. col. 1.

SHARON, Vale of, notice of, 32. SHAVEH, Valley of, notice of, 31. SHECHEM. See SICHEM, infra.

SHEEP-HUSBANDRY of the Jews, 175, 176.

SHEM OF SEM, the second son of Noah. (Gen. v. 32.) According to the genealogical table in Gen. x. the nations in southwestern Asia, as the Persians, Assyrians, Syrians, Hebrews, and part of the Arabians, were descended from him.

SHEMER, the name of the possessor of the mountain on which the city of Samaria was erected by Omri king of Israel, to whom he sold that territory for two talents of silver. From the circumstance of that city being called after his name, as well as from the very small sum given by way of purchase money, it has been conjectured that Shemer made it one of the conditions of sale that his name should be given to the new city. As the law of Moses prohibited the irredeemable cession of estates, and as Shemer's name is mentioned without any notice of his genealogy, it is not improbable that he was descended from the Canaanites, whom the Israelites had not been able to expel.

SHEMONEH ESRAH, or Jewish Prayers, 107, 108.

SHENIR, Mount, 30.

SHEPHERDS, duties of, 176.

Sheshach, another name for Babylon. (Jer. xxv. 26. li. 41.) This is evident from the connection; but the derivation of the word is obscure. Calmet supposed Sheshach to be a pagan idol, worshipped at Babylon; and that Jeremiah gave to that city the name of its tutelar deity.

SHIELDS of the Hebrews, and of the Romans, 87, 88.

Shiloh, a celebrated city in the tribe of Ephraim, where the people assembled (Josh. xviii. 1.) to set up the tabernacle of the congregation, which continued there until the time of Eli.

(1 Sam. iv. 3.) It was situated on a high mountain to the north of Bethel.

Shinar, the territory of Babylon. (Gen. x. 10. xi. 2. xiv. 1. Isa. xi. 11. Dan. i. 2. Zech. v. 11.) The boundaries of this country are defined in Gen. x. 10., and depend on the interpretation given to the names of cities mentioned in that verse.

SHIPS, of the ancients, notice of, 188, 189.

Shishak, a king of Egypt who was contemporary with Solomon and Rehoboam. He first gave an asylum to the malcontent Jeroboam (1 Kings xi. 40.); and afterwards, as soon as he saw that Rehoboam's power was weakened by the revolt of the ten tribes, he invaded Judæa and advanced against Jerusalem with an immense army, composed of Egyptians, Ethiopians, Lybians, and Sukkim or Troglodytes. But, satisfied with the submission of the Jewish monarch and with the spoils of his capital, including the treasures of the temple, he left him his throne, and drew off his forces. (1 Kings xiv. 25, 26. 2 Chron. xii. 2-9.) Shishak is the Sesonchis of profane historians, and the head of the Bubastite or twenty-second dynasty of the Egyptian kings. His name has been discovered on the recently explained Egyptian monuments (compare Vol. I. p. 88, 89.); and he is supposed to have been an Ethiopian, who, supported by the military caste, dethroned the Pharaoh who was Solomon's father-in-law.

SHOES, or Sandals of the Hebrews, 157. Showbread, table of, notice of, 100, 119.

SHUNEM, a city in the tribe of Issachar. (Josh. xix. 18, 2 Sam. xxviii. 4.) Here the prophet Elisha was hospitably entertained by a benevolent woman; whose son dying, he miraculously restored him to life. (2 Kings iv.) According to Eusebius, there was a place called Sulem (by a commutation of l and n) five Roman miles south of Mount Tabor.

SHUR, Wilderness of, notice of, 33.

Shushan, the capital of Susiana, a province of Elam or Persia, which Daniel terms the palace (viii. 2.), because the Chaldæan monarchs had here a royal palace. After Cyrus, the kings of Persia were accustomed to pass the winter there, and the summer at Ecbatana. The winter was very moderate at Shushan, but the heat of the summer was so great, that the very lizards and serpents, if surprised by it in the streets, are said to have been burned up by the solar rays. This city stands on the river Ulai, or Choaspes. In this city, and on this river, Daniel had the vision of the ram with two horns, and the goat with one horn, &c. in the third year of the reign of Belshazzar (Dan. viii. 1—3, &c.), A. M. 3447, B. C. 557. In this city of Shushan, the transactions took place which are related in the book of Esther. Here Ahasuerus, or Darius the son of Hystaspes, generally resided and reigned. (Esth. i. 1, 2, 5, &c.) He rebuilt, enlarged, and adorned it. Nehemiah was also at Shushan, when he obtained from king Artaxerxes permission to return into Judæa, and to repair the walls of Jerusalem. (Neh. i. 1.) Benjamin of Tudela, and Abulfaragius, place the tomb of Daniel at Chuzestan, which is the ancient city of Shushan, and a tomb is still shown to travellers, as the tomb of the prophet. Dr. Lightfoot says, that the outward gate of the eastern wall of the temple was called the gate of Shushan; and that upon this gate was carved the figure (more probably the arms or insignia) of Shushan, in acknowledgment of the decree there granted by Darius son of Hystaspes, which permitted the rebuilding of the temple. The site of this once noble metropolis of the ancient sovereigns of Persia is now a mere wilderness; no human being residing there excepting one poor dervise, who keeps watch over the supposed tomb of the prophet Daniel. See an account of the ruins and the present state of Shushan, in Sir R. K. Porter's Travels in Georgia, Persia, &c. vol. ii. pp. 411-418.

SICARII, or assassins mentioned in the New Testament, notice of, 148.

SICHEM, SYCHAR OF SHECHEM, a city of Samaria, about forty miles distant from Jerusalem, which became the metropolis of the Samaritans after the destruction of Samaria by Hyrcanus. In the vicinity of this place is Jacob's well (John iv. 6), memorable for our Saviour's conversation with the Samaritan woman. It stands in a delightful situation, and is at present called Napolose. The remains of the sect of the Samaritans, now reduced to about forty persons, chiefly reside here. Contiguous to this place lies a valley, which opens into a plain watered by a fruitful stream, that rises near the town. This is universally allowed to be the parcel of a field mentioned by Saint John (iv. 5.) which Jacob bought at the hand of the children of Hamor. (Gen. xxxiii, 19.) Dr. Clarke (Travels, vol. iv. pp. 260-280. 8vo.) has given a minute and very interesting account or the antiquities of Shechem. See also Mr. Jolliffe's Letters from Palestine, pp. 44-48.

Siek, healing of, why deemed unlawful by the Jews, on the Sabbath-day, 121. Treatment of, 194, 195, Sidding, Vale of, notice of, 31.

Sidon, or Zinon, a celebrated city of Palestine, reputed to have been founded by Sidon the eldest son of Canaan, from whom, according to Josephus, it derives its name; but other authorities derive the name Sidon from the Hebrew or Syrian word צירה (Tsiden), which signifies fishing. If the primitive founder was a fisherman, the two accounts may be easily reconciled. Joshua (xi. 8.) calls it Sidon the Great, by way of eminence; whence some have taken occasion to say, that in his time there were two Sidons, a greater and a lesser: but no geographer has mentioned any other Sidon than Sidon the Great, Joshua assigned Sidon to the tribe of Asher (Josh. xix. 28.), but this tribe could never get possession of it. (Judg. i. 31.) It is situated on the Mediterranean, one day's journey from Paneas, or from the fountains of Jordan, in a fine level tract of land, the remarkably simple air of which suits with that touching portion of the Gospel, which records the interview of Jesus Christ on this very spot,—the coasts of Tyre and Sidon,—with the Syro-Phænician woman. (Matt. xv. 21—28. Mark vii. 24-30.) Abulfeda places it sixty-six miles from Damascus. This city has been always famous for its great trade and navigation. Its inhabitants were the first remarkable merchants in the world, and were very early celebrated on account of their luxury; for, in the days of the judges of Israel, the inhabitants of Laish are said to have dwelt careless and secure after the manner of the Zidonians. (Judg. xviii. 7.) The men of Sidon being great shipwrights, were particularly eminent above all other nations, for hewing and polishing timber, there being none who were skilled how to hew timber like the Sidonians. (1 Kings v. 6.) This place is now called Seide or Saide: its port is small, and nearly filled up with the accumulation of mud. (Irby's and Mangles' Travels, p. 201.) The city, as it exists at present, rises immediately from the strand; and, when seen from a slight distance, presents a rather imposing appearance. The interior, however, is most wretched and gloomy, "About half-way be-tween Saide (or Sidon) and Sour (or Tyre) are very extensive ruins of towns which once connected these two cities; but of these ruins there is now scarcely one stone left upon another. They consist chiefly of lines which show, rased even with the soil, the foundation of houses-many stones irregularly scattered -a few cisterns with half-defaced sculpture on them; and, at a considerable distance from the path, there are at one spot several low columns either mutilated or considerably sunk in the earth. These relics show, what it needed indeed no such evidence to prove, that in peaceable and flourishing times, on this road between two such considerable cities as Tyre and Sidon, there must have been many smaller towns for business, pleasure, and agriculture, delightfully situated by the seaside; but peaceful security has long been a blessing unknown to these regions; and we may apply to them the language of Judges v. 7.—The villages ceased; they ceased in Israel." (Jowett's Christ. Researches in Syria, pp. 129, 130.

SIEGES, how conducted, 89. SIGNETS, notice of, 157.

SIHON, a king of the Amorites, who refused a passage through his territories to the Hebrews; and, coming to attack them, was himself slain. (Num. xxi. 21.)

Sihor, River, 26.

SILAS or SILVANUS (the former name being a contraction of the latter), an eminent Christian teacher, who was Saint Paul's companion in his journeys through Asia Minor and Greece.

SILOAM, Fountain or Pool of, 21. 28. Just over against this pool, near the bottom of the valley, through which its waters flow with an almost imperceptible current, and on the slope of a lofty mountain on the opposite side, is a village called Siloa: it has a miserable aspect, many of the habitations being no better than excavations from the rock, and the rest very meanly built houses and dilapidated stone huts; though it once could boast the palace of Pharaoh's daughter and Solomon's queen. The population is said not to exceed two hundred persons. (Jowett's Researches in Syria, p. 262. Three Weeks in Palestine, p. 45.) Simeon, the son of Jacob and Leah: he was the head of one of the twelve tribes; for the limits of whose allotment, see

SIMON or SIMEON, the name of several persons mentioned in the New Testament; of whom the following are the most remarkable :-

1. SIMON, surnamed Peter, who was also called Simon Bar-Jona. See Peten, p. 442.

2. Simon, surnamed the Canaanite (perhaps because he was a native of Cana in Galilee), and also Zeletes or the Zealous, probably because he had been of the Zealors. (See p. 148, for a notice of their principles.) He is supposed to have been the brother of James the Less and Jude: the particulars of his life are unknown.

3. Simon, surnamed the Cyrenean, from Cyrene in Libva (where many Jews were settled), who was compelled to assist in bearing the cross of Jesus. (Matt. xxvii. 32.) Why he was so compelled, see p. 70. supra.

4. Simon, surnamed Bar-Jesus, a sorcerer. (Acts viii. 9. 13.)

See Bar-Jesus, p. 413. col. 2.

Simoon Wind, pestilential effects of, 40.

1. A strong city in Egypt (Ezek. xxx. 15, 16.), according to Jerome, Pelusium: it was situated on the eastern boundary of Egypt, and was defended by the swamps which lay around it.

2. Desert of Sin, a part of Arabia Deserta, towards Egypt, between Elim and Mount Sinai. (Exod. xvi. 1. xvii. 1. Num. xxxiii. 12.)

SIN-OFFERING, notice of, 118. Account of, 65.

SINAI.

1. DESERT OF SINAI, 34.

2. Mount Sinar, a mountain in Arabia Petræa, where the law was given. It had two summits; the one lower, called Horeb, or the Mount of God (Exod. iii. 1.), when he appeared to Moses in a flame of fire in a bush. (See Hores, p. 428., col. 1.) This Horeb is therefore called Sinai by Saint Stephen. (Acts vii. 30.) Mount Sinai is an enormous mass of granite rocks, with a Greek convent at the bottom, called the Convent of St. Catharine. It is the highest of a chain of mountains called by the Arabians Djebbel Moosa (or the mountains of Moses), and which requires a journey of several days to go entirely round it. This chain is partly composed of sand-stone: it contains several fertile valleys, in which are gardens producing grapes, pears, dates, and other excellent fruits. These are taken to Cairo, where they are sold at a high price; but the general aspect of the peninsula of Mount Sinai is that of a frightful sterility. (Maltepeninsula of Mount Smar is that of 200.)

Brun's System of Geography, vol. ii. p. 200.)

From the context of Isa. xlix. 12. it appears to have been situated towards the south or east. Some expositors have supposed it to be Pelusium or Syene; but these are only cities, and not sufficiently remote. It were better (says Gesenius) to understand it of an eastern country, perhaps China; of the name of which the Hebrews may have heard, as well as of Scythia and India.

Sion or Sirion, a name of Mount Hermon, 30.

SIVAN or SIUVAN, the third month of the ecclesiastical year of the Jews; and the ninth of their civil year. For a notice of the festivals, &c. in this month, see p. 76.

SLAVES, how acquired, 165. Their condition and treatment among the Hebrews, 165, 166; and heathens, 166, 167. Explanation of customs relating to them, mentioned in the New Testament, 167. Different kinds of, 167, 168.

SLAVING with the sword, a Jewish punishment, 67.

SLINGS of the Hebrews, notice of, 88.

SMYRNA, a city of Asia Minor, was situated between forty and forty-five miles to the north of Ephesus, of which city it was originally a colony. It is now celebrated chiefly for the number, wealth, and commerce of the inhabitants. Of its population, which is estimated at about 75,000 inhabitants, 45,000 are Turks; 15,000 Greeks; 8000 Armenians; 8000 Jews; and less than 1000 Europeans. (Hartley's Visit, p. 289.) The angel of the church of Smyrna, addressed in the second apocalyptic epistle, is supposed to have been Polycarp, the disciple of Saint John, by whom he was appointed bishop of Smyrna. As he afterwards suffered much, being burnt alive at Smyrna, A. D. 166, the exhortation in Rev. ii. 10. would be peculiarly calculated to support and encourage him.

So, an Egyptian king, contemporary with Hoshea, with whom he formed an alliance. (2 Kings xvii. 4.) He appears, however, to have been too weak to succour Hoshea against the Assyrians, one of whose kings, named Sargon, obtained signal advantages over him. (Isa. xx. 1.) According to Jablonski, So means a chief prince or prince of the dwelling. For a long time the Pharaoh, who is named So, in the Scriptures, was taken for the Sabacho of profane history, the head of the twenty-fifth or Ethiopian dynasty, who invaded Egypt, caused its monarch Boccharis to be thrown into the flames, and usurped the throne. More recent and correct researches have shown that So is the Sevechus of profane history. (Coquerel, Biog. Sacr. tom. iv. p. 223.)

Sonom, the chief of the Pentapolitan cities, or five cities of the plain, gave the name to the whole land. It was burnt, with three other cities, by fire from heaven, for the unnatural lusts of their inhabitants, the truth of which is attested by numerous heathen writers. See pp. 27, 28. supra.

Soldiers (Jewish) levies of, how made, 84. Mosaic statutes concerning them, 84, 85. How commanded, 85, 86. Their encampments, 86, 87. Their pay and training, 87. Arms of, 87, 88.

SOLDIERS (Roman), allusions to the officers, armour, and discipline of, 92-94. Their treatment of Jesus Christ, 70. They watched at the execution of criminals, 72.

SOLOMON, the son of David and Bathsheba, and the third king of Israel, renowned for his wisdom and riches, and for the magnificent temple which he caused to be erected at Jerusalem. The commencement of his reign was characterized by piety and justice; but afterwards he abandoned himself, through the influence of his heathen wives, to gross and shameful idolatry. Temple of, 98. Extent of his dominions, 17. His commerce, 187, 188. He died B. c. 975, after a reign of forty years. For analyses of the books of Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and Canticles, which were composed by him, see pp. 245-253.

Solomon's Porch, notice of, 99.

Sons, education of, 164. Parental authority over them, Ibid.

Sosthenes, a chief ruler of a synagogue at Corinth. (Acts xviii, 17.) Concerning the interpretation of which passage the learned differ greatly. Some suppose him to have been at this time an enemy to the apostle Paul, and his accuser, though subsequently a convert to the Christian faith; and that he was beaten by the unbelieving Greeks, in consequence of the opinion given by the judge, and because he had troubled the proconsul with so impertinent an affair. Others are of opinion, that, at this time, he favoured Christianity, and suffered on that account, the Greeks beating him at the instigation of the unbelieving Jews. However this may have been, Sosthenes afterwards joined with Saint Paul in sending the first Epistle to the Corinthians. (Biscoe on the Acts, vol. i. p. 417.)
Sowing of corn, Jewish mode of, 177.

SPAIN, an extensive region of Europe, which anciently comprehended the country forming the modern kingdoms of Spain and Portugal. In the time of St. Paul it was subject to the Romans. (Rom. xv. 24. 28.)

SPEARS of the Hebrews, notice of, 88.

Spoil, how distributed by the Jews, 91, 92.

STAFF, divination by, 143.
STEPHANUS, one of the principal Christians at Corinth, whom St. Paul baptized with all his family. This was the first family in Achaia that embraced the Gospel: its members zealously devoted themselves to the service of the Christians, and their affectionate hospitality is recommended by the apostle, as an example to the Corinthians. (1 Cor. i. 16. xvi. 15, 16.)

STEPHEN, the first martyr for the faith of Christ: he was one of the seven primitive deacons of the Christian church. After having wrought many miracles, and ably defended the doctrines of Christ, he was put to death by the Jews. (Acts vi.

vii.) On the stoning of Stephen, see p. 53. note 4.

STOCKS, punishment of, 65.

Stoics, a sect of philosophers who derived their name from the Eroz or portico where their founder Zeno delivered his lectures. Their philosophy required an absolute control over all the passions, and taught that man alone, even in his present state of existence, might attain to perfection and felicity. They encouraged suicide, and disbelieved in a future state of rewards and punishments,-a doctrine which they deemed unnecessary as an incitement to virtue.

STONE, white, import of, 56.

STONES, consecrated, notice of, 138. Hieroglyphic stones prohibited to the Israelites, Ibid.

STONING to death, a Jewish punishment, 67, 68. STRANGERS, laws concerning the treatment of, 82.

STRAW, used in making bricks, 151.

STREETS (Oriental), arrangement of, 155.

STUDIES of the Jews, 185-187.

SUBORDINATION, military, illustration of, 93.

Ѕоссоти.

1. A city in the tribe of Gad. (Josh. xiii. 27. Judg. viii. 5. 1 Kings vii. 46.) Hither "Jacob journeyed, and built him a house, and made booths for his cattle: therefore the name of the place is called Succoth," that is, booths. (Gen. xxxiii. 17.)

2. The first encampment of the Israelites in their march out of Egypt. (Num. xxxiii. 5. Exod. xii. 37. xiii. 20.) Dr. Shaw is of opinion that no fixed situation can be assigned for this place (it signifying only a place of tents), being probably nothing more than some considerable Dou-war (or encampment) of the Ish-maelites or Arabs, such as may be still met with, at the distance of fifteen or twenty miles from Cairo, on the road towards the Red Sea. The rendezvous of the caravan which conducted Dr. S. to Suez was at one of these Dou-wars; at the same time he saw another about six miles off, in the very same direction which the Israelites may be supposed to have taken in their marches from Goshen to the Red Sea. (Travels, vol. ii. p. 93.)

SUCCOTH-BENOTH (or booths of the daughters), an object of idolatrous worship among the Babylonians. According to the most common opinion they were small tents or booths, in which the Babylonish maidens exposed themselves to prostitution, in honour of a Babylonish goddess called Mylitta. Herodotus (Hist. Li. c. 199.) gives a particular account of these abominable practices; which, there is reason to conclude from 1 Kings xvii. 30.,

the Babylonians introduced into Judæa.

SUKKIMS, an African people mentioned in 2 Chron. xiii. 3. in conjunction with Libyans and Ethiopians. In the Septuagint and Vulgate versions, they are termed Troglodytes, probably from their dwelling in caves. Such a people dwelt near the Red Sea.

SUMMER of Palestine, notice of, 24.

Superiors, reverence to, how shown, 169. Surveying of land, known to the Jews, 187.

Susanchites, the inhabitants of Susa or Shushan. (Ezra iv. 9.)

SWEARING, or oaths of the Jews. See pp. 81, 82. Swords of the Hebrews, notice of, 88.

SYCAMORE trees of Palestine, 37. SYCHAR. See SICHEM, p. 450.

SYENE, a city on the southern frontiers of Egypt, bordering on Ethiopia. (Ezek. xxix. 10. xxx. 6.)

SYNAGOGUES, origin and form of, 103, 104. Officers of, 104. Account of the synagogue worship, 104—106. Its ecclesiastical power, 106. Nineteen Jewish prayers read in the synagogue, 106, 107.

SYRACUSE, a large and celebrated city on the eastern coast of Sicily, furnished with a capacious and excellent harbour. Saint Paul abode here three days on his first journey to Rome. (Acts STRIA, properly so called, was a country of Asia, comprehended between the Euphrates on the east, the Mediterranean on the west, Cilicia on the north, Phœnicia, Judæa, and Arabia Deserta, on the south. It was divided into various provinces or cantons, which derived their names from their situation, with respect to particular rivers or cities. Thus,

1. Syria of the two rivers, or Mesopotamia of Syria, or ARAM NAHARAIM (Hebrew), was comprehended between the two rivers Tigris and Euphrates.

2. STRIA OF DAMASCUS, that of which Damascus was the capital, extended eastward along Mount Libanus. Its limits varied according as the princes that reigned at Damascus were more or less powerful.

3. STRIA OF ZOBAH, or Soba, or Sobal, as it is called by the Septuagint, was probably Cœle-Syria, or Syria the hollow. Its capital was Zobah, a city unknown, unless it be Hoba or Hobal, north of Damascus. (Gen. xiv. 15.)

4. SYRIA OF MAACHAR, or of Bethmaacah, was also towards Libanus. (2 Sam. x. 6, 8, 2 Kings xv, 29.) It extended beyond Jordan, and was given to Manasseh. (Deut. iii, 14.)

5. SYRIA OF ROHOB OF REHOB, was that part of Syria of which Rehob was the capital. But Rohob was near the northern frontier of the land of promise (Num. xiii. 21.), on the way or pass that leads to Emath or Hamath. It was given to the tribe of Asher, and is contiguous to Aphek, which was in Libanus. (Josh. xix. 28, 30, and xxi. 31.) Laish, otherwise called Dan, situate at the fountains of Jordan, was in the country of Rohob. (Judg. i. 31.) Hadadazer, king of Syria of Zobah, was son of Rehob or Rohob, or perhaps a native of the city of this name. (2 Sam. viii. 3. 12.) The Ammonites called to their assistance, (2 Sam. viii. 3. 12.) The Ammonites called to their assistance, against David, the Syrians of Rehob, of Zoba, of Maachah, and of Ishtob. (2 Sam. x. 6. 8.)

6. Syria of Tob, or of Ishtob, or of the land of Tob, or of the Tubieni, as they are called in the Maccabees, was in the neighbourhood of Libanus, the northern extremity of Palestine. (Judg. xi. 3. 5. 1 Macc. v. 13. 2 Macc. xii. 17.) When Jephthah was banished by his brethren from Gilead, he withdrew into the land of Tob.

7. SYRIA OF EMATH, or Hamath, that of which the city Hamath, on the Orontes, was the capital.

8. SYRIA, without any other appellation, stands for the KING-DOM OF SYRIA, of which Antioch became the capital after the reign of the Seleucidæ.

9. CELO-SYRIA, or Cale-Syria, or the Lower Syria, occurs in several places of the Maccabees. (1 Macc. x. 69. 2 Macc. iii. 5. 8. iv. 4. viii. 8.) The word Cœle-Syria, in the Greek, signifies Syria Cava, or Syria the Hollow, or deep. It may be considered, says Strabo, either in a proper and restrained sense, as comprehending only the tract of land between Libanus and Antilibanus: or in a larger signification, and then it will comprehend all the country in obedience to the kings of Syria, from Seleucia or Arabia and Egypt.

Syria at first was governed by its own kings, each of whom reigned in his own city and territories. David subdued them about A. M. 2960, B. c. 1044 (2 Sam. viii. 6.), on occasion of his war against the Ammonites, to whom the Syrians gave assistance. (2 Sam. x. 6. 8. 13. 18, 19.) They continued in subjection till after the reign of Solomon, when they shook off the yoke, and could not be reduced again till the time of Jeroboam II. king of Israel, A. M. 3179, B. c. 820. Rezin, king of Syria, and Pekah, king of Israel, having declared war against Ahab, king of Judah, this prince found himself under the necessity of calling to his assistance Tiglath-pileser, king of Assyria, who put Rezin to death, took Damascus, and transported the Syrians out of their country beyond the Euphrates. From that time Syria continued in subjection to the kings of Assyria. Afterwards it came under the dominion of the Chaldwans; then under that of the Persians; lastly, it was reduced by Alexander the Great, and was subject to all the revolutions that happened to the great empires of the East. SYRIAN IDOLS, notice of, 137, 138.

SYRO-PHENICIA is Phœnicia properly so called, of which Sidon, or Zidon, was the capital; which having by right of conquest been united to the kingdom of Syria, added its old name Phoenicia to that of Syria. The Canaanitish woman is called a Syrophoenician (Mark vii. 26.), because she was of Phoenicia, which was then considered as making part of Syria. St. Matthew calls her a Canaanitish women (Matt. xv. 22. 24.), because this country was really peopled by the Canaanites, Sidon being the eldest son of Canaan. (Gen. x. 15.) The Syro-Phænicians were so called to distinguish them from the Phænicians of Africa, who were called Liby-Phænicians. Both were of the same Canaanitish stock or original.

TABERAH (or burning), an encampment of the Israelites in the wilderness. (Num. xi. 3. Deut. ix. 22.) It derives its name from the circumstance that fire went forth from the tabernacle, and burnt a considerable part of their camp, as a punishment for their murmurings.

TABERNACLES, feast of, how celebrated, 126, 127. A proof of the credibility of the Old Testament, I. 66.

TABERNACLES, various, in use among the Israelites, 96. Form and construction of the tabernacle of Moses, 96, 97. Its migra-

TABITHA, the Aramæan name of a female Christian, otherwise called Dorcas, whom St. Peter miraculously restored to life. (Acts ix. 36. 40.)

TABLE, ancient mode of reclining at, explained, 154.

TABLETS, for writing, form of, 182.

TABOR, or THABOR, Mount, account of, 30, 31.

TABRET, notice of, 183.

TACTICS, military, of the Jews, 89, 90.

TADMOR, a city of Syria, erected by king Solomon. It was situated in the wilderness of Syria, on the borders of Arabia Deserta, whence it is called Tadmor in the Wilderness, in 1 Kings ix. 18. Josephus places it at two days' journey from the Upper Syria, one day's journey from the Euphrates, and six days' journey from Babylon. He says that there is no water in the wilderness but in this place. (Ant. Jud. lib. viii. c. 6. § 1.) If we may form any conjecture of this city by the ruins of it, which later travellers have described, it must have been one of the first and most magnificent in the East; and it is somewhat surprising that history should give us so little account, when or by whom it was reduced to the melancholy condition in which it now appears. The reason why Solomon erected Tadmor in so desolate a place, was, probably, the commodiousness of its situation to cut off all commerce between the Syrians and Mesopotamians, and to prevent them from conspiring against him as they had done against his father David. This city preserved its name of Tadmor to the time of Alexander. It then received the name of PALMYRA, which it preserved for several ages. About the middle of the third century, it became celebrated as the sent of the empire of Odenatus and Zenobia. When the Saracens became masters of the East, they restored its ancient name of Tadmor, which has continued to the present time. Its situation between two powerful empires, that of the Parthians on the east, and that of the Romans to the west, often exposed it to danger from their contests. In time of peace, however, it soon recovered itself, by its trade with both empires: for the caravans of Persia and of the Indies, which now unload at Aleppo, then used to stop at Palmyra: thence they carried the merchandise of the East, which came to them by land, to the ports of the Mediterranean, and returned the merchandise of the West after the same manner.

TH

TAHPANES. 1. TAHAPANES, or Tahpanhes (Jer. ii. 16.), a city of Egypt, which anciently was a royal city, of considerable note: it is supposed to be the same as Daphnæ Pelusiacæ. Jeremiah, and the Israelites with him, retired to this place: and here it was revealed to the prophet, that Nebuchadnezzar should take this city, and set up his throne in the very place where Jeremiah had hidden stones. (Jer. xliii. 7-11.)

2. A queen of Egypt, the wife of that Pharaoh who was contemporary with David, and gave her sister in marriage to Hadad the Edomite. Tahpanhes educated her sister's son among the royal family of Egypt, perhaps from the mingled motives of affection and of politics. TAMMUZ, OF THAMMUZ.

1 The tenth month of the civil year of the Jews, and the fourth of their ecclesiastical year. For a notice of the festivals, &c. in this month, see p. 76.

2. An Egyptian and Syrian idol, worshipped by the Israelites, notice of, 138.

Tanis. See Zoan, p. 456. infra.

Tares, notice of, 177.

TARSHISH, or TARTESSUS, a city and country in Spain, the most celebrated emporium in the West, to which the Hebrews traded; the ships of Tarshish (Isa. xxiii. 1.4. lx. 9.) denote large merchant ships bound on long voyages (perhaps distinguished by their construction from the common Phænician ships), even though they were sent to other countries instead of Tarshish. (Gibb's Hebrew Lexicon, pp. 713, 714., where the proofs are adduced at length.)

Tarsus, the metropolis of Cilicia (Acts xxi. 39.), was celebrated for being the place whither Jonah designed to flee, and where St. Paul was born. It was a very rich and populous city, and had an academy, furnished with men so eminent, that they are said to have excelled in all arts of polite learning and philosophy; even the academies of Alexandria, and Athens, and Rome itself, were indebted to it for their best professors. It is now called Tersoos; has no good buildings; and is but ill supplied with the necessaries of life. (Irby's and Mangles' Travels, p. 503.)

Taxes paid by the Jews. See pp. 78, 79.

Teachers, Jewish, appellations of, 185. Academical degrees conferred on them, ibid. note. Manner of teaching, ibid.

TEROAH, a village south-east of Jerusalem, not far from which the Great Desert commenced: it was the birth-place of the prophet Amos. (i. l.)

Temple at Jerusalem, plan of, 98. Account of the first temple erected by Solomon, ibid.; and of the second temple erected after the captivity, 98-100. Reverence of the Jews for it, 100, 101. Account of the temple-guard, 101., and of the ministers of the temple, 111-114. The temple-worship described, 121, 122. Annual payments made for its support, 78. Feast of the dedication of the temple, 128.

TEMPLES at Heliopolis and Gerizim, 101. TENTHS, when and of what things paid, 120. TENTS of the Hebrews, account of, 150, 151.

TERAPHIM, notice of, 137.

TERRACES (Oriental), notice of, 153.
TERRIUS, a Christian whom St. Paul employed as his amanuensis in writing his epistle to the Romans. (Rom. xvi. 22.)

Terrullus, a Roman orator or advocate, whom the Jews honour of the emperor, Tiberius. The privileges conferred upon employed to bring forward their accusation against St. Paul, before the Roman procurator at Cæsarea; probably because they were themselves unacquainted with the modes of proceeding in the Roman courts. (Acts xxiv. 1, 2.)

TESSERÆ HOSPITALES, notice of, 173, 174.

TETRARCH, office of, 52, note 1.

THADDEUS. See JUDE. THAMMUZ. See TAMMUZ.

THEATRES and Theatrical performances, allusions to, explained. See pp. 190, 191.

THEBETH, or TEBETH, the fourth month of the civil year of the Jews, and the tenth of their ecclesiastical year. For a notice of the festivals, &c. in this month, see p. 75.

THEBEZ, a city in the tribe of Ephraim, at the siege of which Abimelech was killed. (Judg. ix. 50-55.) Eusebius says, that in the fourth century there was a village called Thebez, thirteen Roman miles from Shechem.

THEFT, punishment of, among the Jews, 62, 63.

THEOGRACY of the Hebrews, nature of, 41. It subsisted under the kings, 43.

THEOPHILUS, the name of the person to whom Luke inscribed his Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles. (Luke i. 3. Acts i. 1.) He was most probably some Gentile of rank, who had abjured paganism and embraced the Christian faith.

THESSALONICA, a large and populous city and sea-port of Macedonia, the capital of one of the four districts into which the Romans divided that country after its conquest by Paulus Æmilius. It was situated on the Thermæan Bay, and was anciently called Thermæ; but, being rebuilt by Philip the father of Alexander, after his victory over the Thessalians, it then received the name of Thessalonica. At the time of writing the Epistle to the Thessalonians, Thessalonica was the residence of the proconsul who governed the province of Macedonia, and of the questor who had the charge of the imperial revenues. Besides being the seat of government, this port carried on an extensive commerce, which caused a great influx of strangers from all quarters; so that Thessalonica was remarkable for the number, wealth, and learning its inhabitants. The Jews were extremely numerous The modern name of this place is Salonichi: it is the chief port of modern Greece, and has a population of sixty thousand persons, twelve thousand of whom are Jews. According to Dr. Clarke, who has given a very interesting account of the antiquities, present state, and commerce of Thessalonica, this place is the same now it was then; a set of turbulent Jews constituted a very principal part of its population: and when St. Paul came hither from Philippi, where the Gospel was first preached, to communicate the "glad tidings" to the Thessalonians, the Jews were sufficient in number to " set all the city in an uproar."

THEUDAS, a seditious person, who excited popular tumults among the Jews, probably during the interregnum which fol-lowed the death of Herod the Great, while Archelaus was at Rome; at which time Judæa was agitated with frequent seditions. (Acts v. 36.) Compare Vol. I, p. 420.

Thisbe, a town in the tribe of Naphtali, to the south of Kadesh, the chief city belonging to that tribe. The prophet Elijah is supposed to have been a native of this city, though he might afterwards have dwelt in the land of Gilead. (1 Kings xvii. 1.)

THOMAS, called Didymus, one of the twelve apostles: of the circumstances of whose life very little is known.

THORNS, of which Christ's crown was made, 36, note 2.
THREE TAVERNS, a small place or village on the Appian Way to Rome, where travellers stopped for refreshment. According to the Itinerary of Antoninus, it was thirty-three Roman (rather less than thirty-three English) miles from Rome. (Acts xxviii. 15.) Some critics and commentators, however, suppose that they were retail shops for the sale of provisions to travellers.

THRESHING, and THRESHING-FLOORS, account of, 178.

THYATIRA, a city of Asia Minor, was a considerable city in the road from Pergamos to Sardis, and about forty-eight miles eastward of the former. It is called by the Turks Akhisar, and is imbosomed in cypresses and poplars; it is now, as anciently it was, celebrated for dyeing. In 1826, the population was estimated at 300 Greek houses, 30 Armenian, and 1000 Turkish. (Hartley's Visit, Miss. Reg. pp. 326, 327. Arundell's Visit, pp. 189—191.)

TIBERIAS (John vi. 1-23. xxi. 1.), still called by the natives Tabaria or Tabbareeah, was anciently one of the principal cities of Galilee: it was built by Herod the Great, and so called in its inhabitants by Herod caused it in a short time to become a place of considerable note: it was situated in a plain near the Lake of Gennesareth, which is thence termed the Lake or Sea of Tiberias. (See it described in pp. 26, 27.) After the destruction of Jerusalem, this city became eminent for its Academy, over which a succession of Jewish doctors presided until the fourth century. On every side ruins of walls, columns, and foundations, indicate its ancient splendour. The modern population of Tiberias is from fifteen hundred to two thousand: it is principally inhabited by Jews, who are said to be the descendants of families resident there in the time of our Saviour. Dr. Clarke conjectures that they are a remnant of refugees who fled hither after the capture of Jerusalem by the Romans. Tiberias is about ninety miles distant from Jerusalem: the modern town, which is very small, and is walled round, with towers at equal distances, stands close to the lake, upon a plain surrounded by mountains; and is celebrated for its hot baths, which are much frequented. Tiberias has the most imposing appearance, from without, of any town in Syria; but within, it is as wretched as any other. About a mile from this town, and exactly in front of the lake, is a chain of rocks, in which are distinctly seen cavities or grottoes, that have been proof against the ravages of time. These have uniformly been represented to travellers as the places referred to in Scripture, which were frequented by miserable and fierce demoniacs, upon one of whom our Lord wrought a miraculous and instantaneous cure. Matt. viii. 28. Mark.v. 2, 3. Luke viii. 27. (Dr. Clarke's Travels, vol. iv. pp. 219-233. 8vo. Light's Travels in Egypt, &c. &c. p. 203. Jolliffe's Letters from Palestine, pp. 32-34. Burkhardt's Travels in Syria, &c. pp. 320-330. Travels in Egypt and Nubia, &c. by Captains Irby and Mangles. p. 294. Jowett's Researches in Syria, pp. 171, 173. Carne's Letters, pp. 361, 362. Rae Wilson's Travels in the Holy Land, vol. ii. p. 25. Third edition.)

TIBERIUS, Claudius Drusus Nero, emperor of Rome, succeeded his step father Augustus: he died, A. D. 37, after reigning 221 years. In the 14th year of his reign, John the Baptist first appeared; and the crucifixion of Jesus Christ took place in the third or fourth year after. (Luke iii. 1.)

TIGLATH-PILESER, king of Assyria, the son and successor of Sardanapalus. See Assyria, p. 409.

Time, Jewish and Roman modes of computing, 72—75. Calendar of the Jewish year, 75, 76. Parts of a period of time reckoned for the whole, 76, 77. Æras of time in use among the Jews, 77.

Timon, the name of one of the seven primitive deacons of the church at Jerusalem. (Acts vi. 5.)

TIMOTHEUS, commonly called Timothy, a Christian of Derbe, whose mother was of Jewish descent, and eminent for her piety, while his father was a Gentile. He was selected by St. Paul, as his chosen companion in his journeys; and was left by him at Ephesus to take the charge of the church there. He appears to have possessed in a high degree the confidence and affection of St. Paul, by whom he is often mentioned in terms of warm commendation. For analyses, &c. of the two epistles addressed to Timothy by the apostle, see pp. 343-346.

TIRHARA, a king of Egypt or Ethiopia, is known in Scripture only by the powerful diversion which he made in behalf of Hezekiah, king of Judah, when pressed by the forces of Sennacherib, king of Assyria. (2 Kings xix. 9. xviii. 21. Isa. xxxvi. 6. xxxvii. 9.) Although, under this prince, Egypt appears to have recovered some of the advantages which it had lost under So, the predecessor of Tirhaka; it is not clear whether we are to understand in the passages just cited a mere report of an invasion which was circulated, and which deceived the Assyrians, or an actual war in which they were engaged with the Egyptian monarch. Some expositors are of opinion that he carried his arms into Assyria, while Sennacherib was in Judea. Tirhaka, the third sovereign of the Ethiopian or twenty-fifth dynasty, whose name is confirmed by ancient Egyptian monuments and inscriptions (compare Vol. I. p. 89.), is the Taracus of profane historians. If the predictions contained in the thirtieth and following chapters of Isaiah relate to Hezekiah, Tirhaka must be the Pharaoh intended in those passages; which some commentators refer to anterior times. The prophecies contained in the nineteenth chapter of Isaiah, particularly verses 2. and 4., have been supposed to announce the events which followed Tirhaka's death, the supplanting or removal of the Ethiopian dynasty by that of the Saites, and the revolutions which are recorded to have taken place in that period of the history of Egypt.

TIRZAH, a delightful city of Ephraim, the royal seat of the kings of Israel, from Jeroboam I. to Omri, who built the city of Samaria, which then became the capital of his kingdom. (Josh. xii. 24. 1 Kings xiv. 17. xv. 21. 2 Kings xv. 14.) Its situation is represented as pleasant in Sol. Song vi. 4.

TISRI or TIZRI, the first month of the civil year of the Jews, and the seventh of their ecclesiastical year. For a notice of the festivals, &c. occurring in this month, see p. 75.

TITHES, when and of what things paid, 120. TITUS, a Christian teacher, by birth a Gentile, but converted by St. Paul, who therefore calls him his son (Gal. ii. 3. Tit. i. 4.), and whose companion and fellow-labourer he became. In 2 Tim. iv. 10. the apostle speaks of him as having gone to Dalmatia; and in Tit. i. 5. he assigns the reason of his leaving Titus in Crete, viz. to perfect the work which Paul had there begun, and to establish and regulate the churches. For an analysis of St. Paul's epistle to Titus, see pp. 346, 347.

Tola, the tenth judge of Israel, of the tribe of Issachar. He succeeded Abimelech, and died after an administration of twenty-three years. (Judg. x. 1, 2.)

Tombs of the Hebrews, account of, 200, 201.

TORNADOES frequent in Palestine, 38, 39.

Tower of Antonia, 21.

TRACHONITIS, district of, 18.

TRADITIONS of the elders concerning the Sabbath, exposed, 121.; were preferred by the Pharisees to the Law of Moses, 145. TRANSFIGURATION, mount of, 31. and note 1.

TRANSMIGRATION of souls, believed by the Jews, 144.

TRAVELLING, Jewish mode of, 122. note 7. Horrors of travelling across the Great Desert of Arabia, 34, 35.

TREATIES, nature of, 80. How made and ratified, 80, 81.

TREES of Palestine, notice of, 36, 37. TRESPASS-OFFERINGS, notice of, 65. 118.

TRIALS, proceedings of, among the Jews, 55-57.
TRIBES, allotments of. See pp. 16, 17. Heads or princes of, 41, 42.

TRIBUNAL (Imperial), appeals to, 59. Roman tribunals, 57. Jewish tribunals, 54, 55.

TRIBUTE paid by the Jews, account of, 78. Reluctantly paid to the Romans, ibid. TRIUMPHS (military) of the Romans, allusions to, explained, TROAS, a maritime city of Mysia, situated on the western coast, at some distance to the southward of the supposed site of ancient Troy. The adjacent region is also called Troas or the Troad. (Acts xvi. 8.11. xx. 5, 6. 2 Cor. ii. 12. 2 Tim. iv. 13.) TROGYLLIUM (Acts xx. 15.), a promontory at the foot of Mount Mycale, opposite to, and about five miles from, Samos. TROPHIES, military, of the Jews, 92.

TROPHIMUS, a Christian disciple of Ephesus, who accompanied Saint Paul on his departure from Greece to Judæa, and at Jerusalem was the innocent cause of the dangers to which he was there exposed. Recognised by some Jews from Asia Minor, who had seen him with St. Paul, they took occasion to accuse the apostle of having taken Greeks with him into the temple. (Acts xx. 4. xxi. 29.) After this time we find no mention made of Trophimus in the New Testament, until after his master's first imprisonment at Rome. In one of the voyages which followed the apostle's liberation, Trophimus was "left at Miletum sick." (2 Tim. iv. 20.) This circumstance proves, if further proof were wanting, that St. Paul was twice a prisoner at Rome; for Trophimus, at the time of his first journey to Miletus, had not been left there, since we read of his arrival in Judæa. (Acts TRUMPETS, form of, 184.; feast of, 127. TRUST, violations of, how punished, 63.

TRYPHENA and TRYPHOSA, two Christian women resident at Rome, where they laboured in diffusing a knowledge of the Gospel, and in succouring their fellow-believers. The mention of both their names by Saint Paul has led some to conjecture that they were sisters. (Rom. xvi. 12.)

TUBAL-CAIN, the son of Lamech and Zillah, invented the art of working metals: there is great reason to believe that he was the Vulcan of ancient mythology.

Τυμπανισμος, or beating to death, account of, 68.

Tunics, of the Jews, form of, 156.

TYCHICUS, a Christian, probably of Ephesus, who was the friend and associate of St. Paul, and is mentioned by him in the most affectionate terms. (Acts xx. 4. Eph. vi. 21. Col. iv. 7. 2 Tim. iv. 12. Tit. iii. 12.)

TYRANNUS, a person at Ephesus, in whose house or school

St. Paul proposed and defended the doctrines of the Gospel. (Acts xix. 9.) By some he is thought to have been a Jewish doctor or rabbi, who had a public school at Ephesus; while others, with more probability, suppose that he was a Greek sophist, because the apostle taught for two successive years in his school, after he had ceased to preach in the synagogues. (Acts xix. 9.)

Trre, a celebrated city and sea-port of Phænicia, that boasted of a very early antiquity, which is recognised by the prophet Isaiah (xxiii. 7.), but which is variously estimated by profane writers, whose discordant accounts this is not the place to adjust and determine. Even in the time of Joshua it was strongly fortified; for it is called the strong city Tyre. (Josh. xix. 29.) Tyre was twofold, insular and continental. Insular Tyre was certainly the most ancient, for it was noticed by Joshua: the continental city, however, as being more commodiously situated, first grew into consideration, and assumed the name of Palætyrus, or Old Tyre. Want of sufficient attention to this distinction has embarrassed both the Tyrian chronology and geography. Insular Tyre was confined to a small rocky island, eight hundred paces long and four hundred broad, and could never exceed two miles in circumference. But Tyre, on the opposite coast, about half a mile from the sea, was a city of vast extent, since, many centuries after its demolition by Nebuchadnezzar, the scattered ruins measured nineteen miles round, as we learn from Pliny and Strabo. Of these, the most curious and surprising are, the cisterns of Ras-el-Ain, designed to supply the city with water; of which there are three still entire, about one or two furlongs from the sea; so well described by Maundrell, for their curious construction and solid masonry. "The fountains of these waters," says he, after the description, "are as unknown as the contriver of them. According to common tradition, they are filled from a subterraneous river, which king Solomon discovered by his great sagacity; and he caused these cisterns to be made as part of his recompense to king Hiram, for the materials furnished by that prince towards building the temple at Jerusalem. It is certain, however, from their rising so high above the level of the ground, that they must be brought from some part of the mountains, which are about a league distant; and it is as certain that the work was well done at first; seeing it performs its office so well, at so great a distance of time; the Turks having broken an outlet on the west side of the cistern, through which there issues a stream like a brook, driving four corn mills between it and the sea." From these cisterns there was an aqueduct which led to the city, supported by arches, about six yards from the ground, running in a northerly direction, about an hour, when it turns to the west, at a small mount, where anciently stood a fort, but now a mosque, which seems to ascertain the site of the old city; and thence proceeds over the isthmus that connects Insular Tyre with the main, built by Alexander, when he besieged and took it.

Old Tyre withstood the mighty Assyrian power, having been besieged in vain, by Shalmaneser, for five years, although he cut off their supplies of water from the cisterns, which they remedied by digging wells within the city. It afterwards held out for thirteen years against Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, and was at length taken; but not until the Tyrians had removed their effects to the insular town, and left nothing but the bare walls to the victor, which he demolished. What completed the destruction of the city was, that Alexander afterwards made use of these materials to build a prodigious causeway, or isthmus, above half a mile long, to the insular city, which revived, as the phenix, from the ashes of the old, and grew to great power and opulence, as a maritime state; and which he stormed after a most obstinate siege of five months. Bp. Pococke observes, that "there are no signs of the ancient city; and as it is a sandy shore, the face of every thing is altered, and the great aqueduct is in many parts almost buried in the sand." (Vol. ii. p. 81.) Thus has been fulfilled the prophecy of Ezekiel: Thou shalt be built no more: though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou never be found again! (xxvi. 21.)

The fate of Insular Tyre has been no less remarkable; when Alexander stormed the city, he set fire to it. This circumstance was foretold: "Tyre did build herself a strong-hold, and heaped up silver as the dust, and fine gold as the mire of the streets. Behold the Lord will cast her out, and he will smite her power in the sea, and she shall be devoured with fire." (Zech. ix. 3, 4.) After this terrible calamity, Tyre again retrieved her losses. Only eighteen years after, she had recovered such a share of her ancient commerce and opulence, as enabled her to stand a siege of fourteen months against Antigonus, before he could reduce the city. After this, Tyre fell alternately under the dominion of the kings of Syria and Egypt, and then of the Romans, until it was taken by the Saracens, about A. D. 639, retaken by the Crusaders, A. D. 1124; and at length sacked and razed by the Mamelukes of Egypt, with Sidon, and other strong towns, that they might no longer harbour the Christians, A. D. 1289. (Dr. Hales's Analysis of Chronology, vol. i. pp. 442—444.) The population of modern Tyre is estimated at 7000; of whom 1600 are Christians having places of worship, and about two hundred are Jews, who have a synagogue. (Rae Wilson's Travels, vol. ii. p. 77.)

From Sidon to Tyre is generally one continued plain, varying from 300 to 1000 yards in width. Nearer to Tyre, it becomes considerably wider; and forms to the east of that city, on every side, a rich and pleasing country. About Ras-el-Ain, in particular, the meadows, variegated by streamlets, are very picturesque, and capable of being rendered highly productive. (Jowett's Christian Researches in Syria, p. 297.)

The following description of the modern town of Surat, by a recent intelligent traveller, will give the reader a lively idea of the splendour of ancient Tyre in the days of her commercial prosperity, as delineated by the prophet Ezekiel (xxvii. 3.):-"The bazaars, filled with costly merchandise, picturesque and interesting groups of natives on elephants, camels, horses, and mules; strangers from all parts of the globe, in their respective costume; vessels building on the stocks, others navigating the river; together with Turks, Persians, and Armenians, on Arabian chargers; European ladies in splendid carriages, the Asiatic females in hackeries drawn by oxen; and the motley appearance of the English and nabob's troops on the fortifications, remind us of the following description of Tyre: O thou that art situate, &c. (Ezek. xxvii. 3.) This is a true picture of Oriental com-merce in ancient times; and a very exact description of the port and the bazaars of Surat, at the present day." (Forbes's Oriental Memoirs, vol. i. p. 244.)

"Numerous beautiful columns, stretched along the beach, or standing in fragments half buried in the sand that has been accumulating for ages, the broken aqueduct, and the ruins which appear in its neighbourhood, exist, as an affecting monument of the fragile and transitory nature of earthly grandeur." (Jowett's Christian Researches in the Mediterranean, Appendix, p. 422.) See also his Christian Researches in Syria, pp. 131-141.; and for other testimonies of modern travellers relative to the actual state of Tyre, see Vol. I. pp. 124, 125. supra. On the commerce of the Tyrians with the Hebrews, see pp. 187, 188.

of this volume.

UNBLOODY SACRIFICES, 119.

UNCLEAN PERSONS, who were such, 133.

UPHAZ, a country rich in gold, the situation of which is no where pointed out. Calmet supposed it to be the same with Ophir. (Dan. x. 5. Jer. x. 9.)

Upper Garments, form of, 156.

Un of the Chaldees, a city of Mesopotamia, the dwellingplace of Terah and Abraham; which the latter was ordered to quit. (Gen. xi. 28.) By faith he obeyed, and went out not knowing whither he was going. (Heb. xi. 8.) Ur was subsequently called Edessa, by the Macedonians; and by the Turks, Orfah. Mr. Buckingham has given a long and interesting description of its present state. (Travels in Mesopotamia, vol. i. pp. 121-191.)

URIM and THUMMIM, what. See p. 114. Uz, land of (Job i. 1.), is Idumiea. Here Job dwelt. Compare p. 231.

Uzziah, also called Azariah, a king of Judah, who succeeded his father Amaziah, when he was only sixteen years of age. The commencement of his reign was auspicious for his piety and zeal for the worship of God; but, afterwards, presuming to take upon him the sacerdotal office, he was struck with a leprosy; and he continued without Jerusalem, separated from other men, until his death, B. c. 758. (2 Kings xiv. 21, 22. xv. 1-7.)

Valley of Ajalon, 31. Berachah or Blessing, Ibid. Bochim, 32. Elah, Ibid. Hinnom, Ibid. Jehoshaphat, Ibid. Mamre, 31. Rephaim, Ibid. Salt. Ibid. Sharon, 32. Shaveh, 31. Siddim. Ibid.

VEGETABLES, grown in Palestine, 35-37.

VEILS of the Hebrew women, 157.

VESTMENTS of the priests, 113. Of the high-priest, 113, 114.

VICTIMS, selection and immolation of, 117, 118.

VICTORS, reception of, 91. Triumphs of, among the Romans,

94, 95. VINES and VINEYARDS of the Jews, culture and management

VISITERS, how received, 169, 170.

VOLUNTARY Oblations, 119.

Vows, nature and different kinds of, 129, 130.

WARS of the Hebrews, 83, 84. 89-91.

WATCHES of the Night, 73.

WATER, importance of, in the East, 25. 28. Fetched by women, 29.

WATERS OF MEROM, notice of, 27.

Weapons (Military) of the Jews, 87, 88. Allusions to the Greek and Roman weapons in the New Testament, 93.

Weddings of the Jews, 160-163.

WEEKS, account of, 73.

WEIGHTS, table of, 394.

Wells, in Palestine, account of, 28. The stopping of them up an act of hostility, ibid.

WHEAT, abundance of, in Palestine, 35.

WHIRLWINDS in Palestine, 38, 39.

Winows, portion of, 164.

WILDERNESS, in Palestine, account of, 33, 34.

WINES of the Jews, 179.

WINTER, in Palestine, account of, 23, 24.

WITHERED HAND, what disease intended by, 197.

WITNESSES, examination of, 56. Punishment of false witnesses, 64, 65.

Worship of the Temple and in the Synagogue, 104-106. Allusions to the idolatrous worship of the heathens explained, 140-142.

WOUNDS, treatment of, 195.

WRITING of the Jews, and materials used for this purpose, 181-183.

XYLOPHORIA, or, feast of wood-offering, 128.

YEARS (Jewish), civil and ecclesiastical, account of, 74. Calendar of the Jewish year, 75, 76. Years of plants and beasts, 74. Sabbatical year, 128. Year of jubilee, 128, 129.

ZABULON, or ZEBULON, the tenth son of Jacob, born of Leah, who gave his name to one of the twelve tribes of Israel; for the limits allotted to which, see p. 17.

ZACCHEUS, a chief collector or receiver-general of the customs or taxes; who entertained Jesus Christ at his house, and became his disciple. (Luke xix. 1-8.)

ZAPHNATH-PAANEAH, the name given by Pharaoh to Joseph (Gen. xli. 45.), which in the margin of our larger Bibles is rendered, a revealer of secrets, or the man to whom secrets are revealed; this is the interpretation given in the Chaldee paraphrase, the Syriac and Arabic versions, and by Kimchi. It has, however, been ascertained to be the Coptic or Egyptian word Joph-te-peneh, which, according to Louis Picques and Jablonski, signifies salus mundi, the salvation of the world, referring most probably to the preservation of Egypt from famine by the wise counsels of Joseph; and which in the Septuagint version is rendered by Ψοθομφανηχ and Ψονθομφανηχ. This interpretation of dered by Ψοθομφανηχ and Ψουθομφανηχ. This interpretation of Picques and Jablonski is approved by M. Quatremère. (Jablonski, Opuscula, ed. a Te Water, tom. i. pp. 207-216. Quatremère, Recherches sur la Langue et Littérature de l'Egypte, p. 74.)

ZAREPHATH. See SAREPTA, p. 449.

ZEALOTS, a Jewish sect, notice of, 148.

ZEBEDEE, the husband of Salome, and father of the apostles James and John.

ZEBGIM, a city in the vale of Siddim, which was sunk, together with Sodom and Gomorrah, in the Dead Sea.

ZEBULON. See ZABULON.

ZECHARIAH.

1. The son of the high-priest Jeholada (or Barachias), who was stoned to death by order of Joash king of Judah, for his fidelity in opposing the idolatry of the Jews. (2 Chron. xxiv.

2. The fourteenth king of Israel, who succeeded his father Jeroboam II. He imitated the idolatries and iniquities of his predecessors; and, after a short reign of six months, he was assassinated by Shallum. (2 Kings xiv. 29. xv. 8-10.)

3. The son of Berechiah, and the last but one of the minor prophets. For an analysis of his predictions, see pp. 287, 288. 4. A priest of the class of Abia, the father of John the Baptist. (Luke i.)

ZEDEKIAH, the name of the last king of Judah, to whom it was given by Nebuchadnezzar instead of his former name of Mattaniah. He revolted against the king of Babylon, who besieged and captured Jerusalem, caused the children of Zedekiah to be slain before his face, put out his eyes, and commanded him to be sent to Babylon. (2 Kings xxiv. 17. Jer. xxxii. 4. lii. 4-11.)

ZEMARITE (Gen. x. 18.), the name of a Syrian people, who, according to Calmet and others, dwelt in Simyra, a city of

ZEPHANIAH, the son of Cushi, the ninth of the minor prophets, who lived in the time of Josiah king of Judah. For an analysis of his predictions, see p. 272.

ZERAH, king of Egypt, and contemporary with Asa king of Judah, is in Scripture termed an Ethiopian or Cushite; an appellation which perhaps marks the origin of the dynasty to which he belonged. He invaded Judæa at the head of an immense army, which was met by Asa in the valley of Mareshah, in the tribe of Judah, and totally discomfited. Interpreters have long been perplexed to ascertain where the dominions of Zerah were situated; some supposing him to be a king of Cushite Arabia (though there is no evidence that that country then had powerful sovereigns), while others have imagined that he was king of Abyssinia or African Ethiopia, but without being able to explain how he could have traversed Egypt, in order to penetrate into Judæa. All these difficulties are now removed. The name of Scripture is the Osorchon or Osoroth of the Egyptian lists and legends, the second king of the twenty-second dynasty, the son and successor of Shishak, who was contemporary with Rehoboam.

ZERUBBABEL or ZOROBABEL, the son of Salathiel, of the royal house of David, was appointed chief of those Jews who, by the permission of Cyrus, came from Babylon, at the commencement of that prince's reign. He laid the foundation of the temple, and restored the Mosaic worship. It is not known when this great man and pious ruler died.

ZIDON. See SIDON, p. 450. supra.

ZIF, the eighth month of the civil year of the Jews, and the second of their ecclesiastical year. For a notice of the festivals, &c. in this month, see p. 267.

ZIKLAG, a city which Achish, king of Gath, gave to David while he took shelter in the land of the Philistines, and which afterwards remained as a domain to the kings of Judah. (1 Sam. xxvii. 6.) It was taken and plundered by the Amalekites during David's absence: it was situated in the extreme parts of the tribe of Judah, southward.

ZIMRI, the fifth king of Israel, commander of one half of the cavalry of Elath, assassinated his master, usurped his throne, and destroyed all the branches of the royal family. His reign lasted only a week: in consequence of his having neglected to secure the army, they chose Omri king of Israel, who besieged him in Tirzah; and Zimri, finding his capital taken, set the royal palace on fire, and perished in the flames. (1 Kings xvi. 9—20)

Zin, a desert in the south of Palestine towards Idumæa.
(Num. xiii. 21. xx. 1. xxxiv. 3, 4. Josh. xv. 1. 3.)

ZION, the more elevated southernmost mountain, and upper part of the city of Jerusalem. In the poetical and prophetical books it is often used for Jerusalem itself.

ZIPH, a city of Judah (Josh. xv. 24.), near Hebron, eastward. Its modern name is Sephoury. It was a place of rendezvous for armies during the crusades; and at a short distance from it is a celebrated fountain. (Rae Wilson's Travels, vol. ii. p. 40.) Zгрн, wilderness of, 34.

ZOAN, an ancient city in Lower Egypt; according to the Septuagint and Targums, it is Tanis on the eastern mouth of the Nile. (Num. xiii. 22. Isa. xix. 11. 13. xxx. 4. Ezek. xxx. 14.)

ZOAR, a city on the southern extremity of the Dead Sea. (Gen. xiii. 10. xix. 22. 30. Isa. xv. 5. Jer. xlviii. 34.) Its more ancient name was Bela.

ZOBAH, a city in Mesopotamia, otherwise called Nesibin, Nisibis, Antiochia, Mygdonia. (1 Sam. xiv. 47. 2 Sam. viii. 3. xxiii. 36.) Its territory is denominated Aram of Zobah: it was the residence of a king who, in the time of David, carried on considerable wars with Israel.

INDEX

THE SYMBOLICAL LANGUAGE OF THE SCRIPTURES.

[Designed to facilitate the perusal of the Prophetic Books, analysed in this Volume.]1

Sur in general.—Isa. Ixvi. 3. Their soul delighteth in abomina-tions.—Ezek. xvi. 50. They...committed abomination before me.

2. An Idol.—Isa. xliv. 19. Shall I make the residue thereof an abomination! See also 2 Kings xxiii. 13.

3. The rites and ceremonies of the idolatrous and corrupt church of Rome.-Rev. xvii. 4. Having a golden cup in her hand, full of abominations.

4. Abomination of Desolation.—The Roman army, so called on account of its ensigns and images which the soldiers worshipped, and which were abominable to the Jews.—Matt. xxiv. 15. When ye shall see the abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel the Prophet.

Accurage

1. Devoted to destruction. Josh. vi. 17.

2. Accuraged from Christ. Excluded from intercourse, fellowship, and 2. Accursed from Christ. Excluded alliance with Christ.—Rom. ix. 3.

ADULTEROUS Generation (Matt. xii. 39. xvi. 4. Mark viii. 38.); a faithless and impious generation.

ADULTERY.—Idolatry and apostacy from the worship of the true God. Jer. iii. 8, 9. When backstiding Israel committed adultery... with stones and with stocks. See also Ezek. xvi. 32. xxiii. 37. Rev. ii.

where it listeth; and thou hearest the sound thereof, but caust not tell where it listeth; and thou hearest the sound thereof, but caust not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the Spirit.—John xx. 22. He breathed on them, and saith unto them, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost."—Acts ii. 2.4. Suddenly there came a sound from Heaven as of a rushing mighty wind . . . And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost.—See Prince.

Lefth and Ouega, an appellation which leaves their convenience. AIR, Wind, Breath.—The Holy Spirit.—John iii. 8.

ALPHA and OMEGA, an appellation which Jesus Christ appropriates to himself; to denote that, as he is the Creator, so he will be the final judge of all things.—Rev. i. 8. I am Alpha and Omega the beginning and the ending AMEN

AMEN.

1. Truth and faithfulness; a title of Christ.—Rev. iii. 14. Thus saith the Amen; Truth, i.e. He who is true says, &c.

2. So be it: a form of wishing, approving, or praying at the end of a sentence. Rom. i. 25. Gal. i. 5. Eph. iii. 21. Phil. iv. 20. 1 Tim. i. 17. It was customary among the Jews, when the priests or other persons offered up prayers or praises to God in public, for the whole assembly to respond Amen. Numb. v. 22. This custom was adopted by Christians; and in allusion to it Amen occurs in 1 Cor. viv. 16.

Angel of the Lord.—Jesus Christ.—Zech. i. 12. The angel of the Lord answered and said See Lowth's Commentary, in loc.

Those intellectual and immaterial Beings, whom the Almighty em-Those intellectual and immaterial Beings, whom the Almighty employs, as the ministers of his providence or of his judgments.—Rev. xv. 8. xvi. 1. Seven Angels.—xxii. 8. I fell down to worship before the feet of the angel, who showed me these things.
 The presiding ministers or bishops of the church.—Rev. ii. 1. The angel of the church of Ephesus. See also ii. 8. 12. 18. iii. 1. 7. 14.
 Fallen Spirits.—Matt. xv. 41. Everlasting fire prepared for the Devil and his Angels.

¹ Besides the authorities cited for particular words, this Index of the Prophetic or Symbolical Language of the Scriptures has been drawn up, after a careful perusal of the remarks on this subject by Sir Isaac Newton, Bishops Lowth and Hurd, the Commentary of William Lowth on the Prophets, the Rev. William Jones's Key to the Language of Prophecy, Dr. Lancaster's admirable Symbolical Alphabetical Dictionary prefixed to his Abridgment of Daubuz's Perpetual Commentary on the Revelation of St. John, Robinson's Greek Lexicon to the New Testament, and Dr. Woodhouse's Notes to his Translation of the Apocalypse. Those symbols, and interpretations of symbols, which have been the subject of controversy among some late writers on prophecy, are designedly omitted. Vol. I.

ARM.

1. The infinite power of God in creating the world.—Jer. xxvii. 5. x

The infinite power of God in creating the world.—Jer. xxvii. 5. 1 have made the earth... by my great power, and by my outstretchea arm. See also Jer. xxxii. 17.

The power, strength, and miracles of Christ.—Isa. liii. 1. John xii. 38. To whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?
When Jehovah is said to make bare his holy arm, it means that he hath displayed his great power, which for a long time seemed to be hidden and unemployed.—Isa. lii. 10. The Lord hath made bare his holy arm. holy arm.

ARMOUR.—Such graces and spiritual weapons, as are for the defence of the soul, and by which we may be enabled to combat with our spiritual enemies.—Rom. xiii. 12. Let us put on the armour of light.—Eph. vi. 11. Put on the whole armour of God.

1. Calamities, or judgments of God.-Job vi. 4. Almighty are within me, the poison whereof drinketh up my spirit.—2 Sam. xxii. 14, 15. compare Psal. xxxviii. 2, 3. and Ezek. v. 16. That calamities are represented among the eastern writers as the That calamities are represented among the eastern writers as the arrows of the Almighty, we have abundant procés: one single instance, from the fine sayings ascribed to Ali (or Aaly) the son-in-law of the impostor of Arabia, will illustrate this remark. "It was once demanded of the fourth Khalif (Ali), on whom be the mercy of the Creator, if the canopy of heaven were a bow; and if the earth were the cord thereof; and if calamities were arrows: if manifold were the most for these arrows; and if Almighty Got the kind were the mark for those arrows; and if Almighty God, the tremendous and the glorious, were the unerring archer, to whom could the sons of Adam flee for protection? The Khalif answered saying, 'The sons of Adam must flee unto the Lord.' This fine image Job keeps in view, (vi. 8, 9.) wishing that the unerring marksman may let fly these arrows, let loose his hand, to destroy and cut him off." Dr. A. Clarke on Job vi. 4.

Abusive or standerous words.—Psal. lxiv. 3. Who bend their bows to Abusive or standerous words.—Psal. IXIV. 3. Who bend their bows to shoot their arrows, even bitter words.

Children.—Psal. exxvii. 4, 5. As arrows are in the hand of a mighty man; so are children of the youth. Happy is the man that hath his quiver full of them. "The orientals are accustomed to call brave and valiant sons the arrows and darts of their parents, because they are able to defend them. To sharpen arrows, to make sharp arrows, is, among them, to get brave and valiant sons." [Burder's Oriental Literature vol ii n. 53] Literature, vol. ii. p. 53.]
ASHES. See DUST and ASHES.

- BARES.

 1. Foolish and inexperienced princes.—Isa. iii. 4. I will give children to be their princes, and babes (or infants) shall rule over them. This minatory prediction was fully accomplished in the succession of weak and wicked princes who reigned over the kingdom of Judah from the death of Josiah to the destruction of the city and temple, and the taking of Zedekiah, the last of them, captive by Nebuchad-
- nezzar.

 2. Those who are weak in the Christian faith and knowledge, being ignorant and inconstant, like infants.—1 Cor. iii. 1. And I. brethren, could not speak unto you... but as... unto babes in Christ.—Heb. v. 13. For he is a babe.

 Babylon.—Papal Rome with all her idolatrous rites.—Rev. xiv. 8.

Babylon is fallen. See also Rev. xvii. xviii.

Balam. Doctrine, error, or way of.—A defection from true religion united with immoral and lascivious practices.—Rev. ii. 14. Thou hast them that hold the doctrine of Balaam.—Jude 11. They have ... run greedily after the error of Balaam.—2 Pet. ii. 15. Following the way of Balaam.

Balance

BALANCE.

The known symbol of a strict observation of justice and fair dealing. Prov. xi. 1. A false balance is abomination unto the Lord.—Prov. xvi. 11, A just weight and balance are the Lord's. See also Job xxxi. 6.

2. Joined with symbols, denoting the sale of corn and fruits by weight, it becomes the symbol of scarcity.—Lev. xxvi. 25. When I have broken the staff of your bread; ten women shall bake your bread in one oven; and they shall deliver you bread again by weight, and 457 ye shall eat and not be satisfied .- Ezek. iv. 16. They shall eat bread | by weight and with care.

BALDNESS.—Destruction.—Jer. xlvii. 5. Baldness is come upon Gaza.

BASHAN. See KINE, OAKS.

BEAST.

A heathen kingdom or power of the earth.—Dan. vii. 17. These great beasts, which are four, are four kings. See pp. 208—210. of this volume.

2. The Papal antichrist.-Rev. xiii. 2. 12.

BED.—Great tribulation and anguish.—Rev. ii. 22. I will cast her into a bed. To be tormented in bed, where men seek rest, is peculiarly grievous. See Psal. vi. 6. xli. 3. lsa. xxviii. 20.

BIRD of Prey.—A hostile army coming to prey upon a country.—Isa. xlvi. 11. Calling a ravenous bird from the east; Cyrus and his army. Compare Jer. xii. 9. Ezek. xxxii. 4. and xxxix. 17.

BITTER.—BITTERNESS.—Affliction, misery, and servitude.—Exod. i. 14. They made their lives bitter with hard bondage. See Jer. ix. 15.—Gall of bitterness. (Acts viii. 23.) A state offensive to God.

BLACK.-BLACKNESS.-Affliction, disasters, and anguish.-Jer. xiv. 2. Judah mourneth, and the gates thereof languish; they are black unto the ground.—Joel ii. 6. All faces shall gather blackness.—Rev. vi. 5. Behold a black horse. The black colour of the horse in this the ground.—Joel II. o. An Jaces state game blackness.—Ret. II. b. Behold a black horse. The black colour of the horse in this place indicates that the publication of the Gospel, at the time alluded to, will, by way of punishment upon the heathens, for refusing to hear it, be attended with great affliction. [Daubuz and rusing to near it, be attended with great affliction. [Daubuz and Woodhouse, in loc.]

Blessing (Cup of.) See Cup, 2.

Blindness.—Want of understanding in divine wisdom.—Isa. xxix. 18. In that day the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness.

Slaughter and mortality.—Isa. xxxiv. 3. The mountains shall be melted with blood. See Ezek. xxxii. 6.

2. Our natural descent from one common family. -And hath made of Our natural descent trom one common family.—And hain made of one blood all nations of men, for to duell on all the face of the earth. (Acts xvii. 26.) Flesh and blood is an expression, which signifies the present natural state of man, unaided by divine grace. When Paul was converted, he did not consult with flesh and blood. (Gal. i. 16.) When Peter declared his belief, that his Master was Christ, the Son of the living God, Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-Jona; for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. (Matt. xvi. 17.) We are assured that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God. (I Cor. xv. 50.)
Death.—To resist unto blood, is to contend unto death. (Heb. xii. 4.)

When I passed by thee, and saw thee polluted in thine own blood, said unto thee, when thou wast in thy blood, Live. (Ezek. xvi. 6.) said unto thee, when thou wast in thy blood, Live. (Ezek. xvi. 5.) To shed blood is to murder; hence a cruel murderer is called a bloody man. To give the wicked blood to drink, is to put into their hand the cup of death. The metaphorical term is sometimes employed in personification. What hast thou done? said God to Cain. The voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground. (Gen. iv. 10.) Ye are come to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel. (Heb. xii. 24.)

4. The sufferings and death of Christ, considered as an atonement for the souls of sinners Being justified by his blood, we shall be saved from wrath, through him. (Rom. v. 9.) The following expressions in the New Testament are allusions to the typical blood, which was so plentifully shed under the Old. Christians are taught to reason; that if the blood of bulls, and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh; how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without snot to God mure wave your consciences from dead sprinkling the unclean, sanctifeth to the purifying of the flesh; how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your consciences from dead works to serve the living God? (Heb. ix 13, 14.) God hath set forth Jesus Christ to be a propitiation, that we may have faith in his blood; that is, that we may believe in the efficacy of his atonement, We have redemption through his blood; even the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace. Eph. i. 7.) We were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish, and without spot. (I Peter i. 18, 19.) In the Scriptures, the blood of Christ is sometimes represented as the procuring cause of our justification. Much more being justified by his blood, we shall be saved from wrath through him. (Rom. v. 9). The term blood, when used in this sense, means the merits of Christ's atonement. But in other passages, our sanctification is imputed to the blood of Christ. How much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works, to serve the living God? (Heb. ix. 14.) The saints are represented as walking in white; because they had washed their robes in the blood of the Lamb. (Rev. vii. 14.) The term blood, when used in this figurative sense, evidently signified the doctrines of the cross; which are the great mean of purifying the believer's heart. Now we are clean, said Christ to his disciples, through the word, which I have spoken unto you. (John xv. 3)

5. Blood of the covenant.—(Matt. xxvi. 28.) The blood of Christ, who died in consequence of a covenant to redeem sinners.

BODY.—A society; the church, with its different members.—I Cor. xii. 20—27.

Book of Life. "As, in states and cities, those who obtained freedom and Since the Property of the Book of Life. —Rev. iii. 5. I will not blot out his name out of the Book of Life. "As, in states and cities, those who obtained freedom and fellowship, were enrolled in the public register, which enrolment was their title to the privileges of citizens, so the King of heaven.

of the New Jerusalem, engages to preserve in his register and enrolment, in the book of life, the names of those, who, like the good Sardians, in a corrupted and supine ecciety, shall preserve alleguance and a faithful discharge of their Christian duties. He will own them as his fellow-citizens, before men and angels. Matt. ix. 32. Luke xii. 8. See also Psal. Ixix. 28. Ezek. xiii. 9. Exod. xxxii. 33. Dan. xii. 1. Mal. iii. 16. Luke x. 20." [Dean Woodhouse on Rev.

BOTTLES.—The inhabitants of Jerusalem, whom God threatened to fill with the wine of terror.—Jer. xiii. 12. Every bottle shall be filled with wine.

Bow.

Strength .- Job xxix. 20. My bow was renewed in my hand.

Victory.-Rev. vi. 2. He that sat on him had a bow; where it signifies the progress of the Gospel, which was assisted by sudden and unexpected and miraculous aid and deliverance.
Bowels.—Pity, compassion.—Luke i. 7, 8. Through the tender mercy.
(literally bowels of mercy) of our God.

Branch. See Trees, 3.

Brass.—Strength.—Psal. cvii. 16. He hath broken the gates of brass; that is, the strong gates. See Isa. xlv. 2. In Jer. i. 18. and xv. 20. brazen walls signify a strong and lasting adversary and opposer. BREAD OF FOOD.

1. The word of God.—Deut viii. 3. Matt iv. 4. Man doth not for shall not live by bread only, but by every word that precedeth out of the mouth of God.

2. One bread. (1 Cor. x. 17.) The union of real Christians.

BREATH. See AIR.

BRETHREN.—Christians united by their profession.—Rom. xii. 1. I beseech you, brethren. See Acts xxi. 7. 1 Cor. xv. 6.
BRIARS.—Mischievous and hurtful persons.—Isa. lv. 13. Instead of the briar shall come up the myrtle-tree. See Thorns, 2.
BRIDE.—The heavenly Jerusalem.—Rev. xxi. 9. The bride, the BRIDE.—The heavenly Jerusalem.—Rev. xxi. 5. 1 ne that, s. Lamb's wife.

BRIDEGROOM.—Christ, as the spouse of the church.—Rev. xxi. 9. See

BRIMSTONE

Brimstone.
Perpetual torment and destruction.—Job xviii. 15. Brimstone shall be scattered upon his habitation; that is, his home or family shall be destroyed for ever by an inextinguishable fire. Compare Isa. xxxiv. 9, 10. Rev. xiv. 10, &c.
Corrupt, infernal, and destructive doctrines. Rev. ix. 17. Out of their mouth issued fire and brimstone. See verse 18.

Bulls .- Wicked, violent men .- Psal. xxii. 12. Many bulls have compassed me; strong [bulls] of Bashan have beset me round: that is, mine enemies, who are as furious and formidable as the bulls fed in the rich pastures of Bashan, beset me on every side.

URNING. See FIRE, 2. BURNING. See Fire, 2.
BUY. To attain in preference to earthly riches.—See Isa. lv. 1. Prov.

CALL-CALLED—CALLING.

1. That invitation which God holds out to men to come and enjoy the 1. That invitation which God holds out to men to come and enjoy the blessings which flow from a sincere reception of the Christian religion. Eph. i. 18. That ye may know what is the hope of his calling: that is, what is the nature of that hope, which those, who have been invited into the divine kingdom, may properly indulge.
2. To call to any duty; that is, to appoint, constitute, or choose. Gal. i. 15. Who called me, chose me, by his grace, viz. to be an apostle. Candlestick. See Lamp.

CEDARS.

Great men.—Zech. xi. 2. The cedar is fallen.
 Cedars of Lebanon.—Kings, princes, and nobles of Judah.—Isa. ii.
 The day of the Lord shall be upon all the cedars of Lebanon.

3. Top of the young twigs of cedars.—The prime nobility and able

He commed off the top of the young twigs. S. Top by the young towns of cectars.—The prime homey and asie soldiery.—Ezek. xvii. 4. He cropped off the top of the young twigs. CHAFF.—Unprofitable and worthless men.—Psal. i. 4. The ungodly are . . . like the chaff, which the wind driveth away.—Matt. iii. 14. He will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire.
CHAIN.—Bondage or affliction.—Lam. iii. 7. He hath made my chain heavy CHILD, CHILDREN.

Those who have received their religious knowledge, character, education, &c. from any one: i. e. a beloved disciple. 2 Tim. i. 2. Timothy, my dearly beloved child.

2. Children joined with the names of cities denote their inhabitants or citizens. Matt. xxiii. 37. O Jerusalem how often, would I have gathered thy children. See also Luke xiii. 34. xix. 44. Gal. iv. 25.

3. Children of God; those whom he regards with parental affection, and on whom he bestows peculiar favour. John i. 12. As many as received him, to them he gave the privilege to become the children of Children of God and children of the devil, in 1 John iii. 10., are

4. Children of God and children of the devil, in 2 some in 10, are those who resemble God, and those who resemble Satan. CIRCUMCISION.—An engagement like that of baptism, to renounce the flesh and circumcise the heart.—Deut. xx. 16. Circumcise therefore the foreskin of your heart.—Deut. xxx. 6. The Lord thy God shall circumcise thine heart.—Rom. ii. 29. Circumcision is that of the heart.

CLAY in the hands of the potter.-Man in the hands of his Creator.-Isa. xliv. 8. Now, O Lord, thou art our Father; we are the clay; and thou our potter, and we are all the work of thy hand. See also Rom. ix. 21.

Crouns .- Multitudes and armies .- Jer. iv. 13. He shall come up as 1 clou's.-1sa. lx. 8. Who are those, that fly as a cloud !-Heb. xn. 1. A cloud of witnesses.

Co.l. Inconstant in affections, purpose, and conduct; destitute of fervent piety and holy zeal. Rev. m. 15, 16.

COLUMN. See PILLAR

Corner-Stone. Jesus Christ, who is compared to a corner stone in three points of view; viz.

1. As this stone lies at the foundation, and serves to give support and strength to the building, so Christ, or the doctrine of a Saviour, is called the chief corner-stone in Eph. n. 20.; because this doctrine is the most important feature of the Christian religion, and fundamental object of all the precepts given by the apostles and other Christian teachers.

As the corner-stone occupies an important and conspicuous place, Jesus is compared to it in 1 Pet. ii. 6., because God has made him highly esteemed (or precious,) and has advanced him to a dignity and conspicuousness above all others.

3. Since men often stumble against a projecting corner-stone, Christ is therefore so called (Psal. cxviii. 22. Matt. xxi. 42. and parallel passages,) because his Gospel will be the cause of aggravated condemnation to those who wilfully reject it. (Robinson's Lexicon, p. 21.

The doctrine of the cross, that is, of Christ crucified. The cross of Christ, the preaching of the cross, occur in this sense in 1 Cor. i. 17, 18. See also Gal. v. 11. vi. 12. 14. Phil. iii. 18. To take up or bear one's cross, that is, to be ready to undergo the Solution of the second of the

The blessings and favours of God.—Psal. xxiii. 5. My cup runneth over. The cup of salvation, in Psal. cxvi. 13., is a cup of thanksgiving, or blessing the Lord for all his mercies.

2. The Cup of blessing.—The paschal cup was called by the Jews the Cup of blessing, because they sanctified it by giving thanks to God for it. To this Saint Paul alludes in 1. Cor. x. 16. when he terms the sacramental cup the cup of blessing.

3. Afflictions or sufferings, the effects of the wrath of God.—Isa. li. 17.

Stand up, O Jerusalem, which hast drunk at the hand of the LORD the cup of his fury. Thou hast drunken the dregs of the cup of the cup of his fury. Thou trembling. See WINE, 2.

DARKNESS

Sin and ignorance.-Rom. xiii. 12. Let us cast off the works of darkness Affliction, misery, and adversity—Jer. xiii. 16. Give glory to the Lord your God, before he cause darkness. See Ezek. xxx. 18. xxxiv. 12.

3. Darkness of the sun, moon, and stars. General darkness and deficiency in the government.—Isa. xiii. 10. The stars of heaven, and the constellations thereof, shall not give their light; the sun shall be darkened in his going forth, and the moon shall not cause her light to shine. See Ezek. xxxii. 7. and Joel ii. 10. 31. iii. 15. DAY.

DAY.
1. A year, in prophetical language.—Ezek. iv. 6. Thou shalt bare the iniquity of the house of Judah forty days; I have appointed thee each day for a year. See also Isa. xx. 3. (Bp. Lowth's version and notes.)—Rev. ii. 10. Ye shall have tribulation ten days.
2. An appointed time or season.—Isa. xxxiv. 8. It is the day of the Lord's vengeance. See also Isa. lxiii. 4.
3. A state of truth, hope, and knowledge.—1. Thess. v. 5. Ye are all children of the light and children of the day.

children of the light, and children of the day. DEATH.

The separation of the soul from the body.—Gen. xxv. 11. After the death of Abraham, &c. This is temporal or the first death, which is the common lot of man by the divine sentence. (Gen. iii. 2. Second death (beyond the grave) is the eternal separation of the whole man from the presence and glory of God; not only an extinction of all our pleasurable feelings, and of all our hopes of happiness, but an ever-during sense of this extinction, "where the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched."—Rev. ii. 11. He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death.

3. The state of a soul insensible of sin and corruption, and destitute of the spirit of life.—Jude 12. Twice dead.—Rev. iii. 1. Thou....

A state of mortification, death unto sin, and crucifixion with Christ. Rom. vi. 8. He that is dead, is freed from sin.—1 Pet. ii. 24. Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we being dead to sin, should live to righteousness.

Desert of the Sea.—Babylon.—Isa. xxi. 1. The burden of the desert of the sea. Babylon and the adjacent country is so called, because it was shortly to become desert, and a marsh full of pools of water, as if converted into a lake or inland sea. The country about Babylon, and especially below it towards the sea, was a great flat morass, often overflowed by the Euphrates and Tigris. (Bp. Lowth and Dr. Scott, in loc.)

Drw upon Herbs.—The blessing of Heaven, and the power of the resurrection.—Hos xiv. 5. I will be as the dew unto Israel.—Isa. xxvi. 19. Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust, for thy dew is as they arise. the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead

The Gentiles .- The bad properties of dogs are obstinate barking, biting, insatiable gluttony, filminess in lust, your u.g. and returning to their vomit. (Compare Prov. xxi. 11.2 Pet. ii. 22.) Hence the Gentiles, on account of the impurity of their lives, and their being without the covenant, were called dogs by the J. w.s. - Matt. xv. 26 It is not meet to take the children's bread and cast it to dogs. - Psat xxii. 16. Dogs have compassed me, the assembly of the wicked have inclosed me.

A watchman, for his vigilance to give notice of approaching danger.—Isa Ivi. 10. His watchmen are blind, they are all ignorant they are all dumb dogs, they cannot bark.

Impudent, shameless persons, and false teachers.—Rev. xxii. 15 Without are dogs.—Phil. iii. 2. Beware of dogs. DOMINION.

Power.-Neh. ix. 28. They had dominion over them.

Persons over whom another has power .- Psal. cxiv. 2. Israel was his dominion.

Angels.—Col. i. 16. By him were created.....dominions.
The universal government of Almighty God.—Dan. vii. 14. His dominion is an everlasting dominion.

Door opened in heaven. The beginning of a new kind of government—Rev. iv. 1. I looked, and, behold, a door [was] opened in heaven.

An open door .- The free exercise and propagation of the Gospel .also 2 Cor. ii. 12. Col. iv. 3. Acis xiv. 27. DRAGON.

A symbol of a king that is an enemy.—In Ezek. xxix. 3. it means the king of Egypt, so also in Psal. lxxiv. 13.
 Satan acting and ruling by his visible ministers.—Rev. xii. 9. Behold, a great red dragon, &c.

Any hurtful thing.—Psal. xci. 13. The young tion and the dragon shalt thou trample under foot.

DRUNK—DRUNKENNESS.

1. The symbol of the folly and madness of sinners, who, making no use of their reason, plunge themselves in all manner of crimes.—
Isa. xxviii. 1. 3. Woe to the drunkards of Ephraim.......... The drunkards of Ephraim shall be trodden under feet.

That stupidity, which arises from God's judgments; when the sinner is under the consternation of his misery, as one astonished, staggering, and not knowing what to do.—Isa. xxix. 9. They are drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink.—Isa. ii. 21. but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink.—Isa. li. 21 Thou afflicted and drunken, but not with wine. See also Jer. xiii 13, 14. and Lam. iii. 15.

Dust and Asses.—Mortal man, under death and condemnation.—
Gen. xviii. 27. I have taken upon me to speak unto the Lord, which am but dust and ashes.—Gen. iii. 19. Dust thou art, and to dust shalt thou return. See Job xlii. 6.

EAGLE

A king or kingdom.—Ezek. xvii. A great eagle, with great wings, long winged, full of feathers, which had divers colours, came to Lebanon: that is, Nebuchadnezzar. The divers colours refer to the various nations that composed the Babylonian empire.

2. The Roman army, whose ensigns or standards were eagles.-Matt. xxiv. 28. Wheresoever the carcase is, there will the eagles be gathered together. See Wings.

together. See Wings.
Eagles' Wings.—To be borne on eagles' wings signifies divine, miraculous deliverance. Who can pursue the eagle through the miraculous deliverance. Who can pursue the eagle throu air, and take from him what is committed to his charge? xix 4. Psal. xci. 4. Isa. xl. 31. Rev. xii. 14. EARTHEN Vessel.—The body of man.—2. Cor. iv. 7. We have treasure in earthen vessels

Joel ii. 10. The earth shall quake before them. See also Haggai ii. 21. Heb. xii. 26.

EGYPT .- A mystical name of wickedness .- Rev. xi. 8. Their dead bodies [shall lie] in the street of the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt.

ELDERS (the twenty-four.) Probably such of the Patriarchs and Prophets of the old church, as saw by faith the day of redemption and rejoiced; and who are expressly termed Elders (πρεσθυτεροι) in Heb. xi. 2.—Rev. iv. 10. The four and twenty elders fall down before him that liveth for ever. [See Dean Woodhouse on Rev. iv. 10.]

EYES admit of various interpretations, according to circumstances.

I. As applied to the Almighty, they denote,

I. His knowledge and prescience.—Prov. xv. 3. His eye is in every place to behold good and evil. See Psal. xi. 4.

2. His watchful providence.—Psal. xxxiv. 15. The eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous.

II. As applied to Jesus Christ they signify his omnipresence.—Rev. v.

6. In the midst of the elders stood a lamb, having seven eyes. [See Dean Woodhouse, in loc.]
III. As applied to Men, the eyes denote,

111. As applied to Men, the eyes denote,
1. The understanding, which is as it were the eye of the soul.—Psal. cxix. 18. Open thou mine eyes.
2. A guide or counseller.—Job xxix. 15. I was eyes to the blind.
3. The whole man.—Rev. i. 7. Every eye shall see him; that is, all

4. Good or evil desires and designs .- Deut. xxviii, 54. be evil towards his brother.—ver. 56. Her eye shall be evil towards the husband of her bosom, and towards her son, and towards her daughter. That is, they shall form cruel and evil designs against them to kill, and even to eat them. History confirms the prediction

FACE.

As applied to God, it denotes his favour.-Dan. ix. 17. Cause thy face to shine upon thy sanctuary.—See Psal. xxxi. 16.

As applied to man.

FACES harder than a rock (Jer. v. 3.) denote unblushing, shameless persons.

FAITH (III or 15.) In consequence of not attending to the ambiguity of the word \(\pi_{10\tau_1\tau_2 requires it to be taken in a different sense. Faith or believing then

Our assenting to any truth, even to such truths as are known by the evidences of our senses: thus in John xx. 29. Thomas, whom the evidence of his senses had convinced of the reality of Christ's resurrection, is said to have believed.

2. A general disposition of the mind to embrace all that we know concerning God, whether by reason or revelation: as in Heb. xi. 6. Without faith it is impossible to please God; which expression is subsequently applied to the existence of God, his goodness and bounty towards his sincere worshippers.

3. A peculiar assent to a certain revelation; for instance, in Rom. iv. throughout, and in other passages that treat of Abraham's faith, it is manifest that this faith must be referred to the peculiar promises made to Abraham that a son should be born unto him, though he himself was then about a hundred years old, and Sarah, who was ninety, was barren.

nmety, was barren.

4. An assent given to the revelation made to Moses; as when the children of Israel are said to have believed the Lord and his servant Moses. (Exod. xiv. 31. compared with John v. 45, 46. and ix. 28)

5. An assent given to the relation made to the prophets: as when King Jehoshaphat says to the Jews (2 Chron. xx. 20.,) "Believe in the Lord your God, so shall ye be established; believe his prophets, so shall ye prosper." Compare also Isa. vii. 9.

6. A cordial assent to the Christian revelation or to some of its leading and fundamental points as in these assessment where we are corrected.

and fundamental points; as in those passages where we are commanded to believe in Christ, or that he is the Son of God, or that he rose from the dead.

An assent to future and invisible things revealed by God, as in Heb. xi. 1. where it is defined to be the substance of things hoped for, and the evidence of things not seen, that is, the giving of a present subsistence to things future, which are fully expected, and the proving and demonstrating of things which are not seen.

proving and demonstrating of things which are not seen.

8. The Gospel, as in Gal. iii. 2. where Saint Paul demands of the Galatians, whether they received the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith: in which passage it is evident that the hearing of faith denotes the hearing of the preached Gospel; and in this sense the word faith appears to be used in all those parts of the Epistle to the Romans, where it is opposed to the works of the law.

9. A persuasion that what we do is well pleasing to God: thus the meaning of Rom. xiv. 23, Whatsoever is not of faith is sin, is, that it is sinful in us to do any thing, which we are not fully persuaded is well pleasing to God, or at least permitted by him.

10. Faith in miracles, that is, a firm confidence in Christ, to which, at the first propagation of the Gospel, was annexed the performance the first propagation of the Gospel, was annexed the performance of miracles: such was the faith which Jesus Christ frequently required of his disciples and others, that he might work certain miracles by them (compare Matt. xvii. 20. Mark xi. 22. xvi. 17. and 6.;) and to which Saint Paul refers in 1 Cor. xiii. 2. Lastly, faith sometimes signifies,

11. Fidelity, or faithfulness in the discharge of duties or promises, and so the Greek word *\text{\pi} \text{or} \text{is} properly rendered in Tit. ii. 10.; as it also should have been in 1 Tim. v. 12., the faith, there said to have been east off by the younger widows, being their fidelity to Christ.

Falling down, or prostrate, before another.—Submission and homage.—Isa. xlv. 14. They shall fall down unto thee, and make supplication unto thee. See also Gen. xxvii. 29. xxxvii. 7, 8.

Family.—The Church of God.—Eph. iii. 15. Of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named.

The most excellent of every thing—Psal. lxxxi. 16. He should have fed them with the finest (Heb. fat) of the wheat.—Psal. cxlvii. 14. He filleth thee with the finest (Heb. fat) of the wheat.

Riches.—Psal. xxii. 29. All the fat upon earth.—Jer. v. 28. They

FATHER.

- God, whose children we all are by creation and redemption.—Mal. i. 6. If I be a father, where is mine honour?—Mal. ii. 10. Have we not all one Father? Hath not one God created us? See Jer. xxxi.
- Father of any thing; that is, the author, cause, or source of it.— John viii. 44. When he (Satan) speaketh a lie...he is the father of it.—James i. 17. The Father of lights; the source of spiritual and coporeal light.
- Example, pattern, or prototype.—John viii. 44. Ye are of your father, the devil; ye follow the example of Satan, so that he may be properly called your father, and ye his children.

FIELD. The World.—Matt. xiii. 38.

With such adjuncts as denote that it is not put for light, it signifies destruction or torment, great sickness, war, and its dismal effects.—
Isa. xlii. 25. It hath set him on fire.—Isa. lxvi. 15. The Lord will come with fire. See Ezek. xxii. 20—22.
2. Birning fire.—The wrath of God.—Ezek. xxii. 31. I have con-

Afflictions, or persecution.—Isa. xxiv. 15. Glorify ye the Lord God

A Coals of fire proceeding out of the mouth of God, or from his countenance, denote his anger.—Psal. xviii. 8, 12, 13.

Firmament. See Heavens.

FLESH (or MEAT.)

The riches, goods, or possessions of any person conquered, oppressed, or slain, as the case may be.—Psal. lxxiv. 14. Thou breakest the heads of leviathan in pieces (didst destroy the power of Pharaoh the heads of teviathan in pieces (didst destroy the power of Pharaon and his princes,) [and] gavest him [to be] meat to the people inhabiting the wilderness: that is, didst enrich the Israelites with their spoils.—Isa. xvii. 4. The fatness of his flesh shall be made lean. See also Mic. iii. 2, 3. and Zech. xi. 9. 16.; in all which places the Targum explains flesh by riches and substance.

To devour much flesh, is to conquer and spoil many enemies of their lands and possessions. In Dan. vii. 5 this expression is used to denote the cruelty of the Medes and Persians, many of whose sovereigns were more like ferocious bears than men. Instances of their cruelty abound in almost all the historians who have written of Weak, mortal man.—Isa. xl. 6. All flesh is grass.

The exterior of man; viz.

The exterior of man; viz.
 External actions, as circumcision, the choice of food, &c. in which the body is the part chiefly affected.—Rom. iv. 1. What shall we say then, that Abraham our father hath found, as pertaining to the flesh? i. e. so far as regards external actions.—I Cor. x. 18. Behold Israel after the flesh; i. e. as it respects the external performance of their religious rites.—Gal. iii. 3.... Are ye now made perfect by the flesh? will ye turn again to mere external ceremonies?
 External appearance, condition, circumstances, character &c.—John vi. 63. The flesh profitch nothing.—2. Cor. v. 16. We know no man after the flesh.

John vi. 63. The fles no man after the flesh.

FLOOD.—Extreme danger.—Psal. lxix. 15. Let not the water-flood overflow me. See River.

FOOD. See BREAD.

FOOD. See DIEAD.—A public profession or appearance before men.—An tiently, slaves were stigmatised in their forehead with their master's mark; hence to be sealed in the forehead (Rev. vii. 3.,) and to have a mark in the forehead (Rev. viii. 16. &c...) is to make a public profession of belonging to the person whose mark is said to be received. ceived FOUR. See Numbers.

Forest of the South-field. See South-field.

FORNICATION.—All those carnal impurities, which were common among the heathens, and even formed a part of their sacred rites, Rev. ii. 20. Thou sufferest that woman Jezebel....to seduce my ser vants to commit fornification.

Fortress.—See Towers.

Fox.—A cunning, deceitful person.—Luke xiji. 32 Go, tell that fox.— Ezek. xiji. 4. Thy prophets are like the foxes in the deserts.

FRUIT.

1. The consequences of an action. Prov. i. 31. They shall eat the fruit af their own ways.

Good works—Psal. i. 3, He (the pious man)bringeth forth his fruit in his season.—Matt. iii. 8. Bring forth fruits meet for re-

FURNACE.

1. A place of great affliction .- Deut. iv. 20. The Lord hath ... brought you forth out of the iron furnace, out of Egypt.

2. Such afflictions as God sends for the amendment and correction of men. —Jer. ix. 7. I will melt them, and try them, that is, in the furnace of affliction.

- ARMENTS.

 White garments were not only the emblem of purity and being in the favour of God (Psal. ii. 7. Isa. i. 18.,) but also, as being worn on festival days, were tokens of joy and pleasure. (Isa. lii. 1. lxi. 10.) Kings and princes likewise were arrayed in white garments of fine linen. (Gen. xii. 42. 1 Chron. xv. 27. Luke xvi. 19.) Hence, to walk or be clothed in white, signifies to be prosperous, successful, and victorious, to be holy, happy, honoured, and rewarded.—Rev. iii. 4, 5. They shall walk in white..... The same shall be clothed in white raiment. in white raiment.
- 2. Souls.—Rev. iii. 4. Thou hast a few names in Sardis which have not defiled their garments.—The Hebrews considered holiness as the garb of the soul, and evil actions as stains or spots upon this garb.

GATES. 1. Gates of the daughter of Sion. The ordinances of Jehovah, by which the soul is helped forward in the way of salvation.—Psal. ix. 14. That I may show forth all thy praise in the gates of the daughter of Sion.

Gates of Death. Imminent danger of death.—Psal. ix. 13. Have mercy upon me, O LORD..... thou that deliverest me from the gates of death. "The Hebrew poets supposed the lower world, or region of death, to have gates. Thus it is said in Job xxxviii. 17. Have the gates of death been opened unto thee? or hast thou seen the doors of the shadow of death ?—King Hezekiah, in his hymn of thanksgiving for his re-covery, (Isa, xxxviii, 10.) sings: I shall go to the gates of the grave." [Burder's Oriental Literature, vol. ii. p. 11. The same image is found among the Greek and Roman poets. Ibid. p. 12. Dr. Good's

Translation of Job, p. 452.]

3. Security.—(Because gates are a security to a fortress or city.)—Psal. cxlvii. 13. He hath strengthened the bars of thy gates. That is, God has given Jerusalem security, and put it out of danger. So, in Job xxxviii 10., the setting of bars and gates against the sea, means the securing of the earth against its inroads. The decree, there alluded to, as imposed by the Almighty upon the ocean, is that wonderful law of gravation in fluids, by which, all the parts of them exerting an equal pressure upon one another, the equilibrium of the whole GIRDLE.—The eastern people, wearing long and loose garments, were unfit for action or business of any kind, without girding their clothes about them. A girdle therefore denotes strength and activity; and to unloose it is to deprive a person of strength, to render him unfit for a non.—Isa. v. 27. Nor shall the girdle of their lones be loosed.—Isa. xlv. 1. I will loose the lones of kings to open before him (Cyrus) the two-leaved gates.

1. Good men bearing trouble, as gold bears the fire.—Job xxiii. 10.
1. When he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold.
2. Such faith and virtue as will enable its possessor to stand a fiery trial.—Rev. iii. 18. I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the GRAPES.—Fruits of righteousness.—Isa. v. 2. He looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it brought forth wild grapes.

RASS.—The common people, or mankind in general.—Isa. xl. 6, 7.

Grass.—The common people, or mankind in general.—tea.

All flesh is grass; that is, weak and impotent as grass.

GROUND.—The heart of man.—Luke viii. 15. That on the good ground, are they which, in an honest and good heart, having heard the word, keep it.

Common of plants.

1. Resurrection and glorification.-Hos. xiv. 7. They that dwell under 1. Resurrection and giorification.—Hos. xiv. 1. They like dwell under his shadow shall return; they shall revive as the corn; they shall grow as the vine.—John xii. 24. Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. See also Isa. Ixvi. 14. and I Cor. xv. 36—44.

2. Growth in grave.—Isa. Iv. 10, 11. For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the corth and maketh it his cort, and will the state of the s earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater ;-so shall my word be-

1. The devastations made by the inroads of enemies.—Isa. xxviii. 2.

The Lord hall a mighty and a strong one [which] as a tempest of hail shall cast down to the earth with the hand.—Under this resemblance the prophet represents the utter destruction of the kingdom of the ten tribes, which afterwards was accomplished by Shalmaneser. Compare Isa. xxxii. 19. Ezek. xiii. 11. 13.

2. Huil and fire.—The calamities of war, with all their horrors.—Rev.

There followed hail and fire mingled with blood.

-Decay of natural strength, and tendency to dissolu-Grey hairs are here and there upon him, and he tion.-Hos. vii. 9. knoweth it not.

2. Shaving the head, the hair of the feet and of the beard, with a razor hired (the king of Assyria), in Isa. vii. 20. signifies the troubles, slaughter, and destruction that were to be brought upon the Jews by the Assyrian king and his armies.

HAND.—Power and strength.

1. Right hand.—Great protection and favour.—Psal. xviii. 35. Thy Right hand.—Great protection and tayour.—Psal. XVIII. 33. Thy right hand hath holden me up.

 Laying the right hand upon a person. The conveyance of blessings—strength—power, and authority. Thus Jacob conveyed blessings to the two sons of Joseph. (Gen. xiviii. 20.) The hand that touched the prophet Daniel (x. 10.) strengthened him; and Moses by laying his right hand upon Joshua (Numb. xxvii. 18.), delegated, a portion of his authority to him. a portion of his authority to him.

Hand of God upon a prophet.—The immediate operation of God or his Holy Spirit upon a prophet.—Ezek. viii. 1. The hand of the LORD God fell upon me. Compare 1 Kings xviii. 46. 2 Kings iii.

Some destroying judgment, by which people fall as corn by the scythe.—Joel iii. 13. Put ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe.
 The end of the world.—Matt. xiii. 39.

The superior part or governing principle.—Isa. i. 5. The whole head is sick.—Dan. ii. 38. Thou art this head of gold.—Isa. vii. 8, 9. The head (that is, the sovereign.) of Damascus is Rezin; and the head of Samaria is Remalian's son; that is, Pekah king of Israel.

2. Heads of a people.—Princes or magistrates.—Isa. xxix. 10. The prophets and your heads (marginal rendering) hath he covered.—Micah iii. 1. 9. 11. Hear, O heads of Jacob, and ye princes of the house of Israel.... The heads judge for reward.

3. When a body politic is represented under the symbol of an animal, and is considered as one body, the head of it, by the rule of analogy, is its capital city.—Isa. vii. 8, 9. The head of Syria is Damascus......And the head of Ephraim (that is, of the kingdom of Israel,) is Samaria.

HEAT. (Scorching.)-Trouble and persecution.-Matt. xiii. 6. 21. When the sun was up, they were scorched, and because they had not root, they withered away..... When tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, by and by he is offended.

HEAVENS

The Divine Power ruling over the world.—Dan. iv. 26.... After that thou shalt know that the heavens do rule.

2. God.—Matt. xxi. 25. The baptism of John, whence was it? From heaven or of men? &c.—Luke xv. 18. I have sinned against hea-heaven or of men? &c.—Luke xv. 18. I have sinned against heaven, and before thee. See also verse 21.

3. Heaven and earth.—A political universe.—Isa. li. 16. That I may plant the heavens, and lay the foundations of the earth, and say unto Sion, "Thou art my people." That is, that I might make those who were but scattered persons and slaves in Egypt before, a kingdom and polity, to be governed by their own laws and magistrates. See Door, 1.

HELL.

11. Utter destruction, a total overthrow.—Isa. xiv. 15. Matt. xi. 23. Thou shalt be brought down to hell.

2. The general receptacle of the dead, the place of departed souls.—Rev. i. 18.—I have the keys of hell and of death.

HELMET.—Salvation.—Eph. vi. 17. 1. Thess. v. 8.

HILLS. See MOUNTAINS

Hireling. A false minister who careth not for the sheep.—John x. 12, 13. He that is an hireling, whose own the sheep are not....fleeth, because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep. HOPE.

The object of hope; i. e. future felicity. Rom. viii. 24. Gal. v. 5 Col. i. 5. 2. Thess. ii. 16.

The author or source of hope.—1 Tim. i. 1.—Jesus Christ, our hope.—Col, i. 27. Christ in you, the hope of glory.

Confidence, security.—Acts in 26. My flesh shall rest in hope.

Regal power, or monarchy.—Jer. xlviii. 25. The horn of Moab is cut off. In Zech. i. 18. 21. and Dan. viii. 20—22. the four horns are the four great monarchies, each of which had subdued the Jews Horns of an altar.—The Divine protection.—Amos iii. 14. The horns of the altar shall be cut off and fall to the ground. That is, there shall be no more atonements made upon the altar. The asylum or sanctuary thereof shall not stand. Antiently, both among That is, Jews and Gentiles, an allar was an asylum or sanctuary for such persons as fled to it for refuge.

persons as fied to it for refuge.

3. Strength, glory, and power.—Horns (it is well known) are emblems of these qualities both in sacred and profine writers, because the strength and beauty of horned animals consist in their horns. By the seven horns, attributed to the Lamb, (in Rev. v. 6.) is signified that universal power which our Lord obtained, when, suffering death under the form of an innocent victim he thereby vanguashed. death under the form of an innocent victim, he thereby vanquished the formidable enemy of man. All power, said he to his disciples immediately after this conflict, is given to me in heaven and in earth. (Matt. xxviii. 18.)

Horn of Salvation.—A mighty and glorious Saviour, or Deliverer.—Psal. xviii. 2. The Lord is... the horn of my salvation. See Luke i. 69.

Horse.

- Horse.

 1. The symbol of war and conquest.—God hath made Judah as his goodly horse in the battle. That is, He will make them conquerors over his enemies, glorious and successful.

 2. More particularly of speedy conquest.—Joel ii. 4. The appearance of them is as the appearance of horses; and as horsemen so shall they run.—Hab. i. 8. Their horses are swifter than leopards.—Jer. iv. 13. His horses are swifter than eagles.

 3. White being the symbol of joy, felicity, and prosperity, and white horses, being used by victors on their days of triumph, are the symbol of certain victory and great triumph upon that account.—Rev. vi. 2. I saw, and behold a white horse; and he that sat on him.... went forth conquering and to conquer. See also BLACK.
- 1101532.

 1. The Church of God.—1 Tim. iii. 15. The House of God, which is the church of the living God. See Heb. iii. 6.

 2. The body of man.—2 Cor. v. 1. If our earthly house of [this]

2. The body of man.—2 Cor. v. 1. If our earning nouse of this tabernacle were dissolved.

HUNGER and THIRST.—The appetites of the spirit after righteousness.—Luke i. 53. He hath filled the hungry with good things.—
Matt. v. 6. Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled.—Psal. xlii. 2. My soul thirsteth for God.

IDOL.—IDOLATRY.—Any thing too much, and sinfully indulged.—1 John v. 21. Keep yourself from idols.—Col. iii. 5. Covetousness which is idolatry.
IMAGE of gold, silver, brass, and iron.—The four great monarchies or kingdoms of the world.—Dan. ii. 31—45. Compare p. 207. of this INCENSE .- Prayer, or the devotion of the heart in offening up prayer INCENSE.—Prayer, or the devotion of the heart in offering up prayer to God.—Psal. cxli. 2. Let my prayer be set before thee as incense.—

Rev. v. 8. Golden vials full of incense, which are the prayers of the saints. See also Luke i. 10.
INFIRMITIES of the Body.—All the distempers and weaknesses of the mind.—Matt. viii. 17. Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses. Compare Isa. liii. 4. and xxxv. 5, 6.

ISLE—ISLAND.—Any place or country to which the Hebrews went by sea.—Gen. x. 5. By these were the isles of the Gentiles divided in their lands; that is, Europe.—In Isa. xx. 6. This isle means Ethiopia, whither the Hebrews went by sea from Ezion-geher. And in Isa. xxiii. 2. 6., the inhabitants of the isle are the Tyrians.

JERUSALEM.

1. The earthly Jerusalem.—A sign, earnest, and pattern of the heavenly Jerusalem.—Rev. iii. 12. Him that overcometh..... I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God [which is] new Jerusalem.—"The numerous prophecies, foretelling [which is] new Jerusalem.—"The numerous prophecies, foretelling great and everlasting glory to Jerusalem, have not been fulfilled in the literal Jerusalem; nor can be so fulfilled, without contradicting other predictions, especially those of our Lord which have denounced its ruin. They remain, therefore, to be fulfilled in a spiritual sense; in that sense which Saint Paul points out to us, when in opposition to Jerusalem that now is, and is in bondage with her children, he presents to our view, Jerusalem which is above, which is the mother of us all. (Gal. iv. 24—26.) This is the city which Abraham looked to; a building not made with hands, whose builder and maker is God (Heb. xi. 10—16. xii. 22—24. xiii. 14.); even the heavenly Jerusalem." [Dean Woodhouse on Rev. iii. 12.]

2. Jerusalem that now is (Gal. iv. 25.); the Jewish or Mosiac dispensation.

3. Jerusalem that is above (Gal. iv. 26.), the celestial Jerusalem, i. e. the Christian dispensation, which will be perfected in splendour and majesty, when Christ shall descend to judge the world.

JEZEBEL —A woman of great rank and influence at Thyatira, who seduced the Christians to intermix idolatry and heathen impurities with their religion.—Rev. ii. 20. I have a few things against thee, because thou hast suffered that woman Jezebel, which calleth herself a prophetess, to teach and to seduce my servants to commit fornication, and to eat things offered unto idols.—Instead of that woman Jezebel—την γυναικα 1εζακηλ—many excellent manuscripts, and almost all the ancient versions, read THY YOUNGER OF IE (28 MA). THY wife Jezebel; which reading asserts that this bad woman was the wife of the bishop or angel of that church; whose criminality in suffering her was, therefore, the greater. She called herself a prophetess, that is, set up for a teacher; and taught the Christians that fornication and eating things offered to idols were matters of indifference, and thus they were seduced from the truth. [Dean Woodhouse and Dr. A. Clarke, on Rev. ii. 20.]

Power, authority.—Rev. i. 18. I....have the keys of hell and of death; that is, power and authority over life, death, and the grave. Compare Rev. iii. 7. and Isa. xxii. 22.—The keys of the kingdom of heaven, in Matt. xvi. 19., signify the power to admit into that state, and to confer the graces and benefits thereof.

The key of knowledge, in Luke xi. 52., is the power or mean of attribute heavel and the state of the s taining knowledge.

Kine of Bashan. (Amos iv. 1.) The luxurious matrons of Israel.

King.—God, the King of kings, and origin of all authority and power.

See Matt. xxii. 2. Rev. xxii. 14.

ABOURER.—The minister who serves under God in his husbandry.—
Matt. ix. 37, 38. The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few. Pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth labourers into this harvest.—1 Cor. iii. 9. We are labourers together with God.

LAME.—The Messiah, suffering for the sins of the world.—John i. 29.

Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.—Rev.

v. 12. Worthy is the Lamb that was slain.

Direction or support.—2 Sam. xxii. 17. That thou quench not the light (Heb. lamp) of Israel.
 A Christian church.—Rev. i. 12. The seven golden lamps (incorrectly rendered sandlesticks in our version) are the seven churches rectly rendered andlesticks in our version) are the seven churches of Christ (Rev. i. 20.), represented as golden, to show how precious they are in the sight of God.

Leaven.—Corrupt doctrine and corrupt practices.—Matt. xvi. 6. Luke xii. 1. Mark viii. 15. Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees, which is hypocrisy.—I Cor. v. 6—8. Know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump? Purge, therefore, the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump? Let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.

Leaves.—Words, the service of the lips, as distinguished from the fruits of good works.—Psal. i. 3. His leaf also shall not wither.

Leanon.—Zech. xi. 1. Open thy doors, O Lebanon; i. e. the temple at Jerusalem, the stately buildings of which were compared to the cedars of the forests of Lebanon.

Legions—Any great number.—Matt. xxvi. 53. More than twelve legions of angels.

legions of angels.

LEOPARD.

- 1. A swift, powerful, and rapacious enemy.—Dan. vii. 6. I beheld; and lo, another like a leopard, i. e. Alexander, falsely named the Great, whose rapid conquests are well characterised by this sym-
- Men of fierce, untractable, and cruel disposition.—Isa. xi. 6. The leopard shall lie down with the kid.

LIFE.

1. Immortality.—Psal. xvi. 11. Thou will show me the path of life.—
Psal. xxxvi 9. With thee is the fountain of life.

2. Christ, the fountain of natural, spiritual, and eternal life.—John i.

4. In him was life.—John xi. 25. I am the resurrection and the life.—Col. iii. 4. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear.

3. The doctrine of the Gospel, which points out the way of life.—John vi. 63. The words that I speak unto you, they are life. See TREE of LIFE. of LIFE.

1. Joy, comfort, and felicity.—Esther viii. 16. The Jews had light and gladness, and joy, and honour.—Psal. xvii. 11. Light is sown for the righteous.—Psal. xxii. 4. Unto the upright there ariseth light in the righteous.—Psal. exii. 4. Unto the upright there ariseth light in the darkness; that is, in affliction.

That which enlightens the mind: instruction, doctrines, &c., which illuminates and fills the mind with higher and more perfect knowledge; so that men are led to adopt a new and better mode of thinking, feeling, judging, and acting, and to entertain nobler views and higher hopes. 1 Thess. v. 5. Eph. v. 8. Children (or sons) of the light; that is, those who have been enlightened.

The author of moral light a moral teacher—Ve are the light of the

3. The author of moral light, a moral teacher.—Ye are the light of the world.—John v. 35. He was a burning and shining light; i.e. a distinguished and most zealous teacher of the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven. LION.

An emblem of fortitude and strength.—Rev. v. 5. The Lion of the tribe of Judah, means Jesus Christ, who sprang from this tribe, of which a lion was the emblem.

which a lion was the emblem.

2. The lion is seldom taken in an ill sense, except when his mouth or rapacity is in view.—Psal. xxii. 13. They gaped upon me with their mouths as a ravening and a roaring lion. See also 1 Pet. v. 8.

Locusts.—Antichristian corrupters of the Gospel.—Rev. ix. 3. There came out of the smoke locusts upon the earth. Dean Woodhouse re-came out of the smoke locusts upon the earth. Dean Woodhouse refers them to the Gnostic heretics; but most other commentators to the overwhelming forces of Mohammed.

Loins.—Gird up the loins of your mind: hold your minds in a state of constant preparation and expectation. The metaphor is derived from the customs of the Orientals: who, when they wish to apply themselves to any business requiring exertion, are obliged to bind their long flowing garments closely around them.

Mammon of unrighteousness.—Luke xvi. 9. Worldly riches. Mammon was the Syrian god of riches. MANNA.

 The bread of life. John vi. 26—50.
 Hidden manna.—The ineffable joys of immortality.—Rev. ii. 17.
 To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna. MEAT. See FLESH.

Moon.

 The Church.—Song of Sol. vi. 10. Fair as the moon.
 The Mosaic dispensation.—Rev. xii. 1. The moon under her feet. MOUNTIAN.

11. High mountains and lofty hills denote kingdoms, republics, states, and cities.—Isa. ii. 12, 14. The day of the Lord shall be.....upon all the high mountains. In Jer. li. 25. the destroying mountain means the Babylonish nation

The Babylonish nation.

2. Mountain of the Lord's House.—The kingdom of the Messiah.—
Isa ii. 2. It shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's House shall be established upon the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills, and all nations shall flow unto it. See Isa. xi. 9. and Dan. ii. 35. 45.

3. An obstacle to the spread of the Gospel. Isa. xl. 4.

MYSTERY.

1. A secret, something that is hidden, not fully manifest, not published A secret, something that is hidden, not fully manifest, not published to the world, though, perhaps, communicated to a select number. In this sense it occurs in 2. Thess. ii. 7. where Saint Paul, speaking of the Antichristian spirit, says, "The mystery of iniquity doth already work." The spirit of Antichrist has begun to operate, but the operation is latent and unperceived. In this sense also the same apostle applies the words "mystery," and "mystery of Christ," in a peculiar manner to the calling of the Gentiles (Eph. iii. 3—9.); "which in other generations was not made known to the sons of men, as it is now revealed to his holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit, that the Gentiles should be fellow-heirs and of the same body (namely with the Jews), and partakers of his promise in Christ by the Gospel." Compare also Rom. xvi. 25, 26. Eph. i. 9. iii. 9. vi. 19. Col. i. 26, 27.

27.
2. "A spiritual truth couched under an external representation or similitude, and concealed or hidden thereby, unless some explanation be given." To this import of the word our Saviour probably alluded when he said to his disciples, To you it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God; but, to them that are without, all these things are done in parables. (Mark iv. 11.) The secret was disclosed to the apostles, who obtained the spiritual sense of the similitude, while the multitude amused themselves with the parable, and sought no further. In this sense, mystery is used in the similitude, while the multitude amused themselves with the parable, and sought no further. In this sense, mystery is used in the following passages of the New Testament:—Rev. i. 20. The mystery, that is, the spiritual meaning, of the seven stars.—The seven stars are the angels of the seven churches; and the seven candlesticks are the seven churches. Again, xvii. 5. And upon her forehead a name written Mystery, Babylon the Great, that is, Babylon in a mystical sense, the mother of idolatry and abominations; and, in verse 7. I will tell thee the mystery, or spiritual signification, of the woman, and of the beast that carrieth her, &c. In this sense likewise the word | of the beast that carrieth her, &c. In this sense likewise the word mystery is to be understood in Eph. v. 32.

3. "Some sacred thing, hidden or secret, which is naturally unknown to human reason, and is only known by the revelation of God." Thus, in I Tim. ii. 16. we read—Without controversy great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached into the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received in into glory. "The mystery of godliness or of two world, received up into glory. "The mystery of godiness, or of true religion, consists in the several particulars here mentioned by the apostle—particulars, indeed, which it would never have entered into the heart of man to conceive (I Cor. ii. 9.), had not God accomplished them in fact, and published them by the preaching of his Gospel; but which, being thus manifested, are intelligible as facts to the meanest understanding." So in I Cor. xii. 2, the understanding of all mysteries denote the understanding of all the revealed truths of the Christian religion, which in 1 Tim. iii. 9. are called the mystery of faith, and of which, in 1 Cor. iv. 1., the apostles are called stewards of the mysteries of God.

4. The word mystery is used in reference to things or doctrines which remain wholly or in part incomprehensible, or above reason, after they are revealed. Such are the doctrines of the resurrection of the they are reveated. Such are the doctrines of the resurrection of the dead, that all shall not die at the last day, but that all shall be changed (1 Cor. xv. 51.), the incarnation of the Son of God, the doctrine of the Trinity, &cc. This is the ordinary or theological sense of the word mystery: it does not imply any thing contrary to reason, nor utterly unknown as to its being; but it signifies a matter, of whose existence we have clear evidence in the Scriptures, although the mode of such existence is incomprehensible, or above our reason. (Schleusner's and Parkhurs's Greek Lexicons to the New Testament, voce Murphor. Dr. Campbell's Translation of the Four Gospels, vol. i. pp. 298—306. See also J. G. Pfeiffer's Instit.

Herm. Sac. pp. 704-724.)

Naked.—Destitute of the image of God; not clothed with the garment of holiness and purity.—Rev. iii. 17. And knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked.

Names.—The persons called by them.—Acts i. 15. The number of the names were about an hundred and twenty.—Rev. iii. 4. Thou hast a few names even in Sardis.

Birth, origin, or nativity. Jews by nature. Gal. ii. 15.
The constitution and order of God in the natural world. Rom. i. 26. xi. 21. 24.

The native dispositions, qualities, properties, &c. of any person or thing. 2 Pet. i. 14. Partakers of a divine nature.—Eph. ii. 3. We were by nature, i. e. according to our natural disposition, when not enlightened and renewed by the influences of the Gospel, children of wrath.

A native feeling of decorum, a native sense of propriety, by which a person is withheld from needlessly receding from the customs of his country.—I Cor. xi. 14. Doth not nature itself—doth not your own native sense of decorum—teach you, that if a man have long hair, it is a shame unto him, viz. among the Greeks, to whom alone hair, it is a shame unto him, viz. among the Greens, to the the apostle was writing; and consequently he does not refer to the customs of the Hebrews. (Robinson's Lexicon, voice $\Phi_{VI(S)}$) customs of the Hebrews. (Adversity.—Rev. xxi. 25. There shall be no night there; that is, there shall be no more idolatry, no more intellectual darkness, no more adversity in the New Jerusalem; but all shall be peace, joy, happiness, and security.

Numbers.
Two; a few.—Isa. vii. 21. A man shall nourish two sheep.—1 Kings

Two; a lew.—isa. vii. 21. A man shall nourish two sheep.—I Kings xvii. 12. I am gathering two sticks.

Three or third.—Greatness, excellency, and perfection.—Isa. xix. 24. In that day shall Israel be the third with Egypt and Assyria; that is, as the prophet immediately explains, great, admired, beloved, and blessed.

Four .- Universality of the matters comprised therein.-The four corners of the earth denote all parts of the earth.—Jer. xlix.

6. Upon Elam (or Persia) will I bring the four winds from the four quarters of the earth; that is, all the winds. In Ezek. vii. 2. the four corners of the land, signify all parts of the land of Judea.

Seven .- A large and complete, yet uncertain and indefinite, number. Seven.—A large and complete, yet uncertain and indentact, name.

It is of very frequent occurrence in the Apocalypse, where we read of the seven spirits of God, seven angels, seven thunders, seven seals, &c. &c. [See Dr. Woodhouse on Rev. i. 4.]

Ten.—Many, as well as that precise number. In Gen. xxxi. 7.41. Ten times are many times; in Lev. xxvi. 26. ten women are many women. See also Dan. i. 20. Amos vi. 9. Zech. viii. 23.

OAKS of BASHAN.—The princes and nobles of Israel and Judah.—Isa.
ii. 13. The day of the Lord shall be...upon all the oaks of Bashan.

The wild olive; Man in a state of nature .--Rom. xi. 17. Thou being contrary to nature into a good olive-tree ...

PALMS.—Symbols of joy after a victory, attended with antecedent sufferings.—Rev. vii. 9. I beheld, and, lo, a great multitude ... clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands.

PARADISE.—The invisible residence of the blessed.—Rev. ii. 7. To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God .- Luke xxiii. 43. To day shalt thou be with me in paradise.

Passover.—Jesus Christ.—I Cor. v. 7. Christ our passover is sacrificed for us. On the spiritual import of this term, compare Vol. II. Chap. IV. § IV. 3.

PHYSICIAN.—The Saviour, curing the sins and sicknesses of the mind.—Matt. ix. 12. They that be whole, need not a physician; but they that are sick.

ILLAR OF COLUMN.

The chief prop of a family, city, or state. - Gal. ii. 9. James, Cephas, and John, who seemed to be pillars.

2. Pillar of iron.—The symbol of great firmness and duration.—Jer. i.

18. I have made thee....an iron pillar.

PLOUGHING and breaking up the ground.—The preparation of the heart by repentance.—Hos. x. 12. Break up your fallow-ground. See also Jer. iv. 3.

Poison.—Lies, error, and delusion.—Psal. cxl. 3. Adders' poison is under their lips.—Psal. lviii. 3, 4. They go astray as soon as they are born, speaking lies. Their poison is like the poison of a serpent.—Rom. iii 13. The poison of asps is under their lips; whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness.

Dignity, privilege, prerogative.—John i. 12. As many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God.

The emblem of power, or of honour and dignity, that is, a veil.—1 Cor. xi. 10. A woman ought to have power on her head, that is to be veiled, because of the spies, or evil-minded persons who were sent into the meetings of the Christians by their enemies, in order that they might be able to take advantage of any irregularity in their proceedings, or of any departure from established customs. The veil, worn by married women, was an emblem of subjection to the power of the husband. The marginal rendering of 1 Cor. xi. 10. is,—a covering, in sign that she is under the power of her husband.

Powers.—A certain order of angels; whether good, as in Col. i. 16. Eph. iii. 10. 1 Pet. iii. 22.; or evil, as in Col. ii. 15. and Eph. vi. 12.

(Parkhurst and Robinson, voce 'Egoursa')

Prince of the power of the air.—Eph. ii. 2. Satan. In this passage the air denotes the jurisdiction of fallen spirits.

RAIN (gentle).

1. The divine goodness.—Isa. xxvii. 3. xliv. 3.

Pure and heavenly doctrine.—Deut. xxxii. 2. especially the word of the Lord. Isa lv. 10, 11.

REAPERS.—The angels.—Matt. xiii. 39.

REGENERATION.

The melioration of all things, the new condition of all things in the reign of the Messiah, when the universe, and all that it contains, will be restored to their state of pristine purity and splendour.— Matt. xix. 28. In the regeneration, when the son of man shall sit on the throne of his glory. In a moral sense, renovation, that is, the change from a carnal to a

Christian life.—Tit. iii. 5. (Robinson, voce Пахід учетока.)
RICHES and TALENTS.—Gifts and graces from God.—Matt. xxv. 15.
To one he gave five talents, &c. See also Luke xix. 13, &c.

 An overflowing river.—Invasion by an army.—Isa lix. 19. The enemy shall come in like a flood.—Jer. xlvi. 7, 8. Who is this that cometh up as a flood, whose waters are moved as the rivers? Egypt comean up as a 1100d, whose waters are moved as the rivers? Egypt riseth up like a flood, and his waters are moved like the rivers: and he saith, I will go up, and will cover the earth; I will destroy the city and the inhabitants thereof. See also Isa. xxviii. 2. Jer. xlvii. 2. Amos ix 5. Nahum i. 4.

2. A river being frequently the barrier or boundary of a nation or country, the drying of it up is a symbol of evil to the adjoining land; and signifies that its enemies will make an easy conquest of it when they find no water to impede their progress. Thus, Isaiah, foretelling the conquest of Cyrus and the destruction of the Babylonian market by these progress. nordering the conquest of Cyrus and the destruction of the Badylonian monarchy, has these words:—That saith to the deep, Be dry; and I will dry up thy rivers.—Isa. xi. 15. The Lond shall utterly destroy the tongue of the Egyptian Sea (that part of the land of Egypt, which was inclosed among the mouths of the Nile); and with his mighty wind shall he shake his hand over the river, and shall smite it in the seven streams, and make [men] go over dry-shod. See also Isa. xix. 6. and Zech. x. 11.

lsa. XIX. b. and Zech. X. II.

A clear river is the symbol of the greatest good.—Psal. XXXVI. 8.

They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of thy house; and thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasures. For with thee is the fountain of life.—Rev. XXII. 1. He showed me a clear river of water of life, (that is, the inexhaustible and abundant happiness of the inhabitants of the New Jerusalem,) bright as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and the Lamb. Its clearness indicates their holiness and peace; and the brightness of its shining like crystal, the glorious life of those who drink of it.

Rock.

A defence, or place of refuge.—Isa. xvii. 10. Thou hast forgotten the God of thy salvation, and hast not been mindful of the rock of thy strength.—Psal. xviii. 2. The Lord is my rock.
 A quarry, figuratively the patriarch or first father of a nation; who is, as it were, the quarry whence the men of such nation must have proceeded.—Isa. li. 1. Look unto the rock whence ye are hewn, that is, to Abraham and Sarah, whose descendants ye are.
 An unfruitful hearer.—Luke viii. 6. Some fell upon a rock, and as soon as it sprang up, it withered away. See the interpretation of Christ himself, in verse 13.

4. Rock giving water to the Israelites. (Exod. xvii. 6. Numb. xx. 10, 11.) Christ.—I Cor. x. 4. They drank of that spiritual rock that followed them, and that rock was Christs.

Rod or Wand.—Power and rule.—Psal. ii. 9. Thou shall break them in pieces with a rod of iron.

SACRIFICE.

The thing sacrificed; a victim.—Eph. v. 2. A sacrifice to God. See Heb. ix. 26. x. 12. and also in many other passages.
 Whatever is exhibited or undertaken in honour of God or in reference to his will: as,

(1.) Piety, devotedness.—1 Pet. ii. 5. Spiritual sacrifices.
(2.) The praises of God and works of charity to men. See Heb. xiii. 15, 16.
(3.) Virtuous conduct, correct deportment.—Rom. xii. 1.

your bodies a living sacrifice.
(4.) Exertions for the support of Christian ministers and of the Christian religion.—Phil. ii. 17. If I be offered upon the sacrifice and service of your faith.

Saltr.—Sound doctrines, such as preserves the world from corruption.—Matt. v. 13. Ye are the salt of the earth.—Col. iv. 6. Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt.

ND of the sea.—An aggregate body of innumerable individuals.— Their widows are increased above the sand of the seas.—Gen. xxii. 17. I will multiply thy seed....as the sand which is upon the sea-

SCORCHING Heat. See HEAT.

Sea.
 The Gentile world.—Isa. lx. 5. The abundance of the sea shall be converted. See also Rev. viii. 8. and Dr. Woodhouse thereon.

[Apocalypse, p. 213.]

The great river Euphrates, Nile, &c.—Isa. xxi. 1. The desert of the sea, means the country of Babylon, which was watered by the Euphrates.—Jer. li. 36. I will dry up her sea, and make her springs dry. this refers to the stratagem by which Cyrus diverted the course of the river and captured Babylon.—Ezek. xxxii. 2. Thou art as a whale in the sea; the prophet is speaking of the king of Egypt, through which the Nile flowed. See Waves.

3. Sea of glass.—Rev. iv. 6. The blood of the Redeemer, which alone cleanses man from sin. It is called a sea, in allusion to the large vessel in the temple, out of which the priests drew water to wash themselves, the sacrifices, and the instruments of which they made use, for sacrificing.—1 Kings vii. 23. See also SAND and WAVES.

SEAL-SEALING.

 Preservation and security.—Sol. Song iv. 12. A fountain sealed, is a fountain carefully preserved from the injuries of weather and beasts, that its waters may be preserved good and clean.

2. Secresy and privacy, because men usually seal up those things which they design to keep secret. Thus a book sealed, is one whose contents are secret, and are not to be disclosed until the removal of the seal. In Isa. xxix. 11. a vision like unto a book sealed, is a vision not yet understood.

vision not yet understood.

3. Completion and perfection, also authority; because the putting of a seal to any decree, will, or other instrument in writing, completes the whole transaction.—Ezek. xxviii. 12. Thou (the King of Tyre) sealest up the sum full of wisdom and perfect in beauty; that is, thou lookest upon thyself as having arrived at the highest pitch of wisdom and glory. See Neh. ix. 8. Esther viii. 8.

4. Restraint or hinderance.—Job xxxvii. 7. He sealeth up the hand of every men; that is, the Almighty restrains their recover.

of every man; that is, the Almighty restrains their power—Job ix.
7. Which sealeth up the stars; that is, restrains their influences.
5. Exclusive property in a thing—Anciently, it was the custom to seal goods purchased; each person having his peculiar mark, which ascertained the property to be his own. Hence, the seal of God is His mark, by which he knoweth them that are His. (2 Tim. ii. 19.) Under the law of Moses, circumcision is represented to be the seal which separated the people of God from the heathen who did not call upon his name. (Rom iv. 11.) And in this sense the sacrament of baptism succeeding to circumcision, was called by the fathers of the church the seal of God: but in the Gospel, this divine seal is more accurately described to be the Holy Spirit of God. They who have this spirit are marked as his (2 Cor. i. 22. Eph. i. 13. iv. 30.) Our Lord Jesus Christ is represented as eminently possessing this mark. (John vi. 27.) Generally, all who name the name of Christ and depart from iniquity, are said to be thus divinely sealed. (2 Tim. ii. 19.) By the seal of the living God, mentioned in Rev. vii. 2., is signified that impression of the Holy Spirit upon the heart of man, which preserves in it the principles of pure faith, producing the fruits of piety and virtue. This is the seal which marks the real Christian as the property of the Almighty. In Rev. vii. 3. 4. the sealed mark is said to be impressed upon the foreheads of the servants of God, either because on this conspicuous part of the person, distinguishing ornaments were worn by the eastern nations; or because slaves anciently were marked upon their foreheads, as the property of their masters. [Dean Woodhouse on Rev. which separated the people of God from the heathen who did not heads, as the property of their masters. [Dean Woodhouse on Rev. Vii. 2, 3.]
STED.—The Word of God.—Luke viii. 11.

SERPENT.— Satan, the enemy of souls.—Rev. xii. 9. That old serpent, called the Devil and Satan, which deceived the whole world.—2 Cor. xi. 3. The serpent beguiled Eve through his subtility.

SEVEN. See Numbers.

Shadow.—Defence, protection. In the sultry eastern countries this metaphor is highly expressive of support and protection.—Numb. xiv. 9. Their defence (Heb. צלם Tsilam, shadow) is departed from them. Compare also Psal. xci. 1. cxxi. 5. Isa. xxx. 2. xxxii. 2. and li. 16. The Arabs and Persians employ the same word to denote the same thing, using these expressions:—" May the Shadow of thy prosperity be extended."—May the Shadow of thy prosperity be spread over the heads of thy well-wishers."—" May thy protection never be removed from thy head; may God extend thy Shadow externally." [Dr. A. Clarke on Numb. xvi. 9.] SHEEP-SHEPHERD.

1. Sheep under a Shepherd. The people under a king.—Zech. xiii. 7.

Sheep under a Shepherd.—The people under a king.—Zech. xiii. 7. Smite the shepherd; and the sheep shall be scattered.
 The disciples of Christ, who is their shepherd; the church of Christ, consisting of all true believers in Him their Shepherd.—John x. 11—14. I am the good shepherd; the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep. I.... know my sheep.—I Pet. ii. 25. Ye.... are now returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souts.
 Lost or straying sheep represent persons not yet converted, but wandering in sin and error.—Matt. x. 6. xv. 24. The lost sheep of the house of Israel.—I Pet. ii. 25. Ye were as sheep going astray. Compare also Matt. ix. 36. and Mark vi. 34.

Compare also Matt. ix. 36. and Mark vi. 34. SHIELD

1. A defence.—Psal. xviii. 2. The Lord is my buckler or shield. See Psal. xxxiii. 20.

2. Faith, by which we are enabled to resist the fiery darts of the wicked. Eph. vi. 16.

Ships of Tarshish; merchants, men enriched by commerce, and abounding in all the elegancies and luxuries of life, particularly the merchants of Tyre and Sidon.—Isa. ii. 12—16. The day of the Lord of Hosts shall be....upon all the ships of Tarshish.—Isa. xxiii.

1. Howl, O ye ships of Tarshish.

1. The preparation of the Gospel of peace.—Ech. vi. 15.

Shoes.—The preparation of the Gospel of peace.—Eph. vi. 15.

SILENCE

13. Bringing to silence, or putting to silence.—Utter destruction. Isa:

xv. 1. As if Moab is laid waste, and brought to silence.—Jer. viii.

14. The Lord our God hath put us to silence.

2. A symbol of praying.—Luke i. 9, 10.

Reigning, ruling, and judging.—In Judge v. 10. Ye that sit in judgment, are the magistrates or judges. The sitting on a throne, which occurs so very frequently in the Scriptures, invariably means to reign.

With other adjuncts, sitting has a different signification: as,

1.) To sit upon the earth or dust, (Isa. iii. 26. xlvii. 1. Lam. ii. 10. Ezek. xxvi. 16.) or on a dunghill, signifies to be in extreme misery. (2.) To sit in darkness (Psal. cvii. 10. Isa. xlii. 7.) is to be in prison and slavery.

To sit as a widow (Isa. xlvii. 8.) is to mourn as a widow

SLAVE.—One who has no property in himself, but is bought by another. Such are all mankind, whom Christ has redeemed from the slavery of sin.—1 Cor. vi. 20. Ye are bought with a price. See Deut. vii. 8. Isa. Ixi. 1.

SLEFF.—Death.—Dan. xii. 2. Many that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake.

SODOM and GOMARRAH,—Any apostate city or people: or the wicked world at large.—Isa. i. 10. Hear the word of the LORD, ye rulers of Sodom; give hear unto the law of our God, ye people of Gomorrah.

See Rev. xi. 8.

Soldier.—A Christian who is at war with the world, the flesh, and the devil.—2 Tim. ii. 3. Endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ.

Christ.

Sores, or Ullers, symbolically denote sins; because, according to the Hebrew idiom and notions, to heal signifies to pardon sins; and to pardon a sin is equivalent to healing.—2 Chron. xxx. 20. The pious monarch, Hezekiah, having prayed that God would excuse and pardon those who had eaten the passover without being sufficiently purified, the Lord hearkened to Hezekiah, and healed the people.—Isa. liii. 5. By his stripes we are healed. In Isa. i. 6. Wounds, bruises, and sores, are sins; the binding up of them signifies repentance; and the healing up, remission or forgiveness.

South.—Judwa.—Ezek. xx. 46. Set thy face towards the south, and drop [thy word] towards the south.—Judwa lay to south of Chaldwa, where the prophet Ezekiel stood.

South Field.—Ezek. xx. 46. Prophesy against the forest of the South South field.-Ezek. xx. 46. Prophesy against the forest of the South field; that is, against Jerusalem, in which there were good and bad men, as there are trees in a forest.

Sower.—A preacher of the word.—Matt. xiii. 3. A sower went forth to sow. See verse 39.

SPEAKING. See VOICE, 2.

I. A ruler or conqueror.—Numb. xxiv. 17. There shall come a star A ruler or conqueror.—Numb. XXV. 11. I nere sain come a sur-out of Jacob and a sceptre shall arise out of Israel, and shall smite the corners of Moab, and shall destroy all the children of Sheth.—See an exposition of this prophecy in the note to p. 208 of this volume.

2. The rulers of the church.—Rev. i. 20. The seven stars are the angels of the seven churches.

3. Glorified saints .- 1 Cor. xv. 41. One star differeth from another star in glory.

4. Wandering stars.—Jude. 13. Wicked apostates, that go from light

 Head stone of the corner—Jesus Christ. See Corner Stone.
 Stone of stumbling, (1 Pet. ii. 7.) spoken of Jesus Christ; who is termed a stone of stumbling, that is, an occasion of ruin to the Jews, since they took offence at his person and character, and thereby brought destruction and misery upon themselves.

Stones.—Believers who are built upon the true foundation, the Lord Jesus Christ.—I Pet. ii. 5. Ye also as lively (or living) stones are built up a spiritual house.

xxxi. 26. I will take away the stony heart.

5. Stone.—An idol of stone. Habak ii. 19. Woe unto him that saith unto the wood, "Awake!" and to the dumb stone, "Arise!" and it shall teach.

White stone. -A full pardon and acquittal .--Rev. ii. 17. him a white stone. See an explanation of the custom alluded to, in Vol. 11. p. 56.

7. Precious stones (1 Cor. iii. 12.), the doctrines of the Christian religion, or the mode of teaching them.

The Lord God.—Psal. lxxxiv. 11. The Lord God is a Sun.
 Sun of Rightconsness.—Jesus Christ.—Mal. iv. 2. The Sun of RIGATEOUSNESS shall arise with healing in his wings

Among the various hieroglyphics discovered by Dr. Richardson in the ruins of the ancient temple of Tentyra or Dendera, in Upper Egypt, is one which may illustrate this expression of the prophet—"Immediately over the centre of the door-way," says he, " is the beautiful Egyptian ornament, usually called the globe, with serpent and wings, emblematic of the glorious sun, poised in the airy firmament of heaven, supported and directed in his course by the eternal wisdom of the Deity. The sublime phraseology of Scripture, The Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in his wings, could not be more accurately or more emphatically represented to the human eye, than by this elegant device." [Dr. Richardson's Travels along the Mediterranean, &c. vol. i. p. 187.]

3. Sun and moon.—The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood. (Joel. ii. 31. Acts ii. 20.) A figurative representation of a total eclipse, in which the sun is entirely darkneed, and the moon assumes a bloody hue: it signifies the fall of the civil and ecclesiastical state in Judæa.

Swing .- Wicked and unclean people .- Matt. vii. 6. Neither cast ye your pearls before swine. Sword.

Death and destruction. See Ezek. xxi.—This symbol occurs so re-peatedly in the Scriptures, and is, besides, so well known, as to render more examples unnecessary.

2. Sword of the Spirit — The word of God. Eph. vi. 17. Heb. iv. 12.

TABERNACLE.—The body of man.—2 Cor. v. 1. We know that if our earthly house of [this] tabernacle were dissolved.—2 Pet. i. 13, 14. I must shortly put off this tabernacle.

TALENTS: See RICHES.

TALENTS. See RICHES.
TARES.—The children of the wicked one.—Matt. xiii. 38.

TARSHISH. See Ships.

TEETH.—The symbols of cruelty or of a devouring enemy.—Prov. xxx. 14. There is a generation whose teeth are as swords; and their jawteeth as knives to devour the poor from off the earth, and the needy from among men. See also Deut. xxxii. 24. Psal lvi. 6. lviii. 6. EN. See NUMBERS.

THIRST. See HUNGER.

The cares, riches, and pleasures of life.—Luke viii. 14. That which fell among thorns, are they, which, when they have heard the word, go forth, and are choked with cares, and riches, and pleasures of life.

There and him word have a sixth of the care of life.

Thorns and briers; wicked, perverse, and untractable persons.— Ezek. ii. 6. Son of man, be not afraid of them...though briers and thorns be with thee

THREE OF THIRD. See NUMBERS

Three or Third. See Numbers.

Threshing.—Destruction.—Jer. li. 33. Babylon is like a threshing-floor: it is time to thresh her; that is, to subdue and destroy her power. See Isa. xli. 15. Amos i. 3. Micah iv. 13. Hab. iii. 12.

Throne.—Kingdom, government.—Gen. xli. 40. Only in the throne will I be greater than thou. In 2 Sam. iii. 10. kingdom and throne are synonymus. To translate the kingdom from the house of Saul—and to set up the throne of David over Israel. The setting of the throne in 2 Sam. vii. 12, 13. 16. signifies the settling or establishment of the government in peace; and the enlargement of the throne, in 1 Kings i. 37. compared with 47., implies a great accession of power and dominions. and dominions.

THUNDER.—The voice of God.—Psal. xxix. 3. The voice of the Lord is upon the waters; the God of glory thundereth. In Rev. x. 4. the seven thunders may mean either a particular prophecy, or perhaps seven distinct prophecies, uttered by seven voices, loud as thunders.

Towers and Fortresses; defenders and protectors, whether by counsel or by strength, in peace or in war.—Isa ii. 12. 15. The day of the Lord of Hosts shall be.....upon every high tower, and every fenced wall (or fortress).

TRAVAILING with child.

 A state of anguish and misery.—Jer. iv. 31. I have heard a voice as of a woman in travail, the anguish as of her that bringeth forth her first child, the voice of the daughter of Zion.—Jer. xiii. 21. Shall not sorrows overtake thee as a woman in travail? See also Isa. xxvi. 17, 18. lxvi. 7. Jer. xxx. 6. 7.

The sorrow of tribulation or persecution.—Mark xiii. 8. These are the beginnings of sorrows, literally, the pains of a woman in travail.

See 1. Thess. v.

TREAD under, or trample upon.—To overcome and bring under subjection.—Psal. lx. l2. Through God we shall do valiantly; for it is he that shall tread down our enemies. See Isa. x. 6 xiv 25. VOL. II.

4. Heart of stone.—A hard, stubborn, and unbelieving heart.—Ezek.

XXXII. 26. I will take away the stony heart.

5. Stone.—An idol of stone. Habak, ii. 19. Woe unto him that saith Ligive to eat of the tree of life. See a description of it in Rev. XXII.

2. 14., and an excellent sermon of Bishop Horne's Works, vol. iv. Sermon iii. on the Tree of Life.

1. Men in general, fruitful and unfruitful.—Psal. i. 3. He (the good man) shall be like a tree, planted by rivers of water.—Matt. m. 10. Every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit, is hewn down, and cast into the fire.

A great tree.—A king or monarch. See Dan. iv. 20—23.

The nobles of a kingdom.—Isa. x. 18, 19. It shall consume the

And the rest of the trees of his forest shall be few. [See Cedars, Oaks.] As trees denote great men and princes, so boughs, branches, or sprouts, denote their offspring. Thus, in Isa, vi. 1., Jesus Christ, in respect of his human nature, is styled a rod of the stem of Jesse, branch out of his roots; that is, a prince arising from the family of David.

Veil. of the Temple.—The body of Christ opening the kingdom of heaven by his death, when the veil of the temple was rent.—Matt. xxvii. 51. The veil of the temple was rent in twain.—Heb. x. 20. By a new and living way, which he has consecrated for us through the veil, that is to say, his flesh.

The Jewish Church.—Psal. lxxx. 8. Thou broughtest a vine out of Egypt. See also verse 14. Jer. ii. 21. Ezek. xix. 10. Hos. x. 1.
 Christ the head of the church.—John xv. 1. I am the true vine.
 VINEYARD.—The church of Israel.—Isa. v. 1—7. The vineyard of the Lord of Hosts is the house of Israel.

VIPER.—One who injures his benefactors. Matt. iii. 7. xii. 34. generation of vipers, that is descendants of an ungrateful race. Voice.

1. Voice of the bridegroom.—The festivity of a wedding, and the expressions of joy which are uttered on such occasions.—Jer. vii. 34. Then will I cause to cease from the cities of Judah, and from the streets of Jerusalem, the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bride; The same expression also occurs in Jer. xvi 9. xxv. 10. xxxiii. 11. and John iii. 29.

Speaking with a faint voice, denotes the being in a weak and low condition.—Isa. xxix. 4. Thou shall be brought down, and shall speak out of the ground; and thy speech shall be low out of the dust.
 Voice of the Lord. See Thunder.

Walking among, or in the midst.—Watchfulness and protection.— Lev. xxvi. 12. I will walk among you, and will be your God. Wall.—Stability and safety.—Zech. ii. 5. I will be unto her a wall of fire round about; that is, I will defend her from all enemics without, by my angels, as so many flames of fire surrounding her. Wand. See Rod.

WANDERING Stars. See STARS.

Washing with water.—Purification from sin and guilt.—Psal. li. 2. 7.
Wash me throughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin. Wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.

WATER.

1. The purifying grace of the Holy Spirit.—John iii. 5. Except a man

1. The purifying grace of the Holy Spirit.—be cannot enter into the kingdom be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God. See also Psal. li. 2. Living water.—The word of the Gospel.—John iv. 10. He would have given thee living water.

Troubles and afflictions.—Psal. lxix. 1. Save me, O God: for the waters are come in unto my soul.

Waters are conte in unio my sout.

2. A great multitude of people.—Isa. viii. 7. The Lord bringeth up upon them the waters of the river, strong and many, i. e. army of the king of Assyria; whose overwhelming force is compared to the waters of the great, rapid, and impetuous river Euphrates. See Rev. xvii. 15.

The Blessings of the Gospel.-Isa. lv. 1. Ho! every one that 3. The Blessings of the waters. thirstelh, come ye to the waters.

Waves of the Sea.—Numerous armies of the heathens marching Waves of the Sea.—Numerous armies of the heathens marching of God.—Psal. Ixv. 7. Which stillest the noise of God.—Psal. Ixv. 7.

waves of the sea.—Numerous armies of the neathers marching against the people of God.—Psal. lxv. 7. Which stillest the noise of the seas, the noise of their waves. See also Psal. lxxix. 9. and xeiii. 3, 4.—Jude 13. Raging waves of the sea.

Week.—Seven years.—Dan. ix. 24. Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people; that is, seventy weeks of years, or four hundred and ninetic verse.

minety years.

WHEAT.—Good seed, the children of the kingdom. Matt. xiii. 38.

WHITE. See GARMENTS, 1.; HORSE, 3.; STONE, 5.

WILDERNESS

All manner of desolation.—Isa xxvi. 10. The defenced city shall be desolate, and the habitation forsaken and left like a wilderness. Jer. xxii. 6. Surely I will make thee a wilderness [and] cities [which] are not inhabited. See also Hos. ii. 3.

This world, through which all real Christians pass, and undergo all the trials of the Hebrews in their way to the heavenly Canaan.—I Cor. x. 5. 6. They were overthrown in the wilderness. Now these the wilderness are any expenses. Let Xii. 18. It will make the wilderness.

things were our examples.- Isa. xli. 18. I will make the wilderness a pool of water.

Violent wind.—Destruction.—Jer. li. 1. 1 will raise up against Babylon...a destroying wind.—Jer. iv. 11, 12. A dry wind of the high places in the wilderness..even a full wind from those places shall come

2. The four winds.—General destruction.—Jer. xlix. 36. Upon Elam will I bring the four winds; from the four quarters of heaven. See also Dan. vii. 2. viii. 8. Rev. vii. 1. See Air. Upon Elam Wine, when mentioned together with corn and oil (as it very fre-

I gave her corn, and wine, and oil. Se it very frequently is), denotes all kinds of temporal good things.—Hos. ii. 8.

I gave her corn, and wine, and oil. See Joel ii. 19. Psal. iv. 7.

As the choicest heavenly blessings are frequently represented in the Scriptures by the salutary effects of wine: so, from the noxious and intoxicating qualities of that liquor,—(which anciently was mixed with bitter, and stunghing, juradiants, and constitutions.) and intoxicating qualities of that induor,—(which anciently was mixed with bitter and stupefying ingredients, and given to male-factors who were about to suffer death,)—is borrowed a most tremendous image of the wrath and indignation of Almighty God.—Psal. lxxv. 8. In the hand of the Lord there is a cup, and the wine is red; it is full of mixture, &c.—Psal. lx. 3. Thou hast made us to drink the wine of astonishment. See Jer. xxv. 15. Rev. xiv. 10. xvi. 19.

WINE-PRESS.—Treading the wine-press, from their custom of pressing grapes, signifies destruction attended with great slaughter.—Lament. 1.15. The Lond hath trodden under foot all my mighty men in the midst of me; he hath called an assembly against me to crush my young men; the Lond hath trodden the virgin, the daughter of Judah, as is a wine-press. See Lea Lyiii 2.2

as in a wine-press. See Isa. lxiii. 3.

Winds.
Protection.—Psal. xvii. 8. Hide me under the shadow of thy wings.
See Psal. xxxvi. 7. and xci. 4.
Wings, when used to fly upwards, are emblems of exaltation.—Isa.
xl. 31. They shall mount up with wings as eagles; that is, they shall be highly exalted.

Wolf.—A thief, or religious impostor; a devourer of the church.—Luke x. 3. I send you forth as lambs among wolves.—John x. 12. He that is a hireling.... seeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth: and the wolf scattereth them.

WOMAN.

A. A city, a state, or body politic, or the inhabitants thereof.—The daughter of Tyre in Psal. xlv. 12, of Babylon in Psal. xxxvii. 8, and of Jerusalem in 2 Kings xix. 21, signifies the inhabitants of those cities, respectively. The daughter of Jerusalem, when virtuous, is honoured with the high appellation of the espoused of God in Isa. liv. 1. 5., and Jer. xxxi. 4. When wicked and idolatrous she is styled the harlot, the adulteress. See Adulterress.

2. The true church of Christ.—Rev. xii. 1. A woman clothed with the sun.

WRITE .- To publish or notify. This was the first intention of writing; and, in the earliest ages, no writings were made but upon pillars or and, in the earliest ages, no writings were made but upon pillars or monuments, merely to notify things.—Jer. xxii. 30. Write this man childless; that is, publish it, and let all men know that he shall have no child to succeed him upon the throne. For it appears from 1 Chron. iii. 17, 18. and Matt. i. 12., that Jeconiah (of whom the prophet is speaking) had children; but being born probably after he was carried to Babylon, where he lived many years a captive, none of them ever succeeded to the royal authority. See 2 Kings YOKE.

1. Oppressive bondage.—Deut. xxviii. 48. He shall put a yoke of iron upon thy neck, until he shall have destroyed thee. See Jer. xxviii.

14. In Gal. v. 1, the yoke of bondage means the burdensome ceremonies of the Mosaic law, from which the Christian law of liberty has delivered us.

2. Punishment for sin.-Lam. i. 14. The yoke of my transgressions s bound by his hand.

3. Those useful restraints, which arise from a sense of the duty which Those useful restraints, which arise from a sense of the duty which we owe to God, and the obedience we ought to pay to his laws.—Lam. iii. 27. It is good for a man to bear the yoke in his youth.

The doctrines and precepts of Jesus Christ, and the temper, dispositions, and duties which flow from them.—Matt. xi. 29, 30. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.—Quesnel's remark upon the last sentence is not more beautiful than devout. "How easy and sweet is it, to serve Christ even in bearing his cross! How hard and painful is the slavery of the world, of sin and of our own passions, even with all their false pleasures! That satisfaction, peace, and comfort, which grace gives here below, and that which hope encourages us to expect in heaven, make a Christian full amends for all his pains in subduing his passions, and in opposing the world.... A yoke, which Christ his passions, and in opposing the world... A yoke, which Christ takes together with us,—can that be uneasy? A burden, which He bears in us by His Spirit,—can that be heavy? Come, then, taste and know by experience how sweet the Lord is, and how worthy His yoke is to be chosen and loved!"

GENERAL INDEX

MATTERS IN VOLUMES I. AND II.

ABBREVIATIONS in manuscripts, account of, I. 221.

Abraham, predictions concerning, and their fulfilment, I. 122, 123. His posterity, in what sense as numerous as the stars of heaven for multitude, 421.

Abyssinian (Ancient) version of the Old and New Testaments, 1.

Accents (Hebrew), uses of, I. 192.

Accommodation, theory of, shown to be unfounded, I. 324.

Acamets, notice of, I. 223. note.

Accomets, notice of, I. 223. note.

Acrostic poetry of the Hebrews, I. 381.

Acts of the Apostles:—Title, II. 318. By whom written, ibid. Genuineness and authenticity, ibid. Scope, ibid. Chronology, 319.

Analysis of this book, 320. Observations on its style, ibid. Importance of this book, as an evidence for the truth of Christianity, 320, 321. Confirmation of its veracity by Josephus, I. 80. Concidence between it and the apostolic epistles, 50, 51.

Acts of the Scnate, what, I. 81. Appeals made to them by the first Christians, as evidence, 82.

Adjunct. metanyray of, what, I. 360, 361.

Christians, as evidence, 62.

Adjunct, metonyiny of, what, I. 360, 361.

Advantages, peculiar to the Christian revelation, a proof of its superiority over all other religions, and that it is from God, I. 177—180.

Adverbs (emphatic), instances of, I. 328.

Affections, the moral government of, enforced in the Gospel, I. 153,

Age of Hebrew manuscripts, how ascertained, I. 217.

Agreement of ancient manuscripts and versions, a proof of the uncorrupted preservation of the Scriptures, I. 54, 55. Of quotations by Christian writers, a like proof, 55.

Alexander of Pontus, fabulous miracles recorded of, exposed, I. 117.

Alexanderian Manuscript, account of, I. 222—224. Fac-simile of it, Alexandrian Version. See Septuagint.

Alexandrian Version. See Septuagint.

Alexandrian Version of the New Testament, account of, I. 205.

Allegorical Sense, I. 323.

Allegorical Sense, I. 324.

Allegorical Sense, I. 364. Different species of, ibid. Rules for the interpretation of allegories, 364, 365.

Allusions to the Old Testament in the New, I. 312. 318.

Alphabetical Poems of the Hebrews, account of, I. 381.

America, observations on the peopling of, I. 76.

Ammonian Sections, what, I. 214. Ammonian dialect, 273.

Amos (the prophet), account of, II. 259, 260. Occasion of his prophecy, 260. Its scope, ibid. Synopsis of its contents, ibid. Observations on his style, ibid.

Analogy of languages, defined, I. 340, 341. Use of grammatical analogy of interpreting Scripture, 341. Of kindred languages, 341, 342. Foundation of analogy in all languages, 342. Analogy of Scripture, 330—333. Analogy of faith defined, 342. Its importance in studying the sacred writings, 342, 343. Rules for investigating the analogy of faith, 343, 344.

Ananias, why not acknowledged as high-priest by St. Paul, I. 50.

Ancestors put for posterity, I. 359.

Antelliuvians, longevity of, confirmed by heathen writers, I. 71.

Anteditivians, longevity of, confirmed by heather writers, I. 71.

Ante-Hieronymian Version of the Bible, I. 275.

Anthropopathy, nature of, I. 362.

Avouraties, propriety of the title of, given by St. Paul to Sergius Paulus, I. 90.

Antiquities (Biblical), importance of, to the study of the Sacred Writings, I. 350. Cautions in applying them, 350, 351.

Antitype, what, I. 385. Rules for the application of types to antitypes, 386, 387.

types, 386, 387.

Apamean Medal confirms the Mosaic account of the Deluge, I. 88.

Apacalypse. See Revelation of St. John.

Apocrypha, derivation of the term, I. 435.

1. The Apocrypha Books of the Old Testament, why rejected from the canon of Scripture, I. 435, 436. Their uses, 344. 436. Analysis of these books, II. 289—293. Supposed quotations from them in the New Testament, I. 318. Actual value of these productions, 436.

2. Apocryphal Books of the New Testament, I. 437. Enumeration of these writings, ibid. External Evidence to show that they were never considered as inspired or canonical, 437, 438. INTERNAL EVIDENCE, 438—442. These apocryphal books are so far from affecting the credibility of the genuine books of the New Testament, that the latter are confirmed by them, 47, 48. 442.

48. 442.

Apollonius, of Tyana, fabulous miracles ascribed to, exposed, I. 118.

Apostles and evangelists, credibility of. See Credibility and Inspiration. On the descent of the Holy Spirit upon them, I. 447, 448.

Apostleic Fathers, testimonies of, to the authenticity of the New Testament, I. 44, 45. In what manner they quoted the Scriptures, 41. Force of their testimony, 45.

Aquila's version of the Old Testament, I. 268, 269.

Arabic versions of the Old and New Testament, I. 274, 275. Of the Aradic versions of the Old and New Testament, 1. 274, 275. Of the Samaritan Pentateuch, 204.

Aramaan Language, and its dialects, I. 199.

Aramaisms of the New Testament, I. 198.

Arelas, a king of Arabia Petræa, why at war with Herod the Great, I. 159. I. 50.

Aristeas's fabulous account of the Septuagint version exposed, I. Arisecas's another account of the Septuagint Version exposed, 1. 264, 265. Fabulous miracles related of Aristeas the Proconnesian exposed, 117.

Ark of Noah, dimensions of, I. 75.

Armenian version of Scriptures, I. 275.

Arnobius, testimony of, to the genuineness of the New Testament

I. 42.

Article (Greek), elucidations of, 1. 327, 328.

Articles of faith, not to be established from single, obscure, or figurative texts, I. 395.

rative texts, I. 395.

Arts, the late invention and progress of, a confirmation of the credibility of the Mosaic History of the Deluge, I. 73, 74.

Asaph, Psalms ascribed to, II. 239.

Ascension, Odes of, II. 243.

Ascension of Jesus Christ, circumstances of, considered, I. 446.

Asher (Rabbi Aaron Ben), Codex of, I. 203.

Atheists, principles of, contrasted with those of the Gospel. I. 176, 177. Effects of, in republican France, 25, 26.

Athenagoras, testimony of, to the genuineness of the New Testament, I. 43.

Athens, miserable condition of the women et I. 19 and 5.

ment, 1. 43.

Athens, miserable condition of the women at, I. 19. note 7. Origin of the altar erected at, to "The unknown God," 90. St. Luke's and St. Paul's account of the Athenians confirmed by Demosthenes, 80.: and by ancient inscriptions, 91. Remarks on Paul's admirable address to them, II. 326, 327.

admirable address to them, II. 326, 327.

Atonement, true notion of, unknown to the heathen, I. 17. Though they felt the necessity of an atonement for sin, 70, 71. The doctrine of, as set forth in the New Testament, 150.

Authenticity defined, I. 28. Of the Old and New Testaments proved, 28—52. Recapitulation of this argument, 184. Especially of Matt. i. and ii. and Luke i. and ii., II. 299—302. 309. Of Luke viii. 27—39., 310.; and xxii. 44., 310. Of John vii. 53. and viii. 1—11., 315. Examination of the authenticity of 1 John v. 7., 366—375.

Author, put for his book or writings, I. 359. Importance of knowing, 348.

BABEL, erection of the tower of, confirmed by heathen testimony,

Babylon, prophecies concerning, and their fulfilment, I. 126.
Balaam's ass speaking, remarks on, I. 421.
Baptism, observance of, a proof of the credibility of the New Testament, I. 67. Barnabas, testimony of, to the genuineness and authenticity of the New Testament, I. 44.
Baruch, apocryphal book of, II. 391, 392.
Bath-Kol, notice of, II. 256.

Bel and the Dragon, apocryphal history of, II. 292. Benefits conferred by Christianity, a proof that it is from God, I. 169

Bethlehem, massacre of the infants at, I. 419.

Bethlekem, massacre of the infants at, I. 419.

Bible, a perfect rule of faith and practice, I. 186. Moral qualifications for studying it advantageously, 186, 187. In what order it should be read, 187. Refutation of the assertion that the Bible is the most immoral book in the world, 166. Does not inculcate a spirit of intolerance and persecution, 166, 167. Harmony between all its parts, a proof of its divine origin and authority, 167, 168. As also its preservation, 168. See Scriptures, Versions, Testament (Old), and Testament (New).

Blind man restored to sight, remarks on the miracle of, I. 104, 105.

Blount (Mr.), absurd and contradictory notions of, on religion and Blount (Mr.), absurd and contradictory notions of, on religion and morals, I. 23. His profligacy, 26.

Boils, on the plague of, in Egypt, II. 207.

Boilsproke (Lord), absurd and contradictory tenets of, on religion and morals, I. 24, 25. His hypocrisy exposed, 26. His involuntary testimony in favour of the evangelist, 68.

Book of the Wars of the Lord, observations on, I. 57. II. 210.

Byzantine Recension of the New Testament, I. 205.

CAIUS ROMANUS, testimony of, to the genuineness of the New Testament, I. 42.

Cana, observation on the miracle wrought at, I. 103, 104.

Cana, observation on the miracle wrought at, I. 103, 104.
Canaanites, extirpation of, considered, I. 409, 410.
Canon of the Old Testament, account of, I. 28—30. Canon of the New Testament, 39. General divisions of the canonical books of the Old Testament, II. 212, 213.
Catalogues of the books of the Old Testament, I. 29, 30.; and of the New Testament, 41.
Catalogues organis of the appellation of II. 359. The extractions of the canonical transfer of the can the New Testament, 41.

Catholic Epistles, origin of the appellation of, II. 358. Its antiquity, ibid. The authenticity of the Catholic Epistles, and in what order usually placed, ibid. Their dates, 330.

Cause, metonymy of, I. 359, 360.

Celsus, testimony of, to the genuineness and authenticity of the New Testament, I. 46, 47.; and to the character of Christ, 82.; and of the first Christians, 85.

Census alluded to by St. Luke, explained I. 419, 420.

Census, alluded to by St. Luke, explained, I. 419, 420.
Cerinthus, account of the tenets of, II. 316, 317. His testimony to the genuineness and authenticity of the New Testament, I. 46.
Cetubim, an ancient division of the Old Testament, account of, I. 213.

Chaldwans, pretence of, to antiquity, disproved, I. 73.

Chaldaisms of the New Testament, I. 198.

Chaldee Language, notice of, I. 199.
Chaldee Paraphrases on the Scriptures, account of, I. 262—264.
Chapters and verses, origin of, in the Old Testament, I. 213. And in the New Testament, 214.

Chapters and verses, origin of, in the Old Testament, I. 213. And in the New Testament, 214.

Characters (Hebrew), antiquity of, I. 190.

Children, the visiting of the fathers' sins on, explained, I. 409.

Children, the visiting of the fathers' sins on, explained, I. 409.

Children, the visiting of the fathers' sins on, explained, I. 409.

Children, the visiting of the fathers' sins on, explained, I. 409.

Children, the visiting of the fathers' sins on, explained, I. 409.

Children, the visiting of the fathers' sins on, explained, I. 409.

Children, the visiting of the fathers' sins on, explained, I. 409.

Children, the visiting of the fathers' sins on, explained, I. 409.

Children, I. 419.

Children, I. 421.

Children, I. 421.

Children, I. 421.

Children, I. 422.

Children, S. 464.

Of the Talmuds, Sl. Of Pontius Pilate, Sl., 82. Of Suetonius, Tacitus, Pliny, Ælius, Lampridius, Celsus, and Porphyry, 82.

Of Julian and Mohammed, 83. Jesus Christ put for his doctrine, 359. Parables, why used by him, 368, 369. Superiority of his parables, 369, 370. Difficulties in his genealogy solved, 400, 401.

417, 418. Why he used external means in performing some of his miracles, 99, 100.; and gave different degrees of notoriety to them, 98, 99. Their number, 101. Variety, ibid. Design, 101, 102. Greatness, 102. Before whom wrought, 103. In what manner wrought, ibid. Their effects, ibid. Were never denied, ibid. A critical examination of some of Christ's miracles, particularly the conversion of water into wine, ibid. The feeding of five thousand men, 104. The healing of the paralytic, ibid. The giving of sight to the man who had been born blind, 104, 105. The raising of Jairus's daughter to life, 105. Of the widow's son at Nain, ibid. And of Lazarus, 105, 106. The circumstances of his Resurrection stated and scrutinized, 106—115. And of his Ascension, 446. The miracles of Christ compared with pretended pagan and popish miracles, 115—119. Character of Christ, 149.

Testimonies of heathen adversaries to his life and character than Moses, 453, 454. Salvation only through him, 462. Necessity of believing in him, and danger of rejecting him, ibid. Christ put for his doctrine, 359. See Messian.

Christianity, propagation of, a proof of the credibility of the New Testament, I. 67. And that the Gospel is from God, 130—132. Gibbon's five secondary causes of its success refuted, 133. Its rejection by unbelieving Jews and Gentiles, and non-universality, no argument against its divine original, but rather a confirmation, 134—140. The Mosaic dispensation introductory to it, 147, 148. Excellence of its doctrines, 149—151. And morality, 152—156. Superiority of its motives to duty, 156—158. Its doctrines not contrary to reason, 158—160. Its doctrine of a future judgment not improbable, 160, 161. Does not establish a system of priest-craft, 161, 162. Or prohibit free inquiry, but on the contrary invites it, 162. Its morality not too strict, 162, 163. Nor any of its moral precepts unreasonable and impracticable, 163, 164. Does not produce a timid spirit, 164. Nor overlook the generous sentiments of friendship, 164, 165.; and of patriotism, 165, 166. Nor inculcate either intolerance or persecution, 166, 167. The tendency of Christianity (evinced by facts) to promote the present and eternal happiness of mankind, 169—175. Comparison of the actual effects of the Gospel, with those produced by the atheistical philosophy, 175—177. A further proof that it is from God, is afforded by its superiority over all other religions, 177. Particularly in its perfection, ibid. Its openness, ibid. Its adaptation to the capacities of all men, 178. The spirituality of its worship, ibid. Its opposition to the spirit of the world, 179. Its humiliation of man and exalting the Deity, ibid. Its restoration of order contrary to reason, 158-160. Its doctrine of a future judgment tion of man and exalting the Deity, ibid. Its restoration of order to the world, ibid. Its tendency to eradicate all evil passions from the heart, ibid. Its contrariety to the covetousness and ambition of mankind, ibid. Its restoring the divine image to man, ibid. Its mighty effects, ibid. Examination of the difficulties attendant on the propagation of Christianity, 448—450.

Christians, exemplary character and conduct of, I. 169, 170. Attested by their heathen adversaries, 83—85, 170. The crimes of nominal Christians not chargeable on the Gospel, 173.

Chronicles (two books of), II. 222. Their title, ibid. Author and date, ibid. Scope and analysis of these books, 223. Observations on these books, 224. Account of the Targums or Chaldee para on these books, 22 phrases on, I. 263.

Chronology, alleged contradictions in, considered, and shown to be unfounded, I. 404, 405. Importance of, to biblical students, 349. Chubb (Mr.), absurd and contradictory tenets of, concerning religion, I. 23, 24. His hypocrisy, 26. Involuntary testimony of, to the divine mission of Jesus Christ, 68.; and to his character, 155.

Churches (Christian), state of, necessary to be known in studying the Epistles, I. 393.

Cilicisms of the New Testament, I. 199.

Circumcision, the observance of, a proof of the credibility of the Old Testament, I. 66.

Circumstantiality of the Old Testament narratives a proof of their authenticity, I. 31, 32.; as also of the Pentateuch, 35, 36.; and of the New Testament narratives, 49, 50.

Clarius's (Isidore) revision of the Vulgate version, notice of, I. 277 Classification of the books of the New Testament, II. 293, 294.

Clement of Alexandria, testimony of, to the genuineness of the New Testament, I. 43.

Clement of Rome, testimony of, to the genuineness of the New Testament, I. 45.

Cognate, or kindred languages, what so termed, I. 199. of them, ibid. The use of the cognate languages for illustrating the Scriptures elucidated, 199. 341, 342. Coincidence of the Old and New Testament narratives with the relations of profane authors a proof of their credibility, I. 49-52. 69-87.

Coins (ancient), collateral testimony of, to the credibility of the New Testament, I. 88-91. Importance of, as an hermeneutical aid, 350

Collins (Mr.), absurd and contradictory tenets of, on religion, I. 23.

His hypocrisy, 26.

Colossians, Saint Paul's Epistle to, II. 340. Account of the church at Colossæ, 341. Date of this Epistle, ibid. Its occasion, ibid. Scope and analysis of its contents, ibid.

Commentaries, different classes of, I. 352. Of commentaries, strictly so called, ibid. Their utility, 353. Design to be kept in view in consulting them, ibid. Rules for consulting them to the best advantage, 353, 354.

Comparison not to be extended to all the circumstances of an allegory, I. 365.

Complexion, varieties of, in different nations, not contrary to the Mosaic account of the origin of mankind, I. 76.

Mosaic account of the origin of mankind, 1. 76.

Conjecture (critical), a source of various readings, I. 284. Rules for applying it to the determination of various readings, 289, 290.

Constantinopolitan Recension of the New Testament, I. 205. 209.

Contemporary Writers, testimony of, a source for ascertaining the meaning of Scripture, I. 329—333

Context, definition of, I. 336. Rules for investigating it, 337, 338

Importance of attending to the context, in the interpretation of allegories, 365.

Contradictions, alleged to exist in the Scriptures, considered, and Contradictions, alleged to exist in the Scriptures, considered, and shown to have no foundation, I. 399, 400. In historical passages, 400—404. In chronology, 404, 405. Between prophecies and their fulfilment, 406. In doctrine, 406—408. Apparent contradictions to morality, 408—414. Between the sacred writers, 414—418. Between sacred and profane writers, 418—420. Seeming contradictions to philosophy and the nature of things, 420—422. Conversation with the Deity, the most eminent degree of prophetic insuriation II. 256.

Conversation with the Deity, the most eminent degree of prophetic inspiration, II. 256.

Conversion of Paul, remarks on, II. 322, 323.

Coptic version of the Old and New Testament, I. 272.

Corinthians (Saint Paul's First Epistle to), II. 334. Paul's character of the Gentile Corinthians confirmed by profane historians, I. 80.

State of the Corinthian church, II. 334. Occasion and scope of this Epistle, ibid. Analysis of its contents, 335. Date and genuineness, ibid. Examination of the question, how many epistles Paul wrote to the Corinthians, ibid.

Corinthians (Saint Paul's Second Epistle to), II. 335. Date and where written, 336. Occasion of this Epistle, ilid. Its scope, ilid. Synopsis of its contents, ilid. Observations on it, ilid. A supposed chronological difficulty in this Epistle chicidated, 336, 337. No other epistles written to the Corinthians but the two 397. No other episiles written to the Cormitmans but the two which are now extare, 1, 57, 58, 11, 3,35.

Corcuption of the Scriptures, impossibility of, proved, I. 52-58. Wifind corruption, how far a cause of vacous readings, 285.

Counsels of percetton, nature and fallacy of, 1. 396. note.

Covenant, book of the, 1, 57.

Creation of the world, true account of, unknown to the ancient philosophers, I. 17. Mosaic narrative of, confirmed by profune history, 69. And by the modern discoveries in philosophy, I.

Credibility of the Old and New Testaments, I. 59. Proofs that the writers of them had a perfect knowledge of the subjects which writers of them had a perfect knowledge of the subjects which they relate; and their moral character, though rizidly tried, was never impeached by their keenest opponents, ibid. This test applied to the Old Testament, ibid. And also to the New Testament, 60. These writings never charged with containing false-hoods, ibid. This proved at large concerning the Old Testament, 60—62. And the New Testament, 62. The writers of which were contemporary with, and competent witnesses of, the events related, 62, 63. And could not have recorded the actions ascribed to Christ, if they had not been true, 62. Were neither enthusiasts nor fanatics, 63. Were neither deceived themselves, nor did nor could deceive others, 63, 64. But on the contrary they were men of the strictest integrity and sincerity, 64, 65. Appealed to notorious proofs, 66. And suffered every thing for the truth of their narration, ibid. The credibility of the Scriptures further confirmed by the subsistence, to this very day, of monuments ther confirmed by the subsistence, to this very day, of monuments instituted to perpetuate the memory of the principal facts and events therein recorded, 66, 67. And by the wonderful establishment and propagation of Christianity, 67, 68. Testimonies from natural and civil history to the credibility of the Old Testament, 69—78. And also of the New Testament, 78—83. The silence of profane authors concerning facts recorded by the sacred historians no argument against their credibility, 85—87. Which is further confirmed by coins and medals, 88—91. Recapitalation of this argument, 185. Credibility of miracles, proved, 95—97. Creed of unbelievers, I. 159. note.

Cretans, St. Paul's character of, confirmed by profane writers, I. 81.

Christianity, when planted in Crete, II. 347. Criticism of the Scriptures, objects of, I. 188.

Cyprian, testimony of, to the genuineness of the New Testament, Cyprian Recension of the New Testament, I. 209. note. Cyrenius, census of, explained, I. 419, 420.

D'ALEMBERT, miscrable death of, I. 176.

Daniel (the prophet), account of, II. 277. His predictions relative to the four great monarchies, I. 129. Aprilysis of his prophecies, II. 277—279. Observations on their canonical authority and style, with a relutation of neologism objections, 279—282. Account the spurious additions made to the book of Daniel, 282. Darkness, on the plague of, in Egypt, II. 207. Dates of the books of Scripture, importance of knowing, I. 348. David, in what sense the "man after God's own heart," I. 411, 4 List of Psalms ascribed to, II. 239, 241. Deborah, remarks on the ode of, II. 217. note.

Deists, or enemies of divine revelation, origin of, I. 22. note. Indebted to the Scriptures for all that they have written, who release, or enemies of divine revelation, origin of 1. 22. note. Are indebted to the Scriptures for all that they have written, which is either wise or good, ibid. Their boast, that unassisted reason is a sufficient guide to man, disproved, ibid. A summary of their absurd and contradictory tenets concerning religion, the worship of Cod and a future critic 2. 25. of God, and a future state, 23—25. And concerning morals, 25. Deadly effects of deism on nations, 25, 26. And on individuals, Effects of their principles contrasted with those of the Gospel, 176, 177.

Deities (heathen), immense number of, I. 16. and note 8., 21. Horrid rites of, and their effects, 16, 17. See Idolatry. Deluge, Mosaic account of, not contrary to philosophy, but confirmed by indubitable testimonies from natural and civil history, I. 72—75. And by the Apamean medal, 88. Infidel objections to it refuted, 75, 76.

De Rossi, notice of the principal Hebrew MSS. collected by, I. 219. Design of the sacred writers in composing their narratives, a source of apparent contradictions in historical passages, I. 400—402.

of apparent contradictions in historical passages, I. 400—402. And also in points of doctrine, 408.

Deuteronomy (book of), date and chronology of, II. 210, 211. Its scope, 211. Prediction relative to the Messiah contained in it illustrated, ibid. I. 453, 454. Synopsis of its contents, II. 211, 212. Observations on this book, 212.

Dialects of the Greek Testament, I. 196—199.

Δεάβακ, import of, II. 28. 39.

Δεάβακ, import of, II. 243.

Didactic poetry of the Hebrews, I. 381.

Diffaculties attendant on the propagation of Christianity, examined Difficulties attendant on the propagation of Christianity, examined, Y. 448-450.

Dissection, curious, of the Old and New Testaments, I. 202. note. Divisions (ancient and modern) of the Scriptures, I. 212—215. Doctrines delivered in the Bible a proof that it must be from God. I. 142. Doctrines of the patriarchal age, 142, 143. IL 236, 237.

Doctrines delivered by Moses, and by the prophets, I. 143—148. Summary of the doctrines of the Gospel, 149.; particularly the vicarious atonement of Christ, and the blessings thereby procured for man, 150—152. Alleged contradictions in doctrines proved to have no foundation, 100—408. On the doctrinal interpretation of the Scriptures, 393—395.

Double Sense of prophecy, I, 390, 391.

Dramatic Poems of the Hebrews, 1, 381. Dreams, prophetic, II. 255.

Duelling not sanctioned by the Gospel, I. 171. note.

EBER'S (Paul) revision of the Latin Vulgate, notice of, I. 277. Ebionites, testimony of, to the genuineness and authenticity of the

New Testament, I. 46.

Ecclesiastes (book of), II. 247. Its title, author, and canonical authority, ibid. Its scope and synopsis, 247, 248. Observations on this book, 249.

Ecclesiasticus (apocryphal book of), account of, II. 291.

Edessene Recension of the New Testament, account of, I. 206.

Editions (ancient) of the Scripture, considered as a source of the sacred text, I. 280.

Effect, metonymy of, I. 360.

Effect, fleuonymy of, 1. 360.

Egypt, prophecies concerning, and their fulfilment, I. 125. The borrowing from the Egyptians by the Israelites explained, 409. Remarks on the plagues inflicted upon the Egyptians, II. 206, 207. Pretensions of the Egyptians to remote antiquity disproved, I. 73. Confirmations of Scripture from Egyptian hieroglyphics, on the confirmation of Scripture from Egyptian hieroglyphics, 88, 89.

Egyptian versions of the Scriptures, I. 272, 273. Egyptian Recension of the New Testament, 205.

sion of the New Testament, 205.

Eichhorn's theory of recensions, account of, I. 209.

Elegiac Poetry of the Hebrews, I. 380.

Elijah fed by ravens, remarks on the narrative of, I. 422.

Emphases, definition of, I. 326, 327. Different kinds of, 327. Emphases of the Greek article, 327, 328. Emphases of other words, 328. Emphatic adverbs, ibid. Real emphases, ibid. Rules for the investigation of emphatic words, 328, 329.

England, beneficial effects of Christianity in, I. 174.

Enoch, translation of, confirmed by heathen traditions, I. 71. Re-

Enoch, translation of, confirmed by heathen traditions, I. 71. Remarks on the apocryphal book of, supposed to be quoted by the Apostle Jude, 318. II. 377.

Enthusiasm, characteristics of, I. 63. Proof that Moses was not an enthusiast, 60. Nor the apostles and evangelists, 63. Especially Saint Paul, II. 322, 323.

Ephesus, temple of Diana at, I. 90. That city, why termed NEQ-KOPON, 90, 91. Account of the church at, II. 338. Genuineness and authenticity of the Epistle to the Ephesians, 338, 339. Its date, 339. Occasion and scope, ibid. Analysis of its contents, ibid. Observations on its style, ibid.

with the control of the type of the apostolic epistles, ibid. General plan of the apostolic epistles, ibid. General plan of the apostolic epistles, ibid. General plan of the apostolic epistles, ibid. Causes of their obscurity explained, 331. Remarks on the phraseology of St. Paul's Epistles in particular, ibid. Rules for studying the apostolic epistles most beneficially, I. 393—395. Subscriptions attached to them, 215. See Catholic Epistles. Epithets of Scripture, different kinds of, I. 325.

Esdras, account of the two apocryphal books of, II. 289, 290.

Esther (book of), II. 225. Its title and author, 225, 226. Argument, 266. Synopsis of its contents, ibid. Account of the Targums or Chaldee paraphrases on this book, I. 263. Apocryphal additions to the book of Esther, II. 290.

Ethan, psalm ascribed to, II. 240. Ethiopia, prophecies concerning, and their fulfilment, I. 125, 126. Ethiopic language, notice of, I. 199. Ethiopic version of the Scriptures, 273, 274.

thres, 2/3, 2/4.

Eusebius's account of the classification and genuineness of the books of the New Testament, I. 42. Notice of his Harmony of the four Gospels, 319, 320.; and of his recension of the Septuagint version, 268. Eusebian Sections, 214.

Euthalius, Sections of, 1. 214.

Evangelists, were contemporary with, and competent witnesses of, the facts recorded by them, I. 62, 63. Were not enthusiasts nor fanatics, 63. Neither did nor could deceive or impose upon others, 63, 64. Were men of the strictest integrity and sincerity, 64, 65. Appealed to notorious proofs, 66. Suffered every thing for the truth of their narrative, ibid. On the credibility and inspiration of the evangelists.—See Credibility, Inspiration.

Evidence. See Historical Testimony.

Evil (moral and physical), the true cause of, unknown to the ancients, I. 17. The Bible account of it confirmed by heathen

Exodus (book of), Title, II. 206. Author and date, ibid. Occasion and subject-matter, ibid. Scope, ibid. Types of the Messiah, and subject-matter, ibid. Scope, ibid. Types of the Messiah, ibid. Synopsis, ibid. Illustration of Exodus, ch. vii.—xi. 206, 207. Expositors. See Commentators.

Expositors. See Commentators.

Ezekiel (the prophet), account of, II. 283. Canonical authority of his prophecies, ibid. Their scope, 284. Analysis of them, 284—286. Observations on the style of Ezekiel, 286. Supposed difference between him and Jeremiah reconciled, I. 124. Ezra (book of), II. 224. Its title and author, ibid. Argument, scope, and synopsis of its contents, 224, 225. Observations on a spurious passage ascribed to Ezra, 225.

FAITH, analogy of, 1. 342. Rules for investigating it, 342—344. Fall of man, Mosaic account of, confirmed by the existence of moral evil, and by historical testimony, 1. 69—71.

Failiers, testimony of, to the authenticity of the New Testament, I. Fathers, testimony of, to the authenticity of the New Testament, 1.
41-45. Assistance to be derived from them in the interpretation of Scripture, 346-348. Remarks on their mode of quoting the Scriptures, 41. Authority of their quotations as a source of the sacred text, 281. Rules for applying their quotations to the determination of various readings, 288, 289.

Felix, procurator of Judga, the singular propriety of Saint Paul's address to, illustrated, II. 327.

Fertility of the Holy Land, attested by heathen writers, I. 78.

First-born, on the destruction of, in Egypt, II. 207.

First-born, on the destruction of, in Egypt, II. 207.

Figurative Language, origin of, I. 355. Distinction between figures of words and figures of thought, ibid. General observations on the interpretation of tropes and figures, 355—358. The figurative language of the prophets sometimes the source of seeming contradictions, 406. See Allegory, Hyperbole, Irony, Metaphor, Metanymy, Parable, Proverbs, and Synecdoche.

First-born, on the destruction of, in Egypt, II. 207.

First day of the week, observance of, a proof of the credibility of

First day of the week, observance of, a proof of the credibility of the New Testament, I. 67.

Five thousand men, miracle of the feeding of, I. 104.

Flies, on the plague of, II. 206.
Fædus cum Græcis, account of, I. 212.

Fool, how to be answered, I. 397.
Forgery, impossibility of, as it respects the Old Testament, I. 29.
And the New Testament, 40. 54, 55.

And the New Testament, 40. 54, 55.
Forgiveness of sins, New Testament doctrine of, I. 150.
France, horrible state of, during the French Revolution, in consequence of infidelity, I. 25, 26.
Frederick II. king of Prussia, impious tenets of, I. 24.
Friendship, why not enforced by name, in the Gospel, I. 165.
Frogs, on the plague of, II. 206.
Future state. See Immortality of the Soul.

GALATIANS, account of, II. 337. Date of Saint Paul's Epistle to them, ibid. Its genuineness and authenticity, ibid. Occasion and scope, ibid. Synopsis of its contents, ibid. Observations on this Epistle, 338.

Gallio, character of, I. 79.

Gautio, character of, I. 79.

Gaon (rabbi Saadias), Arabic version by, notice of, I. 274.

Gemaras of Jerusalem and Babylon, account of, I. 345.

Genealogy, importance of, in studying the Scriptures, I. 351, 352.

The seeming contradictions in the genealogies of our Saviour, as recorded by Matthew and Luke, examined and reconciled, 400, 401. 417, 418. Importance of the genealogies in the first book of Chronicles, II. 223.

Genezis (book of vide II. 223. Author 204. Data ikid. General book of Chronicles, II. 223.

Genesis (book of), title, II. 203. Author, 204. Date, ibid. General argument, ibid. Scope, ibid. Types of the Messiah in this book ibid. Synopsis of its contents, ibid. Summary of the patriarchal religion, as exhibited in this book, I. 142, 143. The literal sense of the first three chapters vindicated, II. 205. Whence Moses derived his materials for it, I. 34.

derived his materials for it, I. 34.

Gentiles, rejection of the Gospel by, no objection to the truth of Christianity, I. 136.

Genuineness defined, I. 28. Criteria for distinguishing genuine from spurious writings, 39, 40. Genuineness of the Old Testament demonstrated, 28—32.: especially of the Pentateuch, 32—38. And of the New Testament, 40—50. Recapitulation of this argument, 184.

Geography, importance of, to the study of the Bible, I. 351.
Geology, testimony of, to the credibility of the Mosaic narrative of the deluge, I. 71, 72.

the deluge, I. 71, 72.

German Divines, heterodox notions of many of, I. 326. Refutation of their theory, that some of the interpretations of Christ and his Apostles are doctrinal accommodations to Jewish opinions and prejudices, 324.

German Jews, manuscripts of, I. 218.

Giants, Mosaic account of, confirmed by heathen writers, I. 71.

Gibbon's false account of the spread of Christianity, confuted by facts, I. 133. His immoral principles exposed, 25.

Gittith, import of, II. 244.

Glossaries, nature of, I. 335. Rules for consulting them to advantage ibid.

tage, ibid.

Gnostics, tenets of, refuted by St. John, II. 316.
Gop, the true nature and worship of, imperfectly known among the ancient heathen nations, I. 16, 17. And also among the modern heathens, 21, 22. Sublime doctrines of the Scriptures concerning heathens, 21, 22. Sublime doctrines of the Scriptures concerning God, in the patriarchal times, 142, 143. Under the Mosaic dispensation, 143—145. And in the Gospel, 149, 150.

Gospel, meaning of, II. 294. General design of the Gospels, 295. Their number, ibid. And importance, ibid. The sources of the first three Gospels examined, 385—393. Why rejected by the unbelieving Jews, I. 134, 135. And by the Gentiles, 136. See Christianity, Doctrines, Morality, John, Luke, Mark, and Matthew, in this Index. in this Index.

Gothic version of the Bible, account of, I. 277. Description of the Upsal manuscript of, 277, 278. Important remains of, discovered in the Ambrosian library at Milan, 278, 279.

Governors and Governed, duties of, under the Gospel, I. 153.

Grammatico-Historical Sense, defined, I. 323.

 Greek Article, elucidations of, I. 327, 328.
 Greek Language, the New Testament why written in, I. 193, 194.
 Similarity of the New Testament Greek with that of the Septuagint version, 193. Examination of its style, 194, 195. Dialects, 196-199.

Greek Versions (ancient) of the Old Testament:—See Aquila, Septuagint, Symmachus, Theodotion.

thagint, Symmetry, Greeks, the New Testament character of, confirmed by heatner writers, I. 80.

Griesbach's (Dr.) system of recension of the New Testament, account of, I. 205, 206.

HABAKKUK (the prophet), notice of, II. 277. Analysis of his prophecy, ibid. Its style, ibid.

Haggai (the prophet), account of, II. 287. Argument and scope of his prophecy, ibid. Analysis of its contents, ibid. Style, ibid. Hagiographa, an ancient division of the Jewish Scriptures, account of, I. 213. Chaldee paraphrase on, 263.

Hail, on the plague of, in Egypt, II. 207.

Happiroth, or sections of the Prophets, origin of, I 213.

Happiness, dark and confused notions of the heathen concerning, 18.

Harmonies of the Scriptures, occasion of, I. 319. Observations on the different schemes of harmonizers, and on the duration of the public ministry of Jesus Christ, 319—321.

Harmony subsisting between all parts of the Bible, a proof of its divine authority and original, I. 167, 168.

Heathen Nations (ancient), deplorable state of religion and morals Heathen Nations (ancient), deplorable state of religion and morals among, I. 16—20.; and among the modern heathens, 21, 22. This a proof of the necessity of a divine revelation, 22. Derived many of their institutions from the Scriptures, 77, 78. Their characters, as incidentally noticed in the New Testament, confirmed by profane writers, 80, 81.

Heathen Writers, testimonies of, to the credibility of the Old Testament, I. 69—71. And of the New Testament, 78—83. And to the heatfaint effects of the Coepnal in the character and conduct the beneficial effects of the Gospel, in the character and conduct of the first Christians, 170.

Hebraisms of the New Testament, I. 196. Examples of them, and observations on them, 196, 197. Rules for the better understanding of Hebraisms, 197, 198.

Hebrew Language, origin and antiquity of, I. 189. Historical sketch Hebrew Language, origin and antiquity of, I. 189. Historical sketch of, 190. Antiquity of its character, ibid. Hebrew vowel points, 191, 192. And accents, 192. Rabbinical Hebrew, 198. The Hebrew language a proof of the genuineness and authenticity of the Old Testament, 31. Particularly of the Pentateuch, 32. Notice of the principal Hebrew manuscripts, 216—221. And of the printed editions of the Hebrew Bible, 203. Hebrew Text of the Old Testament, history of, from the writing of the books of the Old Testament, until the time of Jesus Christ, I. 200. From the time of Jesus Christ to the age of the Masorites, 200, 201. From the time of the Masorites to the invention of the 200, 201. From the age of the Masorites to the invention of the art of printing, 201—203. From the invention of the art of printing to our own time, 203.

Hebrews (Epistle to), II. 349. To whom written, 349, 350. In what language, 351, 352. Its genuineness and authenticity, and by whom written, 352—356. Date of this Epistle, 356. Its occasion and scope, 356, 357. Synopsis of its contents, 357. Observations on it, ibid. Hegesippus, testimony of, to the genuineness of the New Testament, I. 43.

Helvetius, immoral tenets of, I. 25.

Hetvettus, immoral tenets of, 1. 25.

Heman, psalm ascribed to, II. 240.

Herbert (Lord), absurd and contradictory tenets of, in religion and morals, I. 22. 25.

Heretical Writers (ancient), testimonies of, to the genuineness and authenticity of the New Testament, I. 45, 46. Various readings sometimes to be found in their works, 289.

New Testament, I. 45.

Hesyachius's Recension of the Septuagint, notice of, I. 268.

Hexapla of Origen, specimen of, with illustrative remarks, I. 267, 268.

Hillel (Rabbi), Codex of, I. 203.

Hindoos, degraded state of religion and morals among, I. 21. Their Hindoos, degraded state of religion and morals among, I. 21. Their extravagant pretensions to antiquity refuted, 74.

Historians (profane), confirm the truth of the Old Testament narratives, I. 69—78. And also of those of the New Testament, 78—83. This coincidence a proof of their genuineness and authenticity, 49—52. Seeming inconsistencies between the sacred and profane historians accounted for, 414—418. Silence of ancient historians concerning many facts accounted for, 85—87.
Historical Books of the Old Testament, general observations on, II. 213. Their authors, ibid. Importance, 214. For analyses of the Historical Books, see their several titles in this Index.
Historical Circumstances, importance of, to the study of the Scriptures generally, I. 348—351. Of Scripture allegories in particular, 365. And also of parables, 368.
Historical Passages of Scripture, alleged contradictions in, considered, and shown to have no foundation, I. 400—404.

ed, and shown to have no foundation, I. 400-404.

Historical Sense of Scripture, I. 323.

Historical Testimony, credibility of, illustrated, I. 95, 96. Hume's objections to it, considered and refuted, 96, 97. Historical testimony not diminished by the lapse of ages, I. 97, 98. Historical testimony of Jews and Gentiles to the authenticity of the Penta-

Historical Types, I. 386.

History (Jewish), a source of Scripture metaphors, I. 363. The credibility of the Old Testament histories confirmed by testimonies from natural and civil history, 69—78. And also the New Testament, 78—87. Importance of sacred and profane history to the right understanding of Scripture, 349.

Hobbes (Mt.), absurd and contradictory notions concerning religion and morals, I. 23. 25. His base conduct, 26. His involuntary testimony in favour of the New Testament, 68.

Holden (Rev. George), important observations of, on the imprecations supposed to be contained in the Scriptures, I. 413.

Holy Spirit, put for his effects, operations, and gifts, I. 359. The descent of the Holy Spirit on the apostles, considered, 447.

Homilies, nature of, I. 353.

Hosea (the prophet), account of, II. 260. Occasion and scope of his prophecy, 260, 261. Analysis of its contents, 261. Observations on his style, 261, 262.

Hug (Prof.), system of recensions of, I. 208, 209.
Hugo de Sancto Caro (Cardinal), invented the division of chapters in the Bible, I. 213.

Hume (Mr.), absurd and contradictory notions of, concerning religion and morals, I. 24, 25. His objection against the Pentateuch refuted, 69. Refutation of his objections to the credibility of miracles, 96, 97.

Hyperbole, nature of, I. 272.

IDOLATRY of the ancient heathen nations, I. 16, 17. And of the modern heathen nations, 21, 22. Idolatry abolished by Christianity, 171.

Idyl (Hebrew), nature of, I. 381.

Ignatius, testimony of, to the genuineness of the New Testament, Immorality unjustly charged upon the Bible, I. 166. Immoral prin-

Immoratity unjustly charged upon the Bible, 1. 10b. Immoral principles and practices of deists and atheists proved, 24—26.

Immortality of the Soul and a future state, imperfectly known to the ancient philosophers, I. 18. Revealed in the Scriptures, 143. 145. 146. 151.

Impartiality of Moses as an historian, 1. 61, 62. Of the other writers of the Old Testament, 62. And of the writers of the

New Testament, 64-66.

New Testament, 64—66.
Imprecations contained in the Scriptures explained, I. 413.
Improvements (spiritual), observations on, I. 384.
Indian Jews, manuscripts of, I. 219—221.
Inferential reading of the Bible, I. 423. Its foundation, ibid. Rules for it, 423, 424. Sources of inferences, 424. Rules for ascertaining them, 424, 425.

Ing them, 424, 420.

Infidels, absurd and contradictory notions of, concerning religion and morals, I. 22—25. 159. note. Their objections to the doctrines and moral precepts of the Bible refuted, 158—167. Their creed full of contradictions, 159. note. The efforts of infidels to subvert Christianity, a fulfilment of prophecy, 140. Their total want of candour, 158. and note. Effects of their writings in France, 25, 26. And on individuals, 26. Particularly at the hour of death, 176. Imphility to answer all the objections of infidels required.

candour, 158. and note. Effects of their writings in France, 25, 26. And on individuals, 26. Particularly at the hour of death, 176. Inability to answer all the objections of infidels no just cause for rejecting the Scriptures, 180, 181. Infidels proved to be more credulous than Christians, 182, 183. Inscriptions of the Psalms, observations on, II. 242, 243. And of the books of the New Testament, I. 215. Inspiration defined, I. 92. 443. Reasonable and necessary, 92. Criteria of inspiration, 93. Inspiration of the Old Testament 443. And of the New Testament, 443, 444. Conclusions thence derived, 444–446. Nature of prophetic Inspiration, II. 257. (See Miracles, Prophecy, Doctrines, Morality, &c.)
Interpretation of Scripture, principles of, illustrated, I. 355.
Intolerance not taught in the Bible, I. 166, 167. Though practised by Jews and Pagans, 167.

by Jews and Pagans, 167. Irenœus, testimony of, to the genuineness of the New Testament, Irony, nature of, I. 372. Examples of it, ibid.

Isaiah (the prophet), account of, II. 262. Genuineness of his predictions, 262—265. Their scope, 266. Synopsis of their contents, 266—269. Observations on the style of Isaiah, 269.

Ishmael, predictions concerning, and their fulfilment, I. 122.

Israelites, their borrowing from the Egyptians explained, I. 409. Table of their stations in the wilderness, II. 210. Island Jews, manuscripts of, I. 218.

Italic version (ancient), notice of, I. 275, 276.

Jacob's family in Egypt; numerical difficulties as to the number of its members, solved, I. 404., and note 2. The circumstances of his alleged fraud upon Isaac considered, 408., note. Jairus's daughter restored to life, I. 105.

James (Saint), account of, II. 359. Genuineness and authenticity of his Epistle, ibid. To whom addressed, ibid. Its scope, 359, 350.

360. Synopsis of its contents, 360. Observations on its style, ibid. Jasher (book of), 1. 57. II. 216.

Jeduthun, Psalms ascribed to II. 240.

Jephthah proved not to have immolated his daughter, I. 411.

Jeremah (the prophet), account of, II. 272. Occasion of his prophecies, 273. Different collections of them, 272. Their chronological order, 273. Synopsis of their contents, 273—275. His predictions concerning the Messiah, 275. Observations on his style, 276. See Lamentations.

Jericho (Codex of), 1. 203. Jerome, notice of, and his testimony to the genuineness of the New Testament, I. 41. Account of the biblical labours of, 275, 276.

Jerusalem, prophecies concerning the destruction of, and their fulfilment, I. 129, 130. 458—462. Account of the Jerusalem Tarfilment, 1. gum, 263.

See CHRIST, MESSIAH.

Jewish Nation, predictions concerning, I. 123, 124. The rejection of Christianity by them accounted for, 134, 136. Did not corrupt the Old Testament, 52, 53 The sects, morals, and customs of the Jews, as described in the New Testament, confirmed by profane writers, 80. Account of the manuscripts of the Indian Jews, 219-221. The miseries of the Jews during and subsequently 219—221. The miseries of the Jews during and subsequently to the siege of Jerusalem, 460.

Job (book of), II. 227. Its title, ibid. Job, a real character, 227, 228. In what age he lived, 228, 229. Scene of the poem of Job, 229, 230. Its author and canonical authority, 230, 231. Structure of the poem, 231, 232. Its argument and scope, 232—234. Spurious addition to it, 234, 235. Rules for studying this book to advantage, 235. Synopsis of its contents, 235, 236. Idea of the patriarchal theology, as contained in this book, 236, 237.

Joel (the prophet), account of, II. 270. Occasion and scope of his prophecy, ibid. Synopsis of its contents, ibid. Observations on its style, ibid.

John (Saint), account of, II. 313, 314. Title of his Gosnel, 313. Ita-its style, ibid.

John (Saint), account of, II. 313, 314. Title of his Gospel, 313. Its date, ibid. Its genuineness, ibid. Especially of John vii. 53. and viii. 1—11., 315. Occasion and design, 315, 316. Analysis of its contents, 316, 317. His Gospel a supplement to the other three, 318. Observations on its style, ibid. Coincidences between it and his first epistle, I. 51, 52., notes. Genuineness and canonical authority of his first General Epistle, II. 364. Its date, 364, 365. To whom written, 365. Its structure, occasion, and scope, 365, 366. Synopsis of its contents, 366. Style, ibid. The question concerning the authenticity of the disputed clause in 1 John v. 7, 8. considered, 366—376. Genuineness, authenticity, and date, of the second and third Epistles of St. John, 376. The second Epistle, to whom addressed, ibid. Its scope, ibid. The third Epistle, to whom addressed, ibid. Its scope, ibid. Observations on this Epistle, ibid. See Revelation. Epistle, to whom addressed, ibid. Its scope, ibid. Observations on this Epistle, ibid. See Revelation.

Jonah, circumstance of his being in a whale's belly explained, I. 422 Scope and analysis of his prophetical book, II. 259.

Jonathan Ben Uzziel, Targum of, I. 263. Targum of the pseudo-Jonathan, ibid.

Joseph (Rabbi), Targum of, on the Hagiographa, I. 263.

Josephus, account of, I. 346. His testimony to the genuineness and authenticity of the Old Testament, 30. And to the accounts of osephus, account of, 1. 340. His testimony to the genuineness and authenticity of the Old Testament, 30. And to the accounts of princes and governors, 79. Especially to the character of Jesus Christ, 81. Vindication of the genuineness of that testimony, 463, 464. Importance of his writings as a source for ascertaining various readings, 288. And in the study of the Scriptures, 346. His silence respecting the slaughter of the infants by Herod accounted for, 419.

Joshua, observations on the pile of stones raised by, at Gilgal, L 100, 101.

Joskua (book of), author, genuineness, and authenticity of, II. 214, 215. Its argument, 215. Scope, 215, 216. Synopsis of its contents, 216. Observations on it, ibid. Josach, prophecy concerning, I. 123, 124. Judas Iscariot, character of, an argument for the truth of the Gospel, I. 155. note 1.

pet, 1. 135. note 1.

Jude (the apostle), account of, II. 377. Genuineness of his Epistle, ibid. Its date, 378. To whom addressed, ibid. Its occasion and scope, ibid. Observations on its style, ibid.

Judges (book of), II. 216. Its date and author, 217. Its scope and chronology, ibid. Synopsis of its contents, ibid. Observations on this book, ibid.

chronology, total. Synthesis this book, tital.

Judgment (future), doctrine of, not improbable, I. 160, 161.

Judith, apocryphal book of, II. 290.

Julian, the apostate emperor, testimony of, to the genuineness and authenticity of the New Testament, I. 47. And to the character and conduct of Jesus Christ, 83. And of the first Christians, 85. Justification, New Testament doctrine of, I. 150, 151.

Justin Martyr, notice of, I. 44. His testimony to the genuineness of the New Testament, ibid.

Juvenal, testimony of, to the persecution of the Christians, I. 83.

Kann's theory of interpretation, unfounded, I. 323, 324.

Karkaphensian recension, I. 272.

Kennicott (Dr.), account of the principal manuscripts collated by, I. 218, 219.

1. 218, 219.

Keçahara, account of, in the New Testament, I. 214.

Keri and Ketib, account of, I. 201.

Kings (the two books of), II. 220. Their title, ibid. Author, 220, 221.

Argument and synopsis of the first book of Kings, 221. And of the second book of Kings, 222. Observations on these books, ibid.

Korah (sons of), psalms inscribed for, II. 239.

Lactantius, testimony of, to the genuineness of the New Testament, I. 42.; and to the moral change produced by the cordial belief of the Gospel, 170.

Lame man miraculously healed by Peter and John, I. 105.

Lamentations of Jeremiah, date of, II. 276. Synopsis of the contents of this book, ibid. Observations on the style and structure of this book, ibid. of this book, ibid.

Lampridius, testimony of, to the character of Christ, I. 82.

Lampridge of the Old Testament, a proof of its authenticity, I. 31.

Of the Pentateuch, a proof of its authenticity, 32. Of the New Testament, also a proof of its authenticity, 48, 49. See the articles Character Lawrence Conduct Lawr Testament, also a proof of its authenticity, 48, 49. See the articles Cognate Languages, Greek, Hebrew.

Laodicea, church of, no separate epistle addressed to by St. Paul, I. 58. Pretended epistle of Paul to them, 441.

Latin Versions (ancient) of the Scriptures, account of, I. 275—277.

Latinisms of the New Testament, I. 198.

Law.— The Law," an ancient division of the Old Testament, I. 212.

212 Law (Mosaic), a proof of the authenticity of the Pentateuch, I. 32, 33. Table or harmony of the entire Mosaic law, arranged under heads, II. 212, 213.

Lazarus, miracle of the resurrection of, examined, I. 105, 106.

Legal types, I. 385.

Legau types, 1. 353.

Letters, antiquity of Hebrew, I. 190. Form of Greek letters in manuscripts, 221.

Levilicus (book of), title, author, and date, II. 207. Scope, ibid. Synopsis of its contents, 207, 208.

Lice, on the plague of I. 206.

Literal sense, nature of, I. 322. In what cases the literal meaning of words and phrases is to be retained, or given up, 336, 357. Vindication of the literal sense of the first three chapters of Genesis, II. 205. In what cases the literal meaning Literature, influence of the Gospel on, I. 172, 173.

Locusts, on the plague of, in Egypt, II. 207.

Longevity of the early inhabitants of the world, the Scripture account of, confirmed by profane history, I. 71.

Lord's Supper, celebration of the sacrament of, a perpetual memorial of the truth of the New Testament, I. 67.
Lucian's Recension of the Septuagint version, I. 268.

Lucian, the philosopher, testimony of, to the character of the first Christians, I. 85.

Christians, I. 85.

Luke (St.), account of, II. 307. Title of his Gospel, ibid. Genuineness and authenticity of his Gospel, ibid. Vindication of its genuineness from the objections of Michaelis, 308, 309. Vindication of the genuineness of chapters i. and ii., 309, 310. Of chapter viii. verses 27. to 39, 310.; and of chapter xxii. verses 43. and 44., ibid. His narrative confirmed by profane historians, I. 49, 50. 80.; and by ancient coins and inscriptions, 90, 91. Date of his Gospel, II. 310. For whom written, 310, 311. Its occasion and scope, 311. Synopsis of its contents, 312, 313. Observations on the style of his Gospel, 313. See Acts of the Aposiles.

Lycanians, Paul's address to, illustrated, II. 326.

Lycanians, Paul's address to, illustrated, II. 326.

Lying, systematically taught by some heathens, I. 20. and note. Lyric poetry of the Hebrews, I. 381.

MACCABEES, account of the first apocryphal book of, II. 292. Of the second book, ibid. Of the third and fourth books, 293. Of the fifth book, ibid.

Magistrates and subjects, reciprocal duties of, I. 153.

Mahalath and Mahalath-Leannoth, import of, II. 243.

Malabar coast, account of a valuable Hebrew MS. brought from, I.

219 220.

219, 220.

Malachi (the prophet), account of, II. 288, 289. Occasion and scope of his prophecy, 289. Analysis of its contents, ibid. Its style, ibid.

Man, Scripture account of the creation and fall of, confirmed by profane historians, I. 69, 70. Mutual duties between man and man, enforced in the Gospel, 152, 153.

Manuscripts of the Bible, agreement of all that are extant, a proof of its uncorrupted preservation, I. 54, 55. Use of manuscripts for determining various readings, 285.

Manuscripts (Hebrew) of the Old Testament, different classes of, I. 216. The rolled manuscripts of the synagogues, ibid. Rules attended to in copying them, 217. Square manuscripts in private use, ibid. The age of Hebrew manuscripts, ibid. Order of books in them, 217, 218. Notices of the most ancient manuscripts, 218, 219. Modern families of Hebrew manuscripts, 218. Notices of in them, 217, 218. Notices of the most ancient manuscripts, 218, 219. Modern families of Hebrew manuscripts, 218. Notices of the manuscripts of the Indian Jews, 219—221. Manuscripts of the Samaritan Pentateuch, 221.

Manuscripts (Greek) of the Septuagint Version, account of, I. 222

Manuscripts (Greek) of the New Testament, on what materials written, I. 221. Form of letters, ibid. Abbreviations, ibid. Codices Palimpsesti or Rescripti, 222. Account of the different families, recensions, or editions of manuscripts, 205—212. On the Fædus cum Græcis, or coincidence between many Greek manuscripts and the Vulgate version, 212. Descriptions of menuscripts containing both the New and the Old Testaments, 222—226. Of Manuscripts of the New Testament, entire or in part, which have been used in critical editions of the New Testament, 229—261. tament, 229-261.

Marcion, testimony of, to the genuineness and authenticity of the New Testament, I. 46.

Mark (Saint), account of, II. 304. Gennineness and authenticity of his Gospel, 304, 305. Its title, 304. Its date, 305. Occasion and scope, ibid. In what language written, ibid. Synopsis of its contents, 305, 306. Examination of the question, whether Saint Mark transcribed or abridged the Gospel of Saint Matthew, 306. Style of his Gospel. 307. Style of his Gospel, 307.

Martial, testimony of, to the persecutions of the Christians, I. 83. Martyrdom, how far a test of truth, I. 66. Maschil, psalms, why so called, II. 243. Masora, account of, I. 201, 202. Estimate of its real value, 202.

Massacre of the infants at Bethlehem, I. 419.

Matthæi's system of recensions considered, I. 206.

Title of his Gospel, 297. Its date, 297, 298. Genuineness and authenticity of his Gospel, 299. Particularly of the first two chapters, 299—302. His Gospel, for whom written, 302, 303.

Synopsis of its contents, 303. Observations on its style, ibid. His narrative of the slaughter of the infants at Bethlehem vindicated, I. 419. viour's genealogy and that of Saint Luke reconciled, 400, 401. 417, 418.

Meaning of words, general rules for the investigation of, I. 324—326.

Medals (ancient), a proof of the credibility of the Scriptures, I. 88

_92

Mediator, Scripture doctrine of the necessity of, confirmed by the traditions and opinions of the heathens, I. 70, 71.

Megilloth, a division of the Jewish Scriptures, notice of, I. 213. note 2. And of the Targum or Chaldee paraphrase on it, 263.

Mekama, a species of Oriental poetry, nature of, II. 232. note 2. The book of Job a poem of this description, ibid.
 Melito (Bishop of Sardis), testimony of, to the genuineness of the

New Testament, I. 43.

Messiah, or the Christ, observations on the accomplishment of prophecy concerning, I. 126, 127, 390—393.

Messiah, or the Christ.

I. Prophecies in the OLD TESTAMENT, concerning the Messiah, and their fulfilment .—That a Messiah should come, I. 127. 451. The time and place when and where he was to come, 127. 451. That time and place when and where he was to come, 127. 451. That he was to be God and man together, 451. From whom he was to be descended, 127. 451. That he was to be preceded by a prophet, in the spirit and power of Elias, 451. That he Messiah was to be a prophet, and confirm his doctrine by great miracles, 451, 452. Predictions relative to his sufferings, death, resurrection, and ascension, 128, 452, 453. Predictions relative to the particular offices of the Messiah, as a prophet, priest, and king, 453

II. Predictions of Jesus the Messiah relative to his own sufferings, &c. and their fulfilment:—Predictions and their fulfilment for the confirmation of his disciples' faith, I. 456, 457. Relative to the time, nrmaton of his disciples faith, I. 436, 457. Relative to the time, place, and manner of his sufferings, and the persons by whom they were to be inflicted, 129, 457, 458. His resurrection and ascension, 457. The descent of the Holy Spirit on his apostles, 129. Prophecies concerning the various minute circumstances which were to precede, accompany, and follow the destruction of Jerusalem, 129, 130, 458—462. Prophecies concerning the spread of the Gospel, with a refutation of their alleged non-fulfilment, 130—141. ment. 130-141.

Metaphors, nature of, I. 361. Sources of Scripture metaphors, 361, 362. The works of nature, 362. The occupations, customs, and arts of life, 363. Religion and things connected with it, ibid. Sacred history, ibid. Rules for the interpretation of them, 355—the effect, 360. Of the subject, ibid. Of the adjunct, 360, 361. Micah (the prophet), account of, II. 270. Occasion and scope of his prophecy, ibid. Synopsis of its contents, 270, 271. His prediction concerning the Messiah, 271. Observations on his style, ibid. Michaelis (J. D.), notice of his system of recensions of the New tament, I. 206.

Metonymy, nature of, I. 359. Metonymy of the cause, 359, 360.

Michtam, or Golden Psalms, II. 242.

Midianites, severity of Moses to, vindicated, I. 410. Ministry of Christ, duration of, I. 321.

Ministry of Christ, duration of, I. 321.

Miracles recorded in the Scriptures are proofs of their divine inspiration, I. 93. Definition of a miracle, 93, 94. Nature of the evidence from miracles, 94. Their design, 94, 95. The credibility of miracles proved, 95—98. Refutation of the sophistry of Mr. Hume, 96, 97. Six criteria for ascertaining miracles, 98, 99. Inapplicable to pretended popish miracles, 99. note. Why Jesus Christ on some occasions enjoined secrecy on the persons healed by him, 98, 99. And used external applications, 99, 100. Application of our six criteria to several miracles related in the Old Testament, 100. And to the miracles recorded to have been wrought by Jesus and his apostles, 101. Their number, ibid. Variety, ibid. Design, 101, 102. Greatness, 102. Persons by or before whom they were wrought, 102, 103. In what manner performed, 103. Their effects, ibid. Were never denied, ibid. Examination of some of them, 103—106. Particularly of the miracle of Christ's resurrection, 106—115. General summary of the argument from miracles, 115, 116. Comparison of the miracles related in the Scriptures with pretended pagan and popish miracles, 116. in the Scriptures with pretended pagan and popish miracles, 116—119. Cessation of miracles, 117, 118. note. The moral and religious instruction concealed under the miracles of Jesus Christ, Mismor and Mismor-Shur, titles of the Psalms, probable import of, 11. 243.

Misna, account of, I. 341, 345.

Mistakes of transcribers, a cause of various readings, I. 283, 284.

Mohammed acknowledged the authority of the Gospels, I. 83. Deplorable state of religion and morals among his followers, 22.

The spread of Mohammedism no objection to the truth of Christianity, but rather a confirmation of it, 137. Its progress accounted for, 137, 138.

Monarchies (the four great), Daniel's prediction concerning, and its fultilment, I. 126.

Moral Parts of Scripture, rules for interpreting, I. 395-398.

Moral Qualifications for studying the Scriptures, I. 186, 187. Moral Sense of Scripture, Kant's theory of, unfounded, I. 323, 324. Morality, apparent contradictions to, in the Scriptures, considered, and shown to have no foundation, I. 408—414. Morality of the patriarchal ages, 143. Of the Mosaic dispensation, 146, 147. Of the Gospel, 152—156. Superior motives of the morality of the Gospel, 156—158. It is not too strict, 162, 163. Nor are any of the moral precepts of Christianity unreasonable and impracticable, 163, 164.

cable,163, 164.

Morgan (Dr.), contradictory deistical observations of, I. 23.

Moses not a mythological but a real person, I. 34, 35, 77. Character of, as an historian, 59. Was not an enthusiast, 60. Was not himself imposed upon, ibid. Did not impose upon others, 61. His impartiality, ibid. Credibility of his writings confirmed by testimonies from natural and civil history, 69—77. Observations on the miracles wrought by him, 100, 101. Christ, in what sense a greater prophet than Moses, 453, 454. His predictions respecting the Jewish nation, and their fulfilment, 123. Summary view of the doctrines and precepts of the Mosaic dispensation, 143—147.

The Mosaic dispensation introductory to that of the Gospel, 148. The Mosaic dispensation introductory to that of the Gospel, 148. Apocryphal books ascribed to Moses, II. 203. Psalms ascribed to him, 239. Accounts of his genuine writings; see the articles Deuteronomy, Exodus, Genesis, Leviticus, Numbers, Pentateuch, in this indice. in this index.

Murrain among cattle, on the plague of, II. 206.

Muthlabben, import of, II. 243.

Mysteries (Grecian), inefficacy of, in a religious and moral point of view, I. 17.

Mysteries in religion, no just ground for rejecting the Scriptures, Mysteries in rengan, at July 1. 158, 159.

Mysteal Sense of Scripture defined, I. 323. Necessity of it argued a priori, 382. Instances of it found in the Old and New Testaments, 382, 383. The Song of Solomon, a sublime mystical allegory, 11. 251-253.

NAHUM (the prophet), account of, II. 271 Scope and synopsis of his prophecy, ibid.

Nain, miracle wrought at, I. 105.

Names, synonymous with persons, I. 197. Of persons and places liable to change, 402. Several names sometimes given to the same persons and places, ibid. False readings sometimes a source of differences in names, ibid. Names of things put for the things themselves, 361.

Natural History, importance of, in studying the Sacred Writings, 1. 352. Confirms the Mosaic narrative of the deluge, 71, 72. Nature, works of, a source of Scripture metaphors, 1. 362. The course of nature explained, 93, 94.

Nebuchadnezzar, prophecies concerning, and their fulfilment, I. 124.

Neginoth, import of, II. 243.

Nehemiah (book of), II. 225. Its title and author, ibid. Argument and synopsis of its contents, ibid. Observations on the character of Nehemiah, ibid.
Nehiloth, import of, II. 243.
Neokoros, office of, I. 90, 91.

Neologian Interpretations exposed, I. 326. Particularly in the book of Genesis, II. 205.

New Testament. See Testament (New). Nineveh, prophecies concerning, and their fulfilment, I. 125, 126.
Nolan's (Dr.) system of recensions, abstract of, I. 206—208.
Numbers, apparent contradictions in, explained, I. 403, 404. Singular number put for the plural, 372. And a definite for an indefinite number, ibid.

Numbers (book of), title, author, date, and argument, II. 208. Scope, ibid. Types of the Messiah, 208, 209. note. Predictions of the Messiah, 208. Chronology, ibid. Synopsis of its contents, 209. Observations on the Book of the Wars of the Lord, mentioned in Num. xxi. 21., I. 57. II. 210.

OBADIAH (the prophet), account of, II. 282. Synopsis of his prophecy, ibid.

Obedience, powerful motives to, contained in the Gospel, I. 156—158. Obectence, powerful motives to, contained in the Gospel, I. 100—100. Objections, various, of infidels to the doctrine and morality of the Scriptures refuted, I. 158—167. Inability to answer all such objections no just cause for rejecting the Scriptures, 180, 181. Observations on the Scriptures, importance of collections of, I. 353. Occasions of particular books of Scripture, importance of knowing, I. 349. Particularly for the interpretation of Scripture allegories, 364, 365.

364, 365,

Occidental Recension of the New Testament, account of, I. 205. Old and New Testaments, alleged contradictions between, explained, 1, 414—418. See Testament (Old), and Testament (New). Vol. II. Onkelos, Targum of, I. 262.

Oracles (heathen), vagueness of, contrasted with the clearness of the Scripture prophecies, I. 120, 121.

"Ordained to eternal Life," the phrase explained, I. 423, 424. and Order of books, importance of knowing, I. 348. In what order the Scriptures should be read, 187. In what order the books of the Old Testament are arranged in Hebrew Bibles, 217, 218.

Oriental Languages, remarks on, I. 188, 189.

Oriental Languages, remarks on, I. 188, 189.

Oriental and Occidental Readings, account of, I. 202, 203.

Oriental Recension of the New Testament, I. 205.

Origen, notice of, I. 42. His testimony to the genuineness of the New Testament, ibid. Account of his biblical labours, 267. Specimen of his Tetrapla and Hexapla, ibid. Observations thereon. 267, 268. Original Sin, Scripture account of, confirmed by heathen testimonies, I. 70.

Osiander's (Luke) revision of the Vulgate, notice of, I. 277.

Otaheite, beneficial effects of Christianity at, I. 175.

PAGAN pretended miracles, observations on, I. 116-118.

Pagan writers, value of, in the study of the Scriptures, I. 335, 336.
Their testimony to the credibility of the facts related in the New Testament, 78—87.

Palestino-Syriac Version of the New Testament, I. 272.

Papias, testimony of, to the genuineness of the New Testament,

Parable, nature of, I. 366. Antiquity of this mode of instruction, ibid. Rules for the interpretation of parables, 366—368. Parables, why used by Jesus Christ, 368, 369. The parables of Christ compared with the most celebrated fables of antiquity, 369, 370. Parabolic Sense, I. 323.

Parabotic Sense, I. 323.

Parallel Passages, or analogy of Scripture, importance of, I. 330.

Nature of them, ibid. Different kinds of, ibid. Verbal parallelisms, ibid. Real parallelisms, 330, 331. Parallelisms of members, or poetical parallelisms, 331, 332. Rules for investigating parallel passages, 332, 333. And for employing parallel passages in the determination of various readings, 288.

Parallelism, defined, I. 374. Examples of parallel lines gradational, 375. Parallel lines antithetic, ibid. Parallel lines constructive, 375, 376. Parallel lines introverted, 376. The poetical parallelism not confined to the Old Testament, 377. But proved to exist in the New Testament, 377, 378. Examples of parallel couplets, 378. Triplets, ibid. Quartains, ibid. Five-lined stanzas, ibid, Stanzas of six lines, 379. And of more than six parallel lines, ibid, Parallel lines gradational in the New Testament, ibid. Introverted parallelisms, 379, 380.

Paralytic, circumstances of the healing of, I. 104.

Paralytic, circumstances of the healing of, I. 104.

Paraphrases, nature of, I. 353.

Paraschioth, or ancient divisions of the Pentateuch, notice of, I. 213.

Parents, put for their descendants, I. 359.

Parenthesis, nature and use of, in the interpretation of Scripture, I. 338.

Paris (Abbé de), pretended miracles ascribed to, exposed, I. 118, 119.

Paronomasia, nature of, I. 372. Part put for the whole.—Examples of, I. 371.

Part put for the whole.—Examples of, I. 371.

Passover, observance of, a proof of the credibility of the Old Testament, I. 66.

Patriarchal Theology. idea of, as contained in the book of Job, II. 236, 237. And in the book of Genesis, I. 142, 143.

Patriotism, the duty of, taught in effect in the New Testament, though not by name, I. 165, 166.

Paul (St.), account of the life and labours of, II. 321—325. Remarks on his conversion, 322, 323. His character, 325, 326. Observations on the style of his writings, 326—329. Was intimately acquainted with the Greek classic poets, 327. note. The genuineness of Paul's writings attested by Peter, I. 45. Propriety of his address to Felix illustrated, II. 327. Number and order of his Epistles, 330. Observations on their phraseology, 330, 331. Rules for studying them most advantageously, I. 393—395. Paul wrote no other Epistles to the Corinthians than those now extant, 57, 58. II. 335. For Critical Analyses of Saint Paul's Epistles, see their several titles in this index. several titles in this index.

several titles in this index.

Pentateuch (Hebrew), import of, II. 203. Its divisions, ibid. External Proofs of its authenticity, I. 32. Its language, ibid. The nature of the Mosaic law, 32, 33. The united testimonies of Christians, Gentiles, and Jews, from the latest to the remotest times, 33—35. Internal Evidences arising from its contents, 35, 36. Its credibility confirmed by natural and civil history, 68—78. Refutations of objections to the authenticity of the Pentateuch, 36—38. Its argument, II. 203. How divided by the Jews, I. 213. History of the Hebrew text of the Pentateuch, 200. Form of synagogue rolls of, 216. The Pentateuch, the best executed portion of the Septuagint Greek translation, ibid. For accounts of the several books of the Pentateuch, see the articles Deutcronomy. the several books of the Pentateuch, see the articles Deuteronomy, Exodus, Genesis, Leviticus, and Numbers.

Pentateuch (Samaritan), account of, I. 203. Manuscripts of it, 221.

Differences between it and the Jewish Pentateuch, how accounted for, 204. Samaritan version of it, ibid. Arabic version,

Pentecost, feast of, a proof of the credibility of the Old Testament, Persecution, not sanctioned by the Scriptures, I. 166, 167.

Persic versions (ancient), of the Old and New Testaments, I. 275.
Persisms of the New Testament, notice of, I. 199.
Personification, nature of, I. 362, 363.

Persons, transitions of, to be carefully noticed, I. 394, 395.

Peschito, or old Syriac version of the Scriptures, account of, I. 270, 271.

Pesukim, or verses of the Pentateuch, notice of, I. 213.

Peter (8t.), account of, II. 360, 361. Genuineness of his first Epistle, 361. To whom addressed, ibid. Whence written, 361, 362. Its scope, 362. Analysis of its contents, ibid. Genuineness and authenticity of his second Epistle, 362—364. Its date, 364. Scope and synopsis of its contents, ibid. Observations on the style of St. Peter's two Epistles, 362.

Played, heretoring of explained, I. 409. Physical Neckel's were

St. Peter's two Epistles, 362.

Pharaoh, hardening of, explained, I. 409. Pharaoh-Necho's war against Judæa confirmed by one of the pyramids of Egypt, I. 89.

Philemon, account of, II. 347, 348. Date of the Epistle to him, 348. Its genuineness and authenticity, ibid. Occasion and scope of this Epistle, 348, 349. Observations on it, 349.

Philippians, notice of, II. 340. Date of the Epistle to, ibid. Occasion, ibid. Scope and synopsis of its contents, ibid.

Philospudeus, account of, I. 345. Value of his writings in the study of the Scriptures, ibid. His testimony to the genuineness of the Old Testament, I. 30.

Philospubers (ancient) ignorance of concerning the two powers.

Philosophers (ancient), ignorance of, concerning the true nature and worship of God, I. 16. The creation of the world, 17. And origin of evil, ibid. The means of reconciling man to God, 17, 18. gin of evil, ibid. The means of reconciling man to God, 17, 18. Divine grace and assistance towards the attainment of virtue, 18. The true happiness of man, ibid. The immortality of the soul, ibid. A future state of rewards and punishments, 19. Effects of their ignorance in principle, 19, 20. They countenanced flagitious practices, 20. Why they produced so little effect on mankind, ibid. Importance of a knowledge of the ancient philosophical notions and sects to the interpretation of Scripture, 352. Philosophers (modern deistical), absurd and contradictory tenets of, concerning religion, I. 22—24. And morals, 25. Baneful effects of their principles on a nation, 25, 26. And on individuals, 26. Are indebted for every thing wise or good in their writings to the indebted for every thing wise or good in their writings to the Scriptures, 22, 173.

Philosophy, alleged contradictions to, in the Sacred Writings, considered, and shown to be unfounded, I. 421, 422.
 Philosenian-Syriac version of the New Testament, account of, I.

Pilate (Pontius), procurator of Judæa, testimony of, to the character of Christ, I. 81, 82.

Place, importance of knowing where any of the sacred books were written, I. 348, 349. Examples of place, put for what is contained therein, 360.

tained therein, 360.

Pliagues inflicted upon the Egyptians, remarks on, II. 206, 207.

Pliny's account of the character and principles of the Christians, with remarks, I. 84, 85.

Poetry of the Hebrews:—Account of its peculiar construction, I. 373—376. Vestiges of the poetical style in the New Testament, 377—380. Different species of Hebrew poetry, 380, 381. Observations for the better understanding the composition of the sacred poets, 381, 382. The poetical books of the Old Testament, why so termed, II. 227. For analyses of the poetical books of the Old Testament, see Ecclesiastes, Job, Proverbs, Psalms, and Song of Sclome, in this index. Solomon, in this index.

Points. See Vowel Points

Polycarp, testimony of, to the authenticity of the New Testament, I. 45.

Polytheism, deplorable effects of, I. 16, 17. 20-22. Abolished by Christianity, 171.

Popery, corruptions of religion by, a proof of the fulfilment of prophecy, I. 140. Remarks on some pretended popish miracles, 118, 119.

Porphyry, testimony of, to the authenticity of the Pentateuch, I. 35.

And of the New Testament, 47. And to the character of the first Christians, 85. His objections against the prophecies of Daniel refuted, II. 280.

Possessor of a thing put for the thing possessed, I. 360.
Poussines' collection of various readings, notice of, I. 245.
Practical Reading of the Scriptures, importance of, I. 425, 426.
Rules for it, 426, 427.

Rules for it, 425, 427.

Prayer of Manasses, apporryphal, II. 292.

Preservation of the Scriptures, a proof of their divine origin, I. 168.

The uncorrupted preservation of the Old Testament proved from the absolute impossibility of its being falsified or corrupted, either by Jews, 52, 53, 7 or by Christians, 53. And from the agreement of ancient versions and manuscripts, 53, 54. The uncorrupted preservation of the New Testament proved from its contents, 54, from the utre impossibility of its being universally corrupted, 54, 55, from the agreement of all the manuscripts extant, 55. Of ancient versions, and of the quotations of the New Testament in the writings of the early Christians, 55, 56. Proofs that none of the books of the Old Testament have ever been lost, 56, 57. Nor any of the books of the New Testament, 57, 58. Recapitulation of this argument, 184, 185. this argument, 184, 185.

Profiance writers, alleged inconsistencies between, and the sacred writers, considered, I. 418—420. Supposed quotations from, in the New Testament, 318, 319.

Promises of Scripture, classification of, I. 398. Rules for the right interpretation of them, 398, 399.

Propagation of Christianity, a proof of the credibility of the New Testament, I. 67, 68. And that the Gospel is from God, 130—132. Examination of the difficulties attendant on the propagation of Christianity, 448—450.

Prophecy defined, I. 119, 120. Difference between the pretended rophecy defined, f. 113, 120. Difference between the preferenced predictions of the heathen oracles and the prophecies contained in Scripture, 120—122. Use and intent of prophecy, 122. On the chain of prophecy, ibid. Classification of Scripture prophecies, ibid. Class I. Prophecies relating to Abraham, Ishmael, and the settlement of the Israelites in Canaan, 122, 123. Moses's prophecy concerning the sufferings, captivity, and present state of the Jews, 123. Birth of Josiah foretold, and his destruction of ideleter 123, 124. Predictions of English Resemble Facilities. prophecy concerning the suberings, captivity, and present of the Jews, 123. Birth of Josiah foretold, and his destruction of idolatry, 123, 124. Predictions of Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Daniel, and Hosea, relative to the Jews, 124. Class II. Prophecies relating to the empires or nations that were neighbouring to the Jews, 124. Tyre, 124, 125. Egypt, 125. Ethiopia, ibid. Nineveh, 125, 126. Babylon, 126. The four great monarchies, ibid. Class III. Prophecies announcing the Messiah, his offices, atonement, death, resurrection, and ascension, &c. 126-129. 454

-458. Class IV. Prophecies delivered by Jesus Christ and his apostles, 129. Predictions of Jesus Christ concerning the fall of atonement, death, resurrection, and ascension, &c. 126—129, 404
—458. Class IV. Prophecies delivered by Jesus Christ and his apostles, 129. Predictions of Jesus Christ concerning the fall of Jerusalem, 129, 130, 458—462. And the spread of the Gospel, 130—132. Refutations of objections from the alleged obscurity of prophecy, 141. Prophecy, a standing miracle, ibid. Recapitulation of this argument, 185, 186. Contradictions asserted to subsist between the prophecies of Scripture and their fulfilment, shown to have no foundation, 406. On the accomplishment of prophecy in general, 390, 391. And on the accomplishment of prophecies concerning the Messiah in particular, 391, 392. And also of the Apocalypse, II. 383. Tables of the prophecies cited in the New Testament, as being accomplished, either literally, typically, or by way of illustration, I. 316, 317.

Prophets, different kinds of, mentioned in the Scriptures, II. 253, 254. Their situation and manner of living, 254. Mosaic statutes concerning prophets, ibid. Evidences of a divine mission, ibid. Qualifications of the prophets, 255. Nature of their inspiration, 255, 256. Antiquity and succession of the prophets, 257. Collection of their writings and mode of announcing their predictions, 257, 258. Observations on the structure of the prophetic poesy, I. 380. The prophetical books, why so called, II. 253. Their number and order, 258. Tables of the prophets, according to the times when they are supposed to have flourished, 259. General rules for ascertaining the sense of the prophetic writings, I. 388—390.; and particularly the accomplishment of prophetical books, see their several titles in this index.

"The Prophets," an ancient division of the Old Testament, I. 213. Prophetic Poetry of the Hebrews, I. 380.

Proverbs (Scripture), nature of, I. 370, 371. Prevalence of this mode of instruction, 370. Different kinds of proverbs:—Proverbial sentences, 371. Proverbial phrases, ibid. The proverbs occur ring in the New Testament, how to be interpreted, ibid.

Proverbs (Bo

Proverbs (Book of), II. 245. Title, author, and canonical authority, 245, 246. Scope, 246. Quotations from this book in the New Testament, ibid. and note. Synopsis of its contents, ibid. Observations on this book, 247.
Psalms (Book of), II. 237. General title, ibid. Their structure, 238.
Canonical authority, ibid. Authors to whom they have been ascribed, ibid. Moses, 239. David, ibid. Asaph, ibid. The sons of Korah, ibid. Heman and Ethan, 240. Solomon, ibid. Anonymous Psalms, ibid. Chronological arrangement of the Psalms by Calmet, 240, 241. Collection of the Psalms into a volume, 241, 242. The hundred and fifty-first Psalm spurious, ibid. and note. Calmet, 240, 241. Collection of the Psalms into a volume, 241, 242. The hundred and fifty-first Psalm spurious, ibid. and note. On the inscriptions or titles of the Psalms, 242, 243. Probable meaning of the word Selah, occurring in them, 243, 244. Scope of the book of Psalms, 244, 245. Table of Psalms, strictly prophetical of the Messiah, I. 316. Rules for better understanding them, II. 245. Table of the Psalms classed according to their several subjects, ibid.

Pseudo-Jonathan, Targum of, I. 263.

Punctuation of the New Testament, I. 214, 215. Pythagoras, fabulous miracles ascribed to, exposed, I. 117.

QUALIFICATIONS (moral) for studying the Scriptures, I. 186, 187.

Quotations:—
1. Quotations from the Old Testament in the New, general observations on, 1. 293. Quotations from the Hebrew Scriptures and from the Septuagint version in the New Testament, with notes thereon, 293—310. Classification of quotations from the Hebrew Scriptures in the New Testament, 311, 312. And of quotations from the Septuagint version, 312, 313. On the probable causes of seeming discrepancies in such quotations, 313, 314. On the manner in which the quotations from the Old Testament are applied in the New, 315. Rabbinical and other modes of quotations from the New Testament, 315, 316. Classification of quotations from the Quotations :in the New, 315. Rabbinical and other modes of quoting in the New Testament, 315, 316. Classification of quotations from the Old Testament in the New, 316. Quotations in which the predictions are literally accomplished, ibid. Quotations applied in a spiritual or mystical sense, ibid. Quotations made in the way of illustration, 316, 317. Quotations from the Old Testament, which are alluded to in the New, 318. Quotations from the apocryphal writers, ibid. And from profane authors, 318, 319. H. Quotations from the Scriptures, how made by the apostolical fathers, I. 41. Force of their testimony, 45. The quotations of Scripture by subsequent writers, a proof of their uncorrupted preservation, 55, 56. Authority of quotations by the fathers as a source of the sacred text, 280, 281. Application of such quotations to the determination of various readings, 288, 289.

RABBINICAL HEBREW Dialect, notice of, I. 198.

Rabbinical writings, importance of, in studying the Scriptures, I. 311 345.

Rabbinisms of the New Testament, I. 198.

Rainbow, observations on, 1. 75, 76.

the supplying of Elijah by, with food, explained and vindicated, I. 422

Reason insufficient, without Revelation, I. 22.

Recensions, or editions of MSS, found among ancient classic authors, 1. 205. Account of the recensions of the Old Testament, 203. Of the New Testament, 204. Bengel's system of recensions, 205. Of Griesbach's system, 205, 206. Of Michaelie's, 206. Of Matheni, ibid. Of Nolan, 206—208. Of Hug, 208, 209. Of Eichhorn, 200. Col. Stabels of the Stabe Of Scholz, 209-212.

Redemption, Scripture doctrine of, not inconsistent with the received notions of the magnitude of creation, I. 159, 160.

Regal government of the Israelites and Jews. See Kings.

Reigns of Jewish monarchs, on the commencement of, I. 405. Religion of the patriarchal times, I. 142, 143. Of the Mosaic dispensation, 143—148. Religion of the Jews, a source of Scripture metaphors, 363.

Resurrection (future), doctrine of, unknown to the ancients, I. 19.
Fully revealed in the Scriptures, 145, 146. 151. Believed by Job, II. 237. And by the patriarchs, I. 143. Circumstances of the resurrection of Jesus Christ considered, 106—115. And of the resurrection of Lazarus, 105, 106.
Revelation (divine), defined, I. 15. Its possibility, ibid. Probability,

Necessity of, shown from the state of moral and religious knowledge among the ancients, 16-21. 183, 184. And also from the actual state of morals among the modern heathen nations, 21, 22, 184. And from the absurd, impious, and contradictory tenets

22. 184. And from the absurd, impious, and contradictory tenets of modern infidels, 22—26. On the possible means of affording a revelation, 26—28. See Scripture, Testament, Old and New. Revelation of St. John the divine, II. 378. Title, ibid. External arguments for its genuineness, 378—380. Internal evidences of its genuineness, 380. Objections to the Revelation examined and refuted, 380, 381. Its date, 381, 382. Occasion and scope, 382. Synopsis of its contents, 382, 383. Observations on this book, 383.

Revolution in France, horrid effects of, I. 25, 26.

Rewards and punishments, doctrine of, not of human invention, I.

Romans (Epistle to), II. 331. Its date, and where written, ibid. Its Romans (Epistle to), II. 331. Its date, and where written, ibid. Its genuineness and authenticity, ibid. And of chapters xv. and xvi., ibid. The church at Rome, when and by whom founded, 331, 332. Its internal state, 332, 333. Occasion of this Epistle, 332. Its scope, 333. Synopsis of its contents, 333, 334. Observations on this Epistle, 334.

Romish Church, corruptions of, a proof of the truth of the Gospel, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1.

I. 140.

Rossi. See De Rossi.

Rousseau, profligate principles and conduct of, I. 25. His involuntary testimony to the character of Jesus Christ, 156. note.

Ruth (Book of), title and argument of, II. 218. Its date and chronology, ibid. Author, ibid. Scope, ibid. Synopsis of its contents, SACRAMENTS of baptism and the Lord's supper, a proof of the credibility of the New Testament, I. 67.

Sacred Writers, alleged contradictions between, shown to have no foundation, I. 414—418, Seeming contradictions between them and profane writers accounted for, 418—420.

Sacrifices (human), universal among the ancients, I. 17. and note 1. Prevalence of, among some modern heathen nations, 21. Abolished by Christianity, 171.

Schidic version of the Scriptures, I. 272, 273.

Samaritans, origin of, I. 203. Account of the Samaritan Penta-teuch, ibid. Differences between it and the Hebrew Pentateuch teuch, ibid. Differences between it and the recovery remarkation accounted for, 204. Manuscripts of the Samaritan Pentateuch, 221. Critical use of the Samaritan Pentateuch in determining various readings, 286, 287. Samaritan version of the Pentateuch, 204. Arabic version of the Samaritan Pentateuch, ibid. Account of their copy of the book of Joshua, II. 215.

Samuel (the prophet), reality of the appearance of, to Saul, II. 219.

Samuel (two books of), II. 218. Their titles, ibid. Authors, 218, 219. Argument, scope, and analysis of the First Book of Samuel, 219. And of the Second Book of Samuel, 219, 220. Observations on the importance of these books, 220.

Sanctification, New Testament doctrine of, I. 151.
Sancasm, instance of, I. 372.
Scholia, nature of, I. 335. 352. Rules for consulting scholia to advantage, 335.

Scholz (Dr.), abstract of the system of recensions of, I. 209-212.

Sclavonic version of the Scriptures, notice of, I. 279, 280.

Scope, definition of, I. 339. Its importance, ibid. Particularly in studying the epistles, 394. Rules for investigating it, 339, 340. Application of the scope to the interpretation of parables, 367. Particularly in Scriptures, different appellations of, I. 212. Why committed to writing, 27. Proofs that none of the canonical books of Scripture either are or ever were lost, 56—58. Impossibility of their being the contrivance or invention of men, 92. Proofs that they are of Divine authority, and their authors divinely inspired, 93. (See Authenticity, Genuineness, Christianity, Miracles, Prophecy, Doctrine, Moral Precepts, Harmony, Preservation, Benefits, Objections.) A perfect rule of faith and practice, I. 186. Moral qualifications for the study of the Scriptures, 186, 187. In what order they should be rend, 187. Original languages of, 188—199. Manuscripts of, 216—261. Divisions and marks of distinction in, 212—215. Ancient versions of, 261—280. Knowledge of the order of time, authors, and occasion of each book, necessary to a right interpretation thereof, 348, 349. And also of biblical geography and antiquities, &c., 350—352. See Testament (Old) and Testament (New). Scriptures, different appellations of, I. 212. Why committed to writ-and Testament (New).

Selah, import of the word explained, II. 243, 244.

Sennacherib's army, destruction of, I. 418.

Sense of Scripture, definition of, and general rules for investigating it, I. 322—324. Subsidiary means for ascertaining it, 329—354. Interpretation of the figurative meaning of Scripture, 355—358. Of the spiritual sense, 382—384. Of the typical and symbolical sense, 385—387. Different senses given to the same words in different tests. different texts, a source of apparent contradiction in doctrinal points, 407.

Septuagint version, critical history of, I. 264—266. From what MSS, it was made, 266. Held in the highest esteem by the Jews and early Christian fathers, ibid. Biblical labours of Origen concerning it, 267, 268. Recensions of Eusebius, Lucian, and Hesychius, 268. Similarity of its Greek with that of the New Testament, 193. Estimate of the real value of the Septuagint, 268. Its importance in the criticism of the New Testament, 268. and note 6. Syriac version of Origen's Hexaplar edition of the Septuagint, 272. Tables of quotations from the Septuagint, in the New Testament, 312, 313.

Shaftesbury (Lord), absurd and contradictory notions of, concerning religion, I. 23.

Shechinah, notice of, II. 255

Sheminith, import of, II. 243.
Shemitish Languages, remarks on, L 188, 189.
Sheggaion, import of, II. 243.
Shir, Shir-Mismor, and Shir-Hammachaloth, psalms so called, II. 243.

Sur, put for the thing signified, I. 361.
Sign, put for the thing signified, I. 361.
Signification of words, general rules for investigating, I. 324—326.
Sur, origin of, as related by Moses, confirmed by facts, and by history, I. 59, 70.
Sinai (Codex of), I. 203.

Singular number put for the plural, I. 372.
Society, influence of Christianity on, I. 170, 171.
Sodom and Gomorrah, destruction of, confirmed by profane histerians, I. 77.

Solomon, list of psalms ascribed to, II. 240. Notice of writings attributed to him, I. 57. See Ecclesiastes, Song of Solomon, Wisdom of Solomon.

Son, different significations of, I. 197.

Son, different significations of, I. 197.
Song of the Three Children, apocryphal book of, II. 292.
Song of Solomon, author of, II. 249. Canonical authority of, ibid.
Structure of the poem, 250. Its subject and scope, 250, 251. A sublime mystical allegory, 251—253. Observations on its style, 253.
Songs of the Steps, what psalms so called, II. 243.
Soul. See Immortality of the Soul, Transmigration.

Spanish Jews, manuscripts of, I. 218.

Spanish Jews, manuscripts et. I. 218.

Spirit. See Holy Spirit.

Spiritual Sense of Scripture, nature of, I. 323. Vindicated, 382, 383. Observations on the spiritual interpretation of the Bible, 383. Rules for such interpretation, 383, 384. Cautions against extremes in spiritually expounding the Scriptures, 384.

Spurious writings, criteria for ascertaining, I. 39, 40. None of these criteria to be found in the New Testament, 39, 40.

Stations of the Israelites in the wilderness, II. 210.

Στιχοι and Στιχομιτρια, account of, I. 214, 215.

Style of the Old Testament, a proof of its authenticity, I. 31. And also of the New Testament, 49. Examination of it, 194—196.

And of its dialects, 196—199.

Subject, metonymy of, what, I. 359. Examples of it, 360.

Subject-matter defined, I. 338, 339. Examples showing the necessity of considering it in the interpretation of the Bible, 339.

Subjects, duties of, I. 153.

Subscriptions annexed to the epistles, remarks on, I. 215.

Substantives used by the Jews in lieu of adjectives, I. 197.
Suctonius, testimony of, concerning Jesus Christ, I. 82. And to the persecutions of the Christians, 83.

Suicide, recommended and practised by the ancient philosophers, I. 20. and note 1.

Sun standing still, account of, vindicated, I. 421.
Sunday, or Lord's day, observance of, a perpetual proof of the credibility of the New Testament, I. 67.

Susanna, apocryphal history of, II. 292.
Swine, destruction of the herd of, vindicated, I. 102.
Symbolical language of Scripture, remarks on, I. 387. Symbolic actions, how to be interpreted, 390. Concise dictionary of the Symmachus's Greek version of the Old Testament, account of, I. 269. Symcoche, nature of, I. 371. Examples of it, 371, 372. Synonymous words, observations on, I. 325.

Syriac Language, notice of, I. 199. Syriac Versions of the Scriptures, account of, I. 270—272. S version of Origen's Hexaplar edition of the Septuagint, 272. Syriasms of the New Testament, I. 198. Syriac TABERNACLES (feast of), a proof of the credibility of the Old Testament, I. 66.

Tactus, testimony of, concerning Jesus Christ, I. 82.; and the character and persecutions of the Christians, 83.

Talmud, account of, I. 344, 345. Talmudical arrangement of the books of the Old Testament, 217. Testimony of the Talmuds to the character of Jesus Christ, 81.

Targums, or Chaldee paraphrases of the Old Testament, critical account of, I. 202—264.

Tatian, testimony of, to the genuineness of the New Testament, I.

43, 44. Notice of his harmony of the Gospels, 319.

Tertullian, testimony of, to the genuineness of the New Testament.

I. 42, 43, Testament (Old), the Hebrew Scriptures why so termed, I.28. Genuineness of, ibid. External evidences of its genuineness, 29, 30. Internal evidences. Its language, style, and manner of writing, 31. The circumstantiality of its narratives, 31, 32. Its uncorrupted preservation proved from the absolute impossibility of its being falsified or corrupted, either by Jews, 52, 53, 184, 185; or by Christians, 53.; and from the agreement of all the ancient by Christians, 53.; and from the agreement of all the ancient paraphrases, versions, and manuscripts, 53, 54. Particular proofs of the integrity of the Old Testament, 56, 57. Its accounts confirmed by profane historians, 73—83. History of the Hebrew text, 50, 200—203. Different appellations given to it, 212. Order and ancient divisions of, 212, 213. Modern divisions of, 213. Ancient versions, 261—280. Account of the principal Hebrew MSS. of the Old Testament, 216—221. Editions, 203. See Credibility, Inspiration, Pentateuch, Preservation.

Inspiration, Pentateuch, Preservation.

Testament (New), general title of, I. 38, 39. Account of its canon, 39. The New Testament, why written in Greek, 193, 194. Similarity of its Greek with that of the Septuagint version, 193. Examination of its style, 194—195. Account of its dialects, 196—199. Genuineness and authenticity of the New Testament proved, from the impossibility of forgery, 40. 54, 55. From the external evidence afforded by the testimonies of ancient Christians, 40—45. Of beautiful written 45, 45, 46, and beather testimonies 46. evidence afforded by the testimonies of ancient Christians, 40—45. Of heretical writers, 45, 46. And heathen testimonies 46—48. And by ancient versions of it, 48. From the internal evidence furnished by the character of its writers, ibid. By its language and style, 48, 49. 195, 196. By the circumstantiality of its narratives, 49. And by the coincidence of its accounts with the history of those times, 49—51. Its uncorrupted preservation proved from its contents, 54. From the utter impossibility of its being universally accomplished, 54, 55. From the agreement of all the manuscripts, 55. Versions and quotations from the New Testament in the writings of the early Christians, 55, 56. Particular proofs of its integrity, 57, 58. Its accounts confirmed by profane historians, 78—87. (See Credibility, Inspiration.) Recensions or families of manuscripts of the New Testament, 204—212. Descriptive catalogue of the principal manution.) Recensions or families of manuscripts of the New Testament, 204—212. Descriptive catalogue of the principal manuscripts, 222—261. Classification of its several books, II. 293, 294. Ancient divisions of, I. 213, 214. Titles to each book, 215. Subscriptions, ibid. Ancient stichoi and modern verses, 214, 215. Ancient and modern punctuation, 214. See Versions.

Testimony, observations on the credibility of, I. 95, 96. Refutation of Mr. Hume's objections against testimony, 96, 97. Testimony of native contemporary writers a source of interpretation, 329—333. And also the testimony of foreigners who have acquired a language, 235, 236.

language, 335, 336.

Tetropla of Origan, account of, I. 267.

Theodotion's Greek version of the Old Testament, account of, I. 269.

Its critical value, ibid.

The ophilus (bishop of Antioch), testimony of, to the genuineness of the New Testament, I. 43.

Thessalonians, First Epistle to, II. 341. Account of the Thessalonian church there, ibid. Its genuineness, 342. Occasion, scope, and synopsis of its contents, ibid.

Thessalonians, Second Epistle to, II. 342. Its date, occasion, and specific to the contents, ibid.

nessuromans, Second Epistle to, II. 342. Its date, occasion, and scope, ibid. Analysis of its contents, ibid. Observations on this Epistle, ibid.

Threatenings of Scripture, interpretation of, I. 399.

Time, instances of, being put for things done in time, I. 360. Different modes of computing time sometimes adopted by the sacred writers, 405,

Timothy, account of, II. 343.

Timothy, account of, II. 343.

Timothy, First Epistle to, II. 343. Its date, 343, 344. Genuineness and authenticity of the Epistles to Timothy, 344. Scope and synopsis of the First Epistle, 344, 345.

Timothy, Second Epistle to, II. 345. Its date, 345, 346. Where written, 346. Its scope, ibid. Synopsis of its contents, ibid. Observations on this Epistle, ibid. On the use which the Christain church in every age is to make of the two Epistles to Timothy and that to Titus, 345.

Tindal, absurd and contradictory tenets of, concerning religion, I. 23.

Tindal, absurd and contradictory tenets of, concerning religion, I. 23.
Titles of books, remarks on, I. 348. Of the Psalms, II. 242, 243.
Of the books of the New Testament, I. 215.

ibid, note.

Tobit, apocryphal book of, II. 290.

Tradition, insecurity of, I. 27.

Trajan, letter of, concerning the Christians, I. 84.
Transubstantiation, Romish notion of, unsupported by Scripture, I. 356, 357. No miracle in it, 99. note.

Tropes and figures, on the interpretation of, I. 355—358. Tropical Sense, I. 322.

Tropical Sense, 1. 522.

Types, nature of, I. 385. Legal types, ibid. Prophetical types, 385, 386. Historical types, 386. Rules for the interpretation of types, 386, 387* Types of the Messiah, in the book of Genesis, II. 204 Exodus, 206. Numbers, 218.

Typical sense of Scripture, I. 323.

Tyre, prophecies concerning, and their fulfilment, I. 124, 125.

ULPHILAS'S Gothic version of the New Testament, account of, I. 277. Notice of some manuscripts of it, 277—279.

Universal Propositions to be understood with limitations, I. 395, 396.

"Unknown God," origin of the altar to, at Athens, I. 90.

 Urim and Thummim, what, II. 255.
 Usus Loquendi, defined, I. 329. Direct testimonies for ascertaining it, 329-336. Indirect testimonies for ascertaining it, 336-352. Indirect testimonies for ascertaining it, 336-352

Various Readings, the Christian faith not affected by, I. 55. 281, 282. Their nature, 282. Difference between them and mere errata, ibid. Notice of the principal collations and collections of various readings, ibid. Causes of them, ibid. The negligence of various readings, total. Causes of them, that. The negligence or mistakes of transcribers, errors or imperfections in the manuscript copied, 283, 284. Critical conjecture, 284. Wilful corruptions from party motives, 285. Sources whence a true reading is to be determined, that. Manuscripts, 285, 286. Ancient editions, 286. Ancient versions, 286, 287. The writings of Josephus, 288. Parallel passages, that. Quotations of the fathers, 288, 289. Heretical writings, 289. Critical conjecture, 289, 290. General rules for judging of various readings, 290—292. Notice of the collections of various readings by Poussines, 245., and the Marquis of Velez, that, note.

quis of Velez, ibid. note.

Velesian Manuscripts, notice of, I. 245. note.

Versions (ancient), a proof of the genuineness and authenticity of the New Testament, I. 48. Account of the ancient versions of the Old and New Testaments, 261—280. Versions of the Samaritan Pentateuch, 204. The critical value of ancient versions, and hints for consulting them to the best advantage, 333—335.

Their use in determining various readings, 286, 287. Vespasian, pretended miracle of, exposed, 1. 118.

Victorinus, testimony of, to the genuineness of the New Testament, Virtue, no motives to, among the heathen nations, I. 18. Admi rable and beautiful motives to virtue presented in the Gospel 156-158.

Visions, prophetic, II. 255, 256.
Visiting the sins of fathers upon their children explained, I. 409. Voltaire, impious opinions of, on religion, I. 24. Advocated immorality, 25. And exemplified his precepts by his own profligate example, 25. His miserable death, 176.

Vowel Points (Hebrew), evidence concerning the ancient or modern date of, I. 191, 192. Their relative utility, 192.

Valgate Latin version of the Scriptures, account of, I. 275, 276. Variations between the Sixtine and Clementine editions, 276, 277.

Its critical value, 277. Modern revisions of it, ibid.

WARS OF THE LORD (book of), observations on, I. 57.; II. 210. Water turned into wine, observations on the miracle of, I. 103, 104. Turned into blood, in Egypt, II. 206.

Weeks, the division of time by, a confirmation of the Mosaic narrative, I. 69.

Western Recension of the New Testament, I. 205.
Whole put for part, I. 371.
Widow's son raised to life, remarks on, I. 101, 102. 105.

Wilderness, table of the stations of the Israelites in the, II. 210.
Wisdom of Solomon, account of the apocryphal book of, II. 290, 291.
Wisdom of Jesus the Son of Sirach, account of the apocryphal book of, II. 291.

Women, miserable condition of, at Athens, I. 19. note 7. Their condition elevated by Christianity, 170.

Woolston (Mr.), absurd and contradictory tenets of, I. 24.

Words and phrases, rules for investigating the meaning of, I. 324 —326. Emphatic words, 327—329.
Writing, the Scriptures why committed to, I. 27.

Zechariah (prophet), account of, II. 287. Analysis of his prophecy, 287, 288. Remarks on his style, 288. The last six chapters proved to be genuine, ibid.

Zedekiah, prophecies concerning, and their fulfilment, I. 124; II.

Zephaniah (prophet), account of, II. 272. Scope and analysis of his book, ibid. Zodiac of Dendera, comparatively modern date of, I. 73. note 8.

INDEX

OF

THE PRINCIPAL TEXTS OF SCRIPTURE

WHICH ARE PARTICULARLY ILLUSTRATED OR EXPLAINED.

* Such Texts as are cited merely by way of proof or illustration, or in the Biographical, Historical, and Geographical Index, and also in the Index of the Symbolical Language of Scripture, are here designedly omitted, that this Index may not be unnecessarily enlarged.

	GENESIS.			Genesis.			GENESIS.
Chap.	Verse Vol.	Page	Chan	Verse Vol.	D	. 01		-
i. ii	verse voi.	420, 421.	Chap.	17 ii.	Page 32.	Chap.	Verse Vol. 27 ii.	Page
	ii.	205.	ALTO	18 ii.	19. 32.	AAVII.		38. 159.
i.	2, 3. 6, 7, 8 i.	420, 421.		20 i.	287.		28 ii.	25.
4.	3. 6. 9 ii.	205.			81.		41 ii.	202.
			an tes	22, 23 ii.		xxviii.	18 ii.	138.
	8 i.	289.	XV.	5 i.	301.		20—22i.	409.
	26, 27 i.	325. 421.		6 i.	301.	xxix.	1-8 i.	402.
22	28 ii.	160.		9, 10. 17 ii.	80.		2—8 ii.	28.
ii.	3 i.	414. 421.		13, 14 i.	299, 403.		5 ii.	223.note.
	ii.	73.			405.		6. 9 ii.	28.
	9 i.	197.	xvi.	7 ii.	33.	XXX.	14 ii.	36.
	17 i.	142. note.		12 i.	337.	xxxi.	27 ii.	183.
	24 i.	286. 295.	xvii.	5 i.	301.		34 ii.	175.
111.	15 i.	333.		12 ii.	76. 110.		38-41 i.	414.
	22 i.	372.		12, 13 ii.	165.		40 ii.	23. 176.
iv.	1 ii.	204.		19 i.	371.		42. 53 i.	358.
	7 i.	407.		21 i.	302.note.		44—54 ii.	80.
	8 i.	371.note.	xviii.	1—10 ii.	151. & n.	xxxii.	13_17 ii.	174.8 n
		287.			173. & n.		22 ii.	28.
	20 ii.	151.		10 i.	302.	xxxiii.	19 i.	414.
	21 ii.	183, 184.	xix.	30 ii.	33. 150.	xxxiv.	7 i.	36.
vi.	5 ii.	135.		30—38 ii.	15.		ii.	228.
	6 i.	400.	XX.	7 i.	413.	xxxv.	2.4 ii.	158,
	9 ii.	185.	xxi.	8 ii.	163.		20 ii.	202.
	12 i.	339.		10 i.	306.		21 i.	37.
	15, 16 i.	75.		12 i.	302.	xxxvi.	31 i.	37.
	19—21 i.	414.		14 ii.	40.	xxxvii.	25 ii.	187.
vii.	2, 3. 8, 9. 15 i.	414.		22—32 ii.	80.		29 ii.	159.
	12. 17. 24 i.	414.		33 ii.	102.	xxxviii.	24 ii.	40.68,
viii.	3, 4, 5 i.	414.	xxii.	1 i.	414.	xl.	15 ii.	13.
	22 ii.	23.		1—12 i.	409.	xli.	45 i.	88.
ix.	13 i.	75.		2-4 ii.	19.	xlii.	15 ii.	83.
	20 ii.	177.		13 i.	286,		38 i.	337.
	27 i.	359.		18 i.	299.	xliii.	11, 26 ii.	45.
X.	5 i.	36.	xxiii.	10. 18 ii.	54.	xliv.	5 ii.	142. & n.
	8-10 ii.	83.		16 ii.	189. & n.	xlvi.	27 i.	299, 404.
	15. et seq ii.	13, 15,	xxiv.	15 ii.	29. & n.			& note.
xi.	1-4 i.	77.		22 ii.	158.		34 i.	88.
	26. 32 i.	404, 405.		22-47 ii.	29.		ii.	175.note.
		& note.		50, 51, 57, 67 ii.	160.	xlvii.	11 i.	414.
xii.	1 i.	299, 403,		67 ii.	151.		31 i.	309.
	3 i.	359.	XXV.	2—6 ii.	15.	xlviii.	1 ii.	164.
	4 i.	404, 405.		16 ii.	41, note.	41	8. 10. 22 i	414.
		& note.		34 ii.	171.	xlix.	3, 4 ii.	40.
xiii.	10 i.	197.	xxvi.	12 ii.	35.		9 i.	357.
	18 ii.	32.		15—18 ii.	28.		10	198. 331
xiv.	2-10 ii.	32.		30 ii.	80.			371. 406.
	14 i.	37.	xxvii.	6—29i.	408.note.		14i.	358.
	14, 15 ii.	83, 85,		15 ii.	67		25 ii.	25.
	.,		•				477

478		11	DILL C	France				T
Chan	GENESIS. Verse Vol.	Page	Chap.	Exodus.	ol.	Page	Chap.	LEVITICUS. Verse Vol.	Page
Chap.	1 ii.	198.	xxi.	6	i.	351.	xix.	27. 29 ii.	142.
	2, 3 ii.	198.		7—11		166.		32 ii.	82.
	3. 24—26 ii.	199.		14		67. 97. 164.	XX.	6. 23. 27 ii. 10 ii.	62. 64. 67.
	7—10 ii. 25 i.	200. 286.		16,		63.		14 ii.	68.
		200.		18—21		63.		24—26 ii.	171.
	Exopus.			22—25. 27	ii.	64.	xxi.	9 ii.	68.
i.	11. 14 i.	88.		24		64.	xxiii.	4 ii.	73.
1.	19 ii.	163.	xxii.	30. 32, 33, 34. 36 1—4	ıı. ii.	65. 62.		6 ii. 14 ii.	123. note. 178.
ii.	18 i.	414.	AAII.	2, 3		63.		24, 25. 27—30 ii.	127.
iii.	2. 4 i.	415.		8		63.		32 ii.	72.
	6 i. 22 i.	296. 423. 409.		28	i.	300.		34. 43 ii.	126.
iv.	21 i.	409.		31	11.	62.	xxiv.	12 ii. 18 ii.	65. 65.
	23 i.	337.	xxiii.	12		28. 121.	xxiv. x	xv ii.	208.
V.	6—29 ii.	166.note.	AAIII	16		126.	xxv.	1—7 ii.	128.
	7ii.	151.	xxiv.	7	i.	28.57.		8. 10. 15. 30 ii.	128, 129.
vii.	14, 15. 19 ii. 13 i.	40. 409.		12		204.		10 ii.	16.
V.114	14—25 ii.	206.		13		42. 180.		34 ii. 39 ii.	113. 63.
	19—22 i.	415.	xxvii.			114.	xxvi.	11, 12 i.	306.
viii.	1—15 ii.	206.	3232 1 1 1 1 1		i.	382.		22. 24 ii.	208.
	16—19 ii. 20—32 ii.	206. 206.	xxix.	1-37		114. 118.		32 ii.	38.
ix.	1—7 ii.	206.	XXX.	22, &c		97.	xxvii.	1—24 ii. 28 i.	130.
	6. 20 i.	415.	xxxii.	1—6 19		136. 141.		34 i.	411. & n. 415.
	8—12 ii.	207.	xxxiii.	7		96.		01,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,	110.
	12i.	409.		15. 20		415.		Numbers.
	13—35 ii. 16 i.	207. 302. 409.	٠	19		302.	i. ii.	ii.	209.
	20	& note.	xxxiv.	15		61.	i.	2 ii.	41.
	18. 23, 24 ii.	24.	xxxv.	30—35		126. 181.		3. 22 ii.	84.
	28 i.	197.		. 8		158.	ļ. .	16 ii.	41.
X.	1—20 ii.	207.	xl.	17		207.	ii. iv.	2 ii.	209. 415.
	12, 13, 15, 19 ii. 21—27 ii.	39. 207.		26—29. 34, 35	ii.	96.	14.	16 ii.	111.
xi.	1—8 ii.	207.		T			v.	11—31 ii.	56.
xii.	5 ii.	123.		Leviticus.		00W		19—22 ii.	82.
	6 ii.	73. 126.	i.	1		207.		23 ii.	182.
	9 ii. 10 ii.	124. 124.	ii.	1		415. 207.	viii.	6, 7, 8 ii. 24 i,	112. 415.
	8. 11. 46 ii.	124.	iii.			207.		24, 25 ii.
	12—14. 29. 51 ii.	123.	iv. v.		ii.	207.	x.	8. 10 ii.	184.
	25, 26 ii.	125.	iv.	2		65.		12 ii.	33.
	29, 30 ii. 34 ii.	207. 154, 156.	V.	1. 4—7. 14, 15 17, 18	ıı.	65. 118.	xi.	29 i. 5, 6 ii.	414. 179.note.
	35 i.	409.	vi. vii.			207.	xii.	3 i.	37.
	39 ii.	124.	vi.	17	ii.	65.	xiii.	ii.
	40, 41 i.	287.403.		12, 13		96.note.		3 ii.	33.
	46 i.	405. & n.	vii.	6. 10. 33, 34 37, 38		113. 118.		23 ii. 33 i	35, 36. 372.
	ii.	298. 124. 126.	ix.	21	i.	286.	xiv.	25. 45 i.	415.
	51 ii.	85. & n.		3	ii.	76.		22, 23. 30 i.	404.
xiii	2 i.	297.		8	i.	297.	xv.	37—40 ii.	156.
	18 ii.	85.	xiii.	9	ii.	208.	xvi.	2 ii.	41.
xiv.	6, 7 ii. 17 i .	85. 372.		3	ı. ii.	360. 195.		23—35 i. 41—50 ii.	409. 209. & n.
	24 ii.	73.		38, 39	ii.	195.	xviii.	13. 15, 16 ii.	113.
xv.	1. 21 i.	372.		47—59	ii.	134.		19 ii.	81.
	1. 20, 21 ii.	132.	xiv.			196.& n.	xix.	2 ii.
	14 i.	36.		4. 6		133. 134.		3, 4. 9. 17 ii. 15 ii.
xvi.	18 i.	14. 306.	xvi.	3337		208.	xx.	11 ii.	134. 208.
	35, 36 i.	37.		2-5. 17		127.		23—29 i.	416.
xvii.	8—16 ii.	15.		3-28		127.	xxi.	ii.	208.
	11 ii.	131.		7		386.		3i.	37.
xviii.	13—23 i. 14—26 ii.	416. 42.		12, 13 29		96. note. 132.		6—9 ii. 8, 9 i.	136. 383.
xix.	3-6 ii.	41.	xvii.	1—7		415.		14i.	57.
XX.	3-5 ii.	61.			ii.	61.		ii.
	5 i.	409.	xviii.	5	i.	303.		ii.
	6 ii.	82. 375.	1	21. 24—30 22, 23		61. 64.	xxii.	29 ii.
	ii.	62.		28		410.	AAII.	15 ii. 28 i.	169. 421.
	10, 11 ii.	121.	xix.	16—18		64.	xxiv.	2. 5, 6 ii.	86.
	11 i.	415.		18	i.	295.		5—9 i.	380. & n.
	12i.	307.		20		64.		17. 19 ii.	208. & n.
xxi.	12—16 i. 5, 6 ii.	295. 167.& n.		20—22 26. 31		64. 65. 62.	xxv.	1 ii, 1—5 ii.	33. 137
	,	20.10 ///			240	0.46		- O	137.,

	Numbers.		1	Durannawa		t		0
Chan		D	Chan	DEUTERONOMY.	D	Chan	Joshua.
Chap.	Verse Vol.	Page 127.	Chap.	Verse Vol 3ii		Chap.	Verse Vol. 30—35ii.	Page 31.
XXX.	3. 7. 9. 13 ii.	129.	ALA.	5, 6. 11 ii.	63.	ix.	3—27ii.	112.
xxxi.	10 i.	416.		15 i.	359.	IA.	4 ii.
AAAA	28—41 ii.	113.		16—21 ii.			4. 13 ii.	155. 179.
xxxii.	4.4	17. 165.	xx.	5 ii.			10 ii.	24.
	. 49 ii.	33,	AA	5—8 ii.			11 ii,	215.
	1—16ii.	14.		9 ii.	85.		12i.	421.
AAAIV.	3 ii.	27.		10—15. 16—20 ii.	84.		13i.	57.
	6 ii.	28.	xxi.	1—9 ii.	63.		ii.	215. & n.
	11 ii.	26.	AAL	15—17 ii.	163.		и.
WW 1717	4	113.		18—21ii.	411.		15. 43 i.	$216. \ \Im \ n$ $416.$
xxxv.	6—15 ii.	16.	1	ii.			23. 37i.	416.
	16—22 ii.	63.	1	22ii.	67.	xi.	5. 7 ii.	27.
	26, 27 ii.	63. 67.	1	23 i.	386.	Ale	18 ii.
	31, 32 ii.			ii.			19i.	14.
	13 ii.	65. 208.	xxii.	5 ii.	69. 199. 159.		19, 20 i.	416.
A A A VI.	10	200.	AAII.	8 ii.		xii.	1—6 ii.	410.
	To the second			10 ii.	153.	AII.		16. 26.
	DEUTERONOMY.				177.	7:11	3 ii.
i.	1 i.	36.		13—19 ii.	64.	ziii.	3 ii.	15.note.
	9—18 i.	416.		13—21	410.		5 ii.	14.
	10 i.	421.		15 ii.	54.	XV.	2—4 ii.	14. 3 n.
	28 i.	372.		18 ii.	64.		5 ii.	27. & n.
iii.	9 ii.	30.		19. 29 ii.	65.		7 ii.	28.
	12—17ii.	16.	-in	26 ii.	66.	1	9ii.	216.
	14 i.	37.	xxiv.	6 ii.	63. 154.		20—62ii.	38.
	17 ii.	27, 28.		10 10 "	178.		47ii.	14.
		& notes.		10—12 ii.	63.		55ii.	30.
iv.	15—20 ii.	139.		13 ii.	156.		63 i.	416.
	48 ii.	30.	xxv.	1 ii.	56.		n.	19.
	49 ii.	27.		2, 3 ii.	64.		ii.	214.
v.	15 i.	415.		7—9 ii.	170.	xvii.	8, 9 ii.	26.
vi.	5 i.	296.	XXVI.	5—11 ii.	125.		15 ii.	36.
VI.	9ii.	154.	xxvii.	11—13 ii.	147.	xviii.	16ii.	19. 28.
		294.		15 ii.	61.		25 ii.	216.
	13i.			15—26 i.	413.		28 ii.	19.
	16i.	294.		26 i.	326.	XX.	8 ii.	18.
vii.	25, 26 ii.	61.	xxviii.	24 ii.	35.	xxi.	17 ii.	216.
viii.	3i.	294.		39 ii.	179.		43, 44i.	416.
	9ii.	37.		40 ii.	180.	xxii.	16—22 ii.	237.
	15 ii.	34. & n.		58, 59 ii.	64.	xxiii.	5 i.	407.
ix.	1 i.	372.	xxix.	9 ii.	64.		14 ii.	216.
X.	6, 7 i.	416.		10—18 ii.	41.	xxiv.	25 ii.	215.
	16 ii.	110.note.	1	22. et seq ii.	38.		26. 29 ii.	214.
	22i.	416.		23 ii.	27. & n.
Xì.	10 ii.	177.		25—27 ii.	41.		Judges.
	14 ii.	24.note.	XXX.	6 ii.	110.note.
	29 ii.	31.		12 i.	372.	i.	1 ii.	214.
xii.	5—12. 17—19 ii.	83.	xxxii.	2 ii.	25.		7 ii.	90. & n.
	6, 7 ii.	81.		13 ii.	35, 36.		19i.	416.
	15. 20—22i.	415.		17i.	305.	ii.	5 ii.	32.
	15. 22 ii.	117.		21i.	303.		13 ii.	135. 138.
	30 ii.	61.		25i.	331.		20, 21 i.	412.
xiii.	i.	411.		35i.	304.	iii.	15—26i.	411.
	2-6 ii.	254.		42i.	331. 361.		16 ii.	88.
	2—12 ii.	61.		43i.	304.		31 ii.
	13—16 ii.	67.	xxxiii.	ii.	211.	iv.	ii.	30.
	13—18 ii.	61.	A STATE OF THE PARTY OF THE PAR	13 ii.	25.		13. 15, 16 ii.	33.
xiv.	2, 3. 31 ii.	172.		17i.	358.		17—20i.	411.
XV.	1—12 ii.	16.63.		18 ii.	33.	V.	٠٠٠٠٠٠ ii،	217.note.
	7—10 ii.	83.	xxxiv.	ii.	37.		8 ii.	89.
	22 ii.	117.	AAAIV.	1, 2, 3 ii.			6 ii.	217.
xvi.	3 ii.	124.		7 ii.	31.		10 ii.	54. & n.
	6 ii.	73.		/ II.	194.		11 ii.	29.
	11—15 ii.	122.					17 ii.	17. 187.
	16, 17 ii.	122.		Joshua.			19 ii.	33.
	18, 19 ii.	54.	i.	1 ii.	42.		20 i.	421.
xvii.	6, 7 ii.	56, 57.	-	5 i.	309.		28—30 i.	363.
	8, 9 ii.	54.	ii.	3 ii.	13.		30 ii.	91.
	8—12 ii.	54.	iii.	15 ii.	26.	vi.	1i.	416.
	13 ii.	55. 64.	iv.	7 ii.	96.	vii.	3 ii.	85.
	14—20 ii.	43.		9 ii.	214.		12 ii.	175.
xviii.	3ii.	113.		18 ii.	26.		18i.	288.
	9—12 ii.	62.	v.	1 ii.	26.		19 ii.	73.
	10 ii.	61.		4. 6. 9 ii.	110.	viii.	2 ii.	178.note.
	10, 11 ii.	142.	vi.	4 ii.	90.	- annd	24—27 ii.	137.
	15. 19 i.	299.	71.	21 ii.	88.	ix.	7—15i.	366.
	15. 18, 19 ii.	299.		25 ii.	215.		27 ii.	141.
	18, 19 i.			26 ii.	90:	x.	14 i.	372.
		453.	vii.	14ii.	41.	xi.	30. 39 ii.	130.
	20—22 ii.	62. 214. 254	VII.		68.	A. 1 0	30, 31i.	411. & n.
	ü.	214. 254.		25, 26 ii.	00.		00, 01	111.016

480				10	,		1 Kings.
	Judges.	Domo	Cham	1 SAMUEL. Verse Vol.	Page	Chap.	Verse Vol.	Page
Chap.	Verse Vol. 34i.	Page 411.	Chap.	Verse Vol. 18ii.	37. 179.	ii.	25. 29. 31. 34. 46 ii.	67.
xiv.	12 ii.	162.	AATI	28 i.	196.	iii.	16—28 ii.	55.
xvi.	21 ii.	66.	xxvi.	5. 7 ii.	87.	iv.	7 ii.	46.
211	31 ii.	199.	xxvii.	6 ii.	213.		21. 24 ii.	14.
xvii.	6 ii.	217.	xxviii.	ii.	219. & n.		21 ii.	17.
xviii.	30 ii.	217.		7 ii.	89.		22, 23. 28 ii.	44.
xx.	8. 17 ii.	84.		7—25i.	95.		23	422.
	16 ii.	87, 88.	xxix.	1ii.	28.		25 ii.	150. 403.
	35. 46i.	405.	XXX.	1, 2 i.	416. 26.		26i. 32, 33i.	57.
	45. 47 ii.	31. 42.		9 ii. 12 ii.	37.		33 ii.	29.
xxi.	25 ii.	·± 200		21ii.	28.	v.	7—11 ii.	32, 187.
	Ruтн.		xxxi.	1-6i.	416.	viii.	9i.	418.
		010	AAAII	10 ii.	138.		46 i.	343.
i.	1 ii. 14 ii.	218. 177.		12 ii.	199.		63. 65 i.	422.
ii. iii.	15 ii.	156.		13 ii.	202.	ix.	12, 13 ii.	187.
iv.	1, 2. 7. 11 ii.	81.				x.	4, 5 ii.	46.
14.	4 ii.	176.		2 Samuel.			14, 15. 22. 28, 29 ii.	46.
			i.	5—15 ii.	43.	:	16, 17 ii.	87.note. 19. 137.
	1 SAMUEL.			10 i.	416.	xi.	/ II.	138.
i.	13 ii.	131.		14 ii.	44.		27ii.	78.
1.	22—24ii.	163.		18 ii.	216.note.		40 i.	88.
	24—28 ii.	164.		19—27 ii.	88.		41ii.	221.
ii.	10 ii.	219.		21 ii. 18 ii.	88. 87.	xii.	14. 18 ii.	46.
	14 ii.	97.	11.	3ii.	30.		6 ii.	47.
	25i.	325.	iii.	31, 32 ii.	199, 200.		28. 32 ii.	136.
iii.	2. 4, 5, &c ii.	97.		33, 34 ii.	200.	xiii.	4—6ii.	197.
v.	6. 12 ii.	196.		35 ii.	202.	xiv.	21, 22 ii.	135.
vi.	17 ii.	196. 288.	iv.	9—12 ii.	43.		25i.	88.
vii.	19 i. 4 ii.	138.	v.	3 ii.	43.	xvii.	4. 6 i.	422. & n. 141.
viii.	5i.	219.		18. 22 ii.	32.	xviii.	19-40ii.	30.
V111.	11—17 ii.	44. note.	vi.	5 ii.	184.		26 ii.	141. & n.
	14 ii.	46.	l	17 ii.	97.		27i.	372.
ix.	2 ii.	43.	vii.	2 ii.	219,		40 ii.	26.
	7 i.	287.		14i.	307. 14.		44, 45 ii.	24.
	9 ii.	213.note.	viii.	3—14 ii.	31.	xix.	14 i.	303.
X.	24 ii.	43.		16, 17 ii.	47.		18i.	303.
	25 ii.	43.		18 ii.	46.		19 ii.	165.
*	27 ii.	46.	x.	4 ii.	155. 157.	XX.	1 ii.	164.
xi.	1—3 ii. 5—7 ii.	84. 43.	xi.	1 ii.	74.		11 ii. 15 ii.	87, 88.
xii.	17 ii.	25.		9 ii.	152.note.		23 ii.	47. 139.
xiii.	1 ii.	77.		20 i.	196.	xxi.	1—14 ii.	43.note.
	1, 2 ii.	85.	1	26 ii.	202.	xxii.	5, 6i.	120.
	14 i.	411. & n.	XII.	1—14i. 31i.	366. 412.	1	6. 19—23 i.	412.
xv.	7, 8 i.	416.		7i.	427.note.		15 i.	336. 372.
	11ii.	156.	xiii.	29 ii.	46.		34 ii.	87.
	12 ii.	92.	xiv.	2 ii.	202.
	23 ii.	137. 57. 67.	1	20 ii.	45. & n.		2 Kings.
xvi.	33 ii. 12 ii.	43.	xv.	7 i.	287.	i.	2 ii.	153.
AVI.	14 ii.			18 ii.		ii.	9 i.	359.
	18 i.	403.		23 ii.	26.		15 ii.
	20 ii.	46.	xvii.	8,9 ii.			23, 24 i.	412.
	16. 23 ii.			12 ii. 6. 8. 17 ii.			24 ii.	36.
xvii.	2, 3 ii.	32.	xviii.	9 ii.		iii.	15 ii. 16, 17 ii.	184. 24.
	5ii.	87, 88.	1	18 ii.		iv.	13 ii.	85.
	6, 7. 45 ii.			24—27 ii.		14.	19, 20 ii.
	33. 42 i. 38 ii.	403. 87.	xix.	4 ii.	202.		38 ii.
xviii.		81. 88.	xx.	8 ii.		v.	8 ii.	138.
W. A 111°	2	& note		15 ii.			18 ii.	141.
	7, 8 ii.		xxi.	6 ii.		vi.	1-4 ii.
	10 ii.		xxii.	ii	220.		25 ii.
	17 ii.	46.	xxiii.	1, 2 ii 3 i.	355.		90. "	179. note.
xix.	13—17 ii.			13 ii		ix.	30 ii.
	15 ii.		xxiv.	1i.	417.	X.	7, 8 ii.
xxi.	1i.	417.	AAIV.	9i.		xi.	11, 12. 19, 20 ii.
75.52	7 ii. 1, 2 ii					xiii.	1. 10 i.	405.
xxii.	7 ii.			1 Kings.		21.224	17 ii.
	17, 18 ii.		. i.	20i.	290.	xiv.	7 ii.
xxiii.				3240 ii			13 ii
xxiv.	_ '			33 ii	. 28.	xv.	5 ii.
	4, 5, 11 ii	. 156.	ii.	5, 6. 8 i			30. 33 i.
	5—8 ii			5, 6, 28—34 ii			35 ii
	8 ii			25. 29—31 ii		xvi.	3 ii 9—13 ii
xxv.	2 ii	. 30.	1	26, 27 i	40,	· Avita

			· DEJZE ·	or moonore or			Ton
	2 Kings.			EZRA.	77	Chap.	Job. Verse Vol.	Page
Chap.	Verse Vol.	Page	Chap.	Verse Vol. i.	Page 417.	xxxii.	16, 17 ii.	230.note.
xvii.	26 ii.	139. 147.	11.	58 ii.	112.		22, 23 ii.	237.note.
xviii.	24. 27, 28 ii. 4 ii.	136.	iii.	10, 11 i.	374.		9 ii.	38.
A VIII.	5 ii.	221. note.	v.	4 ii.	224.	xxxix.	9 i.	422.
xix.	35 i.	418.	vi.	2 ii.	182.	xli.		336.
22.200	9 i.	89.	vii.	9 ii.	243.	xlii.	5 ii.	231.
	23 ii.	30.		23 ii.	226. & n.		7i.	426.
	26 ii.	40.	viii.	20 ii.	112.		11ii.	229.note. 236.note.
	37ii.	139.	ix.	8 ii.	154.		11-17	200.11016.
XX.	2 ii.	132.note.	x.	7, 8 ii.	66. 24.		Dayres
	7 ii.	196. 72. & n.		9 ii.	A'I.		PSALMS.	owe
xxi.	11 ii.	140.		NEHEMIAH.		1.	1	375.
xxiii.	10 ii.	32.					3 ii. 1, 2 i.	177. 198.
2.7,1111	13 ii.	19.	ii.	14 ii.	21.	ü.	1, 2	299, 390.
	25 ii.	221.note.	iii.	1. 3. 6. 11. 13 ii. 15. 26. 28. 31 ii.	19, 20.		6 i.	290.
xxiv.	8 i.	405.		15 ii.	21.		7i.	300.
	13 i.	416.	v.	18 ii.	46.		9 i.	310.
	14 ii.	89.	vii.	i.	417.		12 ii.	44. 141.
	17 ii.	91.		63 i.	401.	v.	9i.	301. 359.
xxv.	8—12i.	416.	viii.	6 ii.	131.		12 ii.	87.
	1 Chronicles.			16 ii.	154.	viii.	2i.	296.
i.	31 ii.	18.	ix.	3 ii.	72.		4—6 i.	307. 301.
ii.	23 ii.	17.	xii.	38, 39 ii.	20.	xiv.	1—3 i.	301.
	34, 35 ii.	166.	xiii.	5 ii. 25 ii.	66. 66. 157.	xiv.	4ii.	119.
iv.	14. 21. 23 ii.	181.		20	00, 107.		8—11i.	298, 299.
:	22 ii.	223.		Esther.		xviii.	2i.	356.
xi. xii.	15 ii. 2. 8 ii.	32. 87, 88.			100	1	49 i.	364.
XII.	15ii.	26. 74.	iii—ix.		128.	xix.	4 i.	303. & n.
xiv.	9 ii.	32.	iv.	14 i. 2 ii.	196. 44.		8i.	357.
xix.	7i.	417.	v. vi.	1. 8—11ii.	45.		7—11i.	375.
xx.	3i.	412.	vii.	8 ii.	57.	XXI.	1, 2 i.	297. 375. 297.
xxi.	4 i.	417.	ix.	20. 23 ii.	226.	xxii.	1i.	294.
	5i.	421.	x.	1i.	323.		16 i.	389.
xxiii.	4 ii.	42. 79.		2 ii.	226.		18 i.	297, 298.
	11 ii.	42.					22 i.	307.
	31 ii. 16—22 ii.	112. 42.		Јов.		xxiii.	4 ii.	124.note.
xxvii.	25 ii.	35. 46.	i.	1. 3 ii.	230.	xxiv.	2i.	422.
	26—31ii.	46.		5. 11 i.	407.		ii.	205.
	30 ii.	175.		8 ii.	227.		3, 4 i.	375.
xxviii.		43.	Ì	22 ii.	232.	xxviii.	8i.	290. 36.
xxix.	4-7i.	422.	ii.	5. 9 i.	407.	xxix.	4, 5 ii. title iii.	84. 154.
	29 ii.	218, 219.		7 ii. 9 i.	196. 336.	xxx.	2i.	362.
	. 2 Chronicles.		iv.	13—16ii.	256.	xxxii.	1, 2, i.	301.
ii.	1. 10 ii.	179.	14.	19 ii.	151.note.	25.25.26.44	4 ii.	25.
	17, 18 ii.	82.	v.	4 ii.	54.	xxxiii.	9 ii.	205.
iii.	1 ii.	178.		13 i.	305.		13, 14 i.	376.
ix.	26 ii.	14.	viii.	8, 9 ii.	228.		16 ii.	89.
х.	5. 12 ii.	77.	x.	2, 3 ii.	235.	1	12—16i.	310.
xi.	22 ii.	44.		4 i.	339.	XXXV.	13 ii.	132. 301.
XII.	1, 2 i.	153.	XII.	2	372.	XXXVI.	1i.	197.
xvi.	2 i. 10 ii.	88. 65. & n.	xiii.	7 i. 27 ii.	396. 65.	XXXVIII	. 10 i.	332.
A 110	14 ii.	198.	xv.	10 ii.	228.	xl.	6—8i.	308.
xix.	3 i.	196.		28 ii.	151.note.	xli.	9 i.	298.
	8—11 ii.	54.79.	xvii.	3 ii.	81.	xlii.	i.	349.
xx.	22—26 ii.	31.	xviii.	13 i.	197.		1 ii.	30.
xxi.	8—10 ii.	15.	xix.	24 ii.	182.		2i.	340.
	12—15. 18, 19 ii.	196.		25—29 ii.	234. 237.	- 20	7 ii.	39. 84.
xxii.	2i.	403.	XX.	24 ii.	88.	xliv.	3 i.	301.
XXV.	12 ii.	68.	XXI.	32 ii.	202.	wlu.	2 ii.	252.
xxvi.	11 ii. 14, 15 ii.	42. 87.	XXII.	15—20 ii. 3—14 ii.	237. 235.	xlv.	3. 6 ii.	44.
xxviii.	. 2, 3, ii.	135.	xxiii.	11, 12 ii.	237.		6, 7 i.	307.
	3 ii.	32.	xxvi.	5i.	376.	xlvi.	2. 3 ii.	19.
	7 ii.	46.		7i.	422.		2-5 ii.	38.
	20 i.	417.	xxvii.	16 ii.	159.		6. 10i.	376.
xxix.	11 ii.	112.		19 ii.	199.		9	372.
	34 ii.	113.	xxix.	14 ii.	157.	xlvii.	5 ii.	44.
XXXI.	2 ii.			19 ii.	25.	xlviii.	2 ii. 7 ii.	21. 25.
XXXIV.	. 5ii.	198.	:	23 ii.	24.	li.	4i.	301.
AAAV.	20—24 i. 25 ii.	89. 200.	XXXI.	26, 27 ii. 26—28 ii.	141. 229.note.	11.	10 i.	359.
xxxvi.	. 1—4i.	89.		33 ii.	205. 237.	lv.	i.	413.
	4 ii.			The state of the s	note.	lvi.	8 ii.	201. &n.
	29. 23 ii.	223.note.	xxxii.	1-3 ii.	233.	lix.	6. 14, 15 ii.	176.
	Vol. II 3	P

402		4.	·	or rapparone or		omi i di
Ohan	PSALMS.			PROVERBS.	_		1	Isaiah.
Chap.	Verse Vol	Page 34.	Chap.	Verse V	Vol.	Page 38.	Chap.			Page
RAMAN	6 ii.	73.	ii.	16		64. note.	1.	1
lxv.	2i.	339.	iii.	11, 12		377.		3		o.note
	·4 ii.	244. note.	v.	15—18		365.		5
	9 i.	297.	vi.	1, 2,		397.		8	i. 179
	18 i.	306. & n.	vii.	6-23		158.note.			notes 1
lxix.	9 i.	297.	X.	1, 7		375.		9 j
	9, 10 i.	294. 297.		12	i.	310.	ii.	4
	22, 23 i.	303.		14	i.	350.		19 j	i. 32
,	25 i.	298.			ii.	247.	iii.	1624 i
lxxii.	9 i.	361.	XI.	15	1.	397.		17 i lxxvi.		14.		0.1	11.	63.		18. 20 i
ixxvii	i. 1. 11. 16 i.	376.			ii.	80.		23 i		, 158.
	2 i. 19, 20 ii.	295.		22		158.	-	26 i
	24 i.	139. 297.	XV.	1		395.	iv.	1i		.note.
lxxix.		66.	xvi.	4		343.				. 160.
	6i.	297.		15		57. 24.	v. vi.	1—7 i		, 367.
	. 13 ii.	38. & n.	xvii.	18		397.	V1.	3 i 9, 10 i		. 295
	. 5—7 i.	331.	xviii.	21, 22		286.		0, 10		. 344,
	6 ii.	122.	XX.	16		397.			390
	6, 7 ii.	28.note.	xxi.	1		177.		9, 10, 11 i
	7 i.	332.note.	xxii.	6		395.	vii.	3 i
	10 ii.	111.		27		63.			. 262
	11i.	362, 399,	xxiii.	15, 16		376.		14 i		. 390.
		& n.	xxv.	11		370.		23 ii
lxxxv.	10 i.	362.		13	ii.	30.	viii.	1-3 i
	i. 3 ii.	24.note.		15	i.	359.		6 ii		. 183.
	. 20 ii.	44.		21, 22	i.	304.		12, 13 i
xci.	6ii.	38.	xxvi.	1	ii.	25.		14 i	302.	. 392.
	11, 12 i.	294.		4, 5		397.		17, 18 i	307.
xcii.	3ii.	184.	xxvii.	22		68. 178.	ix.	1 ii
	12 ii.	36.	XXX.	7-9		246.		1, 2 i.
xciv.	11i.	305.	xxxi.	6		57.		2, 3 i
xcv.	7—11i.	307.		10-31		164.		4 i
	11 i.	323.		24	11.	156.	X.	1 ii
Tavii	ii.	208.						22, 23 i xcvii.	7i.	307.		Ecclesiastes.			X1.	6 i xeviii.	11i.	357.	i.	2	i.	424.		10 i xcix	6 ii. 5 ii.	44.	ii.	3		247.	_::	15 i
cii.	25—27i.	96.		5. 9		177. & n.	XII.	3i
ciii.	11, 12 i.	307. 376.	vi.	3		199.	xiii.	10. 13 i 1—27 i
CIII.	15, 16 ii.	40.	vii.	6 i		247. note.	AIV.	18ii
civ.	4 i.	307.		20	i.	343.		30i
	5i,	422.	viii.	1i	ii.	247.note.	xvii.	5 ii
cv.	17 ii.	66.	xi.	1i	ii.	176.		13ii
cvi.	28 ii.	138.		9		372.	xviii.	2 ii		. & n.
cvii.	5 ii.	34.	XII.	2—6		365.		2. 7 ii
	34 ii.	38.		5		199.		5 ii	. 179.
cix.	· · · · · · · i.	413.			ii.	247.note.	xix.	6, 7 ii	. 182	. & n.
	3 i.	298.		6i		28. & n.		18—25 ii	. 264.
	8 i.	298.		11 i	1.	371.		19. 21 i	389.
	23 ii.	39.		C			XX.	2 i	385.
cx.	1i.	296.		CANTICLES,	WOT	,	xxi.	1i
	4i.	383.		or Song of Solor				11, 12 i	389.
cxii.	4i.	357.	i.	1		249.	xxii.	6 ii
ani.	10i.	376.		3		159.		16 ii
cxiv.	4. 6 ii.	38.		5	11.	151. & n.		21 ii
cxvii.	1i.	304.		E 0 ' 5	::	152. note.		22 ii
cxix.	22, 23 i. 63 ii.	296.	;;	5, 6		159.	VVIII	23 ii 10—13 ii
CAIA.	96. 130 i.	155, 179,	ii.			32.	xxiii.	11 ii
cxxi.	6i.	425. 25.		3		36. 82.	xxiv.	20 ii
cxxvii		240.		11		24.	XXV.	8 i.
UAAVII	5 ii.	54.		13		37.	xxvii.	1 i exxix.		153.	iii.	7, 8		88. 173.	22,50 7 3 4 9	12, 13i.
CXXX.	1i.	356.	111.	*, 0		note.	xxviii.	11, 12 i
	6 ii.	73.		11i	ii.	161.		15 ii
cxxxii	i. 3 ii. 2		iv.	1		31.		16 i.		303.
	. 1, 2, 3 ii.	73.note.		4		92.		23—29 i
	15—18i.	376.		8		30.	xxix.	1 ii
	ii. 3, 4 ii.	166.note.		15		29.		10 i.
	. 2 i.	361.	v.	4		153.		13 i.
cxl.	3i.	301.	vii.	1		157. & n.		14 i	304.
cxli.	2 ii.	119.		13	ii.	36.	xxx.	26 i.	389.
cxliv.	5, 6 i.	376.	viii.	1. 8	ii.	251.	xxxi.	4 i exlvii.		37.		2	ii.	172. & n.	xxxii.	2 ii		En.
.1	16, 17 ii.	24.				179.		30 ji
cl.	5 ii,	183.		6	11.	157.	xxxiv.	i.	390.	note.

INDEX OF PASSAGES OF SORTIFICAL.
	ISATAH.	1		JEREMIAH.			EZEKIEL.
	Verse Vol.	Page	Chap.	Verse Vol.	Page	Chap.	Verse Vol.	Page 24.
xxxiv.	4 ii.	182.	ii.	18 ii.	15.note.	XIII.	18 ii.	153.
	4-6	389.	111.	6 il.	91.		19. 22 i.	360.
XXXV.	2	30.	t	26i. i. 10i.	360. 375.	xiv.	7 ii.	109.note.
	7 ii. 6 i.	35. & n. 89.	iv.	11ii.	40.	22	9i.	412.
	9 i.	89.		30 ii.	158.		14 ii.	227.
XXXVII.	24 ii.	30.	vi.	6 ii.	89.	xv.	i.	366.
	27 ii.	153.	vii.	31 ii.	19.	xvi.	12 ii.	158.
	38 ii.	139.	viii.	20 ii.	24.	xvii.	3 ii.	29.
xxxviii.	17 ii.	32.		22 ii.	36.	,	22. 24 ii.	36.
	21 ii.	196.	ix.	17, 18 ii.	199, 200.	xix.	1-9, 10-14 i.	366. 44.
xl.	1—10i.	392.	x.	13 i.	197.		11 ii. 25, 26 i.	360.
	3 ii.	46. & n.	xiii.	1—7 i.	386. 154.note.	xx.	6i.	372.
	3-5 i.	294.		22 ii. 3 ii.	29.note.	AAI	21 ii.	143. & n.
	5 i. 6 i.	287. 358.	XIV.	18 ii.	35.	xxiii.	14, 15 ii.	183.
	6, 7 ii.	25. & n.	xv. xvi.	2. 5. 8 i.	386.		25 ii.	90.note.
	6. 8 i.	310.	XVI.	7 ii.	202.	xxvii.	6 ii.	31.note.
	13i.	305.	xvii.	5 i.	339.			36.
	24 ii.	. 38.	2.110	8 ii.	177.		10, 11 ii.	92.
xli.	19 ii.	36. & n.		9 i.	330.		17, 18 ii.	35.
xlii.	1—4 i.	294.	xviii.	2—10i.	386.		18	179. & n.
xliii.	2 i.	376.	xix.	2 ii.	19.		26	25. 269.
xliv.	26i.	376.	xx.	2 ii.	65.note.	xxviii.	12 ii. 3—17 i.	366.
	28 ii.	268.note.		7i.	412.	xxxi. xxxii.	27 ii.	201.
xlv.	23 i.	304.	xxi.	12 ii.	55. 152.	xxxiii.	21. 30 ii.	24.
xlvi.	1, 2,	91, 139. 140.	xxii.	14 ii. 19 iii.	199.	XXXVII	1	359.
xlvii.	7 ii. 2 ii.	26. 178.	xxiii.	5, 6 ii.	275.		16 ii.	181. ℰ n.
xlix.	6i.	300.	XXIII.	5—8 i.	392.	xliii.	3 i.	390.
AllA.	8i.	317.	xxiv.	2 ii.	37.	xlvi.	23, 24 ii.	154.
	9—11ii.	25.	xxvi.	23 ii.	201.	xlvii.	16. 18 ii.	18.
li.	1. 4. 7 i.	375.	xxix.	22 ii.	68. & n.		18 ii.	27.
	3i.	196.		26 ii.	65.note.	xlviii.	1 ii.	14.
	17—23 i.	367.	XXX.	18 ii.	151.note.		_
	23 ii.	90.	xxxi.	15 i.	294.		DANIEL.
lii.	2 ii.	170.note.		22 ii.	276.note.	iii.	5 ii.	184.
	5i.	300.		31—34i.	308.		6. 15 ii.	72.
	7	303.		38. 40 ii	19, 20.	iv.	25, 26. 31—33 ii.	196.
	10i. 11, 12i.	287.	xxxii.	10—15 ii	137.	v.	12 i.	196.
	15i.	306. 304.		35 ii 5—7. 18, 19 ii	. 116.	vi.	7. 12. 16—24 ii.	68.
liii.	1i.	297.	xxxv.	2. 18 ii	. 182.		10 ii.	131, 132.
21440	4i.	294, 358.	XXXVI	22 ii	23. 74.	V11.	1—7 ii. 2 i.	278. 338.
	5 i.	389.		30 ii		viii.	1—7. 20—22 ii.	278.
	7, 8 i.	300.	xxxvii.	15 ii	, 65.note.		14 ii.	72.
	10 ii.	119.	1	16—20 ii	. 66.	ix.	1—27 ii.	279.
	12 i.	297.	xxxviii	. 6 ii	. 65.	xi.	1—45 ii.	279.
liv.	1 i.	306, 389,		7	. 47.	xii.	2 i.	372.
	5i.	376.	1	23 i.	360.
	5, 6 ii.	252.	xlvi.	4 ii			Hosea.
	10i.	375. 297.	-1-21	11 ii		i.	2 i.	387.
lv.	3i.	300.	xlvii.	36 ii	. 199.		10 i.	302.
111	6, 7 i.	375.	xlviii.	19 i.		ii.	6 ii.
lvii.	4, 5 ii.		Alt.A.		& note.		23 i.	302.
lviii.	1 ii.			ii	0.0	iv.	12 i.	357.
	10 i.	286. & n.	li.	8 ji			ii.
lix.	7, 8 i.	301.		19 i		vi.	4 il.
	20, 21i.	304.		20, 21 ii			5	360. 295.
lx.	1i.	362.		64 ii		1 .	6 i. 4 ii.
1-1	19 i.	389.	lii.	24 i	. 113.	ix.	9i.	315.
lxi.	1, 2 i. 4 i.	297. 288.				x.	8ii.
lxii.	5 ii.		1	LAMENTATIONS.		xi.	1i.	293. 391.
lxiv.	4i.	304. 305.	i.	1 i	. 91.		8, 9 i.	375.
lxv.	1, 2 i.	303.		6 i	i. 22.		10, 11 ii.	. 261.note.
	4 ii.		ii.	19 i		xiii.	3 ii.	25. 154.
	10 ii.		iv.	12 i	i. 19.note.		5 ii.	34.
	11 ii.						14 i.	305.
leni	21, 22 i.	376.		EZEKIEL.		xiv.	2i.	309.
lxvi.	1, 2 i.	300.	ii.	9, 10 i	i. 183. & n.	1	5 ii.	25. 29. 35.
	17 ii.	137.	iv.	12 i			f II.	179. & n.
			vii.	15 i			9 i.	376.
	JEREMIAH.		viii.	8—10 i			U
i.	4—10, 11 ii.			8—11 i	. 139.		JOEL.
	10i.			17 i				. 39.
12	18 i.	356.	ix.	2 i			4—20ii
ii.	6 ii	. 34. & n	. [note.	ј п.	U

484	INI	INDEA OF PASSAGES OF SOME			MATTHEW.
	JOEL.		MALACHI.		0		Page
01	ar 1 Dage (Verse Vol.		Chap.	Verse Vol. 6i.	293. 377
Chap.		. 1	W, O	0.00	Afe	ii.
I.i.	11 ü. 39.& n.		041 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0	389. note.		11ii.
	20 ii. 27. 39.		8 ii.	46.		15 i.	293.
	28-32i. 298.389.			119. note. 396.		16 i.	419.
	ii. 105.note.	ii.				2011	& notes.
iii.	2—12 ii. 32.	iii.	i i	295. & n.		ii.	51.77.
ZII.	4i. 389.		11.	46. 392.		17, 18 i.	317.
	10 i. 336.		7-01 11111111111	426.		18 i.	294.
•	18 ii. 33.		T.T	328.		20, 21 ii.	13.
				325. 407.		22 i.	79.
	Assoc	iv.	5, 6 i.	323. 401.		ii.	17.51.
	Amos.						note.
i.	2 ii. 30.					23 i.	294.
	15	AF	OCRYPHAL BOOKS	OF	iii.	1 ii	, 34.
₹.	16, 17 ii. 199.		THE			1—4 ii	. 46.
	25—27 i. 299 ii. 96. 140.						156. & n.
			OLD TESTAMENT.			3 i.
vi.	4 ii. 153.		_			ii
			Товіт.			4 ii
vii.	21, 10,111111111111111111111111111111111	ii.	12 ii.	228. note.		5 ii
viii.						9, 10 ii	. 26.
	0, 100		Judith.		iv.	4 i	294.
ix.	W, 0111111111111111	;	8 ii.	33. note.		5 ii	18. 99.
	11, 12 i. 300. 12 i. 389.	i.	4ii.	157. & n.	1	6, 7 i	294.
	12	X.	9ii.	157. & n.		8 ii	i. 31. 294.396.
	Tarren	xvi				10i
	Jonah.		Wisdom.			15 i
i.	3 ii. 139.			205		15, 16 i
	17 i. 422. & n.	ii.	23, 24 ii.	205. 158.note.		25 i	i. 106.note.
iii.	2 i. 197.	vii.	26 ii.	138.note.		1 i
	4—10 i. 391.	viii.	1 0 11	205.		9. 19 i
		X.	1, 2 ii. 15, 17, 20 ii.	108.		13
	Місан.		3ii.	13.		15	note.
	3 ii. 271.	xii.	4—12ii.	136.	1	14
iii.	3i. 271.	xvi.	1. 7. 9. 20 ii.	108.		15
	12 ii. 19.note.	xviii.	1. 7. 0. 20	-00.		19
	90.		Ecclesiasticus.			21, 22, 27—30	ii. 144.
	2 i. 336.			150		22	ii. 19. 55.
ív.	4 ii. 36.	xii.	11 ii.	158.note.	•		170.
	4ii. 271.	xxiv.	30, 31 ii.	177.		25
-	2i. 293.	xxv.	24 ii.	205.			ii. 55, 56.
V.	ii. 42.	1	D			26	ii. 32.
	ii. 271.		BARUCH.	46.		31. et seq	ii. 144.
	7 ii. 25.	v.	7 ii.	40.		33-37	11. 82.
			1 MACCABEES.			34	i. 396.
	N	1.		110.		38-42	i. 358.
	Nahum.	i.	63 ii.			41	ii. 47.
iii.	5, 6	ii.	4 ii. 54 ii.	90.		42	i. 378.
	12 ii. 37.	iii.	54	90.		43	ii. 144.
		iv.	52—59ii	128.	vi.	1-4	i. 289. 396.
	HABAKKUK.		52ii	76.		2	ii. 83.
		v.	55—58ii	197.		5	ii. 131.
i.	5i. 300. 3, 4i. 309.	ix.	67ii	. 26.		9-13	i. 399.
ii.	4i. 301.	xiv.	32ii			13	i. 360. ii. 159.
.::	8 ii. 25. note		7, 8 ii			19	ii. 151.
1ii.	12i. 363.	741.	,			19, 20
			2 MACCABEES.			19. 31. 34 28	ii. 35. & n.
	HAGGAI.		7 ii	. 13.		32	ii. 13.
		i.	9—15ii			33
ii.	6i. 309.	iv.	19. 28. 30 ii		-::	2	i. 290.
	9 ii. 98, 99.	5	28. 30 ii		vii.	6	i. 380.
		viii.	1—8 i			16-20	. i. 379.
	Zecharian.	x.	21	i. 86.		23	. i. 197.
ii.	12 ii. 13.	XIII.	37 i	i. 76.		24-27	. i. 379. & n.
vii.	1 ii. 74.	AV.				25-27	. ii. 24.
viii	19 ii. 128.			_		26, 27	. ii. 151.
ix.	9i. 296, 29	7.			viii.	6	. ii. 197.
2.15.4	11 ii. 65.		THE NEW TESTA	MENT.		8. 9	. ii. 93.
xi.	2, 3 ii. 36.					12	. n. 167.
22.11	13 i. 296. &	n.	- MATTHEW.			17	. 1. 294.
	417.		:	ii. 299, 30	02.	20	. 1. 342.378
	17 ii. 197.	i. ii.	1-16			22	. i. 356.
xii	. 3 ii. 190.	i.	4			2327	. ii. 27.
	10 i. 298.38	59.	18	i. 285.		28—34	. i. 102. . ii. 197.
	11 ii. 33.		23	i. 293.	ix.	2
xi	ii. 4 ii. 254.	ií.	1-3	ii. 51.		2—8
	7i. 296.	H.	1—16	i. 79.	*	D
xi	v. 16i. 389.

	26			3/			10	400
C1	MATTHEW.	70	100	MATTHEW.	ъ.	61	MATTHEW.
Chap.	Verse Vol 9, 10, 11 ii.	. Page 79.	Chap.	Verse Vol. 15 ii.	Page 120.	Chap.	Verse Vol. 64 ii.	Page 82, 170,
	13i.	295.	AA.	16 ii.		AATH	66 ii.	56.
	15 ii.	161.		20—23 ii.	45.		67, 68 ii.	70.
	17 ii.	155, 179,	xxi.	5 i.	296.		69 ii.	17.
	18—26 i.	105.		8 ii.	156.	xxvii.	5 i.	418.
	20 ii.	156. 197.		8, 9 ii.	127.		9, 10 i.	296. & n.
	23 ii.	199.		9, 10 ii.	44.			417.
	36 i.	328.		12 ii.	78.		11 ii.	56.
x.	5, 6 i.	379.		13 ii.	33.	1	15 ii.	123.
	9 i. ii.	336.		16 i.	296.		19 ii.	52.
	10 ii.	156, 124,		19 i. 31 i.	102. 402.		25	57. 21.
	14 ii.	14.		31, 32 ii.	79.		27—31ii.	70. & n.
	17 ii.	54. 104.		33, 34 ii.	176. 179.		W	72. 156.
	25 ii.	187.		.,	note.		29 i.	372.
	27 ii.	106.		42 i.	296.		33 ii.	19.
	34 i.	358. 360.		42—44i.	378.		35 i.	284. 297.
	39 i.	197.	xxii.	1—15i.	368.		ii.	69. note.
Xi.	10 i.	295.		2ii.	161.		35. 43 i.	390.
	19 i.	79. 398. & n.		11 ii.	161. 162.		37 ii. 40 ii.	71.note. 101.
xii.	1ii.	178.		12 ii.	167.		46 i.	297. 390.
	2ii.	121.		17 ii.	43.note.		50 ii.	71.
	4 ii.	97.		17—21 ii.	78.		52, 53i.	425.
	8 i.	284.		23 ii.	145. & n.		54. 58—60 ii.	71.
	18—21i.	295.		23—32i.	423.		62 ii.	73. 122.
	35 i.	284.		35 ii.	146.		63 ii.	76.
	0 i.	383. 406.		37 i.	296.		65 ii.	21. 101.
xiii.	3—30i.	422. 368.	1	39 i.	295. 296.	xxviii.	1 ii. 7. 16 ii.	73. 17.
AIII.	8ii.	35.	xxiii.	5ii.	145. 156.		7. 10 II.	11.
	13—15 i,	390.	AAM	15 i.	197.		MARK.
	14. 15 i.	295, 298.		27 ii.	201. & n.	i.	3 i.	294.
	31, 32 i.	367. 368.		33 ii.	19.		4 ii.	34.
		& note.		37, 38 i.	000.		6 ii.	40.
	11.	36. & n.	xxiv.	1-3ii.	99.		16-20	321.
	31—34i,	365.		2i.	000.	ii.	4 ii. 3—12 i.	152. & n 104.
	35 i. 45 i.	295. 317. 367.		2, 3 ii.	21. 19.		14—16ii.	78, 79.
	47, 48 ii.	26.		4, 5 i.	458.		22 ii.	155.
xiv.	3—12 ii.	18. 68.		6, 7 i.	458, 459.		26 i.	315. 417.
	6-8 ii.	184.		9 i.	459.	iii.	5 i.	424.
	15—21i.	104.		15 i.	460.	V.	5 ii.	201.note.
	2426ii.	27.		ii.	99.		12—17i.	102.
	25 ii.	73.		16. 18. 24 i.	460.		20 i. 22—43 i.	18. 105.
xv.	34 ii. 2 ii.	26. 145.		19. 21 i. 20 ii.	000. 23.		25, 26 ii.	197.
Av.	3—6 i.	332.note.		24 i.	196.		29. 34. 41. 43 ii.	195.
	4—6 ii.	62. 129.		36 i.	197.		38 ii.	200.
	8, 9 i.	295.	xxv.	1—10 ii.	155.	vi.	13 ii.	195.
	14 ii.	149.		1—12 ii.	161, 162.		17. 28 i.	50.
	31 i.	101.			& notes.		27 ii.	47.
xvi.	2, 3 i.	379. 425.		1—13i.	366.		35-44i.	104.
	6 ii.	124.note.		29 i.	290.	vii.	53 i. 9 i.	26. 372.
	16 i.	327. 343.		33 ii. 34—36 i.	56. 396.	¥ 11.0	9—13ii.	119.
	ii.	54.		41. 45 ii.	173.		31 ii.	17, 18
	19 i.	360.	xxvi.	ii.	19. 125.		37 i.	284.
	21 ii.	76.		2. 6, 7 i.	402.	viii.	15 ii.	148.
xvii.	1—8 ii.	31. & n.		3. 57 ii.	115.		31 ii.	76.
	14 ii.,	131.		5 ii.	55.	ix.	2-9	31,
	20 i.	368.		12 ii.	198. note.		43 ii. 46 iii.	19. 118.
wviii.	1—10 ii.	45.		18 ii. 21—25 ii.	19. 125.	*	9i.	336.
	6i. 8, 9i.	68. 356.		23 ii.	162.	x.	19 i.	284.
	11i.	327.		26 i.	343.	xi.	14. 21 i.	102.
	17i.	338. 340.		ii.	125.		17 i.	377.
	23—35i.	367.		26. 28 i.	326. 356.	xii.	1 ii.	179. note
xix.	3 ii.	163.		27—31 ii.	70. 125.		12 i.	332.
	3—12 ii.	144.		28 i.	327.		26 i.	296, 315 396.
	5 i.	295.		20 ii	81. 125 244		30, 31i. 38ii.	156.
	8 ii.	162. 163.		30 ii.	125, 244. note.		41—44ii.	78 & n.
	12 ii.	146.		31 i.	296.	xiii.	1, 2 ii.	100.
	16. 20 ii,	145.		89. 42 i.	425.		2 i.	461.
	18, 19 i.	295.		ii.	57.		5. 8 i	458.
	19 i.	295.		50 ii.	124.note.		7, 8 i.	458, 459.
XX.	1—15ii.	167. & n.		63 ii.	56.		9, 10. 14	459, 460. 460.
	3. 5, 6. 9 ii.	72.		63, 64 i.	396,			3247

486		1.	NDEA	UF PASSAGES UF	SOMI I CI	ulu.
	MARK.		1	Luke.			John.
Chap.	Verse Vol.	Page	Chap.	Verse Vol		Chap.	Verse Vol.	Page
xiii.	17. 19 i.	460.	Xì.	5—8 ii.		IV.	4ii.	18.
	32i.	285.		13 i.	359.		5—30 ii.	28. & n
xiv.	35 ii.	73. 19, 125.	xii.	44 ii. 38 iii.			12 i. 48 ii.	415. 149.
Alv.	22. 24 i.	356.	AII.	42 i.	332.	v.	2 ii.	21. 99.
	30 ii.	73.		47, 48i.	379. & n.			note
	70 ii.	18.		51 i.	358.		2-7 ii.	195.
. xv.	16—20 ii.	70.		54 ii.			9—16 ii.	73.
	23 ii.	57.		58, 59 i.	340.		17 i.	337.
	28 i.	297.	xiii	1 ii.	18.		37i.	415.
	32 i.	372.		6—9.: i.	367.		40i.	426.
	42 ii.	73.		ii.	37.	vi.	1 ii.	26.
	43 ii.	201. & n.		32 i.	355, 385,		5—13i.	104.
xvi.	14 i. 15, 16 i.	405. 372.		24 25 ii	52. 461.		25—65i. 27. 51ii.	364. 117.
	10, 10	017.	xiv.	34, 35 i. 1 ii.	122.note.		30, 31 ii.	150.
	LUKE.		AIV.	8—10 ii.			31i.	297.
i. ii.	ii.	309.		13, 14 i.	407.		37—40i.	424.
i.	2 ii.	311.note.	xv.	12 ii.			45 i.	297.
	5. 9 ii.	112.	xvi.	1—8 i.	367.		51—58 i.	343.
	10 ii.	99.		8 i.	197. 413.		59 i.	349.
	19 ii.	45.		19—31 ii.			63i.	359.
	32 i.	401.		22 ii.			69i.	291.
	35 i.	285.		10 10 "	154.	vii.	2 ii.	126.
	46, 47i.	359. 378.	xviii.	10—13 ii			17i.	425.
	4655i.	332.	xix.	12 ii. 4 ii.	73. 132. 37.		26 i. 37. 39 ii.	283. 127.
	52, 53i.	374. 182.	XIX.	12 i.	368.		38i.	297.
	63 ii. 67—79 i.	332.note.		12—27 ii				201.
	80 ii.	34.		37—41ii		viii.	53. 1—11.} ii.	315.
ii.	1ii.	13.		40—44i.	372.		7 ii.	57.
-	1—3 i.	419.		41-44 ii	19.		21—24 ii.	67.
		& notes.		43 i.	460		24 i.	197.
	21 ii.	76.		44 i.	461.		44 ii.	205.
	23, 24 i.	297.	XX.	37 i.	296. 315.		48 ii.	147.
	ii.	118.		42, 43 ii.	94.		51i.	425.
	25. 34 ii.	186.	XXI.	5 ii.		ix.	1-4ii.	144.
	39—51ii.	17.		6i.	461.		1, 2, 31—33 i.	104, 105.
	42—44ii.	173,		8 i. 9, 10, 11, 12 i.	458.		6. 14 ii. 7 ii.	121. 21. 28.
	44 i.	122.note. 361.		20, 21, 22, 23, 24 i.	459, 460. 460.		22. 33, 34 ii.	106.
iii.	1i.	405.		i.	197.	x.	3. 14 ii.	176. & n.
ALLO	ii.	18. 52.		24 i.	461.	1	22 ii.	128.
	4-6 i.	294.	xxii.	ii	19. 125.		22, 23 ii.	75.
	ii.	16.		7 ii.	126.		23 ii.	99.
	14. 19, 20 i.	50.		20 ii.			30i.	322.
	19 i.	420.		37 i.	297.		34 i.	297.
	23—38i.	400. 417.		43 i.	285.		39ii.	34.
±	36 i.	404.		43, 44 ii.	310. 56.	xi.	9, 10 i.	105, 106.
iv.	9 i. 15—2 2 ii.	403. 106.	xxiii.	6ii	18.		19i.	378. 350.
	18 ii.	66.	TO ALLENS	7—11 ii.	21.		31 ii.	202. & n.
	18, 19 i.	297.		11 ii.			44 it.	156. 198.
	20 ii.	104.		38 i.	417.	xii.	1—3 i.	402.
	25 ii.	13.	xxiv.	38 i.	196.		15 i.	297.
	33—36. 41 ii.	197.		44 i.	212.note.		20 ii.	110.note.
V.	1ii.	26.		Town			35, 36i.	365.
	18—26i.	104, 105.	2	John.	0.4		38. 40i.	297, 298.
	19 ii.	152.	i.	3i.	347.	wiii	47 i.	407. 125.
		U notes. 154.note		14 i. 18 i.	328. 415.	xiii.	1, 2 ii.	123. note.
	29. 35, 36 i.	365.		28i.	289.		5. 14i.	397.
	37, 38 ii.	155.		29 ii.			10 ii.	133. 157.
vi.	1 ii.	73. 177.	ii.	6 ii.				note.
vii.	11—15 i.	105.			155.		18 i.	298.
	36. 38 ii.	154.		6—10 ii.	154.		23 ii.	154.
	44—46ii.	170. & n.		8, 9 ii			26 ii.	125.
	45 i.	397.		14 ii.		xiv.	2 ii.	99.
viii.	27—39ii.	310.		17i.	297.		6i.	197.
	43	197.		18, 19 ii.			24. 28 i.	356.
ix.	41—56i.	105. 124.		19i.	364.	VV	27 ii.	168. 378.
5.A.s	13 i.	361.	iii.	20 ii. 3—5 ii.	99. note. 109.	xv.	25i.	298.
	22 ii.	76.	111.	14	383.	xvi.	2 ii.	117.note.
	28 i.	405.		14, 15 ii.	136. 201.	xviii.	ii.	19.
X	1i.	289.		16, 17i.	326.		13. 24. 28 ii.	115.
	27 i.	296. 396.		19 і	390.		28ii.	21.
	30 ii.	31.		29 ii.	161. & n.		31 ii.	53.
	30—37i.	368, 395.		36 i.	378.	xix.	10 ii.	53. & n.

		1741	DEA OF THOSE STATE				ROMANS.
	John.	1		Acts.		Chan	Verse Vol. Page
Chap.	Verse Vol.		Chap. V	Verse Vol.	Page 106	Chap.	25-29 ii. 110.note.
xix.	13 ii.		ciii.	14, 15 ii.	106. 287.	iii.	4i. 301.
	14 i.	403, 405.		18 i.		111.	8 i. 396.
	ii.	123, 171.	5	22. 33, 34. 41. 47 i.	300.		10—12, 13, 14 i. 301.
	17—20 ii.	71.	4	18 i.	423. & n.		15—17, 18 i. 301.
	19 ii.	71.	xiv.	11 ii.	140.		28 i. 333. 340.
	24 i.	297, 298.		13 ii.	140. note.	iv.	3. 7, 8. 17, 18 i. 301.
	30, 31 ii.	71, 72.	xv.	16, 17i.	300.		12 i. 338.
	35 ii.	72. & n.		20 i.	289. 407.	₹.	14 ii. 204.
	00.	139.	xvi.	1 ii	108.		19 i. 372.
	36, 37 i.	298.		11, 12	90.	::	7i. 315.
	38-40 ii.	72.		13—15 ii		vii.	18 i. 395.
	40 ii.	198.		14 i.	90.		2i. 359.
	41 ii.	19.		24 ii	65.	viii.	3i. 330.
	7 ii.	198. & n.		25—29 ii	. $140. \ \mathcal{G} \ n.$		19—21i. 338.
xx.	30—31i.	321, 401.		37 ii	. 58.		36 i. 301.
~ vi	1 ii.	26.	xvii.	18 ii	. 60.		3 ii. 66.
xxi.	7 ii.	156.		21 i.	80.	ix.	5i. 325.
	18 i.	365.		23 i.	90.		7. 9. 12, 13. 15. 17. i. 302.
	20 i.	417.		23-31 ii	. 139.		7. 9. 12, 13. 13. 11. ii 337.
xxix.	20			24. 28 ii	. 61.		10
				26	291. 325.
	AcTs.			28	319.	x.
i.	11 ii.	17	xviii.	14-16	79.
	12 ii.	97.	AL TAXES	18 ii	. 130. & n.		3. 10
	18 i.	360. 418.	xix.	12 1	. 156.
	20 i.	298.	ALA.	24—27. 31 i	. 140.		10. 10, 10
iı.	15 ii.	73. & n.		34 i	. 141.note.	xi.
11.	17—21i.	298.		35 i
	25—28i.	298. 390.		i	. 140.	1	16 ii. 120.
	47 i.	423. & n.		39 i			17 i. 328. ii. 183. & n.
iii.	2. 11 ii.	99.	TT	6—12			1 004 61
111.	21 i.	343.	XX.	13	. 424.	1	26, 27 i. 304. & n.
	22, 23. 25 i.	299.		24	. 194. note.		33—35 i. 377.
iv.	6ii.	115.		28	. 289.291	xii.	1 ii. 117, 118.
Iv.	24—30i.	378.note.		33			6i. 342.
	25, 26i.	299.390.	:	23, 24. 26, 27	i. 130.	1	19, 20i. 304.
_	18 ii.	65.	xxi.	28	i. 101.	xiii.	4i. 396.
v.	36 i.	420.		34, 35	i. 21.		9 i. 315.
	37 ii.			38			11, 12i. 406.
	39 i.	196.			i. 148.		12
	1 ii.			3		xiv.	5
vi.	9i.	80.	xxii.	J	185.		11 i. 304. & n.
	ii.			19			13 1. 325.
		110. & n.		21			17 i. 424.
	3 i.	299.		24	ii. 21.		22
vii.		404.		24	ii. 59.	XV.	3
	4i.	299, 403.		24, 25. 29	ii. 57.		4
	6, 7i.			28-36			9. 10 i. 304. & n.
	8 ii.	299. 404.	xxiii.	2	i. 50.		11. 12. 21 1. 304.
	14	& note. 416.	1	2-5		xvi.	9i. 359.
				5			16 i. 397.
	16 i.	299. 197.		8	ii. 144. 19' ii. 73. 93.
	20 i.			23			1 CORINTHIANS.
	41 i.	900		24—26	ii. 58.81
	42, 43i			27—35		² · i.	110
	45 11	. 216.	xxiv.	2	ii. 53.		10
	49, 50 i	300.		5	i. 371.		20. 2001001
	58, 59 ii	57.67		14	i. 314.
viii.	27 ii	. 47. note.		15	i. 351. not	e. ii.
	30, 31	1. 183.		25, 26	i. 79.
	32, 33	300.	xxv.	9	ii. 59.
	39 i	. 292.		13. 23	ii. 52.		13
ix.	9 i	. 425.		16	ii. 58.		16 i. 305.
	29 i	i. 108.	xxvi.	1	ii. 92.	iii.	9 ii. 180.note.
	31 i	. 328.		11	ii. 54.		9—13i. 365.
	34 i	i. 154.note		28	i. 350.		15
	37 i		xxvii.	1	i. 50.		17 i. 340.
x.	1i			2. 16—20. 40	ii. 188. &	76.	18 i. 197.
	13			14	11. 25.		19 20 1. 305. & n
	15	i. 197. 360	xxviii	4	и. 139.	iv.	5
xi.	26	i. 350.		11	11. 189.		8
xii.	13	i. 79.		16	ii. 92.		9 13 11. 191.
	2-17	ii. 52.		26, 27	. i. 295.		13
	6. 19	ii. 60.				v.	5
	20	ii. 32. 168	3.	Romans.			6-8 1. 304. C n.
	20-23	i. 79.			. i. 301.		7. 8 11. 123, 124.
	21, 22	ii. 46.not		17		te	note. 120.
	21—23	n. 52.	ii.	4			9i. 57.
	25	i. 292.		16		vi.	1 5 11. 00.
xii	6-11	ii. 143, 19	7.	17—20	i ii. 149.	1.0	5 ii. 104.
	7	i. 90.	1	24	. i. 301.

488		IN	DEX	OF PASSAGES OF S	onii i on
	1 CORINTHIANS.	i		EPHESIANS.		CI	2 TIMOTHY.	. None
Chap.	Verse Vol.		Chap.	Verse Vol.		Chap.	Verse Vol. 16—18i.	Page 338.
vii.	18 ii.		i.	23i.	329. 344. 407.	1.	10—18 ii.	60.
	18. 19 i.	1	ii.	8i.	110.	ii.	3, 4, ii.	94. & n.
	22 ii.	168.		11—13ii. 13, 14ii.	99.	110	5 ii.	193.
	29—31 ii.	190.& n. 338.		14—19ii.	118.		15 ii.	180.note.
viii.	1-4i	414.	iv.	8i.	306.		15—22i.	364.
ix.	5 i. 9, 10 i.	384.		14 ii.	189.	iii.	8i.	318.
	9, 10i.	323.		18 i.	329, 332.	iv.	6 ii.	141.
	24i.	328.		22—24 ii.	191.		7, 8 ii.	194.& n.
	24—27 ii.	193. & n.	v.	5 i.	327.		8 ii.	94. 156.
x.	1-4ii.	207.		8	329.		13 i. 14 i.	413.
	1—11ii.	208.		8, 9 i.	290.		14	410.
	4i.	357. 383.		27 i. 31 i.	328. 289.		Tirus.
	8i.	289. 415.	:	2, 3 i.	307. & n.			8.
	20i.	305. & n. 283.	vi.	11—17ü.	93. & n.	i.	10, 11i.	319. 395.
_:	1i.	426.		11—19i.	365.	ii.	11i.	325.
xi.	4 ii.	94.note.				11.	13 i.	327.
	13—16 ii.	157.		PHILIPPIANS.		iii.	5i.	383, 396,
xii.	3 ii.	66.	i.	28 ii.	69.note.
xiii.	6 1.	328.	ii.	7, 8 ii.	69.		HEBREWS.
	12 ii.	158.		8 i.	196.	i.	2 î.	347.
xiv.	21i.	$305. \mathcal{E} n.$		12 i.	396. note.	1.	5, 6, 7 i.	307. & n.
xv.	20—23ii.	120. 327. 407.		17 ii.	141.		8, 9 i.	307. 390.
	24i. 27. 32i.	305.		25 ü.	94.		10—12i.	307. & n.
	33i.	319.	iii.	4, 5 ii.		ii.	6—8. 12, 13 i.	307.
	ii.	191.note.		12—14 ii.	& note.		17 ii.	209.note.
	45 i.	$305. \ \mathcal{E}\ n$.	iv.	6 ii.		iii.	7—10i. ii.	307. 216.
		383.	1	0,1111111111111111111111111111111111111		īv.	12i.	197.
	54 i.	198. 305.		Colossians.			12, 13 ii.	118.
	55 i.	305. & n.	ii.	6 i.	328.		13i.	328.
xvi.	2 i.	38.note. 413.	11.	11 ii.		v.	14i.	329.
	22 i.	410.		14 ii.		vi.	13, 14i.	308.
				15 ii.			1318	81.
	2 Corinthians.			17 i.	385, 387,	vii.	1 i.	383.
i.	3, i.	327.		18. 20, 21 i.			3 ii.	79.
4.	21 i.	331.		18. 21. 23 ii		viii.	5.8—12i.	308. 96. 100.
	2 2 i.	80.		22 i.	325. 341.	ix.	2—7ii.	418.
ii.	14—16 ii.	95. & n.		23 i. 9, 10 ii			11.	96.
	15, 16 i.	380.	iii.	16 i.		ļ	7—20i.	323, 383,
ıii.	6i.	359. 28.	14.	10, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1,			13, 14 ii.	117.
	6. 14 i. 18 i.	389.note.		1 Thessalonians			20 ii.	81.
iv.	6ii.	205.	ii.	15 ii	. 149.		21, 22 ii.
14.	8 ii.	94.	iii.	8i.			27i.	400. 407.
	13 i.	305.	v.	8 i		X.	5—7	308. 100.
V.	7, 8 ii.	126.		i	i. 93.note		19—22 ii. 32, 33 ii.
	21i.	330. 407.		19 i	359.		35 ii.	88.
vi.	2i.	317. 93.		21 i.			37, 38i.	209.
	7 ii. 16—18 i.	93. 306.&n.		23 i. 27 i.		xi.	5i.	196. 198.
-	4i.	197.		#1	0.00		21 i.	309.
X.	ii.			2 Thessalonians	i.		34 i.	197.
	9—11 i.	58.	;	12 i			35 ii.	68.
xiii.	1 i.	306.& n	i. ii.	2 1			37 ii.
				8i		xii.	1—3, 12, 13 ii. 2i.	328.
	GALATIANS.		iii.	2, 8 i			ii.
iii.	8 i.	306.					4 i.	325.
2114	10 i.			1 Тімотих.			5, 6 i.	377.
	13i.	$306. \ \mathcal{E}\ n$	· i.	9, 10 i	i. 165. & 1	2.	23 ii.	123.
		386.	ii.		. 425.		24 ii.	126.
	11	. 69.		9i	i. 157.		26i.	309. 309.
	17i.		iii.	16 i	i. 345.not		5i.	426.
	24 i. 4, 5 ii		iv.	1 i		۶.	12, 13 ii
IV.	9i	329.			408. i. 398.		15i.
	10, 11 i	393.	47	8			15, 16 ii
	17 i.	. 372.	v.	17 i
	22—24i	. 383.		21			JAMES.
	24 i		vi.	110 i	ii. 165.	i.	1 ii	. 48.note.
	27 i			8	i. 396.	1.	12 ii
	30 i		L.	16	i. 415.		13 i.	414.
v	1 ii 3 i			See. 1		ii.	2 ii
	6i			2 Timothy.			10i.
vi.	15 i		i.	6			21i.	407.
	17 i			8	i. 425.	1	24 i.	333.

	JAMES.			2 Peter.				JUDE.
Chap.	Verse Vol.	Page	Chap.	Verse	Vol.	Page	Chap.	Verse Vol.	Page
v.	1—3 ii.	159.	i.	1, 2	i.	327.		9 ii.	203.
	11 ii.	228.		18	i.	348.		12 ii.	25.
	12 i.	286.		20	i.	342. 388.		14 i.	318.
	14, 15, 16 i.	343.				& note.		19 i.	332.
			ii.	2	i.	286.
	1 Peter.		iii.	1	i.	348.		-
:	1	337.						REVELATIONS.
i.	1i.	126.		1 John.			:	10i.	359.
	2		i.	8—10		343.	ii.	10 ii.	94.
	24, 25i.	310, 385, 358,	ii.	1		55.	11.	17 ii.
ii.	5, 9i.		11.	23		292.		17	56. 174.
	6i.	310.		20. 27		331.		9m	& note.
	8i.	337.		27		38. note.		27 i.	310.
	9i.	325.	:::	1		196.	iii.	5 ii.	94. & n.
	22 i.	197.	111.			343.	v.	1 ii.	183.
iii.	3 ii.	157.		6. 9				8 ii.	119. note.
	10—12i.	310.	v.	7, 8	1.	241. 260.	vi.	15, 16 ii.	32.
	13 i.	395.				284.	vii.	9, 10 ii.	127.
	14, 15i.	310.			ii.	366-376.	viii.	1 ii.	119.
	21 ii.	110.note.		16	11.	67.	ix.	7 ii.	39.
V-	4 i.	325.					x.	5 ii.	81. & n.
	ii.	94.		JUDE.			xiii.	16, 17, &c ii.	142.
	5 i.	341. 424.		1	i.	291.	xvi.	15 i.	358.
	8 i.	358.		4	i.	327.		16 i.	402.
	13i.	286.			ii.	56, 135,

Vol. II.-App.

SYNOPTICAL TABLE OF CONTENTS

OF THE

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL APPENDIX.

INTRODUCTION.		SECTION VI. Modern Versions of the Old and New	PAGE in inobootion.		Testaments	29
General Bibliographical Works, treating on the Edi-	PAGE	§ 1. General Observations on the Circulation of the Scriptures.	ib
tions, Literary History, Criticism, &c. of the Bible	5.6	*	10.
Dine	5, 6	1. Scarcity and high Prices of the Scriptures.
		II. Rude Attempts to convey an Idea of their Contents to the Poor and Illiterate.—Account of the BIBLIA PAUPERUM.—III. Number and DADM I		Classification of the Translations of the Bible
PART I.		into modern Languages	29-31
			31
HOLY SCRIPTURES.		§ 2. Modern Latin Versions of the entire Bible
		Versions made by Romanists	ib.
CHAPTER I. Entire Texts and Versions of the Bible.		Versions made by Protestants	31, 32
O 7 70 1 1 77 11 1 77 1 77 1		§ 3. Versions in the Languages of Modern Europe	32
SECTION I. Principal Editions of the Hebrew Bible	. 6	[i.] Versions in the Languages spoken in the
§ 1. Editiones Principes	ib.	British Isles	ib
§ 2. Editiones Primariæ; or, those which have been		Wicliffe's Version	32, 33 adopted as the Bases of subsequent Impres-		English PROTESTANT Versions:-
sions	6, 7	Tindal's Version	33, 34
§ 3. Editions of the Bible with Rabbinical Com-		Coverdale's Bible	34
mentaries	7	Matthew's Bible	ib.
§ 4. Editions with Critical Notes and Apparatus	7-9	Hollybusche's New Testament	ib.
SECTION II. Editions of the Hebrew-Samaritan Penta-		Cranmer's Great Bible	34, 35
teuch	9	Taverner's Bible	35
SECTION III. Principal Editions of the Greek Testa-		Other Editions of the English Bible
ment, and of detached Books thereof	9-19	during the remainder of Henry VIII.'s
SECTION IV. Polyglott Bibles; or, Editions of the Old	0 10	reign and the reign of Edward VI.	35, 36
		Anglo-Genevese Version	36
and New Testaments, with Versions in	19-21		30
several Languages	21	Archbishop Parker's, or the Bishops'	7.8
Triglott Testament		Bible	ib.
Diglott Bibles	22	King James's Bible, or the Authorized	00 00
SECTION V. Ancient Versions of the Old and New Tes-		Version now in use	36, 37
taments	ib.	Testimonies of eminent Scholars
§ 1. Targums, or Chaldee Paraphrases on the Old		to its value	37-39
Testament	ib.	Editions of the Authorized Ver-
§ 2. Ancient Greek Versions	22, 23	sions, with Parallel References	39-41
[i.] The Septuagint	23-25	Anglo-Romish Versions	41, 42
[ii.] Editions of Origen's Hexapla	25	Welsh Version	42
[iii.] Another ancient Greek Version	ib.	Irish Version	ib.
§ 3. Ancient Oriental Versions	ib.	Manks Version	ib.
[i.] The Syriac Versions	ib.	Gaelic Version	43
The Peschito, or Old Syriac Version	iò.	[ii.] Versions in the Languages spoken on the
The Philoxenian Syriac Version	26	Continent of Europe	ib.
[ii.] The Arabic Version	ib.	1. German Versions	ib.
[iii.] The Persic Version	ib.	Luther's Version, and Versions in other
[iv.] The Egyptian Versions	ib.	Languages derived from it	43, 44
The Coptic, or Version in the Dialect of		Jewish German Versions	44
Lower Egypt	2b.	2. French Versions	44, 45
The Sahidic, or Version in the Dialect of		3. Belgian Versions	45
Upper Egypt	ib.	4. Italian Versions	ib.
The Bashmouric, or Dialect of Bashmour,	1 50.	5. Spanish Versions	45, 46
	22		45, 46
a Province of the Delta	ib. 27	6. Russian Version
[v.] The Ethiopic Version		7. Croat Version	ib.
[vi.] The Armenian Version	ib.	8. Basque Version	ib.
§ 4. Ancient Western Versions	ib.	9. Hungarian Version	ib.
[i.] The Latin Versions	ib.	10. Polish Version	ib.
Ante-Hieronymian Versions, or those made		11. Bohemian Version	47 before the Time of Jerome	ib.	12. Romaic or Modern Greek Version	ib.
The Version of Jerome	ib.	13. Wallachian Version	ib.
The Latin Vulgate	27, 28	14, 15. Bulgarian and Servian Versions	ib.
[ii.] The Gothic Version	28	16. Romanese Versions	ib.
[iii.] The Sclavonic Version	. 29	17. Turkish Versions	ib.
[iv.] The Anglo-Saxon Version	ib.		ib.
		1

	PAGE		PAGE
19. Albanian Version	47	CHAPTER III. Treatises on the Sucred Text, its
20. Maltese Version 6 A Maltern Versions in the Languages of Asia	48	Style, Idiom, and Versions	72
§ 4. Modern Versions in the Languages of Asia	$\begin{vmatrix} ib. \\ ib. \end{vmatrix}$	SECTION I. Treatises on Sacred Criticism, generally,
[ii.] Chaldee	ib.	and on the Style and Idiom of the Scrip- tures	72-76
[iii.] Versions in the Oriental Languages, either		Section II. Treatises on Hebrew Poetry	76
translated by the Baptist Missionaries at		Section III. Treatises on the Quotations from the Old
Serampore, or printed at the Mission Press	ib.	Testament in the New	76, 77
1. Versions in the Anabic Languages, and		SECTION IV. Treatises on Manuscripts and on Various its Cognate Dialects	48, 49	Readings.—Collations of Manuscripts, and Collections of Various Readings	77
2. Versions in the SANSCRIT Language, and		§ 1. Treatises on Manuscripts	77, 78 its Cognate Dialects	49, 50	§ 2. Treatises on Various Readings	78, 79
3. Versions in the Chinese, and the Languages derived from or bearing Affinity		§ 3. Collations of Manuscripts, and Collections	ma 00 to it	50, 51	of Various Readings § 4. Treatises on the Genuineness of the Disputed	79, 80
[iv.] Other Asiatic Versions	51	Clauses in 1 John v. 7, 8	81, 82
1. Formosan	ib.	Section V. Treatises on Versions of the Scriptures	82
2. Northern Asiatic	ib. ib.	§ 1. Treatises on Ancient Versions	82, 83
4. Modern Arminian	ib.	§ 2. Treatises on Modern Versions	84, 85
5. Tahitan	51, 52	CHAPTER IV. Treatises on the Original Languages
6. Curdish	52	of Scripture, and Grammars and Lexi-
Fac-similes of Specimens of the Versions of the Sacred Scriptures in the Eastern		cons thereof	85
Languages	52-55	Section I. Treatises, &c. on the Hebrew Language	ib.
§ 5. Modern Versions in the Languages of Africa	56	§ 1. Treatises on the Study of the Hebrew Lan-
1. Amharic and Tigré, or the Vernacular Lan-	.,	guage, and on the Vowel Points	ib.
guages of Abyssinia	ib.	§ 2. Hebrew Grammars, and other Treatises on the Hebrew Language, WITH Points	86
3. Bullom Version	ib.	[i.] In the English Language	86, 87
4. Susoo Version	ib.	[ii.] In the Latin, French, and German Lan-
5. Malagassé Version	ib.	guages	87, 88
6. South African Versions	ib.	§ 3. Hebrew Grammars, &c. without Points.	88, 89
[i.] North American Versions	ib.	§ 4. Hebrew Grammars, with and without Points	89
1. Virginian Indian Version	ib.	§ 5. Chaldee Grammars	ib
2. Delaware Indian Version	56, 57	Section II. Hebrew and Chaldee Lexicons	ib
3. Massachusetts Version	57	§ 1. Hebrew Lexicons with Points	89-91
4. Mohawk Version 5. Mohegan Version	ib.	§ 2. Hebrew Lexicons WITHOUT Points SECTION III. Grammars and Lexicons for the Greek	91
6. Esquimaux Version	ib.	Testament and for the Septuagint Version	ib
7. Chippeway Version	ib.	§ 1. Grammars and other Treatises on the Greek
8. Greenlandish Version	ib.	Language of the New Testament	91, 92
9. Creolese Version	ib.	§ 2. Glossaries and Lexicons to the Greek Testa- ment	92, 93
[ii.] South American Versions	57, 58	§ 3. Lexicons to the Septuagint Version	93, 94
		SECTION IV. Grammars and Lexicons of the Cognate
CHAPTER II. Harmonies of the Old and New Testa-	58	or Kindred Languages	94
ments		§ 1. General Treatises, and Polyglott Grammar of the Cognate Languages	ib
Section I. Harmonies of the Old Testament Section II. Harmonies of the entire New Testament,	58, 59	§ 2. Polyglott Lexicons of the Cognate Lan-and of the Four Gospels	59-61	guages	94, 95
SECTION III. Harmonies of particular Parts of the Four		§ 3. Syriac Grammars and Lexicons	95
Gospels.	61, 62	§ 4. Arabic Grammars and Lexicons § 5. Egyptian Grammars and Lexicons	95, 96 96
SECTION IV. Harmonies of the Acts of the Apostles,	60	§ 6. Ethiopic Grammar and Lexicons	97
and of the Apostolic Epistles	62	§ 7. Persian Grammars and Lexicons	ib
Chapter III. Apocryphal Books and Writings .	63
SECTION I. Apocryphal Books of the Old Testament .	63-67	CHAPTER V. Commentators, Interpreters, and Para-	0"
SECTION II. Apocryphal Books of the New Testament	67	phrasts on the Scriptures	97
		Section I. On the Interpretation of Scripture	ib
		§ 1. General Treatises on the Interpretation of Scripture	97-99
T) A T) MI TT		§ 2. Treatises on the Interpretation of the Figu-	01-00
PART II.		rative Language, and on the Spiritual and
SACRED PHILOLOGY:		Typical Interpretation of Scripture	99, 100
· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·		§ 3. Treatises on the Interpretation of Scripture Proverbs and Promises	100
OR, THE CRITICISM AND INTERPRETATION OF THE SCRI	PTURES.	§ 4. Treatises on the Interpretation of Scripture	100
CHAPTER I. Treatises on the Canon of Scripture, and		Prophecies	100, 101 on Apocryphal Books	68, 69	Warburtonian Lectures on Prophecy	. 101
CHAPTER II. Introductions to the Study of the Scrip-		SECTION H. Jewish Writers and Commentators, and Illustrations of the Scriptures derived from
tures	69	Jewish Sources	ib
SECTION I. General Introductions to the entire Bible	69, 70	§ 1. Jewish Writers and Commentators
Section II. Introductions to the Study of the Old Tes-		§ 2. Illustrations of the Holy Scriptures, derived
Section III. Introductions to the Study of the New	70, 71	from Jewish Sources Section III. Christian Commentators, Interpreters,	103
Testament in particular	71,72		ib
	,

	PAGE		PAGE
§ 1. Commentaries by the Fathers, and other		CHAPTER VI. Concordances and Dictionaries, Com-
Divines of the Christian Church, previ-		mon-place Books, Indexes, and Analyses
ously to the Reformation	103	of the Bible	152-154
[i.] Greek Fathers	104
[ii.] Latin Fathers	104, 105	SECTION I. Concordances to the Scriptures	152
[iii.] Later Divines of the Greek and Latin	,	§ 1. Concordances to the Hebrew Bible	152, 153
Churches	105	§ 2. Concordances to the Septuagint Greek Ver-	,
Greek Writers	ib.	sion	153
Latin Writers		§ 3. Concordances to the Greek Testament	ib.
	ib.	§ 4. Concordance to the Latin Vulgate
§ 2. Scholia on the entire Bible, or the greater	100 100		ib.
Part thereof	106, 107	§ 5. Concordances to the English Bible	153, 154
§ 3. The Principal Commentators on the Scrip-		§ 6. Concordance to the French Bible	154
tures, generally, since the Reformation	107-114	Section II. Dictionaries of the Bible	154, 155
[i.] Foreign Commentators on the whole		Section III. Common-place Books to the Bible	155, 156
Bible	107-109	Section IV. Indexes and Analyses of the Bible	156
[ii.] British Commentators	109-114
§ 4. Principal Commentators on the Old Testa-		CHAPTER VII. Treatises on Biblical Antiquities, and ment, and on detached Books thereof	114-126
[i.] Commentators on the Old Testament	114	on other Historical Circumstances of the	150 100
[ii.] Commentators on detached Books of the		Bible	156-162
Old Testament	115-126	SECTION I. General Treatises on Biblical Antiquities	150 150
Commentators on the Pentateuch	110-120		156, 157 and Historical Books	115 110	Section II. Treatises on particular Subjects in Bibli-	1 FW 100
	115, 116	cal Antiquities	157-162
Commentators on the Poetical Books	117-120	§ 1. Scripture Geography	157, 158
Commentators on the Writings of		§ 2. Natural History of the Bible	158, 159
Solomon	120-122	§ 3. Political Antiquities of the Jews	159, 160
Commentators on the Prophets	123-126	Treatises on the Laws, Government, Coins,
[iii.] Commentators on the Apocryphal Books		&c. of the Jews	159, 160 of the Old Testament	126	§ 4. Sacred Antiquities of the Jews	160, 161
§ 5. Principal Commentators on the New Testa-		[i.] Treatises on the Ritual and Sacred Cerement, and on detached Books thereof	127-142	monies of the Jews	160, 161
[i.] Commentators on the entire New Testa-		[ii.] Treatises on the Religious Notions of the	200, 202
ment	127-131	Jews, on the Corruptions of Religion
[ii.] Commentators on detached Books of the		among them, and on the Sects into
New Testament:		which they were divided	161
Commentators on the Historical		§ 5. Domestic Antiquities, Literature, and Sci-	101
	131-134		.,
Books	101-104	ences of the Jews	ib.
	104 140	§ 6. Miscellaneous Illustrations of Biblical An-
Epistles	134-140	tiquities, from Voyages and Travels in Commentators on the Apocalypse	140-142	the East, and from other Oriental Sources	162
§ 6. Expository Lectures and Sermons on the		SECTION III. Treatises on the Genealogies mentioned
Scriptures, and on detached Portions		in the Scriptures	163 thereof	142-146	Section IV. Treatises on Sacred Chronology	163, 164
§ 7. Treatises on reconciling the Contradictions		SECTION V. Connections of Sacred and Profane His-alleged to exist in the Scriptures	146	toryHistories of the Bible and Scrip-
§ 8. Principal Collections of Observations on the		ture Biography	164, 165
Scriptures, Critical, Philological, and Miscellaneous	146-152	Index to the Bibliographical Appendix	167-179
	-20 20%	andea to the armingraphical appendix	101-113

No. IV.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL APPENDIX.

INTRODUCTION.

GENERAL BIBLIOGRAPHICAL WORKS, TREATING ON THE EDITIONS, LITERARY HISTORY CRITICISM, ETC. OF THE BIBLE.

prior, qui jam tertio auctior prodiit, omnes sive Textus Sacri sive Versionum ejusdem quâvis linguâ expressarum editiones, necnon præstantiores MSS. Codices, cum notis historicis continet: Posterior vero continet omnia eorum opera quivis idiomate conscripta, qui huc usque in Sacram Scripturam ediderunt, simul collecta, tum ordine alphabetico disposita, tum serie sacrorum librorum. Huic coronidis loco subjiciuntur Grammaticæ et Lexica Linguarum præsertim orientalium, quæ ad illustrandas sacras paginas aliquid adjumenti conferre possunt. Labore et industria Jacobi Le Long. Parisiis, 1723, 2 tomis folio.

The third and best edition of a most laborious work. The first edition appeared at Paris in 1709, in 2 vols. 8vo.: the second, at Leipsic, in the same year, with additions by C. F. Boerner.

2. Discours Historique sur les principales Editions des Bibles Polyglottes. Par l'Auteur de la Bibliothèque Sacrée. [Jacques Le Long.] Paris, 1713. 8vo.

3. Bibliotheca Sacra post Jacobi Le Long et C. F. Boerneri iteratas curas ordine disposita, emendata, suppleta, continuata ab Andrea Gottlieb Masch. Halæ, 1774-1797. 5 vols. 4to. frequently bound in two thick volumes.

This elaborate work, which was discontinued for want of adequate support, is confined to the printed editions of the Holy Scriptures. Part I. contains editions of the original Hebrew and Greek tures. Part I. contains editions of the original recover and text. Part II., in three volumes treats on the Greek, Oriental, and Latin versions, and on editions of them; and the last volume com-Prises a supplement to the preceding volumes.

We have been largely indebted to this publication for much information concerning the printed editions of the Old and New Testormation concerning the printed editions of the Old and New Testament. To this valuable work the Bibliotheca Biblica Serenissimi Wuertembergensium Ducis, olim Lorkiana, published by J. G. C. Adler, at Altona, in 1787 (in five parts forming two quarto volumes), is an indispensable supplement. It is very justly characterized by Bp. Marsh as "a catalogue of great merit and utility," and contains notices of some versions and translators, which have escaped even the researches of Dr. Masch.

4. CALMET (Augustin) Bibliotheca Sacra, or a Catalogue of the best books that can be read in order to acquire a good understanding of the Scripture. Folio.

This catalogue fills a considerable portion of a volume in various French editions of Calmet's Dictionary of the Bible. also occupies two hundred and eighty-four pages of the third volume of the English translation of that Dictionary, in folio. It contains copious notices of the earlier biblical critics and commentators, and other writers on Scriptural Antiquities, &c. ble catalogue is omitted in the quarto edition of Calmet's Dictionary, published by the late Mr. C. Taylor.

5. Joh. Christophori Wolfil Bibliotheca Hebræa; sive Notitia tum Auctoram Hebræorum cujuscumque ætatis, tum Scriptorum, quæ vel Hebraice primum exarata, vel ab aliis conversa sunt, ad nostram ætatem deducta. Accedit in calce Jacobi Gaf-farelli Index Codicum Cabbalistic. MSS. quibus Joh. Picus, Mirandulanus Comes, usus est. Hamburgi et Lipsiæ, 1715-33. 4 tomis, 4to.

6. Jo. Georgii Walchir Bibliotheca Theologica Selecta, literariis adnotationibus instructa. Jenæ, 1757-8-62-65. 4 vols.

All who are conversant in sacred literature have borne willing testimony to the correctness and research of Walch, whose work will always remain a production, admirable for the diligence and for the extensive reading and accuracy which it evinces. The sound judgment, remarkable in other works of this theologican, is conspicuous in this publication. All possible aids for theological literature are here embraced. The whole is well arranged: with regard to many books, their contents and value are stated, and directions are given where more extensive information is to be

1. BIBLIOTHECA SACRA in binos syllabos distincta. Quorum | obtained. Of many important works an extensive and accurate obtained. Of many important works an extensive and accurate literary history is given. All departments of theology have a rich collection of books pertaining to them described, and abundant materials are furnished for the history of religion. The third and fourth volumes are chiefly interesting to biblical students. How much the author of the present work is indebted to the Bibliotheca Theologica Selecta, the frequent references made to it will sufficiently attest. In 1770, Walchius published a Bibliotheca Patristica in one large volume 8vo.: it contains an excellent account of treatises on the lives and erudition of the Fathers of the Church, and on the editions of their writings. and on the editions of their writings.

> 7. A Concise View of the Succession of Sacred Literature, in a Chronological Arrangement of Authors and their Works, from the Invention of Alphabetical Characters to the Year of our Lord 1445. By Adam CLARKE, LL.D. and J. B. B. CLARKE, M.A. London, 1831-32. 2 vols. 8vo.

> The first part of the first volume, which comes down to A.D. 345, was published by Dr. Clarke in 1821, in one volume, 12mo. The remainder of the work was composed by his son, the Rev. J. B. B. Clarke. The whole contains much important information relative to biblical and ecclesiastical literature.

8. A Course of Lectures, containing a Description and Systematic Arrangement of the several Branches of Divinity, accompanied with an Account both of the principal Authors and of the Progress which has been made, at different Periods, in Theological Learning. By Herbert Marsh, D.D. [Bishop of Peterborough.] London, 1810—1823. 8vo.

Seven parts of these Lectures have been published. They embrace almost every topic of Biblical Criticism and Interpretation, and also the genuineness, authenticity, and credibility of the Scriptures; and are particularly valuable for their bibliographical and critical notices of the principal writers who have treated on these subjects.

8.* Lectures on the Criticism and Interpretation of the Bible, with two preliminary Lectures on Theological Study and Theological Arrangement: to which are added two Lectures on the History of Biblical Interpretation. By Herbert Marsh, D.D. Bishop of Peterborough. London, 1828. 8vo.

This is a new edition, revised, corrected, and enlarged, of the first four parts of the preceding course of Lectures. The two additional Lectures on the History of Biblical Interpretation, which were published separately, contain bibliographical notices of the principal writers on that subject.

9. Illustrations of Biblical Literature, exhibiting the History and Fate of the Sacred Writings, from the earliest Period to the present Century: including Biographical Notices of Transla-Towner [now D.D.]. London, 1821. 3 vols. 8vo.

"The ample volumes before us comprise a rich fund of instructive and pleasing information on the subject of Sacred Bibliography. They have been compiled from a great variety of publications, many of them inaccessible to the generality of readers, and some of them of extreme rarity." . . . "The industry and the accuracy of Mr. Towntey will entitle his volumes to the approbation of the critic and the patronage of the public. They afford a more comprehensive view of the progress of biblical translations and of the Literary and Ecclesiastical History of the Holy Scriptures than is to be found in any other work." (Eclectic Review, N. S. vol. xviii. pp. 386. 407.)

10. An Introduction to the Literary History of the Bible. By James Townley, D.D. London, 1828. 12mo.

This handsomely executed volume, which is a second edition of the Biblical Anecdotes published by Dr. Townley in 1813, may be considered as an epitome of his Illustrations of Biblical Literature. regard to many books, their contents and value are stated, and directions are given where more extensive information is to be Literature, with Notices Biographical, Critical, and Bibliographical. By William ORME. London, 1824. 8vo.

For many of his titles and notices of books, Mr. Orme has been indebted to the present Work, to which he has honourably acknowledged his obligations. "The theological student cannot fail to derive much advantage from it; and the more learned divine will find it an excellent supplement to the Bibliotheea Theologica Selecta of the laborious Walchius, or to the erudite Bibliotheea Sacra of Le Long." (British Critic, N. S. vol. xxii. p. 486.)

12. Bibliothèque Sacrée Grecque-Latine; contenant le Tableau Chronologique, Biographique, et Bibliographique, des Auteurs Inspirés et des Auteurs Ecclésiastiques, depuis Moise jusqu'à Saint Thomas-d'Aquin. Ouvrage rédigé d'après Mauro Boni et Gamba. Par. Ch. Nodier. Paris, 1826. 8vo.

A convenient summary of biblical and ecclesiastical Bibliogra-A convenient summary of biblical and ecclesiastical bibliography. The author first gives a concise biographical notice of the sacred and ecclesiastical writers, and then specifies the principal editions of their works. A List is then subjoined of the Collections of the Canons and Acts of Councils and of the Canon Law, of Ecclesiastical Biographers, and of the Works of the Greek and Latin Fathers, and other Ecclesiastical Writers, and of the Greek and Latin Christian Poets.

13. Bibliotheca Sussexiana. A Descriptive Catalogue, accompanied by Historical and Biographical Notices, of the Manu-ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF SUSSEX. By Thomas Joseph Pettigrew, F.R.S. &c. &c. Vol. I. in Two Parts. London, 1827. Imperial 8vo.

This magnificent publication has a special claim to be noticed in the present Catalogue of biblical Works, on account of the di-versified and important information which it communicates respecting Editions of the Holy Scriptures, and which is not to be found in the bibliographical treatises already described.

The first portion of the Bibliotheca Sussexiana is appropriated

11. Bibliotheca Biblica: a Select List of Books on Sacred to Manuscripts, the number of which amounts very nearly to three hundred: these are arranged according to languages, viz. In Hebrew, Greek, Latin, French, Italian, Spanish, German, Dutch, English, Irish, Arabic, Persian, Armenian, Pali, Singhalese, and

The second part treats on PRINTED EDITIONS of the Holy Scriptures, disposed under the following titles, viz. Polyglotts of the Old and New Testaments and of detached portions thereof;—Hebrew Bibles, Hebrew and Hebrew-Samaritan Pentateuchs, and portions of the Old Testament in Hebrew;—Greek Bibles, Greek Pentateuch, and portions of the Old Testament in Greek;—Latin Bibles; and page of the Old Testament in Latin; forming an aggregate of and parts of the Old Testament in Latin: forming an aggregate of four hundred and ninety-nine articles, many of which are among the rarest and most valuable in Sacred Bibliography.

Much as has been accomplished by preceding authors who have treated on Sacred Bibliography, the laborious researches of Mr. Pettigrew have enabled him to contribute large and important retingrew have enabled film to contribute large and important additions to this branch of literature. He has accurately and minutely described the several editions of the Scriptures, and his Bibliographical Notices correct the errors, and supply the deficiencies, of former writers. Curious specimens of metrical Versions are introduced, besides numerous biographical and critical anecdotes of authors and editors. The numerous engravings are executed in the highest style of the chalcographic art. Creditable as the work is to Mr. Pettigrew, in a literary point of view, it would be injustice to the distinguished owner of this magnificent library, not to acknowledge the very liberal facility with which His Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex permits it to be consulted by such parts.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex permus n to be considerably scholars.

There are copies of this Catalogue in small folio, the typographical splendour of which is unequalled.

A second volume of this Catalogue has been announced for publication: it is to contain the history of the remaining versions of the Old and New Testament, or of parts thereof, both ancient and modern, viz. The Syriac, Peschito, Philoxenian, and Palæstino-Syriac; the Arabic, Persic, Egyptian, Ethiopic, Armenian, Latin, Gothic, Sclavonic, Anglo-Saxon, German, English, French, Italian, Bohemian, &c. &c., all of which are disposed in chronological order.

PART I.

HOLY SCRIPTURES.

CHAPTER I.

ENTIRE TEXTS AND VERSIONS OF THE BIBLE.

SECTION I.

PRINCIPAL EDITIONS OF THE HEBREW BIBLE

BISHOP WALTON,1 Carpzov,2 and particularly Le Long, have treated at great length on the various editions of the Hebrew These have been divided by De Rossi and others into Masoretic and Non-Masoretic editions,—a distinction, the utility of which is not perceived. In the present section, Dr. Masch's improved edition of Le Long's Bibliotheca Sacra³ has been chiefly followed. The various impressions of the Hebrew Bible may be divided into the four following classes, viz.

(1.) Editiones Principes, or those first printed.

(2.) Editiones Primariæ, or those which have been adopted as the bases of subsequent impressions.

(3.) Editions, the text of which is accompanied with Rabbinical Commentaries

(4.) Editions, which are furnished with Critical Apparatus.

§ 1. Editiones Principes.

1. Psalterium Hebraicum, cum commentario Kinchii. Anno 237 (1477). 4to.

The first printed Hebrew book. It is of extreme rarity, and is printed (probably at Bologna) with a square Hebrew type, approaching that of the German Jews. The text is without points, except in the first four psalms, which are clumsily pointed. The commentary of Rabbi Kimchi is subjoined to each verse of the text in the rabbinical character, and is much more complete than in the subsequent editions, as it contains all those passages which were afterwards omitted, as being hostile to Christianity. Prof. Jahn states that it is incorrectly printed, and that the matres lectionis are introduced or omitted at the pleasure of the editors.

¹ Prolegom. cap. iv. De Bibliorum Editionibus præcipuis.
² Critica Sacra, pars i. cap. 9. pp. 387—428.
² Bibliotheca Sacra, post. Jacobi Le Long et C. F. Boerneri iteratas curas ordine disposita, emendata suppleta, continuata ab Andrea Gottlieb Masch. Halæ, 4to. 1778—65—90. 4 vols. with Supplement. The account of Hebrew editions is in the first volume, pp. 1—186. 331—424. De Bure's Bibliographie Instructive, tom. i. (Paris 1763), and Brunet's Manuel du Libraire, et de l'Amateur de Livres, (4 vols. 8vo. Paris 1820, 3d edit.) have also been consulted occasionally.

2. Biblia Hebraica, cum punctis. Soncino, 1488, folio.

The first edition of the entire Hebrew Bible ever printed. It is at present of such extreme rarity, that only nine or ten copies of it are known to be in existence. One of these is in the library of Exeter College, Oxford. At the end of the Pentateuch there is a long Hebrew subscription, indicating the name of the editor (Abraham Ben Chajim), the place where it was printed, and the date of the edition. This very scarce volume consists, according to Masch, of 373 (but Brunet says 380) folios, printed with points and accents, and also with signatures and catchwords. The initial letters of each book are larger than the others, and are ornamented. Dr. Kennicott states, that there are not fewer than twelve thousand verbal differences between this edition and that of Van der Hooght; his assertion is questioned by Masch. The researches of biblical critics have not succeeded in ascertaining what manuscripts were used for this Hebrew Bible. It is, however, acknowledged that these two very ancient editions are equal in value to manuscripts. The first edition of the entire Hebrew Bible ever printed. It is

- Editiones Primariæ, or those which have been ADOPTED AS THE BASES OF SUBSEQUENT IMPRESSIONS.
- 1. Biblia Hebraica, 8vo. Brixiæ, 1494.

This edition was conducted by Gerson, the son of Rabbi Moses. It is also of extreme rarity, and is printed in long lines, except part of the Psalms, which is in two columns. The identical copy of this edition, from which Luther made his German translation, is said to be preserved in the Royal Library at Berlin. This edition was the basis of, 1. The Hebrew Text of the Complutensian Polyglott; 2. Bomberg's first Rabbinical Bible, Venice, 1518, in 4 vols. folio; 3. Daniel Bomberg's 4to. Hebrew Bible, Venice, 1518; 4. His second Hebrew Bible, 4to. Venice, 1521; and, 5. Sebastian Manster's Hebrew Bible, Basil, 1536, in 2 vols. 4to.

2. Another primary edition is the Biblia Hebraica Bombergiana II. folio, Venice, 1525, 1526, folio.

This was edited by Rabbi Jacob Ben Chajim, who had the reputation of being profoundly learned in the Masora, and other branches of Jewish erudition. He pointed the text according to the Masoretic system. This edition is the basis of all the modern pointed copies.

§ 3. Editions of the Bible with Rabbinical Commentaries.

Besides the Biblia Rabbinica I. et II. just mentioned, we may notice in this class the three following editions; viz.

1. Biblia Hebraica cum utraque Masora, Targum, necnon commentariis Rabbinorum, studio et cum præfatione R. Jacob F. Chajim, Venetiis, 1547—1549, 4 tomes in 2 vols. folio.

This is the second of Rabbi Jacob Ben Chajim's editions; and, according to M. Brunet, is preferable to the preceding, as well as to another edition executed in 1568, also from the press of Daniel Bomberg.

2. Biblia Hebræa, cum utraque Masora et Targum, item cum commentariis Rabbinorum, studio Joannis Buxtorffii, patris; adjecta est ejusdem Tiberias, sive commentarius Masoreticus. Basileæ, 1618, 1619, 1620, 4 tomes in 2 vols. folio.

This great work was executed at the expense of Lewis Kænig, an opulent bookseller at Basle; on account of the additional mater which it contains, it is held in great esteem by Hebrew scholars, many of whom prefer it to the Hebrew Bibles printed by Bomberg. Buxtorf's Biblia Rabbinica contains the commentaries of the celebrated Jewish Rabbins, Jarchi, Aben Ezra, Kimchi, Levi Ben Gerson, and Saudias Haggaon. An appendix is subjoined, containing, besides the Jerusalem Targum, the great Masora corrected and amended by Buxtorf, the various lections of the Rabbis Ben Ascher and Ben Naphtali. Buxtorf also annexed the points to the Chaldee paraphrase. The Tiberias published by Buxtorf, in 1620, was intended to illustrate the Masora and other editions to his great Bible.

Biblia Hebraica Magna Rabbinica. Amstelodami, 1724—4 vols. folio.

"This is unquestionably the most copious and most valuable of all the Rabbinical Bibles, and was edited by Moses Ben Simeon of Frankfort. It is founded upon the Bomberg editions, and contains not only their contents, but also those of Buxtorf's, with additional remarks by the editor." Bibl. Sussex. vol. i. part ii. p. 188. In pp. 189—195, there is a copious and interesting bibliographical description of this edition.

§ 4. Editions with Critical Notes and Apparatus.

1. The first edition of the Hebrew Bible, printed by Bomberg, and edited by Felix PRATENSIS, (Venice 1518), contains the various lections of the Eastern and Western recensions; which are also to be found in Buxtorf's Biblia Rabbinica.

2. Biblia Hebraica, cum Latina Versione Sebastiani Munsteri. Basileæ, 1534, 1535. 2 vols folio.

The Hebrew type of this edition resembles the characters of the German Jews: the Latin version of Munster is placed by the side of the Hebrew text. Though the editor has not indicated what manuscripts he used, he is supposed to have formed his text upon the edition printed at Brescia in 1494, or the still more early one of 1488. His prolegomena contain much useful critical matter; and his notes are subjoined to each chapter. This is the first edition of the Hebrew Bible printed in Germany.

3. Biblia Sacra Hebræa correcta, et collata cum antiquissimis exemplaribus manuscriptis et hactenus impressis. Amstelodami. Typis et sumptibus Josephi Athiæ. 1661; 1667. 8vo.

An extremely rare edition of a most beautifully executed Hebrew B.ble. The impression of 1667 is said to be the most correct. So highly were the labours of the printer, Athias, appreciated, that the States General of Holland conferred on him a gold chain with a gold medal appendant, as a mark of their approbation. Athias adopted the text of Rabbi Chaim's edition, printed at Venice in 1295—26; but he avoided his errors, and rejected several of the readings which are peculiar to that edition. (Jewish Expositor, July, 1828, p. 58.)

4. Biblia Hebraica, cum notis Hebraicis et Lemmatibus Latinis, ex recensione Dan. Ern. Jablonski, cum ejus Præfatione Latina. Berolini, 1699, large 8vo.

Dr. Rossi considers this to be one of the most correct and important editions of the Hebrew Bible ever printed. It is extremely Vol. II.—App. 3 R scarce. Jablonski published another edition of the Hebrew Bible in 1712 at Berlin, without points, in large 12mo; and subjoined to it Leusden's Catalogue of 2294 select verses, containing all the words occurring in the Old Testament. There is also a Berlin edition of the Hebrew Bible without points, in 1711, 24mo., from the press of Jablonski, who has prefixed a short preface. It was begun under the editorial care of S. G. Starcke, and finished, on his death, by Jablonski. Masch pronounces it to be both useless and worthless.

5. Biblia Hebraica, edente Everardo Van der Hooght. Amstel. et Ultraject. 8vo. 2 vols. 1705.

A work of singular beauty and rarity. The Hebrew text is printed after Athias's second edition, with marginal notes pointing out the contents of each section. The characters, especially the vowel points, are uncommonly clear and distinct. At the end, Van der Hooght has given the various lections between the editions of Bomberg, Plantin, Athias, and others. Van der Hooght's edition was reprinted at London in 2 vols. 8vo. 1811, 1812, under the editorship of Mr. Frey, and is executed with great beauty.

6. Biblia Hebraica ex aliquot Manuscriptis et compluribus impressis codicibus; item Masora tam edita quam manuscripta, aliisque Hebræorum criticis diligenter recensita. Cura ac studio D. Jo. Henr. Michaells. 1720. 2 vols. large 8vo. There are also copies in 4to.

This edition has always been held in the highest estimation. The text is printed from Jablonski's Hebrew Bible (Berlin, 1699); and there were collated for this edition five manuscripts in the library of Erfurt, and nineteen of the best printed editions. A selection of various readings, and parallel passages, both real and verbal, is subjoined, together with brief notes on the most difficult texts of the Old Testament Michaelis has prefixed learned prolegomena to this edition, the type of which is bad and unpleasant to the eye.

7. Biblia Hebraica secundum editionem Belgicam Everardi VAN DER HOOGHT, collatis aliis bonæ notæ codicibus, una cum Versione Latina Sebastiani Schmidii. Lipsiæ, 1740, 4to.

A tolerably accurate reprint of Van der Hooght's text, but upon very indifferent type, with additional various readings. The Latin version of Sebastian Schmidt is placed opposite to the Hebrew text. To the work are prefixed, 1. A Preface, by J. C. Claudius, vindicating the edition of Van der Hooght against some critical censures; 2. Van der Hooght's Preface, with the testimonies of some eminent scholars in favour of his edition; and, 3. The Testimony and Judgment of the Theological Faculty of Strasburgh in favour of Sebastian Schmidt's Latin Translation. Masch, Bibliotheca Sacra, part i. p. 158.

8. Biblia Hebraica cum notis criticis, et Versione Latina ad notas criticas facta. Accedunt Libri Græci, qui Deutero-canonici vocantur, in tres Classes distributi. Autore Carolo Francisco Houbigant. Lutetiæ Parisiorum, 1753, 4 vols. folio.

The text of this edition is that of Van der Hooght, without points; and in the margin of the Pentateuch Houbigant has added various lections from the Samaritan Pentateuch. He collated twelve manuscripts, of which however he is said not to have made all the use he might have done. Houbigant has also printed a new Latin version of his own, expressive of such a text as his critical emendations appeared to justify and recommend. The book is most beautifully printed, but has not answered the high expectations that were entertained of it. (See Bishop Marsh's criticism on it, in his Divinity Lectures, part ii. pp. 101—104. and also Bibl. Sussex, vol. i. part ii. pp. 192—194.)

9. Vetus Testamentum Hebraicum cum variis Lectionibus. Edidit Benjaminus Kennicott, S. T. P. Oxonii, 1776, 1780, 2 vols. folio.

This splendid work was preceded by two dissertations on the state of the Hebrew text, published in 1753 and 1759; the object of which was to show the necessity of the same extensive collation of Hebrew manuscripts of the Old Testament as had already been undertaken for the Greek manuscripts of the New Testament. The utility of the proposed collation being generally admitted, a very liberal subscription was made to defray the expense of the collation, amounting on the whole to nearly ten thousand pounds, and the name of his majesty King George III. headed the list of subscribers. Various persons were employed both at home and abroad; but of the foreign literati the principal was Professor Bruns of the University of Helmstadt, who not only collated Hebrew manuscripts in Germany, but went for that purpose into Italy and Switzerland. The business of collation continued from 1760 to 1769 inclusive, during which period Dr. Kennicott published annually an account of the progress which was made. More than six hundred Hebrew manuscripts, and sixteen manuscripts of the Samaritan Pentateuch, were discovered in different libraries in England and on the Continuet; many of which were wholly collated, and others consulted in important passages. Several years of course elapsed, after the collations were finished, before the materials could be arranged and digested for publication. The variations contained in nearly seven hundred bundles of papers, being at length digested (including the collations made by Professor Bruns); and the whole when put together heing corrected by the original collations, and then fauly transcribed into the thry folio volumes, the work was put to press in 1773. In 1776 the first volume of Dr. Kennicott's Hebrew Bible was delivered to the public, and in 1780 the second volume. It was printed at the Clarendon Press; and the University of Oxford has the honour of having produced the first critical edition upon a large scale, both of the Greek Testament and of the Hebrew Bible—an honour which it is still maintaining by a similar edition, hitherto indeed unfinished, of the Greek version, commenced by the late Rev. Dr. Holmes, and now continuing under the editorial care of the Rev.

"The text of Kennicott's edition was printed from that of Van der Hooght, with which the Hebrew manuscripts, by Kennicott's direction, were all collated. But, as variations in the points were disregarded in the collation, the points were not added in the text. The various readings, as in the critical editions of the Greek Testament, were printed at the bottom of the page, with references to the correspondent readings of the text. In the Pentateuch the deviations of the Samaritan text were printed in a column parallel to the Hebrew; and the variations observable in the Samaritan manuscripts, which differ from each other as well as the Hebrew, are likewise noted, with references to the Samaritan printed text. To this collation of manuscripts was added a collation of the most distinguished editions of the Hebrew Bible, in the same manner as Wetstein has noted the variations observable in the principal editions of the Greek Testament. Nor did Kennicott confine his collation to manuscripts and editions. He further considered, that as the quotations from the Greek Testament in the works of ecclesiastical writers afford another source of various readings, so the quotations from the Hebrew Bible in the works of ecclesiastical writers afford another source of various readings, so the quotations from the Hebrew Bible in the works of Jewish writers are likewise subjects of critical inquiry. For this purpose he had recourse to the most distinguished among the rabbinical writings, but particularly to the Talmud, the text of which is as ancient as then by numbers from 1 to 692, including manuscripts, editions, and rabbinical writings, which numbers are explained in the Dissertatio Generalis annexed to the second volume.

"This Dissertatio Generalis, which corresponds to what are called Prolegomena in other critical editions, contains not only an account of the manuscripts and other authorities collated for this edition, but also a review of the Hebrew text divided into periods, and beginning with the formation of the Hebrew canon after the return of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity. Though inquiries of this description unavoidably contain matters of doubtful disputation, though the opinions of Kennicott have been frequently questioned, and sometimes justly questioned, his Dissertatio Generalis is a work of great interest to every biblical scholar. Kennicott was a disciple of Capellus both in respect to the integrity of the Hebrew text, and in respect to the preface of the Samaritan Pentateuch; but he avoided the extreme into which Morinus and Houbigant had fallen. And though he possessed not the rabbinical learning of the two Buxtorfs, his merits were greater than some of his contemporaries, as well in England as on the Continent, were willing to allow." Bishop Marsh's Divinity Lectures, part if pp. 105—108. For a very copious account of Dr. Kennicott's edition of the Hebrew Bible, see the Monthly Review (O. S.), vol. lv. pp. 92—100. vol. lxiv. pp. 173—182. 321—328. vol. lxv. pp. 121—131.

To Dr. Kennicott's Hebrew Bible, M. De Rossi published an important supplement at Parma (1784—1787), in four volumes 4to. of Variæ Lectiones Veteris Testamenti. This work and Dr. Kennicott's edition form one complete set of collations. Of the immense mass of various readings which the collations of Dr. Kennicott and M. De Rossi exhibit, multitudes are insignificant; consisting frequently of the omission or addition of a single letter in a word, as a vau, &c. "But they are not therefore useless." All of this class contribute powerfully to establish the authenticity of the sacred text in general by their concurrence; while they occasionally afford valuable emendations of the sacred text in several important passages, supporting by their evidence the various readings suggested by the ancient versions derived from manuscripts of an earlier date." (Dr. Hales's Analysis of Chronology, vol. it. book i. p. xiv.) In the first volume of Dr. Massh's edition of Le Long's Bibliotheca Sacra, there is a valuable collection of various readings made from the Masoretic and Non-Masoretic printed copies of the Hebrew Bible. See pp. xl.—cxviii.

10. Biblia Hebraica, olim a Christiano Reineccio edita, nunc denuo cum variis lectionibus, ex ingenti codicum copia à B. Kennicotto et J. B. De Rossi collatorum, ediderunt, J. C. DOEDERLEIN et J. H. MEISSNER. Lipsiæ, 1793, 8vo.

This edition was undertaken by the celebrated Dr. Doederlein and Professor Meissner, in order to supply those lovers of Hebrew literature who may not be able to consult the expensive volumes of Kennicott and De Rossi They have selected the principal various readings of those eminent collators; but Professor Jahn asserts that the text is very incorrect. The fine paper copies are beautiful and convenient books; but those on common paper are scarcely legible. They are usually bound in two volumes. In 1818 a second edition of this valuable Hebrew Bible was published at Halle, with a new preface by Dr. Knappe, entitled, Biblia Hebraica olim a Christ. Reineccio evulgata, post ad fichen recensionis Masoretico, cum variis lectionibus ex ingenti codd. mss. copia a Benj. Kennicotto et I. B. De Rossi collatorum edita, cur. J. C. Doederleinio et I. H. Meissnero. Quorum editioni ante hos XXV annos e bibliopolio Lipsiensi emisse, nunc emptionis jure in libr. Orohanotrophei Halensis translalæ, accessit G. Chr. Knappii profatio de editionibus Bibliorum Halensibus, 8vo. Halæ, Libraria Orphanotrophei. According to the Journal Général de la Littérature Etrangère (Jan. 1819), the above-noticed edition of 1793 consisted of ten thousand copies; the unsold stock of which were disposed of to the trustees or governors of the Orphan House at Halle, by whom the titlepage was altered to the date of 1818, and a new preface was added by Professor Knappe relative to the editions of the Bible published at Halle.

11. Biblia Hebraica. Digessit et graviores Lectionum varietates adjecit Johannes Jahn. Viennæ, 1806, 4 vols. 8vo.

Professor Jahn has long been distinguished for his successful cultivation of oriental literature. In his edition the text is very distinctly printed, the principal Hebrew points are retained, and the poetical parts of the Old Testament are metrically arranged; it is conveniently divided into four vols.; of which Vol. I. contains the Pentateuch.—Vol. II. contains the Historical Books of Joshua, Judges, Ruth, Samuel, Kings, Ezra, Esther, and Nehemiah.—Vol. III. comprises the Prophetical Books thus arranged;—Amos, Hosea, Micah, Isaiah, Joel, Nahum, Habakkuk, Obadiah, Zephaniah, Jeremiah, Lamentations, Ezekiel, Daniel, Haggai, Zechariah, Jonah, Malachi.—Vol. IV. contains the Psalms, Proverbs, Job, Song of Solomon, and Ecclesiastes. The Books of Kings and Chronicles are given in a kind of harmony.

Each book is judiciously divided into greater or less sections,

Each book is judiciously divided into greater or less sections, to which is prefixed a short Latin analysis of their contents. The division into chapters is preserved, and their numbers are noted at the heads of the sections. The number of the verses are also marked in the margin. The Masoretic Notes, which are generally added in the margin of the Hebrew Bibles, are retained, with the exception of a very few, which relate to the accents, and mark the middle of the book. They are all expressed at full length, and many of them are also accompanied with a Latin version. The Jewish criticisms, which are in some editions added at the end of each book, are omitted by Professor Jahn, as being of no use to the Christian reader. To the text are subjoined the more important various readings; and in some more difficult places, all the variations that could be found are carefully given. These various readings are taken from the collations of Bishop Walton, Grabe, Montfaucon, Dr. Kennicott, De Rossi, and Dr. Holmes. The text is that of Van der Hooght, from which the editor has departed only in nine or ten places, in which many other editions had preceded him, and which are supported by numerous and very weighty authorities. There are copies on fine paper in 8vo., which are very beautiful, and also forty copies in 4to., which are very tare.

12. Biblia Hebraica, or the Hebrew Scriptures of the Old Testament, without points, after the text of Kennicott, with the chief various readings, selected from his collation of Hebrew manuscripts, from that of De Rossi, and from the ancient versions; accompanied with English notes, critical, philological, and explanatory, selected from the most approved ancient and modern English and foreign biblical critics. By B. BOOTHROYD [now LL.D.]. Pontefract and London, 1816. 2 vols. 4to.

This is perhaps the cheapest Hebrew Bible, with critical apparatus, that is extant; it was published originally in parts, the first of which appeared in 1810. It is peculiarly interesting to the Hebrew scholar and critic, as it contains in a condensed form, the substance of the most valuable and expensive works. An eminent critic has observed, "Mr. Boothroyd has evidently spared neither expense nor labour to furnish the student with interesting extracts, which are calculated to assist him as well in interpreting as in obtaining a critical acquaintance with the original text. A good philological note is frequently of more importance towards the elucidation of a difficult passage than a long theological comment, which is often little better than a detail of contrary opinions. There is evidently some hazard of adopting fanciful and conjectural corrections in so extensive an undertaking as this, which is principally compiled from preceding authors of almost every description. Against this danger the sobriety of the editor's judgment has been a powerful protection; and as his avowed object was the solid instruction of the purchasers of his book, he has, in a commendable manner, accomplished his purpose." (Eclectic Review, vol. vii. p. 34. New Series.) The type is very clear; and the poetical parts of the Hebrew Scriptures are printed in hemistichs, according to the arrangement proposed by Bishop Lowth, and adopted by Archbishop Newcome. There are copies in royal 4to.

13. Biblia Hebraica secundum editionem Everardi Van der Hooght, denuo recognita et emendata à Juda D'Allemand, Linguæ Sanctæ Doctore. Editio nova, longè accuratissima. Londini, 1822; 1833. 8vo.

The edition, of which there are copies on fine paper, is stereotyped: it is printed after Van der Hooght's text; in preparing which for the press, the learned editor, Mr. D'Allemand, states that he discovered not fewer than two hundred errata. These he has carefully corrected, and by repeated and most attentive revision he has perhaps done all that human industry can accomplish, in order to produce an accurate edition of the Hebrew Bible In addition to the care previously bestowed by the editor, every page was revised four times, after the stereotype plates were east, by persons familiar with the Hebrew Language. east, by persons familiar with the Hebrew Language. Van der Hooght's hisiorical summaries of the contents of each chapter are omitted, in order that the expense of the book may not be unnecessarily increased. The various readings and Masoretic notes are very nearly and clearly exhibited at the foot of each page. Upon the whole, this edition may safely be ponounced the most beautiful, as well as the cheapest, edition of the Hebrew Serrptures ever published. To its great accuracy a learned Poitsh Rabbi has borne testimony. (See Jewish Expositor, September, 1825, p. 346.) 1825, p. 346.)

14. Biblia Hebraica Manualia, ad Exemplar Athianum accurata [à Judà D'Allemand]. Londini, 1828. large 12mo.

This edition of the Hebrew Scriptures was printed by the Lon-on Society for promoting Christianity among the Jews. "In comdon Society for promoting Christianity among the Jews. In com-pliance with the prejudices of those, for whose benefit it was intended, it is strictly a Joursh Bible, without a single Roman letter or figure. The Jews do not like Van der Hooght's edition, letter or figure. The Jews do not like Van der Hooght's edition, because a mark (t), which they deem a cross, is used in the text as a mark of reference to the notes." The editions most prized by the Jews are those of Athias (see page 7. No. 3 of this Appendix); and from his second edition, printed in 1667, the text of the present Hebrew Bible is taken, with one or two variations. "From its size, price, and the correctness of the text, this book will be a desurable accurisition to the Christian reader of the Oh! Presented. desirable acquisition to the Christian reader of the Old Testament in its original language, who wishes to possess the Jews' text. But for critical purposes, he must have recourse to Bibles free from the Masorah, such as those of Munster, and the quarto of Stephens. (Jewish Expositor, July, 1828. vol. xiii. pp. 256. 258.)

15. Biblia Hebraica secundum editiones Jos. Athiæ, Joannis Leusden, Jo. Simonis aliorumque, imprimis Everhardi Van der Hooght, recensuit, sectionum propheticarum recensum et explicationem clavemque Masoræthicam et Rabbinicam addidit Augustus HAHN. Lipsiæ, 1831. 8vo.

The text of Van der Hooght is scrupulously followed by Dr. Hahn, who has carefully corrected the typographical errors in Van der Hooght's edition. The volume is stereotyped from a new and very clear type, with singular neatness, and it is printed on good paper. As all the late editors (Jahn alone excepted) have preferred to follow the judgment of Van der Hooght, his text may now be regarded as the textus receptus of the Hebrew Scriptures.

Of the minor editions, containing the Hebrew text only, without any critical apparatus, the following have been recommended to biblical students; viz.

1. The most useful Hebrew Bible, for any person who is moderately acquainted with Latin, is that of Benedictus Arias Montanus, with an interlineary Latin translation, printed by Christopher Plantin at Antwerp, 1572, 1584, folio.

2. Biblia Hebraica, accurante M. Christiano Reineccio. Lipsiæ, 1725, 1729, 1756.

These are neat and accurate editions. Masch mentions another edition dated 1729, in quarto, in which the books are arranged according to the order adopted in the editions of the German translation of the Bild. tion of the Bible.

3. Biblia Hebraica manualia ad optimas quasque editiones recensita, atque cum brevi lectionum Masorethicarum Kettriban et Krijan resolutione ac explicatione. Edita a Johanne Simo-Halæ, 1752; 1767. Editio nova, 1828. 8vo.

The second edition of 1767 is the best. The text is that of Van der Hooght. There is a short yet full Hebrew and Latin Lexicon at the end of both editions, which have the additional merit of being portable, cheap, and useful.

4. Biblia Hebraica sine punctis. Amstelodami, 1701, small 8vo.

This is usually though incorrectly called Leusden's Hebrew Bible. The real editor was Maresius; Leusden wrote a preface to the Hebrew Bible printed at Amsterdam, 1694, 8vo. which abounds with errors. With the edition of 1701 is frequently bound up a neat and accurate edition of the Greek Testament, printed by Wetstein at Amsterdam, 1740, in small 8vo.

- 5. Biblia Hebraica, ad optimarum editionum fidem, summa diligentia recusa. Societatum Biblicarum sumptibus. Basileæ,
- 6. Victorini BYTHNEBI Lyra Davidis regis, sive Analysis Critico-Practica Psalmorum; quâ Voces Ebræse explicantur, ac consensus Textûs Sacri cum Paraphrasi Chaldaica ac Septuaginta Virorum Interpretatione Græca monstratur. Londini, 1650, 1664, 1679, 4to.; Tiguri, 1664, 1670, 8vo.; Glasguæ (in ædibus academicis) et Londini, 1823. 8vo.

Bythner's Lyra Prophetica has long been known as perhaps the most valuable help to the critical and grammatical study of the book of Psalms. The late reprint, at the university press of Glasgow, is very beautiful.

SECTION II.

EDITIONS OF THE HEBRIEO-SAMARITAN PENTATEUCH.

- 1. CHRISTOPHORI CELLARII Hora Samaritana: hoc est, Excerpta Pentateuchi Samaritana Versionis, cum Latina Interpretatione novâ et Annotationibus perpetuis. Etiam Grammatica Samaritana copiosis exemplis illustrata, et Glossarium, seu Index Verborum. Cize, 1082. 4to.
- 2. Pentateuchus, Hebræo-Samaritanus, charactere Hebraico-Chaldaico editus, curà et studio Benj. BLAYNET, S. T. P. Oxonii, 1790. 8vo.

The text of the Hebrer-Sanaritan Pentateuch, which was printed in Bishop Walton's Polygioti, d. scribed in p. 20. infra, has been adopted as the basis of this edition, to which have been added various readings from Dr. Kennicott's edition of the Hebrew Bible, already noticed.

SECTION III.

PRINCIPAL EDITIONS OF THE GREEK TESTAMENT, AND OF DETACHED BOOKS THERIOF.

Besides the works of Le Long and Masch, the history of the various editions of the Greek Testament is treated at considerable length by Pritius,1 by Dr. Mill and Wetstein in the Prolegomena to their critical editions of it, by Michaelis and his learned annotator Bishop Marsh,2 Dr. Griesbach,3 Professors Beck4 and Harles,5 by Mr. Butler,6 and by Dr. Clarke.7 To their labours, which have been consulted for this section, the reader is once for all referred, who is desirous of studying this important branch of the literary history of the sacred writings.

The following table exhibits the four principal Standard-Text-Editions of the Greek Testament, together with the principal editions which are founded upon them:8-1. Erasmus, 1516-19-22-27-35.

Aldus. Fol. Gr. 1518.—Gerbelii. Qto. Gr. 1521.—Cephalaus. Oct. Gr. 1524.—Bebelius. Oct. 1524. Gr. 1531-35.—Colinaus. Oct. Gr. 1534.—Platteri. Oct. Gr. 1538-40-43.—Van Ess. Oct. Gr. Lat. 1827.

2. Complutensian. 1514,

Plantin. Oct. Gr. 1564-73-74-90-91-1601-12. Fol. Gr. et Lat. 1572. Oct. 1574-83. Fol. 1584.—Geneva. Gr. 1609. 24mo. 1619, 1620. Qto.-Goldhagen. 1753. Oct. Gr.-Gratz. Gr. Lat. 1821. Oct.

3. ROBT. STEPHENS. 1546-49-50.

Oporinus. Duod. Gr. 1552.—Wechel. Fol. Gr. 1597. Duod. 1600. Fol. 1601. Duod. 1629.—Imp. Nicolai Dulcis. Fol. Gr. 1687.—Edit. Regia. Fol. Gr. 1642.—Crispin. Duod. Gr. 1553-63-1604. Duod. Gr. et Lat. 1612-22.—Froschoveri. Oct. Gr. 1559-66.—Brylinger. Oct. Gr. 1563.—Voegelii. Oct. Gr. 1564.—Vignonii. Duod. tinger. Oct. Gr. 1563.— Voegelii. Oct. Gr. 1564.— Vignomi. Duod.
Gr. 1584-87-1613-15.— Bezæ. Fol. Gr. et Lat. 1565-82-89-981642.— Waltoni. Fol. Gr. Lat. 1657.— Millii. Fol. Gr. 1707.—
Kusteri. Fol. Gr. 1710-23.— Birchii. Gr. 1788. Fol. et Qto.— Hardy. Oct. Gr. 1768. 1776. 1819.— Valpy. Gr. 1816; 1826. Oct.
— Lloyd. Gr. 18mo. 1828. 1830.— Greenfield, Gr. 48mo. 1829.—
Bloomfield, Gr. 1832. 8vo.

4. ELZEVIB. 1624-33, &c.

Boecleri. Oct. Gr. 1645.—Curcellæi. Oct. Gr. 1658-75-85-99.—Felli. Oct. Gr. 1675.—Konigii. Oct. Gr. 1697-1702.—Gregorii. Fol. Gr. 1703.—G. D. T. M. D. Oct. Gr. 1711-35.—Wetstenii. Fol. Gr. 1715.—Birrii. 1749. Oct.—Basil. 1825. Oct.—Lond. 1827. 48mo.

The editions of Bengel, Bowyer, Griesbach, Alter, Harwood, Knappe, Tittmann, Boissonade, Lachmann, Scholz, Naebe, and Goeschen, are not formed on the text of either of the above editions.

- Of the various editions of the Greek Testament, which have issued from the press, the following more particularly claim the notice of the biblical student :-
- 1. Novum Instrumentu omne diligenter ab Erasmo Roterodamo recognitum et emendatum. Basileæ, 1516, folio. Gr. Lat. edit. princeps.
- 1 Introd. ad Lect. Nov. Test. pp. 403—423. 2 Introduction to the New Test. vol. ii. part i. pp. 429—494.; part ii. pp. 844. 885. Bishop Marsh's Divinity Lectures, part i. pp. 98—110.; part ii.

Introduction to the New Test. vol. ii. part i. pp. 4c2-491.; part ii. pp. -6x2-491.
 Bishop Marsh's Divinity Lectures, part i. pp. 98-110.; part ii. pp. 1-46.
 Nov. Test. vol. i. prolegom. pp. iii.—xxxix.
 Monogrammata Hermeneutices Novi Testamenti, pp. 110-115.
 Brevior Notitia Literature Græce, pp. 656-664.; and also vol. iv. of his improved edition of Fabricius's Bibliotheca Græca, pp. 839-856.
 Horæ Biblicæ, vol. i. pp. 150-169.
 Bibliographical Dictionary, vol. vi. pp. 168-203.
 This table is taken from Masch and Boerner's edition of Le Long's Bibliotheca Sacra, and from Dr. Dibdin's Introduction to the Knowledge of the Classics, vol. i. pp. 55. 3d edit. with the requisite corrections and additions.

Erasmus had the distinguished honour of giving to the world the first edition of the entire New Testament. It was reprinted in 1519, 1523, 1527, and 1525. The first edition is of extreme rarity, and was executed with great leaste, in the short space of five months. Some of the manuscripts which he consulted are preserved in the public library at Basle, but none of them are of very great antiquity. For the first edition he had only one mutilated manuscript of the Apocalypse (since totally lost); he therefore filled up the chasms with his own Greek translations from the Latin Vulgate. The publication of this edition, in which he omitted the controverted clause in 1 John v. 7. because it was not in any of his manuscripts, involved him in a literary contest with the divines of Louvain, and with Stunica, the most learned of the Complutensian editors.2 with Stumes, the most learned of the Compitterisian editors. The editions of 1516, 1519, and 1522, were published before he saw the Complutensian Polyglott, from which he corrected the edition of 1527, particularly in the Apocalypse. Erasmus's editions were repeatedly printed after his death, particularly at Basle, Frankfort, and Leipsic. All his editions are much esteemed, notwithstanding their faults, and in some respects they are considered as equal to manuscripts. In the first edition Dr. Mill discovered about five hundred vitiated passages, and about one hundred genuine ones; a copy, on vellum, is in the Cathedral Library at York. Mr. Nolan has satisfactorily vindicated the character of Erasmus, as a sound critic and editor of the New Testament, from the charges of Dr. Griesbach. (Inquiry into the Integrity of the Greek Vulgate, pp. 410-419.)

2. Novum Testamentum, Græce et Latine. Compluti, 1514.

This forms the fifth volume of the Complutensian Polyglott noticed in p. 19. infra. Though it bears the date of 1514, yet as it was not allowed to be sold generally until 1522, before which time Erasmus had printed three editions of the New Testament, it is in fact entitled only to the second place in our list. The Greek text of this edition is printed without spirits, but the vowels are frequently accented. The characters seem to have been cut in imitation of those found in manuscripts of the twelfth century; and were probably taken from some manuscripts of that age, which were consulted by the Complutensian editors. The Complutensian were consulted by the Compitatensian editors. The Compitatensian edition contains the celebrated text relative to the heavenly witnesses in 1 John v. 7, 8., of which we have given an engraved facsimile in another part of this work. Wetstein, Semler, and other Protestant critics charged the editors with having altered the text, in order to make it conformable to the Latin Vulgate; but this table has been refixed by Copyr and Crischool. Their violates charge has been refuted by Goeze and Griesbach. Their vindica-tion is pronounced satisfactory by Michaelis (who considers the Apocalypse to be the best edited part of the Complutensian Greek Testament); and also by his annotator, Bishop Marsh, who states that this charge, in general, is not true. For though he is of opinion, that in some few single passages,—as in Matt. x. 25. and 1 John v. 7.—they follow the Vulgate in opposition to all the Greek manuscripts, he has ascertained, from actual collation, that there are more than two hundred passages in the Catholic Epistles, in which the Complutensian Greek text differs from the text of the Vulgate, as printed in the Complutensian edition. The manuscripts used for this edition are characterized as being very ancient and very correct, but this assertion is contradicted by internal evidence (see p. 20. infra.); and it is a most remarkable fact, that "wherever modern Greek manuscripts, manuscripts written in the thirteenth, fourteenth, or fifteenth centuries, differ from the most ancient Greek manuscripts, and from the quotations of the early Greek fathers, in characteristic readings, the Complutensian Greek Testament almost invariably agrees with the modern, in opposition to the ancient manuscripts. There cannot be a doubt, therefore, that the Commanuscripts. I here cannot be a doubt, therefore, that the Complutensian text was formed from modern manuscripts alone." (Bishop Marsh's Divinity Lectures, part i. p. 95.) The researches of the Danish professor Birch have shown that the Complutensian editors have made no use whatever of the Codex Vaticanus, though they boasted of valuable manuscripts being sent to them from the Vatican library.

3. Simonis Colinki.—'H Kaum Diadnan. Ev deutstia two παρησιών, παρά τω Σιμώνι Κολιναίω, δεκεμβρίου μήνος δευτέρου φθινοντός, еты алго тис Эводоная а. ф. л. в. (Paris, 1534. 8vo.)

An edition of singular rarity, beauty, and correctness. Colinæus was a very careful printer. He has been unjustly charged with partiality in following some unknown manuscripts; but from this accusation he has been fully exonerated by Dr. Mill and Wetstein.

4. Novum Testamentum, Græce. Lutetiæ, ex officina Roberti STEPHANI Typographi, Typis Regiis. 1546, 12mo. 1549, 12mo. 1550, folio.

The first of these editions is usually called the O mirificam The FIRST of these editions is usually called the O mirificam Edition, from the introductory sentence of the preface, O mirificam regis nostri optimi et præstantissimi principis liberalitatem. It has always been admired for the neatness of its typography, as well as for its correctness, only twelve errata (it is said) having been disco-

1 The first portion ever printed was executed by Aldus Manutius at Venice, in 1504. A copy is in the Royal Library of Wirtemburg at Stutgard. The whole of St. John's Gospel was published at Tubingen, in 1514.

2 In his disputes with Stunica, Erasmus professed his readiness to insert this verse if it were found in a single manuscript. Though Stunica could not produce one, yet as it was afterwards discovered in the Codex Britanicus (or Montfortianus), a manuscript of no great antiquity, Erasmus felt himself bound to insert it, and accordingly admitted it into his third edition of 1522.

of Erasmus according to Griesbach, and from fifteen ancient manuscripts in the Royal Library at Paris. Griesbach (tom. i. proleg. pp. xiv.—xxxi.) has given a long and critical examination of this edition, and of the manuscripts consulted by Stephens for his three editions. Stephens's first edition differs from the Complutensian text in five hundred and eighty-one instances, exclusive of the Apocalypse, in which he closely follows Erasmas. The SECOND dition closely resembles the first in its exterior appearance, differs from it in sixty-seven places; of which four are doubtful readings, thirty-seven not genuine, and twenty-six genuine; so that this latter edition has eleven readings of less authority than the this latter equion has eleven readings of less authority than the former, to which, however, it is preferred on account of its greater rarity and correctness. It is this second edition which has the remarkable erratum pulres for plures, in the last line but one of the first page of the preface, occasioned by the transposition of a single letter. The third edition of 1550, in folio, is a chef-d'œuvre of splendid typography. It was once supposed to have been formed entirely on the authority of Greek manuscripts, which Stephens professes, in his preface, to have collated for that purpose, a second and even a third time. So far, however, was this from being the case, that the researches of critics have shown that, except in the Apocalypse, it is scarcely any thing more than a reprint of Erasmus's fifth edition. Though its value as a critical edition is thus considerably reduced, the singular beauty of its typography (which has rarely been exceeded in modern times) has caused it to be considered as a distinguished ornament to any library. Robert phens reprinted the Greek New Testament at Geneva in 1551, in 8vo. with the Vulgate and Erasmus's Latin versions, and parallel passages in the margin. This is the scarcest of all his editions, and is remarkable for being the first edition of the New Testament divided into verses. (Marsh's Michaelis, vol. ii. part i. pp. 446. 448. part ii. pp. 848, 849. Griesbach, Nov. Test. p. xv.) The character of Robert Stephens, as an editor of the Greek Testament, has been elaborately vindicated against the criticisms of Professor Porson, by the Rev. C. P. Greswell in the first volume of his "View of the cools Parising Creat Pages" (McGall 1999) good, and also be the early Parisian Greek Press" (Oxford, 1823, 8vo.); and also by the Rev. Francis Huyshe, who has inserted a series of papers in the third, fourth, and fifth volumes of the British Magazine, for 1833–34, in which the statements of Porson, Griesbach, and some other modern critics are minutely investigated.

5. Novum Testamentum, cum versione Latina veteri, et nova Theodori Brzz. Genevæ, folio, 1565, 1576, 1582, 1589, 1598. Cantabrigiæ, 1642, folio,

The New Testament of 1565 is the first of the editions conducted by Theodore Beza, who was a native of France, and a Protestant, and fled to Switzerland on account of his religion. "The critical materials which he employed were for the most part the same as those which had been used by Robert Stephens. But he had likewise the advantage of that very ancient manuscript of the Gospels and the Acts, which he afterwards sent to the university of Cambridge, and which is known by the name of the Codex Bezze. had also a very ancient manuscript of St. Paul's Epistles, which he procured from Clermont in France, and which is known by the name of the Codex Claromontanus. Lastly, he had the advantage of the Syriac version, which had been lately published by Tremellius, with a close Latin translation. But the use which he made of his materials was not such as might have been expected from a man of Beza's learning. Instead of applying his various readings to the emendation of the text, he used them chiefly for polemical purposes in his notes. In short, he amended Stephens's text in not more than fifty places; and even these emendations were not always founded on proper authority." (Bishop Marsh's Lectures, part i. p. 109.) Beza's third edition of 1582 is considered as the most complete of those printed under his own eye; but all his editions have the Vulgate Latin version, and a new one of his own, together with philological, doctrinal, and practical notes. The edition of 1598, being esteemed the most accurate of any that had before been published, was adopted as the basis of the English version of the New Testament, published by authority in 1611. This testimony of the Anglican church is highly honourable to its merit. The reprint of Beza's Testament, at Cambridge, in 1642, with the addition of Joachim Camerarius's notes, is considered as the edition

6. Novum Testamentum Græcè. Lugdum Batavorum. Ex Officina Elzeviriana, 12mo. 1624.

This is the first of the celebrated Elzevir editions, and deserves (says Bishop Marsh) to be particularly noticed, because the text of the Greek Testament, which had fluctuated in the preceding editions, acquired in this a consistency, and seemed, during upwards of a century, to be exposed to no future alterations. The text of this edition has been the basis of almost every subsequent impression. Wetstein adapted his various readings to it; and it has acquired the appellation of "Textus Receptus." "The person who conducted this edition (for Elzevir was only the printer) is at present unknown; but, whoever he was, his critical exertions were confined within a narrow compass. The text of this edition was copied from Beza's text, except in about fifty places; and in these places the readings were borrowed partly from the various readings in Stephens's margin, partly from other editions, but certainly not in common use, was copied, with a few exceptions, from the text of Beza. Beza himself closely followed Stephens; and Stephens (in his third and chief edition) copied solely from the fifth edition of Erasmus, except in the Revelation, where he followed sometimes Erasmas, sometimes the Complutensian edition.

Frasmas, sometimes he computerisian edition. The text therefore in daily use, resolves itself at last into the Complutensian and Enasman editions." (Bishop Marsh's Lectures, part i. p. 110.)

The Elzevir edition of 1624 was reprinted at Leyden in 1633, and a third time in 1641, at Amsterdam in 1656, 1662, 1670, and 1678, and also at Sedan, in 1628, Gr.—Of these various impressions, the Leyden edition of 1633 is the best and in west required in the Leyden edition of 1633 is the best and in most request: it is the first that has the text divided into separate verses. The edition the first that has the text divided into separate verses. printed by Jannon, at Sedan, has long been regarded as a typograprinced by James at Secata, has long been regarded as a typographical curiosity. It is, however, greatly inferior in point of execution to the beautifully small and clear edition printed by Bleau at Amsterdam in 1633. (Brunet, Manuel, tom. iii. pp. 432, 433. Dibdin's Introd. to the Classics, vol. i. pp. 136, 137.) Good copies of these miniature editions are scarce and dear; but they are both surpassed in smallness of size and in typographical neatness by the London edition of 1827, published by Mr. Pickering. See No. 49.

7. Novum Testamentum, studio et labore Stephani Cuncel-Amstelædami, 1658, 12mo. 1675, 1685, 12mo. 1699, LASI.

All the editions of Curcellæus or Courcelles are in great repute for their beauty and accuracy: the text is formed on that of the Elze-virs. He has collected the greatest number of various readings to be found in any edition of the New Testament prior to that in the sixth volume of Bishop Walton's Polyglott. These various lections are given from a collation of manuscripts and printed editions, and are partly at the foot of the page, and partly at the end of the Acts and St. Paul's Epistles. Curcellaeus has also given a valuable collection of parallel passages. The edition of 1675 contains a prologue or preface to St. Paul's Epistles, which Boecler had printed a few years before from a manuscript brought from the East by Stephen Gerlachius, and differs from the first edition calc in have Stephen Gerlachius, and differs from the first edition only in having all the various readings placed at the foot of the page. third and fourth editions were printed after the death of Curcel-læus, and differ from the second only in having the text printed in columns. In 1695, John Gottlieb Moller, a divine of Rostock, pub-lished a dissertation against the Curcellæan editions, entitled Curcellaus in editione originalis N. T. textus variantium lectionum et parallelorum Scriptura Locorum additamentis vestita, socinizans. Rumpæus (Com. Crit. ad Nov. Test. p. 280.) has charged Courcelles with unnecessarily multiplying various readings, and making them with unnecessarily multiplying various reasonable. Michaelfrom conjecture, in order to subserve the Socialian scheme. Michaelfrom conjecture, in order to subserve the Socialian scheme. The pas from conjecture, in order to subserve the Soeman scheme. Michaelis admits that these charges are not wholly unfounded. The passages noticed by Rumpæus are 1 John v. 7.; John x. 30. and xvii. 22., concerning the doctrine of the Trinity; Rom. ix. 5. 1 John v. 20. and John xvii. 3., concerning the Son of God; and Rom. iii. 25. Matt. xxvi. 39. 42., concerning the satisfaction made by Jesus Christ. All the editions of Curcellæus are scarce and dear.

8. Novum Testamentum, Gr. Lat. in the fifth volume of the London Polyglott, which is described in p. 20. infra.

This edition is deserving of particular notice, as being the first edition of the New Testament that is furnished with a complete critical apparatus. The text is that of Robert Stephens's folio edicritical apparatus. The text is that of Robert Stephens's Iono cuttion of 1550, whose various readings Bishop Walton has incorporated in his sixth volume; and in addition to them he has given a collection of extracts from sixteen Greek manuscripts, which were collated under the direction of Archishop Usher. "They are described at the head of the collation in the sixth volume by Walton and the sixth volume by Walton has been sixth volume by Walton and the sixth volume by Walton has sixth volume in the sixth volume by Walton has sixth volume in the sixth volume by Walton has sixth volume in the sixth volume in the sixth volume in the sixth volume is sixth volume. ton himself; and a further account of them is given in the Prolegomena to Mill's Greek Testament (§ 1372—1396.) and in Michaelis's Introduction to the New Testament (vol. ii. chap. viii.) But the extracts from the Greek manuscripts were neither the sole nor the chief materials which the Polyglott afforded for the emendation of the Greek text. In addition to the Latin Vulgate, it contains the Syriac, the Arabic, and the Ethiopic versions of the New Testament, with the Persian in the gospels. And these oriental versions are not only arranged in the most convenient manner, for the purpose of comparing them with the Greek, but they are accompanied with literal Latin translations, that even they acquainted with the oriental languages might still have recourse to them for various readings, though indeed with less security, as every translator is liable to make mistakes."—(Bishop Marsh's Lectures, part ii. p. 5.)

9. ΤΗΣ ΚΑΙΝΗΣ ΔΙΑΘΗΚΗΣ ΑΠΑΝΤΑ. Novi Testamenti Libri Omnes. Accesserunt Parallela Scripturæ Loca, nec non variantes Lectiones ex plus 100 MSS. Codicibis et antiquis versionibus collectæ. Oxonii, e Theatro Sheldoniano. 1675. 8vo.

This edition was superintended by the learned Dr. John Fell, Bishop of Oxford, whose design in giving it to the public was, to remove the apprehensions which had been raised in the minds of many persons ignorant of criticism, relative to the supposed uncertainty of the Greek text in the New Testament, by the great number of various lections contained in Bishop Walton's Polyglott. To show how little the integrity of the text was affected by them, Bishop Fell printed them under the text, that the reader might the more easily compare them. To the readings copied from the London Polyglott, he added those quoted by Curcelleus, and the Bar-from Greek manuscripts. The textus receptus, therefore, or the text | berim readings, also Marshall's extracts from the Coptic and Gothic berin readings, also Marshalt's extracts from the Copine and Conneversions, and the readings of twelve Bodleian, four Dublin, and two Paris manuscripts. As Bishop Fell's edition sells at a low price, it may be substituted for the more expensive critical editions of the New Testament by those who cannot purchase them. The text is formed according to that of Robert Stephens and the Elzevirs; though Wetstein has accused it of retaining the errors of the former, as well as of some of Walton's Polyglott. Bishop Fell's edition was reprinted at Leipsic in 1697 and 1702, and at Oxford in 1703, in folio. This magnificent edition, which takes its name from 1703, in folio. This magnificent edition, which takes its name from the editor, Dr. Gregory, contains no accession of critical materials, and sells at a low price.

10. H KAINH AIAGHKH. Novum Testamentum Græcum, cum lectionibus variantibus MSS. Exemplarium, Versionum, Editionum, SS. Patrum et Scriptorum Ecclesiasticorum, et in Studio et labore Ĵoannis MILLII, S.T.P. Oxonii, easdem notis. e Theatro Sheldoniano. 1707. folio.

The labour of thirty years was devoted to this edition by Dr. Mill, who finished it only fourteen days before his death. The text, which is that of Robert Stephens's edition of 1550, is beautifully printed; and the various readings and parallel passages are placed below. Dr. Mill has inserted all the previously existing collections of various readings; he collated several original editions, procured extracts from hitherto uncollated Greek MSS., and revised and augmented the extracts from the Gothic and Coptic versions which had appeared in Bishop Fell's edition; and added numerous readings from other ancient versions, and from the quotations of the New Testament in the writings of the fathers. The prolegomena contain a treasure of sacred criticism. Michaelis observes that "notwithstanding those of Wetstein, they still retain their original value, for they contain a great deal of matter which is not in Wetstein; and of the matter which is common to both, some things are more clearly explained by Mill. This edition was some things are more clearly explained by Mill. This edition was reprinted by Kuster at Rotterdam, in 1710, in folio, with the readings of twelve additional MSS., some of which had been previously but imperfectly collated. Whatever readings were given in Mill's appendix, as coming too late for insertion under the text, were in this second edition transferred to their proper places. point of accuracy, however, Kuster's edition is considered inferior to that of Dr. Mill. There are copies of Kuster's edition with the date of Amsterdam, 1723, in the title-page; but Masch says that it probably is nothing more than the edition of 1710 with a new title-page. Some copies are also dated 1746. To render this edition was covered to force the Page 1800 there in the date of the page 2000 the pag prodolly is nothing more than the edition of 1710 with a new title-page. Some copies are also dated 1746. To render this edition more easy of reference, the Rev. Joseph Hallett, jum, a learned dissenting minister, in 1728, published an Index, containing an account of the MSS. consulted by Mill and Kuster; entitled Index Librorum MSS. Gracorum et Versionum Antiquarum Nom Fæderis, quos viri eruditissimi J. Millius et L. Kusterus cum tertià editione Stephanicà contulerunt. This publication is in 8vo., and is not of compan occurrence. not of common occurrence.

The various readings of Dr. Mill, amounting to 30,000, were attacked by Dr. Whitby, in 1710, in an elaborate work entitled Examen Variantium Lectionum Johannis Millii, with more zeal Examen Variantium Lectionum Johannis Mitan, with more zeur than knowledge of sacred criticism. It was afterwards annexed to Whitby's Commentary on the New Testament. Dr. W.'s arguments were applied by Anthony Collins against Divine Revelation, in his Discourse on Free-thinking; which was refuted by Dr. Bentley under the assumed title of Phileleutherus Lipstensis, "whose reply," says Bishop Marsh, "has been translated into several foreign languages, and should be studied by every man who is desirous of forming just notions of biblical criticism." (Lectures, forming just notions of biblical criticism. (Lectures.

part ii. p. 13.)

11. Dr. Edward Wells published an edition of the Greek Testament, at Oxford, in 4to. in detached portions, between the years 1709 and 1719. It is noticed among the commentaries infra, in this Appendix; but "as it exhibits a corrected text of the Greek Testament, it claims also a place in the present list of editions, though subsequent improvements in sacred criticism have in a great measure superseded the emendations of Dr. Wells." (Bishop Marsh.) Dr. Nares, in his Strictures on the Unitarian Version of the New Testament, has made frequent and honourable mention of the critical labours of Wells.

12. 'H KAINH AIAOHKH. Novum Testamentum, post priores Steph. Curcellei et D.D. Oxoniensium labores. Cum prolegomenis G.D.T.M. et notis in find adjectis. Amstelodami, ex Officina Wetsteniana. 1711; 1735. small 8vo.

These are most beautiful editions, but the second is said to be the most accurate. The editor of the first was Gerard von Maestricht (Gerardus De Trajecto Mosse) a syndic of the republic of Bremen; the second was revised by the celebrated critic J. J. Wetstein. Having been published by his relative Henry Wetstein, a book-seller of Amsterdam, these editions of the New Testament are sometimes improperly called Wetstein's; and from the name of Carcellane being rested in the title that the content of the New Testament are sometimes improperly called Wetstein's; and from the name of Curcellæus being printed in the title, they are in most catalogues erroneously styled Nov. Test. Græc. Curcellæi.

The text is formed on the second Elzevir edition of 1633, and Curcellæus's editions. It has the most judicious selection of parallel texts ever appended to any edition of the New Testament. These are placed immediately under the Greek text, and below them is a selection of various readings, taken from upwards of 100 manuscripts and versions. Prefixed are very useful prolego-mena, containing an account of manuscripts and collectors of various readings, with 43 critical canons to enable the reader to determine concerning the various lections exhibited in the work; an abstract of Dr. Whitby's Examen above noticed; and the an abstract of Dr. Whitby's Examen above noticed; and the prefaces of Henry Wetstein, Curcelleus, and Bishop Fell. These editions are ornamented with an engraved frontispiece, copied from that of the splendid folio Paris edition of 1642, a plan of Jerusalem, an ichnograph of the Temple, and two maps. At the end there are 38 pages of critical notes, containing an examination of the most important various readings which occur in the course of the work. Michaelis does not speak very highly of the edition of 1711; but Dr. Dibdin says that, upon the whole, the edition of 1735 "may be considered as the very best critical duodecimo 1735 "may be considered as the very best critical duodecimo (rather small octavo) edition of the Greek Testament, and the biblical student will do well to procure so valuable and commodious a publication." (On the Classics, vol. i. p. 97.) 1

13. Acta Apostolorum Græco-Latina, Literis Majusculis. Codice Laudiano characteribus uncialibus exarato et in Bibliotheca Bodleiana adservato, descripsit ediditque Tho. HEARNIUS, A.M. Oxoniensis, qui et Symbolum Apostolorum ex eodem codice subjunxit. Oxonii. E Theatro Sheldoniano, 1715. 8vo.

The Codex Laudianus, of which this edition is a transcript, is described in Part I. Chap. III. § 4. of the first volume: a fac-simile of the MS. is prefixed. This is the scarcest of all Mr. Hearne's publications: the impression was limited to one hundred and twenty copies, at ten shillings each. A copy was sold at the sale of the Rev. Dr. Heath's library, in 1810, for the sum of thirteen pounds two shillings: it now adorns the very valuable library of the Writers to his Majesty's Signet at Edinburgh. There is another copy in the Library of the British Museum.

14. The New Testament in Greek and English, containing the Original Text, corrected from the authority of the most authentic Manuscripts, and a new Version, formed agreeably to the Illustrations of the most learned Commentators and Critics. With Notes and various Readings, [By W. MACE.] London, 1729. 2 vols. 8vo.

1729, 2 vols. 8vo.

This is a beautifully printed book; whose editor has altered various passages in conformity with the Arian hypothesis. His arbitrary alterations and bold criticisms were exposed by Dr. Leonard Twells in A Critical Examination of the late New Text and Version of the Greek Testament. London, 1732, 8vo. Michaelis has also very severely and justly censured the very great liberties taken by Mace. Introd. to N.T. vol. ii. pp. 463, 464.

15. 'H KAINH ∆IA⊖HKH. Novum Testamentum Græcum. Edente Jo. Alberto Bengelio. Tubingæ, 1734. 4to. 1763. 4to.

This is an excellent edition, formed with an extraordinary degree of conscientiousness, sound judgment, and good taste. John Albert Bengel, or Bengelius, as he is generally called in this country, abbot of Alpirspach in the duchy (present kingdom) of Wirtemburg, was led to direct his attention to sacred criticism, in consequence of serious and anxious doubts arising from the deviations exhibited in preceding editions; and the result of his laborious researches was, the edition now under consideration. The text is preceded by an Introductio in Crisin Novi Testamenti, and text is preceded by an Introductio in Crisin Novi Testament, and is followed by an Epilogus and Appendia.

The text is not formed on any particular edition, but is corrected and improved according to the editor's judgment; and so scrupulous was Bengel, that he studiously avoided inserting any reading which did not exist in some printed edition, except in the Apocalypse; in which book alone he inserted readings that had never been printed, because it had been printed from so few manuscripts, and in one passage had been printed by Erasmus from no manuscript whatever. Beneath the text he placed some select readings, reserving the evidence in their favour for his Apoparatus Criticus. and in one passage had been printed by Lrasmus from no manuscript whatever. Beneath the text he placed some select readings, reserving the evidence in their favour for his Apparatus Criticus. His opinion of these marginal readings he expressed by the Greek letters $s, \, \xi, \, \gamma, \, \delta$, and s, and some few other marks. Thus, s, denotes that he held the reading to be genuine; s, that its genuineness was not absolutely certain, but that the reading was still preferable to that in the text s, that the reading in the margin was of could that in the text; γ , that the reading in the margin was of equal value with that in the text, so that he could not determine which was preferable; δ, that the reading in the margin was of less value; and s, that it was absolutely spurious, though defended by some critics. Bengel's edition was printed, after his death, by Burke, at Tubingen, in 1763, 4to with important corrections and additions. Several small impressions of Bengel's Greek Testament have been printed in Germany, without the Critical Apparatus; viz. at Stutgard, 1734, 1739, 1753, 8vo.; at Tubingen, 1762, 1776, 1790, 8vo.; and at Leipsic, 1737, 8vo.

16. Ή KAINH ΔΙΑΘΗΚΗ. Novum Testamentum Græcum editionis receptæ, cum Lectionibus Variantibus Codicum MSS., Editionum aliarum, Versionum et Patrum, necnon Commentario

*In 1720, the celebrated critic, Dr. Richard Bentley, circulated proposals for a new edition of the Greek Testament, with various lections, which was never executed. The proposals themselves are printed in the Biographia Britannica, (article Bentley, note K.); and the illustrative specimen, Rev. xxii. is given in Pritius's Introd. ad Lect. Nov. Test. pp. 415—419. A detailed account of Bentley's proposed work is given in Bishop Monk's Life of Dr. B. whose critical materials for his intended edition of the Greek Test past, representative 100 for the property of the control of the contro 419—419. A detailed some some serifical materials for his intended edition of the Greek Testament, amounting to 19 volumes, are preserved in the library of Trinity College, Cambridge; but Bentley left nothing in a state of preparation for the press. (Bishop Burgess's Anniversary Discourse, delivered to the Royal Society of Literature, in 1830. Appendix, p. 62.)

pleniore ex Scriptoribus veteribus, Hebræis, Græcis, et Latinis, historiam et vim verborum illustrante. Opera et studio Joannis Jacobi Wetstenii. Amstelædami, 1751, 1752, 2 vols. folio. Editio altera, aucta et emendata, curante J. A. Lotze. Vol. I. Quatuor Evangelia complectens. Roterdami, 1831. Royal 4to.

Of all the editions of the New Testament, this is pronounced by Michaelis to be the most important, and the most necessary to those who are engaged in sacred criticism. Wetstein's Prolegomena, which contain a treasure of sacred criticism, were first published in 1730. The text is copied from the Elzevir editions; the verses were numbered in the margin; and the various readings, with their authorities (containing a million of quotations), are placed beneath the text. Wetstein's edition is divided into four parts, each of which is accompanied with Prolegomena, describing the Greek manuscripts quoted in it. The first part contains the four Gospels; the second, the Epistles of St. Paul; the third, the Acts of the Apostles, and the Catholic Epistles; and the fourth, the Apocalypse. To the last part are annexed two Epistles in Syriac, with a Takin version with a contained. with a Latin version; which, according to Wetstein, were written by Clement of Rome. But Dr. Lardner has shown that they are not genuine. (Works, 8vo. vol. xi. pp. 197—226. 4to. vol. v. pp. 432—446.) The critical observations on various readings, and on the interpretation of the New Testament, "must be studied," says Bishop Marsh, "by every man who would fully appreciate the work in question." Michaelis has criticised the labours of Wetstein with great severity; but the latter has been vindicated by Bishop Marsh, both in his notes on Michaelis (pp. 865—877.), and in his Divinity Lectures (part ii. pp. 21-23.).

In consequence of the great rarity, and very high price of Wetstein's edition, Dr. Lotze was induced to undertake a new impression of it; which would have been greatly improved by the correction of errors, and the more accurate exhibition of various readings from MSS. and particularly from those derived from ancient versions, in which Wetstein is acknowledged to have been defective. But the decease of the learned editor (whose valuable critical and theological library was dispersed by auction in the summer of 1833) has caused this projected edition to be abandoned. The Prolegomena of Wetstein, therefore (forming a royal quarto volume of 279 pages), are all that has been published by Dr. Lotze, who has edited them with great care and with considerable improvements. Dr. L. has scrupulously retained Wetwith the exception of those passages in which the stein's text. latter had thrown out unjust observations upon other critics, especially the pious and erudite Bengel, and also with the omission of this literary quarrels with Frey and Iselius: and he has added from the second volume of the folio edition Wetstein's critical observations upon various readings, and his rules for judging of their value, together with most of the notes of Dr. John Solomon Semler, who republished the Prolegomena at Halle in 1764. Dr. Lotze has further subjoined, in an Appendix, Dr. Glocester Ridley's learned Dissertation on the Syriac Versions of the New Testament, in which the errors of Wetstein are corrected, and his deficiencies are supplied. This edition of Wetstein's Prolegomena is very are supplied. I neatly executed.

17. H KAINH AJAOHKH, sive Novum D. N. J. C. Testamentum Græcum cum Variantibus Lectionibus, quæ demonstrant Vulgatam Latinam ipsis è Græcis Codicibus hodienum extantibus Authenticam. Accedit Index Epistolarum et Evangeliorum, Spicilegium Apologeticum, et Lexidion Græco-Latinum. Cura et Opera P. Hermanni Goldhagen. Editio Catholica et Novissima. Moguntiæ, 1753. 8vo.

Michaelis states that he has never been able to discover from what edition Goldhagen took his text: he has given fifty-two readings from the Codex Molshemiensis, a manuscript containing the Gospels, Acts, and Epistles, and which formerly belonged to the college of Jesuits at Molsheim in Alsace. (Introd. to New Test. vol. ii. part i. pp. 283. 490.) The book is not common: a Test. vol. ii. part i. pp. 283. 490.) copy is in the British Museum.

18. 'H KAINH ∆IA⊖HKH. Novum Testamentum Græcum. In Sectiones divisit, Interpunctiones accuratè posuit, et Dispositionem Logicam adjecit Christianus Schoettgenius. Lipsiæ, 1744; 1749, 8vo. Wratislaviæ, 1765, 8vo.

The divisions into sections and the punctuation are reputed to be judiciously executed. The ordinary divisions of chapters and verses are retained in the margin. An account of the principal alterations is given in the appendix.

19. Novum Testamentum Græcum ad fidem Græcorum solum MSS. nunc primum expressum, adstipulante Jo. Jac. Wetstenio, juxta Sectiones Alberti Bengelii divisum; et novâ interpunctione sæpius illustratum. Accessere in altero volumine emendationes conjecturales virorum doctorum undecunque collectæ. Londini, cura, typis et sumptibus G.[ulielmi] B.[owren.] 1763. 2 vols. 12mo.

A very valuable edition, and now scarce; it was reprinted in 1772, but not with the same accuracy as the first edition. conjectures were published in a separate form in 1772, and again in 4to. in 1782, to accompany a handsome quarto edition of the Greek Testament, which was published by Mr. Nichols in 1783, with the assistance of the Rev. Dr. Owen. It is now extremely rare and dear. The conjectures were reprinted in 1812 with

20. Novum Testamentum, Græce et Latine, Textum denuo recensuit, Varias Lectiones numquam antea vulgatas collegit-Scholia Græca addidit-Animadversiones Criticas adjecit, et edidit Christ. Frid. MATTHEL. Rigae, 1782-1788. 12vols. 8vo.

Of Professor Matthee's recension of manuscripts some account has already been given in Part I. p. 206. of the first volume. "The scurrility which the professor mingled in his opposition to Griesbach's system of classification, tended greatly to injure the work at the time of its appearance, and to lower the author in the esteem of the candid and moderate; but now that the heat of controversy has cooled down, the value of his labours begins to be more highly appreciated, and more impartially appealed to, on the subject of the various readings of the Greek text." (Dr. Hen-derson's Biblical Researches, p. 53.) The late Bishop Middleton considered it as by far the best edition of the Greek Testament extant; and though Michaelis has criticised it with considerable severity, he nevertheless pronounces it to be absolutely necessary for every man who is engaged in the criticism of the Greek Tes As, however, Matthæi undertook a revision of the Greek text on the authority of one set of manuscripts of the Byzantine family, Bishop Marsh regrets that he made so partial an application of his critical materials. "And since no impartial judge can admit that the genuine text of the Greek Testament may be established as well, by applying only a part of our materials, as by a judicious employment of the whole, the edition of Matthæi is only so far of importance, as it furnishes new materials for future uses; materials, indeed, which are accompanied with much useful information and many learned remarks." (Bishop Marsh's Lectures, part ii. p. 31.)

21. Novum Testamentum Græce. Ad Codices Mosquenses utriusque Bibliothecæ S.S. Synodi et Tabularii, Imperialis, item Augustanos, Dresdenses, Goettingenses, Gothanos, Guelpherbytanos, Langeri, Monachienses, Lipsienses, Nicephori et Zittaviensem, adhibitis Patrum Græcorum Lectionibus, Editionibus N. Testamenti principibus et Doctorum Virorum Libellis criticis, iterum recensuit, Sectiones majores et minores Eusebii, Euthalii, et Andreæ Cæsariensis notavit, primum quoque nunc Lectiones Ecclesiasticas, ex usu Græcæ Ecclesiæ designavit, ac Synaxaria Evangeliarii et Praxapostoli addidit, et Criticis interpositis Animadversionibus edidit Christianus Fridericus MATTHEI. I. Wittebergæ, 1803; Vol. II. Curiæ Variscorum, 1806; Vol. III. Ronneburgi, 1807. 8vo.

This second edition of Matthæi's Greek Testament is seldom to be met with. A copy of the first volume is in the library of the The critical annotations of the editor are placed British Museum. at the end of the volume; the various readings are at the foot of each page. Matthæi is very severe on the editorial labours of Dr. each page. Griesbach.

22. 'H KAINH AIAOHKH. The New Testament collated with the most approved manuscripts; with select notes in English, critical and explanatory, and references to those authors who have best illustrated the sacred writings. By Edward Hard woon, D.D. London, 1776, 2 vols. 12mo.; 1784, 2 vols. 12mo.

"This edition," says the learned annotator of Michaelis, " is certainly entitled to a place among the critical editions of the Greek Testament, though it is not accompanied with various readings; for, though Dr. Harwood has adopted the common text as the basis of his own, he has made critical corrections wherever the received reading appeared to him to be erroneous. The manuscripts which he has generally followed when he departs from the common text, are the Cantabrigiensis in the Gospels and Acts, and the Claromontanus in the Epistles of St. Paul." These Dr. Harwood considered as approaching the nearest of any manuscripts now known in the world to the original text of the sacred records. "It is not improbable that this edition contains more of the ancient and genuine text of the Greek Testament than those which are in common use but as no single manuscript, however ancient and venerable, entitled to such a preference as to exclude the rest, and no critic of the present age can adopt a new reading, unless the general evidence be produced, and the preponderancy in its favour distinctly shown, the learned and ingenious editor has in some measure defeated his own object, and rendered his labours less applicable to the purposes of sacred criticism." (Bishop Marsh's Michaelis, vol. ii. part ii. pp. 884, 885.) At the end of the second volume there is a catalogue of the principal editions of the Greek Testament, and a list of the most esteemed commentators and critics. The work is very neatly printed; and under the Greek text are short critical notes in English, chiefly relating to classical illustrations of Scripture. In the list of commentators and critics, those are most commended by Dr. Harwood who favour the Socinian scheme, to which he was strongly attached, and he therefore admitted or numerous corrections and additions. In his edition of the New rejected a variety of readings, according as they favour or oppose Testament, Mr. Boyer adopted the emendations proposed by Wet-

23. Novum Testamentum Græcum, è Codice MS. Alexandrino, qui Londini in Bibliothecà Musei Britannici asservatur, descriptum à Carolo Godofredo Wolde. Londini, ex prelo Joannis Nichols, typis Jacksonianis, 1786. folio.

This is an elegant fac-simile edition of the Alexandrian Manuscript which is preserved in the British Museum, and is described in Part I. pp. 222—224. of Vol. I. Twelve copies were printed on vellum. The fac-simile itself fills two hundred and sixty pages: and the preface, comprising twenty-two pages, contains an accurate description of the Manuscript, illustrated by an engraving representing the style of writing in various manuscripts. To this is subjoined an exact list of all its various readings, in eighty-nine is subjoined an exact list of all its various readings, in eighty-nine pages; each reading is accompanied with a remark, giving an account of what his predecessory Junius (i. e. Patrick Young), Bishop Walton, Drs. Mill and Grabe, and Wetstein, had performed or neglected. The preface of Woide, and his collection of various readings, were reprinted, with notes, by Professor Spohn, at Leipsic, in 1790, in 8vo. To complete this publication, there should be added the following: Appendix ad Edutionm Novi Testamenti Graci è Codice Alexandrino descripti à C. G. Woide. Oxonii è Typographeo Clarendoniano. 1799. folio. This splendid work was edited by the Rev. Dr. Ford, who added many useful nates. Long register the control of the transfer of the tr King Charles I. to cause a fac-simile of the entire MS. to be engraved. But the importance and value of such an undertaking do not appear to have been understood—at least they were not duly appreciated—by that monarch: he therefore refused to have it done. The circumstance is thus related by the industrious antiquary Aubrey, in his inedited "Remaines of Gentilisme and Judaisme," preserved among the Lansdowne MSS. in the British Museum, No. 231. folio 169. Writing on the disputed clause in 1 John v. 7. Aubrey says:—
"The last clause of this verse is not found in the antient MSS. copies, e. g. that in the Vatican Library, and ye Tecla MS. in St. James's Library and others: as it is not in an old MS. in Magdalen Coll: Library in Oxford. That at St. James's was sent as a Present to King Charles the First, from Cyrillus Patriark of Constantinople: as a jewel of that antiquity not fift to be kept amongst Infidels. Mr. Rosse (translator of Statius) was Tutor to ye D. of Mongott him the place [67] But the importance and value of such an undertaking do not appear mouth who made him Library Keeper at St. James's: he desired mouth who made him Library Keeper at St. James s: he desired K. Cha. I. to be at ye chardge to have it engraven in copper plates: and told him it would cost but £200, but his Maty would not yield to it. Mr. Ross sayd 'that it would appeare glorious in History, after his Matya death.' 'Pish,' sayd he, 'I care not what they say of me in History when I am dead.' H. Grotius, J. G. Vossius, Heinsius, &c. have made Journeys into England, purposely to correct their Greeke Testaments by this Copy in St. James. Sr. Chr. Wron sayd that he would rather have it engrayed by an Engrayer Wren sayd that he would rather have it engraved by an Engraver that could not understand or read Greek, than by one that did."

In the reign of Charles II, the design of printing this manuscript was resumed; and the editing of the fac-simile was to have been confided to the Rev. Dr. Smith, to whom the king promised a canonry of Windsor, or of Westminster, for his labour. But, from some circumstance or other which cannot now be ascertained, this design was abandoned. (Wood's Athenæ Oxoniensis, vol. ii col.

The value of such an undertaking has been better understood in our times: and the British Parliament nobly guaranteed the expense of the Fac-simile Edition, which was executed under the editorship of the Rev. H. H. Baber. See an account of it in No. 17. p. 24.

24. Novum Testamentum Græcum, ad Codicem Vindobonensem Græcè expressum : Varietatem Lectionis addidit Franciscus Carolus Alter. 1786, 1787. 2 vols. 8vo.

This edition differs entirely from those of Mill, Wetstein, and Griesbach. "The text of this edition is neither the common text nor Griesbach. "The text of this edition is neither the common text nor a revision of it, but a mere copy from a single manuscript, and that not a very ancient one (the Codex Lambecii I.), in the imperial library at Vienna. The various readings, which are not arranged as in other editions, but printed in separate parcels as made by the collator, are likewise described from Greek manuscripts in the imperial library: and the whole collection was augmented by extracts from the Coptic, Sclavonian, and Latin versions, which are also printed in the same indigested manner as the Greek readings. Alter's edition therefore contains mere materials for future uses." (Bp. Marsh's Lectures, part ii. p. 32.) Where the editor has discovered manifest errata in the Vienna manuscript, he has recourse to the text of Stephens's edition of 1546.—See a more copious account of this edition in Michaelis, vol. ii. pp. 880—882, where it is said that Alter's edition is a work with which no one engaged in sacred criticism can dispense. engaged in sacred criticism can dispense.

25. Quatuor Evangelia, Græcè, cum Variantibus a textu Lectionibus Codd. Manuscriptorum Bibliothecæ Vaticanæ; Barberinæ, Laurentianæ, Vindobonensis, Escurialensis, Havniensis, Regiæ; quibus accedunt Lectiones Versionum Syrarum Veteris, Philoxenianæ, et Hierosolymitanæ, jussu et sumptibus regiis edidit Andreas BIRCH, Havniæ, 1788. folio et 4to.

^{*}Dr. Griesbach's first edition of the New Testament should, in strictness, be noticed here; but as it is superseded by his second and greatly improved edition, described in the next two pages, it is here designedly omitted. The edition of Koppe, being accompanied with a commentary, is noticed infra, among the commentators on the New Testament.

This splendid and valuable work, containing only the four Gospels, is the result of the united labours of Professors Birch, Adler, and Moldenhawer, who for several years travelled into Germany, Italy, France, and Spain, at the expense of the king of Denmark, in order to examine and collate the precious remains of sacred antiquity. Birch collated all the Greek manuscripts quoted, except those in the library of the Escurial, which were collated by Moldenhawer. The Syriac collations were made by Adler. A detailed account of these manuscripts which were collated; in the manuscripts which passed under his inspection were very numerous. In the Vatican, forty were collated; in the Barberini library, ten; in other Roman libraries, seventeen; in the libraries at Florence, and in other parts of Italy, thirtyeight; in the imperial library at Vienna, twelve; and in the royal library at Copenhagen, three. The text is from Robert Stephens's edition of 1550; but the great value of this splendid work, and in edition of 1550; but the great value of this splendid work, and in which it surpasses all former editions, consists, first, in the very which it surpasses all former editions, consists, prst, in the very complete extracts which are given from the celebrated Codex Vaticanus, described in pp. 224—226. of the first volume; and, secondly, in the extracts from the Versio Syra Hyerosolymitana, which is remarkable for its agreement with the Codex Bezæ, where it is meneratable for its agreement with the Codex Bezæ, where it is wholly unsupported by any other authority; a circumstance which shows the value and antiquity, not so much of the manuscripts themselves, as of the text which they contain.

In 1798, Professor Birch published, at Copenhagen, a collection of various readings to the Acts and Epistles, drawn from the same sources; intituled Variæ Lectiones ad textum Actorum Apostolorum, Epistolarum Catholicarum et Pauli, e Codd. Græcis MSS. Bibliothecæ Vaticanæ, Barberinæ, Augustinianorum Eremitarum Romæ, Borgianæ Velitris, Neapolitanæ Regiæ, Laurentinianæ, S. Marci Venetorum Vindobonensis Cæsareæ, et Hafniensis Regiæ, collectæ et editæ ab Andrea Birch, Theol. D. et Prof.; in 1800, he published Variæ Lectiones ad Apocalypsin: and in 1801, Variæ Lectionis ad Textum IV. Evangeliorum e Codd. MSS. iterum recognitæ et quamplurimis accessiombus auctæ: all in 8vo. to the four gospels. The completion of the magnificent edition of the Greek Testament, begun in 1788, was prevented by a calamitous fire at Copenhagen, begun in 1788, was prevented by a calamitous fire at Copenhagen, which consumed the royal printing office, together with the beau-tiful types and paper, which had been procured from Italy, for that purpose.

26. XIII. Epistolarum Pauli Codex Græcus, cum Versione Latinâ vetere, vulgo Ante-Hieronymianâ, olim Boernerianus, nunc Bibliotheca Electoralis Dresdensis, summâ fide et diligentia transcriptus et editus á C. F. MATTHÆI. Meissæ, 1791 (reprinted in 1818); 4to.

Of the Codex Boernerianus, of which manuscript this publication is a copy, an account has been given in the first volume of this work. The transcript is said to be executed with great accuracy, and is illustrated with two plates.

Codex Theodori Bezæ Cantabrigiensis, Evangelia et Acta Apostolorum complectens, quadratis literis, Græco-Latinus. Academia auspicante venerandæ has vetustatis reliquias, summâ qua fide potuit, adumbravit, expressit, edidit, codicis historiam præfixit, notasque adjecit, Thomas Kipling, S.T.P. Coll. Div. Joan. nuper socius. Cantabrigiæ, e Prelo Academico, impensis Academiæ. 1793. 2 vols. folio.

This fac-simile of the Codex Bezæ (which manuscript has already been described) is executed with the utmost typographical splen-dour. In a preface of twenty-eight pages, the learned editor dis-cusses the high antiquity of the manuscript; its nature and excellence; its migrations; the various collations of it which have been lence; its migrations; the various collations of it which have been made at different times; and concludes with a very brief description of the manuscript itself, and an Index Capitum. To this succeeds the text of the manuscript, which is divided into two parts or volumes; the first ending with page 412, and the second containing pages 413, to 828. Opposite to the modern supplement, which concludes the Gospels, on page 657., is the end of the Latin version of Saint John's third Epistle. Pages 829, to 854, contain Dr. Kipling's notes. The impression of this fac-simile was limited to two hardest and fifty conject and it usually sells for six or eight to two hundred and fifty copies; and it usually sells for six or eight to two nundred and may copies; and it usually sens for six or eight guineas, according to the condition and binding of the copies. Dr. Kipling's fac-simile was criticised, with great severity, in the Monthly Review (N. S.), vol. xii. pp. 241—246. And his preface was attacked, in no very courteous manner, in a pamphlet entitled 'Remarks on Dr. Kipling's Preface to Beza. Part the First. By Thomas Edwards, LL.D.' 8vo. 1793. No second part ever appeared.

Although the execution of this noble undertaking did not answer the expectations of some learned men, in consequence of which it was held in comparatively little estimation for many years, yet its value is now more justly appreciated. "A critic of the first celebrity, who would have gladly seized an opportunity of exposing Dr. Kipling, was unable to detect the smallest error in the text. Porson himself collated the printed copy with the original manuscript, and the only fault he could detect was in a single letter of the margin. This fact must surely place the value of Dr. Kipling's publication far beyond the reach of controversy." (Brit. Crit. vol.

28. Novum Testamentum Græcè Textum ad fidem Codicum Versionum et Patrum recensuit et Lectionis Varietatem adjecit

Notwithstanding the different opinions entertained by some learned men relative to the correctness of Dr. Griesbach's system of recensions or editions of manuscripts, all parties have united in commendation of the learning, diligence, and labour which he bestowed upon his arduous undertaking.

Dr. Griesbach commenced his critical labours, first, by publishing at Halle, in 1774, the historical books of the New Testament, under the following title: Libri Historici Novi Testamenti, Græce, Pars i. sistens Synopsin Evangeliorum Matthai, Marci, et Lucæ. Textum ad fidem Codd. Versionum et Patrum emendavit et lectionis varietatem adjeci Jo. Jac. Griesbach. (2d edit. Halæ, 1797, 3d edit. Halæ, 1809.) 8vo. pars ii. sistens Evangelium Johannis et Acta Apostolorum, Halæ, 1775, 8vo. This edition was published as a manual or text-book for a course of lectures which Professor Griesbach was at that time delivering at Jena, and in which he Griesbach was at that time delivering at Jena, and in which he explained the first three evangelists synoptically, that is to say, by uniting together the three narrations of the same event. The received text, which is adopted, is divided into one hundred and thirty-four sections, and is printed in three columns; and Griesbach indicated by various marks the alterations which he judged necessary to be made. The various readings, taken from the edition of Mill, Bengel, and Wetstein, were not chosen until they had undergone a very severe revision; but this edition also contained other lections, which the learned editor found in manuscripts preserved in the British Museum at London, and also in the Royal Library at Paris. In 1775, Dr. Griesbach published the Apostolical Episiles and the Apocalypse, in a similar manner; but as many persons had expressed themselves dissatisfied with his synoptical arrangehad expressed themselves dissatished with his synoptical arrangement of the historical books, he printed another edition of them in 1777, in the usual order. This volume forms the first part of his first edition, of which the Epistles and Revelation, printed in 1775, are considered as the second part. A few copies were struck off in 4to., which are both scarce and dear. This edition is of a very convenient and portable size, and was that principally used in the Universities of Germany. Dr. Hales prefers it to the second edition, because he thinks that Griesbach was at that time more scrubbles of inconstitutions are the text that he afterwards were discovered as the text that he afterwards were the text that he afterwards were pulous of innovating upon the text than he afterwards was.

The first volume of the second edition appeared in 1796, in large octavo, with the imprint of Londini et Halæ Saxonum in the titlepage; and the second with that of Halæ Saxonum et Londini, on page; and the second with that of Halæ Saxonum et Londini, on account of the expense of the paper of the fine copies having been munificently defrayed by his Grace the late Duke of Grafton, at that time Chancellor of the University of Cambridge. These are most beautiful books, and are now only procurable at a very high price, though, through his Grace's liberality, they were originally sold, we believe, at twelve or fourteen shillings per volume. Fifty copies are said to have been struck off on large paper in quarto. But the whole of these two volumes was printed at Jena, under Griesbach's own eye. In addition to the various readings exhibited in Griesbach's first edition, he collated all the Latin Versions subblished by Sakotics and Blanchini and corrected the mirrols. published by Sabatier and Blanchini; and corrected the mistake made by Mill, Bengel, and Wetstein, in their quotations from the oriental versions. He also inserted the principal readings collected by Matthæi, Birch, and Alter; together with extracts from the two Wolfenbuttel manuscripts collated by Knittel, and the readings of the Sahidic version, furnished by Woide, Georgi and Münter. Of the Armenian version a collation was made for him by M. Bredenkampf of Bremen: and the Sclavonic version was collated for him by Dobrowsky at Prague.

The first volume contains the four Gospels. To these are prefixed copious prolegomena, exhibiting a critical history of the printed text, a catalogue of all the manuscripts from which various readings are quoted, and an account of the method pursued by Griesbach in executing this second edition, together with the principal rules for judging of various readings. The text is printed in two columns, the numbers of the verses being placed in the margin, below which are the various lections.

The second volume contains the remaining books of the New The second volume contains the remaining books of the Ivew Testament, which is preceded by an introduction or preface, accounting for the delay of its appearance, and an account of the manuscripts consulted for that volume. At the end are forty pages, separately numbered, consisting of a Diatribe on the disputed clause relative to the three witnesses in 1 John v. 7, 8., and of Additional various readings to the Acts of the Apostles, and Saint Paul's Epistles, with two pages of corrections. Griesbach's second edition was reprinted at London in 1809, in two elegant 8vo. volumes; one by Mr. Collingwood of Oxford, and the other by Mr. R. Taylor; the text is printed in long lines, and the notes in columns, and Griesbach's addenda of various readings are inserted columns, and Griesbach's addenda of various readings are inserted in their proper places. A very few inaccuracies have been discovered in these insertions, which perhaps could hardly be avoided in a work of such minuteness. This edition, which consisted of one thousand copies, having been exhausted, a second London edition issued from the press of Messrs. R. & A. Taylor, in two volumes, 8vo. 1818. It is executed in the same handsome form as before, and possesses some advantages even over Griesbach's own record edition. before, and possesses some advantages even over Griesbach's own second edition. In the first place, the addenda of various lections above noticed have been newly collated, and inserted in their various places with great accuracy. Secondly, the reading of Acts xx. 28. in the Vaticam manuscript (which Griesbach could not give, in consequence of Professor Birch, who collated it, having lost or mislaid his memorandum of that particular text) is here printed from a transcript obtained by Mr. R. Taylor from the [keeper of the Vatican library. The reading of the clause in question, in the Codex Vaticanus is thus determined to be conformable to the lection of the Textus Receptus, viz. Την ΕΧΧΛησίαν ΤΟΟ Θίευ, the Church of God. And, lastly, as Griesbach, in his Leipsic edition of 1805, preferred some readings different from those adopted in that of Halle, 1796—1806, a Synoptical Table is given indicating such differences. Bishop Marsh has given a high character of the labours of Dr. Griesbach, in his Divinity Lectures, part ii. pp. 44, 45. See some strictures on them in Dr. Hales's Treatise on Faith in the Holy Trinity, vol. ii. pp. 61—64. In 1830, Mr. J. G. Palfrey, published in 1200 at Boston, in the state of Massachusetts, "The New Testament, in the common version, conformed to Griesbach's standard Greek Text." This is a successful endeavour to exhibit to the mere English reader the results of Griesbach's critical labours on the Greek Text of the New Testament. The text of our authorized English version is reprinted without note or comment; and the words are in no case altered, except where a change in the original Greek required it,—that is, in conformity to the in that of Halle, 1796-1806, a Synoptical Table is given indicating ment; and the words are in no case attered, except in the original Greek required it,—that is, in conformity to the emendations of the Greek text made by Dr. Griesbach. translations which the editor has introduced, to correspond with the amended Greek, he states that, "it has been his careful endea-your to imitate the style of the received version, and no one has been admitted without study and consideration." (Preface, p. viii.) From an examination of different parts of Mr. Palfrey's volume, the writer of these pages is enabled to state that he has not observed any departure from the principles by which Mr. P. professes to have been guided. have been guided.

To complete Griesbach's edition of the New Testament there should be added the following publications:

1. Curæ in Historiam Textus Græci Epistolarum Paulinarum.

Jene: 1774, 4to.

2. Symbolæ Criticæ, ad supplendas et corrigendas variarum N. T. Lectionum Collectiones. Accedit multorum N. T. Codicum Græcorum Descriptio et Examen. Halæ, 1785, 1793, 2 vols. small 8vo.

3. Commentarius Criticus in Textum Græcum Novi Testamenti. Particula prima, Jenæ, 1798. Particula secunda, Jenæ, 1811.

29. Novum Testamentum, Græcè. Ex Recensione Jo. Jac. Griesbachti, cum selecta Lectionis Varietate. Lipsiæ, 1803— 1807. 4 vols. imperial 4to. or folio.

This is a most sumptuous edition; the text is formed chiefly on that of Griesbach's second edition, and on that of Knapp, noticed below. The type is large and clear; the paper beautiful and glossy; at the foot of the page are some select various readings; and each volume is decorated with an exquisitely engraved frontispiece.

30. Novum Testamentum, Græcè. Ex Recensione Jo. Jac. Griesbachii, cum selecta Lectionum Varietate. Lipsiæ, 1805, 1825, 2 vols. 8vo.; Cambridge (New England), 1809, 2 vols. 8vo.; Glasguæ, 1817, 18mo.; Philadelphia, 1822, 12mo.; Londini, 1829, 18mo.

This edition contains the text, together with a selection of the principal various readings, and an extract from the Prolegomena of the second edition. It is very neatly printed, and forms a valuable manual for constant reference. This is the edition now chiefly used in the universities of Germany. The Anglo-American edition printed at Cambridge is handsomely executed; and the typography of the large paper copies is very beautiful. The reprints at Glasof the large paper copies is very beautiful. gow, Philadelphia, and London, are also neatly executed.

31. Novum Testamentum Græcè. Textum ad Fidem Codicum Versionum et Patrum recensuit, et Lectionis Varietatem adjecit D. Jo. Jac. Griesbach. Volumen I., Quatuor Evangelia complectens. Editionem tertiam emendatam et auctam curavit D. David Schulz. Berolini, 1827, 8vo.

A new edition of Dr. Griesbach's revision of the Greek text of the New Testament having become necessary, the task of editing it, with such additional various readings as have been discovered since the date of that distinguished critic's last labours, was confided to Dr. Schulz, who has executed it in the following manner: In the first place he procured and collated the various printed books of which Griesbach had made use in preparing his edition, as well as the various critical materials which the researches of learned men had discovered within the last thirty years; that is, from the date of the first volume of his second edition, in 1796. Dr. Schulz then proceeded to correct all the typographical errors he had detected; and he expunged a great number of stops, especially commas, which (he says) had been unnecessarily introduced by modern editors, and which in many instances only tended to obscure the sacred text. He has also deviated in very many places from the received mode of placing certain accents, and has made various improvements in the spelling of certain words.

These preliminary steps having been taken, Dr. Schulz collated anew the principal authorities cited by Griesbach, to which he could procure access, and noticed in what respects they differed from the notation of former editors. He then inserted readings from some new manuscripts and versions, which had hitherto been either little known or altogether neglected. More particularly, he collated anew.

Vol. II.—APP.

by Dr. Woide, the Cambridge Manuscript edited by Dr. Kipling, and the Latin Manuscript edited by Sabatier and Blanchini; to which he added a collation of the celebrated Codex Vaticanus from which he added a collation of the celebrated Codex Vaticanus from the papers of Dr. Bentley, printed at Oxford in 1799, in the Appendix to Dr. Woide's edition of the Alexandrian MS., which was unknown to Griesbach, and which in many instances differs from Dr. Birch's readings collated from the same manuscripts.

2. Dr. Barrett's splendid fac-simile of the Codex Rescriptus of part of Saint Matthew's Gospel published at Dublin in 1801, and here noted by the letter Z.

3. The entire collation of the Codex Cyprius, made and described by Dr. Augustine Scholz, and printed in pp. 80—90 of his Cura Critica in Historiam Textus IV. Evangeliorum, but very inaccurately, in consequence of Dr. S.'s absence on his biblico-critical travels, so that he could not personally edit his collation of the Codex Cyprius. (Scholzii Nov. Test. vol. i. p. xl.) The possessor of Dr. Schulz's edition of the Greek Testament must therefore place no dependence upon the readings of the Codex Cyprius, as exhibited by him. Further, he has selected from Dr. Scholz's Biblische-Kritische Reise (Biblico-critical Travels) the various read-Distribution of the four Gospels, written in the seventh or eighth of the four Gospels, which in the four Gospels, written in the seventh or eighth of the four Gospels, written in the seventh or eighth contrary, which the distribution of the four Gospels, written in the seventh or eighth contrary, which the editor had being all the seventh or eighth.

century, which the editor had himself transcribed in the year 1813.

5. The Codex Messanensis I of the fourteenth or fifteenth century, in quarto, inspected by Munter; of which an account is given in Dr. Birch's prolegomena ad Varr. Lectt. Evv. p. xciii. et seq. This MS. is numbered 237. by Dr. Schulz.

6. The Codex Syracusanus in the Landolini Library, which was also inspected by Dr. Munter, and which is described by Birch, p. xcvi. et seq. This is numbered 238.

p. xcvi. et seq. This is numbered 238.7. The Berlin Manuscript of the four Gospels, of the eleventh century, of which a description was published by Pappelbaum in 1823. It is numbered 239.

entury, of which a description was published by Pappelbaum in 1823. It is numbered 239.

8. The Codex Gronovianus 131., a manuscript of the four Gospels collated by Dermout in his Collectanea Critica in Novum Testamentum, part i. (Lugd. Bat. 1825): this is numbered 245.

9. The Codex Meermannianus, containing the four Gospels, Acts of the Apostles, the Epistles of James, Peter, I John, and a fragment of the epistle to the Romans, also collated by Dermout: this is numbered 246.

is numbered 246.

10. The readings of the Gothic Version, from Zahn's correct edition published in 1805, and the new readings contained in the fragments of this version first published by Mai in 1819, together with the fragments of the Sahidic Version published in the Appendix to Woide's fac-simile of the Codex Alexandrinus, and the fragments of the Basmurico-Coptic Version edited by Engelbreth in 1811.

Dr. Schulz has also enriched his edition with many valuable notes relative to the Syriac, Arabic, Persian, and Ethiopic versions, written by C. Benedict Michaelis, in his own copy of Kuster's edition of the New Testament, which is now deposited in the Library of the Orphan House at Halle. Further, Dr. S. had constantly open before him the more valuable critical editions of the New Testament, as well as other works which might afford him any assistance, including the editions of Stephens, Mill, Wetstein, Birch, Matthæi including the editions of Stephens, Mill, Wetstein, Birch, Matthæi including the editions of Stephens, Mill, Wetstein, Birch, Matthæi (two editions), and Knappe, and also Griesbach's edition printed at Leipsic in 1809, which differs from his own second edition in very many respects; but which exhibits that form and condition of the sacred text which in his latter years and maturest judgment Dr. Griesbach deemed to be true and correct. The readings peculiar to these later editions have been diligently noted.

The Symbole Critica and other works of Griesbach mentioned in the receding reduces receiver works of the symbole Critical and other works of Griesbach mentioned in the receding reduces receiver with the sitted publications.

in the preceding column, together with the critical publications of Gersdorf, Bode, Bowyer, Valckenaer, and Wassenberg, were in like manner constantly at hand; and in doubtful or more important cases, the best editions of the most valuable of the Fathers

The typographical execution of this edition is much more com-modious than that of Griesbach's second edition. There, the text was printed in two columns, and the notes were printed in a mass in long lines, with the notation of chapters and verses in the margin, which rendered it perplexing to the eye to compare the various gin, which rendered it perplexing to the eye to compare the various readings therein contained. In Dr. Schulz's third edition the text is printed in long lines, and the notes are very distinctly exhibited in two columns, each note forming a distinct paragraph. The convenience thus afforded in consulting the work is very great. Besides the editor's preface, and the corrected preface of Griesbach (which is enlarged in the catalogue of MSS.), the volume now published contains the four Gospels: at the end there are eighteen closely-printed pages of addenda, which ought to be carefully transcribed and inserted in their proper places before the book can be advantageously consulted: these addenda have principally been caused by the acquisition of many hundreds of various readings, obtained from M. Dermout's Collectanca Critica in Novum Testatamentum (of which an account will be found in a subsequent tamentum (of which an account will be found in a subsequent page), and which did not come into Dr. Schulz's possession until after the present volume was finished. Such additions are unavoidof procupe access, and noticed in what respects they differed able in a work embracing so many thousand minute references and the notation of former editors. He then inserted readings as some new manuscripts and versions, which had hitherto been less little known or altogether neglected. More particularly, he ten an every candid scholar will readily extend to such a laborious undertaking as the present, the liberal apology offered by Bishop Marsh for Wetstein:—"That mistakes and oversights are discoverable in the work, detracts not from its general merits. No work is without them; and least of all can consummate accuracy be expected where so many causes never ceased to operate." (Bp. Marsh's Divinity Lectures, part ii. p. 23.) This edition is not yet completed. The second volume is to contain the Acts, Epistles, and Apocalypse. The work is very neatly printed.

32. Evangelium secundum Matthæum, ex Codice Rescripto in Bibliotheca Collegii SSæ. Trinitatis juxta Dublin: Descriptum Opera et Studio Johannes Barrett, S. T. P. Soc. Sen. Trin. Coll. Dublin. Cui adjungitur Appendix Collationem Codicis Montfortiani complectens. Dublini: Ædibus Academicis excudebat R. E. Mercier, Academiæ Typographus, 1801. 4to.

The prolegomena fill fifty-two pages, and comprise, 1. A description of the manuscript itself, with an account of its age, and the mode of collating it adopted by the learned editor; and, 2. An elaborate dissertation reconciling the apparent discrepancies between the genealogies of Jesus Christ as recorded by the Evangelists Matthew and Luke. The fragments of the Codex Rescriptus are then exhibited in sixty-four fac-simile plates, and are also represented in as many pages in the common Greek small type. This truly elegant volume concludes with a collation of the Codex Montforuanus with Wetstein's edition of the New Testament, which occupies thirty-five pages. An account of this manuscript is given in Part I. of the first volume.

33. Novum Testamentum Græcè. Recognovit atque insigniores lectionum varietates et argumentorum notationes subjecit Geo. Christian. Knappius. Halæ, 1797, 8vo.; 2d edit. 1813, 2 vols. 8vo.; 3d edit. 1824, 2 vols. 8vo.; 4th edit. 1829, 2 vols. 8vo.; Londoni, 1824, 2 vols. in one, 8vo.

In this edition of the New Testament, which received the warm approbation of Griesbach in his preface to the splendid edition above noticed, Dr. Knappe has availed himself of Griesbach's labours; and has admitted into the text not only those readings which the latter considered to be of undoubted authority, but likewise some others which Dr. K. himself regarded as such, but without distinguishing either of them. Such words, also, as it might on the same grounds be thought right to exclude from the text, as not originally belonging to it, are here enclosed in brackets, partly of the common kind, and partly formed on purpose for this edition. The most probable readings are marked with an asterisk: to all of them the word alii is prefixed, in order to distinguish them from the rest of these lections, which in reality are those in which the exceptical student is chiefly interested. Great attention is paid to typographical and grammatical accuracy, to the accents, and to the punctuation, which differ in this edition from those of Leusden, or Gerard von Maestricht, in more than three hundred places. Very useful summaries are likewise added under the text. This valuable edition is not common in England. The second impression, published in two volumes, in 1813, is very neatly printed, and is corrected throughout. In editing it, Dr. K. has availed himself of Griesbach's second volume, which was not published when his first edition appeared. The third edition is a neat reprint of the second, of which the London edition is also a reprint. The fourth edition is revised with great care, and the additions at the end are arranged in a more convenient form.

34. 'H KAINH AJAOHKH. The New Testament in Greek, according to the Text of Mill and Stephens, and the Arrangement of Mr. Reeves's Bible. [Edited by John Reeves, Esq.] London, 1803. 8vo.

This edition is printed with singular neatness.

35. Novum Testamentum Græcè, ex Recensione Griesbachii, nova Latina versione illustratum, indice brevi præcipuæ lectionum et interpretationum diversitatis instructum, edidit Henricus Augustus Schott. Lipsiæ, 1805; editio secunda, 1811; editio tertia, 1825. 8vo.

The text is formed after that of Griesbach; under it are printed the most important various readings, together with very concise notes. The Latin version in the third edition professes to be so much corrected, as to be in effect a new translation: many of its interpretations and notes, however, equally with those in the second edition, are in the worst style of German neologism.

36. Novum Testamentum Græcè. Lectiones Variantes, Griesbachii judicio, iis quas textus receptus exhibet anteponendas vel æquiparandas, adjecit Josephus Whitze, S. T. P. Linguarum Heb. et Arab. in Academia Oxoniensi Professor. Oxonii, e Typographeo Clarendoniano, 1808. 2 vols. crown 8vo.

This is a very neat and accurate edition. The Textus Receptus is adopted; and Professor White has contrived to exhibit in a very intelligible form—1. Those readings which in Griesbach's opinion ought, either certainly or probably, to be removed from the received text; 2. Those various readings which the same editor judged either preferable or equal to those of the received text; and, 3. Those additions which, on the authority of manuscripts, Griesbach considers as fit to be admitted into the text. "An intermediate advantage to be derived from an edition thus marked, is pointed out by the learned editor at the conclusion of his short preface; viz. that it may thus be seen at once by every one, how very little, after all the labours of learned men, and the collation of so many manuscripts and versions, is liable to just objection in the received text." British Critic, vol. xxxiv. (O. S.) p. 386.)

- 37. Novum Testamentum Greeum; juxta exemplar Wetstenii, Glasguæ, et J. J. Griesbachii, Halæ impressum: accedunt Prolegomena in Evangelia, in Acta, et in Epistolas Apostolorum. Accurante Gulielmo Whitfield Dakins. Editio Stereotypa, Londini, 1808, royal 8vo. Numerous subsequent editions are in 12mo.
- 38. Novum Testamentum Græcum et Latinum, secundùm curam Leusdenii et Griesbachii, editum ab A. H. Altton. Lugduni Batavorum, 1809. 18mo.

A neat impression, into the text of which the editor has introduced most of Griesbach's emendations.

39. Testamentum Novum Græcè, ad fidem Recensionis Schoettgenianæ; addita ex Griesbachii apparatu Lectionis varietate præcipuæ. Upsalæ, 1820. 8vo.

A reprint of Schoettgenius's text, which has been noticed in p. 12. of this Appendix, with the addition of select various readings from Griesbach.

40. Novum Testamentum Græcè. Ad fidem optimorum librorum recensuit A. H. TITTMANNUS. Lipsiæ, 1820, 18mo. Lipsiæ, 1824, 8vo.

The text of the edition in 18mo. is a corrected one; that is, Professor Tittman has inserted in it such various readings as are in his judgment preferable to those commonly received, and which have been approved by the most eminent critics; and he has printed an index of the altered passages at the end of the volume. Its portability, in addition to its intrinsic excellence, is no mean recommendation of it to students of the New Testament; the Greek characters, though small, being very distinctly and neatly stereotyped. The 8vo. edition of the same text is beautifully stereotyped. There are copies of both editions on fine paper.

41. 'H KAINH ∆IA⊖HKH. Novum Testamentum Manuale. Glasguæ, ex Prelo Academico: impensis Rivingtons et Cochran, Londini, 1821. 32mo.

This edition contains the Greek text only: it follows the text of Aitton, except in a few instances, in which the received readings are supported by the best authorities, and consequently are most to be preferred. This edition is beautifully printed on the finest bluetinted writing paper: it was read SIX TIMES, with the utmost care, in passing through the press, and will be found to be unusually accurate. No contractions are used.

42. Novum Testamentum Græco-Latinum. Vulgata Interpretatione Latina Editionis Clementis VIII. Græco Textui ad Editionem Complutensem diligentissime expresso e regione opposita. Studio et curâ Petri Aloysii Gratz. Tubingæ, 1821, 1828. 2 tomis, 8vo.

An edition which is not of very common occurrence in this country. The first part or volume contains the four Gospels; the second, the remaining Books of the New Testament. The Greek text is a reprint of that in the Complutensian Polyglott, with the exception of the contractions, and the correction of some orthographic errors: opposite to this is the Latin Vulgate version, according to the Clementine Recension. At the foot of each page are exhibited various readings, from Robert Stephens's third edition, printed in 1550; from Matthee's critical edition, and from Griesbach's last edition. To the labours of these editors Professor Gratz pays a brief but high tribute of commendation. In order to ensure correctness, the proof sheets were repeatedly read by the editor and his friends. After the editor's preface, follow the preface of Jerome on the four Gospels, addressed to Damasus, bishop of Rome, and Pope Clement VIIL's preface to his edition of the Latin Vulgate Bible: together with a synopsis of the four Gospels, and parallel passages. The fine paper copies are very beautiful books: there is one in the library of the Brittsh And Foreign Bible Society, from an examination of which the preceding description is drawn up. The frequent appeals made to the Complutensian text, and the extreme rarity of that Polyglott, concur to render this edition by Professor Gratz an acceptable present to the biblical critic.

43. Novum Testamentum. Textum Græcum Griesbachii et Knappii denuò recognovit, Delectu Varietatum Lectionis Testimoniis confirmatarum, Adnotatione cùm Criticâ tùm Exegeticâ et Indicibus Historico et Geographico, Vocum Græcarum Infrequentiorum et Subsidiorum Criticorum Exegeticorumque, instruxit Joannes Severinus VATER, Theol. Doct. et Prof. Hal. Halis Saxonum, 1824. 8vo.

"Of the various critical editions of the New Testament, which of late years have been given to the public, this is not only one of the neatest, but one of the cheapest; it is, in every respect, a practical edition, equally adapted to the lecture-room and to the private study. It will not, indeed, render unnecessary the critical labours of Wetstein, Griesbach, or Matthæi, but it will be a valuable substitute for them to those students who have not the time or the means of purchasing their costly but valuable labours. The following is the plan on which Professor Vater has formed his edition:

"The text of each book or epistle is exhibited in continuous paragraphs, with the numbers of the chapters and verses in the margin, for the convenience of reference; and in the Gospel the parallel passages are also referred to in the margin-punctuation of the text is frequently improved. Below the are exhibited, in long lines, the principal various readings, divested of Griesbach's stenographic marks, with the authorities on which they rest; and, beneath them, in two columns, are brief but satisfactory exceptical notes on passages which are really difficult. Four indexes are subjoined, viz. I. Historical and Geographical, of the Names of Persons and Places, occurring in the New Testament; 2. Of the more difficult and uncommon Greek words; 3. Of the Manuscripts and other critical aids for determining various readings; and, 4. Of Exegetical or Expository Aids, comprising a list of the best commentaries on particular books, chapters, or verses. . . . The book is printed on two papers—one inferior, which is bad enough; the other on a better sort of paper, which is both easy to read and pleasant to the eye. (Universal Review, vol. ii. pp. 683, 684.)

44. 'Η KAINH ΔΙΑΘΗΚΗ. Novum Testamentum Græcè. Textui ante Griesbachium vulgo recepto, additur Lectionum Variantium earum precipue, que à Griesbachio potiores censen-

tur, Delectus. Basileæ, 1825. 2 tomis, 8vo.

This very neat edition may occasionally be met with. The text is reprinted from an edition of the Greek Testament, edited at is reprinted from an edition of the Greek Testament, edited at Basle by Andrew Birr, in 1749; who added a copious selection of Parallel Passages. The preface of the present edition is signed with the initial letters J. H. Whoever the editor may be, he has in many passages improved the punctuation, as well as the selection of parallel texts. Those various readings of Griesbach's which affect the sense are retained; and the editor has sometimes successfully vindicated the ordinary Greek text against the proposed alterations of that critic. The Epistle of Jude is placed immediately after St. Peter's second Epistle, on account of the similarity of its subject. The passages cited from the Old Testament are exhibited in a very distinct form.

45 H KANNE ALAGHERH Novum Testamentum curante

45. Ή KAINH ΔΙΑΘΗΚΗ. Novum Testamentum, curante Jo. Fr. Boissonade. Parisiis, 1824. 2 tomis, 18mo.

In this beautifully and accurately printed edition of the Greek Text, Professor Boissonade states that he has followed the best copies, particularly that of Dr. Griesbach; yet not so servilely, but that he has availed himself of the judgment of other critics, and especially of the Vulgate Latin Version. The value of this edition, considered as a critical one, is much diminished by the total tion, considered as a critical one, is much diminished by the total omission of any notes, to apprize the reader when the editor has departed from the received text, as also on what authority he has adopted particular readings. To specify two or three instances:—On the authority of Griesbach, he omits the doxology of the Lord's Prayer in Matt. vi. 13. On the same authority, in Acts xx. 28. he reads the instances to kepton, Church of the Lord, instead of two Group, of God, notwithstanding this last reading is supported by the Vatican manuscript. So also, in 1 Tim. iii. 16. he reads $apaneps0h, which (mystery) was manifested, instead of $asos, God. But the much disputed clause in 1 John v. 7. is printed as in the Complutensian and other editions, without any intimation that its genuineness has been denied; although that clause is omitted in Griesbach's edition, and is now generally considered to be spurious.

46. Novum Testamentum Græcè et Latinè, expressum ad

46. Novum Testamentum Græcè et Latinè, expressum ad binas editiones a Leone X. approbatas, Complutensem silicet et Erasmi Roterodami. Additæ sunt aliarum novissimarum Recensionum Variantes Lectiones Græcæ, unà cum Vulgatâ Latinâ Editionis Clementinæ, ad exemplar ex Typographiâ Apostolicâ Vaticanâ Romæ, 1592, correctis corrigendis ex Indicibus Correctoriis ibidem editis, necnon cum additis Lectionibus ex Vaticanis Editionibus Latinis, de annis 1590, 1592, 1593, 1598, Variantibus; adpositisque locis parallelis. Studio et curâ E. Leandri Van Ess. Tubingæ, 1827. 8vo.

A very neatly printed edition of the Greek Testament. The revised texts, consulted for it by Dr. Van Ess, are the original Complutensian, the five editions of Erasmus, Robert Stephens's edition, printed at Paris in 1546, with the preface Omirificam, &c. Matthæi's second edition, published at Wittemberg in 1803—1807, and Griesbach's manual edition, published at Leipzig in 1805, with select various readings. The following is the plan followed by Dr. Van Ess in the Greek text of his edition: Griesbach's manual edition, published as Leipzig.

select various readings. The following is the plan followed by Dr. Van Ess in the Greek text of his edition:

1. The text adopted is fundamentally that of Erasmus's fifth edition; and is preferably retained in all those places where the revisions above enumerated vary from that edition.

2. Where the text of the Complutensian and Erasmus's fifth edition.

formly adopted.

3. Where these two texts differ, that reading of one or other of them is retained, which is supported by the authority of Griesof the Latin Vulgate printed at the same press in the years 1590 1592, 1593, and 1598.

4. All the readings of the five recensions above enumerated, which vary from the text of Van Ess's edition, are placed in notes at the foot of the page: and where no various reading is specified, the texts of the several editions uniformly agree.

The ordinary divisions of chapters and verses are retained; but there are no summaries or tables of contents.

47. 'Η KAINH ΔΙΑΘΗΚΗ. Novum Testamentum. Accedunt Parallela S. Scripture Loca, necnon Vetus Capitulorum Notatio, et Canones Eusebii. Oxonii, e Typographeo Clarendoniano, 1828; Editio altera, 1830; royal 18mo.

For this very commodious edition of the Greek Testament, junior biblical students (for whose use it is especially designed) are indebted to the Right Rev. Charles Lloyd, D.D. Bishop of Oxford.

The plan of it is as follows

The text, which is that of Dr. Mill, is printed in paragraphs, with the division into sections, and the punctuation of John Albert or chapters found in ancient manuscripts, of which an account is given in Part I. p. 214. of the first volume. These are printed from Kuster's edition of the Greek Testament, for the convenience of Kuster's edition of the Greek Testament, for the convenience of those who may wish to consult manuscripts for particular passages of the New Testament. In the other margin there are printed select but highly valuable Parallel References to Scripture, according to the edition of Courcelles (or Curcelleus). The Epistle to ing to the edition of Courcelles (or Curcellæus). The Epistle to Carpianus and the canons of Eusebius (of which an account is given in the first volume) are prefixed, for the purpose of enabling any one who may be so disposed, to compile for himself a harmony of the four Gospels

48. 'Η ΚΑΙΝΗ ΔΙΑΘΗΚΗ. Novum Testamentum Græcè, secundum editiones probatissimas; expressum cum Ariæ Montani Interpretatione Latina. Curante Carolo Christiano LEUTSCH. Lipsiæ, 1828. 8vo.

A neat reprint of the Greek text after that of Dr. Knappe's critical editions, with the Latin version of Arias Montanus, which from its general fidelity is held in high estimation by Protestants and Romanists. The Greek text and the Latin translation are printed in columns on each page: the ordinary divisions of chapters and verses are retained.

49. Novum Testamentum Græcè. Londini, impensis G. Pickering, 1828, 48mo.

This is the first Greek Testament printed in England with diamond type; and it is also the smallest in point of size which has ever been printed. The matrices, from which the types were cast, were cut by Mr. Caslon. The text is stated to be copied exactly from the Elzevir edition of 1624; and, in order to ensure the greater correctness, every proof sheet was critically examined EIGHT times. There is a frontispiece, engraved on steel, representing the Last Supper, after the celebrated picture by Leonardo de Vivoi:

50. 'H KAINH ΔΙΑΘΗΚΗ. Novum Testamentum ad Exemplar Millianum, cum emendationibus et lectionibus Griesbachii, præcipuis vocibus ellipticis, thematibus omnium vocum difficiliorum, atque locis scripturæ parallelis: studio et labore Gulielmi GREENFIELD. Londini, 1829. 48mo.

The Greek text of this beautifully executed pocket-edition of the New Testament is printed after Dr. Mill's edition (No. 10. p. 000 supra) in columns, and with the usual divisions of chapters and verses. The critical emendations and varous readings include the principal of these in Griesbach's edition of 1805 (No. 30. p. 11. supra). These emendations and readings, together with the themes of the more difficult words, and a selection of really parallel pas-sages, are all clearly exhibited in a column in the centre of each are all clearly exhibited in a countin in the Such of Griesbach's various readings as could not be inpage. Such of Griesbach's various readings as could not be inserted in the central column are printed in an appendix. Two neat miniature maps,—one of Palestine, and another illustrating St. Paul's Travels, increase the utility of this very portable manual edition of the Greek Testament; as a companion to which, Mr. Greenfield published, in 1829, "The Polymicrian Lexicon to the New Testament," also in 48mo. "Elegance and accuracy of typographical execution, and the extreme smallness of the volume, which readers it a surviving real but the least of in recommend. which renders it a curiosity, are but the least of its recommenda-tions. The work does the highest honour to the editor's fidelity, competent learning, and sound judgment." (Eclectic Review, February, 1832. vol. vii. p. 160.)

51. 'H KAINH AIAOHKH, sive Novum Testamentum Græcè; cui subjicitur Selectio copiosa Lectionum Variantium Emendationumque Griesbachii præcipuarum, necnon quamplurimæ Voces Ellipticæ; accurante Gulielmo Duncan. Edinburgi, 1830. 12mo.

A new and greatly improved edition of the Greek Testament, first published at Edinburgh in 1811 by Mr. Adam Dickinson, with a small selection of various readings, for the use of the senior classes in schools. It was stereotyped in 1817, and was subsequently often reprinted. The text is, for the most part, that of Dr. Mill: at the foot of the pages are printed the principal elliptical words, collected from the publications of Bos, Leisner, and other conjunct critics. In the text ell the words and passages absolutely The Latin text of the Vulgate is printed opposite to the Greek, on each page, according to the edition printed at the Vatican press, at Rome, in 1592, with the requisite corrections from the Roman "Index Correctorius." References to parallel passages are added the mitthin brackets. The editor (Mr. Duncan) has annexed a coin the notes, together with the various readings from the editions Sanctis Patribus et Scriptoribus Ecclesiasticis quibuscunque, vel primo vel iterum collatis, Copias Criticas addidit, atque Condi-tionem horum Testium Criticorum, Historiamque Textûs Novi Testamenti in Prolegomenis fusius exposuit, præterea Synaxaria Codicum K. M. 262. 274. typis exscribenda curavit Dr. J. Martinus Augustinus Scholz. Vol. I. Lipsiæ, 1830. 4to. tinus Augustinus Scholz.

The preceding copious title-page of this beautifully executed work will convey to the reader an idea of the plan adopted by the learned editor, Dr. J. Martin Scholz, who devoted twelve years of learned editor, Dr. J. Martin Scholz, who devoted twelve years of incessant labour to his arduous undertaking. In order to obtain materials, he visited in person the libraries of Paris, Vienna, Landshut, Munich, Berlin, Trèves, London, Geneva, Turin, Florence, Venice, Parma, Rome, Naples, of the Greek monasteries at Jerusalem, of St. Saba, and the Isle of Patmos; and collated, either wholly or in part, all the manuscripts of the New Testament which are to be found in the libraries just enumerated (in Greek, Latin Arbita & Comparing thom with the tayt of Griesbach. Latin, Arabic, &c.), comparing them with the text of Griesbach. He also professes to have examined anew most of the ancient versions, as well as the passages cited from the New Testament in the writings of the Fathers of the Christian Church, and of succeeding ecclesiastical authors, and in the acts of councils. In addition to all which sources, he has availed himself of the printed Collations of preceding critical editors of the Greek Testament.

The Prolegomena, which fill one hundred and seventy-two pages, contain a critical history of the text of the New Testament. together with a copious history and critical estimate of all the sources of various readings consulted by Professor Scholz, distinguishing the MSS collated by others from those which he had himself collated for the first time, either wholly or in part. These MSS form a total of six hundred and seventy-four; of which num-ber three hundred and forty-three were collated by his predecessors in this department of sacred literature,—286 of various portions of the New Testament, and 57 evangelisteria or lesson-books extracted from the four Gospels; and three hundred and thirty-one were for the first time collated by Dr. Scholz himself, viz. 210 MSS. of parts of the New Testament, and 121 evangelisteria. Of the theory of recensions adopted by Dr. S. in his Prolegomena and in his Biblico-Critical Travels, and of the two classes of instruments or documents to which he refers all the MSS. of the New Testament, an account is given in Part I. pp. 209—212. of the first

To the Prolegomena succeed the four Gospels, which fill four hundred and fifty-two pages, separately numbered. The text, which is generally that called the textus receptus, is judiciously printed in paragraphs, with the numbers of chapters and verses placed in the side margin: not a word is altered without the support of the most decisive critical testimonies. In the inner margin below the text are placed the families of readings, as Dr. Scholz below the text are placed the jamutes of readings, as Dr. School, terms them; that is, the general readings found in the two great classes of manuscripts, viz. the Constantinopolitan, and the Alexandrine: and beneath these, in the outer margin, are given the more detailed specifications, which are very clearly and commodiously disposed of in two columns, and in the following order, viz. 1. Manuscripts of the greatest antiquity, which are written in uncial or capital letters: these are designated by the letters of the alphabet, from A to Z, and by the two Greek letters r and Δ ; 2. Manuscripts written in cursive or ordinary Greek characters; Evangelisteria. The references to these two classes of manuscripts are by Arabic figures;
 The references to these two classes of manuscripts are by Arabic figures;
 The redadings found in the several ancient versions;
 The quotations found in the writings of the fathers and other ecclesiastical authors and in the acts of

Dr. Scholz is proceeding in the second volume of his most valuable work with all the despatch practicable, considering the minute and various objects which necessarily demand his attention. It is expected to appear in the course of the present year, or early in

53. Novum Testamentum Græcè, novâ Versione Latinâ donatum, ad optimas recensiones expressum, selectis Variis Lectionibus perpetuâque singularum librorum argumento instructum (additâ III. Pauli ad Corinthios Epistola), edidit M. Fred. Aug. Adolph NAEBE. Lipsiæ, 1831. 8vo.

In the arrangement of the Greek text of this edition, Dr. Naebe "In the arrangement of the Green and Scholz, and availing himself of not a few of the emendations proposed by Knappe, Schott, Vater, and Tittmann. He has also carefully corrected the punctuation throughout. In framing his Latin version, the editor acknowledges his obligations to the critical and exegetical commentaries and treatises of Grotius, Wetstein, Noesselt, Keil, Rosenmentaries and treatises of Grotius, Weistein, Noesseit, Keil, Rosen-müller, Kuinöel, Paulus, Pott, Borger, Heinrichs, Tittmann, Tho-luck, Winer, Bretschneider, Fritsche, and many others, and espe-cially to the Latin versions of Castellio, Reichard, Schott, Thale-mann, and Jaspis. His version," [therefore, is an eclectic one: it] is accurate, conspicuous, and concise; and though it pretends ings and emendations, which appears to have been made with great care. The typographical execution is very neat.

52. Novum Testamentum Græcè. Textum ad fidem Testium Criticorum recensuit, Lectionum Familias subject, e Græcis Codicibus Manuscriptis qui in Europæ et Asiæ Bibliothecis Fritsche, sometimes Manuscriptis qui in Europæ et Asiæ Bibliothecis Fritsche, sometimes Hug, according as one or other of these criticis appear to have treated the several subjects with the greatest corpus. The third equility of the Cognitiving reliable is accuracy. The third epistle of Paul to the Corinthians, which is here given in La Croze's Latin version from the Armenian trans-lation of the New Testament, is confessedly apocryphal, and of no use whatever to the biblical student." (Foreign Quarterly Review, vol. viii. p. 497.)

> 54. Novum Testamentum Græcè, ex recensione Caroli Lach MANNI. Berolini, 1831. 12mo.

The editor of this impression of the Greek Testament states that he has framed it upon the principles developed in his work enti-tled "Theologische Studien und Kritiken" (pp. 817—845.), pub-lished in 1830, which the writer of these pages has never seen. It may therefore suffice to state, that M. Lachmann professes that It may therefore suffice to state, that M. Lachmann protesses that he has in no instance followed his own judgment, but that he has restored the text as it was received by the Oriental Church in the first four centuries; and further, that wherever he could, he has given a preference to those readings which could be supported by the consent of the Italians and Africans. Wherever there was a discrepancy between all the authorities, he has indicated it partly in brackets, and partly in the margin. The Apostolic Epistles are in brackets, and partly in the margin. The Apostolic Epistles are given in a different order from that which is found in every other edition. After the Acts come the seven Catholic Epistles: these are followed by those written by St. Paul, in the following order, viz. Romans, 1 and 2 Corinthians, Galatians, Ephesians, Philippians, viz. Romans, I and 2 Corinthians, Galatians, Epilesians, Frinippians, Colossians, I and 2 Thessalonians, Hebrews, I and 2 Timothy, Titus; the Apocalypse terminates the volume. At the end there are forty-three pages containing the readings of the Textus Receptus, which Lachmann had rejected from the text. The type of this edition is very neat, but the paper is of very inferior quality.

55. 'H KAINH AIAOHKH. The New Testament; with English Notes, Critical, Philological, and Explanatory. [By the Rev. E. Valpy, B.D.] A New Edition, London, 1831. 3

The former edition of this Greek Testament appeared in 1826, and in this new edition the work is greatly improved. The text is that of the editio princeps, at the foot of which are exhibited the principal various readings; and below these are placed copious principal various readings; and below these are placed copious critical, philological, and explanatory notes, in English, selected with great care from Raphelius, Kypke, Palairet, Schleusner, Rosenmuller, and other distinguished foreign critics. Ample use has been made of the late much-respected Bishop Middleton's admirable Treatise on the doctrine of the Greek Article, an abstract of which is prefixed to the first volume. Verbal criticism is also introduced, together with observations on the Greek Idiom from Vigerus, on the Ellipses from Bos, and on the Particles from Hoogeveen. As the notes on the Gospel of St. Matthew are full and copious, there was less necessity in many instances, especially in the parallel passages, for the same extended mode of illustra-tion; but a frequent reference is made from one to the other; and thus the student is induced to consult and to compare the whole body of annotations, and is further enabled to fix more durably on his mind the result and fruit of his industry and research. well-executed Maps of Judea, adapted to the Gospel History and of the Travels of the Apostles (both copied by permission from the Maps illustrating this work), with Greek and English Indexes, contribute to enhance the utility of this edition.

56. H KAINH ΔΙΑΘΗΚΗ. The Greek Testament; with English Notes. By the Rev. Edward Burron, D.D. Oxford, 1831, 2 vols, 8vo.

The text of Bishop Lloyd's editions, printed at Oxford, in 1828 and 1830, is adopted in this edition of the Greek Testament. The divisions of chapters and verses are thrown into the margin, in which Dr. Burton has printed the parallel references of Curcellaus, which Dr. Durion has printed the parallel references of Curcellaus, after a very careful revision of them, which enabled him to detect numerous errors. These corrected marginal references are very valuable, not only as pointing out the parallel passages in the four Gospels, but also as frequently saving the insertion of a note, where a quotation is made from the Old Testament, which does not require any further illustration. Below the text are placed the notes, which (the editor states) "are calculated for those persons who are not reading the Greek Testament for the first time, but who as yet have little acquaintance with the labours of critical commenta-tors." (Pref. p. iii.) They are partly explanatory and philological, and partly critical on the various readings occurring in the New and partly critical on the various readings occurring in the New Testament. In preparing these critical notes, Dr. Burton examined for himself, with no small labour and attention, the copious materials which had been collected by Griesbach; and, after weighing the evidence adduced by him in favour of any particular reading, Dr. B. noted down all the variations from the received text, which seem to have a majority of documents in their favour. The most remarkable variations are simply stated in the notes: but, in hundreds of instances, where the difference consists in the collection of words, in the addition or the omission of the article, the substitution of δ_4 for κ_{π^4} , &c. &c. Dr. Burton has not thought it necessary to mention the variation. In all the cases which he has noticed, the various reading is probably that which ought to be admitted into the text. The dates, which he has followed in the Acts of the Apostles and in arranging the apostolic epistles, differ from those commonly adopted. Dr. B. has stated his reasons for preferring this chronological scheme in "An Attempt to ascertain the Chronology of the Acts of the Apostles and of St. Pant's Epistles" (London, 1830, 8vo.), to which the reader is necessarily referred. Two very useful indexes terminate this edition of the Greek Testament, viz. 1. A list of the most remarkable Greek terms explained in the notes; and, 2. An index of facts and proper names. The typographical execution of this edition is singularly beautiful and

57. 'H KAINH ΔΙΑΘΗΚΗ. The Greek Testament; with English notes, critical, philological, and exegetical. By the Rev. S. T. Bloomfield, D.D. Cambridge and London, 1832. 2 vols. 8vo.

Of this Edition the Text is a new Recension, formed most carefully on the basis of that of Stephens, adopted by Dr. Mill, from which there is no deviation but on the fullest evidence; such alterations only having been introduced, as rest on the united authority of MSS. Versions, Fathers, and early printed editions; and which have been adopted in one or more of the critical editions of Wetstein, Griesbach, Matthæi, and Scholz. Nothing has been omitted which is found in the Stephanic text; such words only as are, by the almost universal consent of editors and critics, regarded as interpolations being placed within distinctly marked brackets, more or less inclusive according to the degree of suspicion attached to the words. Nothing has been inserted but on the same weighty authority; and even those words are indicated as interpolations by being weighted in amplifus charges by readings (which are comparatively few, and generally found in the invaluable Editio Princeps) have asterisks prefixed, the common readings being indicated in the Notes. And such readings as though left untouched, are generally thought to need alteration, have an obelisk prefixed. In all cases the reasons for any deviation from the Stephanic, or common text, are given. reader possesses the advantage of having both texts placed before him, the common text and the corrected text, constituting, it is conceived, the true Greek Vulgate. The punctuation has been most carefully corrected and adjusted, after a comparison of all the best editions. To each verse is subjoined, in the outer margin, a select body of parallel references from Curcellaus's edition of the New Testament, the inner margin being appropriated to numbers of chapters and verses. The citations from the Old 7 tament, and the words of any speaker, are clearly indicated by a peculiar mode of printing. Under the text are copious notes (mostly original, but partially derived, with acknowledgment, from the best commentators ancient and modern) comprising whatever respects the interpretation, or tends to establish the grammatical sense. In these the editor has endeavoured to unite comprehenseiveness with brevity, so as to form one consistent body, in epitome, of exegetical and philological annotation, of which the matter (very carefully digested) is, in its general character, elementary, and introductory to the larger Commentaries, especially Dr. Bloomfield's Recensio Synoptica Novi Testamenti, noticed in a subsequent page of this appendix: and it further systematically indicates the interpretation of controverted passages; being especially adapted to the use of academical students, and candidates for the sacred office, though intended also as a manual edition for theological readers in general.

readers in general.

Of the three preceding editions of the New Testament, the following just and comparative characters have been given in an ably-conducted journal. "Dr. Bloomfield's edition of the Greek Testament is the most valuable that has yet been issued from the press in this country. We say this without disparaging the merit and usefulness of the labours of his predecessors. Dr. Burton's edition not only strongly recommends itself by the singular beauty of the typography, but the weight of his critical authority in respect to the varied lections which he has noted, impart to it a substantial and independent value; although, in other respects, we must confess the notes have greatly disappointed us. Mr. Valpy's edition, in point of general utility, may compete with Dr. Bloomfield's."  * * * * * It is rather an invidious task to adjudicate the comparative claims of competitors; but we may perhaps recomcomparative claims of competitors; but we may perhaps recom-mend Mr. Valpy's and Dr. Burton's editions as the more suitable for those who have as yet little acquaintance with critical commentators, for the upper classes of schools, and for persons wishing to familiarize themselves with the sacred oracles in their genuine form, without embarrassing their minds with the details of criticism. Dr. Bloomfield's edition, though less suitable for the novice, will be invaluable to all whose profession requires, or whose leisure admits of a more critical study of the Sacred Writings." (Eclectic Review, December, 1832, pp. 473, 474, 492.)

58. Novum Testamentum Græcè ad optimorum librorum fidem recensuit Antonius Jaumann. Cum selectà Lectionum Varietate. Monachii. 1832. 8vo.

This is professedly a manual edition for the use of such students in the Universities of Germany as are unable to procure the larger and more expensive critical editions of the New Testament. The text is for the most part taken from Tittmann's edition (No. 40. p. 16. suppra.) Various readings are selected from the editions of Griesbach, Matthæi, Gratz and Knappe. As might be expected from a Romanist, the editor has been guided very materially by the authority of the Latin Vulgate version. A tabular harmony of the four Gospels is prefixed: and the volume, which is very neatly printed, concludes with an index of the Epistles and Gospels for every Sunday and festival of the Romish Church.

59, Novum Testamentum Græcè et Latinè. Ex Recensione Knappiana, adjectis variis et Griesbachii et Lachmanni lectionibus, edidit Adolphus Goeschen. Lipsiæ, 1832. 8vo.

This also is a manual edition for the use of German biblical students. The text is taken from Knappe's edition; and below are the principal various readings adopted by Griesbach and Lachmann. The Latin version, which is placed below them, is close mann. bers of the verses are given in the margin; and to each chapter is prefixed a copious summary of its contents. A chronological table terminates this convenient, cheap, and beautifully printed edition of the New Testament.

SECTION IV.

POLYGLOTT BIBLES, OR EDITIONS OF THE OLD AND NEW TES-TAMENTS WITH VERSIONS IN SEVERAL LANGUAGES.

THE honour of having projected the first plan of a Polyglott Bible is due to the illustrious printer, ALDUS MANUTIUS the elder; but of this projected work only one page was printed: it contains the first fifteen verses of the first chapter of the Book of Genesis in collateral columns of Hebrew, Greek, and Latin. The typographical execution is admirable: M. Renouard has given a fac-simile of it in the second edition of his excellent work on the productions of the Aldine Press.1 A copy of this specimen page (perhaps the only one that is extant) is preserved among the manuscripts in the Royal Library at Paris, No. MMM.LXIV.

In 1516 there was printed at Genoa, by Peter Paul Porrus (in Ædibus Nicolai Justiniani Pauli) the Pentaglott Psalter of Augustin Justiniani Bishop of Nebo. It was in Hebrew, Arabic, Chaldee, and Greek, with the Latin Version, Glosses, and Scholia. In 1518 John Potken published the Psalter in Hebrew, Greek, Latin, and Ethiopic, at Cologne. But the first Polyglott edition of the entire Hebrew Bible was that printed at Alcala in Spain, viz.

1. Biblia Sacra Polyglotta, complectentia Vetus Testamentum, Hebraico, Graco, et Latino Idiomate; Novum Testamentum Græcum et Latinum; et Vocabularum Hebraicum et Chaldaicum Veteris Testamenti, cum Grammatica Hebraica, nec non Dictionario Graco; Studio, Opera, et Impensis Cardinalis Francisci XIMENES de Cisneros. Industria Arnaldi Gulielmi de Brocario artis impressorie magistri. Compluti, 1514, 1515. 1517, 6 vols.

The printing of this splendid and celebrated work, usually called the Complutensian Polyglott, was commenced in 1502; though completed in 1517, it was not published until 1522, and it cost the munificent cardinal Ximenes 50,000 ducats. The editors were Ælius Antonius Nebrissensis, Demetrius Ducas, Ferdinandus, Pincianus, Lopez de Stunica, Alfonsus de Zamora, Paulus Coronellus, and Johannes de Vergera, a physician of Alcala or Complutum. The last three were converted Jews. This Polyglott is usually divided into six volumes. The first four comprise the Old Testament, with the Hebrew, Latin, and Greek in three distinct columns, the Chaldee paraphrase being at the bottom of the page with a Latin interpre-The printing of this splendid and celebrated work, usually called paraphrase being at the bottom of the page with a Latin interpre-tation; and the margin is filled with Hebrew and Chaldee radicals. The fifth volume contains the Greek Testament, with the Vulgate The fifth volume contains the Greek Testament, with the Vulgate Latin version in a parallel column; in the margin there is a kind of concordance, referring to similar passages in the Old and New Testaments. And at the end of this volume, there are, I. A single leaf containing some Greek and Latin verses; 2. Interpretationes Hebraorum, Chaldavorum, Gracorumque Nominum Novi Testamenti, on ten leaves: and 3. Introductio quam brevis ad Gracas Litteras, &c. on thirty-nine leaves. The sixth volume contains, I. A separate title; 2. Vocabularium Hebraicum totius Veteris Testamenti, cum omnibus dictionibus Chaldais, in eodem Veteri Testamenti cum omnibus dictionibus Chaldais, in eodem Veteri Testamento contentis, on one hundred and seventy-two leaves; 3. An alphabetical Index, on eight leaves, of the Latin words occurring in different parts of the work; 4. Interpretationes Hebraicorum, Chaldaicorum, Gracorumque Nominum, Veteris ac Novi Testamenti, secundum Ordinem Alphabeti; 5. Two leaves entitled Nomina quae sequuntur, sunt illa, quae in utroque Testamento vicio Scriptorum sunt aliter scripta quam in Hebraco et Graco, et in aliquibus Bibliis nostris antiquis, &c.; 6. Fifteen leaves entitled Introductiones Artis Grammatica Hebraica et primo de modo legendi et pronuntiandi. These matice Hebraicæ et primo de modo legendi et pronuntiandi. These several pieces are sometimes placed in a different order from that above indicated. With the exception of the manuscript cited as the Codex Rhodiensis (now utterly lost), and the Codex Bessarionis presented to cardinal Ximenes by the republic of Venice, the MSS. consulted by his editors were partly purchased at an unbounded expense, and partly lent to him by pope Leo X. out of the Vatican Library, whither (we are informed by Alvaro Gomez, the cardinal's himsensor), the cardinal's himsensory that the cardinal that the the Vatican Library, whither (we are informed by Alvaro Gomez, the cardinal's biographer) they were returned as soon as the Polyglott was completed. The MSS, belonging to Ximenes were subsequently deposited in the library of the University of Alcala. Learned men had long suspected that they were of modern date. As it was important to collate anew the manuscripts at Alcala, Professors Moldenhawer and Tychsen, who were in Spain in 1784, went thither for this purpose: but they were informed that above thirty-five years beiore, in 1749, they had been sold by an illiterate librarian to a dealer in fireworks as materials for making rockets. (Marsh's Michaelis, vol. ii. part i. pp. 440, 441.) Notwithstanding this statement, there is "good reason to believe that those learned Germans were the subjects of an imposition practised upon them by some people in the Spanish University, who were not disposed to permit their manuscript treasures to be scrutinized by Protest-" Dr. Bowring, during the short time that Spain enjoyed the blessing of a constitutional government, "had the opportunity of carefully examining the manuscripts at Alcala: he has published he has published reasons amounting to a demonstration, that no sale or destruction of manuscripts ever took place. By his personal examination he found THE SAME scripture manuscripts which had been described by Alvaro Gomez, who died in 1580;" and he adds, "that the manuscripts in question are modern and valueless, there can be no longer any question." (Monthly Repository for 1821, vol. xii. p. 203., and vol. i. N. S. for 1827, p. 572, cited in Dr. J. P. Smith's "Answer to the Manifesto of the Christian Evidence Society," &c. pp. 48, 49. (Third Edition.)

The impression of the Complutensian Polyglott was limited to The impression of the Complutensian Polyglott was limited to 600 copies; three were struck off on vellum. One of these was deposited in the Royal Library at Madrid, and another in the Royal Library at Turin. The third (which is supposed to have been reserved for cardinal Ximenes), after passing through various hands, was purchased at the Pinelli sale, in 1789, for the late Count McCarthy of Thoulouse, for four hundred and eighty-three rounds. On the sale of this gantleman's library at Paris in 1817. count M'Cartny of Thoulouse, for four hundred and eighty-time pounds. On the sale of this gentleman's library at Paris, in 1817, it was bought by George Hibbert, Esq. for 16,100 francs, or six hundred and seventy-six pounds three shillings and four pence: and, at the sale of Mr. Hibbert's library in 1829, it was sold to Messrs. Payne and Foss, booksellers, of Pall Mall, for five hundred guineas. Payne and Foss, booksellers, of Pail Mail, for five numeric gumens. Copies of the Complutensian Polyglott, on paper, are in the Libraries of the British Museum and Sion College, and also in several of the College Libraries in the two Universities of Oxford and Cambridge. For much interesting additional information respecting the Complutensian and other Polyglott Bibles, see Mr. Pettigrew's Bibl. Sussex. vol. i. part ii. pp. 3—124.

2. Biblia Sacra Hebraice, Chaldaice, Græce, et Latine, Philippi II. Regis Cathol. Pietate, et Studio ad Sacrosanctæ Ecclesiæ Usum, Christophorus Plantinus excudebat. Antverpiæ, 1569-1572. 8 vols. folio.

Five hundred copies only were printed of this magnificent work, Five nundred copies only were purely to the which is sometimes called the Royal Polyglott, because it was executed at the expense of Philip II. King of Spain, and the Antwerp Polyglott from the place where it was printed. The greater part Polyglott from the place where it was printed. of the impression being lost in a voyage to Spain, this Polyglott has become of extreme rarity. It was printed in Hebrew, Greek, Latin, and Chaldee; and contains, besides the whole of the Com-Datin, and Polyglott, a Chaldee paraphrase of part of the Old Tes-tament, which cardinal Ximenes had deposited in the Public Library at Alcala, having particular reasons for not publishing it. This edition also has a Syriac version of the New Testament, and the Latin translation of Santes Pagninus, as reformed by Arias Montanus, the principal editor of this noble undertaking. The sixth, seventh, and eighth volumes are filled with lexicons and grammars of the various languages in which the Scriptures are printed, together with indexes, and a treatise on sacred antiquities. The Hebrew text is said to be compiled from the Complutensian and Bomberg editions.

3. Biblia. 1. Hebraica. 2. Samaritana. 3. Chaldaica. 4. Græca. 5. Syriaca. 6. Latina. 7. Arabica. Lutetiæ Parisiorum, excudebat Antonius Vitré. 1645. 10 vols. large folio.

This edition, which is extremely magnificent, contains all that is inserted in the Complutensian and Antwerp Polyglotts, with the addition of a Syriac and Arabic version of the greatest part of the Old, and of the entire New Testament. The Samaritan Pentateuch, with a Samaritan version, was printed for the first time in this Polyglott, the expenses of which ruined the Editor, M. LE JAV. His learned associates were Philippus Aquinas, Jacobus Morinus, Abraham Echellensis, Gabriel Sionita, &c. The Hebrew text is that of the Antwerp Polyglott. There are extant copies of Le Jay's edition of the Polyglott Bible, under the following title, viz. Biblia. Alexandrina Heptaglotta auspiciis S. D. Alexandri VII. anno ses-sionis ejus xii. feliciter inchoati. Lutetiæ Parisiorum protestant apud Joannem Jansonium a Waesberge, Johannem Jacobum Chipper, Elisæum Weirstraet, 1666.

4. Biblia Sacra Polyglotta, complectentia Textus Originales, Hebraicum cum Pentateucho Samaritano, Chaldaicum, Græcum, Versionumque antiquarum Samaritanæ, Græcæ LXXII. Interpretum, Chaldaicæ, Syriacæ, Arabicæ, Æthiopicæ, Vulgatæ

TON, S.T.D. Londini, imprimebat Thomas Roycroft, 1657. 6 vols.

Though less magnificent than the Paris Polyglott, this of Bishop Walton is, in all other respects, preferable; being more ample and more commodious. Nine languages are used in it, though no one book of the Bible is printed in so many. In the New Testament, the four Gospels are in six languages; the other books, only in five; those of Judith and the Maccabees, only in three. The Septuagint version is printed from the edition printed at Rome in 1587, gint version is primed from the eather plants which exhibits the text of the Vatican manuscript. The Latin is the Vulgate of Clement VIII. The Chaldee paraphrase is more complete than in any former publication. The London Polyglott complete than in any former publication. The London Polyglott also has an interlineary Latin version of the Hebrew text; and some parts of the Bible are printed in Ethiopic and Persian, none some parts of the Bible are printed in Ethiopic and Persian, none of which are found in any preceding Polyglott. The FIRST volume, besides very learned and useful Prolegomena, contains the Pentateuch. Every sheet exhibits, at one view, 1st, The Hebrew Text, with Montanus's interlineary Latin version, very correctly printed: 2. The same verses in the Vulgate Latin: 3. The Greek version of the Septuagint, according to the Vatican MS., with a literal Latin Translation by Flaminius Nobilis, and the various readings of the Alexandrian MS. added at the bottom of the column: 4. The Syriac version, with a collateral Latin translation: 5. The Targum, or Chaldee Paraphrase, of Onkelos, with a Latin translation: 6. The Hebrewo-Samaritan text, which is nearly the same with the uppointed Hebrew, only the character is different. the same with the unpointed Hebrew, only the character is different; and the Samaritan version, which differs vastly from the other as to the language, though the sense is pretty nearly the same; and therefore one Latin translation (with a few notes added at the bottom of the column) serves for both: 7. The Arabic version, with a collateral Latin translation, which in general agrees with Septuagint. This first volume also contains, or should contain, a portrait of Bishop Walton, engraved by Lombart; and a frontispiece, together with three plates relating to Solomon's temple, all the translates containing sections of piece, together with three plates relating to Solomon's temple, all engraved by Hollar. There are also two plates containing sections of Jerusalem, &c. and a chart of the Holy Land. These are inserted in Capellus's Treatise on the Temple. That part of the Prolegomena, in this volume, which was written by Bishop Walton, was commodiously printed in octavo, at Leipsic, in 1777, by Professor Dathe. It is a treasure of sacred criticism.

The SECOND volume comprises the historical books in the same languages as are above enumerated, with the exception of the Samaritan (which is confined to the Pentateuch) and of the Targum of Rabbi Joseph (surnamed the blind) on the books of Chronicles, which was not discovered till after the Polyglott was in the press. It has since been published in a separate form, as is noticed in the following page.

The THIRD volume comprehends all the poetic and prophetic books from Job to Malachi, in the same languages as before, only that there is an Ethiopic version of the book of Psalms, which is so near akin to the Septuagint, that the same Latin translation serves for both, with a few exceptions, which are noted in the

The FOURTH volume contains all the Apocryphal Books, in Greek, Latin, Syriac, and Arabic, with a two-fold Hebrew text of the book of Tobit; the first from Paul Fagius, the second from Sebastian Munster. After the Apocrypha there is a three-fold Targum of the Pentateuch: the first is in Chaldee, and is ascribed to Jonathan Ben Uzziel: the second is in Chaldee also; it takes in only select parts of the Law, and is commonly called the Jerusalem parts of the Law, and is commonly called the Jerusalem Targum: the third is in Persic, the work of one Jacob Tawus, or Toose, and seems to be a pretty literal version of the Hebrew Text. Each of these has a collateral Latin translation. The first two, though they contain many fables, are exceedingly useful, because they explain many words and customs, the meaning of which is to be found no where else; and the latter will be found very useful to a student in the Persian language, though it contains many obsolete phrases, and the larguage is by no meaning the new Spring disjoint disjoint in the remaining the property of the property and the language is by no means in the pure Shirazian dialect.

The fifth volume includes all the books of the New Testament. The FIFTH volume includes all the books of the New Testament. The various languages are here exhibited at one view, as in the others. The Greek text stands at the head, with Montanus's interlineary Latin translation; the Syriac next; the Persic third; the Vulgate fourth; the Arabic fifth; and the Ethiopic sixth. Each of the oriental versions has a collateral Latin translation. The Persic version only takes in the four Gospels; and for this, the Pars Altera, or Persian Dictionary, in Castell's Lexicon, was peculiarly calculated.

The SIXTH volume is composed of various readings and critical remarks on all the preceding versions, and concludes with an explanation of all the proper names, both Hebrew and Greek, in the Old and New Testaments. The characters used for the several oriental versions are clear and good; the Hebrew is rather the worst. The simple reading of a text in the several versions often throws more light on the meaning of the sacred writer than the best commentators which can be met with. This work sells at best commentators which can be met with. This work sells at from twenty-five pounds to seventy guineas, according to the difference of condition. Many copies are ruled with red lines, which is a great help in reading, because it distinguishes the different texts better, and such copies ordinarily sell for three or four guineas more than the others.

In executing this great and splendid work, Bishop Walton was assisted by Dr. Edmund Castell, Dr. Tho. Hyde, Dr. Pocock, Dr. Lightfoot, Mr. Alexander Huish, Mr. Samuel Clarke, Louis de Dieu, and other eminently learned men.1 It was begun in October Dieu, and other eminently learned men. It was begin in October 1653, and completed in 1657; the first volume was finished in September 1654; the second in July 1655; the third in July 1655; and the fourth, fifth, and sixth, in 1657, three years before the Restoration. The Parisian Polyglott was seventien years in the press!) This work was published by subscription, under the patronage of Oliver Cromwell, who permitted the paper to be imported duty free; but the Protector dying before it was finished, Bishop Walton concelled two leaves of the second second the paper.

cancelled two leaves of the preface, in which he had made honourable mention of his patron, and others were printed containing compliments to Charles II., and some pretty severe invectives against republicans. Hence has arisen the distinction of republican and loyal copies. The former are the most valued. Dr. A. Clarke and Mr. Butler have both pointed out (especially the former) the variations between these two editions. For a long time, it was disputed among bibliographers, whether any dedication was ever prefixed to the London Polyglott. There is, however, a dedication in one of the copies in the Royal Library at Paris, and another was discovered a few years since, which was reprinted in large folio, to bind up with other copies of the Polyglott; it is also reprinted in the Classical Journal, vol. iv. pp. 355—361. In the first volume of Pott's and Ruperti's Sylloge Commentationum Theologicarum (pp. 100—137.), there is a collation of the Greek and other versions. cancelled two leaves of the preface, in which he had made honour-(pp. 100-137.), there is a collation of the Greek and other versions, as printed in the London Polyglott, with the Hebrew text of the prophet Micah, accompanied with some explanations by Profe Paulus.² To complete the London Polyglott, the following pu Paulus.² To complete the London Polyglott, the following publications should be added, viz.

1. Puraphrasis Chaldaica in librum priorem et posteriorem Chro-

1. Paraphrasis Chaldaica in titrum priorem et posteriorem Chronicorum. Ametore Rabbi Josepho, rectore Academiae in Syria: cum versione Latina a Davide Wilkins. Cantabrigia, 1715, 4to.

2. Dr. Castell's Lexicon Heptaglotton; of which an account is given in a subsequent part of this Appendix.

The purchaser of the London Polyglott should also procure Dr. John Owen's Considerations on the Polyglott, 8vo. 1658: Bishop Walton's Reply, entitled The Considerator considered, &c. 8vo. 1659: and (a work of much more importance than either) Walton's Introduction of Lectionem Linguagum Orientalium, Hebraice, Chal-1659: and (a work of much more importance than either) Walton's Introductio ad Lectionem Linguarum Orientalium, Hebraica, Chaldaica, Samaritana, Syriaca, Arabica, Persica, Æthiopica, Armenica, Coptica, &c. 18mo. London, 1615.

Bishop Walton's Polyglott having long been extremely scarce and dear, it has been the wish of biblical students for many years that it should be reprinted. In 1797, the Rev. Josiah Pratt issued from the press, A Prospectus, with Specimens, of a new Polyglott Bible; in Quarto, for the Use of English Students, and in 1799, another Prospectus, with Specimens, of an Octavo Polyglott Bible; but, for want of encouragement, the design was not carried into execution. A similar fate attended The Plan and Specimen of BIBLIA POLYGLOTTA BRITANNICA, or an enlarged and improved edition of the London Polyglott Bible, with Castell's Heptaglott Lexicon, which were published and circulated by the Rev. Taglott Exicon, which were published and circulated by the Rev. Adam Clarke, LL.D. F.S.A. in 1810, in folio. The reader may see them reprinted in the Classical Journal (where, however, no notice is taken of the author of the plan), vol. iv. pp. 493—497. An abstract of this plan is given in the Bibl. Sussex. vol. i. part ii. pp. 66—68.

5. Biblia Sacra Quadrilinguia Veteris Testamenti Hebraici. cum Versionibus e regione positis, utpote versione Græca LXX Interpretum ex codice manuscripto Alexandrino, a J. Ern. Grabio primum evulgata-Item versione Latina Sebast. Schmidii noviter revisa et textui Hebræo accuratius accommodata, et Germanica beati Lutheri, ex ultima beati viri revisione et editione 1544-45 expressa. Adjectis textui Hebræo Notis Masorethicis et Græcæ Versioni Lectionibus Codicis Vaticani; notis philologicis et exegeticis aliis, ut et summariis capitum ac locis parallelis locupletissimis ornata. Accurante M. Christ. Reineccio. Lipsiæ, 1750. 3 vols. folio.

The comparative cheapness of this neatly and accurately printed work rendered it, before the publication of Mr. Bagster's Polyglott, a valuable substitute for the preceding larger Polyglotts. Dr. A. a valuable substitute for the preceding larger Polyglotts. Dr. A. Clarke, who states that he has rend over the whole of the Hebrew and Chaldee text, with the exception of part of the Pentateuch, pronounces it to be one of the most correct extant.

6. Biblia Sacra Polyglotta, Textus Archetypos, Versionesque præcipuas, ab Ecclesiâ antiquitùs receptas complectentia. Accedunt Prolegomena in eorundem crisin literalem, auctore Samuel Lee, S. T. B.....Linguæ Hebrææ apud Cantabrigiensis Professore Regio. Londini, 1831, 4to et folio.

Concerning these, as well as the literary history of the London Polyglett, the reader will find much and very interesting information in the Rev. H. J. Tono's Memoirs of the Lafe and Writings of the Right Rev. Brian Waiton, B.D., Lord Bishop of Chester, editor of the London Polyglett Bible: with notices of his cooling in this country, preceding and during their time; and of the authorized English version of the Bible, to a projected revision of which Dr. Waiton; and some of his assistants in the Polyglott were appointed. To which is added, Dr. Waiton's own vandication of the London Polyglott, we refer the reader to Dr. Clarke's Bibliographical Dictionary, vol. i. pp. 28—270; vol. ii. pp. 11—12; Mr. Butler's Horse Biblica, vol. i. pp. 13—149; and Dr. Diban's Introduction to the Knowledge of the Editous of the Greek and Latin Classics, 3d edit, vol. i. pp. 13—27, from which publications the above account is abridged.

The great rarity and consequent high price of all former Poly-The great rarity and consequent high price of all former Polyglotts, which render them for the most part inaccessible to biblicul students, induced the publisher, Mr. Bagster, to undertake these beautiful Polyglott editions of the Holy Scriptures. The quarto edition contains the original Hebrew text of the Old Testament, the Samaritan Pentateuch, the Septuagint Greek version of the Old Testament, the Vulgate Latin, and the authorized English version of the entire Bible; the original Greek text of the New Testament; and the venerable Peschito or Old Syriac version of it. The folio edition, besides these languages, contains entire translations of the Bible, in the following modern languages, viz. the German. by Dr. Martin Luther; the Italian, by Giovanni Diodati; the French, by J. F. Ostervald; and the Spanish (from the Romish Latin Vulgate), by Padre Scio. These are so disposed as to exhibit eight languages at once, on opening the volume, the press-work of which is singularly beautiful. The pointed Hebrew text is printed from the celebrated edition of Vander Hooght, noticed in No. 5. page 7. supra. The Samaritan Pentateuch is taken from Dr. Kennicott's edition of the Hebrew Bible, and is added by way of Appendix. The Septuagint is printed from Bos's edition of the Vatican text; and at the end of the Old Testament there are given the various readings of the Hebrew and Samaritan Pentateuchs, together with readings of the Hebrew and Samaritan Pentateuchs, together with the masoretic notes termed Keri and Ketib, the various lections of the Alexandrian MS. as edited by Dr. Grabe, and the apocryphal chapters of the book of Esther. The Greek text is printed from Mill's edition of the Textus Receptus, with the whole of the important readings given by Griesbach in his edition of 1805 (No. 30. p. 15. supra); the Peschito or Old Syriac version, from Widmanstadts' edition published at Vienna in 1555, collated with the accurate edition executed in 1816 under the auspices of the British and Foreign Bible Society, and edited by Professor Lee. The Apocalypse and such of the Epistles as are not extant in the Old Syriac version, are given from the Philoxenian or New Syriac version. The text of the Latin Vulgate version is taken from the edition of The text of the Latin Vulgate version is taken from the edition of pope Clement VIII. The authorized English version is accompanied with the marginal renderings, and a new selection of well-chosen parallel texts. The other modern versions are professedly given from accurate editions. The PROLEGOMENA of the Rev. Dr. and Professor Lee present a compendious and neatly written epitome of the Literary History of the Text and Versions of the Old and New Testaments, which contains some new and important critical information. Copies of the several texts and versions of this polyinformation. Copies of the several texts and versions of this polyglott edition are thrown off in detached small octavo volumes: and copies of the quarto Polyglott New Testament may also be procured, with a distinct title-page.³

Several editions of the Bible are extant, in two or three languages, called Diglotts and Triglotts, as well as Polyglott editions of particular parts of the Scriptures. For an account of these, we are compelled to refer the reader to the Bibliotheca Sacra of Le Long and Masch, and the Bibliographical Dictionary of Dr. Clarke, already cited. A complete account of all these Polyglott editions is a desideratum in English literature: the following, however, may be mentioned as the principal Triglott and Diglott editions.

(1.) TRIGLOTT TESTAMENT.

Novi Testamenti Biblia Triglotta: sive Græci Textus Archetypi, Versionis Syriacæ, et Versionis Latinæ Vulgatæ Synopsis: cui accedunt Subsidia Critica varia. Evangelia. Londini. 1828. 4to.

Those who may not be able to procure any of the more costly polyglotts, will find a cheap substitute for them in this handsomely printed volume. The Greek text is printed after the editions, with improved punctuation, of Knappe and Vater; this is accompanied by the Syriac Version, after the text of Professor Lee's accurate edition, printed in 1816; and at the foot of the page is the Latin a The publisher of the Polyglott Bible above noticed, in 1819 issued from the press an octoglott edition of the Liturgy of the Anglican church, in one quarto volume, which may justly be pronounced one of the finest specimens of typography that ever issued from the British press. The eight languages, printed in this edition, are the English, French, Italian, German, Spanish, Ancient Greek, Modern Greek, and Latin. The English text is given from a copy of the Oxford Edition of the Common Prayer Book. The French version is modern, and is well known to most readers of that language, having frequently been printed and received with general approbation. The Psalms are printed from the Base Edition of Ostervald's Bible. The Halian is taken from the edition of A. Montucci and L. Vallett, published in 1796, but revised throughout, and its orthography corrected. The Psalms are copied from the Bible of Diodati. The German translation, by the Rev. Dr. Kuper (Chaplain of his Majesty's German Chapel, St. James's), is entirely new, except the Psalms, which are taken from Luther's German Version of the Scriptures. The Spanish, by the Rev. Blanco White, is for the most part new. The Psalms are printed from Padre Scio's great Spanish Bible, published at Madrid in 1807, in sixteen volumes. The translation into the Ancient Greek language is that executed by Dr. Dupont (A. D. 1865), who was Regius Prodessor of Greek in the University of Cambridge. The Psalms are from the Septuagint. The Modern Greek is an entirely new transition by M. A. Cabb, a learned native Greek, of the island of Zante. And the Latin version is nearly a reprint of the edition which was first printed by W. Bowyer, in 1720, with some alterations and additions by the present editor (John Carey, Ll. D.), sometimes taken from the translation of Mr. Thomas Parsel, the fourth edition of which was published in 1727. 3 The publisher of the Polyglott Bible above noticed, in 1819 issued from Vulgate version, according to the Sixtine recension, printed from the Antwerp edition of 1603, which was superintended by John Moret. To the work is prefixed Prof. Vater's Index of Critical Subsidia; and in an Appendix there is given his selection of Various Readings, with the authorities by which they are supported.

(2.) DIGLOTT BIBLES.

1. Biblia Sacra Hebraica, cum interlineari interpretatione Latina Xantis Pagnini: accessit Bibliorum pars, quæ Hebraice non reperitur, item Novum Testamentum, Græcè, cum Vulgata Interpretatione Latina Studio Benedicti Ariæ Montani. Antwerpiæ, 1572, 1584. Genevæ, 1609, 1619, (with a new title only.) Lipsiæ, 1657, folio.

only.) Lipsiæ, 1057, 1010.

"You will find the edition of the Hebrew Scriptures by Arias Montanus more useful to you than perhaps any other." (Bishop Gleig's Directions for the Study of Theology, p. 93.) The edition of 1572 forms the sixth volume of the Antwerp Polyglott (p. 20. supra): as it is the first, so it is the best edition. The octavo editions, ex officinà Plantinianà Raphelengii (Lugduni Balavorum), 1599 or 1610—1613, in nine volumes, are of very little value. In the folio editions above noticed, the Latin word is placed above the Hebrew and Greek words, to which they belong. The Latin version of Xantes or Santes Pagninus is corrected by Montanus, and his learned coadjutors, Raphelenge, and others.

2. Biblia Hebraica, i. e. Vetus Testamentum, seu Hagiographi Canonici Veteris nempe Testamenti Libri, qui originario nobis etiamnum ore leguntur, ex Hebraico in Latinum ad litteram versi, adjectà editione Vulgatà. Hebraicè et Latinè, curà et studio Ludovici de Biel, e Societate Jesu. Viennæ, 1743. 4 vols. 8vo.

This is an elegant edition, little known in this country, but in many respects highly valuable. It contains the Hebrew, and two Latin versions—that of the Vulgate edition in 1592, and that of Arias Montanus. It is ornamented with vignettes, and the initial letters, which are well engraved on copper, represent some fact of sacred history, to which the immediate subject is applicable.

3. The Old Testament, English and Hebrew, with remarks, critical and grammatical, on the Hebrew, and corrections of the English. By Anselm BAYLEY, LL.D. London, 1774. 4 vols. 8vo.

The Hebrew text is printed in long lines on the left hand page; and the authorized English version on the right hand page, divided into two columns. The critical notes, which are very few, are placed under the English text. The Hebrew text is accompanied, throughout, with the Keri and Ketib; but all the accents, &c. are omitted, except the athnach, which answers to our colon, and the soph pashuk, which is placed at the end of each verse in the Bible. At the end of each book is given an epilogue, containing a summary view of the history, transactions, &c. recorded therein. The work is ornamented with a frontispiece, representing Moses receiving the tables of the law on Mount Sinai, and two useful maps—one of the journeying of the Israelites, in which each station is numbered; and another of their settlement in the promised land. The letter-press of the Hebrew is very unequally distributed over the pages; some are long, and others short; some are wide, and others narrow. On some pages not fewer than thirty-seven lines are crowded together, while others contain only twenty-three. In other respects, Dr. A. Clarke pronounces it to be a pretty correct work; but, besides the errata noticed by the editor, he adds, that the reader will find the sentence—thou shalt visit thy habitation, left out of the English text, in Job v. 24.—Bibliogr. Dic. vol. i. p 274.

SECTION V.

ANCIENT VERSIONS OF THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.

- § 1. Targums, or Chaldee Paraphrases of the Old Testament.
- 1. Targum, seu Paraphrasis Chaldaica Onkelosi in Pentateuchum, Latine, ex versione Alfonsi de Zamora. Venetiis, 1747, 4to.

Also in the Complutensian, Antwerp, Paris, and London Polyglotts. This version of the Targum of Onkelos was likewise printed at Antwerp, 1616, and at Venice, 1609, in folio.

2. Thargum, hoc est, Paraphrasis Onkeli Chaldaica in Sacra Biblia; ex Chaldaico in Latinum fidelissime versa, additis in singula fere capita succinctis annotationibus, Authore Paulo Facto. Pentateuchus, sive quinque libri Moysis. Tom. I. Argentorati, 1546, folio.

One volume only of this work was published. Fagius's learned annotations are inserted in the Critici Sacri.

- 3. Targum Pseudo-Jonathanis in Pentateuchum, Latine, ex versione Antonii Cevalerii. Londini, 1657, folio. (In Bp. Walton's Polyglott.)
 - 4. TARGUM HIEROSOLYMITANUM in Pentateuchum, Latine, ex versione Antonii Cevalerii. Londini, 1667, folio. (In Bp. Walton's Polyglott.)

Bp. Walton states that the Latin version of Chevalier is more faithful than that published by Francis Taylor, at London, in 1649, 4to.

5. Targum Jonathanis in Josue, Judices, Libros Regum, Isaiæ, Hieremiæ, Ezechielis et XII. Minorum Prophetarum, Latine, ex versione Alfonsi de Zamora, a Benedicto Aria Montano ad Hebraicam et Chaldaicam veritatem correctà, folio. (In the Antwerp, Paris, and London Polyglotts.)

Various other editions of the Targum of Jonathan Ben Uzziel are noticed in Masch's and Boerner's edition of Lelong's Bibliotheca Sacra, Part II. vol. iii. pp. 654—656.

- 6. Targum R. Josephi Cœci et aliorum in Chetuvim, Latine, ex versione Alfonsi de Zamora, et recognitione Ariæ Montani, folio.
- Targum in Psalmos, Ecclesiasten, et Librum Esther, ex versione Ariæ Montani, folio.

Both the preceding Targums are found in the Antwerp, Paris, and London Polyglotts; in the last, the translation has been further revised by Dr. Edmund Castell.

8. Liber Jobi, Chaldaice et Latine, cum notis. Opera et studio Johannis Terentii. Franckeræ, 1663, 4to.

The Latin translation is that of Alfonso de Zamora, revised by Montanus, and further corrected by the editor. Masch pronounces this to be a rare and erudite publication.

9. Cantica Canticorum et Ecclesiastes Salomonis paraphrastico sermone conscripti, et ex Chaldæa lingua in Latinam versi pet Erasmum Oswaldum Schreckenfuchsium. Basileæ, 1553, 8vo.

- 10. Chaldaica Paraphrasis Libelli Ruth, a mendis repurgata et punctis juxta analogiam grammaticam notata, cum Latina Interpretatione et Annotationibus, per Joannem Mercerum. Parisiis, 1564, 4to.
- 11. Paraphrasis Chaldaica Librorum Chronicorum, Latine, curâ Matthiæ Friderici Beckii. Augustæ Vindelicorum, 1680—83—84, 2 vols. 4to.
- 12. Paraphrasis Chaldaica in Librum priorem et posteriorem Chronicorum. Auctore Rabbi Josepho, Rectore Academiæ in Syria. Nunc demum a Manuscripto Cantabrigiensi descripta, ac cum Versione Latinâ in lucem missa a Davide Wilkins. Cantabrigiæ, 1717, 4to. Amstelodami, 1725, 4to.

tabrigis, 1711, 4to. Amstelodami, 1725, 4to.

The manuscript, from which this edition was printed, was written A. D. 1477. It was discovered by Mr. Samuel Clarke, an eminent oriental scholar, in the University of Cambridge: and, besides the Chaldee paraphrase on the books of Chronicles, it contained the books of Psalms, Proverbs, Job, Daniel, Ezra, and Nehemiah, with a targum or paraphrase on each. The book is elegantly printed, the Chaldee text with vowel points being on the right hand page, and the Latin translation on the left: both are divided into verses. The copies, dated Amstelodami, 1725, are the same as those printed at Cambridge, but with a new title-page.

§ 2. Ancient Greek Versions.

[i.] THE SEPTUAGINT.1

The following table exhibits the four principal Standard Text Editions of the Septuagint Greek version, together with the principal editions which are founded upon them.

1. Complutensian Text, 1514.

Antwerp Polyglott, Fol. Gr. Lat. &c. 1569-72.—Commelini. Fol. Gr. 1586, 1599, 1616.—Wolderi—Fol. Gr. 1596.—Hutteri. Fol. 1599. Gr. Lat. &c.—Paris Polyglott, Fol. Gr. Lat. &c. 1629—45.

2. ALDINE TEXT, 1518.

Cephalai. Oct. Gr. 1526.—Hervagii, Fol. Gr. 1545.—Brylingeri. Oct. Gr. 1550.—Wechelii Hared. Fol. Gr. 1597.

3. Roman or Vatican Text, 1587.

Waltoni Polyglotta. Fol. Gr. Lat. &c. 1657.—Morini. Fol. Gr. Lat. 1628.—Daniel. Qto. et Oct. Gr. 1653, 1665, 1683.—Cluveri. Oct. Gr. 1697.—Bosii. Gr. Qto. 1709.—Milii, Oct. G. 1725.—Reineccii. Oct. Gr. 1730, 1757.—Kirchneri. Oct. Gr. 1759.—Holmesii. Fol. Gr. 1798, &c. The editions printed at Oxford, Oct. Gr. 1805, 1817.—Valpii, 1819.—L. Von Ess, 1824.

⁴ This notice of the principal editions of the Septuagint version is chiefly taken from Masch and Boerner's edition of Lebong's Bibliotheca Sacra, part ii. vol. ii. pp. 263–323. Many other editions of this version, and of detached books of it, are there described, which we have not had room to detail.

4. THE ALEXANDRIAN TEXT, 1707-9-19-20.

Breitingeri. Qto. Gr. 1730–33. Reineccii Biblia Quadrilinguia. Fol. Gr. Lut. &c. 1750. Baberi. Fol. 1816—27.

Of the various editions of the Septuagint Greek version, which have issued from the press, the following more particularly claim the notice of the biblical student. Most of them contain the New Testament, in addition to the Old; but as the principal editions of the former have already been described, no notice will be taken of them.

 Biblia Græca; cum versione Latina ad verbum. In Bibliis Polyglottis Compluti editis, 1514, 1515, 1517.

The text of this edition was composed after several manuscripts which the editors neglected to describe; they have frequently been charged with having altered the Greek text, to make it harmonize with the Hebrew, or rather with the Vulgate version, and with having filled up the chasms in the Alexandrian or Septuagint version from other Greek interpreters.—For a further account of the Complutensian Polyglott, see pp. 19, 20. of this Appendix.

2. Панта та кат' ё́гхні кальщина Вібліа Эшас більаві удафис талшас те кан veac.—Sacræ Scripturæ Veteris Novæque omnia. Venetiis, 1518, small folio.

This edition appeared in 1518, two years after the death of Aldus Manutius; it was executed under the care of his father-in-law, Andreas Asulanus. The text was compiled from numerous ancient MSS. Archbishop Usher is of opinion, that in many instances it follows the readings of Aquila's version, instead of those of the Septuagint. The Aldine text, however, is pronounced by Bishop Walton to be much purer than that in the Complutensian Polyglot, to which it is actually prior in point of time; for though the Polyglott bears date 1514—1517, it was not published until the year 1522. Father Simon and M. de Colomies concur in speaking very highly of the execution of the Aldine edition.

3. Της Θείας Γραφης, παλαίας δηλαδή και νείας απάντα. Divinæ Scripturæ Veteris Novæque omnia. Argentorati, apud Wolphium Cephalæum, 1526. 4 vols. 8vo.

This edition is of great rarity: the fourth volume contains the New Testament. It follows the text of Aldus, and is not only well and correctly printed, put possesses the additional merit of judicious punctuation. Though the chapters are distinguished, the text is not divided into verses; and a space is left at the beginning of each chapter for the insertion of the initial letter. The Apocryphal books, and a small but valuable collection of various readings, are added in this edition by the editor John Lonicerus, a disciple and follower of the illustrious reformer, Dr. Martin Luther. Copies of this edition are sometimes to be met with, having the date of 1529. They are however all of the same impression, the beginning of the preface being altered, the name of Lonicerus omitted, and that of Jerome submitted for Luther, with a new title-page.

4. Τπε Θυας Γραφπε, παλαιας δηλαδη και νεας απαντα. Divinæ Scripturæ Veteris ac Novi Testamenti omnia, innumeris locis nunc demum, et optimorum librorum collatione et doctorum vivorum operâ, multo quam unquam emendatiora, in lucem edita. Cum Cæs. Majest. gratia et privilegio ad quinquennium. Basiliæ, per Joannem Hervagium, 1545, folio.

In this rare and little known edition, the text of Lonicerus is chiefly followed; it is said to surpass in correctness both the Strasburg and Venetian editions, and also has some valuable various readings. The preface was written by Melancthon.

5. Biblia Græca, Græcè et Latinè. . . . Basileæ, per Nicholaum Brylingerum. 1550, 5 vols. 8vo.

Each of the five volumes, of which this edition consists, has a distinct title-page which is printed by Masch. The Greek and Latin are placed in opposite columns; the former from the Aldine text, the latter from the Vulgate, as printed in the Complutensian Polyglott. The type, though rather too small to be read with ease, is pronounced by Masch to be distinct and neat.

6. Ἡ Παλαία Διάθημη, κατά τους Εθθομικόντα δι' αυθητίας Συστου Ε' αρχου Αρχωρίας αφθορίας... Vetus Testamentum Græcum, juxta LXX. Interpretes, studio Antonii Cardinalis Carafa, ope virorum doctorum adjuti, cum prefatione et scholiis Petri Morini. Romæ ex Typographia Francisci Zannetti, 1586, folio.

A beautiful edition, of great rarity and value. The copies of it are of two dates—some with M.D.LXXXVI, as they originally appeared, and others with the date of M.D.LXXXVII, the figure I. having been subsequently added with a pen. The latter copies are most commonly met with, and hence this edition is usually dated 1587. They contain 783 pages of text, preceded by four leaves of preliminary matter, which are followed by another (subsequently added), entitled Corrigenda in notationibus Psalterii. This last mentioned leaf is not found in the copies bearing the date of 1586, which also want the privilege of Pope Sixtus V. dated May 9th, 1587, at whose request, and under whose auspices, it was undertaken by Cardinal Antonio Carafa, aided by Antonio Agelli, Peter Morinus, Fulvio Ursino, Robert Bellamin, Cardinal Sirlet, and Vol. II.— Aff.

others. The celebrated Codex Vaticanus 1209 was the basis of the Roman or Sixtine edition, as it is usually termed; but the editors did not exclusively adhere to that MS., having changed both the orthography and readings whenever these appeared to them to be faulty. Such is the opinion of Drs. Hody and Grabe, Eichhorn, Morus, and other eminent crities; though the late Dr. Holmes has contended that the text of the Roman edition was printed from one single MS., which was exclusively followed throughout. The first forty-six chapters of Genesis, together with some of the Psalms, and the book of Maccabees, being obliterated from the Vatican manuscript through extreme age, the editors are said to have supplied this deficiency by compiling those parts of the Septuagint from a Grecian and Venetian MS. out of Cardinal Bessarion's library, and from another which was brought to them from Calabria. So great was the agreement between the latter and the Codex Vaticanus, that they were supposed to have been transcribed either the one from the other, or both from the same copy. Various readings are given to each chapter. This edition contains the Greek text only. In 1588, Flaminio Nobili printed at Rome in folio Vetus Testamentum secundum LXX. Latine redditum. This Latin version was not composed by him, but compiled out of the fragments of the ancient Latin translations, especially the Old Italic. It is a splendid volume, and of considerable rarity. The Roman edition was reprinted at Paris in 1628, in three folio volumes; the New Testament in Greek and Latin forms the third volume. This reprint is in great request, not only for the neanness and correctness of its execution, but also for the learned notes which accompany it. Some copies are occasionally met with, dated Parisiis, Piget 1641, which might lead us to suppose that they were distinct editions. De Bure however says, that they are but one and the same edition, with a new title-page, probably printed by the bookseller who had purchased the unsold copies.

7. Της Θείας Γραφης, παλαίας δηλαδη και νέας, απάντα. Divinæ Scripturæ, nempe Veteris ac Novi Testamenti, omnia Francofurti, apud Andreæ Wechelii Hæredes, 1597, folio.

This edition is formed after that of Hervagius, the errors of the latter being previously corrected. It has a collection of various readings, taken from the Complutensian, Antwerp, Strasburg, and Roman editions. Morinus charges the editor (who is supposed to have been Francis Junius or Frederick Sylbergius) with abandoning the Aldine text in four chapters of the book of Exodus, and in the twenty-fourth chapter of the book of Proverbs, and substituting the Complutensian text in its stead. It is very neatly printed on clear types, and is divided into verses.

8. 'Η Παλαια Διαθημη κατα τους Εθδημηκοντα. Vetus Testamentum Græcum ex versione Septuaginta interpretum. Londini, excudebat Rogerus Daniel, 1653, 4to.

This edition is frequently mentioned in catalogues as being both in quarto and in octavo. Masch states that there is but one size, viz. in quarto, though the paper be different. It professes to follow the Sixtine edition: but this is not the fact; the editors having altered and interpolated the text in several places, in order to bring it nearer to the Hebrew text and the modern versions. The errors of this edition have been retained, 1. In that printed at Cambridge in 1653, 8vo. with a learned preface written by Bishop Pearson (whose initials are at the end); and, 2. In the very neat Cambridge edition printed by Field in 1665, in three volumes, 8vo. (including the Liturgy in Greek and the New Testament.) Field's edition was counterfeited, page for page, by John Hayes, a printer at Cambridge, who executed an edition in 1684, to which he put Field's name, and the date of 1665. The fraud, however, may easily be detected, by comparing the two editions; the typography of the genuine cambridge edition was reprinted at Amsterdam, in 1683, in 12mo. without the Greek Testament. The editing of it is commonly, but erroneously, ascribed to Leusden. The omission of Bishop Pearson's initials at the end of the preface, has caused the latter to be attributed to Leusden. The book is very neatly but very incorrectly printed in two columns, divided into separate verses. The Apocryphal books, which are found in the Cambridge edition, are altogether omitted.

9. 'Н Палага Анавики, ката того Есвериниота. Vetus Testamentum Græcum, ex versione Septuaginta interpretum, cum libris Apocryphis, juxta exemplar Vaticanum Romæ editum, et Anglicanum Londini excusum. Lipsiæ, 1697, 8vo.

The editors of this impression were M. J. CLUVER and Tho. KLUMFF; though inferior to the London and Amsterdam editions in beauty of execution, it is very far superior to them in point of correctness. The prolegomena of John Frickius, prefixed to it, contain a critical notice of preceding editions of the Septuagint Version, which is said to be very accurate.

10. Vetus Testamentum Græcum, ex versione LXX Interpretum, ex antiquissimo MS. Codice Alexandrino accuratè descriptum, et ope aliorum exemplarium ac priscorum scriptorum, præsertim vero Hexaplaris Editionis Origenianæ, emendatum atque suppletum, additis sæpe asteriscorum et obelorum signis, summå curà edidit Joannes Ernestus Grabe, S.T.P. Oxonii, 1707, 1709, 1719, 1720. 4 vols. folio, and 8 vols. 8vo.

This splendid edition exhibits the text of the celebrated Coder Alexandrinus, now deposited in the British Museum. Though

Dr. Grabe prepared the whole for the press, yet he only lived to publish the Ociateuch, forming the first volume of the folio edition, in 1707, and the fourth, containing the metrical books, in 1709. The second volume, comprising the historical books, was edited by Francis Lee, M.D., a very eminent Greek scholar, in 1719; and the third volume, including the prophetical books, by W. Wigan, S. T. D., in 1720. This edition gives a fair representation of the Alexandrian Manuscript where it was perfect; but where it was defective and incorrect, the passages supplied and corrected readings are given partly from the Codex Vaticanus, and partly from the Complutensian edition, in a smaller character than that employed in the text, the erroneous lections being printed in the margin. The prolegomena of Dr. Grabe contain a treasure of sacred criticism. Dr. Grabe designed to have added copious notes to this volume, in four chapters, discusses the history of the Kolm, or common text of the Septuagint Version, and its various corrections; describes the MSS. consulted for this edition of the LXX., of the Fathers, and other Greek writers quoted in the various readings, and of the several ancient versions, viz. the Old Italic or Ante-Hieronymian Latin, the Coptic, Sahidic, Syriac (made from the Greek text), Arabic, Sclavonic, Armenian, and the Georgian versions, whence various readings in the Pental the volume are eleven pages of addenda et emendanda. Dr. Holmes work, but was prevented by death from composing them. After the folio sheets were struck off, the pages were divided, and overtune into an octavo form, to prevent the book from being piratically printed in Germany.

11. Ἡ Παλαία Διάθηκη κατά τους Εξδεμημοντά. Vetus Testamentum ex versione Septuaginta Interpretum secundum Exemplar Vaticanum Romæ editum, accuratissimè denue recognitum; una cum scholiis ejusdem editionis, variis Manuscriptorum Codicum Veterumque Exemplarium Lectionibus, necnon fragmentis Versionum Aquilæ, Symmachi, et Theodotionis. Summâ curà edidit Lambertus Bos. Franequeræ. 1709. 4to.

An elegant and accurate edition, which is deservedly esteemed. The preface of the editor, Professor Bos, contains a critical disquisition on the Septuagint Version and its utility in sacred criticism, together with an account of the preceding principal editions. Bos's text was reprinted at Amsterdam in 1725, in two 8vo. vols. under the editorial care of David Mill. It contains various readings from some MSS. at Leyden, which, however, are of no great critical value.

12. Ἡ Παλαία Διαθηκή κατά τους Εξθεμηκοντά. Vetus Testamentum ex Versione Septuaginta Interpretum, olim ad fidem Codicis MS, Alexandrini summo studio et incredibili diligenta expressum, emendatum et suppletum a Joanne Ernesti Grabio, S.T.P. Nunc vero exemplaris Vaticani aliorumque MSS. Codd. Lectionibus var. nec non criticis dissertationibus illustratum insigniterque locupletatum, summâ curâ edidit Joannes Jacobus Breitingerus. Tiguri Helvetiorum. 1730-1-2. 4 vols. 4to.

This edition is a correct reprint of Dr. Grabe's edition, to which are added, at the foot of the page, the various readings of the Roman or Vatican edition, and of three manuscripts belonging to the library of the Academy at Basle. The beauty of its typography and paper, and its critical value, concur to render this edition highly esteemed; it is consequently both scarce and dear. Michaelis pronounces it to be the best edition of the Septuagint ever printed, that is, up to his time.

13. Ἡ Παλαια Διαθηκή κατά τους Εξθομηκοντά. Vetus Testamentum Græcum ex Versione Septuaginta Interpretum, una cum Libris Apocryphis, secundum Exemplar Vaticanum Romæ editum et aliquoties recognitum, quod nunc denuo ad optimas quasque editionis recensuit, et potiores quasdam Codicis Alexandrini et aliorum Lectiones variantes adjecit M. Christianus Reinecolus. Lipsiæ, 1730, 8vo. 1757, 8vo. edit. secunda.

A neat and commodious edition, though the type is rather too small. The apocryphal books are at the end of the volume.

14. Ή Παλαία Διαθηκη. Vetus Testamentum ex versione Septuaginta Interpretum, ad exemplar Vaticanum Romæ editum ex optimis codicibus impressum. Accesserunt Libri Apocryphi. Halæ, sumptibus Orphanotrophei. 1759. 12mo.

An edition of more promise than execution. Masch denounces it as very incorrect, and says, that instead of being taken from the best codices (as the editor professes), or editions, it agrees with the London, Cambridge, and Leipsic editions.

15. Vetus Testamentum Græcum, cum variis Lectionibus, edidit Robertus Holmes, D.D., Decanus Wintoniensis. Tom. I. Oxonii, e Typographeo Clarendoniano. 1798. folio.

Vetus Testamentum Græcum, cum variis Lectionibus. Editionem a Roberto Holmes, S.T.P. inchoatam continuavit Jacobus Parsons, S.T.B. Tom. II.—V. Oxonii, e Typographeo Clarendoniano. 1818—27. folio.

To the University of Oxford belongs the honour of giving to the public this valuable and splendid edition of the Septuagint Version. In the year 1788, the late Rev. Dr. Holmes, Dean of Winchester, circulated proposals for collating all the MSS. of that version known to be extant. These being liberally supported by public and private patrons, Dr. H. published annual accounts of his collations, which amounted to sixteen in number, up to the time of his decease. In 1795 he published, in folio, two Latin epistles to the Bishop of Durham, containing specimens of his proposed work; and in 1798 appeared the first part of vol. i. containing the book of Genesis: part ii. comprising Exodus and Leviticus, was published in 1801; and the books of Numbers and Deuteronomy, which complete the first volume, in 1804. The date of 1798, therefore, in the title-page of the first volume, is not strictly correct. A general preface to this volume, in four chapters, discusses the history of the Koldy, or common text of the Septuagint Version, and its various corrections; describes the MSS. consulted for this edition (eleven of which were written in uncial letters, and upwards of one hundred in small letters); and gives an account of the printed editions of the LXX., of the Fathers, and other Greek writers quoted in the various readings, and of the several ancient versions, viz. the Old Italic or Ante-Hieronymian Latin, the Coptic, Sahidic, Syriac (made from the Greek text), Arabic, Sclavonic, Armenian, and the Georgian versions, whence various readings in the Pentateuch have been extracted. Each of the five books of Moses is furnished with a short preface and an appendix; and at the end of the volume are eleven pages of addenda et emendanda. Dr. Holmes also published the book of Daniel, in 1805, according to the text of Theodotion and the Septuagint, in the same manner as the Pentateuch, a few months before his death. The text is printed on a strong and beautiful type, after the Sixtine or Roman edition of 1587; and the deviations from it, which are observable in the Complutensian and Aldine editions, and in that of Dr. Grabe, are constantly noted. For this edition were collated three hundred and eleven manuscripts, the various lections of which are exhibited at the foot of the page. On Dr. Holmes's death, in 1805, after a considerable but unavoidable delay, the publication of this important work was resumed by the Rev. J. Parsons, A. M. (now B.D.), under whose editorial care the second volume was completed in 1818. It comprises all the historical books from Joshua to the second book of Chronicles inclusively; the several fasciculi of which were published in the following order, viz. Joshua in 1810; Judges and Ruth in 1812; 1 Kings in 1813; and the five remaining for in the early part of 1818. The third and fourth volumes containing the book of Job to t

16. Psalterium Græcum è Codice MS. Alexandrino, qui Londini in Bibliotheca Musei Britannici asservatur, Typis ad Similitudinem ipsius Codicis Scripturæ fideliter descriptum, Curâ et Labore Henrici Herveii Baber, A.M. Musei Britannici Bibliothecarii. Londini, 1812, folio.

This is an exact fac-simile of the book of Psalms, from the Codex Alexandrinus, which has been described in Part I. of the second volume. There is a chasm of about nine leaves in the original manuscript, from Psalm xlix. 19. to Psalm lxxix. 12. The types are the same as were used for Dr. Woide's fac-simile edition of the New Testament, noticed in p. 13. supra. The numbers of the Psalms and verses are subjoined at the foot of the page, for convenience of reference. Appropriate marks are introduced, to point out words which have either become obliterated in course of time, or have been designedly erased, or which have been rewritten by a later hand. At the end of the volume there is a collation of the various readings of the Alexandrian MS. of the book of Psalms, with the Roman edition of the Vatican text of the Septuagint, printed in 1587. Twelve copies of this elegant fac-simile were printed on vellum, to match with the same number of copies of Dr. Woide's edition.

17. Vetus Testamentum Græcum è Codice MS. Alexandrino, qui Londini in Bibliotheca Musei Britannici asservatur, Typis ad Similitudinem ipsius Codicis Scripturæ fideliter descriptum, Curâ et Labore Henrici Herveii Baber, A.M. Londini, 1816—28. 4 vols. folio.

At the close of his preface to the preceding fac-simile edition of the book of Psalms, the Rev. H. H. Baber announced his intention of proceeding with the Old Testament, in a similar manner: but this was an undertaking too vast and too extensive for an unbeneficed clergyman. In consequence, therefore, of a memorial by Mr. B., seconded by the recommendation of several dignitaries of the Anglican church, as well as professors and heads of colleges in the two universities, the British Parliament engaged to defray the expense of completing this noble work. (See the Memorial and other Proceedings in the Literary Panorama, vol. i. N. S. pp. 465—478.) The first three volumes comprise the entire text of the Septuagint; and the fourth volume contains the Notes and the Prolegomena. The whole is executed in a splendid folio size, and in such a manner as faithfully to represent every iota of the original, Mr. Baber has introduced a greater variety of type than Dr. Woide could command for his fac-simile edition of the New Testament, together with numerous wood-cuts. The tail pieces, or rude arabesque ornaments at the end of each book, are also represented by means of fac-similes in wood. The edition is limited to two hundred and fifty copies, ten of which are on vellum. The execution of the whole of this noble undertaking is such as reflects the highest credit on the learned editor, and on his printers, Messrs. R. and A. Taylor.

18. Vetus Testamentum Græcum ex Versione LXX secundum Exemplar Vaticanum Roma editum. Accedunt variæ Lectiones e Codice Alexandrino necnon Introductio J. B. Carpzovii. Oxonii, e Typographeo Clarendoniano. 1817. 6 vols. 8vo.

An accurate and beautifully printed edition: there are copies on large paper. The introduction is extracted from the second and third chapters of Carpzov's Critica Sacra, Part III., which treatise is noticed in the subsequent part of this Appendix.

19. Vetus Testamentum ex Versione Septuaginta Interpretum, juxta Exemplar Vaticanum, ex editione Holmesii et Lamberti Bos. Londini, in Ædibus Valianis. 1819, 8vo.

This elegantly-executed volume is very correctly printed, after the editions of Holmes and Bos, and (which cannot but recommend it to students in preference to the incorrect Cambridge and Am-sterdam reprints of the Vatican text) its price is so reasonable as to place it within the reach of almost every one.

20. Ἡ Παλαία Διαθήκη κατά τους Εθθομικούτα. Vetus Testa-mentum ex Versione LXX Interpretum, juxta Exemplar Vaticanum, ex editione Holmesii et Lamberti Bos. Glasguæ, 1822. 3 tomis, 12mo. Editio nova, Glasguæ et Londini, 1831. 2 tomis,

These very neatly printed editions are also formed after those of Holmes and Bos: they were executed at the university press of Glasgow. To the edition of 1831 is prefixed the learned preface of Bp. Pearson, which is copied from the Cambridge edition of 1653.

21. Ή Παλαια Διαθημή κατα τους Εβδομημοντα: seu Vetus Testamentum Græce, juxta Septuaginta Interpretes ex auctoritate Sixti V. Editionis, juxta Exemplar Originale Vaticanum Romæ editum quoad textum accuratissimè et ad amussim recusum, cura et studio Leandri von Ess. Lipsiæ, 1824, 8vo.

This edition is stereotyped, and is very neatly executed. There are copies on thick paper, which are an ornament to any library.

22. Daniel secundum Septuaginta ex Tetraplis Origenis, nunc primum editus e singulari Codice Chisiano annorum supra recce. Romæ, 1772, folio.

For a full account of this splendid work, see Bibl. Sussex vol. i. part ii. pp. 281—283., and Masch's Bibliotheca Sacra, part ii. vol. ii. pp. 320—322. The octavo reprints at Gottingen in 1774, and at Utrecht in 1775, are very inferior to the original edition. 1774, and at [ii.] Editions of Origen's Hexapla.

1. Hexaplorum Origensis que supersunt. Ex Manuscriptis et ex Libris editis eruit et Notis illustravit D. Bernardus de MONTFAUCON. Accedunt Opuscula quædam Origenis anecdota, et ad calcem Lexicon Hebraicum ex vaterum Interpretationibus concinnatum, itemque Lexicon Græcum, et alia. Parisiis, 1713. 2 vols. folio.

The best edition, unhappily very rare, of the remains of Origen's Hexapla. The first volume contains a very valuable preliminary disquisition on the Hebrew text, and on the different ancient Greek versions; together with a minute account of Origen's biblical versions; together with a minute account of Origen's biblical labours, and some inedited fragments of Origen, &c. To these succeed the remains of the Hexapla, from Genesis to the Book of Psalms inclusive. The second volume comprises the rest of the Hexapla to the end of the twelve minor prophets, together with Greek and Hebrew Lexicons to the Hexapla.

2. Hexaplorum Origenis quæ supersunt. Edidit, notisque illustravit Car. Frider. BARRIT. Lipsiæ et Lubecæ, 1769—70. 2 vols. 8vo.

Professor Bahrdt undertook this edition for those who could not afford to purchase Montfaucon's magnificent edition. He has omitted, as unnecessary, the translation of the fragments, the explanation of particular words occurring in the notes, and some scholia. He has improved the arrangement of the materials collected by Montfaucon, and has added some further fragments of Origen's Hexapla, from a Leipsic manuscript. Bahrdt has also given many additional notes, which however are not distinguished from those of Montfaucon. The Hebrew words are given in Greek characters. This edition was severely criticised by Fischer, in his Prolusiones de Versionibus, Græcis, p. 34. note.

The Fragments of the versions by Aquila, Theodotion, and Symmachus, collected by Morin and others, are printed in the editions of the Septuagint Version executed at Rome in 1587, at Frankfort in 1597, at London in 1653, at Leipsic in 1697, and at Francker in 1709. afford to purchase Montfaucon's magnificent edition.

- 3. Animadversionis, quibus Fragmenta Versionum Græcarum V. T. a Bern. Montefalconio collecta, illustrantur, [et] emendantur. Auctore Jo. Gottfr. Scarfenberg. Specimina duo Lipsie, 1776-81, 8vo.
- 4. Curæ Hexaplares in Jobum, e Codice Syriaco-Hexaplari Scripsit Henricus MIDDELDORPF. Ambrosio-Mediolanensi. Vratislaviæ, 1817, 4to.

[iii.] ANOTHER ANCIENT GREEK VERSION.

- 1. Nova Versio Græca Pentateuchi, ex unico S. Marci Bibliothecæ Codice Veneto. Edidit atque recensuit Chr. Frid. Ammon. Erlangæ, 1790-91. 3 vols. 8vo.
- 2. Nova Versio Græca Proverbiorum, Ecclesiastis, Cantici Canticorum, Ruthi, Threnorum, Danielis, et selectorum Pentateuchi Locorum. Ex unico S. Marci Bibliothecæ Codice Veneto nunc primum eruta, et notulis illustrata a Joanne Baptiste Cas pare D'Ansse de VILLOISON. Argentorati, 1784.

§ 3. ANCIENT ORIENTAL VERSIONS.

[i. THE SYRIAC VERSIONS.]

The Peschito or Old Syriac Version.

- 1. Biblia Syriaca Veteris et Novi Testamenti. Parisiis, 1645, folio. (In Le Jay's Polyglott Bible.)
- 2. Biblia Sacra Veteris et Novi Testamenti. Londini, 1657, folio. (In Bp. Walton's Polyglott Bible.)
- 3. Vetus Testamentum Syriace, eos tantum Libros sistens, qui in Canone Hebraico habentur, ordine vero, quoad fieri potuit, apud Syros usitato dispositas. In usum Ecclesiæ Syrorum Malabarensium, jussu Societatis Biblicæ recognovit, ad fidem codicum Manuscriptorum emendavit, edidit Samuel Lee, A.M. Linguæ Arabicæ apud Cantabrigienses Professor. Londini,

This edition was printed under the patronage of the Church Missionary Society, and at the expense of the British and Foreign Bible Society. Three manuscripts have been collated for this edi-Bible Society. Three manuscripts have been collated for this edition, viz. 1. The valuable manuscript brought by the Rev. Dr. Buthon, viz. I. The variable manuscript brought by the Rev. Dr. Buchanan from Travancore in the East Indies, collated by Professor Lee; 2. Another manuscript belonging to the Rev. Dr. Adam Clarke; and, 3. A manuscript of the Syriac Pentateuch found by Mr. (now Dr.) Lee in the Library of New College, Oxford. (Report of the Church Missionary Society for 1817—18, p. 154.)

4. Novum Testamentum, Syriacè, cura Alberti Widman-stadii. (Viennæ Austriacæ, 1555.) 4to.

The first edition of the Syriac New Testament: it is very rare. Dr. Masch has given a long account of it in his Bibliotheca Sacra, part ii. vol. i. pp. 70—79. There are copies dated Viennæ Austriacæ, 1562, 4to.; but they are the same edition with a new title-page.

5. Novum Domini Nostri Jesu Christi Testamentum Syriacum, cum Versione Latina; curà et studion Johannis Leusden et Caroli Schaaf. Ad omnes editiones diligenter recensitum, et variis lectionibus, mano labore collectis, adornatum. Secunda editio a mendis repurgata. Lugduni Batavorum, 1717, 4to.

The first edition appeared in 1708; but copies are most commonly to be met with bearing the date of 1709. Michaelis pronounces this to be "the very best edition of the Syriac New Testament. The very excellent Lexicon which is annexed to it will ever retain its value, being, as far as regards the New Testament, extremely accurate and complete, and supplying in some measure the place of a concordance." (Introd. to New Test. vol. ii. part i. p. 17.)

6. Textus Sacrorum Evangeliorum Versionis Simplicis Syriacæ, juxta Editionem Schaafianam, collatus cum duobus ejusdem vetustis Codd. MSS. in Bibliotheca Bodleiana repositis; nec non cum Cod. MS. Commentarii Gregorii Bar-Hebræi ibidem adservato, a Ricardo Jones. Oxonii, e Typographeo Clarendoniano,

This publication is necessary to complete Schaaf's edition; it has two fac-similes of the Syriac MSS. collated by the editor.

- 7. MICHAELIS (Joannis Davidis) Curæ in Versionem Syriacam Actuum Apostolicorum; cum Consectariis Criticis de Indole, Cognationibus, et usu Versionis Syriacæ Novi Fæderis. Gottingæ, 1755, 4to.
- 8. Novum Testamentum Syriacè, denuo recognitum, atque ad fidem Codicum Manuscriptorum emendatum. Londini, 1816, 4to.
- A beautiful edition, executed at the press of Mr. Richard Watts, for the use of the Syrian Christians in India, by whom it is stated to have been received with the utmost gratitude. This edition was corrected for the press, as far as the Acts of the Apostles, by the late Rev. Dr. Buchanan; and was completed by the Rev. Samuel Lee, A.M. [now D.D.], Professor of Arabic in the University of Cambridge. The expense of the edition was defrayed by the British and Foreign Bible Society. There is an interesting communication by Prof. Lee concerning this edition in Dr. Wait's translation of Hug's Introduction to the New Test. vol. i. pp. 368—370. notes. 370. notes.

The preceding are the principal editions of the Old Syriac Versions. For a more copious account of them and of various other editions, see Bp. Marsh's Translation of Michaelis's Introduction to the New Testament, vol. ii. part i. pp. 4–18. and part ii. pp. 536—546; also Masch's Bibliotheca Sacra, part ii. vol. i. pp. 71—102.

The Philoxenian Syriac Version.

- 1. Sacrorum Evangeliorum Versio Syriaca Philoxeniana, ex Codd. MSS. Ridleianis in Bibliotheca Collegii Novi Oxon. repositis; nunc primum edita, cum Interpretatione Latinâ et Annotationibus Josephi White. Oxonii, e Typographeo Clarendoniano, 1778. 2 tomis, 4to.
- 2. Actuum Apostolorum, et Epistolarum tam Catholicarum quam Paulinarum, Versio Syriaca Philoxeniana......cum Interpretatione Latinâ et Annotationibus Josephi White. Oxonii, e Typographeo Clarendoniano, 1799. 2 tomis, 4to.

The Syro-Estrangelo or Syriac Hexaplar Version.

1. Specimen ineditæ et Hexaplaris Bibliorum Versionis, Syro-Estranghelæ, cum simplici atque utriusque fontibus, Græco et Hebræo, collatæ cum duplici Latinâ versione et notis. Edidit, ac diatribam de rarissimo codice Ambrosiano, unde illud haustum est, præmisit Johannes Bern. Rosst. Parmæ, 1778, 8vo.

This specimen consists of the first psalm printed in six columns. The first contains the Greek text of the Septuagint; the second, the Syro-Estrangelo text; the third, the Latin text translated from the Septuagint; the fourth, the Hebrew text; the fifth, the Peschito or Old Syriac text above noticed; and the sixth, the Latin text translated from this latter version.

2. Codex Syriaco-Hexaplaris. Edidit Henricus Middeldorff. Berolini, 1831. 2 tomis, 4to.

Vol. I. contains the Syriac text of the books of Kings and Chronicles, Isaiah, the twelve Minor Prophets, Proverbs, Job, Song of Songs, the Lamentations of Jeremiah, and Ecclesiastes. Vol. II. contains the critical commentary of the learned editor.

[ii.] THE ARABIC VERSION.

- 1. Biblia Arabica Veteris et Novi Testamenti. Parisiis, 1645, folio. (In Le Jay's Polyglott Bible.)
- 2. Biblia Arabica Veteris et Novi Testamenti. Londini, 1657, folio. (In Bp. Walton's Polyglott Bible.)
- 3. Biblia Sacra Arabica, Sacra Congregationis de Propaganda Fide jussu edita in usum Ecclesiarum Orientalium: additis è Regione Bibliis Latinis Vulgatis. Romæ, 1671. 3 tomis, folio.

This edition was published under the inspection of Sergius Risius, the Romish Bishop of Damascus. It is in Arabic and Latin. "But it is of no use, either to a critic or an expositor of the New Testament, being altered from the Latin Version." (Michaelis, vol. ii. part i. p. 93.)

4. The Holy Bible, containing the Old and New Testaments in the Arabic Language. Newcastle-upon-Tyne, 1811, 4to.

Twelve copies of this beautifully executed edition were printed in large folio for presents: one of these is deposited in the British Museum.

5. Novum D. N. Jesu Christi Testamentum, Arabice, ex Bibliotheca Leidensi; edente Thoma Erpenio. In Typographia Erpeniana Linguarum Orientalium. [Lugduni Batavorum] Anno 1616, 4to.

Erpenius published this edition of the Arabic New Testament, from a manuscript said to be written A. D. 1342, in the monastery of Saint John, in the desert of Thebaïs: he has copied his manuscript with singular accuracy, even where there appeared to be grammatical errors. Michaelis says that this is the most elegant, faithful, and genuine edition of the Arabic version, but is unfortunately very difficult to be procured.

6. Novum Testamentum Arabicum. Londini, 1727, 4to.

This edition, which consisted of ten thousand copies, was printed at the expense of the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge, for the use of the Christians in Asia. Its basis is the text of the Paris and London Polyglotts: but the editor, Solomon Negri, has altered it in those passages which vary from the reading of our present Greek text. It is therefore of no use either in the criticism or interpretation of the New Testament. The same remark is applicable to Quatuor Evangelia, Arabice, Romæ, e Typographia Medicea, Romæ, 1591, folio.

"This edition was printed at Rome in 1590 and 1591 in the Medicean printing-house: 1590 stands on the title-page, 1591 in the subscription: to some of the copies is annexed a Latin translation." (Michaelis) This version appears to have been made from the Greek text. The Roman edition of the Four Gospels was reprinted with some corrections in the Paris Polyglott, and again with very numerous corrections from manuscripts by Bishop Walton in the London Polyglott.

For more particular accounts of the preceding and of other editions of the Arabic Versions of the Old and New Testament, or of detached portions thereof, the reader is referred to Masch, part it. vol. i. pp. 110—139.; Michaelis's Introduction, vol. ii. part i. pp. 84—94.; Schnurrer's Bibliotheca Arabica, pp. 389—397.; and Hug's Introduction by Dr. Wait, vol. i. pp. 445—454.

8. Commentatio Critica, exhibens e Bibliotheca Oxoniensi Bodleiana Specimina Versionum Pentateuchi septem Arabicarum, nondum editarum, cum Observationibus. Scripsit Henricus Eberhardus Gottlob Paulus. Jenæ, 1789, 8vo.

[iii.] THE PERSIC VERSION.

 Pentateuchi Versio Persica, interprete Jacobo filio Joseph Tavos, seu Tawsensi, Judæo. Constantinopoli, 1546, folio.

This extremely rare edition, which is printed with Hebrew types, and accompanied with the Hebrew text, is reprinted in the fourth volume of the London Polyglott, with Persian characters, and a Latin translation.

- 2. Quatuor Evangeliorum Domini nostri Jesu Christi, Versio Persica Syriacam et Arabicam suavissime reddens: ad verba et mentem Græci Textûs fideliter et venuste concinnata.....Per Abrahamum Whelocum. Londini, 1657, folio.
- 3. Evangelia Quatuor Persicè, interprete Symone F. Joseph Taurinensi, juxta codicem Pocockianum, cum Versione Latina Samuelis Clerici. Londini, 1657, folio. (In the fifth volume of Bp. Walton's Polyglott Bible.)

[iv.] THE EGYPTIAN VERSIONS.

Coptic, or Dialect of Lower Egypt.

- 1. Quinque Libri Moysis Prophetæ in Lingua Ægyptiaca. Ex MSS. Vaticano, Parisiensi, et Bodleiano descripsit, ac Latine vertit David WILKINS. Londini, 1731, 4to.
 - 2. Psalterium Coptico-Arabicum. Romæ, 1744, 4to.
- 3. Psalterium Alexandrinum Coptico-Arabicum. Romæ, 1749, 4to.

Both these editions of the Coptic Psalter were printed at the expense of the Congregation de Propaganda Fide at Rome, for the benefit of the Coptic Christians in Egypt. The Arabic version is placed by the side of the Coptic text.

4. Novum Testamentum Ægyptium, vulgo Copticum, ex MSS. Bodleianis descripsit, cum Vaticanis et Parisiensibus contulit, et in Latinum Sermonem convertit David WILKINS. Oxonii, e Theatro Sheldoniano, 1716, 4to.

A fragment of the Lamentations of Jeremiah (ch. iv. 22. and ch. v.) and some fragments of the prophet's epistle to the Jewish captives at Babylon, forming the sixth chapter of the apocryphal book of Baruch, are printed in Coptic, with a literal Latin version, by M. Quarremère, in his Recherches sur la Langue et Littérature de l'Egypte, pp. 228—246. (Paris, 1804), who has illustrated them with numerous learned notes.

Sahidic, or Dialect of Upper Egypt.

5. Appendix ad Editionem Novi Testamenti Græci e Codice Alexandrino descripti a G. C. Woide: in quâ continentur Fragmenta Novi Testamenti, juxta Interpretationem Dialecti Superioris Ægypti, quæ Thebaica vel Sahidica appellatur, e Codd. Oxoniens. maxima ex parte desumpta: cum Dissertatione de Versione Ægyptiaca, quibus subjicitur Codicis Vaticani Collatio. Oxonii, e Typographeo Clarendoniano. 1799, folio.

This work, which contains the completest collection of fragments of the Sahidic Version, was prepared for the press by Dr. Woide, and published after his death by the Rev. Dr. Ford.

6. Friderici MÜNTER Commentatio de Indole Versionis Novi Testamenti Sahidicæ. Accedunt Fragmenta Epistolarum Paulli ad Timotheum, ex Membranis Sahidicis Musei Borgiani, Velitris. Hafniæ, 1789, 4to.

Bashmouric, or Dialect of Bashmour, a Province of the Delta.

7. Fragmentum Evangelii S. Joannis Græco-Coptico-Thebaicum, ex Museo Borgiano, Latine versum et Notis illustratum ab Augustino Antonio Georgio. Romæ, 1789, 4to.

There is an interesting account of this publication in the Analytical Review, vol. xvi. pp. 418—421.

8. Fragmenta Basmurico-Coptica Veteris et Novi Testamenti, quæ in Museo Borgiano Velitris asservantur, cum reliquis Versionibus Ægyptiis contulit, Latine vertit, nec non criticis et philologicis adnotationibus illustravit, W. F. ENGELBRETH. Hafniæ, 1816, 4to.

This publication contains fragments of the first and fifth chapters of the Prophecies of Isaiah, of the fourth chapter of St. John's Gospel, of St. Paul's first Epistle to the Corinthians, the Epistles to the Ephssians and to Philemon, the first Epistle to the Thessalonians, and of the Epistle to the Hebrews, in the Bashmourie, Thebaic, and Memphtie Dialects, with a literal Latin version. The corresponding Greek Text is placed at the foot of the page. Notes are subjoined pointing out the various readings, with critical remarks.

[v.] ETHIOPIC VERSION.

No entire Ethiopic Bible has been printed. Masch (Bibl. Sacr. part ii. vol. i. pp. 145-155.) has given an account of the various portions of the Old and New Testament which have appeared. Of these the following are most worthy of notice:-

1. Psalmi et Canticorum Æthiopice. Studio Johannis Por-KEN. Romæ, 1513, 4to.

The first portion of the Ethiopic Scriptures ever printed. It is very rare: it was reprinted at Cologne in 1518, in folio.

2. Psalterium Æthiopice. Londini, 1657. folio.

In the third volume of Bp. Walton's Polyglott Bible: the text is taken from Potken's two editions, with various readings, and notes by Dr. Edmund Castell.

3. Testamentum Novum; cum Epistola Pauli ad Hebræos Quæ omnia Fr. Petrus Æthiops, auxilio piorum, sedente Paulo III. Pont. Max. et Claudio illius regni imperatore, imprimi curavit anno salutis 1548. [Romæ] 4to.

This edition, which is of extreme rarity, is divided into two vo-lumes and four separate parts, viz. 1. The Gospels, the translation lumes and four separate parts, viz. 1. The Gospels, the translation of which is much superior to that of the Epistles, where the translator appears to have been unequal to the task. (The Epistle to the Hebrews is placed after the Gospels, because it was the only one of St. Paul's Epistles which they had received when they put to press the Gospels, Apocalypse, the Catholic Epistles, and the Acts);—2. The Acts of the Apostles;—3. The fourteen Epistles of Saint Paul;—4. The seven Catholic Epistles;—The Apocalypse is added as an Appendix. The MS. of the Acts being very imperfect, its chasms were supplied from the Vulgate. The Roman edition was reprinted in the London Polyglott; and a Latin translation of the Ethiopic version was published by Professor Bode at Brunswick, in 1752—1755, in 2 vols. 4to. (Michaelis, vol. ii. pp. 95—98. 610—614. Masch, part ii. vol. i. pp. 152, 153.)

4. Evangelia Sancta Æthiopica. Ad Codicum Manuscriptorum fidem edidit Thomas Pell Platt, A. M. Londini, 1826, 4to.

[vi.] THE ARMENIAN VERSION.

Biblia, Armenice. Venetiis, 1805, 4to.

The first edition of the Armenian Bible was printed at Amsterdam in 1666, 4to., and was not very cordially received by the Armenian Christians, in consequence of its editor Uscan, Archbishop of Erivan, having altered it conformably to the Romish Vulgate Latin version. The second edition, which was printed at Constantinople in 1705, also in 4to., is much more valuable: it was collated for Dr. Holmes's Edition of the Septuagint. Separate editions of the Armenian New Testament were printed at Amsterdam in 1666 and 1698, and another at Venice in 1789, which was superintended by Dr. Zohrab, a learned Armenian divine, who had collated a few manuscripts for it, and who accompanied it with some short notes. In this impression, which was reprinted verbatim in 1816, the editor marked I John v. 7. with an asterisk.

In 1805, the same learned editor published at Venice, at the expense of the college of the monks of St. Lazarus, his critical edition of the entire Armenian Bible, for which he made use of sixty-nine manuscripts. viz. eight of the entire Bible, fifteen of the Psalms, thirty-two of the Gospels, and fourteen of the Epistles and Acts of the Apostles. He took for the basis of this edition, that manuscript the Apostles. He took for the basis of this edition, that manuscript of the whole Bible, which appeared to be the most ancient and accurate: such errors as were discovered he corrected by means of other copies; and in the margin he inserted the various readings, together with the number of manuscripts by which they were supported, and a few critical explanations, when necessary. In this edition, Dr. Zohrab has expunged 1 John v. 7., it being unsupported by any of the manuscripts which he had collated. (Masch, part in vol. i. pp. 173—180. Cellerier, Introduction au Nouv. Test. pp. 185, 186.) In 1825, Dr. Z. published a neat edition of the New Testament in ancient and modern Armenian, in one volume, 8vo. The modern version is said to be very exact and literal.

§ 4. ANCIENT WESTERN VERSIONS.

[i.] THE LATIN VERSIONS.

Ante-Hieronymian Versions, or those made before the time of Jerome.

1. Vetvs Testamentvm secvndvm LXX Latine redditvm, et ex avtoritate Sixti V. Pont. Max. editvm. Additvs est Index Dictionvm et Loquutionum Hebraicarum, Græcarum, Latinarum, quarum observatio visa est non inutilis futura. Romæ, in Ædibvs Popvli Romani, 1588, folio.

This edition was designed as a companion to the celebrated edition of the Septuagint, printed at Rome in 1586, and described in page 23, ofthis Appendix. The editor, Flaminio Nobili, with the assistance of Antonio Agelli, collected with infinite labour all the fragments of the Ante-Hieronymian versions, which he found cited in the works of the ancient Latin Fathers: the deficient passages the deficient passages and the state of the ancient Latin Fathers. he translated de novo into Latin, a circumstance which diminishes the value of his work. (Masch, part ii. vol. iii. pp. 6, 7.) This vo-lume is extremely rare: a copy of it is in the Library of the British Museum.

2. Bibliorum Sacrorum Latinæ Versiones Antiquæ, seu Vetus Italica, et ceteræ quæcunque in Codicibus MSS, et Antiquorum Libris reperiri potuerunt: quæ cum Vulgata Latina et cum Textu Græco comparantur. Accedunt Præfationes, Observationis, ac Notæ, Indexque novus ad Vulgatam è regione editam, idemque locupletissimus. Operà et studio D. Petri Sabatien. Remis, 174-349. 3 tomis, folio.

The first two volumes contain the Old Testament, and the apo-cryphal books. There are three versions of the Psalms, viz the Old Italic Version, that of Jerome, and the modern Vulgate Version. The New Testament forms the third volume. The Greek-Latin The New Testament forms the third volume. The Greek-Latin MSS. consulted by Sabatier, having chasms, he has supplied them from the modern Latin Vulgate, and has sometimes added in the notes quotations from the Latin Fathers. For a full description of this magnificent work, see Masch, part ii. vol. iii. pp. 9, 10.

3. Evangeliarium Quadruplex Latinæ Versionis Antiquæ, seu Veteris Italicæ, editum ex Codicibus Manuscriptis, aureis, argenteis, purpureis, aliisque plusquam millenariæ antiquitatis: à Josepho Blanchino. Romæ, 1749. 2 tomis, folio.

A splendid edition of the four Gospels, taken from five manu-A splendid edition of the four Gospels, taken from five manuscripts of the old Italic version, viz. the codices Vercellensis, Veronensis, Corbeiensis, Brixianus, and Forojuliensis. But Michaelis has reduced these to four, as the last-cited MS. contains only the corrected version of Jerome, and therefore ought not to have been printed with the others. (Introd. to New Test. vol. ii. p. 109.)

For bibliographical details of this edition, as well as of other portions of the Ante-Hieronymian versions, the reader is referred to Masch part ii vol. iii. p. 16-19 to Masch, part ii. vol. iii. pp. 16-19.

4. Codex Quatuor Evangeliorum Latinus Rehdigerianus, Mattheus et Marcus, cum Textu Græco et Editione Vulgata collatus à Joh. Ephr. Scheibel. Vratislaviæ, 1763. 4to.

The manuscript, the text of which is here published, is preserved in the library belonging to the church of St. Elizabeth at Breslau.

5. Fragmenta Versionis Antiquæ Latinæ Ante-Hieronymianæ Prophetarum Jeremiæ, Ezechielis, Danielis, et Hoseæ, e Codice Rescripto Bibliothecæ Wirceburgensis. Edidit Dr. Fridericus MÜNTER. Hafniæ, 1821, 8vo. (In the Miscellanea Hafniensia Theologici et Philologici Argumenti, tom. ii. fascic. i. pp. 81— 148.)

The Codex Rescriptus, whence these fragments of an Ante-Hieronymian version have been transcribed, was discovered by Dr. Feder, in the library of the university of Wurtzburg; who copied nearly all that is legible, comprising portions of the prophecies of Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Daniel, and Hosea. Dr. Feder having allowed Dr. Frederick Münter, bishop of Seeland, to make use of his labours, that learned prelate has here printed the fragments in question. They differ materially from the fragments occurring in Sabatier's splendid publication above noticed. Bp. Münter refers the date of the original writing to the sixth or seventh century.

The Version of Jerome.

S. Eusebii Hieronymi Stridonensis Presbyteri Divina Bibliotheca ante hac inedita; complectens Translationes Latinas Veteris et Novi Testamenti, tum ex Hebræis tum Græcis fontibus derivatas, innumera quoque scholia marginalia antiquissima Hebræi cujusdam scriptoris anonymi, Hebræa voces pressius experimentis. Studio et Labore Monachorum ordinis S. Benedicti e congregatione S. Mauri. Parisiis, 1693, folio. (The first volume of the Benedictine edition of Jerome's works.)

For an account of Jerome's biblical labours, see Part I. Chap. II. Sect. IV. of the first volume. This edition is printed from six manuscripts. Editions of other portions of Jerome's translation are described by Masch, part ii. vol. iii. pp. 21-23.

The Latin Vulgate Version.

The printed editions of the Latin Vulgate are so very numerous, that two or three of the most important, or most accessible, can only be here noticed. A particular description of all the editions is given by Masch, part ii. vol. iii. pp. 58—372.; and of the principal editions, by Brunet, Manuel du Libraire, tom. i. art. Biblia. Two hundred and eventeen Latin Bibles, principally of the Vulgate version (many of which are of extreme rarity), are described in the Bibl. Sussex. vol. i. part ii. pp. 288 -510.

Romæ, ex Typographia Apostolica Vaticana, folio.

After the preceding title we read the following on an engraved title-page:

"Biblia Sacræ Vulgatæ Editionis ad Concilii Tridentini præscriptum emendata et a Sixto V. P. M. recognita et approbata. Romæ, ex Typographia Apostolica Vaticana, M. D. XC Notwithstanding the great pains bestowed upon this edition, which by a bull was authoritatively declared to be the standard which by a bull was authoritatively declared to be the standard of all future impressions, its extreme incorrectness excited general discontent. At first, it was attempted to remedy the evil by printing the requisite corrections on small slips of paper, which were to be pasted over the incorrect passages: but Gregory XIV., who succeeded Sixtus V. in the pontificate, found it more convenient to suppress the remaining copies of this edition, which has therefore become of extreme rarity. (Renouard, Annales de l'Imprimerie des become of extreme rarity. (I Aldes, tom. ii. pp. 164-166.

2. Biblia Sacræ Vulgatæ Editionis Sixti V. Pontificis Max. jussu recognita et edita. Rome, ex Typographia Apostolica Vaticana. 1592, folio.

This edition was printed under the auspices of Clement VIII. the successor of Sixtus V., whose constitution declares it to be the only authentic edition: it is the basis of all subsequent editions, printed for the members of the Romish church. For an account the fatal variances between these two revisions, see Part I. Chap. III. Sect. II. § 4. of the first volume. A third edition was printed in 1593, in 4to. They are both very rare. Copies of them, as well as of the Sixtine edition, are in the British Museum.

3. Bibliorum Sacrorum Vulgatæ Versionis Editio. Christianissimi Regis ad Institutionem Serenissimi Delphini. Parisiis, excudebat Fr. Amb. Didot, 1785. 2 tomis, 4to.

A chef-d'œuvre of typography: only two-hundred and fifty copies were printed with the words "ad Institutionem Serenissimi Delphini" in the title-page. These bear a higher price than the other quarto copies, which were dedicated to the clergy of France. Peignot states, that two copies of this edition were printed on vel-There are copies of the same edition in eight volumes, with a dedication to the Gallican clergy, by the printer, F. A. Didot.

4. Biblia Sacra Vulgatæ Editionis Sixti Quinti Pont. Max. jussu recognita atque edita Romæ ex Typographia Apostolica Vaticana MDXCIII. Editio nova, auctoritate summi pontificis Leonis XII. excusa. Francofurti a. M. [ad Mœnum], 1826, Royal 8vo.

A beautiful and correct edition, which contains all the prefatory and other preliminary matter of the Roman edition; and, besides the ordinary divisions of chapters and verses, it also has the old subdivisions of A. B. C., &c., introduced by Cardinal Hugo, of which an account is given in the first volume.

5. Biblia Sacra Vulgatæ Editionis, Sixti. V. Pont. Max. jussu recognita, et Clementis VIII. auctoritate edita. Paris, 1828, 8vo. A neat edition from the press of F. Didot.

The Latin Vulgate is found in all the Polyglott editions of the Bible; and various other editions may be met with, the price of which varies from twelve shillings to three or four guineas and upwards, according to their rarity and condition.

[ii.] GOTHIC VERSION.

1. Sacrorum Evangeliorum Versio Gothica ex Codice Argenteo emendata atque suppleta, cum Interpretatione Latina et Annotationibus Erici Benzelii non ita pridem Archiepiscopi Upsaliensis. Edidit, Observationes suas adjecit, et Grammaticam Gothicam præmisit Edwardus Lye. Oxonii, e Typographeo Clarendoniano. 1750, 4to.

The best edition of the Gothic version of the four Gospels. The The best edition of the Gothic version of the four Gospels. The first appeared at Dordrecht, under the superintendence of Francis Junius in 1665. 4to. which has the Anglo-Saxon version annexed. For the second edition we are indebted to George Stiernhelm, at Stockholm, in 1671, who has added the Swedish, Icelandic, and Latin Vulgate versions to the translation of Ulphilas. This third edition was prepared for the press by the learned Eric Benzel, archbishop of Upsal (who made a new copy from the original manuscript); and was published after his decease by Mr. Lye, at Oxford, in 1760, in small folio. It is executed in Gothic letters; the errors of the preceding editions are corrected; and many of the various lections, with which the Gothic version furnishes the Greek Testament, are remarked in the notes.

Ulphilæ Versio Gothica nonnullorum Capitum Epistolæ Pauli ad Romanos, e Cod. Biblioth. Guelpherbytanæ, cum commentariis Francisci Antonii KNITTEL. [1762,] 4to.

The fragment of the Gothic version, printed in this publication,

¹ There are copies dated in 1684; but they are said by Masch to be the same edition with a new title-page. Part. ii. vol. iii. p. 706.

1. Biblia Sacra Vulgatæ Editionis, tribus tomis distincta. has been reprinted, in the following article, and also in the appendix to the second volume of Mr. Lye's Saxon and Gothic Latin Dictionary.

3. Fragmenta Versionis Ulphilanæ, continentia Particulas aliquot Epistolæ, Pauli ad Romanos, ex Codice Rescripto Bibliothecæ Guelpherbytanæ eruta, et a Francisco Antonio Knittel edita, cum aliquot annotationibus typis reddita a Johanne Ihre. Accedunt due Dissertationes ad Philologiam Mœso-Gothicam spectantes. Upsaliæ, 1763, 4to.

4. Johannis ab Ihre Scripta Versionem Ulphilanam et Linguam Mœso-Gothicam illustrantia, ab ipso doctissimo auctore emendata, novisque accessionibus aucta, jam vero ob præstantiam ac raritatem collecta, et unà cum aliis scriptis similis argumenti edita, ab Antonio Friderico Busching. Berolini, 1773, 4to.

This volume, which is not of very frequent occurrence, contains Ihre's learned Disquisition, entitled Ulphilas Illustratus; various fragments of Ulphilas's version; five dissertations illustrative of them; a specimen of a Glossarium Ulphilanum, with prefaces prefered to it. It an appropriate the child beauty of the control of the cont fixed to it. In an appendix, the editor has subjoined dissertations on Ulphilas, by Heupelius (with remarks on Heupelius by Oelrichs), Esberg, and Sædermann; specimens of critical observations on the old Gothic translation of the Gospels, by John Gordon, a learned Scottish advocate; and a dissertation by Wachter, on the language of the Codex Argenteus.

5. Ulfilas Gothische Bibel-ubersetzung, die alteste Germanische Urkunde, nach Ihre'ns Text; mit einer grammatischwortlichen Lateinischen Uebersetzung, und einem Glossar, ausgearbeitet von Friedrich Karl Fulda; das Glossar umgearbeitet von W. F. H. REINWALD; und den Text nach Ihre'ns genauer abschrift der silbernen Handschrift in Upsal, sorgfaltig berichtigt, samt einer historisch-kritischen Einleitung, versehen und herausgegeben von Johann Christian ZAHN. Weissenfels, 1805, 4to.

A learned preface by J. C. Zahn, in the German language, contains a history of the Gothic version, and of the various preceding editions of its fragments. To this succeed the fragments themselves, in the Roman character. The text of them is given from a very beautiful and exact copy, which the celebrated scholar Ihre had procured to be made under his own inspection, and with the had procured to be made under his own inspection, and with the design of printing it. The editor has placed thre's Latin translation by the side of the text; and has also added an interlineary Latin version, critical notes placed at the foot of each page, and an historical introduction. These are followed by a Grammar of the Gothic language by F. K. Fulda, and by a Gothic Glossary compiled by W. F. H. Reinwald. "The text is carefully given; the grammatical and critical remarks, added in the margin below, are short directly applied to the point and well conceived and are short, directly applied to the point, and well conceived; and the whole of the rich apparatus of the book is valuable."—(Hug's Introd. to the New Test. by Dr. Wait, vol. i. pp. 487, 488.) A copy of this curious and valuable work is in the library of the British Museum.

6. The Gothic Gospel of Saint Matthew, from the Codex Argenteus of the fourth Century; with the corresponding English or Saxon, from the Durham Book of the eighth Century, in Roman Characters; a literal English Lesson of each; and Notes, Illustrations, and Etymological Disquisitions on Organic Principles. By Samuel HENSHALL, M.A. London, 1807, 8vo.

7. Ulphilæ Partium Ineditarum, in Ambrosianis Palimpsestis ab Angelo Maio repertarum, Specimen, conjunctis curis ejusdem Maii et Caroli Octavii Castilionæi editum. Mediolañi, 1819,

This work is illustrated by two plates; the first containing fac-similes of the Codices Rescripti discovered in the Ambrosian Library (of which some account has already been given), and the other containing a fac-simile specimen of a Greek mathematical treatise, in which the names of Archimedes and Apollonius are mentioned, and which Signor Maï discovered under some Lombard Latin writing of great antiquity.

8. Ulphilæ Gothica Versio Epistolæ Divi Pauli ad Corinthios secundæ, quam ex Ambrosianâ Bibliothecâ Palimpsestis depromptam, cum Interpretatione, Adnotationibus, Glossario, edidit Carolus Octavius Castillion Eus. Mediolani, 1829, 4to.

9. Evangelii secundum Matthæum Versio Francica sæculi IX. necnon Gothica sæc. IV. quoad superest. Edidit J. Andraæs SCHMELLER. Stuttgart und Tubingen, 1827, 8vo.

This work was published by Professor Schmeller, to illustrate his lectures on the German Language and Literature, delivered in the University of Munich. It contains the Gospel of St. Matthew in the Frankish dialect, from a MS. of Tatian's Harmony, of the ninth century, preserved in the Library at St. Gall, in Switzerland. The fragments of the Gothic Version are given according to the Codex Argenteus, and the remains of the Gothic Version, discovered by Mai and Count Castiglioni. A comparison of these two versions will show, that the Frankish and Gothic languages are only dialects of the same ancient language, which in the lapse of ages have gradually deviated from each other.

fessors and h worsh is—the sisted,

PAC SIMILL OF THE BIBLIA PAUPERUM

A contract to the second second

[iii.] THE SCLAVONIC VERSION.

Wiwlia, sinetz Knigi, wetchago i nowago sawieta pojasiku slowensku.-The Bible, that is to say, the Books of the Old and Testament in the Sclavonic language. Ostrog, 1581, folio.

This is the editio princeps of the entire Sclavonic Bible: an in-This is the editio princeps of the entire Sclavonic Bible: an interesting account of various previous editions of detached portions of the Old and New Testament, as well as of the pains bestowed in order to render this impression correct, will be found in Dr. Henderson's Biblicial Researches, pp. 78—82. Clement (Biblioth Curieuse, tom. iii. pp. 441—444.) has given a minute description of it; to which Dr. Dibdin acknowledges himself indebted for part of his account of Earl Spencer's copy. (Bibliotheea Spenceriana, vol., i. pp. 90—93.) But Dr. Henderson, from his residence in Russia, and his critical acquaintance with the Sclavonic language, has been enabled to add much important information (which does not admit of abridgment) relative to this and to subsequent edinot admit of abridgment) relative to this and to subsequent ediof the Sclavonic version, which was utterly unknown to bibliographers. See his Biblical Researches, pp. 83–86. 92 - 103.

[iv.] THE ANGLO-SAXON VERSIONS.

1. Heptateuchus, Liber Job, et Evangelium Nicodemi, Anglo-Saxonice. Historiæ Judith Fragmentum, Dano-Saxonice. Edidit nunc primum ex MSS. Codicibus Edwardus Thwaites. Oxoniæ, 1699, 8vo.

Oxoniæ, 1699, 8vo.

The Anglo-Saxon version of the Heptateuch, that is, of the five books of Moses and the books of Joshua and Judges, was made towards the close of the tenth century by Ælfric, archbishop of Canterbury; and was published by Mr. Thwaites from an unique manuscript preserved in the Bodleian Library. The book of Job, also translated by Ælfric, was printed from a transcript of a MS. in the Cottonian Library (now in the British Museum); and the apocryphal Gospel of Nicodemus, from Junius's copy of the original manuscript in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge. The Danish-Saxon version of the book of Judith (a fragment of which is given in the publication now under notice) was made during the time when England groaned under the yoke of the Danish kings. A few notes on Ælfric's preface, and some various readings collected from an Anglo-Saxon fragment of the book of Exodus, and the pseudo-gospel of Nicodemus, close this curious and rare volume. and rare volume.

- 2. Psalterium Davidis Latino-Saxonicum Vetus, a Johanne Spelmanno, D. Henrici fil. editum e vetustissimo exemplari MS. in Bibliotheca ipsius Henrici, et cum tribus aliis non multo minus vetustis collatum. Londini, 1640, 4to.
- 3. The Gospels of the fower Euangelistes translated in the olde Saxons tyme out of Latin into the vulgare toung of the Saxons, newly collected out of auncient Monumentes of the sayd Saxons, and now published for testimonie of the same. London, printed by John Daye. 1571, 4to.

The Anglo-Saxon text is divided into chapters, and is accompanied by the English version then in use, in a parallel column, divided into chapters and verses, "which," it is stated in a prefatory note, "was observed for the better understanding of the reader." The editor of this now rare volume was Matthew Parker; it has a preface, written by the celebrated martyrologist, John Foxe, by whom it is dedicated to Queen Elizabeth.

Two other editions of the Anglo-Saxon Gospels have been printed, viz. by William Lisle, in 4to., London, 1658; and by Thomas Marshall, in 4to., Dordrecht, 1665, with the Mæso-Gothic Of the last edition there are copies, with Amsterdam, 1681, in the title; but these are the same edition, with a new title-page.

SECTION VI.

MODERN VERSIONS OF THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.

- § 1. GENERAL OBSERVATIONS ON THE CIRCULATION OF THE SCRIPTURES.
- I. Scarcity and high prices of the Scriptures .- II. Rude attempts to convey an idea of their contents to the poor and illiterate.

 —Account of the BIBLIA PAUPERUM.—III. Number and classification of the translations of the Bible into modern languages.
- I. In the early ages of Christianity, however anxious its professors must have been to become possessed of the sacred volume, and however widely it was read in their assemblies for divine worship, still the publication of a version was not what it now is-the emission of thousands of copies into the world. It consisted, in a great measure, in translators permitting their manuscripts to be transcribed by others; and so long as the tedious process of copying was the only one which could be resorted to, exemplars of the sacred writings must have been multiplied very slowly. Before the inventions of paper and printing, manuscripts were the only books in use, and bore such excessively high prices, especially those which were voluminous, that few besides the most opulent could afford to purchase them: even monasteries of some consideration had frequently only a missal. So long as the Roman empire subsisted in Europe, the reading of the Scriptures in Latin universally prevailed: but, in consequence of the irruptions of the barbarous nations, and the erection of new monarchies upon the ruins of the Roman power, the Latin language became so altered and corrupted, as no longer to be intelligible by the multitude, and at length it fell into disuse, except among the ecclesiastics.

In the eighth and ninth centuries, when the Vulgate Latin version had ceased to be generally understood, there is no reason to suspect any intention in the Church of Rome to deprive the laity of the Scriptures. "Translations were freely made, although the acts of the saints were generally deemed more instructive, Louis the Debonnair is said to have caused a German version of the New Testament to be made. Otfrid, in the same" (that is, the ninth) "century, rendered the Gospels, or rather abridged them, into German verse: this work is still extant, and is in several respects an object of curiosity. In the eleventh or twelfth century, we find translations of the Psalms, Job, Kings, and the Maccabees, into French. But, after the diffusion of heretical principles, it became expedient to secure the orthodox faith from lawless interpretation. Accordingly the council of Thoulouse, in 1229, prohibited the laity from possessing the Scriptures; and this prohibition was frequently repeated upon subsequent occa-

II. Although the invention of paper, in the close of the thirteenth or early in the fourteenth century, rendered the transcription of books less expensive, yet their cost necessarily placed them out of the reach of the middling and lower classes, who (it is well known) were immersed in the deepest ignorance. Means, however, were subsequently devised, in order to convey a rude idea of the leading facts of Scripture, by means of the Block Books, or Books of Images, as they are termed by Bibliographers, of which the following notice may not be unacceptable to the reader.

The manufacturers of playing cards, which were first invented³ and painted in the fourteenth century, had in the following century begun to engrave on wood the images of the saints, to which they afterwards added some verses or sentences analogous to the subject. As the art of engraving on wood proceeded, its professors at length composed historical subjects, chiefly (if not entirely) taken from the Scriptures, with a text or explanation engraved on the same blocks. These form the Books of Images, or Block Books just mentioned: they were printed from wooden blocks; one side of the leaf only is impressed, and the corresponding text is placed below, beside, or proceeding out of, the mouth of the figures introduced.

Of all the Xylographic works, that is, such as are printed from wooden blocks, the BIBLIA PAUPERUM is perhaps the rarest, as well as the most ancient; it is a manual, or kind of catechism of the Bible, for the use of young persons, and of the common people, whence it derives its name-Biblia Pauperum-the Bible of the Poor; who were thus enabled to acquire, at a comparatively low price, an imperfect knowledge of some of the events recorded in the Scriptures. Being much in use, the few copies of it which are at present to be found in the libraries of the curious are for the most part either mutilated or in bad condition. The extreme rarity of this book, and the circumstances under which it was produced, concur to impart a high degree of interest to it.

The Biblia Pauperum consists of forty plates, with extracts and sentences analogous to the figures and images represented therein: the whole are engraven on wood, on one side of the leaves of paper; so that, when folded, they are placed opposite to each other. Thus, as the white sides of the leaves may be cemented together, the total number is reduced to twenty, a They appear to have been first invented in 1390, by Jacquemin Gringonneur, a painter at Paris, for the amusement of Charles VI. king of France, who had fallen into a confirmed melancholy, bordering on insanity. Rees's Cyclopædia, vol. vi. article Cards.

¹ Concerning the rarity and high prices of books during the dark ages, the reader will find several authority anecdotes in the first volume of an "Introduction to the Study of Bibliography," (pp. 345-349.), by the author

² Hallam's View of Europe during the Middle Ages, vol. ii. p. 536. 4to.

because the first and last page remain blank. Copies, however, are sometimes found, the leaves of which, not having been cemented on their blank side, are forty in number, like the plates. Each plate or page contains four busts, two at the top, and two at the bottom, together with three historical subjects: the two upper busts represent the prophets or other persons whose names are always written beneath them; the two lower busts are anonymous. The middle of the plates, which are all marked by letters of the alphabet in the centre of the upper compartment, is occupied by three historical pictures, one of which is taken from the New Testament: this is the type or principal subject, and occupies the centre of the page, between the two antitypes or other subjects which allude to it. The inscriptions which occur at the top and bottom of the page, consist of texts of Scripture and Leonine verses.

Thus in the fortieth plate, of which our engraving is a copy,2 the two busts of David and Isaiah are placed in the middle of the upper part of the page, between two passages of the Bible. The first of these, on the left of those prophets, is partly taken from the Song of Solomon (chap. v. 7, 8.), and runs thus:-Legitur in Cantico Canticorum quarto capite, quod (or quo) sponsus alloquitur sponsam, et eam sumendo dixit; "Tota pulchra et amica mea, et macula non est in te. Veni, amica mea; veni, coronabere." Sponsus verus iste est Christus; qui, in assumendo eam sponsam, que est anime sine macula omnis peccati, et introducit eam in requiem eternam, et coronat cum corona immortalitatis.3

The second passage, which is on the right of David and Isaiah, is taken from the Book of Revelation, and runs thus:-Legitur in Apocalypsi xxio. capite, quod angelus Dei apprehendit Jhoannem Evangelistam, cum esset in spiritu, et volens sibi ostendere archana Dei dixit ad eum; "Veni, et ostendam, tibi sponsam, uxorem agni." Angelus loquitur ad omnes in generali, ut veniant ad auscultandum in spiritu agnum innocentem Christum, animam innocentem coronantem.

Beneath the bust of David, which is indicated by his name, is a scroll proceeding from his hand inscribed Tamquam sponsus dominus procedens de thalamo suo. [See Ps. xix. 5. Vulgate Version.]

Beneath Isaiah is ysaye vi, with a label proceeding from his hand inscribed Tanquam sponsus decoravit me corona. [See Isa. lxi. 10. Vulgate Version.]

The letter . b . between these two labels denotes the order of the plate or page, as the cuts in this work follow each other according to two sets of alphabets, each of which extends from a to b only: when the first series is completed, a second is begun, the letters of which are distinguished by two points .a..b..c..&c.

In the central compartment, between the busts above described, is the type or principal subject; it represents the rewards of the righteous in the eternal world, and the Redeemer is introduced as bestowing the crown of life on one of the elect spirits. The antitype on the left is the daughter of Sion, crowned by her spouse with the following Leonine verse,

Laus ale vere: spusu bn sest here; that is,

Laus anime vere sponsum bene sensit habere.

The antitype on the right is an angel, speaking to St. John, with this verse beneath:

> Sposa amat sposam Xº nimis et speciosam; that is.

Sponsus amat sponsam Christus nimis et speciosam.

From the left-hand figure of the bust at the bottom of the plate proceeds this label:-corona tua c'culigata [circumligata] siet [sit] et calciame [calciamenta] i pebq [in pedibus], with a reference to Ezekiel, ch. xxiv. The twenty-third verse of that chapter [Vulgate Version] is most probably the passage intended.

From the figure on the right (which seems to have been designed for the prophet Hosea, as the other figure may mean the prophet Ezekiel) proceeds the label Sponsabo te mihi in sempiternum, &c. with a reference to Hosea v. The passage alluded to will be found in Hos. ii. 19. which runs thus:—Sponsabo te mihi in sempiternum, et sponsabo te mihi in justitia, et in misericordia et in miserationibus. [Vulgate Version.]

t These Letters, Dr. Dibdin thinks, are the origin of the signatures which are used to denote the order of the sheets in printed books. Bib. Spenc. vol. i. p. xxvi.

2 Made from the last plate or page of the exemplar, which was the late Mr. Willet's. See the engraving facing the title-page.

3 The above sentences are printed without the contractions, which are so numerous and so complex, as to be with difficulty understood by any who are not conversant in ancient records and early-printed books.

4 See preceding note.

4 See preceding note

The last line in our fac-simile of the Biblia Pauperum may be thus read:-

V9 tūc gaudet aie sibi, qū bonū dat' ome.

that is,

Versus. Tunc gaudent anima sibi quum bonum datur omne.

Bibliographers are by no means agreed concerning the age⁵ which they assign to the curious volume above described. Dr. Dibdin,6 it is apprehended, dates it too low, in fixing it to the year 1450; and though the cuts are not designed in so heavy and Gothic a style as Baron Heinecken ascribes to them, yet the execution of them on the wood-blocks is confessedly very coarse, as our specimen (which is an exact fac-simile) will abundantly The form of the letters also is too Gothic, and too void of proportion, to bear so late a date: indeed, if they be compared with the letters exhibited in some of the fac-similes in the Bibliotheca Spenceriana (which are supposed to have been executed between 1420 and 1430), the similarity of coarseness in the shape of the letters will render it probable that the Biblia Pauperum is nearly of equal antiquity. In fact, it is this very coarseness of the letters (as Heinecken has remarked) which has caused the edition above described to be preferred to every other of the Biblia Pauperum.7

III. The discovery of the art of printing in the fifteenth century, and the establishment of the glorious Reformation throughout Europe in the following century, facilitated the circulation of the Scriptures. Wherever its pure doctrines penetrated, the nations that embraced it, adopting its grand principle—that the Bible contains the religion of Protestants—were naturally desirous of obtaining the sacred volume in their respective languages. And even in those countries into which the reformed doctrines were but partially introduced, it was found necessary to yield so far to the spirit of the times, as to admit, in a limited degree, vernacular translations among the people.8 Since the Reformation, wherever learned and pious missionaries have carried the Christian faith, the Scriptures have been translated into the languages of its professors.

The total number of dialects, spoken in any part of the world, is computed to be about five hundred; and of these somewhat more than one hundred appear to constitute languages generically distinct, or exhibiting more diversity than resemblance to each other. Into upwards of one hundred and fifty of these various dialects the sacred Scriptures have been translated, either wholly or in part; and not less than sixty of them are versions in the languages and dialects of Asia. It is obvious that very few modern versions can be of service in the criticism or interpretation of the Bible; but as the author has been censured for omitting them in the first edition of this work, he has endeavoured to supply that deficiency, and to procure the best infor-mation possible, on a topic so interesting to every sincere professor of Christianity.

Baron Heinecken, who has examined several copies of this work with minute attention, has discovered five different editions of the Biblia Panperum; the fifth is easily known, as it has fifty plates. In executing the other four editions, the engravers, he observes, have worked with such exactness, that there is very little difference between any of them, so that it is impossible to determine which is the first. The attentive bibliographer, however, will discover several variations. These are pointed out by Heinecken, who has described the subjects of the different plates or leaves with much minuteness. As his interesting work is in the hand of every bibliographer and amateur, it will be sufficient to refer to his Idde d'une Collection d'Estampes, pp. 293—333, from which Santander has abridged his neat account. Dict. du xv. Sicele, vol. ii. pp. 207—210. Lambinet (Recherches sur l'Amprimerie, pp. 61—72.) and Daunon (Analyse des Opinions sur l'Origine de l'Imprimerie, pp. 7—15.) have short but interesting notices relative to this and the other books of images, which will repay the trouble of perusal to those who have not the dear volume of Heinecken, or the elaborate work of Santander.

relative to this and the other books of images, which will repay the trouble of perusal to those who have not the dear volume of Heinecken, or the elaborate work of Santander.

Bibliotheca Spenceriana, vol. i. p. xxvi.

The rarity of the Biblia Pauperum has caused the few copies of it, which are known to be extant, to be sold for the most exorbitant prices. These indeed have varied according to the condition and difference of the several editions. The copy which Heinecken describes as the first (and which is noticed above) cost at the sale of M. de Boze, in 1753, 1000 livres (43L 15s.); at the sale of M. Gaignat, in 1769, 830 livres (36L 6s.); at the sale of M. Paris, in 1791, 51L; and that of Mr. Willet, in 1813, two hundred and forty five guineas! The edition described by Heinecken as the second, produced, at M. Verdussen's sale, in 1776, 250 florins of exchange (about 24L); at that of M. la Valliere, in 1783, 780 livres (34L 2s. 6d.); and at that of M. Crevenna, in 1789, 946 livres (41L 7s. 9d.). Copies of the Biblia Pauperum are in his Majesty's library (formerly Gaignat's copy; in that of Earl Spencer; the Bodleian and Corpus Christi Libraries, at Oxford; Corpus Christi College Library, Cambridge; in the Hunterian Museum, Glasgow (it is very imperfect); in the Royal Library at Basle. For an account of the Speculum Humane Salvations and the other curious Books of Images, see the author's introduction to Bibliography, vol. ii. Appendix, pp. v.—xiv; and Baron Heinecken's Idée Generale d'une Collection complète d'Estampes. Leipsic, 1771, 8vo.

Historical Sketch of the Translation and Circulation of the Scriptures by the Rev. Messrs. Thomson and Orme (Perth, 1815, 8vo.), p. 44.

Latin language, and in the vernacular language of all the countries in which Christianity has been propagated; and both are made either by persons in communion with the Church of Rome or by Protestants.

§ 2. MODERN LATIN VERSIONS OF THE OLD AND NEW TES-TAMENT.

[i.] LATIN VERSIONS OF THE ENTIRE BIBLE, OR OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

Versions made by Romanists.

Or the modern Latin Versions of the Old Testament, made by individuals in communion with the Church of Rome, those of Pagninus, Montanus, Malvenda, Cajetan, and Houbigant, are particularly worthy of notice.1

1. PAGNINUS.—Veteris ac Novi Testamenti nova translatio, per Sanct. PAGNINUM edita. Lugduni, 1528, in large 4to.

Sanctes Pagninus, a Dominican monk, was the first modern oriental scholar who attempted to make a new translation of the Scriptures from the original languages. Having, in the course of his studies, been led to conceive that the Vulgate Latin Version of Jerome (of which an account has been given in the first volume of Jerome (of which an account has been given in the first volume of this work) was greatly corrupted, he undertook to form a new translation of the Old Testament from the Hebrew, following Jerome only where he thought that his version corresponded to the original. Under the patronage of the Popes Leo X., Hadrian VI., and Clement VII., he devoted twenty-five years to this great work; which was first published at Lyons in 1528. The Jews who read it attested its fidelity. The great fault of Pengings is that be best attested its fidelity. The great fault of Pagninus is, that he has adhered too closely and servilely to the original text; and this scrupulous attachment has made his translation obscure, barbarous, and full of solecisms. He has also altered the commonly-received names of men and cities, and has substituted others in their place, which are pronounced according to the pronunciation of the Masorites. Though this translator's labours were very severely criticised by Father Simon, yet he acknowledges his great abilities and learning; and all the latter commentators and critics concur in justly commending his work, as being remarkably exact and faithful, and admirably adapted to explain the literal sense of the Hebrew text. Pagninus afterwards translated the New Testament from the Greek, which he dedicated to his patron, Pope Clement VII. It was printed with the former at Lyons, in 1528. In 1557, Robert Stephens printed a new edition of his translation in two volumes folio, with corrections; but it contains only the Old Testament of Pagninus's version. The New Testament is given in the Latin Pagninus's version. The New Testament is giversion of Beza, which is noticed in p. 32. infra.

2. Montanus.—Biblia Latina Pagnini, à Benedicto Aria Montano recognita. Antverpiæ, 1584, folio.

The translation of Pagninus was revised by Benedict Arias Montanus, who has erroneously been considered as a new translator of the Bible in the Latin language. His chief translate the Hebrew words by the same number of Latin ones; so that he has accommodated his whole translation to the most scrupulous rules of grammar, without any regard to the elegance of his Latinity. Montanus's edition, therefore, may be considered of his Latinity. Montanus's edition, therefore, may be considered rather as a grammatical commentary, than a true version, and as being adapted to instruct young beginners in the Hebrew, than to be read separately: being printed interlinearily with the Latin word placed exactly over the Hebrew, it saves the student the trouble of frequently referring to his Lexicon. In the New Testament, Montanus changed only a few words in the Vulgate version, where he found it to differ from the Greek. This revision has been very frequently printed in various sizes: it is also found in the Antwerp, Paris, and London Polyglotts.

3. MALVENDA.—Thomæ MALVENDÆ Commentarii in Scripturam Sacram, una cum nova ex Hebræo translatione, variisque lectionibus. Lugduni, 1650, 5 tomis, folio.

The translation of Thomas Malvenda, a Spanish Dominican, being more grammatical and barbarous than that of Montanus, is but little esteemed, and has fallen into oblivion.

4. CAJETAN.—Librorum Veteris Testamenti, scilicet Pentateuchi, Josuæ, Judicum, Regum, Paralipomenon, Esdræ, Nehemiæ, Job, Psalmorum, Proverbiorum Salomonis, et priorum trium capitum Esaiæ, Versio nova Latina ex Hebræo a Thoma de Vio, Cardinale Cajetano, ope duorum Linguam Hebræam scientium (alterius Hebræi Magistri illius linguæ, alterius Christiani) instituta juxta methodum quam ipse tradidit in præfatione commentariorum in Psalmos. Lugduni, 1639, 5 vols. folio.

The version which bears the name of Cardinal Cajetan, strictly speaking, is not his production; having been made by two persons (one a Jew, the other a Christian), both of whom were well

The materials of this section are derived from Marsh's and Boerner's Edition of Lelong's Ebbliotheca Sacra, vol. ii. Walchi Bibliotheca Theologica Selecta, vol. iv. pp. 61-76. Curpoo ii Critica Sacra, Veteris Testamenti, pp. 707-777. Simen's Hist. Critique du Vieux Testament, livre ii. cl.. xxii.
Vol. II.—App. 3 U

The modern versions of the Scriptures are twofold, viz. in the skilled in the original language of the sacred volume. Cajetan the language and in the vernacular language of all the countries and in the vernacular language of all the countries. used if his version had been grammatically literal.

> 5. Houbigant.—Biblia Veteris Testamenti Latine, ex Ver sione Caroli Francisci Houbigant. Lutetiæ Parisiorum, 1753, 4 tomis, folio.

> The Latin version of the Old Testament, printed by Father Houbigant in his critical edition of the Hebrew Bible (noticed in p. 31. supra), is not framed according to the present Hebrew text, but according to the text, as he thought it should be corrected by manuscripts, ancient versions, and critical conjectures. text of Houbigant's version was also printed at Paris in 1753, in 8 vols. 8vo. This version is much admired for its elegance and energy.

Versions made by Protestants.

Since the Reformation, several Latin versions of the Old Testament have been made from the original Hebrew by learned Protestants. The most esteemed are those of Munster, Leo Juda, Castalio, Junius and Tremellius, Schmidt, Dathe, Schott, and Winzer.

1. MUNSTER.—Biblia Latina, ex Versione Sebastiani Mun-STERI. Basileæ, 1534; 1546, folio.

In the year 1534, Sebastian Munster printed at Basle a new In the year 1934, Schastian Munster printed at baste a new translation of the Old Testament from the original Hebrew, with the Hebrew text; and in 1546 he published a second edition, with the addition of some notes, which Father Simon thinks useful for understanding the style of the sacred writings. Without rigidly adhering to the grammatical signification of the words, like Pagninus and Montanus, he has given a more free and intelligible version: but by not deviating from the sense of the Hebrew text, he has retained some of its peculiar idioms. He has also availed himself of the commentaries of the best of the rabbinical writers. Though Simon freely censures particular parts of Munster's version, he decidedly prefers it to those of Pagninus and Montanus; and Huet gives him the character of a translator well versed in the Hebrew language, whose style is very exact, and conformable to the original.

2. Leo Juda.—Biblia Sacro-Sancta Testamenti Veteris et Novi, e sacra Hebræorum lingua Græcorumque fontibus, consultis simul orthodoxis interpretibus religiosissime, translata in sermonem Latinum. Tiguri, 1543, folio; 1544, 8vo., and various subsequent editions.

The translation which bears the name of Leo Juda was com-The translation which bears the name of Leo Juda was commenced by him; but being prevented by death from finishing the work, he left it to be completed by Theodore Bibliander, professor of divinity at Zurich. With the assistance of Conrad Pellican, who was professor of Hebrew in the same place, Bibliander translated the rest of the Old Testament from the Hebrew; the New Testament was undertaken by Peter Cholin and Rodolph Gualter, two learned Protestants, at that time resident at Zurich. This version was first printed in 1543, and was reprinted by Robert Stephens at Paris, in 1545, with the addition of the Vulgate version, in two columns, and with short notes or scholia, but without in two columns, and with short notes or scholia, but without specifying the translator's name. Though it was condemned by specifying the translators name. Though it was concemned by the divines at Paris, it was favourably received by those of Salamanea, who reprinted it with some trifling alterations. It is acknowledged to be very faithful; and its style is more elegant than that of Munster: but the translators are said, in some instances, to have receded too far from the literal sense.

3. Castalio.—Biblia Latina, Interprete Sebastiano Casta-LIONE. Basileæ, 1573, folio; Lipsiæ, 1738, 4 tomis, 12mo.

The Latin version of Sebastian Chatillon, or Castalio (as he is generally called), was begun at Geneva in 1542, and finished at Basle in 1550, where it was printed in the following year, with a dedication to Edward VI. king of England. His design was, to render the Old and New Testaments in elegant Latin like that of the ancient classic authors; but his style has been severely censured by some critics, as being too much affected, and destitute of that noble simplicity, grandeur, and energy, which characterize the sacred originals. Professor Dathe, however, has vindicated this learned Protestant from these charges. Castalio's version has been the sacred originals. Professor Dathe, however, has vindicated this learned Protestant from these charges. Castalio's version has been frequently reprinted: the best edition of it is said to be that printed at Leipsie, in 1738, in 4 vols. 12mo.; but the folio edition, printed in 1573, is in most request, not only on account of its beauty, but also because it contains the author's last corrections, together with a very complete table of matters.

4. Junius and Tremellius.—Testamenti Veteris Biblia Sacra: sive Libri Canonici prisce Judworum Ecclesiæ a Deo traditi, Latini recens ex Hebræo facti brevibusque scholiis illustrati ab Immanuele TREMELLIO. Accesserunt Libri, qui vulgo dicuntur Apocryphi, Latine redditi et notis quibusdam aucti a Francisco Junio. Quibus etiam adjunximus Novi Testamenti Libros ex Sermone Syro ab eodem Tremellio, et ex Græco a Theodoro Beza in Latinum versos, notisque itidem illustrados Secundâ curâ Francisci Junii, Genevæ, 1590, 4to

The version of Francis Junius and Immanuel Tremellius was first published at Frankfort on the Main, in four tomes folio, in the years 1575-76-79: it was subsequently corrected by Junius, and has since been repeatedly printed. By the Protestant churches it was received with great approbation; and to this day it is held in was received with great approbation; and to this day it is held in great esteem for its simplicity, perspicuity, and fidelity. Father Simon criticised it with great severity; but our learned countryman, Matthew Poole, in the preface to his Synopsis Criticorum Sacrorum, reckons it among the best versions: and the ecclesiastical historian, Dupin, commends it for its close adherence to the Hebrew. Junius and Tremellius have been very particular in expressing the article by demonstrative persponse. expressing the article by demonstrative pronouns.

5. Schmidt.—Biblia Sacra, sive Testamentum Vetus et Novum ex linguis originalibus in Linguam Latinam translatum, additis Capitum Summariis et Partitionibus, a Sebastiano Schmi-DIO. Argentorati, 1696, 4to.

Sebastian Schmidt was professor of oriental languages at Strasburgh. Of his version, which was published after the author's decease, there have been several editions. It is strictly literal; and is chiefly useful to students in the Hebrew language.

6. Dathe.-Libri Veteris Testamenti, ex recensione Textûs Hebræi et Versionum Antiquarum, Latine versi, Notis philologicis et criticis illustrati a Joanne Augusto Daтню. Halæ, 1773-89. 6 vols. 8vo.

The version of John Augustus Dathe, who was professor of oriental literature at Leipsic, is deservedly in high repute for its general fidelity and elegance, both in this country and on the Continent. Prof. Dathe "never published any part, until he had repeatedly explained it in his public lectures, and convinced himself that no difficulty remained, but such as could not be removed. In this manner was his translation produced, which may be considered as a percetual commentary." (Aikin's Biographical Dicsidered as a perpetual commentary. tionary, vol. x. Supplement, p. 306.) (Aikin's Biographical Dic-

7. Schott and Winzer.-Libri Sacri Antiqui Fæderis ex Sermone Hebræo in Latinum translati; notatione brevi præcipuæ Lectionum et Interpretationum diversitatis addita. Auctoribus D. Henrico Augusto Schott et Julio Friederico Winzer. Volumen primum. Altonæ et Lipsiæ, 1816, 8vo.

This volume comprises the Pentateuch only; the three first books were translated by M. Schott, and the two last by M. Winzer; but the whole work has been so carefully revised, that it appears to be the production of only one person. It professes to be very close.

[ii.] LATIN VERSIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

1. Erasmus.—Novi Testamenti Æditio postrema, per Desiderium Erasmum, Roterodamum. Basileæ, 1535, 8vo

The celebrated Erasmus has the honour of being the first translator of the New Testament into the Latin language from the original Greek. His object was, to give a faithful and clear version, in which it is admitted that he succeeded as far as it was possible at that time. In this version he followed not only the printed copies, but also four Greek manuscripts; according to the example of Jerome, he varied but little from the Vulgate. The first edition of his translation appeared with his Greek Testament in 1516, and was dedicated to Pope Leo X., by whom it was highly commended in a letter of thanks which he wrote to Erasmus. The pontiff's in a letter of thanks which he wrote to Erasmus. The pontiff's praises, however, did not prevent his labours from being censured with great severity by certain writers belonging to the Romish communion, against whom Erasmus defended himself with great spirit. His version has been frequently printed and corrected, both by himself and by his editors.

2. Beza.-Novum D. N. Jesu Christi Testamentum. Latine jam olim a Veteri Interprete, nunc denuo à Theodoro Beza versum, cum ejusdem annotationibus, in quibus ratio interpretationis redditur. Oliva Roberti Stephani [Genevæ], 1556, folio.

This version has been repeatedly printed. On account of its fidelity, it has always been highly esteemed by Protestants of every denomination. Bishop Walton, indeed, was of opinion that he was justly charged with departing unnecessarily from the common readings, without the authority of manuscripts; but a careful examination of Beza's translation will show that that distinguished wedges were in this instance mistaken. prelate was in this instance mistaken.

3. Chr. Guil. THALEMANNI Versio Latina Evangeliorum Matthæi, Marci, Lucæ, et Johannis, itemque Actuum Apostolorum, edita a C. C. Tittmanno. Berolini, 1781, 8vo. The remaining books of the New Testament were translated by M. Iaspis, and entitled, Versio Latina Epistolarum Novi Testamenti, perpetua annotatione illustrata a Godofredo Sigismundo IASPIS. Lipsiæ, Vol. I. 1793, Vol. II. 1797, 8vo. Editio nova, Lipsie, 1821.

- 4. Sacri novi Testamenti Libri omnes, veteri Latinitate donati ab Henrico Godofredo Reichardo. Lipsiæ, 1799, 8vo.
 - 5. Sebastiani.—Novum Testamentum ob frequentes omnium Interpretationum Hallucinationes, nunc demum ex Codice Alexandrino, adhibitis etiam compluribus manuscriptis variantibusque Lectionibus editis, summa fide ac curâ Latine redditum. Omnibus Sacris Auctoribus Græcis, Sacris Criticis, Glossariis, et Instructioribus per totam Græciam Ecclesiasticis Viris diligentissime consultis. Interprete Leopoldo Sebastiani. Londini, 1817, royal 8vo.

M. Sebastiani is advantageously known to scholars as the editor of Lycophron (Rome, 1803, 4to.). His version is made from the text of the Alexandrian Manuscript, with which the translator states that he collated several manuscripts and collections of various readings, availing himself also of every critical aid he could pro-cure, and particularly of the writings of the Greek fathers, and the assistance of the most learned of the modern Greek clergy. obtain the latter, M. Sebastiani expressly travelled through the whole of Greece. In all doctrinal points, this version is made conformable to the tenets inculcated by the Romish church.

 For notices of the modern Latin Versions of Schott, Naebe, and Goeschen, see pp. 16, 18, and 19, of this Appendix.

§ 3. VERSIONS IN THE LANGUAGES OF MODERN EUROPE. [i.] VERSIONS IN THE LANGUAGES SPOKEN IN THE BRITISH ISLES.

English Protestant Versions.1

Although it is impossible, at this distance of time, to ascertain when or by whom Christianity was first planted in this island, as well as the earliest time when the Scriptures were translated into the language of its inhabitants, yet we know that, for many hundred years, they were favoured with the possession of part, at least, of the sacred volume in their vernacular tongue. Of the Anglo-Saxon versions an account has already been given; to which we may now add, that a Saxon translation of the Pentateuch, of Joshua, part of the books of Kings, Esther, and of the apocryphal book of Judith, and the Maccabees, is attributed to Elfric or Elfred, who was archbishop of Canterbury, A. D. 995.

A chasm of several centuries ensued, during which the Scriptures appeared to have been buried in oblivion, the general reading of them being prohibited by the papal see. The first ENGLISH translation of the Bible known to be extant was executed by an unknown individual, and is placed by Archbishop Usher to the year 1290: of this there are three manuscript copies preserved, in the Bodleian library, and in the libraries of Christ Church and Queen's Colleges at Oxford. Towards the close of the following century, John de Trevisa, vicar of Berkeley in the county of Gloucester, at the desire of his patron, Lord Berkeley, is said to have translated the Old and New Testaments into the English tongue. But as no part of this work appears ever to have been printed, the translation ascribed to him is supposed to have been confined to a few texts, which are scattered in some parts of his works (several copies of which are known to exist in manuscript), or which were painted on the walls of his patron's chapel at Berkeley Castle. It is by no means improbable, that, before the invention of printing, recourse was had to the painting of the principal events in the sacred history, on the windows of churches, in order to convey some knowledge of Scripture facts to the illiterate. Among the finest specimens of this pictorial instruction, we may mention the beautifully-executed windows of King's College Chapel, Cambridge.2

1. WICLIFFE'S VERSION.

The New Testament of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, translated out of the Latin Vulgat by John Wiclif, S.T.P. about 1378. To which is præfixt a History of the Translations of the H. Bible and N. Testament, &c. into English, both in MS. and print, and of the most remarkable Editions of them since the Invention of Printing. By John Lewis, M.A. London, 1731, folio; 1810, 4to.3

1 Our account of English translations is drawn from Lewis's History of the translations of the Bible, prefixed to his edition of Wickliffe's New Testament, folio, 1731; Johnson's Historical Account of the several English translations of the Bible, originally published in 1730, in 8vo. and reprinted in the third volume of Bishop Watson's Collection of Theological Tracts; Archishop Newcome's View of the English Biblical Translations, Dublin, 1792, 8vo.; Mr. Whittaker's learned and elaborate inquiry into the Interpretation of Hebrew Scriptures, pp. 38—114.; and Mr. Walter's Letter to the Bishop of Peterborough, on the Independence of the authorized Version of the Bible.

3 There is a peculiar correspondence between the paintings on the same window, in the upper and lower divisions: for instance, in the upper division is painted a piece of history taken from the Old Testament; and in the lower division, is painted some circumstance selected from the New Testament, corresponding to that above it from the Old.

3 The titles of this and the following English versions are given from the copies preserved in the library of the British Museum, with the exception of Holly bushe's New Testament, in p. 68., and the Anglo-Genevese Bible in p. 71.

TED.

Additions; the second and third Tables

TABLE II.

Versions in the Languages of Modern Asia—Continued.

age.	New Test detache thereof	d Books		Old Testa- r detached hereof.	Author.	Place of Printing.
	New Detached Books.		Bible, or Old Test. Detached Books.			Trinting.
ASIATIC	1809-14 1811-13-16		1815-21 1815-20	{	Rev. Dr. Marshman Rev. Dr. Morrison & Rev. Mr. Milne	Serampore. Canton.
an	{	Matt. and John 1661	}	Psal. 1815	Robert Junius	Amsterdam.
rg Tartar Tartar ian	1813 1820 1815–20	Matt. and	}	rsai. 1613	Edin. Soc. Mission. Morav. Mission. Two Mongolian Chieftains	Astrachan. Astrachan. Petersburgh.
assian spels) missian spels)	1821	Luke 1815			Russian Bible Society.	Petersburgh.
ean or }	1818-25	4 Gosp.	1743	}	Unknown	Moscow. Eimeo and Tahiti.
Arme-	1832	1826-33		{	Missionaries of the Basle Society.	Moscow.

TABLE III.

Versions in the Languages of Modern Africa and America.

hage.	New Testament, or detached Books thereof.			Old Testa- r detached hereof.	Author.	Place of Printing.
	New Detached Books		Bible, or Old Test.	Detached Books.		Trinting.
c, a dia- f Abys-	1822			{	M. Asselin de Cherville	London.
1	}	Gosp. of Matt. 1816	\}		Rev. G. Nylander
ia	1828-32 1832	4 Gospels			Missionaries. Rev. Mr. Schmelin	· Cape Town
I INDIAN.	1831	Gosp. of Luke	{······		Rev. Mr. Moffat.
an	1661	O. Dimina	1663		Rev. John Eliot	Cambridge, New Eng.
re	}	3 Epist. of John 1818	\}		C. F. Dencke	New York.
Massa- }	{	Gosp. of John 1709	}	Psal. 1709	Experience Mayhew	Boston, New Eng.
k	{	Matt. Mark, and John 1787, 1804	}	{	Rev. Mr. Freeman, Captain Brant, Captain Norton	London.
nux	1832 1809-13-19 1799	John			Messrs, Jones Moravian Mission Moravian Mission	York, U.C.
reolese	1829 1832				Unknown Missionaries Dr. Mora.	Copenhagen. London.
MERICAN	{	Gosp. of Luke 1829	}	Psal. 1832	Dr. Pazos Kanki

TABLES

EXHIBITING AT ONE VIEW THE PRINCIPAL TRANSLATIONS OF THE SCRIPTURES INTO THE MODERN LANGUAGES

EUROPE, ASIA, AFRICA, AND AMERICA,

TOGETHER WITH THE DATES WHEN THEY APPEARED,

THE AUTHORS BY WHOM THEY WERE EXECUTED, AND THE PLACES WHERE THEY WERE SEVERALLY PRINTED.

. The first of these Tables is copied from Mesrs. Thomson and Orme's Historical Sketch of the Translation and Circulation of the Scriptures, (p. 45.) with Corrections and Additions; the second and third Tables are given from the Author's Compendious Introduction to the Study of the Bible, which is an Analysis of the present work.

TABLE I.

Versions in the Languages of Modern Europe.

Translation N T		Bible	Author.	Place of Printing.
German	1522 1526	1534	Martin Luther Tindal Tindal and Coverdale	Wittemberg Uncertain. Zurich.
Prench	1534 1524	1535 1541 1530	Robert Olivetan Olaus Petri	Geneva Upsal, Sweden. Copenhagen.
Italian Spanish	1556 1519	1560 1562 1569 1581	Antonio Brucioli's revised? Cassiodorus de Revna Cyril and Methodius	Geneva. Frankfort or Basil. Ostrog
Helvetian dialect Lower Saxon dialect Franish	1525	1529 1533 1642		Zurich Lubeck Stockholm
Basque	1553 1571 1567	15-5		Tubingen. Rochelle. London. Vienna
Wenaish Icelandie Pomeranian dialect	1574	1549 1544 1544 1544	Thorlack	Wittemberg. Holum, Iceland. Barth
Polish	15=5	1596 1593	Several	Cralitz, Moravia. Nuremberg.
Medern Greek	1638 1648	1657 1650	Maximus Calliergi	Geneva, Belgrade, Schuol London
Turkish	1666 1602 1685	1685	Lazarus Seaman Dr. Daniel, Bishop Bedell	Ovford. London. Riga.
Esthonian, dialect of . Dorpatian dialect	1686 1686 1727	1689		Riga Riga
Upper Lusation	1706 1755	1719 1729 1763	Several Bishops Wilson and Hildesley	Coire Bautzen
Manks	1767 1712	1744-53	James Stewart and others	Edinburgh. Amsterdam and Batayia
Spanish	1781	1783 1793-4	Antonio Pereira, Cath Padre Scio, Cath	Lisbon. Mudrid.
Samogitian Judao Polish	1820 1820 1821		N Solomon	Malta. Petersburgh London
Modern Russ Karehan Gospel of a Matthew	1821		Russian Bible Society	Petersburgh
Catalonian	1826	Psalms	Mr. Prat	Constantinople, London.

TABLE II.

Versions in the Languages of Modern Asia.

Language.	New Testament, or detached Books thereof		Bible, or Old Testa- ment, or detached Books thereof.		Author	Place of
HallEduge.	New Test	Detached Books.	Bible, or Old Test.	Detached Books.		Printing
I. Araste, and its derivative lan- guages
Arabic	1816				N. Sabat and Rev. H. Martyn, B. D.	Calcutta.
Persian	{	4 Gosp. 1804.	ļ		Lt. Col. Colebrooke
Pushtoo	1815		{	Gen. Lev.	Rev. H. Martyn John Leyden, M. D.	Petersburg Scrampore
Bulocha	{	4 Gosp.	1	1823	and others	,
2 Sansenit, and its derivative	į	1816.	,
Sanserit	1808		1811-18
hee	1811			Pent. 1818
Kashmiree Wutch or Mul-	1819				Baptist Missionaries	Serampore
tance	1819 1820		1826		1
Guzerattee Bikanter	1819		1020		H
Kunkuna	1818				1
Oojuvince	1822
Bundelkundee .	1820
Nepaulose	1820)
Magudhaer Pale	1815-32				Baptist and Wes-	Colombo.
Oordo	1632				Rev T. T Thom- son and Mr Da Costa	Calcutta
Mahratta	{ 1807 } 1826		{	Pent. and Hist. Bks. 1812-15. Pent Hist	American Missionaries {	Bombay.
Hindee	1812		{	and Post. Books, 1806-12	Baptist {	Serampore
Hindoostanliee				Ps 1747	Danish Mission, / Benj Schiltz	Halle.
Bengalee }	1808-14		1801-05		Rev H. Martyn	Calcutta
Orissa	1807		1-0 1-14		Baptist Missionaries Rev W Hands	Serampore
Tamul	1920 1715		1829 1723-28		Danish Mission Ziegenbalg, and Schultz	Tranqueb
Telinga or Tellogoo	} }	Gosp of Mark. 1*12	}		M. Des Granges	Vizagapata
Cingalese	1771-80		·····{	Gen. Ex. & Levit. 1771-83.	Plullipz Mr W Tolfrey	Colombo
Malay	1820	a	1823		Various persons	Amsterdar

TABLE II.

Versions in the Languages of Modern Asia-Continued.

Language	New Testament, or detuched Books thereof		Bible, or Old Testa- ment, or detached Books thereof.		Author	Place of
	New Test	Detached Books	Bible, or Old Test	Detached Books.		Printing
3. CHINESE	1809-14 1-11-13-16		1815-21 1815-20	{	Rev. Dr. Marshman Rev. Dr. Morrison & Rev. Mr. Milne	Serampore. Canton
Formosan	}	Matt and John 1661			Robert Junius .	Amsterdan
Tartar	1813			Peal. 1815	Edin Soc Mission.	Karass and
Orenburg Tartar Calmus Tartar	1820 1815-20				Edin Soc Mission	Astrachan
Mongohan (1815-20	Matt and Luke 1815		}	Two Mongolian Chieftains	Petersbargi
Mordwassian (4 Gospels	1821				Russian Bible	Peter-burgi
(4 Gospets)	1821				Society
Georgian			1743		Unknown	Moscow
Otahemean or {	1818-95			}	Missionaries of the / London Society	Einic + and Taluti
Curdish	}	4 Gosp 1836-33
Eastern Arme-	1832			}	Missionaries of the / Basic Society	Moscow

TABLE III.

Versions in the Languages of Modern Africa and America.

Language		tament, or led Books f.	ment,	Old Testa- or detached thereof	Author	Place of Printing
	New Test.	Detached Books	Bible, or Old Test.	Detached Books.
Arrican. Amharic, a dia- lect of Abys- sinia	1802			}	M. Asselin de Cher-	London
Bullom	}	Gosp. of Matt. 1816	{		Rev. G Nylander
Malagasse Namaqua	1823-32 1832	4 Gospels Gosp. of	,		Missionaries Rev Mr Schmelin	Cape Town
Bichuana	1831	Luke	} · · · · ·		Rev Mr. Moffat.
American Indian. Virginian	1661		1663		Rev. John Eliot }	Cambridge, New Eng
Delaware	{	3 Epist. of John 1818	}		C F Dencke	New York
Indian-Massa- {	{	Gosp of John 1709	}	Psal. 1700	Experience May hew	Boston, New Eng.
Mohawk	{	Mark, and John 1787, 1801	}	{	Rev. Mr. Freeman, Captain Brant, Captain Norton	London
Greenlandish	1832 1809 13-19 1799	John			Messrs Jones Moravian Mission Moravian Mission	York, U.C.
Createse	1820				Unknown	Copenhagen London.
Mexican	1833				Dr. Mora.	Limbert.
SOUTH AMERICAN					i i	ĺ
Aimara	{	Gosp. of Luke 1829	}		Dr. Pazos Kankı
Peruvian			·····	Psul. 1832		1

Nearly contemporary with John de Trevisa was the celebrated John Wielif, or Wielife, who, about the year 1378 or 1380, translated the entire Bible from the Latin Vulgate into the English landing that abouted and supported him: to which inquiry the guage as then spoken, not being sufficiently acquainted with the Hebrew and Greek languages to translate from the originals. Before the invent on of printing transcripts were obtained with difficulty, and copies were so rare, that, according to the registry of William Alnewick, bishop of Norwich, in 1429, the price of one of Wickliffe's Testaments was not less than four marks and forty pence, or two pounds sixteen shillings and eight-pence, a sum equivalent to more than forty pounds at present. This translation of valent to more than forty pounds at present. This translation of the Bible, we are informed, was so offensive to those who were for taking away the key of knowledge and means of better informa-tion, that a bill was brought into the House of Lords, 13 Rich. H. A. D. 1320, for the purpose of suppressing it. On which the Duke of Lancaster, the king's uncle, is reported to have spoken to this effect:—"We will not be the dregs of all; seeing other nations have the law of God, which is the law of our faith, written in their own language." At the same time he declared in a very solemn manner, "That he would maintain our having this law in our own tongue against those, whoever they should be, who first brought in the bill." The duke was seconded by others, who said: "That if the Gospel, by its being translated into English, was the occasion of running into error, they might know that there were more heretics to be found among the Latins than among the people of any other language. For that the Decretals reckoned no fewer than sixty-six Latin heretics; and so the Gospel must not be read in Latin, which yet the opposers of its English translation allowed." Through the duke of Lancaster's influence the bill was rejected; and this success gave encouragement to some of Wieliffe's followers to publish another and more correct translation of the Bible. But in the year 1408, in a convocation held at Oxford by Archbishop Arundel, it was decreed by a constitution, "That no one should thereafter translate any text of Holy Scripture in English, by way of a book, or little book or tract; and that no book of this kind should be read, that was composed lately in the time of John Wicliffe, or since his death." This constitution led the way to Wicliffe, or since his death." This constitution led the way to great persecution, and many persons were punished severely, and some even with death, for reading the Scriptures in English.— (Lewis's History, pp. 7—18.)

No part of Wicliffe's version of the Scriptures was printed, until Mr. Lewis published the New Testament in folio, in the year 1731. In 1739, his history of translations was printed by itself in an octavo volume. Wicliffe's translation of the New Testament was handsomely re-edited in quarto, in 1810, by the Rev. Henry Hervey Baber, M.A., one of the Librarians of the British Museum; who prefixed a valuable memoir of the life, opinions, and writings of Dr. Wicliffe, and also an Historical Account of the Saxon and English Versions of the Scriptures, previous to the opening of the fifth century.

2. TINDAL'S VERSION.

In England, as in other parts of Europe, the spread of the pure In England, as in other parts of Europe, the spread of the pure doctrines of the Reformation was accompanied with new translations into the vernacular language. For the first printed ¹ English translation of the Scriptures we are indebted to William Tindal, who, having formed the design of translating the New Testament from the original Greek into English (an undertaking for which he was followed by several to Anytonia Figure 1998). was fully qualified), removed to Antwerp in Flanders for this purpose. Here, with the assistance of the learned John Fry, or Fryth, who was burnt on a charge of heresy in Smithfield, in 1552, and a friar, called William Roye, who suffered death on the same account in Portugal, he finished it, and in the year 1526 it was printcount in Portugal, he finished it, and in the year 1526 it was printed either at Antwerp or Hamburg, without a name, in a middlesized 8vo. volume, and without either calendar, references in the margin, or table at the end. Tindal annexed a "pistil" at the close of it, in which he "desyred them that were learned to amende if ought were found amysse." Le Long calls this "The New Testament translated into English, from the German Version of Luther;" but for this degrading appellation he seems to have no other authority besides a story related by one Cochlæus, an enemy of the Reformation, with a view of depreciating Tindal's translation. Many copies of this translation having found their way into England, in order to prevent their dispersion among the people, and the more affectually to enforce the prohibition published in all the dioceses against reading them, Tonstal, bishop of London, purchased all the remaining copies of this edition, and all which he could collect from private hands, and committed them to the flames at St. Paul's cross. The first impression of Tindal's translation being thus disposed of, several other editions were published in Holland, thus disposed of, several other editions were published in Holland, before the year 1520, in which Tindal seems to have had no interest, but which found a ready sale, and those which were imported into England were ordered to be burned. On one of these occasions, Sir Thomas More, who was then chancellor, and who concurred with the bishop in the execution of this measure, inquired of a person, who stood accused of heresy, and to whom he

1 Though Wicliffe's translation is prior in point of time, no part of it was

¹ Though Wichiffe's translation is prior in point of time, no part of it was printed before the year 1731.

² Specimens of Tindal's translation of the New Testament, as well as of the other early English translations of the Old and New Testament, are given (together with concise bibliographical descriptions) in the appendix to the Rev. Dr. Cetton's "List of Editions of the Bible, and of parts thereof," dc. pp. 85—140.

² In Actis Martini Lutheri ad an. 1526, p. 132.

answer, how Tindal subsisted abroad, and who were the persons in London that abetted and supported him: to which inquiry the heretical convert replied, "It was the Bishop of London who maintained him, by sending a sum of money to buy up the impression of his Testament." The chancellor smiled, admitted the pression of his Testament." The chahcellor smiled, admitted the truth of the declaration, and suffered the accused person to escape. The people formed a very unfavourable opinion of those who ordered the word of God to be burned, and concluded, that there must be an obvious repugnance between the New Testament and the doctrines of those who treated it with this indignity. Those who were suspected of importing and concealing any of these books, were adjudged by Sir T. More to ride with their faces to the tails of their horses, with papers on their heads, and the New Testaments, and other books which they had dispersed, hung about their cloaks, and at the standard in Cheapside to throw them into a fire prepared for that purpose, and to be fined at the king's pleasure.

When Tonstal's purchase served only to benefit Tindal, and those who were employed in printing and selling successive editions of his Testament, and other measures for restraining their dispersions. sion seemed to have little or no effect, the pen of the witty, eloquent, and learned Sir Thomas More was employed against the translator; and the bishop granted him a license, or faculty. dated March 7, 1527, to have and to read the several books which Tindal and others published; and at his desire Sir Thomas composed dal and others published; and at his desire Sir Thomas composed a dialogue, written with much humour, and designed to expose Tindal's translation, which was published in 1529. In this dialogue, he alleges, among other charges, that Tindal had mistranslated three words of great importance, viz. the words priests, church, and charity; calling the first seniors, the second congregation, and the third love. He also charges him with changing commonly the term grace into favour, confession into knowledge, penance into repentance, and a contrite heart into a troubled heart. The Bishop of London had, indeed, in a sermon, declared, that he had found in it no less than 2000 errors, or mistranslations; and Sir had found in it no less than 2000 errors, or mistranslations; and Sir Thomas More discovered (as he affirmed) about 1000 texts by tale, falsely translated. In 1530, a royal proclamation was issued, by the advice of the prelates and clerks, and of the universities, for totally suppressing the translation of the Scripture, corrupted by William Tindal. The proclamation set forth, that it was not necessary to have the Scriptures in the English tongue, and in the bands of the common results, that the description of the hands of the common people; that the distribution of them, as to allowing or denying it, depended on the discretion of their superiors; and that, considering the malignity of the time, an English translation of the Bible would rather occasion the continuance or increase of errors, than any benefit to their souls. However, the proclamation announced the king's intention, if the present transproclamation announced the king's intention, if the present translation were abandoned, at a proper season to provide that the Holy Scriptures should be by great, learned, and catholic persons, translated into the English tongue, if it should then seem convenient. In the mean time, Tindal was busily employed in translating from the Hebrew into the English the five books of Moses, in which he was assisted by Myles Coverdale. But his papers being lost by shipwreck in his voyage to Hamburgh, where he designed to print it, a delay occurred, and it was not put to press till the year 1530. It is a small 8vo., printed at different presses, and with different types. In the preface he complained, that there was not so much as one i in his New Testament, if it wanted a tittle over its head, but it had been noted and numbered to the ignorant people for a heresy, who were made to believe that there were many thousand heresy, who were made to believe that there were many thousand neresy, who were made to believe that there were many thousand heresies in it, and that it was so faulty as to be incapable of amendment or correction. In this year he published an answer to Sir Thomas More's dialogue, containing his reasons for the changes which he had introduced into his translation. The three former editions of Tindal's English New Testament being all sold off, the Dutch booksellers printed a fourth in this year, in a smaller volume and letter. In 1531, Tindal published an English version of the prophet Jonah, with a prologue, full of invective against the church of Rome. In 1534, was published a fourth Dutch edition, or the fifth in all, of Tindal's New Testament, in 12mo. In this same year, Tindal printed his own edition of the New Testament in English, which he had diligently revised and corrected; to which is prefixed a prologue; and at the end are the pistils of the Old Testament, closing with the following advertisement, "Imprinted at Antwerp, by Marten Emperour, anno M.D. xxxiv." Another edition was published this year in 16mo. and printed in a German letter. Upon his return to Antwerp, in 1534, King Henry VIII. and his council contrived means to have him seized and imprisoned. After a confinement of about a year and a half he was condemned to death by the emperor's decree in an assembly at heresies in it, and that it was so faulty as to be incapable of amendcondemned to death by the emperor's decree in an assembly Augsburg; and in 1536, he was strangled at Vilvorde (or Villefort), near Brussels, the place of his imprisonment, after which his body was reduced to ashes. He expired, praying repeatedly and earnest-ly, "Lord, open the King of England's eyes." Several editions of his Testament were printed in the year of his death. "His papers seem to have remained in the hands of his friends; at least so much of them as contained translations of the Old Testament from Joshua to Chronicles inclusive, with prefaces to several different books of Scriptures." Some writers on the history of English Bibles (by whose authority the author was misled in preceding editions) have asserted that Tindal had little or no skill in the Hebrew language, and therefore probably translated the Old Testament from the Latin: but Mr. Walter has proved, by a copious and elaborate collation of particular instances, that this able and pious martyr for the word of God was fully competent to translate, and did actually execute his translation, directly from the Hebrew original, and not from the German Version of Luther. (Letter to commodiously resort to read it. A royal declaration was also pub-Bp. Marsh, pp. 43—52. 75—90.) Few first translations, says the late Dr. Geddes, will be found preferable to Tindal's. It is astonishing, says this writer, how little obsolete the language of it is, even at this day; and in point of perspicuity, and noble simplicity, propriety of idiom, and purity of style, no English version has yet surpassed it. (Prospectus for a new translation of the Bible, p. 88.)

3. COVERDALE'S BIBLE.

Biblia. The Bible, that is, the holy Scripture of the Olde and New Testament faithfully and truly translated out of the Douche and Latyn in to Englishe. [Zurich.] M.D.XXXV. folio.

This first English translation of the entire Bible was made from This first English translation of the entire Bible was made from the Latin and German, and dedicated to king Henry VIII. by Myles Coverdale, who was greatly esteemed for his piety, knowledge of the Scriptures, and diligent preaching; on account of which qualities king Edward VI. subsequently advanced him to the see of Exeter. In his dedication and preface, he observes to this purpose, that, as to the present translation, it was neither his labour nor his desire to have this work put into his hand; but "when others were moved by the Holy Chost to undertake the cost of it," he was the more hold to engage in the execution of it. Agreeably he was the more bold to engage in the execution of it. therefore, to desire, he set forth this "special" translation, not in contempt of other men's translation, or by way of reproving them, but humbly and faithfully following his interpreters, and that under correction. Of these, he said, he used five different ones, who had translated the Scriptures not only into Latin, but also into Dutch. He further declared, that he had neither wrested nor altered so much as one word for the maintenance of any manner of sect, but had with a clear conscience purely and faithfully translated out of the foregoing interpreters, having only before his eyes the manifest truth of the Scriptures. But because such different translations, he saw, were apt to offend weak minds, he added that there came more understanding and knowledge of the Scripture by these sundry translations, than by all the glosses of sophistical doctors; and he therefore desires, that offence might not be taken, because one translated "scribe," and another "lawyer," one "repentance," and another "penance," or "amendment." This is the first English Bible allowed by royal authority; and also the first translation of Bible allowed by royal authority; and also the first translation of the whole Bible printed in our language. It was called a "special" translation, because it was different from the former English translations; as Lewis has shown! by comparing it with Tindal's. It is divided into six tomes or parts, adorned with wooden cuts, and furnished with Scripture references in the margin. The last page has these words: "Prynted in the yeare of our Lorde M.D.XXXV. and fynished the fourth day of October." Of this Bible there was another edition in large 4to. 1550, which was republished, with a new title 1553: and these eccording to Lewis, were all the editions another edition in large 4to. 1950, which was republished, with a new title, 1553; and these, according to Lewis, were all the editions of it. Coverdale, in this edition of the English Bible, prefixed to every book the contents of the several chapters, and not to the particular chapters, which was afterwards the case: and he likewise omitted all Tindal's prologues and notes. Soon after this Bible was finished, in 1536, Lord Cromwell, keeper of the privy seal, and the king's vicar-general and vicegerent in ecclesiastical matters, published injunctions to the clergy by the king's authority, the seventh of which was that every reserve or provingless of the the seventh of which was, that every parson, or proprietary of any parish church within this realm, should, before the first of August, provide a book of the whole Bible, both in Latin and in English, gos, provide a book of the whole Bible, both in Latin and in English, and lay it in the choir, for every man that would, to look and read therein; and should discourage no man from reading any part of the Bible either in Latin or English, but rather comfort, exhort, and admonish every man to read it, as the very word of God, and the spiritual food of a man's soul, &c.

4. MATTHEW'S BIBLE.

The Bible, which is all the Holy Scripture; In whych are contayned the Olde and Newe Testament, truly and purely translated into Englysh. By Thomas Matthew. M.D.XXXVII.

From the appearance of the types, it is most probable that this edition was printed at Marlborow in Hesse; it was edited by Coverdale, though it bears the name of Thomas Matthew, and it was published with the royal license, which was granted in consequence of Archbishop Cranmer's application to Lord Cromwell.² The Old Testament is Tindal's to the end of the second book of Chronicles; it then becomes a mere copy of Coverdale's Bible, with a few corrections, and continues so to the end of the Apocryphal Books. The New Testament is wholly a transcript of Tindal's version, as contained in his last published edition of the New Testament.³ In the year 1538, an injunction was published by Cromwell, as vicar-general of the kingdom, ordaining the clergy to provide, before a certain festival, one book of the whole Bible, of the largest volume, in English, and to set it up in some convenient place within their churches, where their parishioners might most commodiously resort to read it. A royal declaration was also published, which the curates were to read in their several churches, informing the people, that it had pleased the king's majesty to per mit and command the Bible, being translated into their mothertongue, to be sincerely taught by them, and to be openly laid forth in every parish church. But the curates were very cold in this affair,⁴ and read the king's injunctions and declarations in such a manner, that scarcely any body could know or understand what they read. Johnson⁵ adds, that they also read the word of God confusedly; and that they bade their parishioners, notwithstanding what they read, which they were compelled to read, "to do as they what they read, which they were compelled to read, "to do as they did in times past, and to live as their fathers, the old fashion being the best." Fox observes, that the setting forth of this book much the best." Fox observes, that the setting forth of this book much offended Gardiner and his fellow-bishops, both for the prologues, and especially because there was a table in the book chiefly about the Lord's supper, the marriage of priests, and the mass, which was there said not to be found in Scripture. Strype, however, says, 7 it was wonderful to see with what joy this book was received, not only among the more learned, and those who were noted lovers of the reformation, but generally all over England, among all the common people; and with what avidity God's word was read, and what resort there was to the places appointed for reading it. Every one that could, bought the book, and busily read it, or heard it read, and many elderly persons learned to read on purpose. During a vacancy in the see of Hereford, it was visited by Cranmer, who enjoined the clergy to procure, by the 1st of August, a whole Bible in Latin and English, or at least a New of August, a whole Bible in Latin and English, or at least a New Testament in these languages; to study every day one chapter of these books, conferring the Latin and English together, from the beginning to the end; and not to discourage any layman from reading them, but encourage them to it, and to read them for the reformation of their lives and knowledge of their duty.

5. HOLLYBUSHE'S NEW TESTAMENT.

The Newe Testament both in Latine and Englishe, eche correspondent to the other, after the vulgare Text, commonly called St. Jerome's. Faithfully translated by Johan Hollyburn. London, M.D.XXXVIII. 4to. M.D.XXXIX. 8vo.

This translation of the Latin Vulgate was executed by Myles Coverdale, who dedicated it in his own name to Henry VIII. It is not known why he assumed the fictitious name of John Hollybushe. We are indebted for our knowledge of this edition to Mr. Walter's letter to the Bishop of Peterborough, p. 31.

6. CRANMER'S GREAT BIBLE.

The Byble in Englyshe, that is to saye, the content of all the holy scripture bothe of ye olde and newe testament, truly translated after the veryte of the Hebreue and Greke textes by ye dylygent studye of diuerse excellent learned men, expert in the forsayde tonges. Printed by Rychard Grafton & Edward Whit-church. Cum privilegio ad imprimendum solum. M.D.XXXIX. folio.

In 1538, an edition in 4to. of the New Testament, in English, In 1538, an edition in 4to. of the New Testament, in English, with Erasmus's Latin translation, was printed, with the king's license, by Redman. In this year it was resolved to revise Matthew's Bible, and to print a correct edition of it. With this view Graflon went to France, where the workmen were more skilful, and the paper was both better and cheaper than in England, and obtained permission from Francis I., at the request of king Henry VIII., to print his Bible at Paris. But notwithstanding the royal license, the inquisition interposed, and issued an order, dated December 17, 1538, summoning the French printers, their English employers, and Coverdale, the corrector of the work, and prohibiting them to proceed; and the impression, consisting of 2500 copies, was seized, confiscated, and condemned to the flames. copies, was seized, confiscated, and condemned to the fames. Some chests, however, of these books escaped the fire, by the avarice of the person who was appointed to superintend the burning of them; and the English proprietors, who had fled on the first alarm, returned to Paris as soon as it subsided, and not only recovered some of these copies, but brought with them to London the presses, types, and printers, and, resuming the work, finished it in the following year.

As soon as the papal power was abolished in England, and the king's supremacy settled by parliament in 1534, Cranmer was very assiduous in promoting the translation of the Holy Scriptures into the vulgar tongue; well knowing how much the progress of the reformation depended upon this measure. Accordingly, he moved in convocation, that a petition should be presented to the king for leave to procure a new translation of the Bible. This motion was vigorously opposed by Gardiner, bishop of Winchester, and his party: but Cranmer prevailed. The arguments for a new translation, urged by Cranmer, and enforced by Queen Anne Bullen, who had then great interest in the king's affections, were so much con-

Hist. of Eng. Transl. p. 29.
 Strype's Life of Cranner, p. 58.
 Mr. Walter's Letter to the Bishop of Peterborough, pp. 101, 102. In the following pages he has corrected various errors of preceding historians of the English Bibles, respecting Matthew's (or rather Coverdale's) edition.

<sup>Lewis, p. 108.
Hist. Account, &c., in Bishop Watson's Collection, vol. iil. p. 94.
Acts, &c. vol. ii. p. 516.
Life of Cranmer, p. 64.</sup>

sidered by him, that, notwithstanding the opposition, public and private, on the part of Gardiner and his adherents, Henry gave orders for setting about it immediately. To prevent any revocation of the order, Cranmer, whose mind was intent on introducing a free use of the English Scriptures by faithful and able translators, proceeded without delay to divide an old English translation of the New Testament into nine or ten parts, which he caused to be transcribed into paper-books, and to be distributed among the most learned hishops and others; requiring that they would perfectly correct their respective portions, and return them to him at a limited time. When the assigned day came, every man sent his appropriate portion to Lambeth, except Stokesly, bishop of London. This laudable design of the archbishop failed; but the business was executed by other persons, whom he countenanced and en-couraged. In April, 1539, Grafton and Whitchurch printed the Bible, the title of which is given at the head of this article. From its containing a prologue or preface by archbishop Cranmer, as well:s from its size, it is commonly termed "Cranmer's Great Bible." A magnificent and probably unique convert it on vellum Bible." A magnificent and probably unique copy of it, on vellum, which formerly belonged to Henry VIII., is preserved in the Library of the British Museum. It is richly illuminated; and the vividness of the colours is very little impaired. This edition has a beautiful frontispiece, designed by Holbein, and particularly designed by Holbein, and particularly designed by Holbein, and particularly designed by Holbein. scribed and exhibited in an engraving by Lewis; and in the text those parts of the Latin Version, which are not found in the He-brew or Greek, are inserted in a smaller letter; such, for instance, as the three verses of the 14th Psalm, which are the 5th, 6th, and 7th, in the translation of the English liturgy, and the controverted clause in 1 John v. 7, 8.; and a mark is used to denote a difference of reading between the Hebrew and Chaldee, afterwards explained in a separate treatise. In this edition Matthew's Bible was re vised, and several alterations and corrections were made in the translation, especially in the book of Psalms. Tindal's prologues and notes, and the notes added by others, in the edition of 1537, were wholly omitted. The superintendence of this work was were wholly omitted. The superintendence of this work was confided to Coverdale, who, in a sermon at St. Paul's Cross, defended his translation from some slanderous reports which were then raised against it, acknowledging that "he himself now saw some faults, which, if he might review the book once again, as he had twice before, he doubted not he should amend: but for any heresy, he was sure that there were none maintained in his translation."

This is related by Dr. Fulke, who was one of Coverdale's auditors.

7. TAVERNER'S BIBLE.

The most sacred Bible, whiche is the holy scripture, contayning the olde and new testament, translated into English, and newly recognised with great diligence after most faythful exemplars, by Richard Taverner. London. Prynted by John Byddell. M.D.XXXIX. folio.

Richard Taverner, the editor of the Bible which bears his name, was educated at Christ Church, Oxford, patronized by Lord Cromwell, and probably encouraged by him to undertake the work, on account of his skill in the Greek longue. This is neither a bare revisal of Crammer's Bible, nor a new version; but a kind of intermediate work, being a correction of what is called "Matthew's Bible," many of whose marginal notes are adopted, and many omitted, and others inserted by the editor. It is dedicated to the king. After his patron's death, Taverner was imprisoned in the Tower for this work; but he had the address to reinstate himself in the king's favour. Wood² gives a particular account of Taverner; attributes his imprisonment to the influence of those bishops who were addicted to the Romish religion; and informs us, that his version was read in churches by royal authority.

8. OTHER EDITIONS OF THE ENGLISH BIBLE, DURING THE REMAINDER OF HENRY VIII.'S REIGN, AND THE REIGN OF EDWARD VI.

In November, 1539, the king, at the intercession of Cranmer, appointed Lord Cromwell to take special care that no person within the realm should attempt to print any English Bible for five years, but such as should be admitted by Lord Cromwell; and assigns this reason for the prohibition, that the Bible should be considered and perused in one translation, in order to avoid the manifold inconveniences to which human frailty might be subject from a diversity of translations, and the ill use that might be made of it. In the year 1540, two privileged editions of the Bible, which had been printed in the preceding year, issued from the press of Edward Whitchurch. Lewis mentions three other impressions of the "Great Bible," which appeared in the course of this year; two printed by Whitchurch, and one by Petyt and Redman. Cranmer wrote a preface for the editions of the year 1540, from which we learn the opinions and practice of those times. In May of this year, the curates and parishioners ¹ Johnson's Hist. Acc. in Bp. Watson's Tracts, vol. iii. p. 76. ² Hist. et Ant. Univ. Oxon. I. ii. p. 264. Edit. 1674. of every parisa were required by royal proclamation, to provide themselves with the Bible of the largest volume before the feast of All Saints, under the penalty of 40s, for every month during which they should be without it. The king charged all ordinaries to enforce the observance of this proclamation; and he apprized the people, that his allowing them the Scriptures in their mother-tongue was not his duty, but an evidence of his goodness and liberality to them, of which he exhorted them not to make any ill use. In May, 1541, one edition of Cranmer's Bible was finished by Richard Grafton; who, in the November following, completed also another Bible of the largest volume, which was superintended, at the king's command, by Tonstal, bishop of Durham, and Heath, bishop of Rochester.

In consequence of the king's settled judgment, "that his subjects should be nursed in Christ by reading the Scriptures," he again, on the 7th of May, published a brief or decree for setting up the Bible of the great volume in every parish church throughout England. However, this decree appears to have been very partially and reluctantly observed; and the bishops were charged, by a writer in 1546, with attempting to suppress the Bible, under pretence of preparing a version of it for publication within seven years. After the death of Cromwell in 1540, the bishops inclined to popery gained strength; and the English translation was represented to the king as very erroneous and heretical, and destructive of the harmony and peace of the kingdom. In the convocation assembled in Fcb. 1542, the archbishop, in the king's name, required the bishops and clergy to revise the translation of the New Testament, which, for that purpose, was divided into fourteen parts, and portioned out to fifteen bishops; the Apocalypse, on account of its difficulty, being assigned to two. Gardiner clogged this business with embarrassing instructions; and Cranmer, clearly perceiving the resolution of the bishops to defeat the proposed translation, procured the king's consent to refer the matter to the two universities, against which the bishops protested; but the archbishop declared his purpose to adhere to the will of the king his master. With this contest the business terminated; and the convocation was soon after dissolved. The Romish party prevailed also in parliament, which enacted a law that condemned and abolished 'Tindal's translation, and allowed other translations to remain in force, under certain restrictions. After the passing of this act, Grafton, the king's printer, was imprisoned; nor was he released without giving a bond of 300t, neither to print nor sell any more English Bibles till the king and the clergy should agree on a translation. In 1544, the Pentateuch was printed by John Day and William Seres; and in 1546, the king prohibited by proclamation the having and reading of Wicliffe's, Tindal's, and Coverdale's translations, and forbad the use of any other than what was allowed by parliament. From the history of English translations during the reign of Henry VIII. we learn that the friends to the reformation conducted themselves with zeal and prudence in the great work of introducing and improving English transactions of the Bible; that they encountered many difficulties from the dangerous inconstancy of a despotic prince, and from the inveterate prejudices of a strong Romish party; and that the English Scriptures were sought after and read with avidity by the bulk of the people.

Upon the accession of Edward VI. the severe stat. 34 and 35 Hen. VIII. c. 1. was repealed, and a royal injunction was published, that not only the whole English Bible should be placed in churches, but also the paraphrase of Erasmus in English to the end of the four Evangelists. It was likewise ordered by this injunction, that every parson, vicar, curate, &c. under the degree of a bachelor of divinity, should possess the New Testament, both in Latin and English, with the paraphrase of Erasmus upon it; and that the bishops, &c. in their visitations and synods should examine them, how they had profited in the study of the Holy Scriptures. It was also appointed, that the epistle and gospel of the mass should be read in English; and that on every Sunday and holiday, one chapter of the New Testament in English should be plainly and distinctly read at matins, and one chapter of the Old Testament at even-song. But in the year 1549, when the book of Common Prayer, &c. was finished, what nearly resembles our present custom was enjoined, viz. that after reading the Psalms in order at morning and evening prayer, two lessons, the first from the Old Testament, and the second from the New Testament, should be read distinctly with a loud voice. During the course of this reign, that is, in less than seven years and six months, eleven impressions of the whole English Bible were published, and six of the English New Testament; besides an English translation of the whole

New Testament, paraphrased by Erasmus. reprinted, according to the preceding editions, whether Tindal's, Coverdale's, Matthew's, Cranmer's, or Taverner's; that is, with a different text, and different notes. But it is doubted by the writer of the preface to King James's translation, whether there were any translation, or correction of a translation, in the course

In 1562, the "Great Bible," viz. that of Coverdale's translation, which had been printed in the time of Henry VIII. and also in the time of king Edward, was revised by Archbishop Parker, and reprinted for the use of the church; and this was to serve till that projected by his grace was ready for publication.

9. Anglo-Genevese Version.

(1.) New Testament. .

The Newe Testament of our Lord Iesus Christ, conferred diligently with the Greke and best approued translations. the arguments as wel before the chapters, as for every Boke and Epistle, also diversities of readings, and moste proffitable annotations of all harde places: whereunto is added a copious Table. At Geneva. Printed by Conrad Badius. 1557, 8vo. edition, Geneva, 1560, 8vo.

edition, Geneva, 1560, 8vo.

This translation was made by many of the principal English Reformers, who had been driven to Geneva during the sanguinary persecutions of the bigoted Queen Mary: it is the first in our language which contains the distinctions of verses by numerical figures after the manner of the Greek Testament, which had been published by Robert' Stephens in 1551. R. Stephens, indeed, published his figures in the margin: whereas the Geneva editors prefixed theirs to the beginning of minute subdivisions with breaks, after our present manner. When Queen Elizabeth passed through London from the tower to her coronation, a pageant was erected in Cheapside, representing Time coming out of a cave and leading a person clothed in white silk, who represented Truth, his daughter. Truth had the English Bible in her hand, on which was written "Verbum veritatis." Truth addressed the queen, and presented her with the book. She kissed it, held it in her hand, laid it on her breast, greatly thanked the city for their present, and added, that she would often and diligently read it. Upon a royal visitation in 1559, the Bible, and Erasmus's paraphrase, were restored to the churches; and articles of inquiry were exhibited, whether the clergy discouraged any from reading any part of the Scriptures. "Ministers were also enjoined to read every day one chapter of the Bible at least; and all who were admitted readers in the adverse were delity to read every day one chapter of the Bible at least; and all who were admitted readers chapter of the Bible at least; and all who were admitted readers in the church were daily to read one chapter at least of the Old Testament, and another of the New, with good advisement, to the increase of their knowledge."

(2.) The entire Bible.

The Bible: that is, the Holy Scriptures, conteined in the Olde and Newe Testament. Translated according to the Ebrewe and Greke, and conferred with the best translations in divers languages, with most profitable annotations upon all the harde places, and other thinges of great importance, as may appeare in the Epistle to the Reader. Imprinted at London by Christopher Barker. M.D.LXXVI. large 4to.1

The first edition of the Geneva Bible was printed at Geneva by The first edition of the Geneva Bible was printed at Geneva by Rowland Harle in 1560. Eight years after, it was printed in two volumes folio, and again at Geneva, 1570, folio; at London, in folio and quarto, in 1572, and in 1575 and 1576, in quarto. The translators were bishop Coverdale, Anthony Gilby, William Whittingham, Christopher Woodman. Thomas Sampson, and Thomas Cole; to whom some add John Knox, John Bodleigh, and John Pullain; all zealous Calvinists, both in doctrine and discipline: but the chief and the most learned of them were the three first. Professing to observe the sense, and to adhere as much as possible to the words. and the most learned of them were the three first. Professing to observe the sense, and to adhere as much as possible to the words of the original, and in many places to preserve the Hebrew phraseology, after the unremitting labour and study of more than two years, they finished their translation, and published it; with an epistle dedicatory to the queen, and another, by way of preface, to their brethren of England, Scotland, and Ireland. Besides the translation, the editors of the Geneva Bible noted in the margin the diversities of speech and reading, especially according to the Hebrew; then inserted in the text, with another kind of letter, every word that seemed to be necessary for explaining any particular sentence; in the division of the verses, they followed the Hebrew examples, and added the number to each verse; they also noted the principal matters, and the arguments, both for each book and each chapter; they set over the head of every page some remarkthe principal matters, and the arguments, both for each book and each chapter; they set over the head of every page some remarkable word or sentence, for helping the memory; they introduced brief annotations for ascertaining the text and explaining obscure words; they set forth with figures certain places in the books of Moses, of the Kings, and Ezekiel, which could not be made intelligible by any other description; they added maps of divers places and countries mentioned in the Old and New Testament; and they annexed two tables, one for the interpretation of Hebrew names, and the other containing all the chief matters of the whole Bible.

In Lewis's History, pp. 264—269. (8vo. edit.) there is a full description of the contents of this volume.

Of this translation, there were above thirty editions in folio, 4to., or 8vo., mostly printed by the queen's and king's printer, between the years 1560 and 1616. Editions of it were likewise printed at Geneva, Bible, (as to those of 1599 and of 1611) is subjoined Beza's translation of the New Testament, Englished by L. Tompson.

10. ARCHBISHOP PARKER'S, OF, THE BISHOPS' BIBLE.

The holie Bible. Imprinted at London in povvles Churchyarde, by Richard Jugge. M.D.LXVIII. folio.

In the year 1568, the Bible, proposed by Archbishop Parker three years before, was completed. This edition, according to Le Long, years before, was completed. This edition, according to Le Long, was undertaken by royal command; and it is mentioned by Strype, to the honour of the archbishop, that he had resolution to perform what Cranmer, as opposed by the bishops of this days, had in vain endeavoured to accomplish. In this performance, distinct portions of the Bible, at least 15 in number, were allotted to select men of learning and abilities, appointed, as Fuller says, by the queen's commission; but it still remains uncertain who, and whether one or more, revised the rest of the New Testament. Eight of persons employed were bishops; whence the book was called the "Bishops' Bible," and the "Great English Bible." The archbishop employed other critics to compare this Bible with the original languages, and with the former translations; one of whom was Laurence, a man famous in those times for his knowledge of Greek, whose castigations the Bishops' Bible followed exactly. His grace also sent instructions concerning the method which his translators were to observe; and recommended the addition of some short marginal notes for the illustration or correction of the text. But the particulars of these instructions are not known. The archbishop, however, directed, reviewed, and finished the whole, which was printed and published, in 1568, in a large folio size, and with a beautiful English letter on rough report and only like the control of the control lish letter, on royal paper; and embellished with several cuts of the most remarkable things in the Old and New Testaments, and in the Apocrypha, with maps cut in wood, and other engravings on copper. It has numerous marginal references and notes, and many useful tables. It also has numerous insertions between brackets, and in a smaller character; which are equivalent to the Italics afterwards used by James's translators. Dr. Geddes is of opinion, a that Italic supplements were first used by Arias Montanus, who died in 1598. The several additions from the vulgar Latin, inserted in the "Great Bible," are omitted; and verse 7. of 1 John v., which was before distinguished by its being printed in a different letter, is here printed without any distinction; and the chapters are divided into verses. In the following year, 1569, it was again published in large 8vo. for the use of private families. This Bible was reprinted in 1572, in large folio, with several corrections and amendments, and several prolegomena; this is called "Matthew Parker's Bible." With regard to this Bible, Lewis observes, that the editions of it are mostly in folio and 4to., and that he never heard but of useful tables. It also has numerous insertions between brackets, of it are mostly in folio and 4to., and that he never heard but of one in 8vo.; for which he supposes this to be the reason, that it was principally designed for the use of churches. In the convocation of the province of Canterbury, which met in April, 1571, a canon was made, enjoining the churchwardens to see that the Holy Bible be in every church in the largest volumes, if convenient; and it was likewise ordered, that every archbishop and bishop, every dean and chief residentiary, and every archdeacon, should have one of these Bibles in their cathedrals, churches, and families. This translation was used in the churches for forty years; though the Geneva Bible was more read in private houses.

11. King James's Bible, or, the authorized Version now IN USE.

The last English version that remains to be noticed, is the authorized translation now in use, which is commonly called King James's Bible. He succeeded to the throne of England in 1602; and, several objections having been made to the Bishops' Bible at the conference held at Hampton Court in 1603, the king in the following year gave orders for the undertaking of a new version, and fifty-four learned men were appointed to this important labour: but, before it was commenced, seven of the persons nominated were either dead or had declined the task; for the list, as given us by Fuller,4 comprises only forty-seven names. All of them, however, were pre-eminently distinguished for their piety and for their profound learning in the original languages of the sacred writings; and such of them as survived till the commencement of the work were divided into six classes. Ten were to meet at Westminster, and to translate from the Pentateuch to the end of the second book of Kings. Eight assembled at Cambridge, were to finish the rest of the Historical Books, and the Hagiographa. At Oxford, seven were to undertake the four greater prophets, with the Lamentations of Jeremiah, and the twelve minor prophets. The four Gospels, Acts of the Apostles, and the Apocalypse, were assigned to another company of eight, also at Oxford: and the Epistles of St. Paul, together with the remaining ca-

<sup>Letter to the Bishop of London, p. 33.
Hist. Engl. Transl. p. 61.
Church History, Book x. pp. 44—46.</sup>

Lastly, another company at Cambridge were to Westminster. translate the apocryphal books, including the prayer of Manasseh. To these six companies of venerable translators, the king gave the following instructions:-

"I. The ordinary Bible read in the church, commonly called the Bishops' Bible, to be followed, and as little altered as the original will permit.

The names of the prophets and the holy writers, with the other names in the text, to be retained as near as may be, accordingly as they are vulgarly used.

"3. The old ecclesiastical we The old ecclesiastical words to be kept, as the word church not to be translated congregation.

4. When any word hath divers significations, that to be kept which hath been most commonly used by the most eminent fathers, being agreeable to the propriety of the place and the analogy of

"5. The division of the chapters to be altered either not at all, or as little as may be, if necessity so require.

"6. No marginal notes at all to be affixed, but only for the explanation of the Hebrew or Greek words, which cannot, without some circumlocution, so briefly and fitly be expressed in the text. "7. Such quotations of places to be marginally set down, as shall serve for the fit references of one Scripture to another.

"8. Every particular man of each company to take the same chapter or chapters; and having translated or amended them severally by himself, where he thinks good, all to meet together, to confer what they have done, and agree for their part what shall

9. As any one company hath despatched any one book in this manner, they shall send it to the rest, to be considered of seriously and judiciously: for his majesty is very careful in this point.

"10. If any company, upon the review of the book so sent, shall doubt or differ upon any places, to send them word thereof, to note the places, and therewithal to send their reasons; to which if they consent not, the difference to be compounded at the general meeting, which is to be of the chief persons of each company, at the end of the work.

"11. When any place of special obscurity is doubted of, letters to be directed by authority, to send to any learned in the land for his judgment in such a place.

"12. Letters to be sent from every bishop to the rest of his clergy, admonishing them of this translation in hand, and to move and charge as many as, being skilful in the tongues, have taken pains in that kind, to send their particular observations to the company, either at Westminster, Cambridge, or Oxford, according as it was directed before in the king's letter to the archbishop.

"13. The directors in each company to be the Deans of Westminster and Chester for Westminster, and the King's Professors in Hebrew and Greek in the two Universities.

"14. These translations to be used, when they agree better with the text than the Bishops' Bible, viz. Tindal's, Coverdale's, Mat-

's, Whitchurch's, Geneva.

["15. Besides the said directors before mentioned, three or four of the most ancient and grave divines in either of the Universities, not employed in translating, to be assigned by the Vice-chancellor, upon conference with the rest of the heads, to be overseers of the translation, as well Hebrew as Greek, for the better observation of the 4th rule above specified."]1

According to these regulations, each book passed the scrutiny of all the translators successively. In the first instance, each individual translated every book, which was allotted to his division. Secondly, the readings to be adopted were agreed upon by the whole of that company assembled together, at which meeting each translator must have been solely occupied by his own version. The book, thus finished, was sent to each of the other companies to be again examined; and at these meetings it probably was, as Selden informs us, that "one read the translation, the rest holding in their hands some Bible, either of the learned tongues, or French, Spanish, Italian, &c. If they found any fault, they spoke; if not, he read on." Further, the translators were empowered to call to their assistance any learned men, whose studies enabled them to be serviceable, when an urgent occasion of difficulty presented itself. The translation was commenced in the spring of 1607, and the completion of it occupied almost three years. At the expiration of that time, three copies of the whole Bible, thus translated and revised, were sent to London,-one from Oxford, one from Cambridge, and a third from Westminster. Here a committee of six, two being deputed by the companies at Oxford, two by those at Cambridge, and two by those at Westminster, reviewed and polished the whole work: which was finally revised by Dr. Smith (afterwards bishop of Gloucester), who wrote the preface, and by Dr. Bilson, bishop of Winchester. This translation of the Bible was first published in folio in 1611. After the publication of the present authorized translation, all ¹ The preceding rules are given from a corrected copy in the Rev. H. J. Todd's Vindication of our authorized Translation and Translators of the Bible, pp. 9-42. London, 1819, 8vo.

Selden's Table Talk, article Bible. Works, vol. iii. col. 2009.

nonical epistles, were allotted to another company of seven, at | the other versions gradually fell into disuse, with the exception of the Psalms, and the Epistles and Gospels in the book of Common Prayer, which were still continued, the former according to the translation of Cranmer's Bible, and the latter according to that of the Bishops' Bible, until the final revision of the Liturgy, in 1661; at which time the Epistles and Gospels were taken from the present version, but the Psalms are still retained according to the translation of Cranmer's Bible.3

> Upwards of two centuries have elapsed since the authorized English Version of the Holy Scriptures, now in use, was given to the British nation. During that long interval, though many passages in particular books have been elucidated by learned men, with equal felicity and ability; yet its general fidelity, perspicuity, and excellence, have deservedly given our present translation a high and distinguished place in the judgment of the Christian world, wherever the English language is known or read. Of late years, however, this admirable version—the guide and solace of the sincere Christian-has been attacked with no common virulence, and arraigned as being deficient in fidelity, perspicuity, and elegance; ambiguous and incorrect, even in matters of the highest importance. The principal antagonists of this version, in the present day (to omit the bold and unmeasured assertions of the late Dr. Geddes, and others), are Mr. John Bellamy, in the prospectus, preface, and notes of his new translation of the Bible, and Sir James Bland Burges, in his "Reasons in favour of a New Translation of the Scriptures," (8vo. London, 1819,) which were designed as a defence of Mr. Bellamy against the severe strictures of the Quarterly Review. The former of these writers, in his octavo prospectus issued in 1818, affirmed that "no translation has been made from the original Hebrew since the 128th year of Christ:" and that "in the fourth century Jerome made his Latin version from this" [the Greek] "translation; from which came the Latin Vulgate, and from the Latin Vulgate all the European translations have been made; thereby perpetuating all the errors of the first translators." These erroneous and unqualified assertions of Mr. Bellamy, as well as the assertions or implications of Sir J. B. Burges, have been answered in detail by the Rev. Messrs. Whittaker and Todd, in their works cited below,5 to which the reader is referred: and, in further refutation of Mr. Bellamy's assertions, it is sufficient to refer to the account already given of our present authorized version.6

> We shall conclude the present notice of their admirable version, with a few of the very numerous testimonies to its value, which have been collected by Archbishop Newcome and Mr. Todd, and shall subjoin two or three others that appear to have eluded their

> 1. JOHN SELDEN.7-" The English translation of the Bible is the best translation in the world, and renders the sense of the original best, taking in for the English translation the Bishops' Bible as well as King James's. The translators in King James's time took an excellent That part of the Bible was given to him, who was most exway. That part of the Bible was given to him, who was most excellent in such a tongue: as the apocrypha to Andrew Downs: and then they met together, and one read the translation, the rest holding in their hands some Bible, either of the learned tongues, or French, Spanish, Italian, &c. If they found any fault, they spoke; if not, he read on. There is no book so translated as the Bible for the purpose. If I translate a French book into English, I turn it into English phrase, not into French-English. Il fait froid; I say, 'tis cold, not makes cold. But the Bible is rather translated into English words than into English phrase. The Hebraisms are kept, and lish words than into English phrase. the phrase of that language is kept."

> ³ About the time when King James resolved on a new translation of the Scriptures, another translation was finished by Mr. Ambrose Usher, the elder brother of Archbishop Usher. It is still in manuscript, and is preserved in the library of Trinity College, Dublin. There are likewise extant in print several English translations of the Old and New Testament, and of detached parts thereof: but as these are more or less accompanied with notes, an account of them will be found in a subsequent part of this Appendix.

A notice of Mr. Bellamy's work will also be found in a subsequent part

*A notice of Mr. Bellamy's work will also be found in a subsequent part of this Appendix.

*A Vindication of our authorized Translation and Translators of the Bible, and of preceding English Versions authoritatively commended to the Notice of those Translators, &c. &c. By the Rev. H. J. Todd, M.A. London, 1819, 8vo.—An Historical and Critical Inquiry into the Interpretation of the Hobrew Scriptures, with Remarks on Mr. Bellamy's New Translation. By J. W. Whittaker, M.A. London, 1819, 8vo.

*The seventh section of Mr. Todd's Vindication of the latter translation contains an account of the forty-seven translators who were employed on it, and of the state of learning in their time. This does not admit of abridgment, but the result is highly satisfactory, and proves that those venerable men were eminently skilled in the Oriental and Greek languages, and consequently were, in every respect, fitted for the high and honourable task assigned to them by their sovereign. That Luther's German Version was made from the original languages of the Scriptures, see page 43. infra; and for other European translations, see the following pages of this section.

*Selden, Works, iii. 2009. This is cited by Abp. Newcome, without addition. Selden was the contemporary of the translators. He died in 1654, at the age of 70.

divers learned men at the command of King James, though it may justly contend with any now extant in any other language in Europe, was yet carped and cavilled at by diverse among ourselves; espewas yet carped and cavined at by diverse among ourselves; especially by² one, who being passed by, and not employed in the work, as one, though skilled in the Hebrew, yet of little or no judgment in that or any other kinde of learning, was so highly offended that he would needs undertake to show how many thousand places they had falsely rendered, when as he could hardly make good his undertaking in any one."

taking in any one?"
3. Bishor Lowth.3—"The vulgar translation of the Bible—is the best standard of our language.

4. Bishop Horsley.4—"When the translators in James the First's time began their work, they prescribed to themselves some rules, which it may not be amiss for all translators to follow. Their reverence for the sacred Scriptures induced them to be as literal as they could, to avoid obscurity; and it must be acknowledged, that they were extremely happy in the simplicity and dignity of their expressions. Their adherence to the Hebrew idiom is supposed at once to have enriched and adorned our language; and as they laboured for the general benefit of the learned and the unlearned, they avoided all words of Latin original, when they could find words in their own language, even with the aid of adverbs and propositions, which would express their meaning."

5. Bishor Middleron. — "The style of our present version is incomparably superior to any thing which might be expected from the finical and perverted taste of our own age. It is simple, it is harmonious, it is energetic; and, which is of no small importance, use has made it familiar, and time has rendered it sacred."

6. Dr. White, Professor of Arabic at Oxford.—"After stating the accuracy and scrupulous attention of the authors of this translation, he adds:—"When the version appeared, it appeared, likewise, that this accuracy and scruppliousness had not been mis-employed. The necessities of the national church could require nothing further. It contained nothing but what was pure in its representation of scriptural doctrine, nothing but what was animated in its expressions of devout affection : general fidelity to its original is hardly more its characteristic, than sublimity in itself. The English language acquired new dignity by it; and has hardly acquired additional purity since; it is still considered as a standard of our tongue."... "Upon the whole, the national churches of Europe will have abundant reason to be satisfied, when their versions of Scripture shall approach in point of accuracy, purity, and sublimity, to the acknowledged excellence of our English translation."6

7. Rev. J. W. Whittaker."—"The highest value has always been attached to our translation of the Bible. Sciolists, it is true, have often attempted to raise their own reputation on the ruin of the state of the server of the server of the English Bible have frequent.

that of others; and the authors of the English Bible have frequently been calumniated by charlatans of every description; but it may safely be asserted, without fear of contradiction, that the nation at large has always paid our translators the tribute of veneration and 1 Dr. Bryan Walton's Considerator considered, or a defence of his Polyglott Bible, &c. 1659, p. 5. This is not noticed by Abp. Newcome. But a most important testimony it is. He was one of those most learned divines, who, in 1656, were publicly requested to consider of the translations and impressions of the Bible, and to offer their opinion therein to the committee for religion; Bulstrode Whitelock having the care of this affair, at whose house they met. They pretended to discover some mistakes in the last English translation; but the business came to nothing. See Lewis, &c. p. 955.; Johnson, &c. p. 99. In the above citation we have the opinion of Walton (than whom a more competent judge neither friends nor foes of our translation can produce), three years subsequent to this meeting, upon the excellence of this version, together with his notice of an impotent attack made upon it. He has also, in the Prolegomena to his Biblia Polyglotta, 1657, placed our own in the highest rank of European translations.

2 This person was undoubtedly Hugh Broughton, fellow of Christ College, Cambridge, who had certainly attained great knowledge in the Hebrew and Greek tongues. But a more conceited or arrogant man hardly existed. With the Bishops' Bible he had found great fault; insisted upon the necessity of a new translation; pronounced his own sufficiency to make one exactly arreeable to the original text of the Hebrew; boasted of encouragement to this purpose from men of all ranks; and at length excited a very warrantable suspicion, that, in so important atask, he was unfit to be trusted. Thus discountenanced, he went abroad; leaving behind him this quaint character, expressive at once of his vanity and learning, "that he was sone to teach the Jews Hebrew!" See Sir J. Harrington's Brief View of the State of the Church, 1653, p. 75. He returned to England, however, in 1611, and commenced his defamation against the new translation to which Walton adverts. By the contents of a little tract, which he published in 1603, entitled "

Lowth, Introd. to Eng. Grammar, 2d edit. p. 93., cited by Archbishop Newcome.

4 Review of Dr. Geddes's Translation of the Holy Bible, Brit. Crit., July, The reviewer is now known to have been the late Bishop Horsley.

Borsley.

Dr. Middleton (late Bishop of Calcutta) on the Greek Article, p. 323.

White's Sermon before the University of Oxford, recommending a civisal of the English Translation of the Old Testament, p. 9. Oxford, 1779.

4to.
7 Whittaker, Hist. and Crit. Enq., p. 92.

2. Bishop Walton.!—"The last English translation made by gratitude which they so justly merit. Like the mighty of former times, learned men at the command of King James, though it may times, they have departed, and shared the common fate of mortalities of mortalities are the common fate of mortalities. The common fate of mortalities are the common fate of mortalities are the common fate of mortalities. Their reputation for learning and piety has not descended with them to the grave, though they are there alike heedless of the voice of calumny, and deaf to the praise which admiring posterity awards to the great and good. Let us not, therefore, too hastily conclude that they have fallen on evil days and evil tongues, because it has occasionally happened that an individual, as inferior to them in erudition as in talents and integrity, is found questioning their motives, or denying their qualifications for the task which they so well performed. Their version has been used, ever since its first apforsaken her; and has justly been esteemed by all for its general faithfulness, and the severe beauty of its language. It has survived the convulsion both of church and state, being universally respected by the enemies of both, when the established religion was persecuted with the most rancorous malignity; as if its merits were in-dependent of circumstances, and left at a distance all the petty rivalships of sectarianism, and the effervescence of national phren-It may be compared with any translation in the world, without fear of inferiority; it has not shrunk from the most rigorous examination; it challenges investigation; and, in spite of numerous attempts to supersede it, has hitherto remained unrivalled in the affections of the country.'

8. Dr. Doddrigoe.—"On a diligent comparison of our translation with the original, we find that of the New Testament, and I might also add that of the Old, in the main, faithful and judicious. You know, indeed, that we do not scruple, on some occasions, to animadvert upon it: but you also know, that these remarks affect not the fundamentals of religion, and seldom reach any further than the beauty of a figure, or at most the connection of an argument.

9. The Testimony of Dr. John Taylor, of Norwich, author of the excellent Hebrew and English Concordance (whose theological creed, we regret to say, was Arian), is yet more striking.—"In above the space of one [now two] hundred years," says he, "learning may have received considerable improvements; and by that means some inaccuracies may be found in a translation more than a means some inaccuracies may be found in a translation more than a [two] hundred years old. But you may rest fully satisfied, that as our English translation is, in itself, by far the most excellent book in our language, so it is a pure and plentiful fountain of dwine knowledge, giving a TRUE, CLEAR, and FULL account of the dwine dispensations, and of the gospel of our salvation: insomuch that whoever studies the Bible, The English Bible, is sure of gaining that knowledge and faith, which, if duly applied to the heart and conversation, WILL INFALLIBLY GUIDE HIM TO ETERNAL LIFE."9

10. DR. GEDDES. 10—" The highest eulogiums have been made on the translation of Lumes the First both by our own writers and by the translation of James the First, both by our own writers and by foreigners. And indeed, if accuracy, fidelity, and the strictest attention to the letter of the text, be supposed to constitute the qualities of an excellent version, this of all versions must, in general, be accounted the most excellent. Every sentence, every word, every syllable, every letter and point, seem to have been weighed with the nicest exactitude, and expressed either in the text, or margin, with the greatest precision. Pagninus himself is hardly more literal; and it was well remarked by Robertson, above a hundred years ago, that it may serve for a Lexicon of the Hebrew language, as well as for a translation."

11. Dr. James Beattie.—"It is a striking beauty in our English Bible, that, though the language is always elegant and nervous, and for the most part very harmonious, the words are all plain and common-no affectation of learned terms, or of words of Greek or Latin etymology."11

12. Dr. Adam Clarke.—"Those who have compared most of 12. Dr. ADAM CLARKE.—"Those who have compared most of the European translations with the original, have not scrupled to say, that the English translation of the Bible, made under the direction of King James the First, is the most accurate and faithful of the whole. Nor," adds Dr. C., "is this its only praise: the translators have scized the very spirit and soul of the original, and expressed this almost every where with pathos and energy. Besides, our translators have not only made a standard translation, but they have made their translation the standard of our language: the English tongue in their day was not equal to such a work—but God enabled them to stand as upon Mount Singi, and exame un their enabled them to stand as upon Mount Sinai, and crane up their enabled them to stand as upon Mount Smal, and crane up their country's language to the dignity of the originals, so that, after the lapse of two hundred years, the English Bible is, with very few exceptions, the standard of the purity and excellence of the English tongue. The original, from which it was taken, is alone superior to the Bible translated by the authority of King James." 13. The Rev. Professor STUART, of Andover, Massachusetts, the most eminent orientalist in North America.—Contrasting the English version with the Letin Valente, he sews: "Owns is on the lish version with the Latin Vulgate, he says: "Ours is, on the whole, a most noble production for the time in which it was made. The divines of that day were very different Hebrew scholars from

Dr. Doddridge's Works, vol. ii. p. 329. Leeds edit.
Scheme of Scripture Divinity, ch. xl., in Bishop Watson's Collection of Theological Tracts, vol. i. p. 188.
Dr. Geddes's Prospectus of a new Translation of the Holy Bible, p. 92. Cited by Abp. Newcome, with a long extract from the author.—Todd's Vindication, pp. 68. 70. 75. 80.
Sir William Forbes's Life of Dr. Beattie, vol. ii. p. 193. 8vo. edit.
Dr. A. Clarke's General Preface to his Commentary on the Bible, vol. i. p. 21.

With the exception of Bishop Lowth's classic work upon Isaiah, no other effort at translating, among the English divines, will compare, either in respect to taste, judgment, or sound understanding of the Hebrew, with the authorized version."

14. The American Monthly Review.—" No new translation can succeed, which is not based upon that now in use. ology of King James's translation is connected too intimately with the religious impressions of individuals, and with almost all the religious literature extant in our language, to be renounced by those who clierish the former and renounce the latter. Nor would we wish to renounce it, if the Christian public would consent to it. It is euphonious, elegant, and lofty. It comprises few words now obsolete,—few which every well-trained child does not understand. And King James's translation has been itself the reason, why its phraseology has not become obsolete. It has been as an anchor to the English language, which, before that work was undertaken, had been constantly fluctuating."²

Notwithstanding these decisive testimonies to the superior excellency of our authorized version, it is readily admitted that it is not immaculate, and that a revision or correction of it is an object of desire to the friends of religion, were it only to silence the perpetually repeated cavils of the opposers of divine revelation; who, studiously disregarding the various satisfactory answers which have been given to their unfounded objections, persevere in repeating them, so long as they find a very few mistranslated passages in the authorized version. But that the existing translation is so faulty in innumerable instances, and so ambiguous and incorrect even in matters of the highest importance, as to render a new translation absolutely necessary,-or that sacred criticism is yet so far advanced as to furnish all the means that may be expected, we hesitate not to deny. Indeed, when we consider the very few REAL faults which the most minute and scrupulous inquirer has been able to find in our present translation; when we perceive such distinguished critics as Archbishop Newcome and Bishop Horsley (to mention no more), producing very discordant interpretations of the same text or word, we cannot but call to mind, with gratitude and admiration, the integrity, wisdom, fidelity, and learning of the venerable translators, of whose pious labours we are now reaping the benefit; who, while their reverence for the Sacred Scriptures induced them to be as literal as they could, to avoid obscurity, have been extremely happy in the simplicity and dignity of their expressions, and who, by their adherence to the Hebrew idiom, have at once enriched and adorned our language. And instead of being impatient for a new translation, we shall (to adopt the energetic expression of Mr. Todd) "take up THE BOOK, which from our infancy we have known and loved, with increased delight; and resolve not hastily to violate, in regard to itself, the rule which it records:- 'ron-SAKE NOT AN OLD FRIEND, FOR THE NEW IS NOT COMPARABLE TO HIM."

"Happy, thrice happy, hath our English nation been, since God hath given it learned translators to express, in our mother tongue, the heavenly mysteries of his holy word, delivered to his church in the Hebrew and Greek languages; who, although they may have in some matters of no importance unto salvation, as men, been deceived and mistaken, yet they have faithfully delivered the whole substance of the heavenly doctrine contained in the Holy Scriptures, without any heretical translations or wilful corruptions. With what reverence, joy, and gladness, then, ought we to receive this blessing! Let us read the Scriptures with an humble, modest, and teachable disposition: with a willingness to embrace all truths which are plainly delivered there, how contrary soever to our own opinions and prejudices; and, in matters of difficulty, readily hearken to the judgment of our teachers, and those that are set over us in the Lord; check every presumptuous thought or reasoning which exalts itself against any of those mysterious truths therein revealed; and if we thus search after the truth in the love of it, we shall not miss of that knowledge which will make us wise unto salvation."³

Editions of the Authorized Version, with Parallel References. 4

1. The Holy Bible, conteyning the Old Testament and the New: Newly translated out of the Originall tongues, & with the former from what most of their successors have been, in England or Scotland. | Translations diligently compared and revised by his Maiestie's speciall Comandement. Imprinted at London by Robert Barker, Printer to the King's most Excellent Maiestie. Anno Dom. 1611,

> This is the title of the first edition of the authorized English This is the file of the hist edition of the authorized Enginery version: it is retained in all the subsequent editions, the spelling being modernized, and "command" being substituted for "commandement." To this edition there are prefixed a Calendar of Lessons, the Genealogical Tables ascribed to the industrious antiquary John Speed, and an engraved map of Canaan, together with an alpha-betical list of the places mentioned in the Scriptures. The first betical list of the places memorical adjusted between the years In some of the very numerous editions printed between the years 1638 and 1685, an alteration is introduced in Acts vi. 3.; where, instead of we may appoint, we read ve may appoint. This alteration has been charged upon the Independents during the time of Cromwell's usurpation; but, as the first Bible in which it was observed is that printed at Cambridge, by Buck and Daniel, in 1638 (which was revised, by royal command, by Dr. Ward, Dr. Goad, W. Borg Mr. Med, and other weights and particularly the command of the control o Mr. Boys, Mr. Mede, and other eminent scholars),5 it is in all pro-Mr. Boys, Mr. Mede, and other emment scholars), it is in all probability an error of the press, without any design to favour any particular party. In 1653, an edition was printed by John Field, at Cambridge, in 24mo., which is of extreme rarity and beauty: it is called the Peart Bible, from the very small type with which it was printed, but is disgraced by very numerous errata, some of which are of importance. An imitation of it was made in Holland, in 1658; but the genuine edition is known by having the first four psalms on a page, without turning over. In 1660, the land, in 1658; but the genuine edition is known by having the first four psalms on a page, without turning over. In 1660, the same printer executed a splendid folio edition of the Bible, which was illustrated with chorographical plates, engraved by Ogilby, an eminent artist of that time: he also printed several other editions in 8vo. and 12mo., but they are not considered as typographical curiosities. From the time of Field to the end of the seventeenth century, several curious flat Bibles were printed, which are denominated preaching Bibles, from the use made of them in the pulpit during that period. The typographical execution of them is very clear, the type being a broad-faced letter, upon thin paper, with a few marginal notes, which gives them a superiority over many of the thick and heavy volumes that have since been printed. In few marginal notes, which gives them a superiority over many of the thick and heavy volumes that have since been printed. In 1683, this translation was corrected, and many references to parallel texts were added by Dr. Scattergood; and in 1701, a very fine edition was published, in large folio, under the direction of Dr. Tenison, Archbishop of Canterbury, with chronological dates, and an index by Bishop Lloyd, and accurate tables of Scripture weights and measures by Bishop Cumberland: but this edition is said to abound with tracerchical correct. and measures by Bishop Cumberland: but this edition is said to abound with typographical errors. The latest and most complete revision is that made by the late Rev. Dr. Blayney, under the direction of the vice-chancellor and delegates of the Clarendon press, at Oxford. In this edition, which was printed both in quarto and folio, in 1769, the punctuation was thoroughly revised; the words printed in Italics were examined and corrected by the Hebrew and Greek originals; the proper names, to the etymology of which allusions are made in the text, were translated and entered in the margin; the summaries of chapters, and running titles, at the top of each page corrected; some material errors in the chronology rectified; and the marginal references were re-examined and corrected, and thirty thousand four hundred and ninety-five new references were inserted in the margin, From the singular pains bestowed, in order to render this edition as accurate as possible, it stowed, in order to render this edition as accurate as possible, it has hitherto been considered the standard edition, from which all has hitherto been considered the standard edition, from which all subsequent impressions have been executed. A few copies of the quarto edition were printed on thick paper, which are now very rare: nearly the whole impression having been destroyed by fire. Notwithstanding the great labour and attention bestowed by Dr. Blayney, his edition must now yield the palm of accuracy to the very beautiful and correct edition published by Messrs. Eyre and Strahan, his majesty's printers (but printed by Mr. Woodfall), in 1806, and again in 1813, in quarto; as not fewer than one hundred and sixteen errors were discovered in collating the edition of 1806 with Dr. B.'s, and one of these errors was an omission of con-the Bible; and Dr. Dibdin's Edition of Herbert's and Ames's Typographical Antiquities, of which work four volumes have been published.

1 Kilbourn's "Dangerous Errors in some late printed Bibles," p. 6. London, 1659, 4to.

don, 1653, 410.

Another material error has crept into many modern editions of the English Bible in 1 Tim. iv. 16., where we read Take heed unto thyself and Thy doctrine. Instead of THE doctrine. The origin of this mustake (which the author of this work has found in various editions printed between the year 1690 and the commencement of the present century) it is now impossible to ascertain. It was first pointed out by the eminently learned Bishor Heeder.

sible to ascertain. It was first pointed out by the enuments results in Jorsley.

'Mr. D'Israeli has an interesting article on the above noticed "Pearl Bibles and Six Thousand Errata," from which the following instances are copied:—Rom vi. 13. "Neither yield ye your members as instruments of righteousness unto sin;"—for unrighteousness.—I Cor. vi. 3. "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall inherit the kingdom of God!"—for shall not inherit. "This erratum," Mr. D. remarks, "served as the foundation of a dangerous doctrine: for many libertines urged the text from this corrupt Bible, against the reproofs of a divine." Curiosities of Literature (2d Series), vol. iii. p. 318. To the two preceding instances we may add that in John ix. 2. the words "or who hath opened his eyes, we know not," are wholly omitted. (Kilbourn's "Dangerous Errors in some late printed Ribles," p. 7.) 1 Stuart's Dissertations on the Importance and Best Method of studying the Original Languages of the Bible, p. 61.
2 The American Monthly Review, vol. iii. (March, 1833), p. 224.
3 The American Monthly Review, vol. iii. (March, 1833), p. 224.
4 The American Monthly Review, vol. iii. (March, 1833), p. 224.
5 Johnson's Hist. Acc. in the concluding paragraph. Bp. Watson's Tracts, vol. iii. p. 100.
4 The reader, who is desirous of perusing more minute bibliographical accounts of the English Versions executed anterior to King James's (or the authorized English) version of the Bible: is referred to Lewis's History of the principal Translations of the Bible: Dr. Cotton's List of Editions of Vol. II.—App.

3 X

siderable importance.1 Messrs. Eyre and Strahan's editions may | therefore be regarded as approaching as near as possible to what bibliographers term an immaculate text. Only one erratum, we be-lieve, has been discovered in the edition of 1806. The following particulars relative to the above-mentioned London editions of the Bible may not be unacceptable to the bibliographical reader, at the Bible may not be unacceptable to the bibliographical reader, at the same time they will show that their claims to be considered as standard editions are not altogether unfounded. The booksellers of the metropolis having applied to his majesty's printers to undertake a handsome edition of the Bible, confided the execution of it to Mr. George Woodfall in 1804. The copy printed from was the then current Cambridge edition, with which Mr. W.'s edition agrees page for page. It was afterwards read twice by the Oxford impression then in use, and the proofs were transmitted to the Rev. Impression then in use, and the proofs were transmitted to the Rev. Launcelot Sharpe, by whom they were read with Dr. Blayney's 4to. edition of 1769. After the proofs returned by Mr. S. for press had been corrected, the forms were placed upon the press at which they were to be worked, and another proof was taken. This was read by Mr. Woodfall's superintendent, and afterwards by Mr. W. himselt, with Dr. Blayney's edition, and any errors that had previously escaped were corrected; the forms not having been reveal from the press after the last proofs had been taken off. By moved from the press after the last proofs had been taken off. this precaution they avoided the danger of errors (a danger of very frequent occurrence, and of no small magnitude), arising from the removal of the forms from the proof-press to the presses on which the sheets were finally worked off. Of this edition, which was removal of the forms from the proof-press to the presses on which the sheets were finally worked off. Of this edition, which was ready for publication in 1806, five hundred copies were printed on imperial 4to, two thousand on royal, and three thousand on medium quarto size. In the course of printing this edition from the Cambridge copy, a great number of errors in the latter were discovered and corrected. The London edition of 1806 being exhausted, a new impression was put to press in 1810, which was completed, with equal beauty and accuracy, in 1812, and published in 1813. It will gratify the reader to know that the edition of 1813 has been recommended by the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America, to be adopted as the Standard Edition to which future editions of the English Version of the Holy Scriptures (for the use of the members of that church) are to be made conformable. (Journal of the Proceedings of the Bishops, Clergy, and Laity of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America, in a general Convention held in the city of Philadelphia, from the 16th to the 24th of May, 1820, p. 54. Journal of the Convention of the same Church in May, 1823, p. 101.)

Of the various editions of the authorized English Version, published with parallel texts, those printed at Oxford (after that of Dr. Planter in 1760 and that of Rucky Wilson) are general Convention the planter in 1760 and that of Rucky Wilson) are general convention.

Of the various editions of the authorized English Version, published with parallel texts, those printed at Oxford (after that of Dr. Blayney in 1769, and that of Bishop Wilson) are among the best and most copious of the larger editions.² The Oxford minion octavo, which issued from the press in 1821, is one of the most commodious and correct editions that has ever been printed. The medium octavo Bible, executed by his majesty's printers, in 1814, is a most beautiful book. Canne's octave edition, 1682, and Water and the control of the contr a most beautiful book. Canne's octavo edition, 1682, and Watson's, Edinburg, 8vo. 1722, are the most valuable of the earlier pocket editions, and are all scarce and dear. The Rev. Thomas Scott's Commentary on the Bible, in 6 vols. 4to., has a very copious and judicious selection of parallel references on the plan of Canne's Bible. The Rev. Dr. Adam Clarke's Commentary also has a similar selection of parallel texts. The pocket edition of the entire English Bible, published by Mr. Bagster in 1816, contains a new selection of upwards of sixty thousand references to passages that are really parallel. But the cheapest, as well as one of the most elegant and useful of all the pocket editions, is that published at Oxford in 1827, after Dr. Blavney's revision, at the very low price Oxford in 1827, after Dr. Blayney's revision, at the very low price of eight shillings in sheets, which, from its type and size, is known by the appellation of the OXFORD RUBY octavo Bible.

In 1833 various charges of inaccuracy were made against the

In 1833 various charges of inaccuracy were made against the modern editions of the authorized English version by Mr. Thomas Curtis, in four letters addressed to the Bishop of London. The misrepresentations of this writer were exposed and refuted, on the part of the University of Oxford, by the Rev. Dr. Cardwell, and on

* In Dr. Blayney's quarto edition of 1769, the following words are omitted in Rev. xviii. 22. after the words "no more," viz. "at all in thee; and no craftsman, of whatsoever craft he be, shall be found any more." The author has been informed that the same omission occurs in the folio edition of 1769. Similar errors have been detected in other editions of the Bible, some of which are sufficiently curious. Thus, in 1632, Barker and Lucas (the king's printers) executed an edition of the English Bible, consisting of one thousand copies, in which a very serious error was committed by leaving out the word not in the seventh commandment, which ran thus: Thou shalt commit adultery. This fact being proved before the high commission court, the whole impression was called in, and a very heavy fine was imposed upon the printers. (Townley's Illustrations of Biblical Literature, vol. iii. pp. 318—320.) The splendud folio Bible, printed by Basket, at Oxford, in 1/17-16, is commonly termed the Vinegar Bible, from an error in the running title at Luke xx., where we read the "parable of the vinegar," instead of the "parable of the VINEYARD."

The following short table will convey an accurate idea of the progressive increase of references to parallel texts in various editions of the Bible.

In the 1st edition of 1611 J. Hayes', 1877 J. Hayes', 1878 J. Hayes', 1879 J

Hewlett's Commentary, vol.i. p. *45. 4to. edit., in which Mr. H. has adopted the parallel texts in Bishop Wilson's Bible, as being the most copious, and upon the whole well selected.

the part of the University of Cambridge, by the Rev. Dr. Turton (the titles of whose pamphlets will be found in a subsequent page of this bibliographical appendix). The result is that, though abso lute inerrancy is impracticable in any printed book, yet all the modern editions (those, for instance, which have been printed since the year 1820) have been proved to be as correct, as unwearied and incessant industry can make them. With reference to the and incessant industry can make them. With reference to the alleged charges of inaccuracy, the editors of an ably conducted Journal thus express themselves:— "These charges we have examined; and we assert, without hesitation or difficulty, that the TEXT OF SCRIPTURE IN THE ENGLISH BIBLE IS NOT VITIATED BY THE modern Italics, as the charges allege; and THAT IN ANY COPY OF THE TRANSLATION IN COMMON USE THERE IS NOTHING TO BE FOUND WHICH CAN REDDER THE TEXT OF SCRIPTURE UNWORTHY OF THE CONFIDENCE OF THE UNLEARNED. . . . And those classes of the community, amongst whom the Bible most largely circulates, should be told that, in the copies which have been put into their hands, there is neither perversion nor obscuration of the TRUTH. The Bibles of the Oxford, Cambridge, and London" [that is, the king's printers'] "presses, recently issued, are most beautiful books; and certainly, in respect to the important purposes of ful doors; and certainty, in respect to the important purposes their publication and use, MAY BE READ WITHOUT DISTRUST. We do not affirm them to be immaculate, but they afford no GROUNDS for such imputations as those which have been, we regret to say, so inconsiderately and so reproachfully directed against them." (Eclectic Review, Third Series, vol. ix. p. 533.)

3. The New Testament, with References under the Text in words at length, so that the Parallel Texts may be seen at one view. By the Rev. Francis Fox, M.A. London, 1722. Second edition, 1742. 2 vols. 8vo.

The editor of this useful publication has given, for the most part, all the references in the then last and fullest edition of the Bible, together with a great number collected by himself; and has further added the chronology of Archbishop Usher, the marginal renderings, and several good notes on really difficult passages, together with a copious index. This work is now only to be procured at a very high price.

4. Scientia Biblica; being a copious Collection of Parallel Passages, for the illustration of the New Testament, printed in words at length, the whole so arranged as to illustrate and confirm the different clauses of each verse; together with the text at large, in Greek and English, the various readings and the chronology. London, 1825. 3 vols. 8vo.

There are copies of this work in royal 8vo. Its design is to ex-There are copies of this work in royal 8vo. Its design is to expound Scripture by Scripture: with this view the different verses of the New Testament are neatly printed by themselves, in Greek and English; and below them is placed (in words at length) a new selection of parallel references, which is evidently the result of great labour and research, and is calculated to save much time and trouble to biblical students. The typographical execution is very neat. neat.

5. The Collateral Bible; or, a Key to the Holy Scriptures; in which the corresponding texts are brought together in one view, and arranged in a familiar and easy manner. By William M'CORKLE, assisted by the Rev. Ezra Styles Elx, D.D. and the Rev. Gregory Bedell, A.M. Philadelphia, 1826-1828. 3 vols. 4to. [Containing the Old Testament.]

In this work the best marginal references are printed at large and in connection with every passage; by which means every parallel or related phrase in the sacred volume is brought at once under the eye, so as to present the whole scope and subject of every text at a single view. On some passages the references are extremely copious. This work, which in England is extremely rare and dear, is very neatly printed: and some useful Tables are prefixed to the first volume. prefixed to the first volume.

6. A new Self-Interpreting Testament, containing many thousands of Various Readings and Parallel Passages, collected from the most approved Translators and Biblical Critics, including all those of the authorized Version; and set under the Text in words at length. With Introductory Arguments, concerning the Origin, Occasion, and Character of each Book; a Reconciliation of seeming Contradictions; and the Meaning and Pronunciation of Scripture Proper Names. By the Rev. John Platts. London, 1827, royal 4to.; also in 4 vols. 8vo.

London, 1827, royal 4to.; also in 4 vols. 8vo.

The plan of this work differs from that adopted in "Scientia Biblica." In the first place, the Greek text is omitted; and the parallel passages here given at length are much less numerous. The compiler professes to have proceeded on a principle of selection, and to have inserted apposite texts, while he has rejected all such as were not really parallel. Little that is new is confessedly to be found in this publication, in preparing which the editor honourably acknowledges his obligations to the previous labours of Mr. Fox (No. 3. in this page), and of Mr. Cruttwell, in his edition of the Bible with Bishop Wilson's Notes, and the various renderings of preceding translators. The introductions to each book are necessarily brief. Several genealogical tables are prefixed, and the work terminates with a reconciliation of thirty-eight seemingly discrepant passages of the New Testament, together with various miscellaneous observations for understanding it: a collection of the principal prophecies of the Old Testament relating to the Messiah and his Kingdom; the incaming and promuciation of the New Testament Proper Names; a Table of Scripture Weights, Measures, and Time; and an Index to the New Testament History, which is copied from that usually annexed to the quarto editions of our authorized Version.

- 7. A Scriptural Commentary on the Book of Genesis and the Gospel according to St. Matthew, comprising the Sacred Text of these Books, with the most copious Marginal References annexed to each clause of each verse, in the words of Scripture. By the Rev. Charles Lambert Coullan, D.D. London, 1832.
- 8. The Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the Ephesians: With Parallel Texts printed at length. By the Rev. H. A. SINCOE. London, 1833, foolscap 4to.

These very copious parallel texts are selected from the labours f the Rev. Thomas Scott, from Mr. Platt's Self-interpreting New of the Rev. Testament, from Mr. Cruttwell's Concordance of Parallels, from the parallel references given in the English Version of the Polyglott Bible, published by Mr. Bagster in 1816, and from other sources.

Anglo-Romish Versions of the Bible.

- 1. The Holie Bible faithfully translated into English out of the Avthentical Latin. Diligently conferred with the Hebrew, Greeke, and other Editions in diuers languages. With Argy-ments of the Bookes, and Chapters: Annotations: Tables: and other helpes for better vnderstanding of the text: for discouerie of corruptions in some late translations: and for clearing Controversies in Religion. By the English College of Doway. Printed at Doway by Lavrence Kellam. 1609-10. 2 vols. 4to.
- 2. The New Testament of Iesvs Christ, translated faithfylly into English out of the authentical Latin, according to the best corrected copies of the same, diligently conferred with the Greeke, and other editions in divers languages: Vvith Argyments of bookes and chapters, Annotations, and other necessarie helpes, for the better vnderstanding of the text, and specially for the discouerie of the Corryptions of diuers late translations, and for cleering the Controversies in religion, of these daies: In the English College of Rhemes. Printed at Rhemes by Iohn Fogny. 1582, 4to.

These are the first editions of the Old and New Testament: they are not often to be met with. Fine copies of them are in the Library of the British Museum.

In the year 1582, the Romanists, finding it impossible to with-hold the Scriptures any longer from the common people, printed an English New Testament at Rheims: it was translated, not from the original Greek, but from the Latin Vulgate. The Old Testament was translated from the Vulgate at Douay (whence it is called the Douay Bible), in two volumes 4to., the first of which appeared in 1609, and the second in 1610. Annotations are subjoined, which are ascribed to one Thomas Worthington: the translators were are ascribed to one Thomas Worthington: the translators were William (afterwards Cardinal) Allen, Gregory Martin, and Richard Bristow. This translation, with the Rhemish version of the New Testament above noticed, forms the English Bible, which alone is used by the Romanists of this country. The translators retained the words azymes, tunike, holocaust, pasche, and a multitude of other Greek words untranslated, under the pretext of wanting proper and adequate English terms by which to reader them; and thus conadequate English terms by which to render them; and thus contrived to render it unintelligible to common readers. Hence the historian Fuller took occasion to remark that it was "a translation which needed to be translated;" and that its editors "by all means laboured to suppress the light of truth, under one pretence or other." Our learned countryman, Thomas Cartwright, was solicited by Sir Francis Walsingham to refute this translation: but, after he had made considerable progress; in the work he was restricted. made considerable progress in the work, he was prohibited from proceeding further by Archbishop Whitgift; who, judging it improper that the defence of the doctrine of the Church of England should be committed to a puritan, appointed Dr. William Fulke in his place. By him the divines of Rheims were refuted with great spirit and ability. Fulke's work appeared in 1617; and in the following year, Cartwright's confutation was published under the auspices of Archbishop Abbot; both of them were accompanied with the Rhemish translation of the New Testament; the titles of their publications are subjoined.

(1.) The Text of the New Testament of Jesus Christ, translated out of the vulgar Latine, by the Papists of the traiterous seminary at Rheims, with arguments of Bookes, Chapters, and Annotations, pretending to discover the corruptions of divers translations, and to clear the controuersies of these dayes. the authorized English Version, and a confutation of all such arguments, glosses, and annotations, as contain manifest impiety or heresy, treason and slander, against the Catholic Church of God, and the true teachers thereof, or the translations used in the Church of England. By W. FULKE, D.D. London, 1617; 1633, folio.

This elaborate work first appeared in 1586, and was again reprinted in 1601. That late elegant scholar and pious divine, the Rev. James Hervey (though sometimes rather too candid and indiscriminate in his public recommendations of books), passed the following very just encomium on Dr. Fulke's noble performance:— He styles it "a valuable piece of ancient controversy and criticism, fle styles it "a variable piece of antient confloversy and critically full of sound divinity, weighty arguments, and important observations;" adding,—"would the young student be taught to discover the very sinews of popery, and be enabled to give an effectual blow to that complication of errors, I scarce know a treatise better calculated for the purpose."

(2.) A Confutation of the Rhemists' Translation, Glosses, and Annotations of the New Testament. By Thomas Cartwright. London, 1618, folio.

In 1749, a new edition of the Anglo-Romish Bible, with s alterations in the text, and many in the notes, was published from the copy of Dr. Chaloner, titular bishop of Debra, and one of the vicars apostolic of the Romish Church in England. Various other Various other editions have been printed at different times and in different sizes.

3. The Holy Bible, translated from the Latin Vulgat: diligently compared with the Hebrew, Greek, and other Editions in divers languages; the Old Testament, first published by the English College at Doway, A. D. 1609; and the New Testa-ment, first published by the English College at Rhemes, A. D. 1582. With Annotations, and an Historical and Chronological Index. Revised and corrected according to the Clementin Edition of the Scriptures, and approved of by the most reverend Doctor Thox, R.C.A.D. Dublin, 1816, 4to.

This edition of the Anglo-Romish Bible was commenced by a Romish bookseller at Cork, and circulated in numbers, under the authority of Dr. Troy, the Romish archbishop in Dublin, who deputed one of his clergy (the Rev. P. A. Walsh, of Denmark-street, Chapel) to revise, correct, and approve the said Bible for publications of the published, books and the publication of the published. tion. On the publisher's bankruptcy, his assignce (a Protestant bookseller) purchased the unfinished part, and resolved to perfect the work in order to cover his own losses. He affixed to the title the name of a Romish bookseller in Dublin, who agreed to publish the work, on condition, that the same Romish clergyman continued to correct the unfinished part. In the mean time, copies of the New Testament found their way into England; where the mur-derous and implacable spirit of some of its notes, and also the chaderous and implacable spirit of some of its notes, and also the characters of cardinal Allen and other traitors to their country, who were concerned in the original publication of the text and notes of the Rheimish Testament, were briefly but severely exposed in the British Critic for September, 1817 (pp. 297—308.); and much more fully in the Courier London Newspaper of Oct. 11, and 23, 1817. The reader will find a detailed account of this edition of the Anglo-Romish Bible, and of the subsequent unsatisfactory disclaimer of the notes by Dr. Troy on the New Testament, in the Rev. Dr. Kenney's "Enquiry concerning some of the Doctrines maintained by the Church of Rome" (London, 1818), pp. 65—118., from which the above particulars are abridged.

4. The Holy Bible, translated from the Latin Vulgate, diligently compared with the Hebrew, Greek, and other editions, in divers languages: the Old Testament, first published at Doway, A. D. 1609; and the New Testament, first published by the English College at Rheims, A. D. 1582. With Annotations, References, and an Historical and Chronological Index. The whole revised and diligently compared with the Latin Vulgate. Dublin and London, 1825, 8vo.

This is the latest and most easily accessible edition of the Anglo-Romish version of the Bible. It has been altered for the better, and made conformable to OUR Protestant authorized version, in several instances, which had been stigmatized by Romanists as heretical! (See Mr. Hamilton's Observations on the present State of the Roman Catholic English Bible, pp. 19—21.) It is worthy of observation, that the translators of the Rheimish Testament have taken various liberties with the Sacred Text, which would have been denounced as heretical depravations, if they had been committed by Protestas heretical depravations, if they had been committed by Protestants, who, however, shudder at mutilating and perverting the word of God. As the liberties here referred to are equally taken with the New Testament, printed in 1825, under the sanction of the Romish archbishop in Dublin, Dr. Murray, it may be satisfactory to the reader to have a few of them put upon record.

(1.) Words not extant in the original Greek, but foisted into the text in the Anglo-Romesh Version.

In 2 Pet. i. 10. we have "by good works" inserted.—"Wherefore, brethren, labour more that by good works you may make sure your calling and election."

your calling and election."

your cafing and election."

Those words, which were necessarily supplied from the idiom of the language, they have not put into Italics (as our venerable translators have done), but into the same character with the text itself, without any mark or note whatever; as "their" in Matt. iv. 20., "are" in Matt. v. 3, 4, 5. &c., "garments" in Matt. xi. 8.

(2.) Words omitted in the Anglo-Romish Version, which are found in the original Greek Text.

In Matt. ii. 18. the words "and weeping," are omitted after "lamentation." So in Matt. xxvi. 59., "and elders" are omitted after "chief priests."

"chief priests."

In Acts ii. 47. the words "to the church" are omitted. The sentence runs thus: "And the Lord added daily to the church the saved," or, those who were saved. In the Anglo-Romish Version we read, "and the Lord increased daily together such as should numerous opulent and benevolent individuals, be saved."

In Rom. xi. 6. a whole sentence is omitted, forming the latter part of the verse: "And if by grace, it is not now by works; otherwise grace is no more grace. But if of works, then is it no more grace: otherwise work is no more work." This last sentence is altogether omitted! On the subject of these unhallowed additions to and subtractions from the divinely inspired word of God, the reader is referred to Deut. xii. 32. and Rev. xxii. 18, 19.1

5. The New Testament of our Lord and Saviour Jesus .Christ, newly translated out of the Latin Vulgate, and with the original Greek, and divers Translations in vulgar Languages, diligently compared and revised. Together with Annotations upon the most remarkable passages in the Gospels, and marginal Notes upon other difficult texts of the same, and upon the rest of the Books of the New Testament, for the better understanding of the Literal Sense. By C.[ornelius] N.[ARY] C.[onsultissimæ] F.[acultatis] P.[arisiensis] D.[octor.] 1718-19, 8vo.

This edition has no place or printer's name; but Dr. Geddes says that it was printed at Dublin. (Prospectus for a new translation, p. 110.) See a full account of it in Lewis's Hist. of English Translations, pp. 356—363. (8vo. edition.)

6. The New Testament, translated from the Latin Vulgate, with Annotations. By R. W.[ETHAM] D.[uacensis] P.[rofessor.] 1730-33, 2 vols. 8vo.

This edition also is without place or printer's name: it is supposed to have been printed at Douay. See an account of it in Lewis's History, pp. 363—365.

Welsh Version.

Y Beibl Cyssegr-Lan. Sef yr hen Destament, a'r Newydd. Imprinted at London by the Deputies of Christopher Barker, 1588, folio.

From an epistle of Dr. Richard Davis, Bishop of Saint David's, prefixed to the Welsh New Testament, printed in 1567, we learn that there was a British or Welsh version of the Pentateuch extant about (if not before) the year 1527, though the translator's name is not known. Some other small and detached passages of Scripture appear also to have been translated into this language in the reign of King Edward VI., which were printed, in all probability, for the use of his Liturgy. But it was not until the reign of Elizabeth, that efficient steps were taken to supply the inhabitants of the principality of Wales with the Holy Scriptures in their vernacular dialect. In 1563 an act of parliament was passed (5 Eliz. c. 28.), enacting that the Old and New Testaments, together with the Book of Common Prayer, should be translated into the British or Welsh terminal of the area of the property Welsh tongue; and committing the direction of the work to the Bishops of St. Asaph, Bangor, Saint David's, Llandaff, and Hereford. They were to view, peruse, and allow the translation, and to take care (under a penalty of £40 on each of them) that such a to take care (under a penalty of £40 on each of them) that such a number should be printed and distributed by March 1, 1566, as would furnish copies to every cathedral, collegiate and parish church, and chapel of ease, within their respective dioceses, where Welsh was commonly spoken. In 1567, was printed at London, the first translation of the New Testament. The translators were Thomas Huet, Chanter of St. David's, Dr. Richard Davis, Bishop of Saint David's, and William Salesbury, a man of great industry, learning, and piety. But there was no edition or version of the Old Testament in the British tongue till more than twenty years after the publication of the New Testament. The person chiefly concerned in rendering this important service to the ancient Britons, was William Morgan, D.D., who was bishop of Llandaff in 1595, from which see he was, in 1604, translated to that of Saint Asaph. He first translated the entire Old Testament, together with the Apocrypha, into Welsh, and also revised and corrected the former version of the New Testament, both of which were printed, in one volume folio, in 1588. During the reign of James I. the former version of the New Testament, both of which were printed, in one volume folio, in 1588. During the reign of James I. the Welsh version underwent a further examination and correction from Dr. Parry, Morgan's successor in the see of Saint Asaph. This corrected version, which is usually called Parry's Bible, is the basis of all subsequent editions. It was printed at London in 1620. Seventy years afterwards, another folio edition was printed at Oxford, under the inspection of Bishop Lloyd, in 1690. These folio impressions were intended principally, if not wholly, for the use of churches; so that, for upwards of seventy years from the settlement of the Reformation by Queen Elizabeth, there was no provision made for furnishing the country or people in general with copies of the Scriptures. The honour of the first supply of this kind is due to one or more citizens of London, at whose private expense an octavo edition was printed in 1630. In 1654 and 1678, expense an octavo edition was printed in 1630. In 1654 and 1678, two other octavo editions appeared; the latter of these consisted of 8000 copies, to the publication of which the Rev. Thomas Gouge, a learned nonconformist minister, and only contributed very largely out of his private fortune, but procured ample subscriptions from numerous opulent and benevolent individuals. The next octavo edition of the Welsh Bible was published in 1690, under the patronage of Thomas Lord Wharton, by Mr. David Jones; who was assisted in the published in the present of the assisted in the undertaking by some ministers and citizens of London. This was the last edition that appeared in the seventeenth century, and also the most numerous; the editor, it is said, having distributed not fewer than ten thousand copies.³ During the eighteenth century, six editions of the Welsh Bible were printed, chiefly, if not wholly, at the expense of the venerable Society for PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE, viz. in 1718, 1727, 1746, 1752, 1769 or 1770, and 1799. This last edition consisted of ten thousand 1769 or 1770, and 1799. This last edition consisted of ten thousand copies of the Welsh Bible, Common Prayer, and singing Psalms, besides two thousand extra copies of the New Testament. Ample as this edition was, in a few years, copies of the Scriptures became extremely scarce and dear in the Principality: and in 1802, some pious and benevolent individuals projected a new impression, the circumstances connected with which ultimately led to the formation of the British and Foreign Bible Society. Their attention was investigated in the second of the British and Foreign Bible Society. tion of the British and Foreign Bible Society. Including was immediately directed to the wants of the Principality: in was immediately directed to the wants of the Principality: in 1806, a large and very correct stereotype impression of the New Testament was issued, which obtained a rapid sale; and subsequent editions have been printed, particularly a very neat pocket edition, executed for the Society by his majesty's printers, in 1825. In 1821, the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge defrayed the expense of a large edition, in crown octavo, of the Welsh Bible, with the Liturgy and Psalms. It was executed at the press of the University of Oxford, and is one of the most beautiful specimens of typography ever printed; so that the inhabitants of Wales are now abundantly supplied with the Scriptures in their native tongue. now abundantly supplied with the Scriptures in their native tongue.

Irish Version.

The Books of the Old Testament, translated into Irish by the care and diligence of Dr. William Bedell, late Bishop of Kilmore. With the New Testament, translated by William O'Domhnuill. [In the vernacular Irish character.] London, 1685-81, 4to.

The New Testament having been translated into Irish by Dr. William Daniel, archbishop of Tuam, Dr. Bedell (who was advanced to the see of Kilmore and Ardagh in 1629) procured the Old Testament to be translated by a Mr. King; who, being ignorant of the original languages, executed it from the English version. Bedell, therefore, revised and compared it with the Hebrew, the Septuagint, and the Italian version of Diodati. He supported Mr. King, during his undertaking, to the utmost of his ability; and when the translation was finished, he would have printed it in his count hange, and at his own charge, if he had not been prevented by when the translation was finished, he would have printed it in his own house, and at his own charge, if he had not been prevented by the troubles in Ireland. The translation, however, escaped the hands of the rebels, and was subsequently printed in 1685, at the expense of the Hon. Robert Boyle.⁵ What editions were printed during the eighteenth century, the author of the present work has not been able to ascertain. The British and Foreign Bible Society early exerted itself to supply the want of the Bible in the Irish language. In 1811, an edition of the New Testemput was completed. guage. In 1811, an edition of the New Testament was completed; and in 1813, the Bible was stereotyped. A handsome octave edition of the Irish Bible, in the Irish character, was printed by his majesty's printers at Dublin, in 1827.

Manks Version.

Yn Vible Casherick; goaill stiagh yn Chenn Chonaant, as yn conaant Noa: veih ny Chied Ghlaraghyn; dy Kiaralagh Chyndait ayns Gailck; ta shen dy ghra, Chengey ny Mayrey Ellan Vannin. Pointit dy ve lhaiht ayns Kialteenyn. Whitehaven, 1775, 4to.

Towards the close of his life, the truly venerable Bishop of Sodor and Man, Dr. Thomas Wilson, formed a plan for translating the New Testament into the Manks language; but he did not live to New Testament into the Manks language; but he did not live to make a further progress than to procure the four Gospels and Acts of the Apostles to be translated, and to print at his own expense the Gospel of St. Matthew. His exemplary successor, Bishop Hildesley, revised the manuscript, and completed the version of the New Testament, which, by the munificent aid of the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge, and of other benevolent individuals, he was enabled to print between the years 1756 and 1760. In 1766, he was encouraged, by the influx of benefactions, to undertake a Manks Version of the Old Testament, which was completed only two days before his decease, on the 30th November, 1772.⁵ In 1775, the entire Bible was printed at the expense of the same venerable society, at Whitehaven, in one volume quarto, it same venerable society, at Whitehaven, in one volume quarto: it is very neatly printed in three columns on a page.

In 1819, a beautiful and accurate octave edition of the Manks Bible was executed by his majesty's printers, for the British and Foreign Bible Society.

Llewellyn's Historical Account of the British Versions and Editions of Liewenyn's Historical Account of the British versions and Editions of the Bible, pp. 1—50.

 See the Rev. John Owen's History of the British and Foreign Bible Society, vol. i. pp. 1—12. 138, 150, 262, 391.
 Biographia Britannica, article Bedell, vol. ii. p. 136. 2d edition.
 Chalmers's Biographical Dictionary, vol. xvii. pp. 410—482, from Mr. Butler's Memoirs of Bp. Hildesley.

Brief History of the Versions of the Bible of the English and Roman Churches, p. 100. Dublin, 1830.
 The reader will find a pleasing account of Mr. Gouge's various benevolent and pious undertakings in Archbishop Tillotson's Sermon on his death. Works, vol. ii. pp. 240—349. 8vo. London, 1820.

Gaelic Version.

Leabraichean an T-seann Tiomnaidh, air an tarruing o'n cheud chanain chum Gaelic alban naich; agus air an cur a mache le h-ugdarras ardsheanaidh eaglais na h-alba. Duneidin [The Holy Bible in the Gaelic Language. Edinburgh], 1826, 4to.

The Society in Scotland for propagating Christian Knowledge has the honour of giving to the inhabitants of the Highlands the Holy Scripaires in their vernacular dialect. The New Testament was translated by the late Rev. James Stuart, minister of Killin, and printtransinted by the late Rev. James Stuart, minister of Kulina, and printed at their expense in 1765; it bears a high character for fidelity and accuracy. The several books of the Old Testament were translated and published in detached portions or volumes, at different times, as the Society's funds would permit, viz. The prophetical books, by the Rev. Dr. Smith, in 1783, and the remaining books by the Rev. Dr. John Stuart, minister of Luss (son of the translator of the New Testament), in three parts, which appeared successively in the years 1783, 1787, and 1801. In 1796 the first edition of the Testament being exhausted, the Society published another consisting of twenty thousand copies. And as some of the first printed volumes of the Old Testament were so much reduced in number, in 1802, as to be insufficient to supply the urgent demands of the Highlands in general, and of the Society's own schools in particular, a new edition of twenty thousand copies was printed. Three parts out of four, into which this portion of the Bible had been divided, were rendered from the Hebrew with great simplicity, and with as literal an adherence to the original text as the idiom of the respective languages would admit. As the style of the fourth part (containing the prophetical books) had receded from this simplicity, it was revised and corrected with the utmost care. From this corrected text (a copy of which was furnished by the Society in Scotland as soon as it was finished), the British and Foreign Bible Society executed their stereotype editions in 1807, which (as the Scotlish Society was unable to supply the urgent and very numerous demands for the sacred writings) were purchased at reduced prices by the poor Highlanders, with the liveliest expressions of gratitude. In 1816, this Gaelic version of the Bible received the approbation of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland. The quarto edition, printed at Edinburgh, may be considered as the standard edition of the Gaelic Bible: it was revised by a committee of clergymen well skilled in the Gaelic language, who were appointed by the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland to superintend the work. This edition, with a revised Gaelic Metrical Version of the Psalms and Paraphrases on certain portions of Scripture subjoined to it, was completed in the year 1826. then submitted to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, who were pleased to approve of it, and to authorize its exclusive use in the churches and chapels within their bounds in which public worship is conducted in the Gaelic language.1

[ii.] VERSIONS IN THE LANGUAGES SPOKEN ON THE CONTI-NENT OF ECHOPE.

1. German Versions. LUTHER'S VERSION, And the Versions derived from it.

As Germany has the honour of being the country where the art printing was first discovered, so it was distinguished in the annals of sacred literature, by being the first in which the Holy Scriptures were issued from the press in the vernacular language of its inhabitants. So early, indeed, as the year 1466, a German translation from the Latin Vulgate was printed, the author of which is unknown. Scarcely, however, had the Reformation commenced, when Luther meditated a new version of the Scriptures for the general use of his countrymen. His first publication comprised the seven penitential Psalms, from the Latin of John Reuchlin. These appeared in 1517; and were followed by the New Testament, in 1522; by the Pentateuch, in 1523; by the book of Joshua, and the remaining historical books, in 1524; in which year also appeared the books of Job, Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and the Song of Songs. In 1526, were published the prophecies of Jonah and Habakkuk; in 1528, those of Zachariah and Isaiah; in 1529, the apocryphal book of Wisdom; in 1530, the book of Daniel, together with the remaining apocryphal books; in 1531, the entire book of Psalms; and 1531 and 1532, the rest of the prophetical books. All these portions of Luther's translations are of extreme rarity; in the revision of it he received very important assistance from the learned and candid Philip Melancthon, who also corresponded with eminent men on various topics of biblical criticism, in order to render the translation as correct as possible. Further to ensure its accuracy, a select party of learned men assembled daily with Luther at Wittemberg, to revise every sentence which he had made directly from the Hebrew and Greek. Melanethon collated the Greek original, Cruciger the Chaldee, and other professors the Rabbinical writings. Justus Jonas, John Bugenhagen, and Matthew Aurogallus, also contributed their aid. The whole Bible thus revised was first published in 1530, and again in 1534, 1541, and 1545.3 Luther made his version directly from the original Hebrew and Greek, and not one of his numerous enemies ever durst charge him with ignorance of those languages. His translation is represented with ighorance of those languages. His translation is represented as being uncommonly clear and accurate, and its style in a high degree pure and elegant. Having originally been published in detached portions, as these were gradually and successively circulated among the people, Luther's version produced sudden and almost incredible effects, and contributed, more than any other cause, to extirpate the erroneous principles and superstitious practices of the church of Rome from the minds of a prodigious number of persons.⁴ Since that time it has been printed times without number of ber; and as the reformation spread, it served as the basis of several other translations, viz.

A copy of this very rare work is in the splendid collection of Earl Spener. See a description of it in Mr. Dibdin's Bibliotheca Spenceriana, vol. i.

(1.) The Lower Saxon Translation was printed at Lubeck, in 1533-4. Its authors are not known.⁵ This version was undertaken at the suggestion of Luther himself, and under the direction of John Bugenhagen (or Bugenhagius), who wrote a preface, and supplied short notes, and also arguments to the different books.

(2.) The Pomeranian Version was printed in 1588, in quarto, by the command of Bogislaus XIII. duke of Pomerania; it was made from the Wirtemberg edition of Luther's Bible, printed in 1545.

(3.) The Danish Version was undertaken by command of Christian III., king of Denmark, and at the suggestion of Bugenhagen: it was printed at Copenhagen in 1550, and is of extreme rarity. Previously to the publication of this version, the New Testamente had been translated from the Vulgate, as well as the Psalms, and the five books of Moses. The Danish version was subsequently revised and corrected in the reigns of Frederic II. and Christian IV. kings of Denmark; the revision, made by command of the last-mentioned monarch, is, we believe, the standard of the succeeding editions of the Danish Scriptures, which, however, are said to vary considerably from Luther's German version.—In 1823, the Gospel of Matthew was printed at Copenhagen, in the dialect of the Danish language spoken by the inhabitants of the Faroe Islands: the Danish and Farcese texts are printed in parallel columns.

(4.) The Icelandic Translation of the entire Bible was printed at (4.) The Icelandic Translation of the entire Bible was printed at Holum, in Iceland, in 1584, under the patronage of Frederic II. The New Testament had been translated by Oddur Gottshalkson (whose father filled the episcopal see of Holum), and printed in Denmark, in 1539, at the expense of Christian III. This was followed by an Icelandic version of the Epistles and Gospels for all the Sundays in the year, published in 1552, by Olaf Hialteson, the first Lutheran bishop of Holum; which may be considered as a second edition of certain portions of Oddur's New Testament, the compiler having availed himself chiefly of that version in writing second edition of certain portions of Oddin's New Testament, mo compiler having availed himself chiefly of that version, in writing out the lessons of which the work consists. In 1580, the Proverbs of Solomon were translated by Gissur Eincerson, the first Lutheran bishop of Skalholt, who also translated the book of Sirach, printed bishop of Skalholf, who also translated the book of Sirach, printed in the same year at Holum. At length, in 1584, as above noticed, the whole of the Old and New Testaments was printed in Icelandic, through the unremitting zeal and pious liberality of Gudrand Thorlakson, bishop of Holum, who not only contributed largely to the undertaking himself, but also obtained a munificent donation from Frederic II., with authority to raise a rix-dollar in aid of the work from every church in Iceland. It is not known what share this eminent prelate had in the translation, which is considered as the production of different hands. Gottshalkson's version of the New Testament, as well as some parts of the Old Testament, was adopted, after having been revised by Gudbrand. This edition has always been very highly esteemed, on account of the purity of its diction; and, even at this day, it is preferred before more modern translations. A second edition of the Icelandic Bible appeared at Holum in 1644, under the editorial care of Thorlak Skuleson, bishop of that see; by whom it was carefully revised and corrected. This is the standard text from which the two most recent impressions of the Icelandic Version have been printed.

For further particulars relative to Luther's German Version of the Scriptures, the reader is referred to the life of Philip Melancthon, by Francis Cox, M.A., pp. 206—213. (2d edit.), and also to Dr. Townley's Iliustrations of Biblical Literature, vol. ii. pp. 271—300. Of the editions of Luther's versions above noticed, the venerable Reformer bestowed the greatest care in revising and correcting that of 1541. It was beautifully printed in two folio volumes, and ornamented with wood-cuts. A Unique Copy of this edition, which had been Luther's own copy, and constantly used by him until his decease, was in the possession of the late Mr. Edwards (formerly an eminent bookseller), of Manor House, near Harrow-on-the-Hill. On the sale of his choice library by auction, in 1813, these precious volumes were purchased by Geo. Hibbert, Esq. for the sum of 80.5s. 6d. (See a description of them copied from the sale catalogue (No. 812.) in Mr. Dibdin's Bibliographical Decameron, vol. iii, pp. 123, 124., or in the Gentleman's Magazine, vol. txxv. part i. p. 254.) At the sale of Mr. Hibbert's library, in 1829, this copy of Luther's Bible was purchased for the British Museum, for the sum of 256. Fac-similes of the handwritings of the venerable reformers, Luther, Bugenhagen, Melancthon, and Major (into whose possession this copy successively passed), are given in the sale catalogue of Mr. Hibbert's library, p. 481.

* Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History, vol. iv. p. 60.

* Another Lower Saxon Version from the Vulgate was printed at Lubeck in 1493, in two folio volumes. The reader will find a bibliographical notice of it in the Bibliotheca Spenceriana, vol. iv. p. 56–58.

* An interesting account of this version is given by Dr. Henderson in his "Dissertation on Hans Mikkelsen's (or the first Danish) translation of the New Testament," (Openhagen, 1813, 40.

* The above particulars are abridged from the Rev. Dr. Henderson's "Historical View of the Translation and different Editions of the Icelandic Scriptures," in the second volume (pp 3 For further particulars relative to Luther's German Version of the Scrip-

¹ Address of the Society in Scotland for propagating Christian Knowledge, 1803. Owen's History of the Bible Society, vol. i. pp. 205, 206. 314—316. In 1820, a Gaelic translation of the Book of Common Prayer was completed and printed at the expense of the London Society for promoting Christian Luther's German Translation; it was begun by Laurence Andreas, and finished by Laurence Petri, and was printed at Upsal, in 1541, by the command of Gustavus I., king of Sweden.

(6.) The Dutch Translation appeared in 1560, and after being repeatedly printed, was superseded by a new Protestant translation, of which an account is given in page 45. infra. (7-10.) The Finnish Version was printed at Stockholm in 1642, and again in 1642, the Lettish (or Livonian) was made by Ernest Gluck, dean of the Lutheran church in Livonia, who completed it between the years 1680 and 1688: the entire Bible was printed at Riga, in 1689, the Sorabic or Wendish (a dialect spoken in Upper Lusatia), at Bautzen (Budissæ), in 1728, and again in 1742; and the Lithuanian, at Konigsberg (Regiomonti), in 1735.

Valuable as Luther's German translation of the Scriptures con-fessedly is, it was severely attacked, on its publication, by the enemies of the Reformation, whose productions are enumerated by Walchius.4 Luther's translation, reformed by the Zuinglians and Calvinists, was printed, in various editions, at Neustadt, between the years 1679 and 1695; at Herborn in 1696, 1698, 1701.—5—8, and 21; at Heidelberg in 1617 and 1618, and many times since; at Cassel in 1602; and at Basle in 1651, 1659, and in the last century very frequently.

Between the years 1525 and 1529, Leo Juda published at Zurich a German-Swiss translation of the Scriptures. As far as he could, he availed himself of such parts of Luther's version as were then printed. In 1667, a new and revised edition of Leo Juda's translation was published at Zurich: the alterations and corrections in lation was published at Zurich: the alterations and corrections in it are so numerous, that it is considered as a new translation, and is commonly called the New Zurich Bible, in order to distinguish it from the Old Zurich version of Leo Juda. "It was undertaken by Hottinger, Müller, Zeller, Hoffmeister, and others, and conducted with great care and precision. As their plan seems to have had some resemblance to that pursued by our own admirable translators, and may, perhaps, have been copied from it, this version is more particularly deserving of notice. When these learned men met together, Hottinger and Müller had each of them the Hebrew text put into their hands: Zeller had the Old Zurich version; Wasser took the Italian of Giovanni Diodati and Pareus' edition of Luther's Bible; Hoffmeister had the Septuagint and the Junio-Tremellian version before him, and Freitz the Belgian Bible. Junio-Tremellian version before him, and Freitz the Belgian Bible. When any difference arose, the point was argued by them all; each was called upon to give his opinion of the translation which was in his hands: and that reading was adopted, which, after ma-ture consideration, seemed most agreeable to the Hebrew."⁵

As the Zurich edition differs very materially from that of Luther, John Piscator undertook another, from the Latin version of Junius and Tremellius, which he has followed very closely. It appeared in detached portions between the years 1602 and 1604, and was repeatedly printed during the seventeenth century. Piscator's version, having become very scarce, has lately been revised by the Biblical and Divinity Professors, and three pastors of the Helvetic church, who have corrected its orthography, and such words as have become obsolete, previously to an edition of 8000 copies of the entire Bible, and 4000 copies of the New Testament, which has been executed by the Berne Bible Society, aided by a pecuniary grant from the British and Foreign Bible Society of London.

Besides the preceding German versions made by Protestants, there are also translations made by Romish divines: some of them appeared almost as early as that of Luther, to which, however, they are greatly inferior in point of perspicuity. Three of these are particularly mentioned by Walchius, viz.

(1.) That of John Detemberger, whose translation clearly evinces

(1.) That of John Detemberger, whose translation clearly evinces that he was utterly unfit for the task he undertook, and who hesitated not to acknowledge that he was totally ignorant of Hebrew. He took much from Luther, against whom, however, he vehemently inveighs. His translation was first published at Mayence in 1534, and has been several times printed since that time.

(2.) The version which bears the name of John Eckius. He translated only the Old Testament, the New being executed by Jerome Emser. It was first published in 1537, and has also been repeatedly printed.

(3.) The version

(3.) The version of Caspar Ulenberg, which was undertaken under the patronage of Ferdinand, archbishop and elector of Cologne, is preferred by those of his own communion to all the other German versions. He follows the Sixtine edition of the Latin German versions. Vulgate. This translation first appeared in 1630, and has undergone very numerous impressions.

The three translations just noticed include the Old and New Testaments. In addition to them, three new versions of the New t This edition was accompanied with a translation in the Esthonica language, spoken in the province of Esthland or Esthonia. It is a totally distinct language, being closely allied to the Finnish. Bp. Marsh's History of Translations, p. 4. note. There is also a dialect of the Esthonian, called the Dorpatian Esthonian, into which the New Testament was translated and published in the year 1727.

A translation of the Scriptures into the Karelian language (spoken in Karelia, a province of East Finland), was printed in 1832 under the direction of the St. Petersburg Bible Society; but it is not known whether this version is made from the Finnish, or not.

Henderson's Biblical Researches, p. 111. An edition of the New Testament, both in Livonian and Esthonian, had been already printed at Riga, in 1685 and 1686. The Lettish or Livonian is a Sclavonian dialect.

Walchili Bibliotheca Theologica Selecta, vol. iv. pp. 79—81.

Whittaker's Inquiry into the Interpretation of the Hebrew Scriptures in Europe, p. 33. Cambridge, 1819, 8vo. This edition was accompanied with a translation in the Esthonian le

(5.) The Swedish Version was made from the first edition of uther's German Translation; it was begun by Laurence Andreas, and finished by Laurence Petri, and was printed at Upsal, in 1541, Papal See against them. Of two of these versions, the Ratisbon edition, and that executed by M. Gossner, a learned Romish priest, formerly of Munich, the author has not been able to obtain any authentic particulars; the third was executed about the year 1812, by the Rev. Leander Von Ess, professor of divinity in the University of the New Leander Von Ess, professor of divinity in the University of the New Leander Von Ess, professor of divinity in the University of the New Leander Von Ess, professor of the New Leander Von sity of Marburg, in conjunction with his brother. rectly from the Greek, and has been recommended by the first Protestant clergymen at Dresden and Zurich, as well as by several authorities among the literati of the Romish communion, as exhibiting a pure and correct version of the sacred original.7

There are also two translations of the Old Testament, in the dialect spoken by the Jews in Germany, called the Jewish-German. One was made by Joseph Josel Ben Alexander, and was printed One was made by Joseph Josep Ben Alexander, and was printed by Joseph Athias, at Amsterdam, in 1679: previously to publication it was revised by Rabbi Meir Stern, chief rabbi at the synagogue at Amsterdam. The other Jewish-German translation was executed by Rabbi Jekuthiel Ben Isaac Blitz, and was printed by Uri Veibsch Ben Aaron, also at Amsterdam, in 1679. Kortholt Uri Veibsch Ben Aaron, also at Amsterdam, in 1679. Kortholt terms this translator a blasphemous impostor, and charges him with having disguised certain prophecies relations. having disguised certain prophecies relative to the Messiah, in consequence of his Jewish predilections. Of these two semi-barbarous, unfaithful, and now almost universally neglected translations, which can be of no use whatever in Scripture criticism, Carpzov has given an account, with specimens.⁸ And as the German Jews are at this time said to be animated by a spirit of candid inquiry, a Jewish-German translation of the New Testament has lately been printed for their benefit, at the expense of the London Society for promoting Christianity among the Jews.

2. French Versions.

The earliest attempt towards translating the Scriptures into French was made by Jean de Vignay or de Vignes, who translated the epistles and gospels contained in the Romish missal, at the request of Jane of Burgundy, queen of Philip king of France, in the early part of the fourteenth century.9 Later in the same century, Raoul de Presles, or Praelles, at the command of Charles V. king of France, translated the Bible into French as far as the Psalms of France, translated the Bible into French as far as the Psalms or Proverbs. 10 A very fine manuscript of his version is preserved among the Lansdowne MSS., No. 1175., in the British Museum. 11 In 1512, James le Fèvre, of Estaples (better known by the name of Jacobus Faber, Stapulensis), published a translation of St. Paul's epistles, with critical notes and a commentary, in which he freely censures the Vulgate; and in 1523 he published at Paris, in a similar manner, the whole of the New Testament. This was followed by the detacked backets of the Old Testament. censures the Vulgate; and in 1523 he published at Paris, in a similar manner, the whole of the New Testament. This was followed by detached books of the Old Testament, and by an edition of the entire French Bible, translated by himself. It was printed at Antwerp, by Martin PEmpereur, in 1530 (again in 1534 and 1541), and was revised by the divines of Louvain, whose edition appeared in 1550, and has since been repeatedly printed. The translation of Le Fèvre is said to be the basis of all the subsequent French Bibles, whether executed by Roman Catholics or Protestants. The first Protestant French Bible was published by Robert Peter Olivetan, with the assistance of his relative, the illustrious reformer. first Protestant French Bible was published by Robert Peter Olivetan, with the assistance of his relative, the illustrious reformer, John Calvin, who corrected the Antwerp edition wherever it differed from the Hebrew. It was printed at Neufehatel, in 1535, in folio; and at Geneva in 1540, in large quarto, with additional corrections by Calvin. Both these editions are of extreme rarity. Another edition appeared at the same place in 1588, revised by the college of pastors and professors of the Reformed Church at Geneva (Beza, Genlart, Jaquemot, Bertram, and others), who so greatly improved Olivetan's Bible, both in correctness and diction, that it, henceforth obtained the name of the Geneva Rible, by that it henceforth obtained the name of the Geneva Bible, by which it is now generally known. It has gone through very nu-merous editions, the latest of which is that of Geneva, 1805, in folio, and also in three volumes, 8vo. revised by the college of pastors at Geneva. This is confessedly the most elegant French version extant; but many Protestants have wished that it were a lit-tle more literal, and they continue to prefer David Martin's revi-sion of the Genevan version of the French Bible (of which the New Testament was printed in 1696, at Utrecht, in 4to, and the entire Bible at Amsterdam, in 1707, in two folio volumes), or the revision of Jean-Frédéric Ostervald; the best edition of which is said to be that printed at Neufchatel, in 1772, in folio, with his arguments and reflections on the different books and chapters of the Bible. Ostervald's revised text (frequently but erroneously termed a version) has been several times printed. Another French Protestant version (made from the Italian translation of Diodati) was published in 1562, which for a short time was held or The late Rev. Dr. Reinhart, first chaplain to the court of Saxony, and the venerable superior of the Zurich clergy, Antistes Hess.

Towen's History of the British and Foreign Bible Society, vol. ii. p. 229.
Carpzovii Critica Veteris Testamenti, pp. 757—786.
Guiars de Moulins, canon of St. Pierre d'Aire, in the diocese of Touraine, is commonly but erroneously considered as the first French translator of the Bible. Between the years 1291 and 1294 he translated the Historia Scholastica of Peter Comestor; a popular abstract of sacred history, which has been confounded with the Scriptures. (Townley's Illustrations of Biblical Literature, vol. i. pp. 391, 392.) Several copies of this translation are in the Royal Library at Paris; and an edition of it was printed by order of Charles VIII., to whom it was dedicated, at Paris, in 1487.
To Townley's Illustrations, vol. ii. pp. 8—11.

in estimation by the Calvinists. The French translation of Sebas-1 tian Castalio, who was but indifferently skilled in that language, appeared at Basil in 1655; being accommodated to his Latin version above noticed, it was liable to the same objections, and was never held in any esteem. The translation of the entire Bible by Charles le Cêne, who quitted France on the revocation of the edict of Nantes, was published in a folio volume in 1741, thirty-eight years after his death, by his son, a bookseller at Amsterdam. The States of Groningen prohibited the circulation of this version in translation of the New Testament, by the celebrated critic Le Clerc, appeared at Amsterdam in two volumes 4to.: it is said to be tainted with Socinian principles, and how were be tainted with Socinian principles, and has never been much read. But the French Protestant version of the New Testament, executed by MM. Beausobre and L'Enfant (Amsterdam, 1718, in two volumes, 4to.), is highly and deservedly esteemed for its closeness. An English translation of the gospel of Matthew, made from this version, was published at Cambridge in 1779, in 8vo., to which was prefixed a translation of the excellent introduction which ac-companied the French edition. This volume has been several times printed.

A reformation of the Geneva Bible was undertaken by Renat A reformation of the Ceneva brite was undertaken by Remai Benoist (Renatus Benedictus), professor of divinity in the college of Navarre. It was published with notes in 1566; but being con-demned by a brief of pope Gregory XIII. in 1575, a new edition was undertaken by the divines of Louvain, who freed it from the corrections of the reformed, and made it altogether conformable to the Latin. This edition was printed at Antwerp in 1575, and at various places since. In 1820 a version of St. John's gospel, in the dialect spoken at Toulouse and in its vicinity, was printed at Toulouse. There are several other French translations by private individuals, as, 1. The entire Bible, translated from the Latin Vulgate by Jacques Corbin, an advocate of the parliament of Paris, and published in 1643, with the approbation of the faculty of the cology of Poitiers: at present it is but little esteemed in France;—2. The New Testament, from the Vulgate, by Michael de Marolles, published in 1649: it is executed principally from Erasmus's Latin version, but in some passages from the Vulgate, and has often been reprinted;—3. Father Amelotte's translation of the Testament from the Vulgate was published in 1666, 1667 and 1668, in four volumes, 8vo., with notes. It has been very justly and severely criticised, for its blunders, by Father Simon. His principal design in publishing this version was to supersede the French cipal design in publishing this version was to supersede the French Protestant translation, and especially that of the learned Port-Royalists (which was then in the press), whose bitter enemy Amelotic was;—4. The version of the New Testament by the Port-Royalists, which was depreciated before its publication by the adversaries of the Jansenists, appeared in 1667, in two volumes, 8vo. It was printed at Amsterdam by the Elzevirs, for Gaspard Migeot, a bookseller of Mons (whence it is sometimes called the Testament of Mons), with the approbation of the archbishop of Cambray, and the bishop of Namur, and with the privilege of the king of Spain; but it was condemned by the popes Clement IX. and Innocent XI. This version (which is from the Vulgate) was Ring of Spain; but it was condemned by the popes Clement IA.
and Innocent XI. This version (which is from the Vulgate) was begun by Antoine le Maître, after whose death it was finished by his brother Isaac Louis le Maître de Sacy, with the assistance of the celebrated Port-Royalists, Arnaud, Nicole, Claude Sainte Marthe, and Pierre-Thomas du Fosse. This version was greatly esteemed, especially by the Jansenists;—5. The version of the New Testament, by Antoine Godeau, bishop of Grasse, appeared at Paris in 1668, in two volumes, 8vo.: it is made from the Vulgate, and holds a middle way between a literal version and a paraphrase;— 6. The New Testament, by Father Quesnel, is made more conformable to the Vulgate than the translation published at Mons (No. 4.), which he took for his basis: it is accompanied with moral reflections, which are justly admired for their piety, and were commended by pope Clement XI., who afterwards, in 1713, condemned his version by the celebrated bull beginning with the words "Unigenitus Dei Filius," together with one hundred and one propositions extracted from it and even thing that citizate had been supposed. tions extracted from it, and every thing that either had been written or should be written in defence of it! The first part of Quesnel's Version and Reflections was published in 1671, and the work was completed in the course of the following nine years. Editions of the whole work were printed at Brussels in 1693 and 1694, in 4 vols. 8vo., at Trevoux in 1698, and at Paris in 1699. This edition is said to be more apple, then the processions of the processions. vols. 8vo., at Trevoux in 1698, and at Paris in 1699. This edition asid to be more ample than the preceding, and has often been reprinted, both in 8vo. and 12mo. Quesnel's Reflections were translated into English, and published in four volumes, 8vo., at London, in 1719-1725;—7. A translation of the New Testament, published by the Jesuits at Bordeaux in 1686, with the approbation and permission of the ecclesiastical authorities of the place. Of the wild alteration and fedication, introduced in the control of the process of the place. the wilful alterations and falsifications introduced into this version, in order to support the peculiar dogmas of the Romish church, an account was published by bishop Kidder in 1690. It is supposed that nearly the whole of this version was bought up and destroyed, as very few copies are known to be in existence 3—8, 9. Between

¹ Le Sent Ehangely de Nostré Seigneur Jesus Christ seloun Sent Jan, traduit en Lengo Toulouzenzo. A Toulouso, 1820, 12mo.
² Le Nouveau Testament de notre Seigneur J. C., traduit de Latin en François par les Théologiens de Louvain; imprime a Bordeaux, chez Jacquies Mongiron-Millanges, Imprimeur du Roi et du Collège, 1686. Avec Jacques Mongron-Milanges, imprimeur du Roi et du Conège, 1980. Avec approbation et permission.

Two copies are at Oxford, one in the Bodleian Library, and another in that of Christ Church College; two others are in Dublin. in the University Library, and in the Library founded by Archibishop Marsh; and a fifth is in the possession of his royal highness the Duke of Sussex. (Dr. Cotton's 1697 and 1703, the Jesuits, Bouhours, Michael Tellier, and Pierre Bernier, published another translation of the New Testament; but this, as well as the version of Charles Hure, also from the Vulgat this, as well as the version of Charles Flare, also from the Yungar (Paris, 1702, in four volumes, 12mo.), are now nearly forgotten;—10. The French version of the ingenious critic, Father Simon, published with notes in 1702, was translated into English by Mr. Webster, in two volumes, 4to., 1730. This version was condemned by an ordinance of the cardinal de Noailles, archbishop of Paris, and also by two "Instructions," issued by the celebrated Bossuet, bishop of Meaux. Various portions of the Bible have been translated into French by other writers, who are not of sufficient note to require a distinct mention.

3 Belgian Versions.

A Flemish translation of the Scriptures was made from the Vul-A Flemish translation of the Scriptures was made from the vutgate in the sixteenth century, and printed at Cologne in 1475, at Delft in 1477, and at other places. For a long time the Protestants in the Low Countries had only the Dutch translation, made from Luther's German version in 1560, which has already been noticed in page 44; but in 1618, in consequence of an order issued by the Synod of Dort, a new translation was undertaken from the Hebrew and Greek. The translators of the Old Testament were John Bocorporate. William Raudart, and Gorson Rucer, the New Testament and Greek. The translators of the Old Testament were John Bo-germann, William Baudart, and Gerson Bucer; the New Testament and apocryphal books were assigned to James Roland, Anthony Valæus, and Festus Hommius. Their portions, when finished, were submitted to the careful revision of others. This Dutch version was first printed in 1637, and is highly valued for its fidelity; the Remonstrants, however, being dissatisfied with the New Testament, translated it anew from the Greek; and their version was printed at Amsterdam in 1680.

4. Italian Versions.

Four versions of the Bible are extant in the Italian language. The earliest is that of Nicolao Malermi, who translated it from the Latin Vulgate: it was first published at Venice in 1471, in folio. The second is that of Antonio Bruccioli, also printed at Venice in 1532: he professes to have made his version from the Hebrew and Greek; but Walchius says, that he chiefly followed the Latin translation of Sanctes Pagninus. A revised edition of Bruccioli's Italian Bible, rendered conformable to the Vulgate by Sanctes Marmochinus, was printed at Venice in 1538. An Italian version has, moreover, been said to have been published under the auspices has, moreover, been said to have been published under the auspices of pope Sixtus V.; but its existence is very doubtful. A Protestant Italian version of the New Testament was published at Geneva in 1561, and of the entire Bible in 1562, which is usually considered as a revision of Bruccioli's, but Walchius asserts that it is altogether a new translation. It has, however, long been superseded by the elegant and faithful version of Giovanni Diodati, published in 1607. The letest Italian version is that executed, in conformity with the elegant and faithful version of Giovanni Diodati, published in 1607. The latest Italian version is that executed, in conformity with the Vulgate, by Antonio Martini, archbishop of Florence, towards the close of the eighteenth century: it received the sanction of the late pope Pius VI. The New Testament was published at Turin in 1769, and the Old Testament in 1779; both were accompanied with explanatory notes professedly taken from the fathers. Martini's translation has been repeatedly printed: the edition of Livorno (Leghorn), 1818, and that of Italia, 1817, with the stereotype New Testament executed by T. Rutt, Shacklewell (near London), 1813, were put into the Index or Catalogue of Books, prohibited to be sold, by a decree dated January 13th, 1820.

5. Spanish Versions.

The earliest edition of the Scriptures in the Spanish language was executed from the Vulgate, and printed at Valencia in Memoir of a French Translation of the New Testament, p. 9.) The late Rev. Dr. Grier, in the preface to his "Answer to Ward's Errata of the Protestant Bible" (London, 1812, 410.), has given many specimens of the fastifications, furgeries, and adultions made by the Jesuits to the text of the Bordeaux French version of the New Testament. Two or three passages are subjoined as examples of the corruptions thus wilfully made in this version: this version :-

Or comme ils offroient au Seigneur le sacrifice de la messe.

this version:

Acts xiii. 2. Or comme ils offroient au Seigneur le sacrifice de la messe.

Now as they offered unto the Lord the sacrifice of the mass. &c.

This is one of the most notorious falsifications to be found in the French translatiot; it was designedly made to support the unscriptural doctrine of the sacrifice of the mass. By it the translators departed from the Latin Vulgate, as well as from the English Protestant version. This is the very passage respecting which Monsieur Veron, when asked why he wrested it from its natural meaning, replied, "Because he had often been asked by Calvinists what scripture affirmed that the apostles said mass." (Simon's Crit. Hist. of the New Testament, p. 387.)

1 Tim. iv. 1. Or l'Esprit dit clairement, qu'en derniers temps quelques uns se sépareront de la foy Romaine.—Now the Spirit says, that in the latter times some shall depart from the Roman faith.

Here the Bordeaux translators have been guilty of another forgery, for the purpose of representing the Romish church as the only church.

2 Cor. viii. 19. Et non seulement cela, mais aussi il a esté ordonné par les églises, compagnon de notre pelerinage.—And not only that, but he was also appointed by the churches the companion of our pilgrimage.

In this passage Saint Paul is merely speaking of his having selected a brother to accompany him on his travels; but, in the Bordeaux version, the apostle's language is altered, for the purpose of showing that the practice of pilgrimage is warranted by Scripture.

4 Schoell, Histoire Abrégee de la Liitérature Grecque, tome ii. pp. 159—166. Chalmers's Biographical Dictionary, art. Queenel, vol. xxv. pp. 428—429.

5 Townley's Illustrations of Biblical Literature, vol. iii. p. 483.

429. ⁶ Townley's Illustrations of Biblical Literature, vol. iii. p. 483.

1478;¹ it is now of very rare occurrence. In 1553, a Spanish version of the Old Testament was made for the Jews by Edward Pinel; it was printed at Ferrara. In 1630, a revised edition of it was published at Amsterdam, by Manasseh Ben Israel. A much earlier translation than this is said to have been made by some learned Jews, which has been too hastily attributed to Rabbi David Kinchi. An edition of the Old Testament in Hebrew and in Jewish Spanish was printed at Vienna, in the years 1813, 14, 15, and 16, in four volumes, quarto, for the use of the Jews of Constantinople, and of most of the cities of Turkey, who are Spanish Jews. The Hebrew text is printed, with vowel points, on one half of the page, and the Jewish-Spanish, with rabbinical characters, on the other;² and a translation of the New Testament into the Jewish-Spanish dialect is in progress at Constantinople, under the direction of the Rev. H. a translation of the New Testament into the Jewish-Spanish dialect is in progress at Constantinople, under the direction of the Rev. H. D. Leeves. The Gospels of Matthew and Mark have been completed. Among the Christians, Cassiodore de Reyna translated the Scriptures into Spanish, from the original languages, but availed himself of the assistance afforded by the Latin versions of Pagninus and Leo Juda: it was published at Basil in 1569. A revised edition of it by Cyprian de Valera, a Protestant, who consulted later versions and notes expensibly the Capacian Erranh Rible versions of the consulted later. versions and notes, especially the Genevan French Bible, was pubversions and notes, especially the Genevan French Bible, was published at Amsterdam in 1602. A new Spanish version of the entire Bible from the Latin Vulgate was published at Madrid in 1793-4, by Don Philipe Scio de San Miguel (subsequently appointed bishop of Segovia), in ten folio volumes; it is adorned with three hundred engravings, copied from those of Marillier and Monsiau, which were executed for the edition of Sacy's French version of the Bible, printed at Paris in 1789 and the following years. This edition is very rare and dear, even in Spain. Padre Scio's Spanish version was reprinted at Madrid between the years 1794 and 1797, in nineteen large 8vo. volumes, with plates. There are copies of this edition both with and without the Latin text. The third edition of this version was published at Madrid in 1808, in Latin and Spanish. teen large 8vo. volumes, with plates. There are copies of this edition both with and without the Latin text. The third edition of this version was published at Madrid in 1808, in Latin and Spanish, this version was published at Madrid in 1808, in Latin and Spanish, in sixteen volumes, which have the appearance of small quartos: they are very neatly executed. The Vulgate text and Spanish translation are printed in parallel columns. To each book is prefixed a critical preface; and at the foot of the page is a copious commentary, drawn principally from the writings of the fathers. In 1824, another Spanish version of the Bible, from the Latin Vulgate, with notes, was published by Don Felix Torres Amat, in eight volumes, 4to. Thirty thousand copies are said to have been worked off, part of which was destined for America. In 1832, a translation of the New Testament into the Catalonian dialect, by Mr. lation of the New Testament into the Catalonian dialect, by Mr. Prat, a native of the province of Catalonia, was completed and printed. This dialect is spoken by about four millions of persons. The translator has completed (but not printed) a version of the Book of Psalms.5

6. Russian Versions.

"About the beginning of the sixteenth century considerable changes were introduced into the Russian language, in consequence of the relations subsisting between Russia and Poland, the progress of the Poles in grammar and lexicography, and other powerfully operative causes, whereby a peculiar Polish Russian dialect was formed, which continues to be spoken to this day by the common people inhabiting the provinces comprehended under the name of White Russia." Into this dialect the Pentateuch, and other detached portions of the Scripture (which are enumerated other detached portions of the Scripture (which are enumerated by Dr. Henderson, to whom we are indebted for this account of the modern Russian Bibles), were translated by Dr. Francis Skorina, a physician, who published them between the years 1517 and 1525. The whole of the copies appear to have been sent into White Russia: they are of very rare occurrence.⁶

"The next attempt that was made to furnish the Russians with a version of the Scriptures in their vernacular tongue, was that of Ernest Glück, dean of the Lutheran church of Livonia," who, towards the close of the seventeenth century, undertook a version of the whole Sclavonic (or ancient Russian) Bible into the dialect at that the whole Sclavonic (or ancient Russian) Bible into the dialect at that time spoken in Russia. It has been erroneously asserted that this version was printed at Amsterdam in 1698; but Dr. Henderson states that it was destroyed, with the whole of Glück's library and papers, at the siege of Marienburg in 1702.

When, in consequence of the formation of the Russian Bible Society, the public attention was raised to the importance of the Holy Scriptures, it was found necessary to undertake a translation into the modern Russ language. The empeor Alexander having referred it to the members of the Holy Synod at Moscow, they recommended the members of the Committee of Spiritual Schools to 1 Thomson's and Orme's Historical Sketch of the Translation of the Scriptures, p. 40 note.

2 Sixteenth Report of the British and Foreign Bible Society, Appendix,

P. 24.

Nineteenth Report of the British and Foreign Bible Society, Appendix, p. 24.

Nineteenth Report of the British and Foreign Bible Society, pp. lv. 98.
To ensure correctness, the Rev. H. D. Leeves states, that the translator and his assistant passed with him three or four mornings in every week; and that, with his Greek Testament and various versions before him, he heard the whole read over, and allowed no phrase or word to pass which did not convey the sense of the sacred original. Ibid. p. 99.

Bibliothèque de la Littérature Etrangére pour 1823, p. 312. A complete copy of Amat's translation is in the library of the British and Foreign Bible Society.

Twenty-seventh Report, p. xliii. Twenty-ninth Report, p. xlviii.

Dr. Henderson's Biblical Researches, pp. 103—105. In pp. 106—110. he has given specimens of this version, with valuable philological observations.

select proper persons for the undertaking. On the completion of the four Gospels, they were examined by a committee of revision, who published in 1819 two editions, consisting of 15,000 copies each, In 1820, 50,000 copies with the Sclavonic text in parallel columns. In 1820, 50,000 copies of the Gospels and Acts were issued from the press: the epistles were added successively, as they passed the committee of revision, and in 1823, the entire New Testament was published, for the first time, in the modern Russian language. In 1822, a version of the Psalms, from the original Hebrew, was published; the principal labour in preparing which had fallen on the Rev. Dr. Paysky, the first Hebrew scholar in the empire. Of the other books of the Old Testament (the translation of which was confided to the learned members of the Spiritual Academies of St. Petersburg, Moscow, and Kief), the Pentateuch, and the books of Job, Proverbs, and Ecclesiastes, were translated at the beginning of 1822, and forwarded to the committee of revision; and the archbishop Philaret had commenced the translation of Isaiah. It having been ascertained that the first edition would make several volumes, the Committee of the Russian Bible Society undertook an edition of 10,000 copies of the Russian Bible Society undertook an edition of 10,000 copies of the Pentateuch, or five books of Moses, Joshua, Judges, and Ruth: but "this edition, though ready for publication at Midsummer, 1824, has not yet made its appearance; not having obtained the sanction and blessing of the Holy Synod. Nor is it likely soon to see the light, unless the successor of Alexander act in the spirit by which that illustrious monarch was guided when he ordered the translation to be made." So far as it has been published, the Modern Purpley varying is ested to the translation to the spirit spirit was presented to the spirit by the spirit spirit was presented to the spirit Russian version is stated to have been received with the liveliest gratitude both by clergy and laity.

7. Croat Version

The New Testament in the language of Croatia was first published at Tubingen in 1551. It was translated by the pastor Truber, and was reprinted with some corrections by the translator, at the same place, in two octavo volumes, in 1581-2. These editions are of extreme rarity. The first edition of the entire Croat Bible apof extreme rarity. The first edition of the entire Croat Bible appeared at Wittemburg in 1584. The New Testament is the version of Truber. The Pentateuch, Proverbs, and book of Ecclesiasticus were translated by the editor, George Dalmatinus, who also wrote

8. Basque Version.

The New Testament, in the Basque dialect, was first printed at Rochelle in 1571, with a dedication in French to Joan d'Albert, queen of Navarre, by John de Licarrague de Briscous. It is furnish. ed with parallel passages in the margin, and at the end are summaries of contents, indexes, &c.⁹ In 1826, a new edition of the Gospel of St. Matthew in this dialect was printed at Bayonne, from a copy (perhaps unique) that was discovered in the University Library at Oxford ¹⁰ and in 1829 the entire New Testament was printed at Paris, besides one thousand extra copies of the four Gospels. ¹¹

9. Hungarian Version.

The Hungarian Protestant version was executed by Caspar Caroli, who availed himself of the previous labours of Vatablus, Pagninus, Munster, Tremellius, and of the Vulgate. It was first published in 1589, at Wysolyn; and subsequently at Hanau, in 1608; at Oppenheim, in 1612; at Amsterdam, in 1645, 1684, and 1685, and at other places. Of the edition printed in Holland, in 1717, three thousand copies are said to have been intercepted by the Jesuits, into whose custody they were committed, to prevent any use from being made of them. There is also a Popish version, made from the Latin Vulgate, by George Kaldi, and printed at Cologne and Vienna.

10. Polish Version.

Three versions of the Scriptures have been published in the Polish language. The first was undertaken for the use of the Romanists, and was published at Cracow in 1561; reprinted at the Romanists, and was published at Cracow in 1501; reprinted at the same place in 1577, 1599, and 1619, and at other places. The second was made by the Socinians, under the patronage and at the expense of prince Nicholas Radzivil; it was published at Pinczow, in Lithuania, in 1563, and is one of the rarest books ever printed. 12 in Lithuania, in 1965, and is one of the tatest cooks ever plant. This translation was reprinted at Zaslau, in Lithuania, in 1572. The third Polish version was made by the Reformed, or Calvinists, in 1596. A translation of the New Testament into the Judgeoin 1596. A translation of the New Testament into the Judgeo-Polish dialect (which is spoken by the Jews, who are very nume-rous in Poland) has been made by the Rev. N. Solomon, at the expense and under the patronage of the London Society for pro-

T. Dr. Henderson's Biblical Researches, pp. 115, 116, 125—127. In pp. 119—121, 126, 128—130., Dr. H. has given specimens of the Modern Russian Version, with philological remarks.
A Adler's Bibliotheca Biblica, part iv. pp. 131, 132.
Ibid. p. 151.
Archives du Christianisme pour 1826, p. 47.
Twenty-fifth Report of the Bible Society, p. xxvii. Twenty-sixth Research version.

port, p. xxix.

12 A copy of this translation is in the library of Earl Spencer, and is described by Dr. Dibdin, Bib. Spenc. vol. i. pp. 85—89.

moting Christianity among the Jews; it was printed in 1821. A translation of the New Testament into the language of Namogitia, a province of Poland, was printed in 1820, at the expense of the Russian Bible Society.

11. Bohemian Version.

The first Bohemian translation was made from the Latin Vulgate, The first Sohemian translation was made from the Latin Vulgate, and was published at Prague in 1488. The other, for the use of the Protestants in Bohemia, was made from the sacred originals by Albert Nicolai, John Capito, Isaiah Cœpolla, and other learned reformers, at the expense of the baron John Zerotimus. It was published between the years 1579 and 1593, in six quarto volumes, without any indication of the place where they were printed, which is supposed to have been Kralitz.

12. Romaic, or Modern Greek Version.

The Romaïc is a corruption of the ancient Greek, so great, indeed, that, compared with the latter, it may be pronounced a new language: it is at present in general use, both for writing and conversation, the ancient Greek being used solely for ecclesiastical affairs. Into this language the New Testament was translated by Maximus Calliergi, and was printed at Geneva in 1638, in one large quarto volume, in two columns, one containing the ancient, and the other the modern Greek. It was published at the expense of the then United Provinces, upon the solicitation of Cornelius of the then United Provinces, upon the solicitation of Cornelius Haga, their ambassador at Constantinople. The Greeks, however, did not receive it with much favour. This translation was reprinted at London in 1703, in one volume, 12mo., by Seraphin, a monk of Mitylene; who prefixed to it a preface, which gave offence to the Greek bishops, particularly to the patriarch of Constantinople. By his order it was committed to the flames. The edition of 1703 (which, in consequence of this suppression, has become extremely rare) was reprinted in 1705; and in that edition the objectionable passages in Seraphin's preface were omitted. A more correct edition of it was printed at Halle, in Saxony, in 1710, in one volume, 12mo., under the patronage and at the expense of Sophia Louisa. 12mo., under the patronage and at the expense of Sophia Louisa, Queen of Prussia.² From this last edition was printed the impression executed at the expense of the British and Foreign Bible Society, in one thick volume, 12mo. (Chelsea, 1810), the ancient and modern Greek being in parallel columns. To this edition the patriarch of Constantinople gave his unqualified approbation.³ With regard to the Old Testament, though the book of Psalms was translated into Branch and privated at Venice in 1642, and the translated into Romaic, and printed at Venice in 1543, and the Pentateuch (by the Jews at Constantinople) in 1547, yet no entire version of the Scriptures was extant in modern Greek, until the Greeks concurs in representing as best qualified for the task) undertook first to prepare a new translation of the New Testament, which was printed in 1830, and afterwards of the Old Testament, from the ancient into the modern Greek; the Pentateuch was printed in 1832, and the Book of Psalms in 1831.5

13. Wallachian Version.

13. Wallachian Version.

"Previous to the year 1648, no part of the Scriptures existed in the Wallachian language, the Greek or Sclavonic being used in the church service, and the only Bibles in use were in those languages; but in that year the New Testament was printed at Belgrade." Of the Bible four editions have been printed; at Bukharest, in 1668 and 1714; at Blaje, in Transylvania, in 1795; and at St. Petersburg, in 1819. "The translation was made by the Metropolitan Theodosius, by order of Jo. Scherban Woivoda, a prince of Wallachia. An edition of the New Testament was also printed at St. Petersburg, in 1817. The number of those by whom this language is spoken is estimated at nearly two millions."

14, 15. Bulgarian and Serbian Versions.

The Gospel of St. Matthew was translated and printed in the Bulgarian language, at St. Petersburg, in 1823; but doubts being entertained of the competency of the translator, its further progress was discontinued. The Serbian Version of the New Testament, was discontinued. was discontinued. The Serolah Version of the New Testament, which was executed some years since, being deemed unfit for the press, the Russian Bible Society engaged a native Serbian to undertake a new translation, the printing of which was completed in 1825; but, owing to the cessation of the Society's operations, the distribution of the copies has hitherto been retarded.⁷

16. Romanese Versions.

The Romanese language is divided into two dialects, the Chur-elsche and Ladiniche. The former is spoken by the inhabitants welsche and Ladiniche.

1 Thirteenth Report of the London Society for promoting Christianity among the Jews, p. 8.

² Butler's Horæ Biblicæ, vol. i. pp. 177—179.

³ Owen's History of the British and Foreign Bible Society, vol. ii. p. 358.

note.

Sixteenth Report of the British and Foreign Bible Society, Appendix, pp. 19, 20. Seventeenth Report, p. liv. Twenty-third Report, p. xxix.

Twenty-fifth Report, p. l. Twenty-seventh Report, p. xlii. Twenty-eighth Report, p. l. Twenty-minth Report, p. xlii. Twenty-eighth Report, p. l. Twenty-minth Report, p. xlix.

Dr. Henderson's Biblical Researches, pp. 249, 250.

Vol. II.—App. 3 Y

of the Engadine (one of the loftiest valleys in Switzerland, bordering on the Tyrol); the latter, by the Ladins, who reside on the confines of Italy. The Scriptures were translated into the Churwelsche dialect, and published in 1657, at Schuol, a town of the Lower Engadine, and into the Ladiniche at Coire, in 1719. Editions of both these versions have been printed by the Bible Society at Basle, aided by the British and Foreign Bible Society in London.

17. Turkish Versions.

In 1666, the New Testament was printed in Turkish, at Oxford: it was translated by Dr. Lazarus Seaman, and was published at the joint expense of the Hon. Robert Boyle, and of the Levant or Turkey Company of London, for the benefit of the Christians in Turkey, by whom it was very gratefully received. In the same year a translation of the whole Bible into the Turkish language In the same was completed by Albertus Boboosky, better known by his Turkish name of Hali Bey, first dragoman or interpreter to the Porte.8 He undertook this arduous work at the request of the celebrated Levin Warner, at that time ambassador from Holland, and his translation was sent to Leyden, corrected and ready for the press. Here it lay until 1814, when the Rev. Dr. Pinkerton, having ascertained its value, recommended it to the British and Foreign Bible Society. The curators of the university of Leyden having confided the manuscript to his excellency Baron von Diez, at that time countries to the countries of t manuscript to his excellency Baron von Diez, at that time counsellor of legation to the court of Berlin, this distinguished scholar devoted the last two years of his life to its revision, and to superintending the printing of it. On his decease, in 1817, the editing of this version was undertaken by M. Kieffer, professor of the oriental languages at Paris; and in 1820, the New Testament was finished. The printing of the entire Turkish Bible was completed in 1828, and its accuracy has been attested by the Rev. Dr. Henderson, who had (not without reason) objected to some passages in the first edition of the Turkish New Testament.

The five books of Moses, the book of Joshua, and the New Testament.

The five books of Moses, the book of Joshua, and the New Testament, were translated into what is called the plain Turkish dialect, and published at Astrachan, in 1825. This version was executed by the Rev. John Dickson, missionary from the Scottish Missionary Society, at Astrachan; who, in executing it, derived essential assistance from the preceding version of Hali Bey. A copy of this plain Turkish version is in the library of the British Museum Museum.

18. Portuguese Versions.

In 1681, the New Testament was printed in the Portuguese language at Amsterdam; and some portions were printed in the former part of the last century by the missionaries at Tranquebar. A Portuguese version of the Old Testament, executed by Joao Ferroringuese version of the Old Festament, executed by Joan Ferreira d'Almeida and Jacob op den Akker, was published at Batavia, in 1748-53, in two volumes, 8vo. These were Protestant versions. In 1781, Antonio Pereira published a Portuguese version of the New Testament, at Lisbon; and in 1783, the entire Bible. This translation is made from the Vulgate Latin version, and in all doctrinal points is in unison with the church of Rome.

19. Albanian Version.

Ή Καινη Διαθημή του Κυρίου και Σωτηρος ήμων Ιησου Χρίστου Διγλωττος, τουτεστι, Γρείκη και Αλβανικη. [The New Testament of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ in two languages, that is, Greek and Albanian.] Corfu, 1827, 8vo.

The Albanians are a hardy people, inhabiting the countries anciently known by the names of Illyricum and Epirus; numerous tribes of them are also spread over Macedonia and the Morea or Peloponnesus. A translation of the New Testament into their language was finished in the year 1820 by Dr. Evangelos Mexicos, under the patronage and at the expense of the British and Foreign Bible Society. The Albanian dialect had never been brought to a standard, until the committee of the Ionian Bible Society accomplished it, and printed the New Testament under the direction of Gregory, archbishop of Eubæa, in 1827, in parallel columns, one Owen's History of the Bible Society, vol. iii. pp. 13, 14. 257. 500. Sixteenth Report of the Society, Appendix, p. 17. Albertus Boboosky was born in Poland in the beginning of the seventeenth century. While a youth he was stolen by the Tartars, and sold to the Turks in Constantinople. By them he was educated in the Mohammedan faith, and when he grew up hecame first dragoman or translator to Mahomet or Mohammed IV. His Turkish name was Hali Bey. He understood seventeen languages, and is said to have spoken French, German, and English with the fluency of a native. To the English language he was greatly attached; and at the request of Mr. Boyle translated the catechism of the Church of England into Turkish. He also composed several works himself, several of which have been published: but his great work was the Translation of the Scriptures, above noticed. Boboosky also wrote a grammar and dictionary of the Turkish language. But it is not known what has become of them, and of the church catechism. This wonderful man intended to have returned into the bosom of the Christian Church; but died, before he accomplished his design. Owen's Hist. vol. iii. p. 14. note.

3 See the Collection of Documents relative to the Turkish Version, in the twentieth Report of the British and Foreign Bible Society, Appendix, pp. 124—155.

10 Twenty-fourth Report, p. xxix. and Appendix, p. 161.

11 New Baptist Miscellany, vol. ii p. 352.

alphabet of the Albanian characters faces the title-page.1

20. Maltese Version.

The Maltese may almost be considered as a dialect of the Arabic language. Into this dialect the New Testament was a few years since translated by signor Giuseppe Cannólo, a native of the island of Malta, under the direction and with the assistance of the Rev. William Jowett, M.A., at that time one of the representatives of the Church Missionary Society in the Mediterranean. The Old Testament is in progress. As very few books have appeared in Maltese ment is in progress. As very few books have appeared in Maltese, the Gospel of John has been printed in this country, in Maltese and English, in parallel columns; and copies have been sent to Malta for distribution chiefly among persons capable of forming a judgment of the Maltese, in order to render the translation as perfect as practicable, before the entire New Testament shall be put to press. The importance of this undertaking will be felt, when it is considered that the crowded population of the islands of Malta and Gozo never yet possessed the Scriptures in their own tongue. The value of this translation is further enhanced, by the circumstance that it may serve as a step to Europeans who are desirous to learn the Arabic language 2 § 4. VERSIONS IN THE LANGUAGES OF ASIA. [i.] Hebrew Version.

The New Testament was first translated into Hebrew by the learned Elias Hutter, who published it in his Polyglott edition of the New Testament in twelve languages, viz. Greek, Syriac, He-brew, Latin, German, Bohemian, Italian, Spanish, French, English, Danish, and Polish, at Nuremberg, in 1599—1600, in two volumes, 4to. In his preface he states, that when meditating that work, he sought in vain for a Hebrew version of the New Testament. No alternative therefore was left to him, but to attempt it himself. Accordingly, laying aside every other undertaking, he translated, corrected, and finished it in the space of one year. For a first translation, especially when we consider the shortness of the time in which it was accomplished, it is truly a wonderful performance. From Hutter's Polyglott the Hebrew text was detached, and printed separately, with some corrections, under the superintendence of William Robertson, 8vo. London, 1661. It is a volume of extremely rare occurrence, as the greater part of the impression was consumed in the great fire of London, in 1666. Robertson's edition was beautifully reprinted in 12mo. at London, in 1798, by the Rev. Richard Callid with the proper and boroughout down of self-decident. Caddick, with the pious and benevolent design of enlightening the minds of the Jews. This translation not being executed in pure biblical Hebrew, and consequently not adapted to the Jews, the London Society for promoting Christianity. pure biblical Hebrew, and consequently not adapted to the Jews, the London Society for promoting Christianity among them, in 1817, completed and published a new translation in biblical Hebrew, the purity of which has been acknowledged by learned Jews. The Gospel of Saint Matthew was published in 1814, and the succeeding books at different times, as they could be completed. Another Hebrew translation of the New Testament with points was executed by Mr. William Greenfield, and published at London in 1831, in 8vo.³ The late Rev. Dr. Buchanan, during his researches in the interior of India, obtained a Hebrew manuscript of the New Testament in the country of Travancere, which is now. of the New Testament in the country of Travancore, which is now deposited in the University Library at Cambridge. It is written in the small Rabbinical or Jerusalem character. The translator was a learned rabbi, and the translation is in general faithful: his de-sign was, to make an accurate version of the New Testament, for sign was, to make an accurate version of the New Testament, for the express purpose of confuting it, and of repelling the arguments of his neighbours, the Syrian or St. Thome Christians. His own work was the providential instrument of subduing his unbelief; and he lived and died in the faith of Christ. A transcript of this Travancore Hebrew New Testament is in the Library of the London Society for promoting Christianity among the Jews.⁴ A Hebrew translation of the Apocryphal Books of the Old Testament from the Greek was made by Seckel Isaac Fraenkel, and published at Leipzig in 1830.5

[ii.] Chaldee.

The New Testament has not hitherto been published in this language; but a manuscript copy both of the Old and New Testament is said to exist in the Vatican Library.⁶ In the course of his missionary labours in Persia, the Rev. Mr. Wolff purchased the manuscripts of different portions of the Chaldee Bible; which,

* Twenty-second Report of the Bible Society, pp. xxxv. xxxvi. Twenty-

* Twenty-second Report of the Bible Society, pp. XXXV. XXXVI. Twenty-third Report, p. XXV.

* Eighteenth Report of the Church Missionary Society for 1817-18, p. 69.

* The reader will find a critical account of this Hebrew version of the entire New Testament in the Congregational Magazine for October, 1831.

There are extant various other Hebrew translations of detached books of the New Testament, by different individuals, which we have not room to enumerate. For an account of them see Dr. Clarke's Bibliographical Dictionary, vol. vi. pp. 218—222.

* Fourth Report of the London Society for promoting Christianity among the Jews, Appendix, p. 45.

* Hagiographa Posteriora denominata Apocrypha, hactenus Israelitis ignota, nunc autem e Textu Greeo in Linguam Hebraicam convertit atque in lucem emisit Seckel Isaac Fradenkell. Lipsiæ, 1830, 8vo.

6 Clarke's Bibliographical Dictionary, vol. vi. p. 213.

containing the Greek text, the other the Albanian version. An | though the same in language as the Syriac, is written in a different Versions in the Oriental Languages, either translated by the Baptist Missionaries at Serampore, or printed at the Mission Press.

The Baptist Missionaries entered India in 1793, and ultimately fixed themselves at the Danish settlement of Serampore, near Calcutta. To this mission chiefly belongs the honour of reviving the spirit of promoting Christian knowledge, by translations of the Bible. Soon after their establishment at Serampore, they were convinced that, if ever Christianity took deep root in India, it must be through the Holy Scriptures being translated and put into the hands of the various tribes who inhabit that vast country. Aided by a noble fund for translations, raised by subscriptions among the societies of the Baptist denomination in Great Britain, almost from the commencement of their pious labours, and also by various annual grants of money from the British and Foreign Bible Society, from the year 1806 to the present time, the missionaries applied themselves to the great work of translating the Scriptures. In this undertaking, which has been honoured with the sanction of the Marquess Wellesley, and subsequent governors-general of India, the Rev. Doctors Carey and Marshman, and the late Rev. William Ward, have pre-eminently distinguished themselves; and, with To this mission chiefly belongs the honour of reviving the Ward, have pre-eminently distinguished themselves; and, with their coadjutors, have continued with unwearied assiduity to pro-secute their arduous work.⁸ Having formed a typographical esta-blishment at Serampore, they have also been enabled to print translations of the Scriptures, entire or in part, which had been made by other learned and pious individuals. And when the Mission Colege, founded at Calcutta by the late Right Rev. Dr. T. F. MIDDLETON, Bishop of Calcutta (one of whose special objects, for the spiritual welfare of India, is the translation of the Bible into the hitherto untranslated dialects of India), shall commence its active operations, we may with just confidence anticipate the ultimate triumphs of our holy religion among the numerous tribes who inhabit that immense continent.9

The languages spoken in India form three classes, viz-

1. The Arabic, and the languages derived from or bearing an affinity to it. 2. The Sanscrit or Sungscrit; and 3. The Chinese, with the languages respectively derived from or bearing an affinity

1. Modern Versions in the Anabic language, and its cognate dialects.

(1.) ARABIC.—A version of the entire Bible in Arabic has come (1.) ARABIC—A Version of the entire biole in Arabic has come down to us, of which an account has been given in Part I. of the first Volume. Though highly valued by some oriental scholars for its general accuracy and fidelity, it has become antiquated in its dialect, and consequently unacceptable to the learned Arabians. On this account a new translation, in elegant modern Arabic, was comthis account a new translation, in elegant modern Arabic, was commenced by Sabat, an eminent Arabian scholar, under the superintendence of the late Rev. T. T. Thomason, M.A., one of the Hon. East India Company's Chaplains. The New Testament was completed and published at Calcutta, in 1816, at the expense of the British and Foreign Bible Society. A second edition of the New Testament, much revised and improved, was printed in 1826 at the press belonging to the Bishov's Colleger Calcutts. press belonging to the Bishop's College, Calcutta. An edition of the Arabic New Testament, in Syriac characters, was printed at Paris, at the expense of the Bible Society, in 1822. See a specimen

(2.) Persian.—The Persian version, already noticed in Part I. of the first Volume, having also become antiquated and obsolete, a new one was undertaken by Lieut. Colonel Colebrooke, who completed the Four Gospels. They were published at Calcutta in 1804. An entire version of the New Testament, in pure and elegant Persian, was executed by the late Rev. H. Martyn, who travelled from India to Shiraz, the Athens of Persia, for that purpose. He ar-

India to Shiraz, the Athens of Persia, for that purpose. He art Twenty-third Report of the Bible Society, p. xxxii.

§ For an account of the very great care bestowed on the versions undertaken by the missionaries at Serampore (each of which, upon the average, was the result of seven years' labour), the reader is referred to the Rev Dr. Marshman's "Brief Memoir," relative to their operations in Bengal (pp. 4—7. London, 1827), which most satisfactorily repels the assertions of their incompetency, which had been made by an anonymous writer in one of the periodical journals.

§ As soon as it was known in England that Bp. Middleton was forming the Mission College at Calcutta, the sum of 5000L sterling was voted to him by each of the venerable Societies for promoting Christian Knowledge, and for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, in aid of that Institution. The same sum was voted to his lordship by the Church Missionary Society, without condition or restriction, in furtherance of his plan. And the like sum of 5000L was voted by the British and Foreign Bible Society, in aid of the translation of the Holy Scriptures.

§ Wo. London, 1815; from the "Periodical Accounts of the Baptist Missions," Svo. London, 1815; from the Supplement to No. XXXI., containing a further memoir of the translations of the Sacred Scriptures, dated March 21, 1816, Svo. London, 1817; from specimens of Editions of the Sacred Scriptures, and of several others, printed at the Mission press, Serampore, 1818, 4to.; and from the "Seventh Memoir respecting the Translations of the Sacred Scriptures into the Languages of India, conducted by the Brethren at Serampore," 8vo. Serampore, 1820. The Specimens of Versions, in pp. 52—55, have been stereotyped from fac-similes, liberally communicated for the use of this work, by the Rev. J. Dyer, one of the Secretaries of that Society.

rived there in June, 1811, and by the middle of the following year he had completed his work, with the assistance of Meer Seyd Ali, a learned native. He next proceeded to translate the book of Psalms into the same language; and thus rendered those important parts of the Sacred Scriptures into the vernacular language of two hundred thousand who bear the Christian name, and which is known over one fourth of the habitable globe. A beautifully written copy of Martyn's translation was presented by Sir Gore Ouseley, bart, his majesty's plenipotentiary to the sovereign of Persia, who publicly expressed his approbation of the work. He subsequently carried another copy of the manuscript to Petersburg, where it was printed in 1815, at the expense of the Petersburg Bible Society, under the superintendence of Sir G. Ouseley. A specimer of this version is given in page 55. A modern Persian version of the historical books of the Old Testament is in progress also at Petersburg; and of the poetical and prophetical books, by the Rev. Mr. Glen, a Scottish missionary at Astrachan.² The book of Psalms and the Proverbs have been printed.³ A new version of Isaiah, by Mirza Ibrahim, a learned Persian, has been completed and printed.⁴ A Persian translation of the Old Testament has been commenced by the Rev. T. Robinson, chaplain at Poonah, with the sanction of the late Rt. Rev. Reginald Heber, bishop of Calcutta.5 (3.) Pushtoo or Affghan.—This language is spoken beyond the river Indus by a people who, there is every reason to conclude (from the coincidence of their language with the Chaldaic, and from other circumstances), are descended from the ten ribes of Israel. The eminent linguist, the late John Leyden, M.D., commenced a translation of the New Testament; and on his death, in 1812, the Baptist missionaries at Serampore procured men skilled in the language to complete his undertaking. The whole of the New Testament was printed at the mission press in 1818; and the New Testament was printed at the mission press in 1818; and the Pentateuch is advanced at the press as far as the book of Leviticus.

A specimen of this version is given in page 53.

(4.) Bulocha or Buloshee.—This language is spoken on the western banks of the Levit.

ern banks of the Indus, the country of Bulochistan extending westward to Persia. Considerable progress has been made by the missionaries in translating the New Testament into this dialect, in which they have printed the four Gospels. See a specimen of it in page 54.

2. Versions in the SANSCRIT or SUNGSKRIT language, and its cognate dialects.

(1.) Sanscrit.—This, though the parent of all the languages spoken in western and southern India, is, at present, the current language of no country, though it is spoken by the learned nearly throughout India. The New Testament was published in Sanscrit at Serampore, in 1808; the Pentateuch and historical books in 1811; the Hagiographa in 1816; and the translation of the prophetic books was finished in 1818. The Baptist missionaries are preparing a new edition of this version, which is read with great interest by the Brahmins. A specimen of it is given in page 52.

(2.) In Western India not fewer than twenty-nine languages are derived from the Sanscrit, and into EGMETERN of these the sacred

(2.) In Western India not fewer than twenty-nine languages are derived from the Sanscrit, and into EightEen of these the sacred volume has been wholly or in part translated, viz.

i. The Sikh, Sheek, or Punjabee, which is spoken in the province of Punjab, or the country of the five rivers (from punj five, and ab water): into this language the entire Bible has been translated and printed at the Serampore press. See a specimen of it in page 53.

ii. The Gujurat or Guzurattee, which is spoken in the peninsula of Guzurat; in this language the entire Bible has also been printed.
iii. The Assamese, or language of the kingdom of Assam, in which the New Testament was completed and printed in 1819.

See a specimen in page 53.

The New Testament has also been translated and printed in iv. The Kashmiree or Kashmeer, which is spoken in the extensive province of Kashmire, in the North of Hindostan:—See a specimen of it in page 52.

v. The Wutch or Multanee, or dialect of Wuch, a country on the eastern bank of the Indus, which reaches from the Punjab to Auch; vi. The Bikaneer, which is spoken to the south of the Punjab, and extends westward to the country where the Wucha begins; and in

vii. The Kunkuna, which language begins where the Guzurattee ceases to be vernacular, and is spoken at Bombay, and thence un the coast as far as Goa. On the completion of the Pentateuch in this language, the Serampore brethren transferred the translation of the remaining books of the Old Testament to the Bombay Auxiliary Bible Society.

viii. The Maruvar or Marwar, which is spoken to the south-west of the Bikaneer country;

ix. The Oojuvinee, or language of the province of Oujein;
x. The Bundelkhundee, spoken in the province of Bundelkh-und; and

xi. The Nepālese, or language of the kingdom of Nepal.

t Owen's Hist. of the Bible Society, vol. iii. p. 41.; vol. ii. p. 261. In pp. 265—267. an English translation of the letter of the King of Persia is printed at length. See also the very interesting Memoir of the Rev. Henry Martyn, B.D. 8vo. London, 1819, particularly pp. 341—433.

Twenty-third Report of the Bible Society p. xxxii.

Twenty-seventh Report, p. xivii.

Twenty-inith Report, p. livii.

Twentieth Report, p. livii.

The Four Gospels have been printed in xii. xiii. The Kanonj or Kanhekoobja, and Jumboo languages. The Gospels of Matthew and Mark have been printed in xiv. xv. xvi. The Palpa Kausulee or Koshul, and Bhutaneer languages, and also in xvii. The Magudha or Pali language, which is spoken in South It begins where the Mahratta language ends, and extends nearly to the banks of the Ganges, and is the learned language of Ceylon, and of the Burman empire. This version was commenced Ceylon, and of the Burman empire. This version was commenced by Mr. W. Tolfrey, at Colombo, in 1813: and on his death in 1817, the task of finishing and editing it was confided by the Colombo Auxiliary Bible Society to the Rev. Messrs. Chater and Clough. It was completed in 1832.6

xviii. In the Oordoo language the New Testament has been printed, from the revision of the late Rev. T. T. Thomason and

Mr. Da Costa.

(3.) In Southern India TWELVE dialects are spoken, that are either derived from the Sanscrit, or bear an affinity to it, and into which the Scriptures have been wholly or in part translated, viz.

i. In the Mahratta, of which language Dr. Carey is professor at Calcutta, the Pentateuch and New Testament, translated by the Baptist missionaries, have long been in circulation, and the historical books were printed in 1820. The accuracy of this version having been impured by an anonymous writer in the Asiation rical books were printed in 1820. The accuracy of this version having been impugned by an anonymous writer in the Asiatic Journal for 1829, Mr. W. Greenfield ably vindicated it in a "Defence" of Dr. Carey's version, which was published in 1830. See a specimen of it in page 52. A new translation of the New Testament in the Mahratta language, by the American missionaries at Bombay, was printed at the mission press in that city in 1826.

ii. The Hindee or Hindoostanhee, being spoken over an immense tract of country in India, varies much in its dialects; and not fewer than three different translations of the sacred volume have been printed. The earliest was that of the Four Gospels, by William nan three different translations of the sacred volume have been printed. The earliest was that of the Four Gospels, by William Hunter, Esq.; which was executed at the press of the college of Fort William. Another translation was completed by the late Rev. Henry Martyn, in 1808, and printed at the expense of the Calcutta Auxiliary Bible Society. A revised edition of this version, by the Rev. Mr. Bowley (one of the missionaries of the Church Missionary Society, who is stationed at Chunar), was finished at Calcutta in 1820, at the expense of the same society; and several separate books of the Old Testament have been added. In 1820 the Calcutta Society printed a large edition of Mr. Martyn's version separate books of the Old Testament have been added. In 1820 the Calcutta Society printed a large edition of Mr. Martyn's version of St. Matthew's Gospel in Hindoostanhee, with the English on the opposite page; and of Mr. Bowley's revision, which, by the disuse of Arabic and Persian words, is peculiarly adapted to the inhabitants of Benares and the upper provinces: the first three Gospels were printed in the same year; and in 1826 the entire New Testament was completed. 10 A specimen of the Hindoostanhee version is the Porsian character; given in page 54.

The third Hindee version of the New Testament was completed many years since by the missionaries at Serampore, who published the Old Testament in 1818. A new edition of the New Testament was printed in 1820, at their press, from a new version, executed by the Pay Loby Chambalding whose long residence in the cuted by the Rev. John Chamberlain, whose long residence in the western provinces of India, together with his intimate knowledge of the popular dialects of the Hindoos, has eminently qualified him for the undertaking. A specimen of this version is given in page

iii. In the Bengalee, or language of the province of Bengal, the whole of the Scriptures is published, and the book of Common Prayer has been translated by the Rev. Deocar Schmid. Five Frayer has been translated by the Rev. Deocar Schmid. Five editions of the New Testament and two of the Psalms, and some other parts of the Old Testament, have been printed; and a new edition of the entire Bible is preparing, in one large royal 8vo. volume, together with two thousand extra copies of the New Testament in 12mo. This edition was printed on paper made of the sun plant (Crotalaria juncea), which, though inferior to English paper in point of colour, is equally impervious to the worm, and far more durable. A large edition of the Gospels of St. Matthew and St. John, in English and Bengalee, on apposite pages, was printed at John, in English and Bengalee, on opposite pages, was printed at Calcutta in 1820, chiefly for the benefit of the natives who are attached to public offices and houses of agency. See a specimen of the Bengalee version in page 52.

A new Bengalee version of the New Testament, completed by the late Mr. Ellerton, was printed at Calcutta in 1820; and the Rev. Mr. Yates, a learned missionary, has been appointed to prepare a version of the Psalms in Bengalee.

iv. The Ooriya or Orissa language is spoken in the province of that name; it has a very close affinity to the Bengalee, but with different terminations, and a different character. In this language the entire Bible was translated by the Baptist missionaries several Twenty-seventh Report, p. liv. Twenty-ninth Report, p. lxiv.

Twenty-seventh Report, p. xiviii.

To this eminently learned and exemplary divine, the native Christians and others, who speak the Hindoostanhee language, are indebted for a compendium of the Liturgy of the Anglican Church, which was translated by him, and printed in 1818, at the expense of the Prayer Book and Homily Society of London. Mr. Martyn was the first clergyman of that church in India who introduced her service to our native subjects in Bengal. His work, having received frequent revision and amendment, is esteemed by competent judges to be a perspicuous and faithful version of the sublime original.

Memoirs of Martyn, p. 202. Sintarch Prayer Book and Homily Subjects in Bengal His work, having received frequent revision and amendment, is esteemed by competent judges to be a perspicuous and faithful version of the sublime original. original.

• Memoirs of Martyn, p. 292. Sixteenth Re Ixxi. 182, 183. Twenty-third Report, p. xxxvi.

• Twenty-first Report, p. xlii.

• Seventeenth Report, p. lvii.

• Twenty-third Report, p. xxxvi.

Sixteenth Report of the Bible Society, pp.

The Brij-Bhassa language, which is spoken in the upper provinces of Hindoostan, contains a greater mixture of the Sanscrit than most of the other dialects of the Hindee. The four Gospels have been translated; and the Gospel of St. Matthew was printed in 1816. See a specimen of it in page 53. The Brij-Bhassa version is likely to be more acceptable to the inhabitants of the province of Dooab than the Hindoostanhee.

The Kurnata, Canarese, or Karnatica language is spoken in vi. The Kurnata, Canarese, or Kurnatta language is the country extending northward from Tellicherry to Goa, and eastward from the coast of Malabar to the country where the Tamuling speken, including the whole of the Mysore. In this language eastward from the coast of Managar to the country where the Tahilitis spoken, including the whole of the Mysore. In this language the New Testament was printed in 1820, from the translation of the Rev. Mr. Hands. A specimen of it is given in page 54. The Old Testament was completed in 1832, and the New Testament Old Testament was completed in 1932, and the New Testament has been carefully revised preparatory to a new edition.

vii. The Tamul language is spoken in the south-eastern part of India, from Madras to Cape Comorin. Two different translations have been made in this language. The first was executed by the learned German missionaries, who were educated at Halle, and were employed in the last century by the Danish government. The New Testament was commenced by Bartholomew Ziegenbalg, In 1708, and finished in 1711. A printing press and paper having been provided at Tranquebar by the assistance of the venerable Society for promoting Christian Knowledge, this translation, after having been revised by Gründler, another missionary, who arrived after Ziegenbalg, was put to press in 1714, and finished in the following year. This Tamul New Testament was reprinted at Tranquebar in 1722, and again in 1758, and also at Colombo in 1743. In the year 1717, Ziegenbalg commenced a Tamul version of the Old Testament: but he died in 1719, having finished only the Pen-In the year 1717, Ziegenbalg commenced a Tamul version of the Old Testament; but he died in 1719, having finished only the Pentateuch with the books of Joshua and Judges. The translation was continued and completed by the distinguished missionary Benjamin Schultz, who arrived at Tranquebar in 1719: it was printed at Tranquebar, in four volumes, in the years 1723-26-27, and 28. The second translation of the New Testament into Tamul was made by Fabricius, another German missionary, at Madras, where it was printed in 1777. In 1814 an edition of the Tamul New Testament was completed at the Serampore press, at the expense of the Calcutta Auxiliary Bible Society; and as the lapse of years rendered further correction of it necessary, the Rev. T. C. E. Rhenius and the Rev. Dr. Rottler³ at Madras were employed to revise Fabricius's version. Their labours having been highly approved by competent judges, the Madras Bible Society in 1823 printed a revised edition of the Old Testament. The revised version of the Gospel of St. Matthew has been printed and extensively circulated; Gospel of St. Matthew has been printed and extensively circulated; and the remainder of the New Testament is to follow. See a specimen of the Tamul version in page 55.

viii. The Telinga language, sometimes called the Telogoo, is spoken in the Northern Circars. In this language, which appears to be a dialect of the Tamul, the missionary Schultz, above noticed, translated the Bible: but it was never printed. A Telinga version of the New Testament was executed by the missionaries at Sergm. of the New Testament was executed by the missionaries at Serampore, in 1818; and the Pentateuch was subsequently printed. On the completion of the Pentateuch, the homour of finishing this version was resigned to the Madras Auxiliary Bible Society: a revised edition of the New Testament has been printed. A specimen vised edition of the New Testament has been printed. A specimen of the Telinga version is given in page 53.

ix. While the Dutch had settlements in the island of Ceylon, they were not inattentive to imparting the Scriptures to such of the natives as embraced the Christian faith. The four Gospels were translated into Cingalese, or the language of that island, and were printed at Colombo in 1739, and again in 1780; the Acts of the Apostles, in 1771; the Psalms in 1755, and again in 1768; and the entire New Testament, together with the books of Genesis, Exodus and Levitium were printed at the same place in 1783. After entire New Testament, together with the books of Genesis, Exodus, and Leviticus, were printed at the same place in 1783. After Ceylon had become part of the British empire, a new Cingalese version of the New Testament was undertaken by Mr. W. Tolfrey, aided by native assistants, under the patronage and at the expense of the Colombo Auxiliary Society. That nothing might be omitted which could ensure the excellence of this translation, two hundred copies of the Gospels of Matthew and Mark were printed off, and circulated among the Modeliars (native magistrates), proponents, and catechists at Colombo, who were the best skilled in Cingalese; several were also sent to the settlements of Point de Galle and Matura, where that language is spoken in the greatest purity. Pains were taken to obtain a fair and candid opinion of the new work; and it is satisfactory to know, from the decision of numerous and competent judges, that the language and style of this extensive specimen of the new version were not only pure, and suitable to the dignity of the subject, but also plain and intelligible. Mr. Tolfrey had gone through repeated revisions of the whole New Testament, and had finally corrected to the end of the second

Twenty-fifth Report of the Bible Society, pp. lviii. lix. Twenty-ninth i Twenty-fifth Report of the Bible Society, pp. Ivan have twenty min.

Report, p. lxi.

Bishop Marsh's History of the Translations of the Scriptures, p. 37.

The Rev. Dr. Rottler also translated the book of Common Prayer into the Tamul language: it was printed at Madrass in 1819, in quarto.

Sixteenth Report of the Bible Society, p. 183. Nineteenth Report, p. lix.

Twenty-third Report, p. xxxvii.

In 1820, the Prayer Book and Homily Society of London made a grant of books to be sold at Madras, the proceeds of which were applied in aid of the printing the book of Common Prayer in the Tamul and Malayalim languages.

years since: a second edition of the New Testament is nearly completed at Serampore. A specimen of this version is given in page 53.

v. The Brij-Bhassa language, which is spoken in the upper proter a Wesleyan-Methodist missionary), and of Mr. Armour, an intelligent schoolmaster of the latter connection; and measures were taken for adding to it the Old Testament, of which only the first three books of Moses had been hitherto translated. A second edition of the New Testament of the New Testamen tion of the Cingalese translation of the New Testament was com-pleted in 1820; and the Old Testament was printed in 1823, in three volumes, 4to. See a specimen of the Cingalese Testament, in p. 55.7 In 1826 an Indo-Portuguese version of the New Testament, executed by the Rev. Mr. Newstead, was printed in England.⁸
x. A translation of the New Testament into the Maldivian language (which is spoken in the small but very numerous Maldivian islands, that lie to the south-west of Ceylon) has been commenced by the missionaries at Serampore. The Gospel of Matthew has been completed.

xi. In 1612 (a few years after the establishment of the Dutch East India Company), Albert Cornelius Ruyl began a translation of the New Testament into the Malay language, which is spoken not only in Malacca, but in Java and many other islands of the Indian archipelago. He lived only to finish the Gospels of Matthew and Mark, which were sent to Holland, where they were printed at Enkhuysen in 1629, and again, at Amsterdam, in 1638. In 1646 the Gospels of Luke and John, translated by M. van Hassel, one of the East India directors, was printed at Amsterdam, where the four Gospels were again printed in 1651, accompanied with the Acts of the Apostles; and in 1668, the whole New Testament in the Malay language was printed at Amsterdam. From this edition the Gospels and Acts were printed at Oxford in 1677, and again in 1704. Of the Old Testament in the Malay language, some portions were printed in the seventeenth century; but the first edition of the entire Malay Bible was printed in 1731 and 1733, in Roman chargeters. characters. Another edition of the whole Malay Bible was printed in the Arabic character at Batavia, in 1758. This version having become extremely scarce, an edition of the Malay Bible in Roman characters was printed at Calcutta, in 1815–17, under the direction of the Auxiliary Bible Society there, aided by a munificent grant of 10,000 sicca rupees from the Governor-general in council, on the part of the honourable East India Company. Another edition of the Malay Bible, in Roman characters, has been completed at the the Malay Bible, in Roman characters, has been completed at the expense of the British and Foreign Bible Society; and another edition, in Arabic characters, revised by the Rev. R. S. Hutchings, was completed at Calcutta in 1822, under the direction of the Auxiliary Bible Society there. Specimens of the Malay version, both in Roman and in Arabic characters, are given in page 55. As a dialect of the Malay is spoken at Batavia, the Java Bible Society, in 1814, engaged the Rev. Mr. Robinson (a Baptist missionary), and Mr. Koul extrince translater to the sourcement of the ideal of Mr. Kool, a native translator to the government of that island, to undertake a version of the New Testament in that dialect, which has since been completed. See a specimen of this version, comprising the Lord's Prayer in Javanese, translated by the Rev. Mr. Trowt, another missionary from the Baptist Society, in page 55.

A new version of the New Testament in the Javanese language, by the Rev. Mr. Brückner, was printed at Serampore in 1831.

xii. The Malayalim, or Malabar language, is spoken on the coast of Malabar in the construction.

xii. The Malayalim, or Malabar language, is spoken on the coast of Malabar, in the country of Travancore. In this language the Scriptures have been translated by, or under the direction of, the Rev. Benjamin Bailey, one of the missionaries sent to India by the Church Missionary Society; and the New Testament has been printed. The Malayalim spoken by the Syrian Christians of Travancore differs greatly, both in words and idioms, from that spoken in the northern parts of Malabar. In order to render the Malayalim version of the Bible as correct as possible, the Calcutta Bible Society in 1890 sent a printing press types and paper to Calcutta. Society in 1820 sent a printing-press, types, and paper, to Cotym, where a new college has been founded for the Syrian Christians, by the Rajah of Travancore and Colonel Munro, the British resi dent at his court.

3. Versions in the Chinese and the languages derived from or bearing affinity to it.

Chinese Versions.

The Chinese language, in the characters peculiar to it, is read not only throughout China, but also in Cochinchina and Japan, by a population of more than three hundred millions of persons. Two versions of the entire Bible are extant in this language, the translators of which have been aided in their arduous and expensive undertakings by the British and Foreign Bible Society. The earliest of these was commenced by the Rev. Dr. Marshman, at Serampore, by whom the New Testament was printed in 1814. tion of the Old Testament, which was executed many years since, has been printed in detached portions, and at different times. The Historical Books, which finish the Bible, were completed in 1821.

12 Missionary Register, for 1820, p. 48. The Gospel of St. Luke was the first portion printed. Twenty-third Report, p. xxxviii. Twenty-fifth Re-^{}Owen's History of the Bible Society, vol. iii. pp. 120. 323. 469. Sixteenth Report of that Society, p. 189. In 1820, the Book of Common Prayer was translated into Cingalese, under the direction of the Hon. and Rev. T. J. Twisleton, D.D. Archdeacon of Colombo.

Twenty-first Report, p. xlvii. Twenty-second Report, p. xlvi.

Bishop Marsh's History of Translations, p. 35.

10 Twenty-seventh Report, p. xlix. 1.

11 Ibid. p. 1i.

12 Missionary Register, for 1820, p. 48. The Gospel of St. Luke was the nese characters, both in wooden blocks and also in metal types: a specimen from the latter is given in page 54. The other version was commenced in 1812 by the Rev. Dr. Morrison, then of Canton, aided by the (late) Rev. Dr. Milne at Malacca (both in the employ of the London Missionary Society), and was finished in 1833.

The New Testament of this version has been circulated to a considerable extent among the Chinese inhabitants of Java, and of the islands in the Indian seas, and with the happiest effects.³ An edition of the Mantchou (Tartar) Chinese version of the Gospel of Matthew was printed in 1822, at the expense of the British and Foreign Bible Society.⁴

From the Chinese language are derived seven others, which are spoken in Eastern India. Into three of these the New Testament is now in course of translation, viz. the Khassee or Kassai, the Munipoora, and the Burman.

The Khassee or Kassai language is spoken by an independent nation of mountaineers, lying between the eastern border of Bengal and the northern border of the Burman empire. In this langange the Baptist missionaries have translated and printed the four Gospels.

i. The Munipoora is spoken in the small kingdom of that name, which lies between Assam and the Burman empire. The Gospel which lies between Assam and the Burman empire-of Matthew has been printed in this language.

or Matthew has been printed in this language.

iii. The Burman language, which is spoken in the empire of that name, has borrowed the Sanscrit alphabet. Into this language the New Testament has been translated by Mr. Felix Carey, son of the Rev. Dr. Carey of Serampore. The Gospel of Matthew was printed by him at Rangoon, in the Burman empire, in royal octavo, in 1817. A specimen of it is given in page 54. The Gospel and 1817. A specimen of it is given in page 54. The Gospel and three Epistles of John, together with the Acts of the Apostles, and the Epistle of Paul to the Ephesians, have also been translated into the Burman language by the Rev. Adoniram Judson. In concluding the preceding notice of the versions, executed principally by the learned Baptist missionaries, and at their press, it is impossible not to recognise the hand of God, who has raised up and qualified them for the arduous task to which they have devoted their time, money, and labour: for though they have been nobly assisted by subscriptions and grants from Europe, yet it ought not to be forgotten that they have largely contributed to defray the expenses of translating and printing out of those profits which their extraordinary acquirements have enabled them to realize. They have translated and printed the whole of the sacred Scriptures in five of the languages of India; the whole of the New stament in fifteen others; in six other languages it is more than half printed, and in ten others considerable progress has been made in the work of translation. And these vast undertakings have been accomplished within the short space of thirty years, since the commencement of their first version (the New Testament in Bengalee). When we consider the experience which they have gained,-the number of learned natives whom they have trained up and accus-tomed to the work of translation,—the assistance which is to be derived from our countrymen in various parts of India, who are acquainted with any of its dialects,-and the advantages now enjoyed for printing at a moderate expense,—we may reasonably indulge the hope that, in the course of a few years more, the word of life will be extant in all the different languages and dialects of India.

[iv.] Other ASIATIC Versions of the Holy Scriptures. 1. Formosan Version.

The island of Formosa fell into the hands of the Dutch, who expelled the Portuguese thence, in 1651. During their eleven years' possession of it, Robert Junius, a native of Delft, preached years' possession of years possession in it, income summer, a markey of perit, preached the Gospel to the inhabitants, and, it is said, with great success. For their use the Gospels of Matthew and John were translated into the Formosan language, and printed at Amsterdam, with the Dutch translation, in 1661, in quarto. But the Dutch being expelled from that island by the Chinese in 1662, the Formosan versions of the property of the chinese in 1662, the Formosan versions of the property of the chinese in 1662, the Formosan versions of the property of the chinese in 1662, the Formosan versions of the property of the proper sion was discontinued: and in all probability the Formosans never received any benefit from the work just noticed.⁵

2. Northern Asiatic Versions.6

Russia in Asia is inhabited by numerous races, whom Dr. Young (after the Mithridates of Adelung) refers to the Tataric

1 To Dr. Morrison the Christians in China are indebted for a version of ¹ To Dr. Morrison the Christians in China are indebted for a version of the Liturgy and Psalter of the Anglican Church. Having presented the Chinese with the Scriptures in their native language, this distinguished oriental scholar (who, to his honour be it recorded, is a conscientious dissenter from that church) was desirous of giving them a formulary in which they might offer acceptable devotions to the throne of grace: and as he could find no form which so completely met his views as the Liturgy of the Church of England, he translated it into the Chinese language. This version was printed in 1820, at the expense of the Prayer Book and Homily Seciety.

Owen's Hist. vol. ii. p. 467. Sixteenth Report, p. lxxvi. Nineteenth Owen's Hist. vol. li. p. 467. Sixteenin Report, p. ELAVI. Minescensin Report, p. Izii.

Many authentic particulars were communicated to the Java Bible Society by their late secretary, the Rev. Mr. Supper: some of these are recorded by Mr. Owen, vol. iii. pp. 224, 225.
Nineteenth Report, p. li.
Dr. Clarke's Bibliographical Dictionary, vol. i. p. 288.
Towards the close of the thirteenth century, a translation of the New Testament and of the Psalms of David into the Tatar language was made by Johannes a Monte Corvino, in order to accelerate the propagation of the Gospel among the dark and idolatrous nations to whom he had been sent

The missionaries at Serampore are possessed of several sets of Chi- | class. 7 Into twelve of these languages it may be sufficient to state ness characters, both in wooden blocks and also in metal types: a | (without going into minuter details) that translations of the sacred volume are either printed or preparing, under the direction and at the expense of the Russian Bible Society; viz. the Nogai Tatar, Mongolian, Calmuck, Orenburg-Tatar, Tschuwaschian, Tscheremissian, Tatar-Hebrew (spoken in the interior of Asia), Mordwaschian or Mordvinian, Samoiedian, Tschapoginian, Zirian, and Ossatinian. Of these various translations, the Moravian Missionaries at Sarepta, on the banks of the Wolga, in Asiatic Russia, have completed the four Gospels and the Acts in the Calmuck language; and the remainder of the New Testament was translated by M. Schmidt. The entire New Testament, in this language, was printed in 1823; as also were the Mongolian (executed by two converted Mongolian chieftains, under the superintendence of M. Schmidt), Tscheremissian, and Mordwachian versions of the four Gospels. The Rev. Mr. Dickson, one of the Edinburgh Missionary Society's missionaries at Dickson, one of the Edinburgh Missionary Society's missionaries at Karass, has completed and printed a Tatar-Turkish version of the entire New Testament, and a considerable portion of the Old Testament; but no part of it has yet been published. The Tatar-Turkish language is vernacular among the Tatars of Astrachan. In 1816, the Rev. Dr. Pinkerton, while travelling in the Crimea, discovered, at Dschoufout Kalé, a copy of a pure Tatar translation of the Old Testament from the Hebrew, which was made several centuries ago. This has been revised, and printed at St. Petersburg. 10

3. The Georgian Version.

At the beginning of the eighteenth century, the whole of the New Testament, together with the Psalms and the Prophets, was printed in the Georgian language, at Teflis, in Georgia, by order of the Prince Vaktangh. The entire Bible was printed at Moscow in 1743, in folio, under the inspection of the Princes Arcil and Va-kuset, but at the expense of Prince Bacchar. From this edition the Moscow Bible Society printed an impression of the New Testa-Moscow Bible Society printed an impression of the New Testament in 1816, in the sacred or ecclesiastical character, and another in 1818, in the common character. According to the tradition of the Greek church, the Georgian version was originally made in the eighth century, by Euphemius the Georgian, the founder of the Ibritan or Georgian monastery at Mount Athos, where his actual autograph was discovered in the year 1817, and is preserved to this day. As the greater part of the books of the Old Testament of this ancient version was lost in the wars in which the Georgians were so frequently involved with the Persians and Turks, the editors of the Moscow edition were obliged to translate most of the books of the Old Testament from the Sclavonian version. The Moscow Bible Society are taking measures to obtain a correct transcript of Enterior to the control of the school of the control of the school of phemius's manuscript, from which to print a faithful edition of the Georgian Bible. 12 Two MSS. of the Georgian version of the Gospels are said to be preserved in the Vatican Library at Rome.

4. Modern Armenian Version.

A translation of the four Gospels into the modern Armenian language, from the ancient Armenian text, has been completed by a learned Armenian resident at Paris; who has undertaken a version of the entire New Testament.¹³ In 1830 the missionaries at Shushi, connected with the Basle Missionary Society, completed a version of the four Gospels into the Ararat or Eastern Armenian dialect, which was printed at Moscow.¹⁴

5. Tahitan Version.

The blessed effects with which the labours of the missionaries (sent out by the London Missionary Society in 1796) have been crowned, have already been noticed in the first volume of this work, p. 175. In consequence of the extraordinary success which attended the preaching of the Gospel in Otaheite (or Tahiti, as the natives term that island) and in Huaheine, Eimeo, and other neighbouring islands, openings have been made of the most promising nature for the dissemination of the Holy Scriptures. Aided by grants of paper from the British and Forgier Bible Society the mising nature for the dissemination of the tioly Scriptures. Aided by grants of paper from the British and Foreign Bible Society, the missionaries in 1818 printed 3000 copies of the Gospel of Luke¹⁵ in the Tahitan language, and in 1820, having received further supplies, they completed five thousand copies of the Gospel of Matthew, which were sought with avidity, and received with gratitude by all. The Gospels of Luke and John, and the Acts of the Apostles, as a missionary in 1288 by Pope Nicholas IV. (Mosheim's Eccl. Hist. vol. iii. pp. 113. 299.) No vestiges of this Tatar version are known to be in

See the Supplement to the Encyclopædia Britannica, vol v. part ii. pp.

For an account of these Tatar versions, see Dr. Henderson's Biblical

For an account of these Tatar versions, see Dr. Henderson's Biblical Researches, pp. 424. et seq.

• Dr. Henderson's Biblical Researches, pp. 427, 428. Report of the Scottish Missionary Society for 1824, p. 16.

• O Wen's History, vol. iii. pp. 211—215. Sixteenth Report of the Bible Society, pp. 43, 44. 55. 67. Nineteenth Report, p. li.

• Bishop Marsh's History of Translations, p. 32. Dr. Henderson's Biblical Researches (pp. 519—622.) contain an interesting account of the editions of the Georgian versions.

• Sixteenth Report of the Bible Society, pp. 33—35.

• Nineteenth Report, pp. xie.

• Twenty-seventh Report, pp. xie.

• Tuenty-seventh Report, pp. xie.

have also been translated and printed; and a Tahitan version has | 13. E eiaha faarue ia matou ia roohia e te ati ra, e faaora ra ia have also been translated and printed; and a Tahitan version has been completed of the Psalms, and several other Books of the Old Testament. Five thousand copies of the books of Daniel, Esther, and Ruth have left the press.\(^1\) At Borabora, the Epistles have been completed, and every practicable care is used to ensure fidelity.\(^2\) The following titles and specimens of the Tahitan version of the Gospels of Matthew and John will be not uninteresting to the reader. the reader.

1. TE EVANELIA A MATAIO NO IESU CHRIST TO TATOU FATU; IRITHIA EI PARAU TAHITI. Tahiti: PRINTED AT THE WINDWARD MISSION PRESS. 1820, 12mo.

(The Lord's Prayer. Matt. VI. 9-13.)

9. E to matou Medua i te ao ra, ia raa to oe ioa. 10. Ia tae to oe ra hau; ia haapaohia te oe hinaaro i te fenua nei, mai tei te ao atoa na.

11. Homai na matou i teinei mahana tei haapaohia ra o te mahana

- o te maa, o te mahana o te maa 12. E faaore mai i ta matou hapa, mai ta matou mau amu tarahu i faaore atoahia e matou nei.

 - Twenty-third Report of the Bible Society, p. xlvi.
 Twentieth Report, p. lvi. Twenty-second Report, p. lxix.

- matore, no oe hoi te hau, e te mana, i te hanahana, i te mau ui atoa e ore e hope. Amene.
- 2. TE EVANELIA A IOANE NO IESU CHRIST TO TATOU FATOU: IRITHIA EI PARAU TAHITI. TABITI: PRINTED AT THE WINDWARD MISSION PRESS. 1821. 12mo.

(John III. 14-17.)

14. Ma ia Mose i faa teitei i te ophi i te fenua aihere ra, oia toa te Tamaidi a te Taata e faa teitei atoa hia ia.

- 15. Ia ore ia poe te faaroo ia'na ra, ia roaa te ora mure ore.
 16. I aroha mai te Atua i to te ao, e ua tae roa te horoa mai i ta'na Tamaidi fanau tahi, ia ore ia pohe te faaroo ia'na ra, ia roau te ora mure ore.
- Aore hoi te Atua i tono mai i ta'na Tamaidi i te ao nei e faa hapa i to te ao, ia ora ra to te ao ia'na.

6. Curdish Versions.

A Translation of the New Testament into the language of the Curds, or Koords, has been completed; but difficulties have hitherto retarded the printing of it.³

s Twenty-third Report, p. xxviii. Twenty-ninth Report, p. lvi.

FAC-SIMILES OF SPECIMENS

OF THE

VERSIONS OF THE SACRED SCRIPTURES IN THE EASTERN LANGUAGES,

Chiefly translated by the Brethren of the Serampore Mission.

TEXT. "The people that sat in darkness saw great light; and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death, light is sprung up.' MATT. iv. 16.

SANSCRIT, or SUNGSKRIT,

In the Deva Nagree character, which is used throughout India.

अध्यकारेष्ट्रपविपालां लाका महालेकम्दा चुर्म्त्रोद्शे क्रायाया द्वीपविष्यतः प्रति खा लेक उदिति।—

BENGALEE.

प लिख जन्मकाद्व विम्योजिन उदियो यहां जोली सिंगिए पेरिप्रोफ योहोत्। युज्य स्मे उ लाग्नीय विमान छोर्रावास्य निक्हे व्यान्। पुजनिखाररेग्रारक ।

MAHRATTA.

न सेम एप्रानर्ग पराष्ट्र येरोत् खार्घर्गे ग्रेगा धनेड पा छीत्र पाणी ने स्युत्रे छेशांश् पाणी चाने छापेंश् चस्प्रेश् ला ब्रिज्ञन्व नपळ डीनेड प्रमुखरा साम पछ ।—

KASHMIREE, or KASHMEER.

यिभा लोगा अञ्चारि अच्छा। ठिविडा खिभ डिमा व प्रवत मुक्ता भाविक क्रिम्मा हिया कायाचना अ का किन्न।वालिना कन्नो। ठामा प्रभक्त भंभन्।

OORIYA, or ORISSA.

ସେଙ୍କୁ ଲୋକ ଅନ୍ତନ୍ତରେ ବଧିଥିଲେ ସେମାନେ ମହା ଆକୁଷ ନେଖିନ୍ୟକୁ ଯାଦଅଛିଛି ସେଙ୍ଗାନେ ମୃତ୍ୟୁତ ନେଖ ଓ ଛାହାତେ ବସିଲେ ସେମାନଙ୍କତ ନିକ୍ତ ଆକ୍ରିଆ ସୁକ୍ତ୍ୱିତ ସୋଦଅଛି ।

TELINGA, or TELOOGOO.

అంధకారాలయందు కూర్పుశ్వ లాశులు మహాత్రెడ్డి స్టును చూశిర్తి మనిత్యుగవయొక్క దెశమందు నీడయం మశ్శ కూచుణ్ వారినికూచికి ఎలుగా ప్రభుహుడ శ్వరి 1—

BRIJ-BHASSA.

गातिलके ने स्ताग शंधनारमें वैठे हैं उनने वड़ा उजेरा देखी खार मृख्ये देसमें सार छावामें बैठवरारे ने उनमें उजेरो खरें मया।

PUSHTOO, or AFFGHAN.

هرهند حلق چه یه تباره کین فاست دو فنخو لوید روشالي وایده او ده وی ملک او یه سوری کین دناستد په لوری ووښنائي ظاهرد شوله

SIKH, SHEEK, or PUNJABEE.

ਅਰਥਤੇ ਆਂਧੇਰਿਆਂਵਿਰ ਬੈਠਦੇ ਹੋਇਆਂ ਲੋਗਾਂ ਵਭੇ ਚਾਂਨਲਨੂ ਦਿਨਾ ਮਉਤਦੇ ਦੇਸ ਅਤੇ ਛਾਗਵਿਚ ਬੈਠੇ ਹੋਇ ਅਤਿਾਈ ਚਾਂਨਲ ਉਦੇ ਹੋਇਆ।

HINDOOSTANHEE

ना नाम् अधियारीमं बैठे च उन्होंने वडो राष्ट्रकी देखी निर मात्वे देश वा कायामें बैठ्नेवातीं के तरम् उनियाचा मादिर प्रया।

UHUMIYA, or ASSAMESE.

যিবিলাক্ লোক শ্বক্কৰাৰ বহিছিল্ সেই।বিলাকে মহাপত্ত নেমিবলৈ পাইছে ামবিলাক্ মৃত্যুক্ দেশ আৰু জাঁথবহিল্ সেই বিলাকক্তেৰ পত্তৰ পুত্তলি ক্তেইছে BURMAN

တေ၍။ ကုဆန္ဗိႏုပ္သီဟာယာဂရေနာရုဇ္လြင့်နို့မောင်ာငြစ်တြာာ တော့မ် မောင်ကန်ငြာ ။ ခုဂညာလွှခုဂြင့်၍ဆစ်ခုံလွှဲလိုငှာ တေ

BULOCHA, or BULOSHEE.

میچی آبیرفات می داری الفتک بیشند قبایا کے مولی شروک جاریت و کر مریب نا ملکین دمن سایکا نشتکا الفتکا
CHINESE VERSION.

MOVEABLE METAL TYPES.

Text.—"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth. And the earth was without form, and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep; and the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters. And God said, Let there be light: and there was light."—Gen. i. 1—3.

KURNATA, or CANARESE.

గాలిలియ యిధ్రమంది శక్త్రలియల్లి శుతిజ్రారిం అవరు దేగిడ్డబేశ శంశశష్ట్ర శిందిదరు యారు ము మ్యవినదికదల్లి శిరశిశల్లి శాతిజ్రారిం 1

FAC-SIMILES OF SPECIMENS

OF

VERSIONS OF THE SACRED SCRIPTURES IN THE EASTERN LANGUAGES,

PRINTED AT THE EXPENSE OF

The British and Foreign Bible Society, and of the Calcutta Auxiliary Society.

Text.—"The people that sat in darkness saw great light: and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death, light is sprung up."

MATT. iv. 16.

HINDOOSTANHEE VERSION,

IN THE PERSIAN CHARACTER.

آئیس لوگوں فے جو (ار میرے میں بیٹے تھے ،وری دوشتی در کھی اور ساہ میں بیٹے لیے اور ساہ بیٹے لیے اور ساہ میں بیٹے لیے اور سام میں بیٹے ل

PERSIAN.

ان خلق که در ظلبت نشسته بودند دور عظیم دا مشاهده نهودند و برانکسات که در مقرو ظلال مرک ساکی بودند روشنی تابید

TAMUL.

இருளி வி ருககுஞ சனம் பெரிய வெளிச்சுத்தைக கண்டு அம்களுக்கு இன் இசையிலும் கிழுவிலு மிருச இருளி வி ருககுஞ் சனம் பெரிய வெளிச்சுத்தைக

CINGALESE.

අදුරෙහි උන් දනන් මහතිටු එලිය ක් සුටුහ නවද මරනෙ රටේද චයාවේද උන්ඇයට එලියක් උදඋනේය.

ARABIC

النَّاسُ الحلوس في الطَّادُم فقد راد ضياء عظيما والحِالمُ

MALAY IN ROMAN CHARACTERS.

KHawm' îtu jang dûdokh pada kalam, fudah melîhat fawatu tarang jang besar: dan bagi fegala 'awrang jang. dûdokh pada tanah dan bajang mawt 'îtu, tarang pawn sudah terbit baginja.

MALAY IN ARABIC CHARACTERS.

Text.—" And Cain went out from the presence of the Lord, and dwelt in the land of Nod, on the east of Eden." Gen. iv. 16.

مک کلور اه آلین در هاداتی حضرة هو الل دودالله ی دینو ندد دسلمله تیهر در عیدن*

JAVANESE.

TEXT.—The Lord's Prayer.—MATT. vi. 9-13.

"พาการ กาล อดาสุ การ เพียงสูง กาลัก อา เลื่อง กาลัก การ การ การ กาลัก กาลัก เลือง กาลัก เลือง กาลัก ก

§ 5. Modern Versions in the Languages of Africa.

1. Amharic and Tigré, or the vernacular Languages of Abyssinia.

Evangelia Sancta: sub Auspiciis D. Asselini, Rerum Gallicarum apud Ægyptios Procuratoris, in Linguam Amharicam vertit Abu-Rumi Habessinus. Edidit Thomas Pell Platt, A.M. Londini, 1824, 4to.

The version in the ecclesiastical or ancient language of Ethiopia, noticed in the first part of Volume I., being confined to the churches, and understood by few comparatively besides the clergy, M. Asselin de Cherville, French consul at Cairo, was induced to undertake a version of the entire Bible in the Amharic, the royal dialect spoken at the court of Gondar, which is the dialect prevalent in the eastern parts of Africa bordering on the equator, and through which a considerable intercourse is maintained between the natives of Abyssinia and the Arabians and negroes of the interthrough which a considerable intercourse is maintained between the natives of Abyssinia and the Arabians and negroes of the interior. For ten years M. Asselin employed an intelligent Ethiopian, named Abu-Rumi (who had been the interpreter of Mr. Bruce in Abyssinia, and the teacher of Sir William Jones in India), on this important work, to which he devoted two entire days in every week. In order to ensure correctness, he read with this person slowly, and with the utmost attention, every verse of the sacred volume in the Arabic version, which they were about to translate. M. Asselin then explained to him all those words which were either abstruse, difficult, or foreign to the Arabic, by the help of the Hebrew original, the Syriac version, or the Septuagint, and also of some commentaries. After they finished the translation of one book, they collated it once more before they proceeded further. This version was purchased for the British and Foreign Bible Society by the Rev. Mr. Jowett; who undertook a voyage into Egypt from Malta, for the express purpose of completing the purchase. The printing of the four Gospels in Amharic and in Ethiopic, in two separate volumes, was commenced in 1822, under the editorial care of the Rev. Dr. Lee, professor of Hebrew in the university of Cambridge, and completed in 1824, under the superintendence of T. P. Platt, Esq. The Acts and Epistles were completed in 1828, the Book of Genesis in 1831, and the Psalms in 1832.2 During Mr. Jowett's residence in Egypt, in 1819, he employed the late Mr. Nathaniel Pearce, who had lived many years in Ethiopia; and who commenced a translation of the Gospels into in Ethiopia; and who commenced a translation of the Gospels into the Tigré, the vernacular dialect of the extensive province of Tigré. The Gospels of Mark and John have been completed, together with a version of the Gospel of Mark in Amharic, which is now superseded by the more accurate entire Amharic version of M. Asselin. These three versions are now in the possession of the British and Foreign Bible Society.³

2. Berber Version.

A translation of the Gospel of Saint Luke into the Berber language (which is spoken by a very numerous tribe in North Africa) was made by Mr. Hattersley; and copies of the first twelve chapters have been printed, and sent to different individuals in the districts where this language is spoken, with a view of ascertaining the merits of the version.⁴

3. Bullom Version.

The Bulloms are a numerous people on the western coast of Africa, among whom the missionaries sent out by the Church Missionary Society laboured for several years. Into the language of this people, the four Gospels, and the Acts of the Apostles, have been translated by the Rev. G. R. Nylander, a distinguished labourer in the service of that society. The Gospel of Saint Matthew was printed at the expense of the British and Foreign Bible Society in 1816.6

4. Susoo Version.

The Susoos are also a numerous tribe on the western coast of Africa, in the vicinity of Sierra Leone; among whom the same society's missionaries laboured for several years. By these missionaries, the four Gospels, Acts of the Apostles, and other parts of the New Testament, together with several books of the Old Testament, have been translated into the Susoo language. But their further benevolent and pious labours were suspended among

¹ In Ludolph's Grammatica Linguæ Amharicæ (pp. 54, 55.) there is an Amharic translation, by Abba Gregorius, of thirteen verses of the eleventh chapter of Saint Luke's Gospel.

² Twenty-eighth Report of the Bible Society, p. lxxvi. Twenty-ninth Report, p. lxii.

² Twenty-eighth Report of the Bible Society, p. 122.1.

Report, p. lxii.

Sixteenth Report, p. 169. Jowett's Christian Researches in the Mediterranean, pp. 197—213.

The Rev. Mr. Nylander has also rendered an additional service to such of the Bulloms as have embraced the Christian faith, by translating select portions of the Liturgy of the Anglican church into their vernacular language. These were printed in Bullom, and in Roman characters (that people having no characters of their own), in 1816, at the expense of the Prayer Book and Homily Society.

Owen's Hist. vol. iii. p. 125.

the Susoos and the Bulloms, by the revival of the nefarious slavetrade on those coasts.

5. Malagassé Version.

A translation of the Scriptures into the Malagassé, or language of the island of Madagascar, was made by the missionaries resident on that island. The New Testament was printed in 1830. The printing of the Old Testament was completed in 1833.

6. South African Versions.

The Gospel of Saint Luke has been translated into the Bechuana (or Sichuana) language by the Rev. Mr. Moffatt, and the four Gospels into the Namacqua language by the Rev. Mr. Schmelin. They have been printed at Cape Town.

§ 6. MODERN VERSIONS IN THE LANGUAGES OF AMERICA.

[i.] NORTH AMERICAN VERSIONS.

Although the multiplicity of dialects spoken by the Indian tribes of North America seemed to interpose an insuperable bar to the labours of those benevolent individuals who were desirous of communicating the Scriptures to them; yet this obstacle has been diminished by the discovery, that so close an affinity subsists among them, that a young unlettered Indian of good capacity can (it is said) make himself master of them all. The following are the dialects into which the whole or part of the Bible has been translated.

1. Virginian Indian Version.

The Virginian Bible was translated by the Rev. John Eliot, who has justly been denominated the apostle to the Indians, from his unwearied labours to diffuse the blessings of Christianity among them. The New Testament was published in 1661. The titlepage states that it was "ordered to be printed by the commissioners of the united colonies in New England, at the charge and with the consent of the corporation in England, for the propagation of the Gospel among the Indians in New England." The Old Testament Gospel among the Indians in New England." The Old Testament was published at Cambridge in 1663, and the entire Bible was reprinted at the same place in 1685. The following specimen exhibits the Lord's Prayer. (Matt. vi. 9—13.)

9. Yowutche yeu nuppenantamook: Nooshun kesukqut, quttianatamunach knowesuonk

10. Peyàumooutch kukketassootamóonk, kuttenantamóonk ne n nach ohkeit neane kesukqut.

11. Nummeetsuongash asekesukokish assamaiinean yeuyeu kesu-

12. Kah ahquontamaiinnean nummatcheseongash, neane matcheneukqueagig nutahquontamounnonog.

13. Ahque sagkompagunaiinnean en qutchhuaonganit, webe pohquohwussinean wutch matchitut. Newutche kutahtaun ketassootamoonk, kah menuhkesuonk, kah sohsumoonk micheme. Amen.

This version has now become a literary curiosity, there being scarcely any persons living who can read or understand a single verse in it. The tribe of American Indians, whom the venerable verse in it. The tribe of American Indians, whom the v missionary Eliot instructed, is now very nearly extinct.⁹

2. The Delaware Indian Version.

Nek Nechenneawachgissitschik Bambilak naga Geschiechauchsit panna Johannessa Elekhangup. Gischitak Ellenechsink untski C. F. Dencke. That is, the Three Epistles of the Apostle John, translated into Delaware Indian, by C. F. Dencke. New York, 1818, 18mo.

The Delaware language is spoken through a very considerable ortion of North America. Into this language part of the Scripportion of North America. Into this language part of the Scriptures was translated by the Rev. Mr. Fabricius, one of the Moravian missionaries to the Delaware Indians, but it does not appear to have been printed. In 1818, the three Epistles of John were translated into the Delaware language by the Rev. C. F. Dencke, translated into the Delaware language by the Rev. C. F. Dencke, a missionary from the United Brethren, or Moravians. It was printed at the expense of the American Bible Society. The translation is printed on the left-hand page, and the English authorized version on the right. As copies of this Delaware Indian translation are not common, the following specimen of it, from 1 John iii. 1—4. may be not unacceptable to the reader.

Necheleneyachgichink aptonagan.

Pennamook! elgiqui penundelukquonk Wetochwink wdaoalto-woagan, wentschi luwilchgussiank Gettanittowit wdamemense-mall. Guntschi matta woachgussiwuneen untschi pemhakamixi-tink, eli pemhakamixit taku wohaq' Patamawossall.

Twenty-seventh Report of the Bible Society, p. lx. Twenty-eighth Report, p. lxxvi. Twenty-ninth Report, p. lxxi. lxxi.
Twenty-eighth Report, p. lxxiv. Twenty-ninth Report, p. lxxiii.
Twenty-ninth Report, p. lxxiii.
Twenty-ninth Report, p. lxxiii.
The Christian Observer for 1830, vol. xxx. p. 318.
De Marsh's History of Translations, p. 99., where it is stated that another missionary, Schmick, translated a portion of the Gospels into the Mahican language.

tanittowitink, schuknesquo majawii elsijankstch. Schuk ktelli majawelendamenneen nguttentsch woachquake, ktellitsch linaxineen, elinaxit, ktellitsch newoaneen elinaxit.

Woak wemi auwen nechpauchsit jun nhakeuchsowongan, kschiechichgussitetsch, necama Patamawos elgiqui kschiechsid.

4. Auwen metauchsit, necama ne endchi mikindank matta weltoq', woak eli machtauchsit wuntschi mikindamen matta weltoq'.

3. Massachusett Version.

The Psalms and Gospel of Saint John were translated by the exemplary missionary, Mr. Experience Mayhew, into the Indian Massachusett dialect. They were printed at Boston in New England in the year 1709.

Mohawk Version.

The Mohawk language, besides the tribe from whom it takes its The Mohawk language, besides the tribe from whom it takes its name, is intelligible to the Five Nations, to the Tuscaroras, and to the Wyandots or Hurons. In the early part of the eighteenth century, a translation was made of the Gospel of Matthew, and also of several chapters both of the Old and New Testament, into this language, by the Rev. Mr. Freeman. Some portions of the latter were printed at New York, and reprinted at London with the English Liturgy, and the Gospel of Mark (translated by Captain Brant) in 1787, for the use of the Mohawks, who have a chapel at Viceston in Unear Capade, where divine service is performed in Kingston in Upper Canada, where divine service is performed in their native tongue, by a missionary supported by the venerable Society for promoting Christian Knowledge. This edition was printed at the expense of the English government. To these portions of the Scriptures were added the Gospel of John, translated in 1804 by Captain John Norton, a chief of the Six Nation Indians in Upper Canada. This version was printed at the expense of the British and Foreign Bible Society, and its accuracy was, shortly after, attested in the most favourable manner by the interpreters in the Indian villages.3

5. Mohegan Version.

The New Testament, together with several portions of the Old Testament, was translated, towards the close of the eighteenth century, into the Mohegan language, by the Rev. John Serjeant, sen., a missionary at Stockbridge. No part of this version appears to have been printed.4

6. Esquimaux Version.

In the Esquimaux language, a harmony of the Four Gospels was made by the missionaries of the Moravian brethren many years since. From this version the Gospel of John was selected by the Rev. Mr. Kohlmeister, and printed by the Bible Society in 1809. To this was added in 1813, a translation of the other three Gospels, To this was added in 1813, a translation of the other three Gospels, which had been made by the venerable superintendent of the Labrador mission, the Rev. C. F. Burghardt, who possessed an intimate knowledge of the Esquimaux dialect, and finished his revision only a short time before his death, in 1812. In the year 1819 the Acts of the Apostles and the Epistles were printed in the same dialect, by the Bible Society, and received (as the other portions of the New Testament had been) with the deepest sentiments of gratitude. And in 1826 the New Testament was completed by printing the Apocalypse.

7. Chippeway Version.

The Gospels of Saint Matthew and Saint John have been trans-The Gospels of Saint Matthew and Saint John have been translated into the language of the Chippeways, a numerous tribe resisdent in British North America, by Mr. Peter Jones, a Chippeway chief, and his brother, to the fidelity of whose version competent judges have borne willing testimony. The Gospel of Saint John was printed at York Town, Upper Canada; and the translators have commenced the Old Testament, in consequence of the American Pible Seciety begins and the competitor by Name 6 rican Bible Society having undertaken to complete the New.6

8. Greenlandish Version.

In 1759 the Greenlanders received from the Moravian brethren a translation of their harmony of the Four Gospels; 7 in 1799 the whole of the New Testament, and in 1822 a new translation of Brown's History of the Propagation of Christianity, vol. ii. pp. 57, 58.

 Second Report of the British and Foreign Bible Society, Appendix, p. 118.
 Capt. Norton was adopted by the Confederacy of the Six Nations in 1791, and in 1800 appointed a chief, under the title of Teyoninhokarawen. His father was a Cherokee, and served in the British army.
 Owen's History, vol. ip p. 126—135.
 Brown's History, vol. ip. 126—135.
 Brown's History, vol. i. p. 460. vol. ii. pp. 299. 359. vol. iii. p. 483. Sixteenth Report of the Bible Society, pp. Lxxxiii. Lxxxiv. Seventeenth Report, p. Lxix. Twenty-second Report, p. lxiv. Twenty-third Report, p. lxxxv.
 Twenty-eighth Report, p. Lxxxiv. Twenty-third Report, p. lxxxv.
 Crantz's History of Greenland, vol. ii. p. 299.

2. Ehoalachgik! juque metschi ktelli wundumemensineen Get-uittowiimk, schuknesquo majawii elsijanksteh. Schuk ktelli printed at the expense of the British and Foreign Bible Society.

9. Creolese Version.

The New Testament was translated into Creolese for the use of the Christian negroes in the Danish West India Islands, and was published at Copenhagen, 1781, at the expense of the king of Denmark. In 1818 the Danish Bible Society printed an edition of 1500 copies, which have been transmitted to the Danish West Indies.⁸

10. Negro-English Version.

DA NJOE TESTAMENT VA WI MASRA EN HELPIMAN JESUS CHRISTUS. TRANSLATED INTO THE NEGRO ENGLISH LAN-GUAGE, BY THE MISSIONARIES OF THE UNITAS FRATRUM, OR UNITED BRETHREN: PRINTED FOR THE USE OF THE MISSION, BY THE BRITISH AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY. LONDON, 1829, 8vo.

At Surinam a mission of the United Brethren has existed since the year 1738. The missionaries have two thousand negroes under the year 1738. The missionaries have two thousand negroes under the year 1738. The missionaries have two thousand negroes under instruction. These, as well as others, speak a language of their own, which has been denominated the Negro-English; into which own, which has been denominated the Negro-English; into which was a first the New Testament has been made. This version occupied the attention of the missionaries for several years; and after it had undergone every necessary revision from persons long resident in the colony, and well acquainted with the language, it was printed in 1829, at the expense of the British and Foreign Bible Society.⁹ As the whole impression, with the exception of a small number of copies, was sent to Surinam, the following specimen of this Negro-English translation will not be without interest to the reader.

(MATT. VI. 7-13.)

- 7. En essi oene begi, oene no meki soso takkitakki, leki dem Heiden, bikasi dem membre, effi dem meki foeloe takkitakki, Gado sa harki dem.
- 8. Va da heddi oene no moesse djersi dem; oene Tatta sabi, sanne oene habi vandoe, bevo oene begi hem.
 9. Va da heddi oene moesse begi so: Wi Tatta ni tappo! Joe
- neem moesse santa.
- 10. Joe kondre moesse Kom. Dem moesse doe Wanni va Joe na grontappo, so leki dem doe na Hemel.

11. Gi wi tideh da janjam va wi.

- 12. Gi wi dasnotti vo alla missi va wi, leki wi gi dasnotti na somma, dissi missi na wi.
- 13. No tjarri wi na inni tesi. Ma loessoe wi vo da agriwan. Bikasi joe habi alla kondre, nanga tranga, nanga glori, tehgo.

At the end of the volume there is a table of the order of the books of the New Testament, together with an index of all the passages which are appointed to be read as the Epistles and Gospels for every Sunday in the year. This version was conducted through the press by the joint labour of Mr. C. A. Austen (a native of Surinam) and the Rev. Mr. Latrobe, of London. It was received with much gratitude by the poor slaves for whom it was printed. This version having been attacked by an anonymous critic in the Edinburgh Christian Instructor, was ably vindicated by Mr. William Greenfield, in "A Defence of the Surinam Negro-English Version of the New Testament, founded on the History of the Negro-English Version, a View of the Situation, Population, and History of Surinam, a Philosophical Analysis of the Language, and a Critical Examination of the Version." London, 1830, 8vo.

[ii.] South American Versions.

It does not appear that the Portuguese ever gave any translation of the Scriptures to the natives of South America who were subjugated by them: and the barbarous cruelties of the Spaniards in Mexico are recorded in the page of history. Towards the close of the sixteenth century, however, some of the ecclesiastics and missionaries adopted a different plan from that pursued by their predecessors, by translating some parts of the Scriptures into the language of the country. Benedict Fernandez, a Spanish Dominican friar, vicar of Mixteca in New Spain, translated the Epistles and Gospels into the dialect spoken in that province. Didacus de S. Maria, another Dominican, and vicar of the province of Mexico (who died in 1579), was the author of a translation of the Epistles (who died in 1579), was the author of a translation of the Epistles and Gospels into the Mexican tongue, or general language of the country. The Proverbs of Solomon, and other fragments of the a Adler's Bibliotheca Biblica, Part IV. p. 116. Sixteenth Report of the Bible Society, p. 127. Besides the particulars recorded in the preceding sections, there are many interesting circumstances relative to the history of translations and translators, which the limits of this work do not allow to be detailed. For these, and indeed for every thing relative to the literary history of the Holy Scriptures, we refer the reader to the Rev. Dr. Townley's Illustrations of Biblical Literature, London, 1821, in 3 volumes, 8vo.

Twenty-fifth Report, p. lxxx.
10 Twenty-sixth Report, p. lxxx.

Rodriguez, a Spanish Franciscan friar: and the Epistles and Gospels, appointed to be read for the whole year, were translated into the idiom of the Western Indians by Arnold à Basaccio, also a Franciscan friar: but the dates of these latter versions have not been ascertained. A translation of the Gospel of Saint Luke into the Mexican language, by Dr. Mora, was printed in 1832,1 and Holy Scriptures, were translated into the same language by Louis another of the Book of Psalms into the Quichua or Peruvian lan Rodriguez, a Spanish Franciscan friar: and the Epistles and Gosguage, by Dr. Pazos Kanki, in 1830.² The entire Bible is said to pels, appointed to be read for the whole year, were translated into have been translated into the Brazilian language by an English have been translated into the Brazilian language by an English minister, who accompanied the Dutch to Recife, when they acquired it from the Portuguese. This version has never been printed.³ In 1825 a translation of the New Testament into the Peruvian language was completed.⁴

CHAPTER II.

HARMONIES OF THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.

NICOLAI ALARDI Bibliotheca Harmonico-Biblica, quæ, præter Historiam Harmonicam, tradit Notitiam Scriptorum Harmonicorum cujuscunque ætatis et religionis, tam perpetuorum quam singularium; nec omissis illis, qui vel specialius quoddam argumentum sacrum, vel bina Oracula Spiritûs Sancti ab Antilogiarum calumnia vindicarunt. Hamburgi, 1725, 8vo.

SECTION I.

HARMONIES OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

A CHRONICLE of the Times and the Order of the Text of the Old Testament, wherein the books, chapters, psalms, stories, prophecies, &c., are reduced into the proper order, and taken up in the proper places, in which the natural method and genuine series of the chronology requireth them to be taken in. reason given of dislocations, where they come. And many remarkable notes and observations given all along, for the better understanding of the text; the difficulties of the chronicle declared; the differences occurring in the relating of stories reconciled; and exceeding many scruples and obscurities in the Old Testament explained. By John LIGHTFOOT, D.D.

This "Chronicle" is to be found in the first volume of Dr. Lightfoot's works, published at London, in 1684, in two volumes, folio, and in the second volume of the 8vo. London edition, printed in 1822-25. Of all the theologians of his time, this celebrated divine (whose opinion was consulted by every scholar of note, both British and Foreign) is supposed to have been the most deeply versed in the knowledge of the Scriptures. "It was his custom, for many years, to note down, as opportunity presented, in the course of his talmudical and rabbinical studies, the order and time of the several passages of Scripture, as they came under his consideration." By pursuing this method he gradually formed the invaluable chronicle, the title of which has just been given, which was first published at London, in 4to., and in the year 1647. In this work, Dr. Lightfoot has briefly stated the summary or substance of the historical parts of the Old Testament, and has indicated the order in which the several chapters, psalms, and prophecies are to be placed. In the margin he has given the years of the world, and of the judges or sovereigns under whose administration the several events took place. Notwithstanding the differences in opinion entertained by the learned concerning the chronology of particular events, the general method of this "Chronicle" has been, and still continues to be, held in the highest estimation by all who are competent duly to appreciate its executive.

2. A Designe about disposing the Bible into an Harmony. Or, an Essay concerning the transposing the order of books and chapters of the Holy Scriptures, for the reducing of all into a continued history.

 $\text{The} \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{Benefits.} \\ \text{Difficultie.} \\ \text{Helpes.} \end{array} \right.$

By Samuel Torshel. London, 1747, 4to.

This tract was published nearly at the same time with Dr. Lightfoot's Chronicle. It appears from the preface that Mr. Torshel was preceptor of the children of King Charles I. under the earl of Northumberland; and his tract was addressed "To the Right Honourable the Lords and Commons assembled in Parliament;" Honourable the Lords and Commons assembled in Parliament;" whom he endeavoured to excite to patronize the undertaking, by the consideration of the glory which had redounded to France by the then recent publication of the Parisian Polyglott, in ten folio volumes. The state, however, paid no regard to this address, and the design which Torshel had ably sketched was never accomplished. He proposed "to lay the whole story together in a continued connection, the books or parts of books, and all the severall parcels disposed and placed in their proper order, as the continuance and chronicall method of the Scripture history requires; so that no sentence nor word in the whole Bible be omitted, nor any thing receased, or any word inserted but what is necessary for transition. repeated, or any word inserted but what is necessary for transition.

¹ Twenty-ninth Report, p. lxxv.

So as some whole chapters or pieces be put into other places, yea, great parts of some books, and some whole books, to be woven into the body of another book." (Torshel's Designe, p. 10.) In the prosecution of this undertaking, besides reducing all the historical books of the Old Testament to a continued series, the book of Psalms, and the sermons of the Prophets, were to be inserted in their proper places, and the writings of Solomon incorporated according to those periods of his reign when they are supposed to have been written; and those parts of the book of Proverbs, "which the men of Hezekiah copied out," were to be disposed in the body of the books of Chronicles, towards the end of the reign of Hezekiah, king of Judah. In harmonizing the Gospels, Mr. Torshel proposed to follow the plan then recently adopted in the Latin Harmony, commenced by Chemnitz, continued by Lyser, and finished by Gerhard; and the apostolic epistles were to be distributed in the Acts of the Apostles, according to the order of time when they were written. The writings of St. John were to close the proposed undertaking. The perusal of this modest and well-written tract, were written. The writings of St. John were to close the proposed undertaking. The perusal of this modest and well-written tract, several years since, suggested to the writer of these pages the idea of attempting a harmony of the entire Bible, on the completion of the present work. This laborious undertaking, however, has been happily rendered unnecessary by the publication of

3. The Rev. George Townsend's Arrangement of the Old and New Testament.

[i.] The Old Testament, arranged in historical and chronological order (on the basis of Lightfoot's Chronicle), in such manner, that the books, chapters, psalms, prophecies, &c. may be read as one connected history, in the very words of the authorized translation. By the Rev. George Townsend, M.A. London, 1821; Second Edition, 1826. In two very large volumes, 8vo.

This beautifully printed and carefully executed work (as its titlepage announces) is arranged on the basis of Dr. Lightfoot's Chronicle, above noticed: from which, however, Mr. Townsend has deviated for the better in one very material respect. According to Lightfoot's plan, the Old Testament would have been read as one Lightfoot's plan, the Old Testament would have been read as one unbroken history, without any division into chapters, or any of those breaks, the omission of which causes not a little weariness to the reader. In order to obviate this difficulty, and also with the view of making the Scripture narrative more attractive, as well as more easily remembered, Mr. T. has divided his harmony into eight suitable periods, viz. 1. From the creation to the deluge:—2. From the confusion of tongues to the death of Jacob and the Patriarchs;—3. From the birth to the death of Moses;—4. From the entrance of the Israelites into Canaan, under the command of Joshua, to the death of David —5. The reign of Solomon.—5. From the elevation the Israelites into Canaan, under the command of Joshua, to the death of David;—5. The reign of Solomon;—6. From the elevation of Rehoboam to the Babylonish Captivity;—7. The Babylonish Captivity, seventy years, from s. c. 606 to 536;—8. From the termination of the Babylonish Captivity to the reformation of worship by Nehemiah, and the completion of the canon of the Old Testament, by Simon the Just, from s. c. 536 to about 300. These eight periods are further subdivided into chapters and sections, the length of which is necessarily regulated by the subjects therein discussed; and in settling the chronology and order of some particular events and prophecies, the arranger has availed himself of the labours of the most eminent modern biblical critics. A well-written introduction developes his plan and design, and points out its advantages to various classes of readers, especially to clergymen, and those who are preparing for the sacred office, to whom this work is indispensably necessary. The work is terminated by six Indexes;—the first, containing an The work is terminated by six Indexes;—the first, containing an account of the periods, chapters, and sections into which the work is divided, with the passages of Scripture comprised in each;—the second, in columns, enabling the reader to discover in what part of the arrangement any chapter or verse of the Bible may be found;—the third and fourth contain tables of the Psalms and Prophecies, showing in what part of the arrangement, and after what passage of Scripture, every psalm or prophecy is inserted; and likewise on what occasion, and at what period, they were probably written, with the authority for their place in the arrangement;—the fifth, containing the dates of the events according to Dr. Hales's elaborate System of Chronology; and the sixth, a general index to the notes, which, though not numerous, are very appropriate, and possess the rare merit of compressing a great variety of valuable information.

Twenty-seventh Report, p. lxiii.
Townley's Illustrations, vol. iii. pp. 46—335. note.
Twenty-first Report of the Bible Society, p. lv.

into a small compass. The Rev. Mr. Archdeacon Nares has justly characterized this work, as being "disgested with such skill, and illustrated with such notes, as proves the author to have studied his task with deep attention and distinguished judgment." (Visitation Sermon, p. 24. London, 1823.) The second edition has parallel references and the marginal renderings.

[ii.] The New Testament arranged in Chronolo ical and Historical Order, in such manner that the Gospels, the Epistles, and the Acts may be read as one connected History. The Gospel on the basis of the Harmonies of Lightfoot, Doddridge, Pilkington, Newcome, and Michaelis; the Account of the Resurrection, on the Authorities of West, Townson, and Cranfield. The Epistles are inserted in their places, and divided according to the Apostle's Arguments. With copious Notes on many of the principal Subjects of Theology. By the Rev. George Townsend, M.A. 1825; Second Edition corrected, 1827, 2 vols. 8vo.

Though a distinct work in itself, this elaborate publication forms the second part of Mr. Townsend's Harmony of the Scriptures. The remarks on the preceding portion are equally applicable to the present work. The notes, indeed, are much more valuable, from the extent and variety of the very important topics they discuss. The usefulness of this portion of Mr. T.'s labours is materially increased by the numerous and important elucidations which he has derived from the works of Lightfoot, Schoettgen, Meuschen, and others, which are not within the reach of every biblical student.

[iii.] The Holy Bible arranged in Historical and Chronological Order, in such manner that the whole may be read as one connected History, in the words of the authorized translation. With short Notes; and a Table, dividing the Sacred Volume into 365 Portions for daily reading throughout the year. By the Rev. George Townsend, M.A. London, 1834, 8vo.

A neat reprint of the preceding work, in one commodious volume, illustrated with brief notes.

3. A Harmony of the Kings and Prophets, or an arrangement of the History contained in the Books of Kings and Chronicles, together with the Writings of the Prophets, arranged in chronological order as they were delivered, commencing with the Revolt of the Ten Tribes, and closing with the Prophecies of Malachi. By Stephen Merrell, Kittery (Maine), [North America]. 1832, 8vo.

SECTION II.

HARMONIES OF THE ENTIRE NEW TESTAMENT, AND OF THE FOUR GOSPELS.

1. The Harmony, Chronicle, and Order of the New Testament. The text of the four Evangelists methodized. Story of the Acts of the Apostles analyzed. Order of the Epistles manifested. Times of the Revelation observed, and illustrated with a variety of observations upon the chiefest difficulties, Textual and Talmudical, for clearing of their sense and language. By John Libertfoor, D.D. London, 1654, folio. Also in the first volume of his works. London, 1682, folio.

In this valuable work Dr. Lightfoot has pursued the same method which he had adopted in his Chronicle of the Old Testament. He further published, at London, in 1644 and 1650, three parts of The Harmony of the Four Evangelists, among themselves, and with the Old Testament. The fourth and fifth parts, which were to have completed his design, never appeared. This harmony is enriched with numerous philological and explanatory remarks, of which many subsequent critics and harmonists have availed themselves.

- 2. Harmonia Quatuor Evangeliorum juxta Sectiones Ammonianas et Eusebii Canones. Oxonii, e Typographeo Clarendoniano, 1805, 4to.
- 3. Andreæ OSIANDRI Harmoniæ Evangelicæ Libri Quatuor, Græce et Latine. In quibus Evangelicæ Historia ex quatuor Evangelistis ita in unum est contexta, ut nullius verbum ullum omissum, nihil alienum immixtum, nullius ordo turbatus, nihil non suo loco positum. Omnia vero litteris et notis ita distincta sint, ut quid cujusque evangelistæ proprium, quid cum aliis et cum quibus commune sit, primo statim adspectu deprehendere queas: item Elenchus Harmoniæ: Adnotationum liber unus. Basileæ, 1537, folio; Græce et Latine, Basileæ, 1567, folio; Latine, Lutetiæ Parisiorum ex officina Roberti Stephani. 1545, 12mo.

Osiander's Harmony is not of very frequent occurrence. It is highly estimated by Walchius, though Michaelis rather harshly observes that he undesignedly renders the Gospel history not only suspicious, but incredible, by adopting the principle that the evangelists constantly wrote in chronological order, and that the same transactions and discourses took place twice or thrice in the life of Christ. He acknowledges, however, that Osiander did not go so far as his successors, and that he sometimes deviates from his general principle.

4. Cornelii Jansenti, Gandavensis, Concordia Evangelica, in qua, præterquam quod suo loco ponitur, quæ evangelistæ non servato r-censent ordine, etiam nullius verbum aliquod om ttitur. Litteris autem omnia sic distinguuntur, ut quid cujusque proprium, quid cum aliis et cum quibus commune, etiam ad singulas dictiones mox deprehendatur. Lovanii, 1549, 8vo. Antverpiæ, 1558, 12mo.

Jansenius partially followed Osiander. He subsequently wrote a Commentary on his Harmony, which was published together with it at Louvain, in 1571. The number of editions through which this work pussed (thirteen others are enumerated by Walchius, between the years 1577 and 1624) sufficiently attest the favourable opinion entertained of its value. Walchius extols Jansenius's learning, ingenuity, and modesty.

5. Martini Chemnitii Harmonia Quatuor Evangeliorum, quam ab eodem feliciter inchoatam Polycarpus Lyserus et Johannes Gerhardus, is quidem continuavit, hic perfecit. Hamburgi, 1704, folio.

The best edition of a most valuable Harmony. Chemnitz compiled only the first two books, and part of a third, which were published after his death at Frankfort, in 1593, by Polycarp Lyser who wrote the remainder of the third book, and added the fourth and part of the fifth book. These were published at different times at Leipsic and Frankfort, between the years 1604 and 1611: and, on Lyser's death, Gerhard completed the undertaking, with learning and industry not inferior to those of his predecessors. The entire work, with the several continuations, was first published at Geneva, in 1628. This elaborate work is not only a harmony, but a learned commentary on the four Gospels.

6. The Harmony of the Four Evangelists, and their text methodized, according to the order and series of times in which the several things by them mentioned were transacted. By Samuel Cradock, B.D. London, 1668, folio, and again in 1684 and 1685.

This work was revised by the learned Dr. Tillotson, afterwards archbishop of Canterbury, by whom it was preserved from destruction during the memorable fire of London, in 1666. (Chalmers's Biog. Dict. vol. x. p. 447.) In the seventeenth century it was deservedly held in the highest estimation; though it is now superseded by later and more critical works. Mr. Cradock has drawn up the Gospel history in an explanatory paraphrase, in English, which is followed by the text of the evangelists. In the margin he has given short but useful notes in Latin, which are very judiciously extracted from Grotius, Drs. Lightfoot and Hammond, and other critics. The book is by no means dear; which to students (who may not be able to procure recent and more expensive harmonies) is a great advantage. This harmonist did not adopt the principle of Osiander.

7. Bernardi Lamy Historia, sive Concordia Evangelistarum. Parisiis, 1689, 12mo.—Commentarius in Harmoniam sive Concordiam Quatuor Evangelistarum. Parisiis, 1699, in two volumes, 4to.

Lamy's Commentary is held in much higher estimation than his Harmony. It is justly characterized by Michaelis as a learned work. The chronological and geographical apparatus is peculiarly valuable.

8. Joannis Clerici Harmonia Evangelica, cui subjecta est historia Christi ex quatuor evangeliis concinnata. Accesserunt tres Dissertationes, de annis Christi, deque concordia et auctoritate evangeliorum. Amstelodami, 1699, folio.

All critics unite in commendation of Le Clerc's Harmony. He has arranged the history of the four evangelists, according to chronological order, in columns parallel to each other, in Greek and Latin; and under the text he has given a Latin paraphrase, the design of which is to remove apparent contradictions. Le Clerc promised to publish Annotations on his Harmony, which have never appeared. A Latin edition of it was printed at Altorf in 1700, in 4to.; and an English translation of it is said by Walchius to have been published at London in the same year, also in 4to.

- Nicolai Toinabu Harmonia Græco-Latina. Parisiis, 1707, folio.
- M. Toinard drew up this Harmony for his own private use, of which only five or six copies were taken for the use of his friends. After his decease they published it (as he had desired they would) at the time and place above mentioned. It has long been held in the highest estimation, for the care and diligence which its author bestowed, in order to settle the several circumstances mentioned by the different evangelists. Bishop Marsh pronounces it to be of particular use to those who wish to examine the verbal agreement of the evangelists; as M. Toinard has not only placed in adjacent columns the parallel passages, but has also parallelized even single words.
- 10. Jo. Reinhardi Rus, Harmonia Evangelistarum, ita adornata, ut, investigatà sedulò textus cohærentià, nullus versus, sive traiijusti commentarii loco esse queat. Jenæ, 1727-1730, 4 vols. 12mo.

Walchius pronounces this to be an elaborate and learned work. Walchilds prohounces this to be all elaborate and relative work. This harmonist follows the plan of those who vindicate the chronological order of the history related by each evangelist. The text of the sacred writers is also explained in the copious notes of M. Rus. Walchil Bibliotheca, vol. iv. p. 881.

- 11. In the year 1739 and 1740, Dr. Doddenings published the first and second volumes of his Family Expositor, of which an account will be found in a subsequent part of this Appendix. They are noticed here, because they contain a harmony of the four Gospels, which is acknowledged to be executed with great judgment, independently of the very valuable exposition and notes that accompany it.
- 12. The Evangelical History and Harmony. By Matthew PILKINGTON, LL.B. London, 1747, folio.

This harmonist professes not to adhere to any of the schemes laid down by his predecessors for arranging the evangelical history. It is not disposed in columns, like the works of Le Clerc, Toinard, and others; but the text is exhibited in such a manner as to relate the various discourses and facts recorded by the sacred writers in their identical words, and in the fullest manner possible, yet so as to avoid tautology. The history is divided into chapters, and these are subdivided into sections of moderate length. Two Chronological Dissertations are prefixed: 1. On the time of Herod's death, of Dissertations are prented: 1. On the time of flerod's death, of the birth of Jesus Christ, the duration of his ministry, and the year of his crucifixion, &c. &c. 2. On the time and place of the adoration of the wise men. Notes are subjoined for the elucidation of particular passages. The work is executed with great care, and may frequently be purchased at a low price.

13. The Harmony of the Four Gospels; in which the natural order of each is preserved, with a paraphrase and notes. By J. MACKNIGHT, D.D. 4to. 2 vols. 1756; 2d edit. 1763; 3d edit. 8vo. 2 vols. Edinburgh, 1804.

Dr. Macknight closely adheres to the principle of Osiander; but his paraphrase and commentary contain so much useful information, that his harmony has long been regarded as a standard book among divines; it is in the lists of Bishops Watson and Tomline. The preliminary disquisitions greatly enhance its value. Dr. Macknight's work was translated into Latin by Professor Ruckersfelder, and ranslated into Latin by Professor Ruckersfelder, and in 3 vols. 8vo. at Bremen and Deventer, 1772. Bishop sublished in 3 vols. 8vo. at Bremen and Deventer, 1772. published in 3 vols. 8vo. at Bremen and Deventer, 1772. Bisnop Marsh says, that whoever makes use of this harmony should compare with it Dr. Lardner's observations on it, which were first published in 1764, and are reprinted in the eleventh volume of the octave edition, and in the fifth volume of the quarto edition of his

- 14. An Harmony of the Gospels, in which the original text is disposed after Le Clerc's general manner, with such various readings at the foot of the page as have received Wetstein's sanction in his folio edition of the Greek Testament. Observations are subjoined tending to settle the time and place of every transaction, to establish the series of facts, and to reconcile seeming inconsistencies. By William Newcome, D.D. Bishop of Ossory (afterwards Archbishop of Armagh). London, 1778, folio.
- 15. An English Harmony of the Four Evangelists, generally disposed after the manner of the Greek of William Newcome, Archbishop of Armagh; with a Map of Palestine divided according to the twelve tribes, Explanatory Notes, and Indexes. London, 1802, 8vo.

London, 1802, 8vo.

The Greek Harmony of Archbishop Newcome has long been held in the highest estimation; but its bulk and price necessarily place it beyond the reach of many biblical students. In publishing this harmony, the anonymous compiler (a member of the Society of Friends) has rendered to English readers the same service which that learned prelate had conferred on biblical scholars by his larger Greek work. "Several trifling alterations have been adopted in the text, and, it is hoped, generally to advantage." (Preface, p. v.) The harmony fills four hundred and thirty-four pages; and the 'Notes and Illustrations' comprise thirty-six pages: though brief, they are judiciously selected from the critical and philological labours of Beausobre and L'Enfant, Calmet, Grotius, the Rev. Drs. Hammond, Harwood, Shaw, Doddridge, from the harmony of the late eminent physician, Dr. Robert Willan, and various other sources. The volume concludes with an index to the Parables delivered by Jesus Christ, and a Table for finding any passage of the Gospels in this Harmony. Altogether, "the form in which this work is printed is extremely convenient; so much so, that they, who can use the Greek, may be glad to consult the English octavo rather than the unwieldy folio of the archbishop." (British Critic (O. S.), vol. xxii. p. 437.) (O. S.), vol. xxii. p. 437.)

15*. An English Harmony of the Four Evangelists, disposed after the manner of the Greek of William Newcome, Archbishop of Armagh; with Explanatory Notes, and Indexes, and a new Map of Palestine, divided into Tetrarchies, and showing the ciatur, sive prætereatur sine brevi ac succincta explicatione, quæ | Travels of our Lord Jesus Christ. London: M.DCCC.XXVII. 8vo.

Though apparently a new work, this is a mere reprint of the preceding Harmony, with the omission in the title-page of the word "generally" (which the original compiler had properly inserted, as Archbishop Newcome's method was only generally followed), and with the variation, which the reader will be able to distinguish, from the lines above printed in Italics. The date of the original work is in Arabic figures; in the volume under consideration it is in Roman small capital letters. The few errata which the original compiler had noticed are here corrected: but the following note, which he had prefixed to his table of contents, Viz. In the thick prefixed to each section is designed to mark the general order at first view, and not faithfully to exhibit its contents, is omitted: and the table of contents, which in the original work fills seven pages in the contents of the page in the contents of the page in the contents. The thirtytable of contents, which in the original work fills seven pages in columns, is here printed in long lines, in four pages. The thirty-six pages of "notes and illustrations" are here compressed into thirty-three; and the "Table for finding any passage of the Gospels in this Harmony," which fills five pages in the original edition, is here compressed into four pages. The Map is the only new article: it exhibits Palestine, divided into Tetrarchies, and by means of a red line shows the travels of Jesus Christ. In one corner of it is a ground plan of the Temple at Jerusalem. The volume is very nearly printed. neatly printed.

- 16. A Harmony of the Evangelists in Greek; to which are prefixed Critical Dissertations in English. By Joseph PRIEST-LEY, LL.D. London, 1778, 4to.
- 17. A Harmony of the Evangelists in English; with Critical Dissertations, an occasional Paraphrase, and Notes for the use of the unlearned. By Joseph PRIESTLEY, LL.D. London, 1780, 4to.

The same method of arrangement is followed in both these Harmonies. Dr. Priestley adopted the opinion of some ancient writers, that the ministry of Jesus Christ lasted only one year, or a year and a few months. For an account of these two publications see the Monthly Review (old series), vol. lviii. pp. 89—94., and vol. lxiv. pp. 81-90. 161-173.

18. Synopsis Evangeliorum Matthæi, Marci, et Lucæ, una cum iis Joannis Pericopis, que historiam passionis et resurrectionis historiam complectuntur. Textum recensuit, et selectam lectionis varietatem adjecit J. J. Griesbach. Halæ, 1776, 8vo. Editio secunda, emendatior et auctior. Halæ Saxonum, 1797, 8vo. Editio quarta, 1822, 8vo.

The chief purport of this synopsis, Bishop Marsh remarks, is, not to give a chronological series of events, but to represent in parallel columns all those sections which are common to the Gospels of to give a chronological series of events, but to represent in parallel columns all those sections which are common to the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke; the Gospel of John (except the last part) being omitted, because the rest of it has so very little matter in common with the other three. In order to make as few transpositions as possible, Mark's order is generally retained, because it is the same with that of Luke, as far as relates to the facts which are common to all three. Those parts which each evangelist has peculiar to himself, are inserted in intermediate sections. The learned translator of Michaelis pronounces the disposition of the whole work to be very commodious, and adds, that he knows of no harmony, which affords so much assistance in the investigation of the origin of the first Gospels. In 1812, an English Synopsis of the first three Gospels, including the last four chapters of St. John's Gospel, was published in 8vo. on the plan of Griesbach's work, with some variations, by the Rev. Charles Dunster, who has made the narrative of St. Luke the standard to which the other Gospels are adapted. Valuable as Griesbach's synopsis confessedly is, some of his transpositions have been deemed arbitrary, and some important passages were omitted by him. To obviate these defects, MM. De Wette and Lücke have compiled a new synopsis from Griesbach's third edition, so as to exhibit the entire passages of the Gospels with their parallels; at the foot of each page they have given the principal various lections from Griesbach's critical edition of the New Testament; and they have supplied brief notices of the arguments or contents of each section. The title of this very of the New Testament; and they have supplied brief notices of the arguments or contents of each section. The title of this very useful publication is,

- 19. Synopsis Evangeliorum Matthæi, Marci, et Lucæ, cum Parallelis Joannis Pericopis. Ex recensione Griesbachii, cum selecta Lectionum varietate. Concinnaverunt, et Breves Argumentorum Notationes adjecerunt Guil. Mart. Leber. De WETTE. et Frid. Lucke. Berolini, 1818, 4to.
- 20. Diatessaron, sive integra Historia Domini nostri Jesu Christi, Græcè. Ex quatuor Evangeliis inter se collatis, ipsisque Evangelistarum verbis aptè et ordinatè dispositis confecta. Subjungitur Evangeliorum brevis Harmonia. Edidit J. White, S.T.P. Ling, Arab. Prof. Versionis Syriacæ Philoxenianæ Nov. Test. Interpres. Oxonii, è Typographeo Clarendoniano, 1799,
- A Dialessaron is the result and summary of a Harmony. In the latter the whole text of the four evangelists is given, only so arranged in columns that their parallelisms and differences may be exactly seen: whereas, in a dialessaron, one continued narrative is selected from the four, avoiding all repetitions of the same or simi-

Professor White founded his beautifully and correctly | lar words. printed volume on the excellent Harmony of Archbishop Neworone, except in the part relating to the resurrection of Jesus Christ, in which he has followed the arrangement of facts proposed by Mr. West and Dr. Townson, in their works on this subject, which are noticed in the next col. The time and place in which each event happened, are judiciously noticed in the margins: a map of Palastina professor, and a very useful, though occasing Francisco. Palestine is prefixed; and a very useful, though concise, Evangeli-orum Harmonia, which is added at the end, connects the whole with peculiar clearness. In 1802, Dr. White's work was translated into Latin by the Rev. T. Thirlwall, who retained the chief part of the professor's title, and adopted principally the Latin version of Castellio; although, where the editor regarded his phrases as forced and affected (as they sometimes are), he has had recourse to the versions of Beza, Tremellius, and the Vulgate. This publication tion may be of use to those, who, in reading the Greek, are occasionally induced to consult a translation; Mr. Thirlwall also published, in 1803, an English Diatessaron, or History of our Lord Jesus Christ, compiled from the four Gospels according to the authorized version, 8vo. and 12mo. Some brief notes, and a concise but useful introduction are annexed, together with a map of Palestine.

- 21. Diatessaron; or the Gospel History, from the Text of the Four Evangelists, in a connected Series. With Notes critical and explanatory, by Robert Thomson. Edinburgh and London, 1808, 8vo.
- 22. The United Gospel; or, Ministry of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, combined from the Narrations of the Four Evangelists. By R. and M. WILLAN. London, 1806, 8vo.

This is the third edition of a very useful Diatessaron, for such the work in effect is. The first impression appeared in 1782, and the second in 1786, under the name of the late eminent physician Dr. Robert Willan. It professes to exhibit the events of the Gospel history in a connected chain or order of succession; and, by combining the accounts of each evangelist, to relate in their own words every incident, with all its circumstances, at full length. notes which accompany the work are judiciously selected; they relate chiefly to the manners, customs, opinions, and expressions proverbial or allegorical, among the eastern nations, with which the generality of readers cannot be familiarly acquainted.

23. A Synopsis of the Four Evangelists; or, a regular History of the conception, birth, doctrine, miracles, death, resurrection, and ascension of Jesus Christ, in the words of the Evangelists. By Charles Thomson, 8vo. Philadelphia, 1815.

The venerable author of this Harmony, whose translation of the Old Testament is noticed in a subsequent page of this Appendix, considering the Gospel as memoirs of remarkable things said and done by Jesus Christ, has here arranged them according to the dates, places, and circumstances, which he found expressly mentioned in the several Gospels. He has employed a literal translation of the very words of the evangelists, without any omission or addition, excepting that he has inserted explanations of peculiar phrases and technical terms between brackets []. It is very respectably executed; and at the end there are fifty pages of notes, chiefly explanatory of the manners and customs of the Jews. and technical terms between brackets

- 24. An Harmony of the Four Gospels; or, a series of the Narratives of the Evangelists, so collected and disposed, as to bring the whole into one regular relation; with notes, selected from various authors. By John Chambers. London, 1813, 8vo.
- 25. A Chronological History of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, from the compounded texts of the Four Holy Evangelists; or, the English Diatessaron; with a map of the Holy Land, explanatory notes, and illustrations, from late oriental travellers and rabbinical writers, &c. &c. By the Rev. R. WARNER. Bath and London, 1819, 8vo.
- 26. Concordance de Quatre Evangélistes, suivant l'Ordre de Michaelis. Paris, 1828, 12mo.

This, it is believed, is the only detached harmony of the Gospels extant in the French language: it is drawn up agreeably to the order of Michaelis in his harmony or table of contents to the four evangelists, which forms part of his introduction to the New Testament. (Vol. iii. pp. 49—83. of Bishop Marsh's English translation; or vol. iii. pp. 58—93 of M. Chenevière's French translation.) The total absence of a table of contents, or even of the summaries of the contents given to each section by Michaelis, greatly lessens the utility of this volume as a book of reference to the French reader.

- 27. The Monotessaron; or, the Gospel History, according to the Four Evangelists, harmonized and chronologically arranged, in a new Translation from the Text of Griesbach. By the Rev. John S. Thompson. Baltimore, 1829, 8vo.
- 28. Synopsis Evangeliorum Matthæi, Marci et Lucæ, cum Joannis Pericopis Parallelis. Textum ex ordine Griesbachii dispertitum, cum varia Scriptura selecta, edidit Mauritius Roed-GER. Halis Saxonum, 1829, 8vo.

of the text: but the synopsis itself is divided into six parts, after the plan of De Wette and Luecke. The summaries of contents prefixed to each section are principally taken from Dr. Knappe's critical edition. Great pains have been bestowed on the punctuation of this work, the typographical execution of which is very

29. Quatuor Evangeliorum Tabulæ Synopticæ. Juxta rationes temporis quoad fieri potuit composuit, annotationibusque ex perpetua sectionum singularum collatione instruxit, Henricus Nicolaus CLAUSEN. Hauniæ, 1829, 8vo.

No part of the Greek text is printed in this work, in which the author has taken singular pains in adjusting the order of events, from a minute and laborious collation of the parallel passages in the four evangelists.

- 30. Harmonia Evangelica: sive Quatuor Evangelia Græcè, pro temporis et rerum serie in partes quinque distributa. Edidit Edvardus GRESWELL, A.M. Oxonii, 1830, 8vo.
- 30°. Dissertations upon the Principles and Arrangement of a Harmony of the Gospels. By the Rev. Edward GRESWELL, M.A. Oxford, 1830, 3 vols. 8vo.

The fundamental principles of Mr. Greswell's Harmony are, 1. That the last three Gospels are regular compositions; 2. That St. Matthew's Gospel is partly regular and partly irregular; 3. That each of the Gospels was written in the order in which it stands; 4. That the Gospels last written, in every instance, were supplemental to the prior Gospels. "His harmony forms but a portion of the valuable critical apparatus, which he has constructed for the benefit of the critical student; and, taken together with the Dissertations, it will enable the reader to make himself master of the whole range of inquiry relating to the chronology of the New Testament, and the structure and composition of the Gospels." (Eclectic Review for June, 1833, vol. ix. Third Series, p. 313.)

31. A Harmony of the Four Gospels in the English Authorized version, arranged according to Greswell's "Harmonia Evangelica" in Greek, with references to his Dissertations on the same. By R. MIMPRIS. London, 1833, 8vo.

A necessary companion to Mr. Greswell's elaborate works.

32. A Harmony of the Four Gospels, founded on the Arrange ment of the Harmonia Evangelica by the Rev. Edward Greswell. With the Practical Reflections of Dr. Doddridge. By the Rev. E. BICKERSTETH. London, 1832, 8vo.

SECTION III.

HARMONIES OF PARTICULAR PARTS OF THE FOUR GOSPELS.

1. A Harmony and Exposition of our blessed Lord's last Prophecy; in which the Difficulties that have hitherto perplexed commentators are satisfactorily explained. By John FANNIN, A.B. Dublin, 1832, 8vo.

The principal design of this publication is to prove that the details which are given in Matt. xxiv. 15—22., Mark xiii. 14—20., and Luke xxi. 20—24., refer to two events, different, distinct, and distant from each other; the one, the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans—an event long past; the other still future, and likely to occur about the restoration of the Jews. Mr. Fannin considers that Luke's account refers to the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, while those of Matthew and Mark refer to the second advent of Christ: and he has devoted twenty-three pages to prove that the abomination of desolation, spoken of by the latter two evangelists, is popery.

2. Observations on the History of the Evidences of the Resurrection of Jesus Christ. By Gilbert WEST, Esq. London, 1747, 8vo.

The multiplied editions of this most valuable treatise, which places the history of the resurrection on impregnable ground, suffi-ciently attest its value, and the high estimation in which it is deservedly held. Mr. West had for a time listened to the blandishments of infidelity; and the treatise in question was written in consequence of the inquiries which he conscientiously instituted into the evidences of Christianity, of which he lived and died a bright ornament. His work is noticed here on account of the luminous and satisfactory manner in which he has harmonized the several accounts of the evangelical history of the resurrection.

- 3. A Harmony of the Four Gospels, so far as relates to our Saviour's Resurrection, with a commentary and notes. By Richard PARRY. London, 1765, 4to.
- 4. A Discourse on the Evangelical History, from the Interment to the Ascension of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. By the late Rev. Thomas Townson, D.D. Archdeacon of Richmond. Oxford and London, 1793, 8vo.

In this very judicious work (which was edited, after the learned A commodious synopsis of the first three Gospels. The order author's decease, by Dr. John Loveday) the harmony of the four of Dr. Griesbach (see No. 18. p. 60.) is followed in the disposition evangelical accounts of the resurrection is exhibited in four parallel columns, with a collateral paraphrase, the order of which is illustrated and confirmed by various observations. Dr. Townson professes to tread nearly in the footsteps of Mr. West, whose reasoning he enforces by new considerations; and he has illustrated his accounts by a new arrangement, and by the introduction of some explanatory particulars. He "accurately discriminates the respective particulars of the three days of our Saviour's crucifixing and resurrection minutely considers every circumstance in the Townsend, noticed in page 58. supra; and the "Harmony of the and resurrection, minutely considers every circumstance in the different relations, reconciles apparent inconsistencies, accounts for particular omissions, and furnishes a clear and consistent history, confirmed by considerations and representations, in which much learning is displayed, without any parade." (British Critic, O. S., vol. i. p. 73.) These "Observations" of Dr. Townson are also extant in the second volume of the collective edition of his works, published at London, in 1810, in two volumes, 8vo.

5. An Harmony of the Gospels, from the Resurrection to the Ascension of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ; in which the English Narrations of the Four Evangelists are orderly exhibited in appropriate columns. Observations are subjoined tending to investigate the true evangelical sense, reconcile seeming discre-pancies, and defend the order of the facts laid down in the Harmony. By Thomas Chanfield, A.B. Dublin, 1795, folio.

This publication was originally an academical exercise, undertaken in pursuance of a theological subject, given by the late Rev. Dr. Graves, to the gentlemen attending his divinity class. The author professes to follow Dr. Townson's scheme, with some few variations. His work was published with a recommendatory character given by the Drs. Graves and Barrett (at that time the divinity lecturers in the University of Dublin); who state that, in their opinion, "it contains much accurate research, and much useful information; and, therefore," that they "shall not hesitate to recommend it to the attention of the students in divinity attending their

6. The Burial and Resurrection of Jesus Christ, according to the Four Evangelists. From the German of John David Michaelis. [By Sir George Duckett, Bart.] London, 1827, 12mo.

"If any person should be desirous of seeing all that the very spirit of subtlety and mischief can produce against the fact of the resurrection, we should recommend them by all means to peruse the little work of Michaelis on this subject, which has recently been translated into English. This celebrated critic has there considered almost every cavil with which the wit or malice of the adversaries has been able to assail the evidence of this great event. And we may safely venture to predict that every intelligent and honest examiner of these objections will pronounce, with Michaelis, that the whole is "a contest between the accuracy of the Gospels and the imagination of the unbeliever;" and that, with very few exceptions, the cavils are so stupid and frivolous as to make their authors worthy of sound flagellation; or so shamefully disingenuauthors worthy of sound flagellation; or so shamefully ous as righteously to entitle them to the honours of the pillory. In referring our readers to this treatise, it may be necessary to apprize them, by way of caution, that, on the subject of inspiration, the laxity of the author's notions is somewhat greater than would be approved by the Anglican school of divinity. So far as relates to mere matters of fact, he is much disposed to place the evange-lists (or at all events those two of them who were not apostles) precisely on the footing of so many ordinary mortal witnesses. He contends, however, quite irresistibly, that their testimony, even so considered, is abundantly sufficient to place the resurrection of Christ beyond the reach of doubt." (British Critic and Theological Review, vol. v. pp. 331, 332.)

SECTION IV.

HARMONIES OF THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES, AND OF THE APOSTOLIC EPISTLES.

1. The Apostolical History, containing the Acts, Labours, Travels, Sermons, Discourses, Miracles, Successes, and Sufferings of the Holy Apostles, from Christ's Ascension to the Destruction of Jerusalem. Also a Narration of the particular times and occasions upon which the Apostolical Epistles were

This author, an eminent non-conformist divine, also wrote "A plain and brief Exposition of the Revelation," now superseded by later and better works; "The Old Testament History Methodized," folio, now also superseded by the valuable work of Mr. Townsend, noticed in page 58. supra; and the "Harmony of the Four Evangelists," likewise noticed in page 59. "Cradock's three volumes are very valuable: the last two, on the New Testament, are much better than the first, on the Old. His extracts in the margin from Hammond, Lightfoot, and Grotius, are very judicious; and I think, on the whole, I never read any one author that assisted and I think, on the whole, I never read any one author that assisted me more in what relates to the New Testament." (Dr. Doddridge.) The book is by no means dear, which to students is a great advantage.

2. A History of the First Planting of Christianity, taken from the Acts of the Apostles and their Epistles. Together with the remarkable Facts of the Jewish and Roman History, within this period. By George Banson, D.D., 4to. London, 1735; 2d, and best edition, 1756, 3 vols. usually bound in one.

best edition, 1756, 3 vois, usuaity bound in one.

Though this work does not profess to be a harmony of the Acts of the Apostles and of their Epistles, it may justly be considered as one. Besides illustrating the history of the Acts throughout, and most of the Epistles, by a view of the history of the times, the occasions of the several Epistles, and the state of the churches to which they were addressed, the learned author has incorporated a paraphrastic abstract of those Epistles in the order of time when they were written; and has also established the truth of the Christian religion on a number of facts, the most public, important, and incontestable. It is indeed a most valuable help to the study of the Enistles; but it is to be regretted that its scarcity renders it accessi-Epistles; but it is to be regretted that its scarcity renders it accessible to few.

3. The Life of the Apostle Paul as related in Scripture; but in which his Epistles are inserted in that part of the History to which they are supposed respectively to belong; with select Notes, critical and explanatory, and relating to persons and places, and a map of the countries in which the apostle travelled. By Joseph Gurney BEVAN. London, 1807, 8vo.

seph Gurney Bevan. London, 1807, 8vo.

The narrative of St. Paul's life is studiously related in the very words of Scripture, having only such additional matter as is necessary to introduce or connect the several parts. Attention, however, has been paid to the task of selecting, from different parts of the New Testament, such passages as belong to the regular chain of the history. The notes are principally selected from the best critics and commentators, and those which are geographical are the most conspicuous, and stamp a real value on the work; which, though designed for young persons of his own religious communion (The Society of Friends), may be studied with advantage by those of every other class of Christians, especially such as have not many commentators within their reach, "without danger of finding any thing introduced which can give the smallest bias towards any principle that is not really and truly Christian." (British Critic, O. S., vol. xxxiii. p. 477.)

4. A Harmony of the Epistles of the Holy Apostles, to which

4. A Harmony of the Epistles of the Holy Apostles, to which is added, a Summary of the Entire. By the Rev. Peter ROBERTS, Cambridge, 1800, 4to.

This Harmony of the Apostolic Epistles differs, in its form and structure, from the three publications last noticed. It "consists of two columns, in the first of which a kind of continued Epistle is structure, from the three publications last noticed. It "consists of two columns, in the first of which a kind of continued Epistle is formed, principally, but not entirely, from the Epistle to the Romans; which the author considers as intended more particularly for a delineation of the scheme of Christianity, as to the speculative part." This continued text or clue is printed in a narrow column and a large letter, which gives room for the introduction of all the parallel passages in the second column, which is much broader, and printed in a closer form and smaller type. The whole is digested under four principal divisions. I. Introductory address. 2. Doctrinal instruction. 3. Practical precepts. 4. Conclusion. In this way the whole substance of the Apostolical Epistles is arranged; and any particular passages are found by means of a table at the end of the book. Subjoined to this Harmony is the "Summary of the Epistles; in which the view of the contents is designed to be completely conveyed, according to the author's system." This part is followed by a very useful selection of notes. "Mr. Roberts deserves the highest commendation for his zeal and diligence in thus illustrating the Epistles, and for the attention and acuteness manifested in digesting their very various contents." (British Critic, O. S., vol. xr. pp. 419-421.)

CHAPTER III.

APOCRYPHAL BOOKS AND WRITINGS.

SECTION I.

APOCRYPHAL BOOKS OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

THE Apocryphal Books, attached to the Old Testament, are p. 263.) In pp. 266—272, there is an analysis, with specimens to be found in the various Polyglott Editions of the Bible, and of this publication. also in most of the larger editions of the Septuagint Version. Dr. Masch (Bibl. Sacr. Part i. pp. 427-436.) has described the various editions of the Apocryphal Books, as well collectively as of particular Books. The following are the principal and more easily procurable editions, including some which have appeared subsequently to the date of his publication.

- 1. Libri Veteris Testamenti Apocryphi omnes, Græce, ad Exemplar Vaticanum emendatissime expressi. [Curâ Ludolphi LEUSDENII] Francofurti ad Mænum, 1694, 8vo.
- 2. Libri Apocryphi, Græce. Introductionem præmisit Georgius Johannes Henkius. Halæ, 1711, 8vo.

The introduction was subsequently printed in a separate form, in 410.

- 3. Libri Veteris Testamenti Apocryphi. Textum Græcum recognovit, et Variarum Lectionum Delectum adjecit, Joannes Christianus Gulielmus Augusti. Lipsiæ, 1804, 8vo.
- 4. The Books of the Apocrypha, with Critical and Historical Observations prefixed to each Book: also two Introductory Discourses, the first, explaining the Distinctions between Canonical and Apocryphal Writings, estimating the Value of the latter, and ascertaining the time when they were introduced as Ecclesiastical Books into the Service of the Church. The second, illustrating the intimate connection between the Old and New Testament in religious and moral views, in matters of faith and practice, in style, composition, and allusion; with a Sketch of the History of the Jews from the Cessation of Prophecy in Malachi, to the final dissolution of their State under the Emperor Vespasian, A. D. 70. By Charles Wilson, D.D. Edinburgh, 1801, 8vo.
- 5. The Five Books of Maccabees in English. With Notes and Illustrations. By Henry Cotton, D.C.L. Oxford, 1832, 8vo.

Of the Apocryphal Books which bear the name of the Maccabees, some account will be found in Vol. II. pp. 292, 293. Dr. Cotton has collected them together in this beautifully printed volume, and has for the first time given an English translation of what are called the fourth and fith books; and he has successfully adapted the country of the control the style and language of his version to those of the preceding books, as closely as was consistent with a careful adherence to the original. The whole is illustrated with very numerous notes, a valuable critical Introduction, Genealogical Tables of the Families of the Maccabees and of Herod, together with a Chronological Table, and a copious Index. This work is a necessary supplement to every edition of our authorized English Version of the Bible.

- 6. Sapientia Jesu filii Sirachi, Græce. Textum ad fidem Codd. et Versionum emendavit et illustravit Joh. Guil. LINDE. Gedani, 1795, 8vo.
- 7. Liber Jesu Siracidæ Græce: ad fidem Codicum et Versionum emendatus, et perpetua adnotatione illustratus, a Car. Gottl. BRETSCHNEIDER. Ratisbon, 1806, 8vo.
- "This work is, without contradiction, the best that has appeared on the Book of Ecclesiasticus; and the Commentary is an excellent critique." (Classical Journal, vol. v. p. 4.) It "deserves to be introduced into the library of every theological scholar. The Greek text has, undoubtedly, been very much corrupted.... Dr. Bretschneider has sparred no labour in his valuable collection of readings from the Vatican and Alexandrian MSS, from that MS, on which the text of the Complutensian Polyglott was founded, and from various other sources. Much interesting matter will be found in his elaborate Prolegomena, and in the five dissertations at the close of the volume. His perpetual annotations on the text afford evidence of great critical ability and theological information, but perhaps exhibit a little of that tedious prolixity which is not uncommon in the German school." (Christian Remembrancer, vol. ix. p. 263.) "This work is, without contradiction, the best that has appeared ix. p. 263.)
- 8. Liber Ecclesiasticus. The Book of the Church; or, Ecclesiasticus: translated from the Latin Vulgate. By Luke Howard. London, 1827, royal 8vo.
- "It is a miserable attempt at an English version of Ecclesiasticus, from the Latin translation of the Vulgate." (Christ. Remem. vol. ix. Vol. II.—App. 4 A VOL. II .- APP.

- 9 a. The Book of Jasher. With 9 b. The Book of Jasher: With Testimonies and Notes explanatory of the Text.
- To which is prefixed Various Readings.

Translated into English from the Hebrew, by Alcuin, of Britain, who went a Pilgrimage into the Holy Land.

This Book is twice mentioned in Holy Scripture, viz. in Josh. x. 13. and in 2 Sam. i. 18. in both which Places it is appealed to as a Work of Credit and Reputation, and as such was at that Time had in great Esteem.

Printed in the year MDCCLI. 4to.

Testimonies and Notes, Critical and Historical, explanatory of the Text. To which is prefixed Various Readings, and a Preliminary Dissertation, proving the Authenticity of the Work. Translated into English from the Hebrew, by Flaccus Albinus Alcuinus of Britain, Abbot of Canterbury. Who went a Pilgrimage into the Holy Land, and Persia, where he discovered this volume, in the city of Gazna.

"Is not this written in the Book of Jasher?" Joshua x. 13. "Behold it is written in the Book of Jasher." 2 Sam. i. 18.

Bristol: Printed for the Editor. by Philip Rose, 20, Broad-mead, MDCCCXXIX. 4to.

Of the literary forgery contained in the volume or rather pamphlet printed in the year 1751 (9 a.), the following account is given by Mr. Rowe-Mores, a diligent topographer and antiquary of the eighteenth century, in his "Dissertation upon English Typographical Founders and Founderies," published in 1778. "In the year 1751, Mr. Ilive published a pretended translation of the Book of Jasher, said to have been made by one Alcuin of Britain. The account given of the translation is full of glaring absurdities: but of the publication this we can say from the information of the Only-One who is causable of informing us, because the business was a secret publication this we can say from the information of the Only-One who is capable of informing us, because the business was a secret between the Two: Mr. Ilive in the night-time had constantly an Hebrew Bible before him (sed qu. de hoc), and cases in his closet. He produced the copy for Jasher, and it was composed in private, and the forms worked off in the night-time in a private press-room by these two, after the men of the Printing House had left their work." (Page 65.)

work." (Page 65.)
Jacob Ilive, the person here mentioned, was a type-founder and printer, who carried on business in London between the years 1730 and 1763, in which last year he died. "Being not perfectly sound in his mind, he produced some strange works. In 1733, he published an Oration, intended to prove the plurality of worlds, and asserting that this earth is hell, that the souls of men are apostate angels, and that the fire to punish those confined to this world at the day of judgment will be immaterial..... In this strange performance the author unveils his deistical principles, and takes no small lihetry with the sacred Scriptures, and especially with the formance the author unveils his desired principles, and takes no small liberty with the sacred Scriptures, and especially with the character of Moses. Emboldened by this first adventure, he determined to become the public teacher of infidelity. For this purpose he hired the use of Carpenters' Hall, where for some time he delivered his orations, which consisted chiefly of scraps from Tindal and other similar writers." (Chalmers's Biographical Dictionary, vol. xix. p. 228.)

In November, 1751, he published "The Book of Jasher," of which In November, 1751, he published "The Book of Jasher," of which the following account was given in the Monthly Review for December in the same year (vol. v. p. 250.) — "The publisher, in order to give a sanction to this pretended Book of Jasher, refers to the mention made to such a book in Josh. x. 13. and 2 Sam. i. 18. In both which places, says he, it is appealed to as a work of credit and reputation, and as such was at that time had in great esteem. But the work now published does not in the least appear to be that book referred to in the Scriptures; but a palpable piece of contrivance intended to impose on the credulous and the ignorant, to sap the credit of the books of Moses, and to blacken the character of Moses himself. Hence it is no wonder that the editor or author has Moses himself. Hence it is no wonder that the editor or author has had the precaution to conceal his name. He has trumped up an idle story of the means by which the MS. fell into his hands, which he relates in a prefatory epistle to a nameless earl. He has also prefixed a history of Alcuin's pilgrimage to the Holy Land, of the manner of his procuring a sight of the Book of Jasher, and the means by which he obtained permission to translate it into English. But the whole is so full of blunders, inconsistencies, and absurdities, that we think it beneath any further notice."

With this quotation from the Monthly Review, in addition to the contemporary evidence above given, the author would have dis-missed the pretended Book of Jasher, had it not come to his knowledge that very many individuals have been induced to purchase the reprint of this forgery, executed at Bristol in 1829! (9 b.) of which an account is given in pages 65, 66. infra, under the idea of its being the genuine long lost Book of Jasher. In the hope of preventing future unwary purchasers from being similarly misled, he now subjoins a few specimens of the falsehoods, anachronisms, and contradictions of the Holy Scriptures, which characterize this nocturnal production of the non-sane infidel author, Jacob Ilive. cimens of the falsehoods, anachronisms,

 The assertion in the title page that Alcuin of Britain "went a pilgrimage into the Holy Land" is contrary to historical fact.
Alcuin neither visited the Holy Land nor travelled into Persia.
He was born in Yorkshire about the middle of the eighth century, and was educated at York, where probably he embraced the monastic profession. It is not known what preferements he held before he left England; though some accounts state that he was a deacon of the church at York, and others, that he was abbot of Canterbury. His earlier years were wholly spent in England; and having been sent on an embassy from Offa king of Mercia and having been sent on an embassy from Offa king of Mercia to the emperor Charlemagne (who formed so high an opinion of his acquirements and character as to become his pupil), he was induced, by the emperor's entreaties, to settle in France. In that country, accordingly, with the exception of one short visit to England, he spent the remainder (the chief part) of his life, having rendered essential services to the cause of religion and learning, and there he died, a. b. 804, in the abbey of Saint Martin at Tours, without ever quitting Europe. (Cave, Scriptorum Ecclesiasticorum Historia Literaria, pp. 420, 421. Colonie, 1720. Chalmers's Biographical Dictionary, article Alcuin.)

2. All the genuine writings of Alcuin are printed in Latin, as well as some doubtful and spurious pieces which have been ascribed to him.² If he had composed any treatise in any other language.

If he had composed any treatise in any other language, to him. If he had composed my treatise in any other ranguage, it would doubtless have been written in the then vernacular language of England, that is, the Anglo-Saxon; fragments of which language have come down to our time in some portions of the Anglo-Saxon version of the Scriptures, executed in the eighth century. Whereas the whole of this pretended Book of Jasher is in MODERN ENGLISH, and not a few passages of it are verbatim the same as our present authorized English version of the Bible, which was first published in 1611, only eight hundred and seven years after Alcuin's death; and what is not copied from our English Bible, is a lame and studied imitation of its from our English Bible, is a lame and studied imitation of its style and diction, both to conceal the fraud and to allure readers.

3. In "the translator's preface" (p. iv.) Alcuin is made to say,—"I took unto me two companions, who learned with me in the University of Oxford all those languages which the people of the East speak." But the University of Oxford, according to the earliest date which has been stated by its historians, was not founded by king Alfred before the year 886, that is to say, only eighty-two years AFTER Alcuin's decase!

4. "The Words of Alcuin, which are read before the Book of Jasher," are further convicted of falsehood by the anachronisms they contain.

they contain.

ley contain.

J In p. v. mention is made of "the paper on which it is wrote" only three hundred years before the art of making cotton-paper was introduced into Europe (the use of which did not become general until the thirteenth century), and considerably more than three hundred years before paper made from linen rags

[ii.] In p. vi. he mentions stationers upwards of four centuries before bookselling was known. Stationers were not heard of, in Europe, before the middle of the thirteenth century. (Ducange, Glossarium, voce Stationarii, vol. vi. col. 716.) And the Company of Stationers, who were the first booksellers in London and the property of t Company of Stationers, who were the first booksellers in London, was not incorporated until May, 1557, in the third and fourth year of the reign of Philip and Mary; that is, only seven hundred and fifty-three years After Alcuin's death.

5. The book itself is replete with falsehoods, and with contradictions of the Pentateuch and the Book of Joshua. The restricted limits necessarily alloted to this article will only allow the specification of a few resembles.

fication of a few examples.

The books of Moses and of Joshua are contradicted by Jasher.

GEN. xxii. 2. 11—13. And He [God] said, Take now thy son, thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, and get thee into the land of Moriah; and offer him there

1 In a prospectus for a second edition of the reprint above alluded to, which was circulated in London in 1833, it is stated that "the first edition has been honoured with the autographs of NEARLY ONE THOUSAND of the most literary characters as subscribers; among whom are many PRELATES and other DIGNITARIES, as well as most of the public Establishments of the country."

1 The best and most complete collection of Alcuin's works was published at Ratishon, in 1777, in two large volumes, folio: it was edited by M. Frobenius (or Froben), abbot of Saint Emmeran, near that city, who has carefully distinguished the doubtful and spurious pieces from Alcuin's genuine writings, all of which are in Latin. It is, perhaps, scarcely necessary to state, that there is not a single word or allusion to the Book of Jasher, as being translated by him.

Lord called unto him [Abraham] out of heaven.... And he said, Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou any thing unto him.... And Abraham lifted up his eyes, and looked, and, behold, behind him a ram caught in a thicket by his horns: and Abraham went and took the ram, and offered him up for a burnt-offering in the stead of his son.

Exod. ii. 1—5. relates the birth and exposure of Moses in an ark of bulrushes on the banks of the river Nile, and the discovery of him by Pharaoh's daughter.

5—8. And when she [Pharaoh's daughter] saw the ark among the flags, she sent her maid to fetch it. And when she had opened it, she saw the child: and, behold, the babe wept. And she had compassion on him, and said, This is one of the Hebrew's children. Then said his sister to Pharaoh's daughter, Shall I go and call to thee a nurse of the Hebrew women, that she may nurse the child for thee? Pharoah's daughter said unto her, Go. And the maid went and called the child's mother. And Pharaoh's daughter said, Take this child away, and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages. And the woman took the child, and nursed it.

Exod. i. 22. And Pharaoh charged all his people, saying, Every son that is born ye shall cast into the river.

Concerning the particular subjects of Moses' education the book of Exodus is silent.

Num. xxxii. 11, 12. Surely none of the men that came up out of Egypt, from twenty years old and upwards, shall see the land which I sware unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob because they have not wholly followed me; save Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenezite, and Joshua the son of Nun.

Josh. ii. relates the mission of the two men whom Joshua sent to explore the land of Canaan, and who "went and came into a harlot's house, named Rahab, and lodged there;" together with their covenant with her, who was a Canaanitess.

Josh. iii. 14—16. It came to pass As they that bare the ark were come unto Jordan, and the feet of the priests that bare the ark were dipped in the brim of the water, (for Jordan over-floweth all his banks all the time of harvest), that the waters which came down from above stood, and rose up upon a heap, very far from the city Adam, that is side Zaretan: and those that came down towards the sea of the plain, even the salt sea, failwere cut off; and the people passed over right against Jericho.

Josh. vi. 17. 20, 21. 24, 25. And the city shall be accursed, even it, and all that are therein, to the If, and an that we have the LORD. . . The people went up into the city, every man straight before him, and they took the city. And they atterly destroyed all that was in the city, both man and woman, young and old, and in the land wherein he was born. And Sarah spake unto Abraham and said, The holy voice hath not so spoken: for remember thou the words of that voice which said unto thee, I will make of thee a great nation. And Abraham re-pented him of the evil he purposed to do unto his son: only son Isaac.

And Jochebed the v. 9-12. mother of Moses, with Miriam his sister, came unto Pharaoh's daughter: and Jochebed said, Behold here the son of thy hand-maid! And Pharaoh's daughter said, What wist ye? And they said, Thy father hath commanded that this infant be slain: yea, and that all the Hebrew males as soon as they are born be slain also. And Pharaoh's daughter said, Give unto me the child. And they did so. And she said, This shall be my son.

iii. 13. And it came to pass, that the wrath of Pharaoh was turned away from slaying the males of the Hebrews.

iii. 14. And the child Moses grew and increased in stature: and was learned in all the magic of the Egyptians.

xxxv. 3, 4. It is affirmed that, after the death of Moses, Joshua, and Caleb, the people were without a leader, and that Phinehas and the elders of Israel " named Jasher the son of Caleb by Azuba, seeing he is an upright man. And moreover this we know. that he hath seen all the wonders wrought in Egypt, in the wilderness: even all the mighty works that have been done."

xxvii. 8. Rahab is styled "one the princesses of Jericho;" of the princesses of Jericho; and in v. 8. she is represented as saying, "I also am the daughter of an Israelite by a woman of Midian."

xxviii. 10. And the wood whereon the children of Israel passed over Jordan stayed upon the face of the waters six days and six nights.

xxviii. 15, 16, 18. Then Rahab sent unto Joshua, saying, Let me entreat with thee for my nation that they may live. And Joshua answered and said, As many as save themselves by flight may live: but whosoever shall be found in Jericho shall surely die the death... And the people of

Jericho fled from the city, every | The editor of 1829 proceeds to state that, "Since 1751" [the reader ox, and sheep, and ass, with the edge of the sword. . . . And they burnt the city with fire, and all that was therein... And Joshua saved Rahab the harlot alive, and her father's household, and all that she had.

Josh. vii. relates the circum-stances of Achan's secreting a Babylonish garment, two hun-dred shekels of silver, and a wedge of gold of fifty shekels' weight, contrary to the divine command: for which crime he and all he had were destroyed in the valley of Achor.

Hive's forgery was published in 1751 for two shillings and six-pence. For the publication (9 b.) printed at Bristol, in 1829, the modest charge of TEN SHILLINGS was originally made, which was subsequently increased to one pound sterling. Of this publication the author is now to give some account.

Though published apparently for the first time in 1829, there is every reason for concluding that this is an unacknowledged reprint of Ilive's forgery, with some unimportant variations (which will be pointed out in the course of the present article), and for the following reasons :

1. The TITLE-PAGE, with the exception of the few sentences printed in italics in page 63, is the same as in Ilive's forgery. The two titles are there printed in columns, in order that the reader may the more readily compare them: he will observe that the editor of the Bristol publication in 1829 expressly says that the pseudo-book of Jasher is "Translated into English from the Hebrew." In his proposal for a new edition, already alluded to, brew." In his proposal for a new edition, already alluded to, this is altered into—"Translated into Anglo-Saxon from the Hebrew!" Query, by whom was this pretended Anglo-Saxon version translated into modern English!

The "Advertisement," if not colourably altered, is evidently taken from Ilive's preliminary letter to a nameless earl; as will be evident to any one who compares the following extracts.

9 a. The Book of Jasher. 1751. 9 b. The Book of Jasher. 1829.

"To the Right Honourable the Earl of * " My Lord, The following trans-ation of the Book of Jasher fell lation of tation of the Book of Jasher Jett into my hands thirty years ago" [that is, in 1721] "by mere acci-dent. I was travelling in the North of England, to see the country." Here then proceeds to give a false account of his purchasing the manuscript at an auction of "the goods and books of an old gentleman lately deceased, who was upwards of one hundred years of age.

"Among the papers" (Ilive continues), following translation of the Book following translation of the Book of Jasher, which I last summer communicated to your lordship on a rumour of a new translation of the Bible. I own that till then tilly by me quite unregarded. Your lordship, upon perusal, was pleased to approve of it, and to advise its publication as a work OF GREAT SINCERITY, PLAINNESS, AND TRUTH. Your lordship's remark I must not omit, 'That it was your opinion the Book of Jasher ought to have been printed in the Bible before that of Jo-shua.'"

"BY A WRITING ON THE OUT-SIDE OF THE MANUSCRIPT IT SHOULD SEEM THAT THIS TRANS-LATION WAS LAID BEFORE OUR FIRST REFORMERS, BECAUSE IT SAYS: 'I HAVE READ THE BOOK OF JASHER TWICE OVER, AND I MUCH APPROVE OF IT, AS A PIECE OF GREAT ANTIQUITY AND CU-RIOSITY, BUT I CANNOT ASSERT THAT IT SHOULD BE MADE A PART OF THE CANON OF SCRIP-TURE. " Signed

'WICKLIFFE.' "I am your lordship's most humble and obedient ser-vant, the Editor."

The following translation of "The Book of Jasher" was discovered by a gentleman in a journey through the North of England in 1721.

"It lay by him for several years, until, in 1750, there was a rumour of a new translation of the Bible, when he laid it before a noble earl. On perusal he highly approved of it, AS A WORK OF GREAT SINCERITY, PLAINNESS, AND TRUTH. His lordship's opinion was that it should have been placed in the Bible before the Book of Joshua."

He further adds :-

"BY A WRITING ON THE OUT-SIDE OF THE MANUSCRIPT IT SHOULD SEEM THAT THIS TRANS-LATION WAS LAID BEFORE OUR FIRST REFORMERS, BECAUSE IT SAYS: 'I HAVE READ THE BOOK OF JASHER TWICE OVER; AND I MUCH APPROVE OF IT, AS A PIECE OF GREAT ANTIQUITY AND CU-RIOSITY, BUT I CANNOT ASSETT, THAT IT SHOULD BE MADE PART OF THE CANON OF SCRIP-TURE. "Signed 'WICKLIFFE.'"

xxviii. 20—25. Achan is represented as charging Joshua with having "taken from the one to the mountains.

congregation all the gold, all the silver, and all the brass: even all the spoils of the city of Jeri-cho, and given it to the tribe of Levi." For which crime he ALONE was stoned.

"the manuscript! has been preserved with great care by a gentle-man, who lived to a very advanced age, and died some time since. On the event of his death, a friend to whom he had presented it gave it to the present editor, who, conceiving that so valuable a piece of antiquity should not be lost to men of literature, and biblical students, has committed it to the press, not doubting but that the attention of the learned will be attracted to so singular a volume." The editor of 1829 further adds, that "he cannot assert any thing from his own knowledge beyond Alcuin's account, but that carries with it such an air of probability and truth, that he does not doubt its authenticity."—"Nothing" (he affirms in his "Preliminary Dissertation on the Antiquity and Authenticity of the Book of Jasher") "can be produced to invalidate this authentic statement, and consequently it merits our credence.' Again, "As a book of record, it appears to have truth, without mixture of error, for its peculiar object and design." (p. vi.) And in the concluding paragraph of his "Testimonies and Notes concerning the Book of Jasher" (p. 9. col. 2.), he expresses himself in the following terms:—"Thus, then, it appears that, as far as such a work can be authenticated, this possesses every proof of heaving temperature. being a transcript of the original manuscript; and, consequently, that it is worthy to be preserved as a collateral evidence of the facts detailed more fully in the writings of Moses, the Book of Joshua, and the Book of Judges." A reference to the positive historical evidence of Mr. Rowe-Mores above given, and also to the internal evidence furnished by the anachronisms, falsehoods, Magazine, for June, 1831 (vol. xi. pp. 426-429.), there is an able exposure of this edition of 1829, containing five or six instances of falsehoods and contradictions, different from those above given in pages 64, 65., to which we refer the reader who may be desirous of further evidence, and also to the British Critic for Jawill bear in mind that this is the identical date of llive's forgery] strous of Interfer evidence, and also to the British Crine for January, 1834, pp. 127—153.

"Some account of this volume" (says the editor of 1829) "may be found in Alcuin's works, published in one volume, fol. in the year 1600, in Paris." Now, what is the fact? The first edition of Alcuin's collected works was published at Paris by André Duchesne (Andreas Quercetanus) only seventeen years After the date assigned by the Bristol editor, viz. in 1617, in three parts, forming one volume, folio; and in this collection of Alcuin's works No Book of Jasher is to be found. As Duchesne's editio princeps is not of very common occurrence, the reader, who may be desirous of seeing a list of the pieces actually written by Alcuin, is referred to Dupin's Bibliothèque des Auteurs Ecclé-siastiques, tom. vi. pp. 120—123. 4to. 1692, and to Dr. Cave's His-toria Literaria, pp. 420, 421.; each of whom has given a catalogue of Alcuin's works from Duchesne's edition, and they are both totally silent concerning the pretended Book of Jasher.

3. Although the concluding paragraph of "the Translator's Preface" in the edition of 1751 is omitted in the reprint of 1829, the editor of the latter must have been acquainted with it, as the subjoined verbal coincidences are too minute and specific to be merely accidental.

(9 a.) ILIVE'S BOOK OF JASHER, 1751. (p. vi.)

"Some years after my arrival I related this adventure to several, and showed them the work, who advised me not to suffer a copy of it to fall into the hands of the stationers,2 lest I should incur the displeasure of the purple. Being now GROWN OLD and infirm, I have LEFT IT among OTHER papers TO A CLERGYMAN IN YORKSHIRE."

(9 b.) BOOK OF JASHER, 1829. (p. v.) "It appears he" [Jasher] "never made it public, beyond the circle of his friends, and when GROWN

OLD he LEFT IT, with his OTHER manuscripts, TO A friend, a PRIEST

IN YORKSHIRE."

4. The "Various Readings," which follow "the words of Alcuin," are verbatim the same in both publications, except that, in the Bristol edition of 1829, "desart"—the supposed various reading

In chap, xii. 18.—is printed desert.

The pseudo-book of Jasher itself is next in order; and it concides with Ilive's fabrication printed in 1751, with most marvellous exactness, both as to certain GRAMMATICAL BLUNDERS, and also as to the MATTER which the two publications severally contain

[i.] GRAMMATICAL BLUNDERS.
In the title-pages of both publications we have, "To which IS prefixed Various Readings," for are prefixed. Compare page 63. supra.

1 In the prospectus of 1833, above referred to, for "manuscript" the word "copy" is substituted—a general term, which is equally applicable to printed matter as to manuscript. The editor of the Bristol reprint never exhibited his pretended manuscript to the critical examination of the learned.

² On the anachronism in this word, see the remrak 4. [ii.] in page 64.

In Jasher, chap. vii. 7. we read, "Thus hath said our fathers," for have said; xiv. 11. "Thou judgeth the people," for thou judgest; xvii. 15. "Whom thou knoweth not," for knowest not, and in the margin, "Whom thou dorn not worship," for dost not; and in xxxvi. 11. "Thou harn spoken," for Thou hast spoken.

[ii.] WITH REGARD TO THE CONTENTS.

The Book of Jasher in Ilive's forgery of 1751 fills exactly sixty pages; in the Bristol edition of 1829 it makes sixty-Two pages and a HALF, the excess being caused by the addition between brackets of seventeen verses from Gen. xxii. 3—20. in ch. iii., and of twenty-eight verses in ch. xi. from Exod. xiv. 23—31. and xv. 1—19. of our authorized version. Except as occasionally affected by these additions, the same quantity of matter is comprised in each column, the summaries of chapters, and the head lines or summaries at the top of each page, the pretended chronology, marginal readings, and punctuation are all PRECISELY THE SAME, the spelling only of a very few words being modernized, as ether for ather, encrease and encreased for increase and increased; and in the "Testimonies and Notes," Phinehas for Phineas.

The following are the only additional material variations between the two publications, which, after a careful collation, the author has been able to detect.

(9 a.) ILIVE'S BOOK OF JASHER, 1751.

(9 b.) BOOK OF JASHER, 1829.

Ch. i. 17. Cain conceived and bare

Ch. i. 17. Cain begat Enoch

Enoch 20. Seth conceived and bare Enos

20. Seth begat Enos ii. 1. Lamech begat Noah

ii. 1. Lamech conceived and bare Noah v. 9. уе жхііі. 8. doeтн

v. 9. you. xxiii. 8. doest. 13. or

13. nor xxxv. 28. Debora xxxvi.11. thou commandeth xxxv. 28. Deborah xxxvi. 11. thou commandest.

The variations in the edition of 1829 are such as might be made by any careful compositor, and cannot (we conceive) in any degree affect the identity of the two publications.

arect the identity of the two publications.

6. The "Testimonies and Notes" appended to both publications are for the most part the same, and profess to bear the names of Hur, Phinehas, Othniel, Jazer, Jezer, Zadock, and Tobias. On the miraculous passage of the Israelites over the Red Sea, the editor of the Bristol impression of the Book of Jasher has inserted a note, chiefly taken from Dr. Hales's Analysis of Chronology, vindicating that miracle against the skeptical objections of Michaelis. The notes on ch. i. of live's edition in 1751 are omitted; as also not the two coefficients of the virtual coefficients of the virtual coefficients of the virtual coefficients. are the two concluding notes on ch. xviii., and the whole of those are the two concluding notes on ch. xviii., and the whole of those on ch. xix. and following to the end: in which "chapters," says the editor of 1829, "nothing occurs but what fully accords with the statements of Moses." (Testimonies, p. 9.) If, however, the reader will turn back to p. 64., he will find only five passages which no directly CONTRADICT "the statements of Moses," besides four more in pages 64, 65., which equally contradict the book of Joshua. The result, then, of the preceding examination is, that the pretended Book of Jasher is a gross and shameless LITERARY FORGERY, which has no claim whatever to "credence," and which is utterly destitute of authenticity.

Respecting the Book of Jasher mentioned in Josh. x. 13. and 2 Sam. i. 18., see Vol. I. p. 57, and Vol. II. p. 216. There is also There is also extant a rabbinical-Hebrew Book of Jasher printed at Venice in 1625, which is an explanation of the histories comprised in the Pentateuch and Book of Joshua. Bartolocci, in his Bibliotheca Rabbinica, states that it contains some curious but many fabulous things; and particularly, that this book was discovered at the time of the destruction of the temple at Jerusalem in a certain place, in which an old man was shut up, in whose possession a great number of Hebrew books were found, and among them the Book number of receive books were found, and among them the Book of Jasher; which was first carried into Spain, and preserved at Seville, whence finally it was taken to Naples, where it was first published. (Vol. iii. p. 934.) Bartolocci also mentions (in p. 868.) a treatise on the Jewish Laws, composed by rabbi Tham, and called Sepher Jasher, or the Book of Jasher, which was printed at Cracow in 1617

10. Codex Pseudepigraphus Veteris Testamenti, collectus, castigatus, Testimoniisque, Censuris, et Animadversionibus, illustratus. Accedit Josephi veteris Christiani scriptoris Hypomnesticon: cum versione ac notis Johannis Alberti FABRICII. Hamburgi et Lipsiæ, 1713-23, 2 vols. in 3 tomis, 8vo. Editio secunda, Hamburgi, 1741, 2 tomis, 8vo.

Besides the books commonly termed apocryphal, which have been deservedly rejected from the canon of Scripture, there are numerous spurious productions extant, the earliest of which (the pretended Book of Enoch) could not have been written till shortly before the commencement of the Christian æra; but by far the greatest part of them were forged between the second and fourth centuries. The industrious bibliographer, John Albert Fabricius, collected fragments and notices of all (or nearly all) these productions, which he has discussed in the two hundred and forty chapters of which his Codex Pseudepigraphus Veteris Testamenti consists. The bare enumeration of these forgeries would extend this article to an undue length: but there are three apocryphal productions, bearing the names of Enoch, Isaiah, and Ezra, which have been rescued from utter oblivion by the Rev. Dr. Laurence (now Archbishop of Cashel), and which are of sufficient importance to claim a distinct

11. The Book of Enoch the Prophet: an Apocryphal Production supposed to have been lost for ages; but discovered at the close of the last century in Abyssinia, now first translated from an Ethiopic MS. in the Bodleian Library. By Richard LAU-RENCE, LL.D. Archbishop of Cashel. Oxford, 1821. Second edition, corrected and enlarged, 1833. 8vo.

The Apocryphal Book of Enoch, in the last and preceding century, proved a prolific subject for critical speculation and theological discussion. The circumstance of its having been quoted by an inspired writer of the New Testament, augmented the despair of recovering a supposed treasure which had been long lost. It was recovering a supposed treasure which had been long lost. It was known until the eighth century of the Christian æra, after which it seems to have sunk into complete oblivion. A considerable fragment of it, however, was discovered by Julius Cæsar Scaliger, in the Chronographia of Georgius Syncelius; a work which had not then been printed. He extracted the whole of this fragment, which he published in his notes to the Chronicle of Eusebius. Still, however, as it did not contain the pressure quoted by St. Indo. he published in his notes to the Chronicle of Eusebius. Still, however, as it did not contain the passage quoted by St. Jude, doubts were entertained, whether the apostle really referred to the same production as was cited by Syncellus, or derived his information respecting the prophecy of Enoch from some other source. Since the discovery of Scaliger, much has been written, but very little if any additional information has been obtained upon this subject. The fullest account of the opinions entertained by the Fathers, and the quatstions which they made from this celebrated. Fathers, and the quotations which they made from this celebrated apocryphal production, before it was lost, as well as what has since been conjectured respecting it by modern critics, are to be found in the Codex Pseudepigraphus of Fabricius, above mentioned, who has also printed at length the Greek fragment of it preserved by Syncellus. But though the Greek copy of this book (itself perhaps nothing more than a mere translation from some Hebrew or Chaldee original) seems to have been irretrievably lost, yet an idea prevailed, so early as the commencement of the seventeenth century, that an Ethiopic version of it still existed in Abyssinia. Finally, researches were made for it by the distinguished Ethiopic scholar Ludolph; and every idea that the book was extant in an Ethiopic version was altogether abandoned from that time until towards the close of the last century, when our enterprising countryman, Mr. Bruce, not only proved its existence, but brought with him from Abyssinia three manuscript copies of it, one of which he presented to the Library at Paris, another to the Bodleian Library at Oxford, and the third he reserved for himself. From the Bodleian MS. Archbp. Laurence has made his translation, to which he has prefixed an elaborate preliminary dissertation on the history, &c. of this apocryphal production, to which we are principally indebted for the present outline of its contents. The subject of the apocryphal Book of Enoch is, a series of visions respecting the fallen angels, their posterity, the giants which occasioned the deluge, the mysteries of heaven, the place of the final judgment of men and angels, and various parts of the universe seen by Enoch. The language is the purest Ethiopic, and its style is evidently copied after that of the book of Daniel. In an appendix, Dr. Laurence has printed a Latin version of many chapters, executed by the learned version was altogether abandoned from that time until towards the Baron Sylvestre de Sacy from the Paris manuscript. Dr. L. also announces that Professor Gesenius of Halle has it in contemplation to publish a transcript of the Parisian copy, accompanied with a Latin translation.

Although neither the Jewish nor the Christian church ever admitted the Book of Enoch into the canon, it was regarded by a learned but in some respects fanciful writer of the second century, Tertullian,⁵ both as an inspired composition, and also as the genuine production of him whose name it bears; but his opinion is conthe production of filli whose hance it bears, but his opinion tradicted by the uniform judgment of the Jewish and of the Christian church (the Abyssinian church alone excepted), among whose canonical books it was never enumerated. Dr. Laurence has tian church (the Abyssinian church alone excepted), among whose canonical books it was never enumerated. Dr. Laurence has proved, by internal evidence, that the production in question was the composition of some unknown Jew, under the borrowed name of Enoch; that it must have originally been extant in Hebrew, though such original is now lost; and he has further argued that it was written before the rise of Christianity, by a Jew, who did not reside in Palestine, and most probably at an early period of Herod's reign, about ninety-six (perhaps one hundred) years before the epistle of Jude was written. But the learned prelate's arguments have been controverted at great length in a critique in the Christian Observer (vol. xxx. pp. 417—426. 496—503.), the author of which has, from internal evidence, which does not admit of abridgment, shown that this apocryphal book was not and could not have been written earlier than the middle of the second century of the Christian æra. The additions in the second impression consist, 1. of Greek Extracts (accompanied with a Latin version) from the Book of Enoch given by Syncellus in his Chronographia, and 2. of a Synopsis of the contents of the work.

12. Ascensio Isaiæ Vatis, Opusculum Pseudepigraphum, multis abhine seculis, ut videtur, deperditum, nunc autem apud Æthiopas compertum, et cum versione Latina Anglicanaque publici juris factum. A Ricardo Laurence, LL.D. Hebraicæ Linguæ Professore Regio, &c. Oxonii et Londini, 1819, 8vo.

This volume contains a pretended history of the prophet Isaiah's ascension through the firmament and six heavens into the seventh together with some pseudo-prophecies, and a relation of the prophet's martyrdom. With a view to ascertain the date of this composition, as no satisfactory external evidence is furnished by the early writers who have incidently mentioned it, Dr. Laurence has instituted a minute investigation of the internal testimony, furnished by the production itself. The result of this examination, which is conducted with singular acuteness and felicity, is that the ascension of Isaiah must have been composed towards the close of the year 68 or in the beginning of the year 69. From the circumstance of an anonymous author having used in the Ethiopic the unusual Greek word strucks for the roof of a house, while in the Hebrew and in all the versions the word signifies, a net (that is, a lattice placed in the flat roof to light the apartment beneath, see 2 Kings i. 2.)—the learned editor concludes that this production must have been written in Greek. It appears, however, that this Greek word was in use in Egypt in the second century, whence in all probability it crept into the Ethiopic language about that period. A Jew writing in Greek would have used that word which his own Scriptures and the Septuagint had previously adopted in 2 Kings i. 2. A translator would have used the first term that suggested itself. From the prevalence of the oriental orthography of particular words, us well as from the Hebrew Scriptures being quoted instead of the Greek version in a passage where they differ, it seems more probable that the Ascensio Isaiæ was originally written in Hebrew, the native tongue of the writer. (See Antijacobin Review for July, 1819, vol. lvi. pp. 430, 431.)

13. Primi Ezræ Libri, qui apud Vulgatam appellatur quartus, Versio Æthiopica, nunc primum in medio prolata, et Latine Angliceque reddita a Ricardo LAURENCE, LL.D. &c. &c. Oxoniæ, 1820, 8vo.

The first book of Ezra or Esdras, as it is termed in the Ethiopic Version, forms the second book of Esdras in the Apocrypha usually amnexed to the larger editions of the English Bibles. A notice of its contents will be found in Vol. II. Part V. pp. 289, 290. Dr. (now Archbishop) Laurence has the honour of being the first editor of the Ethiopic Version. The Latin Version, which accompanies it, is partly original, and in part taken from the Latin Vulgate, where this could be employed. To the Ethiopic Version are subjoined a collation of it with the Latin Vulgate, and a new English translation: the volume terminates with an elaborate critical disquisition on the author of this book, the time when he probably lived, the character and value of the Ethiopic, Arabic, and Latin Versions, and the use to be made of the book in a theological point of view.

SECTION II.

APOCRYPHAL BOOKS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

- 1. Codex Apocryphus Novi Testamenti, collectus, castigatus, testimoniisque, censuris, et animadversionibus illustratus, à Joanne Alberto Fabricio. Partes I. et II. Hamburgi, 1703, 2 vols. 8vo.; 1719, 2 vols. 8vo. Pars III. Hamburgi, 1743, 8vo.
- A curious collection of Apocryphal pieces, which is not very often to be met with complete. The learned Mr. Jones made great use of it, and, in fact, translated the greater part of it in his elaborate work on the Canons of the New Testament, which is noticed in page 68, of this Appendix.
- 2. Auctarium Codicis Apocryphi N. T. Fabriciani, continens plura inedita, alia ad fidem cod. MSS. emendatius expressa. Congessit, disposuit, edidit, Andreas Birch. Fasciculus primus. Havniæ. 1804. 8vo.
- 3. Acta S. Thomæ Apostoli. Ex Codd. Paris. primum edidit, et adnotationibus illustravit J. C. Thilo. Lipsie, 1823, 8vo.
- 4. Codex Apocryphus Novi Testamenti e Libris editis et manuscriptis. maxime Gallicanis, Germanicis, et Italicis, collectus, recensitus, notisque et prolegomenis illustratus, operâ et studio Joannis Caroli Thilo. Tomus I. Lipsiæ, 1832, 8vo.

This work, when finished, will be the most complete collection of the Apocryphal Books of the New Testament. The very copious prolegomena, which are prefixed to the first volume, treat on the collections, editions, and versions of the Apocryphal Gospels. These are succeeded by the History of Joseph the Carpenter, in Arabic and Latin, the Gospel of the Saviour's Infancy, also in Arabic and Latin; the Protevangelion of James, and the Gospel of Thomas the Israelite, in Greek and Latin; the Gospel of the nativity of Mary, and the History of the nativity of Mary and of the Saviour in Latin; the Gospel of Marcion, collected by Dr. Augustus Hahn, from ancient documents, in Greek; the Gospel of Nicodemus, in Greek and Latin; a narrative of the apprehension and death of Pilate, in Greek; a collation of the manuscript of the mutilated and altered Gospel of John (which is preserved in the archives of the Templars of St. John of Jerusalem at Paris), with Griesbach's Text. So numerous are the alterations, &c. in this Gospel, that Dr. Thilo considers it altogether as an apocryphal writing, and has therefore given it a place in his collection of the Apocryphal Books of the New Testament. The volume closes with an Apocryphal Books of the Apostle John, in Latin, which abounds with Gnostic notions; various readings and notes are placed, throughout, at the foot of each page: and, besides the general prolegomena, there is much curious prefatory matter relative to several of the pieces here printed. Dr. Thilo has discharged his arduous duties as editor with equal industry and ability.

5. The Apocryphal New Testament: being all the Gospels, Epistles, and other pieces now extant, attributed in the first four centuries to Jesus Christ, his Apostles, and their Companions, and not included in the New Testament by its Compilers. Translated and collected into one volume, with Prefaces and Tables, and various Notes and References. [By William Hone.] London, 1820, 8vo. 1821, Second Edition, 8vo.

See an Analysis of this publication, with remarks, in Vol. I. Appendix, No. I. Sect. II. p. 437. et seq.

PART II.

SACRED PHILOLOGY;

OR, THE CRITICISM AND INTERPRETATION OF THE SCRIPTURES.

CHAPTER I.

TREATISES ON THE CANON OF SCRIPTURE, AND ON APOCRYPHAL BOOKS.

1. A SCHOLASTICAL HISTORY of the Canon of the Holy Scripture: or the certain and indubitable Books thereof, as they are received in the Church of England. By John Cosin, D.D. Bishop of Durham. London, 1657, 4to. Second Edit. 1672, 4to.

2. Dissertation Préliminaire, ou Prolégomènes sur la Bible. Par Louis Ellies du Pin. Amsterdam, 1701, 2 tomes, 4to.

2.* A Complete History of the Canon and Writers of the Books of the Old and New Testament. By L. E. DU PIN. Done into English from the French original. London, 1699, 1700, 2 vols. folio.

3. Aug. Herm. Franckii Manuductio ad Lectionem Scripture Sacræ. Halæ, 1693, 1704, &c. 8vo.

This well-known and very useful little work was translated into English by Mr. Jacques, and entitled "A Guide to the Reading and Study of the Holy Scriptures." London, 1813, 8vo., afterwards reprinted in 12mo.

4. Traité Historique du Canon des Livres de la Saint Ecriture, depuis leur premier publication jusqu'au Concile du Trent. Par Jean Martianax. Paris, 1703, 12mo.

5. Bibliotheca Sacra: sive Diatribe de Librorum Novi Testamenti Canone. Qua primæ Sacrorum N. T. Librorum Collectionis Historiam ex antiquitatibus ecclesiasticis depromit, atque Canonem nunc vulgò receptum continere vetustissimam et genuinam illorum Recensionem ostendit, Johannes Ens. Amstelædami, 1710, 12mo.

6. Gerardi van Maestricht Commentatio de Canone Scripture ecclesiastico, secundum seriem seculorum post Christum natum. Breme, 1722, 8vo. Jene, 8vo.

7. A New and Full Method of settling the Canonical Authority of the New Testament. By the Rev. Jeremiah Jones. Oxford, 1798, 3 vols. 8vo.

ford, 1798, 3 vols. 8vo.

The first edition of this elaborate work appeared in 1726, two years after the death of its learned author (a dissenting minister), who died at the early age of 31. He had previously published "A Vindication of the former part of St. Matthew's Gospel, from Mr. Whiston's Charge of Dislocations;" in which he successfully proved that our present Greek copies of that Gospel are in the same order in which they were originally written by the evangelist. "In drawing up these works he took care to consult and examine the originals, instead of satisfying himself with the quotations of other learned men. They remain as monuments of his learning, ingenuity, and indefatigable industry, and would have done credit to the assiduity and ability of a literary man of sixty. They were become very scarce, and bore a high price, when, with the liberality and zeal which reflects honour on them, the conductors of the Clarendon Press republished them at Oxford. Mr. Jones, observes Dr. Maltby, has brought together, with uncommon diligence, the external evidence for the authenticity and genuineness of the canonical books, and he has, with equal ability and fairness, stated his reasons for deciding against the authority of the apocryphal." (Chalmers's Biographical Dictionary, vol. xix. p. 95.)

8. The Credibility of the Gospel History; or, the Facts occasionally mentioned in the New Testament, confirmed by Passages of Ancient Authors, who were contemporary with our Saviour, or his Apostles, or lived near their time. By Nathaniel Lardner, D.D. London, Part I. 1727, 2 vols. 8vo. Part II. 1733—1755, 12 vols. 8vo. Also in the 8vo. Edition of his Collective Works, vols. 1 to 5: and in vols. 1 and 2 of the 4to. Edition.

The publication of Dr. Lardner's Credibility was received with every mark of respect and gratitude, both by members of the Church of England and dissenters, and its reputation gradually extended into foreign countries. How deeply the present work is indebted to his laborious and accurate investigations our multiplied references will amply attest. "It is indeed an invaluable performance, and hath rendered the most essential service to the cause of Christianity. Whoever peruses this work will find it replete with admirable instruction, sound learning, and just and candid criticism." (Dr. Kippis's Life of Dr. Lardner, Works, vol. v. p. vi. 4to. edit.) The Abbé Labouderie, in his historical notice of father Colonia (see below) justly pronounces the Credibility to be a magnificent apology for Christianity, and a chef-d'œuvre of learning and criticism.

9. A Supplement to the Second Part of the Credibility of the Gospel History, containing a History of the Apostles and Evangelists, Writers of the New Testament, with Remarks and Observations upon every Book of the New Testament. By Nathaniel LARDMER, D.D. London, 1756, 1757, 3 vols. 8vo.

This history forms the sixth volume of the 8vo. (the third volume of the 4to.) edition of Dr. Lardner's Works, and also the second volume of Bishop Watson's Collection of Tracts; it "is an admirable introduction to the New Testament,"—and "a storehouse of literary information, collected with equal industry and fidelity." (Bishop Marsh.)

10. Horæ Paulinæ: or, the Truth of the Scripture History of St. Paul evinced by a comparison of the Epistles which bear his name with the Acts of the Apostles. By William Paler, D.D. London, 1790, 8vo. and numerous subsequent editions in 8vo. 12mo, and 18mo.

11. The Veracity of the Five Books of Moses argued from the undesigned coincidences to be found in them when compared in their several parts. By the Rev. J. J. Blust, B.D. London, 1830, 8vo.

12. The Veracity of the Historical Books of the Old Testament, from the conclusion of the Pentateuch to the opening of the Prophets, argued from the undesigned coincidences to be found in them, when compared in their several parts: being a continuation of the Argument for the Veracity of the Five Books of Moses. By the Rev. J. J. Blunt, B.D. London, 1832, 8vo.

13. The Veracity of the Gospels and Acts of the Apostles, argued from the undesigned coincidences to be found in them, when compared, 1. with each other, and, 2. with Josephus. By the Rev. J. J. Blunt, B.D. London, 1828, 8vo.

In each of these three works Mr. Blunt has, with singular ability, newly applied and illustrated the principle laid down by Dr. Paley, in his masterly treatise entitled "Horæ Paulinæ." The ingenuity of many of Mr. B.'s sections might stand in competition with any of his predecessor's master-piece; and the clearness and liveliness of the language are such, that his works cannot be too earnestly recommended to biblical students.

14. La Religion Chrétienne, autorisée par le Témoignage des Anciens Auteurs Païens. Par le père Dominique de COLONIA. Lyon, 1718, 2 tomes, 12mo.—Seconde Edition, revue et précédée d'une Notice Historique par M. l'Abbé Labouderie. Paris, 1826, 8vo.

This treatise, though published nine years before Dr. Lardner commenced his admirable work on the Credibility of the Gospel History, does not appear to have been known to him. The subjects discussed by Colonia are comprised in the third volume of the octavo edition of Dr. Lardner's works, from page 594 to the end, and in the fourth volume, from page 3 to page 430 of the quarto edition published at London in 1815. Father Colonia has collected together numerous important facts, which he has illustrated with many valuable remarks, though he has not always followed strict chronological order in the arrangement of his materials. His chapter on Mohammed is full of errors and ridiculous declamations. Notwithstanding all its defects, his work may be read with pleasure, even after a perusal of Dr. Lardner's volumes on the Credibility of the Gospel History; the whole of which the Abbé Labouderie has announced his intention of translating into French.

- 15. Historia Canonis Sacrique Textûs Novi Fœderis, a Joanne Millio in Prolegomenis ad Novum Testamentum tradita, cum Adnotationibus Danielis Salthenii. Regiomonti, 1733, 8vo.
- 16. Ferdinandi Stosch Tractatus Theologicus de Epistolis Apostolorum Idiographis; quo Apostolis, non per Amanuenses, sed sua manû Epistolas suas scripsisse, luculenter demonstratur. Guelpherbyti, 1751, 8vo.
- 17. Ferdinandi STOSCH ΑΠΟΣΤΟΛΙΚΟΝ ΟΛΟΚΛΗΡΟΝ; hoc est, Tractatus Theologicus de Epistolis Apostolorum non deperditis; quo nullam ex Epistolis ab Apostolis Jesu Christi exaratis periisse demonstratur. Groningæ, 1753, 8vo.
- 18. Eberhardi Henrici Danielis Stosch Commentatio Historico-Critica de Librorum Novi Testamenti Canone. Præmissa est Dissertatio de Cura Veteris Ecclesiæ circa Libros Novi Testamenti. Francofurti ad Viadrum, 1755, 8vo.
- 19. Christiani Frederici Schmidii Historia Antiqua et Vindicatio Veteris Novique Testamenti, libris duobus comprehensi. Lipsiæ, 1775, 8vo.

An excellent treatise, in which the Canon of Scripture is most satisfactorily vindicated from the rash criticisms and assertions of Oeder, Semler, and other modern German theologians.

- 20. Observationes ad Illustrationem Doctrinæ de Canone Veteris Testamenti. Auctore Claudio Frees Hornemann. Hauniæ, 1775, 8vo.
- 21. Lectures on the Canon of the Old Testament; comprehending a Dissertation on the Septuagint Version. BLAIR, LL.D. London, 1785, 4to.
- 22. The Canon of the Old and New Testaments ascertained; or, the Bible complete without the Apocrypha and Unwritten Traditions. By Archibald ALEXANDER, Professor of Didactic and Polemical Theology, in the Theological Seminary at Princeton, New Jersey. Princeton, 1826, 12mo. London, 1828, 12mo.

Professor Alexander published this very useful volume on the Canon of Scripture, as a Supplement to a Treatise on the Evidences of the Christian Religion, which has been very favourably received in North America. His Treatise on the Canon is avowedly compiled from the previous labours of the most eminent critics, especially Bishop Cosins's Scholastical History of the Canon of the Old Testament, and the ample collections of the impartial and indefatigable Dr. Lardner and the learned Jeremiah Jones, whose works are noticed in the preceding page. The first part of Dr. Alexander's Treatise discusses the Canon of the Old Testament, in the second part Testament; in the second part are considered the Canon of the New Testament, and the reasons for which the Apocryphal books are deservedly rejected from the Sacred Canon. To divines and students (Sacred Canon). dents (especially in North America) who may not have access to numerous and more costly works, this treatise is a very useful and acceptable present. The London reprint is very neatly executed.

23. Censura Apocryphorum V. T. adversum Pontificios, imprimis Robertum Bellarminum: quâ, tum Divina et Canonica Sacræ Scripturæ Autoritas asseritur, solidissimæ tum variæ Quæstiones, &c. (imprimis quæ est de Duratione Monarchiæ Persicæ, et de 70 hebdomadis Danielis), expediuntur accuratissime; Prælectionibus 250 posthumis in Academia Oxoniensi tractata, a Johanne Rainoldo, Anglo, Academiæ Oxon. Prof. Theol. Oppenhemii, 1611, 2 vols. 4to.

This elaborate work is now rare. Dr. Rainoldes was termed by Anthony à Wood, the Oxford antiquary and biographer, "a living Intring a wood, the Catora antiquary and olographer, "a living library and a third university." He was one of the greatest Hebrew scholars of his age (if not the greatest); and it was at his instance that King James I. assented to the proposal of a new translation of the Bible. In the Hampton Court Conference, as well as in this work, Dr. R. strenuously opposed the reading of apocryphal lessons in the public service of the church.

- 24. WETSTENII (Joh. Rod.) Dissertatio Philologico-Theologica de Historia Susannæ. Basileæ, 1691, 4to.
- 25. Gottlieb Wernsdorffii Commentatio de Fide Historica Librorum Maccabæorum. Wratislaviæ, 1747, 4to.
- 26. De secundo Libro Maccabæorum Dissertatio. Scripsit C. Bertheau, Gottingæ, 1829, 8vo.
- 27. An Epistolary Discourse concerning the Books of Ezra, genuine and spurious: but more particularly the second apocryphal book under that name, and the Variations of the Arabic copy from the Latin. Together with a New Version of the Fifth Book of Esdras, &c. By Francis Lee, M.D. London, 1722, 8vo.
- 28. An Essay concerning the Books commonly called Apocrypha and the public Reading of them in the Church. London, 1740, 8vo.
- 29. A Statement submitted to the Members of the British and Foreign Bible Society, on the impropriety of circulating the Apocryphal Books indiscriminately intermingled with the Inspired Writings. By George Cornelius Gorham, B.D. London, 1825.

Though this tract was occasioned by a local controversy, the consideration of which does not fall within the design of this work, it is deserving of a place in the student's library, on account of the various and interesting information which it contains relative to the literary History of the Apocrypha. The second edition is the best.

30. Two Letters addressed to the Rev. G. C. Gorham on some points of his Statement on the Apocryphal Books, and on some of the alleged Doctrines of the Romish Church. By Leander van Ess, D.D. With a reply by G. C. GORHAM, B.D. London, 1826, 8vo.

These letters of Dr. van Ess were designed as a reply to the preceding publication: and his objections are answered by Mr. Gorham with singular ability, patience of research, and with a spirit of Christian candour, of which there unhappily are but few instances in controversial discussions. Mr. G. has clearly established the three following facts; viz. 1. That in the ancient form of the Bible, from the fourth century till the reformation, the Inspired and the Anogymbal Writings themselved the standard and the second of the secon Apocryphal Writings, though intermingled, were invariably distinguished from each other by the prefaces or notices of interpolation connected with each book. 2. That, subsequently to the Reforma-tion, a new form was introduced, and these Scripture barriers were removed: at first cautiously and rarely; then, after the decree of the council of Trent, more freely and frequently; and at last, under papal sanction, boldly and almost universally; and, 3. That this change of form was intended to advance the credit of the Apocryphal Books, and to obtain for them the estimation of inspired ings by removing these impediments to the acknowledgment of their canonicity.

31. An Inquiry into the Truth and Use of the Book of Enoch as to its Prophecies, Visions, and Accounts of Fallen Angels By John Overton. London, 1822, 8vo.

CHAPTER II.

INTRODUCTIONS TO THE STUDY OF THE SCRIPTURES.

SECTION I.

GENERAL INTRODUCTIONS TO THE ENTIRE BIBLE.

1. DISSERTATIONS, qui peuvent servir de Prolégomènes de la tothe Scriptures generally, and tothe History, Discipline, Customs, and Opinions of the Jews. Vol. II. comprises Prefaces to the servel'Ecriture Sainte, revues, corrigées, considerablement augmentées, et mises dans un ordre méthodique. Par Augustin CAL-MET. Paris, 1720, 3 tomes, 4to.

This publication contains the various Dissertations, prefixed by the learned father Calmet to the different books of Scripture, and published in his commentary, with numerous corrections and addi-tions. Eighteen new Dissertations have been added; and the whole has been arranged in a new and commodious order, in order to render these disquisitions what the author designed they should be,— Prolegomena to the Bible. Many important topics are here treated Prolegomena to the Bible. Many important topics are here treated at considerable length. Vol. I. contains the Dissertations relating real books of the Old Testament, both canonical and apocryphal. Vol. III. contains similar prefaces to the different books of the New Testament, and thirty-one Dissertations on various subjects.

Antiquities, Sacred and Profane: or a Collection of Critical Dissertations on the Old and New Testament, translated from the French of Dom Augustin Calmet, by N. TINDAL. Vol. London, 1727, 4to.

This work was never completed. It originally appeared in numbers, and comprises select dissertations on the Poetry and Music of

3. Introduzione alla Sacra Scrittura, che comprende le Prenozioni più importante relative ai Testi Originali e alle loro Versioni, del Professore G. Bernardo De-Rossi. Parma, 1817, 8vo.
4. Prolegomena in Scripturam Sacram. Auctore Car. Frid.

HOUBIGANT. Parisiis, 1746, 4to.

- 5. Sebaldi RAVII Exercitationes Philologicæ in C. F. Hubigantii Prolegomena in Scripturam Sacram. Lugduni Batavorum, 1785, 4to.
- "The principles of Houbigant, who carried his conjectures bebounds, have been very ably combatted" in this work. ond all (Bp. Marsh.)
- 6. Johannis Henrici Danielis Moldenhaweri Introductio in omnes Libros Canonicos, cum Veteris, tum Novi Fæderis, ut et eos qui Apocryphi dicuntur, cum Appendice, que tradit Acta Apostoli Pauli chronologice digesta, 8vo. Regiomonti, 1744.

Few treatises, professing to be Introductions to the Bible, are more useful than this work of Professor Moldenhawer's. Having briefly shown the canonical authority of the Bible, and noticed its various divisions, he treats of each book in its order, showing its author, time of writing, argument, scope, chronology, and division. He carefully points out those passages which are more particularly worthy of consideration, or more difficult; and under each book of the Old Testament he specifies the types and prophecies of Jesus Christ, and the citations from each book in the New Testament. The author has derived much assistance from the labours of Moldenhawer in the present volume of this work.

7. A Scripture Help, designed to assist in reading the Bible profitably, by the Rev. Edward BICKERSTETH. London, 1806, 12mo., and numerous subsequent editions in 12mo. and 8vo.

This work is professedly a practical introduction to the reading of the Scriptures. The sale of 30,000 copies of the large editions, and of more than 130,000 copies of the 12mo. and 18mo. abridgments, sufficiently attests the high estimation in which this manual is deservedly held. It has been translated and published in the French and modern Greek languages.

8. The Sacred Interpreter: or a Practical Introduction towards a beneficial reading and thorough understanding of the Holy Bible. By David COLLYER. 8vo. 2 vols. London, 1746. Carlisle, 2 vols, 8vo. 1796. Oxford, 1815, 2 vols, 8vo.

"The author of this work lived in the former part of the last century; it not only went through several editions in England, but in 1750 was translated into German. It is calculated for readers in general, and it is a good popular preparation for the study of the Holy Scriptures." (Bishop Marsh.)

9. A General Introduction to the Study of the Hebrew Scriptures, with a Critical History of the Greek and Latin Versions of the Samaritan Pentateuch, and of the Chaldee Paraphrases. By the Rev. George Hamilton, M.A. 8vo. Dublin, 1814.

The origin and antiquity of the Hebrew language and characters, vowel points, various readings, and the question relative to the integrity of the present text, together with an account of the rabbinical notes on the Old Testament, are the topics principally discussed in this small volume; and to these succeeds a notice of the different versions and paraphrases mentioned in the title. "Its general execution is highly creditable to the author's industry and judgment; and we cheerfully recommend it to that class of students for whose use it was chiefly designed." (Eclectic Review (N. S.), vol. i. p. 503.)

10. A Compendious Introduction to the Study of the Bible. By Thomas Hartwell HORNE, B.D. Illustrated with Maps and other Engravings. First and Second Editions. London, 1827, 12mo. Boston (Massachusetts), 1827, 12mo. Third Edition, London, 1829. Fourth Edition, 1833, 12mo.

This little manual (which has been introduced into King's College, London) is an analysis or abridgment of the present work, undertaken by the author in consequence of requests long since communicated to him, and frequently repeated, that he would precommunicated to him, and frequently repeated, that he would prepare such an epitome, as an assistant to the studies of those who may already possess the present larger Introduction. At the same time this abridgment has been so arranged as to form a comprehensive Guide to the study of the Bible adapted to General Readers. In preparing this Manual for the press, the order of the present larger Introduction has generally been followed. Those bibliographical, critical, and other details only have been omitted, which either would not admit of obvidgment or which would be write. either would not admit of abridgment, or which would be uninterreting to the generality of English readers. The repeated and unprincipled attempts made to pirate the present larger Introduction to the Critical Study and Knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, will perhaps justify the author in the estimation of candid readers for thus describing his own publication.

The North American reprint is very neatly executed.

11. Herméneutique Sacrée, ou Introduction à l'Ecriture Sainte en général, et en particulier à chacun des Livres de l'Ancien et the Hebrews, their History and Chronology, Money and Coins, &c. du Nouveau Testament, à l'Usage des Séminaires; par J. Her-&c., translated from the preceding French work of Calmet. mann Janssens. Traduit du Latin par J. J. Pacaud. Paris, 1828, 2 tomes, 8vo.

> This is a translation of a Latin treatise, published by Professor Janssens at Liege in 1818. It consists of five parts or chapters, in the first of which, the author endeavours to establish the canonical the first of which, the author endeavours to establish the canonical authority of all the books enumerated as sacred in the canon of the assembly or council of Trent. The second chapter treats on their divinity and inspiration; the third, on their authenticity; the fourth, on the substantial integrity of the original text, its authority, and the use to be made of it, as well as on ancient versions of the Bible, and particularly on the Vulgate. The fifth and last chapter contains general and particular rules for the understanding and interpretation of the Scriptures: and in a short appendix there is given an outline of the Geography of Palestine, and the divisions of time, festivals, sacrifices, weights and measures of the Hebrews. This festivals, sacrifices, weights and measures of the Hebrews. work is intended for members of the Romish church, to whose dogmas the author bows most submissively. The original Latin work is intended to members of the Romish church, to whose dogmas the author bows most submissively. The original Latin edition called forth some very severe anonymous strictures, entitled "Amandi à Sanclà Cruce, Diœc. Leod. Presbyteri, Animadversiones Criticæ in Hermeneuticam Sacram, Mosaci, 1820:" in this publication (which is said to have been written by M. Waltrin, a curate in the diocese of Liege), the errors of M. Janssens on some topics, and his deformation of the process. and his deficiencies in others, are pointed out. Although the French translator professes to have availed himself of these critical remarks, in order to explain or correct the original work, in some instance yet he has left others unnoticed. It was to be expected, that M. Janssens would maintain, at all hazards, the genuineness of the disputed clause in 1 John v. 7:; but it will scarcely be credited that he should rely on the Codex Ravianus (which has been demonstrated by the control of the codex Ravianus). strated, by actual collation, to be a mere transcript of the Greek Testament printed in the Complutensian Polyglott, and of Stephens's third edition), and that he has cited the English manuscript (Manuscrit d'Angleterre, the Codex Britannicus cited by Erasmus), and that of Dublin, as two separate authorities! whereas they are but ONE and the same manuscript, now generally known under the appellation of the Codex Montfortianus, which was not written till the close of the fifteenth century. The most useful part is the third chapter, in which the objections of Deists, and of the modern German neologian critics, Eck and Paulus, are examined in detail, and refused. and refuted.

- 12. Apparatus Biblicus: or an Introduction to the Holy Scriptures in three books. 1. Of the original and antiquity of the Jews. 2. Of the canon, authors, original texts, versions, editions, and interpretations of Scripture. 3. Of the false gods, &c. mentioned in the Scriptures. From the French of Père LAMY. With Engravings. London, 1728, 2 vols. 8vo. 2d edit.
- 13. Clavis Bibliorum. The Key of the Bible, unlocking the richest Treasures of the Holy Scriptures. Whereby the Order, Names, Times, Penmen, Occasion, Scope, and Principal Parts, containing the Subject Matter of the Books of the Old and New Testament, are familiarly and briefly opened: for the help of the weakest capacity in the understanding of the whole Bible. Wherein the Scripture Songs, dispersed here and there in the Old and New Testament, are metrically translated out of the Hebrew, and analytically explained. By Francis Roberts, D.D. Third edition. London, 1665, folio.

The popularity of this work, which contains a comprehensive digest of the most valuable observations of the earlier biblical critics, caused it to pass through several editions between the middle and latter part of the seventeenth century, principally in folio; though copies are sometimes to be met with in two volumes, 8vo. The present volume of this work is indebted to Dr. Roberts's Solution to the present volume of this work is indebted to Dr. Roberts's Clavis Bibliorum for many useful remarks. His analyses of the different books of the Old and New Testament are, however, sometimes tediously minute. The third edition contains, for the first time, a metrical version of the Psalms, made immediately from the Hebrew, together with an analytical exposition of every Psalm, and a general preface to the whole book of Psalms.

SECTION II.

INTRODUCTIONS TO THE STUDY OF THE OLD TESTAMENT, IN PARTICULAR, INCLUDING THE APOCRYPHAL BOOKS.

1. Introductio ad Libros Canonicos Veteris Testamenti omnes, præcognita Critica et Historica ac Auctoritatis vindicias exponens. Adornata studio D. J. Gottlob CARPZOVII. Lipsie, 1731; 2d edit. 1741, 4to.

The reader will here find very learned disquisitions upon every book of the Old Testament, and a catalogue of the most approved writers on most of them. "Carpzov was a man of profound erudiwriters on most of them. "Carpzov was a finit of protoina eruntion and indefatigable industry. His work contains the principal materials, which have been afforded by his predecessors, perspictiously arranged, and augmented by his own valuable observations." (Bp. Marsh.) The third part was translated from the Latin into English, with additional notes, by Moses Marcus, a converted Jew, and published at London in 1729, in 8vo.

2. J. G. EICHHORN Einleitung ins Alte Testament.-Introduction to the Old Testament, by J. G. Eichhorn. Leipzig, 1823-24, 4 vols. 8vo. Best edition.

Professor Eichhorn succeeded the celebrated Michaelis in the divinity chair at Gottingen. His works are considered classical on the subject of biblical criticism. Proposals were issued, many on the subject of biblical criticism. Proposals were issued, many years since, by the Rev. Dr. Lloyd, at that time Regius Professor of Hebrew at the University of Cambridge, for publishing by subscription a translation from the German of Professor Eichhorn's Introduction to the Study of the Old Testament. But the translation never appeared. Of this work the reader will find a copious analysis in the Monthly Review (N. S.), vol. xxiii. pp. 481—497. Eichhorn was one of those German critics, who reject the inspiration of Moses; and he advocated the untenable opinion that the great Jewish legislator compiled his primæval history from distinct sagas or traditional documents.

3. Introductio in Libros Sacros Veteris Fæderis in compendium redacta à Johanne Jahn. Viennæ, 1804, 8vo.

A most valuable treatise, to which the author of this work has largely indebted, as his frequent reference to it will abun-y show. By a decree of pope Pius VII. dated August 26, 1822, dantly show. this introduction of Jahn was put into the Index Expurgatorius, and prohibited to be read; as also were his Enchiridion Hermeneuticæ Generalis Vet. et Nov. Fæderis, and his Archæologia Biblica; both which treatises are noticed in a subsequent page of this Appendix.

4. Introduction to the Old Testament, translated from the Latin and German Works of John Jahn, Doctor of Philosophy and Theology; and Professor of Oriental Languages, &c. in the University of Vienna. By Samuel H. TURNER, D.D. Professor of Biblical Learning and the Interpretation of Scripture in the General Theological Seminary of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America, and the Rev. William R. WHIT-TINGHAM. New York, 1827, 8vo.

This truly valuable work contains an entire translation of the preceding treatise, with various improvements from the larger German work of Jahn, sometimes translated in full, and sometimes abridged, and from other works of approved character.

5. Introductio in Libros Canonicos Veteris Fæderis, usibus Favorio Ackermann. Viennæ, academicis accommodata a Fouerio Ackermann. 1825, 8vo. Price 9s.

Though published ostensibly as a new work, this treatise is in fact nothing more than an expurgated edition of Jahn's Introduction. Professor Ackermann states that he has changed the text of Jahn in very many chapters, but has retained his order and his words wherever he could. The editor introduces this work to the notice of his readers by a profession of his profound submission to the

6. A Key to the Old Testament and the Apocrypha: or an account of their several books, their contents and authors, and of the times when they were respectively written. By Robert GRAY, D.D. [now Bishop of Bristol.] London, 1790, 8vo. New edition, 1829, 8vo.

The very numerous editions which have been printed of this valuable work, attest the estimation in which it is deservedly held. It was undertaken in imitation of the late Bp. Percy's well-known and often-printed "Key to the New Testament;" but it is a much more elaborate performance. Dr. Gray has diligently consulted, and brought together a great mass of information from the writings of the fathers, the ancient ecclesiastical historians, and other original authorities which are not accessible to the generality of sudents. Bp. Mant and Dr. D'Oyly have liberally availed themselves of Dr. G.'s researches in their commentary on the Holy Scriptures. The edition of 1829 is corrected and greatly enlarged and im-

7. Introduction à la Lecture des Livres Saints, à l'Usage des Hommes religieux et éclairés, par J. E. Cellérier, fils. Genève, 1832, 8vo.

The first sketch of this work was a small essay or discourse, ac-The first sketch of this work was a small essay or discourse, accompanied with notes and illustrations, on the authenticity and divine origin of the Old Testament; this was published in 1826. The substance of the proofs and illustrations in that publication are retained in the present volume, which the author has divided into three parts, viz. Part I. On the authenticity, integrity, credibility, and divine origin of the Pentateuch; Part II. On the books posterior to the Pentateuch, including the Prophets, the Hagiographa, and the Apocryphal Books; Part III. Observations on the Old Testament and its interpretation. An Appendix, of proofs and illustrations, terminates this work, in which the author becomes deduced that the property of the proofs and illustrations, terminates this work, in which the author becomes deduced that much diligence and research; but it must not be concealed, that its value is greatly diminished by his evident leaning towards the bold and unhallowed speculations of the continental neologian critics. M. Cellérier's work is reviewed at considerable length, and with great severity, in the first number of M.M. Haeverninck's and Steiger's Mélanges de Théologie Reformée, published at Concerning 1833, 1880. Geneva, in 1833, in 8vo Vol. II.—App

8. Joh. Gottfr. Eichhorn Einleitung in die Apocryphischen Schriften des Alten Testaments. Leipzig, 1795, 8vo.

9. Geo. Joannis HENKII Introductio ad Libros Apocryphos Veteris Testamenti. Halm, 1718, 4to.

10. Notice sur les Livres Apocryphes de l'Ancien Testament.

Par C. E. F. Moulinie. Genève, 1828, 8vo.

SECTION III.

INTRODUCTIONS TO THE STUDY OF THE NEW TESTAMENT, IN PARTICULAR.

1. Aw Introduction to the Reading of the New Testament, by M.M. BEAUSOBRE and L'ENFANT. Cambridge, 1779, 1788, 1806, 1816, 1819, 8vo.

This was originally a preface to the French version of the New Testament published by M.M. Beausobre and l'Enfant, at Amster-It has been several times printed, and is also to be found in the third volume of the Theological Tracts collected by Bishop Watson.

2. Commentatio Critica ad Libros N. T. in genere; cum præfatione J. Gottlob CARPZOVII. Accurante J. W. Rumpæo. Lipsiæ, 1757, 4to. 2d edit.

Critical questions of great variety and importance are here briefly but satisfactorily discussed by a reference to the writers of the greatest credit who have treated on each of them.

3. Jo. Gottfr. EICHHORN Einleitung ins Neue Testament.-Introduction to the New Testament. Leipzig, 1804-15, 3 vols.

The first volume of this work is analyzed in the Critical Review, Series III. vol. x. for 1807, pp. 449-465

4. An Introduction to the Writings of the New Testament, by Dr. John Leonard Hue, Professor of Theology in the University of Freyburgh, in Brisgau, &c. Translated from the original German, by the Rev. Daniel Guildford Walt, LL.D. London, 1827, 2 vols. 8vo.

Professor Hug (who is in communion with the church of Rome) may be considered as the principal and most learned writer of that class which has opposed itself to the skepticism and fanciful theories of some modern German divines. His Introduction has long been held in the highest estimation on the continent, for the variety and importance of his critical researches on the New Testament, Dr. Wait has added numerous notes, chiefly derived from Jewish or was has added inherous notes, chiefly derived from Jewish and oriental antiquities; and he has occasionally corrected the erroneous statements of Hug relative to some of the ancient versions. Some parts of his work, however, evidently show that he was not sufficiently acquainted with the German language. To the first volume he has prefixed a copious preface, containing an epitome of Dr. Bertholdt's Introduction to the New Testament, in which many improvent topics of successful of the property of the control which many important topics of sacred criticism are discussed.

5. An Introduction to the New Testament, by John David MICHAELIS, late Professor in the University of Gottingen. Translated from the fourth edition of the German, by Herbert Marsh, D.D. 8vo. 6 vols. Cambridge, 1802, 3d edit. 1818.

The first edition of Michaelis's inestimable work was published in Germany, in 1750, and translated into English in 1761, 4to.; its value is very materially enhanced by the notes of Bishop Marsh (which extend to part of the work only), who has further added a Dissertation on the Origin and Composition of the first three Gospels. The Rev. Dr. Randolph (who was subsequently bishop of London), in 1802, published anonymously some severe "Remarks" on the "Dissertation," by way of caution to students in divinity. To these remarks Dr. Marsh replied in some "Letters," which were published in the same year, in 8vo. See an ample critique on Bishop Marsh's work in the British Critic (O. S.), vol. iii. p. 601—608., and vol. iv. pp. 46—54. 170—176.

6. Introduction au Nouveau Testament, par J. D. Michaelis; quatrième édition, traduite sur la troisième de Herbert Marsh, évêque de Peterborough, avec une partie de ses notes, et des notes nouvelles, par J. J. Chenevière, pasteur et professeur en théologie à Genève. 4 tomes, 8vo. Genève, 1822.

7. Essai d'une Introduction Critique au Nouveau Testament, par J. E. Cellérier, fils. Genève, 1823, 8vo.

Partly a translation, and partly an analysis, of Professor Hug's German Introduction to the writings of the New Testament.

8. Georgii Pritii Introductio ad Lectionem Novi Testamenti, in quâ que ad rem criticam, historiam, chronologiam, et geographiam pertinent, breviter et perspicuè exponuntur. 1st edit. Lipsiæ, 1704, 12mo.; 4th edit. by Hoffman, in 1737, 8vo. and reprinted, with corrections, in a large octavo volume, in 1764.

"The service rendered by Carpzov to the Old Testament was performed by Pritius for the New. The improvements of his editor, Hoffman, on the original, are so considerable that whoever purchases the Introduction of Pritius (and it deserves to be purchased by every student in divinity) must be careful in regard to the date of the title-page." (Bishop Marsh.)

9. An Introduction to the Study and Knowledge of the New Testament. By Edward Harwoov, D.D. London, 1767-1771, 2 vols. 8vo.

The learned author designed a third volume, which was to embrace the chief critical questions respecting the New Testament. This work "contains a collection of dissertations, relative partly to the characters of the sacred writers, partly to the Jewish history and customs, and to such part of heathen antiquities as have reference to the New Testament. As these dissertations display great erudition, and contain much information illustrative of the New Testament, Dr. Harwood's Introduction is certainly to be recommended to the theological student." (Bishop Marsh.) Another experienced divinity tutor (the late Rev. Dr. Williams) has also justly remarked that this work may be read with advantage, making allowance for the author's theological sentiments (Christian Preacher, p. 417.), which were Arian. The writer of these pages has derived many useful illustrations from Dr. Harwood's labours, in the present volume of this work. The value of Dr. H.'s Introduction would not have been diminished if he had acknowledged his obligations to the preceding work of Pritius, to which he has been very considerably indebted.

10. A Key to the New Testament, giving an Account of the several Books, their Contents, their Authors, and of the Times, Places, and Occasions, on which they were respectively written. [By Thomas Percy, D.D. Bishop of Dromore.] Third and best edition. London, 1779, 12mo.

The multiplied editions of this valuable little manual attest the high esteem in which it is deservedly held, as a guide for young students.

- 11. Isagoge Historico-Critica in libros Novi Fæderis sacros. Scripsit Henricus Augustus Schott. Jenæ, 1830, 8vo.
- 12. Antonii Вьоси Chronotaxis Scriptorum Divi Pault. Flensburgi et Lipsiæ, 1782, 8vo.

CHAPTER III.

TREATISES ON THE SACRED TEXT, ITS STYLE, IDIOM, AND VERSIONS.

SECTION 1.

TREATISES ON SACRED CRITICISM GENERALLY, AND ON THE STYLE AND IDIOM OF THE SCRIPTURES.

- 1. Pentateuchi Hebræo-Samaritani Præstantia in illustrando et emendando Textu Masorethico ostensa. Auctore Alexio à S. Aquilino. Heidelbergæ, 1784, 8vo.
- 2. The Biblical Cabinet: or Hermeneutical, Exegetical, and Philological Library. Vols. I.—V. Edinburgh and London, 1832-3, small 8vo.

This work, which is still in progress, promises to be of singular utility to biblical students. Vols. I. and IV. comprise a translation of Ernesti's Institutio Interpretis Novi Testamenti, with Notes by the Rev. Charles H. Terror, A.M. Vol. II. contains four valuable philological Tracts:—1. On the Language of Palestine in the Age of Christ and the Apostles. 2. On the Greek Diction of the New Testament. 3. On the Importance of the Study of the Old Testament: and, 4. On the Tropical Language of the New Testament. These disquisitions are translated from the Latin and German of Professors Pfannkuche, Planck, Tholuck, and Beckhaus. Vol. III. contains a translation from the Latin, by the Rev. Edward Craig, A.M., of the first portion of Professor Tittman's elaborate Treatise on the Synonymes of the New Testament. And Vol. V. contains the first volume of Prof. Tholuck's Exposition of St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans, translated from the German by the Rev. Robert Merizies.

3. The Sacred Classics Defended and Illustrated, by Anthony BLACKWALL. London, 1727-31, 2 vols. 8vo.

Blackwall was a strenuous advocate for the purity of the Greek style of the New Testament, which he vindicates in his first volume. The second volume, which is the most valuable, contains many excellent observations on the division of the New Testament into chapters and verses, and also on various readings. This work was translated into Latin by Christopher Woll, and published at Leipsic, in 1736, 4to.

- 4. De Paronomasia, finitimisque ei Figuris Paulo Apostolo frequentatis, Dissertatio Rhetorico-Exegetica. Scripsit Julius Fredericus Böttcher. Lipsiæ, 1824, 8vo.
- 5. Jo. Theoph. Buslav Dissertatio Historico-Critico-Exegetica de Lingua Originali Evangelii secundum Matthæum. Vratislaviæ, 1826, 8vo.
- 6. Horæ Biblicæ; being a connected Series of Miscellaneous Notes on the Original Text, early Versions, and printed Editions of the Old and New Testament. By Charles Butler, Esq. Oxford and London, 1799, 8vo.

The first edition of this judicious manual of biblical criticism was privately printed in 1797, for the author's friends. It has since been repeatedly printed in royal 8vo. with an additional volume, treating on the books accounted sacred by the Mohammedans, Hindoos, Parsees, Chinese, and Scandinavians. In 1810 M. Boulard published a French translation of this work from the edition printed at Oxford, in 1799.

7. Popular Lectures on Biblical Criticism and Interpretation, By William CARPENTER. London, 1829, 8vo.

8. Joh. Gottlob Carpzovii Critica Sacra Veteris Testamenti. Lipsiæ, 1738, 4to.

This elaborate work consists of three parts, treating, 1. On the Divine Origin, Authenticity, Divisions, and original Language of the Old Testament, the Masora, Keri, and Ketib, and the principal MSS. and Editions of the Hebrew Scriptures;—2. On the different Versions of the Old Testament, ancient and modern; and, 3. A Vindication of the Hebrew Scriptures against the rude attacks of Mr. Whiston, in his Essay towards restoring the true Text of the Old Testament. Carpzov adheres to the high notions which in his time continued to prevail concerning the integrity of the Hebrew text: but (Bp. Marsh remarks) "if proper allowance be made on this account, it will be found to be a very useful work, and replete with information on the subject of Hebrew criticism." (Lectures on Divinity, part ii. p. 133.)

9. An Inquiry into the Books of the New Testament. By John Cook, D.D. London, 1821, 8vo.

For an analysis of this masterly treatise on Sacred Criticism, see the Eclectic Review (N. S.), vol. xvii. pp. 310-324.

- 10. J. A. DATHII Opuscula ad Interpretationem et Crisin Veteris Testamenti. Edidit E. F. C. Rosenmüller. Lipsiæ, 1796, 8vo.
- 11. Compendio di Critica Sacra, dei Difetti e delle Emendazioni del Sacro Testo, e Piano d'una Nuova Edizione del Dottore G. Bernardo De Rossi. Parma, 1811.

In this little tract, Professor De Rossi has given a very concise but interesting sketch of the state of the text of the Hebrew Scriptures, from the earliest period to our own time; and he has subjoined an outline of his plan for a new edition of the Hebrew Bible, with select various readings.

- 12. EDWARDS (Thomæ) Duæ Dissertationes: In priore quarum probatur, Variantes Lectiones et Menda, quæ in Sacram Scripturam irrepserunt, non labefactare ejus Auctoritatem, in rebus quæ ad fidem et mores pertinent: In posteriore vero, Prædestinationem Paulinam ad Gentilium vocationem totam spectare. Cantabrigiæ, 1768, 8vo.
- 13. Fabric (Gabriel) Des Titres Primitifs de la Révélation; ou Considérations Critiques sur la Purété et l'Intégrité du Texte Original des Livres Saints de l'Ancien Testament. Rome, 1772, 2 parts, 8vo.

This work contains much curious learning, urged with a considerable degree of ingenuity, in favour of the Masoretic system.

- 14. Nicolai Fulleri Miscellanea Sacra, cum Apologia contra V. Cl. Johannem Drusium. Lugd. Bat. 1622, 8vo. edit. opt. Also in the last volume of the Critici Sacri.
- 15. Institutes of Biblical Criticism, or Heads of the Course of Lectures on that subject, read in the University and King's College of Aberdeen. By Alexander Geraed, D.D. Edinburgh, 1808, 8vo.

"Of general and elementary treatises" on sacred criticism, "there is none which is more to be recommended, either for perspicuity or correctness, than the Institutes of Biblical Criticism, published by Dr. Gerard, Professor of Divinity at Aberdeen." (Bp. Marsh.)

16. Gulielmi Gesexti de Pentateuchi Samaritani Origine, Indole, et Auctoritate, Commentatio Philologico-critica. Halse, 1815, 4to.

In the North American Review, vol. xxii. pp. 274-317, there is an elaborate digest from the pen of the Rev. Professor Stuart, drawn up from this dissertation and from other philological works of Professor Gesemus, of almost every thing that is known concerning the Samaritans and the Samaritan Pentateuch. This yery valuable disquisition is reprinted in the Andover Biblical Repository for 1832, pp. 681-724.

17. Gulielmi Gesenti Anecdota Oxoniensia, Tomus Primus. Lipsiæ, 1822, 4to.

This volume comprises two fasciculi, the first of which contains the Samaritan Psalms, with an Arabic version and notes: in the second fasciculus, there is a dissertation on Syriac Lexicons, with specimens of the hitherto inedited lexicons of Bar Ali and Barhluli.

18. Salomonis Glassit Philologia Sacra; qua totius S. S. Veteris et Novi Testamenti Scripturæ tum Stylus et Litteratura, tum Sensûs et Genuinæ Interpretationis Ratio et Doctrina, libris quinque expenditur ac traditur. Lipsiæ, 1725, 4to. Best edition.

An "inestimable and immortal work, than which none can be An "mestimable and immortal work, than which none can be more useful for the interpretation of Scripture, as it throws an uncommon degree of light upon the language and phraseology of the inspired writers." (Mosheim's Eccl. Hist. vol. v. p. 296.) The first edition was printed at Jena in 1623, and was followed by several others at the same place, in 1643, 1663, and 1668; at Frankfort, in 1653; at Leipsic, in 1691, 1705, 1713, and at Amsterdam in 1711, all in quarto. The first and second books treat on the style and meaning of the sacred writers; the third and fourth on Sacred Grammar, and the fifth on Sacred Rhetoric. To the edition of 1705 and the subsequent fifth on Sacred Rhetoric. To the edition of 1705 and the subsequent impressions is annexed a treatise, by Glassius, on Sacred Logic, first published by Olearius at Jena, in 1704. A new edition of this work was published in 8vo. at Leipsic, in 1776, 1795, 1797, by the Professors Dathe and Bauer, entitled Salomonis Glassii Philologia Sacra his Temporibus accommodata. The first volume, in two parts, edited by Dathe, contains the treatises de Grammatica et Rhetorica Sacra, which are materially improved without debasing Glassius's pious and learned expositions of Scripture by his own speculations. The second volume, edited by Prof. Bauer of Altorf, contains the Critica Sacra. Glassius had adopted Buxtorfs high notions contains the literature of the Habray text which are presented to the contains the Critica Sacra. cerning the integrity of the Hebrew text, which are properly modified in Bauer's revision of the work. The third volume contains Glassius's second book, which treats on the interpretation of Scripture: as it is frequently to be met with in a detached form, it is noticed in a subsequent page of this Appendix, among the works on that branch of sacred philology.

19. Thèse Critique sur la Langue Originale de l'Evangile selon Saint Matthieu, soutenu devant la Faculté Protestante de Montauban. Par Charles Grawitz, de Paris, 1827, 8vo.

In this small tract, the author ingeniously contends for the Hebrew original of St. Matthew's Gospel.

20. Humphredi Hony de Bibliorum Textibus Originalibus, Versionibus Græcis, et Latina Vulgata Libri Quatuor. Oxonii, 1704, folio.

"This is the classical work on the Septuagint." (Bp. Marsh.) The first book contains Dr. Hody's dissertation, with improvements, against Aristeas's History, which he had before published, in 1685, in opposition to Isaac Vossius's Dissertationes de Septuaginta Interpretibus, eorumque Tralatione et Chronologià: in which the latter ascribed more authority to the Greek Version than to the original listelf. In the second book the author territories de la listelf. In the second book, the author treats of the true authors of itself. In the second book, the author treats of the true authors of the Septuagint Version,—of the time when, and the reasons why, it was undertaken—and of the manner in which it was performed. The third book contains a history of the original Hebrew text of the Septuagint, and of the Vulgate Latin Version, showing the authority of each in different ages, and that the Hebrew text has always been most esteemed and valued. In the fourth and last book, he gives an account of the Greek Versions of Symmachus, Aquila, and Theodotion, and of Origen's Hexapla, and other ancient editions; to which are subjoined, lists of the books of the Bible at different times, which exhibit a concise, but full and clear view of the canon of Scripture.

21. The Connection between the Sacred Writings and the Literature of Jewish and Heathen Authors, particularly that of the Classical Ages, illustrated; principally with a view to evidence in confirmation of the truth of Revealed Religion. By Robert GRAY, D.D. [now Bishop of Bristol.] London, 1819, in two volumes, 8vo.

The first edition of this valuable work, which is indispensably The first edition of this variable work, which is indispensately necessary to the biblical student who cannot command access to all the classic authors, appeared in one volume, 8vo. in 1817. A multitude of passages of Scripture is illustrated, and their truth confirmed. Classical literature is here shown to be the handmaid tiones Ebraicas que circa Vetus Testamentum Ebreum fere of sacred literature, in a style and manner which cannot fail to instruct and gratify the reader. Independently of the main object of these volumes,—the illustration of the Scriptures,—Bp. Gray's general criticisms on the classic writers are such as must commend them to the student. "The remarks" (it is truly said by an eminent critic of the present day) "are every where just, always impressed with a candid and sincere conviction of the blessing for which our gratitude to God is so eminently due, for his revealed word, whose various excellencies rise in value upon every view which the scholar or divine can take, of what have been the best efforts of the human mind, in the best days which preceded the publication of the Gospel. There is no one portion of these volumes that is not highly valuable on this account. The praise is given which is due to the happiest fruits of human genius; but a strict eye is evermore preserved for the balance of preponderation, where the Word of Truth, enhanced by divine authority, bears the scale down, and furnishes the great thing wanting to the sage and the teacher of the heathen world. Their noblest sentiments, and their obliquities and deviations into error, are alike brought to this test, and referred to this sure standard. The concurrent lines of precept or instruction, on this comparative survey, are such as establish a sufficient ground of evidence that all moral goodness, and all sound wisdom, are derived from one source and origin, and find their sanction in the will of Him, of whose perfections and of whose glory they are the manifest transcripts." British Critic (New Series), vol. xiii. p. 316., in which journal the reader will find a copious and just analysis of Dr. Gray's volumes.

21.* Josiah and Cyrus, the two great objects of Divine Notice in the Scheme of Revelation. With illustrations and confirmations of the truth of Sacred History, and of the Accomplishment of Prophecy with respect to those Sovereigns, drawn from the Accounts of a Modern Traveller. By the Right Rev. Robert GRAY, D.D. Bishop of Bristol. London, 1833, 12mo.

22. Bibliotheca Criticæ Sacræ, circa omnes fere Sacrorum Librorum difficultates, ex Patrum Veterum traditione et probatiorum interpretum collecta. Ab uno ordinis Carmelitarum Discalceatorum Religioso. (F. Cherubino a S. Josefi.) Lovanii, 1704, 4 vols. folio.

In this very prolix, but elaborate work, every possible question relative to Scripture criticism is discussed and illustrated, from the writings of the fathers and most eminent divines, principally of the church of Rome. The last volume contains prefaces to the different books of the Old and New Testament, exhibiting the time when they were written, their language, authors, and respective authority, together with copious synopses of the contents of each book.

23. Commentatio, qua Linguæ Aramaicæ Usus ad judicanda et interpretanda Evangelia Canonica novis exemplis defenditur. Auctore Chr. Kaiser. Erlangæ, 1823, 4to.

24. The State of the Printed Hebrew Text of the Old Testament considered. By Benjamin Kennicott, M.A. Oxford, 1753-1759, 2 vols. 8vo.

1753-1759, 2 vols. 8vo.

These dissertations preceded Dr. Kennicott's celebrated collation of Hebrew MSS., and his edition of the Hebrew Bible, which is noticed in pp. 7,8. of this Appendix. The first dissertation, in two parts, contains a comparison of I Chron. xi. with 2 Sam. v. and xxiii., and observations on seventy Hebrew MSS., with an extract of mistakes and various readings. In the second, the Samaritan copy of the Pentateuch is vindicated; the printed copies of the Chaldee Paraphrase are proved to be corrupted; the sentiments of the Jews on the Hebrew text are ascertained; an account is given of all the Hebrew MSS. known to be extant; and also a particular catalogue of one hundred Hebrew MSS. preserved in the public libraries at Oxford, Cambridge, and the British Museum. Dr. Kennicott's first dissertation was translated into Latin by M. Teller, in 2 vols. 8vo. Lipsiæ, 1756. Lipsiæ, 1756.

25. Benj. Kennicotti Dissertatio Generalis in Vetus Testamentum Hebraicum. Curavit P. J. Bruns. Brunsvici, 1783, 8vo.

A neat reprint of Dr. Kennicott's Dissertatio Generalis, annexed to vol. ii. of his edition of the Hebrew Bible, noticed in pp. 7,8. of this Appendix.

26. Ignatii Koeglen Notitia S. S. Bibliorum Judæorum in Imperio Sinensi. Editio altera. Edidit C. Th. de Murt. Halæ, 27. Joannis LANIGAN S. Th. D. et in Academia Ticinensi Professoris, Institutionum Biblicarum Pars prima, Pavia (1794).

The second part of this work has never appeared; nor has the or these pages been able to obtain the sight even of a copy of the first portion. He has been informed, that it was suppressed in Italy. A short analysis of the first part is given in the Monthly Review (N. S.), vol. xxii. pp. 552—554.; where it is said (p. 555.) that "this volume contains a large portion of text matter, well arranged, and accompanied with many learned notes, selected from the best critics of the present age, together with a considerable number of just remarks from the author's own pen."

1686, 4to.

29. Joannis Leusnenii Philologus Ebræo-Mixtus, una cum spicilegio philologico, continente decem quæstionum et positionum præcipuè Philologico-Ebraicarum et Judaicarum centurias. Ultrajecti, 1663, 1682, 1699, 4to.

Besides discussing critical questions, this volume of the laborious philologer Leusden treats very copiously on Jewish rites and antiquities.

30. Johannis Leusdenii Philologus Ebræo-Græcus generalis, continens quæstiones Ebræo-Græcas, quæ circa Novum Testamentum fere moveri solent. Ultrajecti, 1670, 1685, 1695, 4to.

Various questions relative to the original language of the New Testament, its editions, versions, divisions, &c. are concisely illustrated in this volume. All the three preceding volumes of Leusden are valuable, and may frequently be obtained at a low price.

31. Johannis Leusdenii de Dialectis N. T., singulatim de ejus Hebraismis, Libellus singularis iterum editus ab Joh. Frider. Fischero. Accessit Joh. Vorstii Commentariolus de Adagiis N.T. Hebraicis. Lipsiæ, 1792, 8vo.

This publication contains a reprint of Leusden's critical disquisitions on the Hebraisms of the New Testament. They are enriched with very numerous philological observations of the learned John Frederick Fisher, who first published them in a detached form, in 8vo. in 1754.

32. Ant. Aug. Hen. LICHTENSTEIN Paralipomena Critica circa Textum Veteris Testamenti Codicum Hebraicorum. Helmstadii, 1799, 4to.

33. MOLKENBUHR (Marcellini) Problema Criticum: Sacra Scriptura Novi Testamenti in quo idiomate originaliter ab Apostolis edita fuit ? Paderbornæ, 1822, 8vo.

34. BINTERIM (A. J.), Propempticum ad problema criticum, Sacra Scriptura Novi Testamenti in quo idiomate originaliter ab apostolis edita fuerit? A Doctore Marco Molkenbuhr nuper propositum. Moguntiæ, 1822, 8vo.

The object of Molkenbuhr's tract is, to revive the absurd and long since exploded hypothesis, announced in the former part of the last century by father Hardouin, viz. That the Greek Testament was a translation from the Latin Vulgate. Molkenbuhr has been most satisfactorily refuted by Binterim, and with equal learning and shilling. ing and ability.

35. Morini (Joannis) Exercitationes Biblicæ, de Hebræi Græcique Textûs Sinceritate, germana LXXII. Interpretum Translatione dignoscenda, illius cum Vulgatà conciliatione, et juxta Judæos divinâ integritate, totiusque Rabbinicæ Antiquitatis et operis Masorethici æra, explicatione et censurâ. Parisiis, 1633, 4to.

36. Morini (Joannis) Exercitationes Ecclesiasticæ in utram-que Samaritanorum Pentateuchum. Parisiis, 1631, 4to.

37. Simeonis de Muis Assertio Veritatis Hebraicæ adversus Exercitationes Ecclesiasticas in utrumque Samaritanorum Pentateuchum Joannis Morini. Parisiis, 1631, 12mo.

38. HOTTINGERI (Joannis Henrici) Exercitationes Anti-Morinianæ, de Pentateucho Samaritano, ejusque αυθεντια. Tiguri, 1644.

For an account of the controversy between Morin and his antagonists, on the integrity of the Hebrew text, &c., see Wolfius's Bibliotheca Hebraica, Part II. pp. 25. 270., and Part IV. p. 7.

39. Brevis Expositio Critices Veteris Fæderis, auctore Hermanno MUNTINGHE. Ediderunt B. Nieuwold et C. H. van Herwerden. Groningæ, 1827, 8vo.

An elegantly written compendium of the most valuable observ An elegantly written compendium of the most valuable observa-tions of the most distinguished critics who have treated on the Old Testament. Though it is a posthumous publication, the editors state that the author composed it some years before his death. It consists of four chapters, in which are discussed the original lan-guage of the Old Testament, the History of the Sacred Text, the origin of various readings, together with the several classes into which they may be divided, the critical aids for determining various readings and the heat rules to be amplicated in cartificated. readings, and the best rules to be employed in settling them, and in correcting the sacred text.

40. The Veracity of the Evangelists demonstrated by a comparative View of their Histories. By the Rev. Robert Nares, A.M. F.R.S. &c. London, 1815. 1818, 2d edit. 12mo.

41. An Inquiry into the Integrity of the Greek Vulgate, or Received Text of the New Testament; in which the Greek Manuscripts are newly classed; the Integrity of the Authorized moveri solent. Ultrajecti, 1656, 1672, 1695, 4to. Amstelædami, the foreign universities, and be thoroughly scrutinized by the learned in them. To the biblical inquirer it will present not only a new and wide field of most curious and happy research, but a mine of the most valuable information: to the classical inquirer it will be a most interesting work, as it involves so many points, both with respect to manuscripts and editions, which to him must be highly important. Of a volume which displays so much labour in investigation, so much originality in deduction, and so much sound principle in design, we can in common justice say no less than that, whatever be the issue of the controversy which it has, we think very seasonably, revived, it reflects honour on the age and nation in which it was produced." (British Critic, N. S. Vol. V. p. 24.) See an outline of Dr. Nolan's classification of the manuscripts of the New Testament, in Part I. Chap. III. Sect. III. § 1. pp. 206—208. of the first volume.

41*. Supplement to an Inquiry into the Integrity of the Greek Vulgate, or Received Text of the New Testament; containing the Vindication of the Principles employed in its Defence. By the Rev. Frederick Nolan, LL.D. London, 1830, 8vo.

42. Critica Sacra; or a short Introduction to Hebrew Criticism. [By the Rev. Dr. Henry Owen.] London, 1774, 8vo.

This little tract is not of common occurrence. Dr. Owen was a learned and sober critic, but no advocate for the absolute inerrancy and integrity of the Hebrew text. His book was violently attacked by Mr. Raphael Baruh in his Critica Sacra Examined. (London, 1775, 8vo.) Dr. Owen rejoined in a learned tract, entitled Supple-ment to Critica Sacra; in which the principles of that treatise are fully confirmed, and the objections of Mr. Raphael Baruh are clearly answered. London, 1775, 8vo.

43. PALEGROMATCA, or Historical and Philological Disquisitions; inquiring whether the Hellenistic Style is not Latin Greek? Whether the many new words in the Elzevir edition of the Greek Testament are not formed from the Latin? And whether the Hypothesis that the Greek Text of many manuscripts of the New Testament is a translation or retranslation from the Latin, seems not to elucidate numerous passages, to account for the different recensions, and to explain many phenomena hitherto inexplicable to the Biblical Critics? [By John BLACK.] London, 1823, 8vo.

The absurd reasonings and mischievous tendency of this para-The absurd reasonings and mischievous tendency of this paradoxical publication (which is noticed here to put the unwary student on his guard against it) are exposed with equal learning and ability in the British Critic for January, February, and April, 1823, which is now known to have been written by the Rt. Rev. Dr. C. J. Blomfield, Bishop of London; in the Rev. J. J. Compbeare's "Examination of certain Arguments" contained in it (Oxford, 1823, 8vo.); in the Rev. W. G. Broughton's "Examination of the Hypothesis advanced in a recent publication, entitled 'Paleeromaica'" thesis advanced in a recent publication, entitled 'Palæoromaica' (London, 1823, 8vo); and in Bishop Burgess's Postscript to the second edition of his "Vindication of 1 John v. 7. from the objections of Mr. Griesbach." (London, 1823.) "The publication entitled Palæoromaica" (this distinguished prelate has most justly said) "is a work of very extensive reading and research; and abounds with valuable quotations. But the materials are as destitute of selection as his" [the anonymous author's] "strictures are of simplicity. valuable quotations. But the materials are as destitute of selection as his" [the anonymous author's] "strictures are of simplicity and candour." (Postscript, p. 196.) The hypothesis which the author of Palæoromaica endeavours to maintain is briefly this:—That the received text of the Greek Testament is a servile translation from a Latin original long since lost, and that this translation was made by a writer imperfectly acquainted with one or possibly with both of the languages in question. In support of this hypothesis the anonymous writer has recourse to two sorts of proof, direct and indirect.

1. The direct proof he finds in the many and obvious Latinisms which he asserts to exist in almost every page of the Greek text; but, besides these, the anonymous writer has collected many others, which he has arranged under several heads or classes, which the nature of the subject and the limits of the present notice forbid us to detail. The reader is therefore necessarily referred to pp. 29—51. of Mr. Conybeare's Examination, in which the anonymous writer's errors are completely exposed.

2. The indirect proofs that the New Testament is a servile translation of a lost Latin original are twofold: first, the existence of certain analogous cases of translation from the Latin, and particularly the Aldine edition of the Greek Simplicius; and, secondly, the certainty that the Latin rather than the Greek was the prevelent language of Palestine, and its neighbourhood, in the age of the lent language of l'alesune, and its neighbourhood, in the age of the evangelists and apostles.

(1.) Bishop Burgess (Postscript, pp. 186. et seq.) and Mr. Conybeare (Examination, pp. 7—16.) have demonstrated that the case of the Aldine Simplicius is utterly inapplicable to the purpose for which it is adduced: and to their learned publications the reader is necessarily referred. It must suffice here to remark that the case of this Simplicius is very different from that of a book, like the Text vindicated; and the Various Readings traced to their Origin. By the Rev. Frederick Nolan, LL.D. London, 1815, 8vo.

"We trust that this volume will command the attention of every scholar throughout the kingdom: and that it will find its way into

New Testament, which was in the custody of the whole Christian church-a book in which every part of the church took a deep interest, and of which every separate congregation had its copy or conies. When the Aldine Greek version of the barbarous Latin translation, made by W. de Moorbeka in the thirteenth century, was published, the Greek original was unknown, and continued to be anknown until it was discovered a few years since by M. Peyron: whereas the Greek text of the New Testament was never lost or missing.

(2.) In full disproof of the alleged certainty of the prevalence of the Latin language in Palestine and its vicinity, during the apos-tolle age, it will be sufficient to refer to Part I. Chap. I. Sect. II. of the the general prefirst volume, which contains some evidences of valence of the Greek language that have escaped the researche Bishop Burgess and of Mr. Conybeare: and also to the fact that the Old Syrne Version of the New Testament, made in the close of the arst, or at the beginning of the second century, contains many Greek words untranslated;—an incontestable proof, this, of the previous existence of a Greek original. For the following additional evidences of the existence of the Greek original of the New Testament we are indebted to that learned prelate. "If," says he, " from the prevalence of the Greek language at the time of apostles, we extend our view to the state of the Christian church in its earliest period, we shall find increasing probabilities of a Greek original. All the Gentile churches established by the apostles in the East were Greek churches; namely, those of Antioch, Ephesus, Galatia, Corinth, Philippi, Thessalonica, &c. Again: "The the East were Greek Children. Handley, in the salonica," &c. Again: "The first bishops of the church of Rome were either Greek writers or natives of Greece.—According to Tertullian, Clemens, the fellow labourer of St. Paul, was the first bishop of Rome, whose Greek Epistle to the Corinthians is still extant. But whether Clemens or Epistle to the Corinthians is still extant. But whether Clemens or Linus was the first bishop of Rome, they were both Greek writers, though probably natives of Italy. Anencletus was a Greek, and so were the greater part of his successors to the middle of the second century. The bishops of Jerusalem, after the expulsion of the century. The bishops of Jerusalem, after the expulsion of the Jews by Adrian, were Greeks. From this state of the government of the primitive church by Greek ministers—Greeks by birth or in their writings-arises a high probability that the Christian Scriptures were in Greek.

The works' also "of the earliest fathers in the church, the contemporaries and immediate successors of the apostles, were written in Greek. They are altogether silent, as to any Latin original of the New Testament. They say nothing, indeed, of a Greek original by name. But their frequent mention of TERMINE XYTHERE, without any distinction of name, can mean only Greek originals.

"But if we have in the Greek fathers no mention of a Greek original, we have the most express testimony of Jerome and Augustin, that the New Testament (with the exception of the Gospel of Saint Matthew, which some of the fathers supposed to have been written by its author in Hebrew) was originally composed in Greek. Jerome said, that the Greek original of the New Testament 'was a thing not to be doubted.'"

'Was a thing not to be doubted.

"Of all the [Latin] MSS. of the New Testament which had been seen by Jerome (and they must have been very numerous), the author of Palæoromaica observes, that 'the whole, perhaps, of the Gospels and Epistles might be versions from the Greek.' Surely this is no immaterial evidence that Greek was the original text; and this will be more evident, if we retrace the history of the Greek text upwards from the time of Jerome. The Greek edition nearest his time was that of Athanasius. Before him, and early in the same century, Eusebius published an edition by the command of Constantine. In the third century, there were not less than three Greek editions by Origen, Hesychius, and Lucianus. In the second century, about the year 170, appeared the Diatessaron of Tatian, containing not the whole of the New Testament, but a harmony of the four Gospels. And in the same century we have an express appeal of Tertullian to the authenticum Græcum of St. Paul, which, whether it means the autograph of the apostle, or an authentic copy of it, is, of itself, a decisive proof of a Greek original. Again, in the same century, before either Tertullian or Tatian, we have, A. D. 127, the Apostolicon of Marcion, which, though not an authenticum Græcum, was Græcum.

"To the evidence from the Greek editions of the New Testament in the second, third, and fourth centuries, and Tertullian's testi-mony, we may add the language of those Greek ecclesiastical writings which were not admitted into the sacred canon, but were, for the most part, of primitive antiquity;—I mean the Apostles' Creed, the Letter of Abgarus to Christ, and the Answer to it; the Liturgies of St. James, St. John, and St. Peter; the Epistle of St. Paul to the Laodiceans; the Apostolical Constitutions, &c. These would never have been written in Greek, if the apostolical writings had not been published in the same language." (Postscript to Vindication of 1 John v. 7. pp. 182—185.)

Lastly, the language and style of the New Testament are such as afford indisputable proof of its authenticity as an ancient volume, and, consequently, that it was originally written in Greek. On this topic compare Volume I. pp. 221, 222.

On all these grounds, we conclude with the learned writers already cited, that Greek was and is the original language of the New Testament, and, consequently, that there is no evidence whatever to support the hypothesis that it is a translation from a lost Latin original.

44. Augusti Perifferi Critica Sacra, de Sacri Codicis partitione, editionibus variis, linguis originalibus et illibata puritate fontium; necnon ejusdem translatione in linguas totius universi, de Masora et Kabbala, Talmude et Alcorano. Dresdæ, 1670, 1688, 1702, 1721, 8vo. Lipsiæ, 1712, 8vo. Altorfii, 1751, 8vo. Also in the second volume of the collective edition of his Philological Works, published at Utrecht in 1704, 4to.

75

45. Recherches Critiques et Historiques sur le Texte Grec des Evangiles. Par Albert RILLIET. Genève, 1832, 8vo.

46. La Fionda di David; ossia, l'Antichità ed Autorità dei Punti Vocali nel Testo Ebreo, dimostrata e difesa per Ippolito ROSELLINI. Bologna, 1823, 8vo. Risposta del medesimo al sign. Abate Luigi Chiarini, rèspetto all' Antichità ed autorità dei Punti Vocali. Bologna, 1824, 8vo.

These two publications defend the antiquity and authority of the Masoretic vowel-points, against the objections of Masclef, Honbigant, and other Hebraists. (Journal des Savans pour 1825, p. 384.)

47. De la Littérature des Hébreux, ou des Livres Saints considerés sous le Rapport des Beautés Littéraires. Par J. B. SAL-GUES. Paris, 1825. 8vo.

48. Joannis Nepomuceni Schufer Institutiones Scripturistica usui auditorum suorum accommodata. Pars prima, Moguntia, 1790. Pars secunda, Moguntiæ, 1792, 8vo.

49. A. B. Seitzneri Commentatio Philologica de Parenthesi in Libris Sacris Veteris et Novi Testamenti, Lipsiæ, 1773, 12mo.

50. A. B. SPITZNERI Vindiciæ Originis et Auctoritates Divinæ Punctorum Vocalium et Accentuum in libris sacris Veteris Testamenti. Lipsiæ, 1791, 8vo.

51. Histoire Critique du Vieux Testament. Par le Père Simon. Paris, 1678, 4to. Amsterdam, 1680. Rotterdam, 1685, 4to. Best edition.

The first edition was suppressed by the influence of the Jesuit le Tellier; it is very inferior to the subsequent impressions.

52. Histoire Critique du Texte du Nouveau Testament; où l'on établit la Vérité des Actes, sur lesquels la Religion Chrétienne est fondée. Par le Père Simon. Rotterdam, 1689, 4to.

53. Histoire Critique des Versions du Nouveau Testament, où l'on fait connoître quel a été l'usage de la lecture des Livres Sacrés dans les principales églises du monde. Par le Père SIMON. Rotterdam, 1690, 4to.

54. Nouvelles Dissertations sur le Texte et les Versions du Nouveau Testament. Par le Père Simon. Rotterdam, 1695, 4to.

All the works of father Simon are characterized by great learning and research. "The criticism of the Bible being at that time less understood than at present, the researches which were insti-tuted by Simon soon involved him in controversy, as well with Protestant as with Catholic writers, particularly with the latter; to whom he gave great offence by the preference which he showed to the Hebrew and Greek texts of the Bible above that which is regarded as the oracle of the church of Rome,—the Latin Vulgate. Though I would not be answerable for every opinion (says Bp. Marsh) advanced by Simon, I may venture to assert that it contains very valuable information in regard to the criticism both of the Hebrew Bible and of the Greek Testament." (Lectures, part i. (Lectures, part i. Walchius has given an account of the various authors who p. 3.2) Waterins has given an account of the various atmors who attacked Simon, in his Bibliotheca Theologica Selecta, vol. iv. pp. 250—259. The Histoire Critique du Vieux Testament was translated into English "by a person of quality," and published at London in 1682, 4to. The translation abounds with gallicisms in every page.

55. Johannis Simonis Analysis ex Explicatio Lectionum Masorethicarum Kethiban et Karjan Vulgo dictarum, ea forma, quâ illæ in sacro textu extant, ordine alphabetico digesta. Editio tertia, Halæ, 1823, 8vo.

56. Vorstii (Johannis) De Hebraismis Novi Testamenti Commentarius. Edidit notisque instruxit Johannes Fridericus Fischerus. Lipsiæ, 1778, 8vo.

57. Briani WALTONI in Biblia Polyglotta Prolegomena. Præfatus est J. A. Dathe, Prof. Ling. Heb. Ord. Lipsiæ, 1777, 8vo.

58. Briani Waltoni, S.T.P. in Biblia Polyglotta Prolegomena Specialia recognovit, Dathianisque et variorum Notis suas immiscuit Franciscus WRANGHAM, A.M. S.R.S. Clevelandize Archidiaconus. Cantabrigiæ, typus ac sumptibus academicis, 1828, 2 tomis, 8vo.

One hundred and seventy years have elapsed since the publication of Bishop Walton's special Prolegomena to his Polyglott Bible; the variety, accuracy, and extent of the information contained in which have concurred to give it a high place among standard critical works on the sacred text. In the long interval that has elapsed since the first appearance of that work, many topics have been controverted, and much additional light has been thrown on all the subjects discussed in Bishop Walton's Prolegomena by the researches of various learned men. As Professor Dathe's octavo edition had become extremely scarce, Mr. Archdeacon Wrangham has conferred no small obligation on biblical students by presenting to them a new edition of the Prolegomena. It is executed on the following plan:—The text of Walton has been accurately printed, and the punctuation amended and improved, and errors in numbers have been carefully corrected. The observations which Dathe had collected in the preface to his edition, not in the best possible order, are here inserted in the notes, under the topics to which they referred; and with them Mr. Wrangham has inserted very purposers observations of his own, evaluating, confirming, or corrected. mey reterred; and with them Mr. Wrangham has inserted very numerous observations of his own, explaining, confirming, or correcting the text of Walton, which are derived from the best critical sources, both ancient and modern, besides references to the best writers who have treated on sacred criticism. Many critical canons of Wetstein, Houbigant, and other editors of the Holy Scriptures, the rarity and high price of whose works place them beyond the reach of ordinary students, are here inserted; and where particular subjects required a more copious discussion. Mr. Wrangham has subjects required a more copious discussion, Mr. Wrangham has treated them at length at the end of each chapter, in excursus, after the plan adopted by Heyne in his admirable edition of Virgil.

Among the subjects thus copiously illustrated we may enumerate the disquisitions on the Square Samaritan Characters, the Antiquity of the Vowel Points, the Matres Lectionis א הוי א, the principal Manuscripts of the New Testament, particularly the Codex Alexandrinus, Various Readings, the Septuagint Version, Ancient and andrinus, Various Readings, the Septuagint Version, Ancient and Modern Latin Versions of the Scriptures, the Samaritans and the Samaritan Pentateuch, the Chaldee Paraphrases and their Uses, Editions of the Syriac Version, the agreement between the Hebrew and Arabic dialects, and the Persic Versions.

and Arabic dialects, and the Persic Versions.

Fac-similes of eight of the MSS. of chief note are prefixed; and in the course of the work there are inserted alphabets of the principal modern languages; viz. Hebrew and Chaldee, with the rabbinical letters, the Samaritan, Syriac, with the Nestorian and ancient Estrangelo letters, Arabic, Persic, Ethiopic, Armenian, Coptic or Egyptian, Illyrian, Dalmatian, Georgian, and Gothic; together with a specimen of Chinese characters, and tables of the dates of the principal modern versions of the Scriptures.

The work is heautifully executed at the expense and press, of

The work is beautifully executed at the expense, and press, the University of Cambridge, by whose munificence Mr. Archdeacon Wrangham is enabled to offer to critical students of the Scriptures the results of his learned researches at a price, for which they could not otherwise be afforded. There are a few copies on large paper, which are a chef-d'œuvre of typographical skill 59. Wetstenii (Johannis Jacobi) Prolegomena ad Testamenti Græci editionem accuratissimam, e vetustissimis codicibus denuo procurandam: in quibus agitur de codicibus manuscriptis Novi Testamenti, Scriptoribus qui Novo Testamento usi sunt, versionibus veteribus, editionibus prioribus, et claris interpretibus; et proponuntur animadversiones et cautiones, ad examen variorum lectionem Novi Testamenti. Amstelædami, 1730, 4to.

60. Casparis Wyssii Dialectologia Sacra, in quâ per universum Novi Testamenti contextum in apostolică et voce et phrasi, a communi linguæ et grammaticæ analogià discrepat, methodo congrua disponitur, accurate definitur, et omnium Sacri Contextûs exemplorum inductione illustratur. Tiguri, 1650, 4to.

"The peculiarities of the New Testament diction, in general, are arranged in this book under the following heads, viz. Dialectus, Attica, Ionica, Dorica, Æolica, Bœotica, Poetica, et Hebraica. This is very inconvenient, inasmuch as, in this way, many things of a light kind will be separated, and often treated of in four different places. Moreover, the author shows, that his knowledge of Greek did not extend beyond what was common at his time; as the menthe not extend beyond what was common at his time; as the mention of a poetic dialect evinces, and as an examination of what he calls the Attic will render still more evident. But as a collection of examples, which in many parts is perfectly complete, the book is very useful. In reference, also, to the Hebraisms of the New Testament, the author showed a moderation which deserved to be imitated by his contemporaries." (Winer's Greek Grammar of the New Test p. 13.)

61. A Vindication of the Authenticity of the Narratives contained in the first Two Chapters of the Gospels of St. Matthew and St. Luke, being an Investigation of Objections urged by the Unitarian Editors of the improved Version of the New Testament, with an Appendix containing Strictures on the Variations between the first and fourth Editions of that Work. By a Layman. [John Bevans.] London, 1822, 8vo.

In this very elaborate work, the authenticity of Matt. i. and ii. and Luke i. and ii. are most satisfactorily vindicated from the objections of the Editors of the Unitarian Version of the New Testament; whose disingenuous alterations in successive editions of that work are exposed in the Appendix.

SECTION II.

TREATISES ON HEBREW POETRY.

1. Exercitatio in Dialectum Poeticam Divinorum Carminum Veteris Testamenti. Auctore Geo. Joh. Lud. Vogel. Helmetadii, 1764, 4to.

2. De Sacrà Poësi Hebræorum Prælectiones Academicæ. Auctore Roberto Lowth, nuper Episcopo Londinensi.

The first edition of Bishop Lowth's Lectures appeared in 1753. That of 1821 may be considered as the best, as it includes, besides the additional observations of Prof. Michaelis, the further remarks of Rosenmüller (whose edition appeared at Leipsic in 1815), Richter, and Weiske. Bp. Lowth's Lectures are reprinted in the thirty-first volume of Ugolini's Thesaurus Antiquitatum.

- 3. Lectures on the Sacred Poetry of the Hebrews: translated from the Latin of the Rt. Rev. Robert Lowth, D.D. Bishop of London, by G. GREGORY. To which are added the principal Notes of Professor Michaelis, and Notes by the Translator and others. London, 1787, 2 vols. 8vo. 1816, 2 vols. 8vo. second
- 4. Lectures on the Sacred Poetry of the Hebrews, by Robert Lowth, D.D. Bishop of London. Translated from the original Latin, with Notes, by Calvin E. STOWE, A.M. Andover [Massachusetts], 1829, 8vo.
- "In 1815 Rosenmüller prepared a new edition of Lowth's work, to which he added many notes of his own, and corrected the errors into which Michaelis had fallen. Besides these writers, Sir William Jones, Eichhorn, Gesenius, De Wette, and some others, since the time of Michaelis, contributed not a little to the elucidation of this subject. From all these authors, the American Editor of this this subject. From all these authors, the American Editor of this work has enriched it with valuable selections. He has also added a number of notes, which are entirely original. He has displayed in the execution of his task much sound judgment and research. All the notes he has selected are of sterling value: and those which are the result of his own investigation exhibit originality and research." (North American Review, October, 1830, vol. xxxi. p. 375.)
- 5. Sacred Literature; comprising a Review of the Principles of Composition laid down by the late Robert Lowth, D.D. Lord Bishop of London, in his Prelections and Isaiah, and an application of the Principles so reviewed to the illustration of the New Testament; in a series of Critical Observations on the style and structure of that Sacred Volume. By the Rev. John Jebb, D.D. Bishop of Limerick. London, 1820, 8vo. Second Edition, corrected, 1828, 8vo.

An analysis of the system developed in this admirable work has already been given in Part II. Book II. Chap. II. §§ III.—V. of the 6. Tactica Sacra: an Attempt to develope, and to exhibit to the eye, by Tabular Arrangements, a general Rule of Composition prevailing in the Holy Scriptures. By Thomas Boxs, A.M. London, 1824, 4to.

An ingenious attempt to extend to the epistolary writings of the New Testament the principles of composition so ably illustrated by Bishop Jebb. The work consists of two parts: the first contains the necessary explanations; and the second comprises four of the epistles arranged at length in Greek and English examples. For specimens of this work, with appropriate Observations, see the British Review, vol. xxii. pp. 176—185.

7. J. G. EICHHORN Commentationes de Prophetica Poësi. Lipsiæ, 1823, 4to.

8. An Essay on Hebrew Poetry, Ancient and Modern. By Philip Sarcht, LL.D. London, 1824, 8vo.
9. The Spirit of Hebrew Poetry. By J. G. Herder. Translated from the German. By James Marsh. In two volumes. Vol. I. Burlington [New Jersey], 1833, 12mo.

The second volume is announced to appear as soon as the pressure of other duties on the translator will permit him to prepare it for the press.

SECTION III.

TREATISES ON THE QUOTATIONS FROM THE OLD TESTAMENT IN THE NEW.

- 1. Joannis Drusii Parallela Sacra: hog est, Locorum Veteris Testamenti cum iis que in Novo citantur conjuncta Commemoratio, Ebraice et Græce, cum Notis. Francckeræ, 1616, 4to.
- 2. Βιβλος Καταλλαγης, in quo secundum veterum Theologorum Hebræorum Formulas Allegandi, et Modos interpretandi, conciliantur Loca ex V. in N. T. allegata. Auctore Guilielmo Suren-HUSIO. Amstelædami, 1713, 4to.

This elaborate work is divided into four Books. The first treats on the formulæ of citing the Old Testament in the New; the second on the modes of quotation; the third, on the methods of interpretation adopted by the sacred writers; and the fourth on the mode of explaining and reconciling the seeming contradictions occurring in the genealogies. Many very difficult passages are here happily illustrated.

3. Immanuelis Hoffmanni Demonstratio Evangelica par ipsum Scripturarum consensum, in oraculis ex Vet. Testamento in Novo Allegatis declarata. Edidit, observationibus illustravit, Vitam Auctoris, et Commentationem Historico-Theologicam de recta ratione Allegata ista interpretandi, præmisit Tob. Godofredus Hegelmaier. Tubingæ, 1773–79–81, in three volumes, 4to.

In this very claborate work, every quotation from the Old Testament in the New is printed at full length, first as cited by the evangelists and apostles, then in the original Hebrew, and thirdly in the words of the Septuagmi Greek Version. The learned author then examines it both critically and hermeneutically, and shows the perfect harmony subsisting between the Old and New Testaments. Hoffmann's Demonstratio Evangelica is extremely scarce, and very little known in this country.

4. The Prophecies and other Texts cited in the New Testament, compared with the Hebrew original, and with the Septuagint version. To which are added Notes by Thomas RANDOLPH, D.D. Oxford, 1782, 4to.

This valuable and beautifully-printed tract is now rarely to be met with, and only to be procured at seven or eight times its original price. The most material of this excellent critic's observations are inserted in the notes to our chapter on the Quotations from the Old Testament in the New, in the first Volume.

 The Modes of Quotation, used by the Evangelical Writers, explained and vindicated by the Rev. Dr. Henry Owen. London, 1789, 4to.

The design of this elaborate work is, 1. To compare the quotations of the Evangelists with each other, and with the passages referred to in the Old Testament, in order to ascertain the real differences:—2. To account for such differences; and to reconcile the Evangelists with the Prophets, and with each other:—and, 3. To show the just application of such quotations, and that they fully prove the points which they were brought to establish.

6. A Collation of the Quotations from the Old Testament in the New, with the Septuagint. [By the Rev. Thomas Scott.]

This important Collation is inserted in the ninth and tenth volumes of the Christian Observer for the years 1810 and 1811; where it is simply designated by the initials of the late venerable and learned author's name. Many of his valuable critical Observations will be found in the notes to Part I. Chap. IV. Sect. I. of the first Volume.

7. Passages cited from the Old Testament by the writers of the New Testament, compared with the Original Hebrew and the Septuagint Version. Arranged by the Junior Class in the Theological Seminary, Andover, and published at their request under the superintendence of M. Stuart, Associate Professor of Sacred Literature. Andover, Massachusetts, 1827, 4to.

In this beautifully printed pamphlet the quotations are arranged in a different order from that adopted in Part I. Chap. IV. Sect. I. of the first Volume. There, we have printed the Hebrew, Septuagint, and Greek texts of the New Testament in three parallel columns, with English versions of each. In the Anglo-American text, the quotations are given in three columns, thus: Septuagint, Hebrew text, and passages from the New Testament. The Hebrew texts are taken, with points, from Michaelis's edition, printed in 1720; those from the Septuagint version are from Mr. Valpy's edition after the Vatican exemplar; and those from the New Testament are from Dr. Knappe's second edition. The formulæ of quotation are included in brackets, in order that the eye may readily seize them. The tract concludes with "an Index of Passages, in which the writers of the New Testament have referred to the Old, without formally quoting it:" this is stated to be selected from Dr. Knappe's Recensus Locorum, &c. appended to his edition of the New Testament. There are no notes to account for seeming discrepancies in the quotations, nor are there any hints of suggestions to enable students to classify them.

SECTION IV.

TREATISES ON MANUSCRIPTS AND ON VARIOUS READINGS.—COL-LATIONS OF MANUSCRIPTS AND COLLECTIONS OF VARIOUS READINGS.

§ 1. TREATISES ON MANUSCRIPTS.

- 1. De Usu Palæographiæ Hebraicæ ad explicanda Biblia Sacra, Dissertatio. Scripsit Jo. Joach. Bellebmann. Halæ et Erfordiæ, 1804.
- 2. Tychsen (O. G.) Tentamen de variis Codicum Hebraicorum Veteris Testamenti manuscriptorum generibus a Judæis et non-Judæis descriptis, eorumque in classes certas distributione, et antiquitatis et bonitatis characteribus. Rostochii, 1772, 8vo.

- 3. Caroli Godofredi Woidii Notitia Codicis Alexandrini, cum Variis ejus Lectionibus omnibus. Recudendum curavit, Notasque adjecit Gottlieb Leberecht Spohn. Lipsiæ, 1790, 8vo.
- 4. J. L. Huo de Antiquitate Vaticani Codicis Commentatio. Friburg, 1810, 4to.
- 5. De Antiquissimo Turicensis Bibliothecæ Græco Psalmorum Libro, in Membranâ Purpureâ titulis aureis ac litteris argenteis exarato, Epistola: ad Angelum Mariam Card. Quirinum scripta a Joanne Jacobo Breitingeno. Turici, 1748, 4to,
- H. C. Hwiin Libellus Criticus de Indole MS. Græci Novi Testamenti Vindobonensis Lambecii 34. Accessit Textus Latinus ante-Hieronymianus e Codice Laudiano. Havniæ, 1785, 8vo.

Extracts from this manuscript are given in Alter's edition of the Greek Testament, vol. ii. pp. 415—458. in which volume Professor Alter also gave extracts from various MSS. in the imperial library at Vienna.

7. Henr. Phil. Conr. Henke Codicis Uffenbachiani, qui Epistolæ ad Hebræos fragmenta continet, Recensus Criticus. Helmstadii, 1800, 4to.

This dissertation is also reprinted in Pott's and Ruperti's Sylloge Commentationum Theologicarum, vol. ii. p. 1—32.

- 8. Commentatio Critica, sistens duorum Codicum MStorum Biblia Hebraica continentium, qui Regiomonti Borussorum asservantur, præstantissimorum Notitiam; cum præcipuarum Variantium Lectionum ex utroque codice excerptarum Sylloge. Auctore Theod. Christ. LILIENTHAL. Regiomonti et Lipsiæ, 1770, 8vo.
- 9. Friderici MÜNTERI, Episcopi Selandiæ, Notitia Codicis Græci Evangelium Johannis variatum continentis. Hauniæ, 1828, 8vo.
- "This little tract of Bishop Münter deserves a place in the library of every critical divine. The manuscript, of which it gives an account, cannot however be of any importance except in the point of view under which the bishop has brought it forward. On questions of minute criticism its testimony is evidently of no value. Every one knows, that certain heretics mangled the Gospel of St. Matchew, while Marcion dismembered St. Luke's; but St. Mark's and St. John's Gospels were supposed hitherto to have escaped a mutilation of the same wilful nature. The manuscript, however, of which this little tract contains the collation, appears to exhibit a conception deliberately made, to bring the latter down to a standard of certain opinions. It is now in the library of a Johannite convent '(the templars of St. John of Jerusalem)' at Paris, and appears to be a copy of some more ancient MS., which is said to exist at present in a monastery on mount Athos; although its very existence, or at any rate its present abode, is rather problematical. The original manuscript is assigned to the latter part of the twelfth century: but bishop Münter adjudges both it and the Paris copy of it to the end of the thirteenth. It contains all the writings of the evangelist St. John, but its chief variations from the established copies are confined to the gospel. The gospel is divided into sections, each of which is called an ivary throw. They correspond nearly with our chapters. The bishop's first notion was, that it might be a corruption of some of the Gnostic sects. On closer examination, however, and comparing it with what Clemens Alexandrinus, Origen, and other ecclesiastical writers have related of these sects, it does not appear to agree with any of their particular corruptions. It is not, however, free from impure Greek, barbarisms, and Latinisms. It is, evidently, also accommodated to some peculiar opinion. The deductions drawn by the bishop, as to the doctrine sof those who concocted this perversion of St. John, are the following —that
- 10. Codicis Manuscripti N. T. Græci Raviani in Bibliotheca Regia Berolinensi Publica asservati Examen, quo ostenditur, alteram ejus partem majorem ex Editione Complutensi, alteram minorem ex Editione Rob. Stephani tertia esse descriptam, instituit Georgius Gottlieb Pappelbaum. Appendix exhibet, I. Addenda ad Wetstenii Collectionem Lectionum Varr. Editionis Complutensis. II. Epistolam ad Geo. Travis Rev. Anglum jam 1785 scriptam, at nondum editam. Berolini, 1796, 8vo.

- 11. Codicem Manuscriptum Novi Testamenti Græcum, Evangeliorum quatuor partem dimidiam majorem continentem, in Bibliotheca Regia Berolinensi publica asservatum, descripsit, contulit, animadversiones adjecit G. Th. Pappelbaum. Berolini, 1824, 8vo.
- 12. A Catalogue of the Ethiopic Biblical Manuscripts in the Royal Library of Paris, and in the Library of the British and Foreign Bible Society; also some account of those in the Vatican Library at Rome, with Remarks and Extracts. To which are added Specimens of Versions of the New Testament in the modern languages of Abyssinia, and a Grammatical Analysis of a chapter in the Amharic Dialect; with fac-similes of an Ethiopic and an Amharic Manuscript. By Thomas Pell Platt, B.A. Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. London, 1823, 4to.

A beautifully executed work, which is of considerable interest to Ethiopic and other oriental scholars.

- 13. Programma Theologicum, Notitiam continens de antiquissimo Codice Manuscripto Latinam quatuor Evangeliorum Versionem complectente, et in Bibliotheca Academiæ Ingolstadiensis adservato. Descripsit Codicem, Variantes ejusdem à Vulgatâ Lectiones inde a Marc. XII. 21. usque ad finem hujus Evangelii excerpsit, et criticè recensuit Sebast. Seemiller. Ingolstadii, 1784, 4to.
- 14. Dissertatio in aureum ac pervetustum SS. Evangeliorum Codicem MS. Monasterii S. Emmerani, Ratisbonæ, Auctore P. Colomanno Sanftl. [Ratisbonæ], 1786, 4to.
- 15. Josephi Friderici Schellingii Descriptio Codicis Manuscripti Hebrzo-Biblici, qui Stutgardize in Bibliotheca Illustris Consistorii Wirtembergici asservatur, cum Variarum Lectionum ex eo notatarum Collectione. Præmissa est Dissertatio de justo hodierni Studii, quod in excutiendis Codicibus Vet. Testamenti MSS. collocatur, Pretio et Moderamine. Stutgardize, 1775, 8vo.
- 16. Curæ Criticæ in Historiam Textus Evangeliorum, Commentationibus duabus Bibliothecæ Regiæ Parisiensis Codices N. T. complures, speciatim vero Cyprium, describentibus, exhibitæ a Joh. M. Augustino Scholz, Theologiæ Doctore. Heidelbergæ, 1820, 4to.

This publication consists of two Dissertations, the first of which contains the results of Dr. Scholz's researches (during a residence of two years) among forty-eight Manuscripts in the Royal Library at Paris, seventeen of which were entirely collated by him, with the greatest care. Nine of them had never before been collated by any individual. Dr. Scholz further announces in this dissertation his first theory of recensions, of which an abstract has been already given in Part I. Chap. III. Sect. III. of the first volume, p. 209. note. The second Dissertation comprises a minute account of the Codex Cyprius, a manuscript of the Four Gospels, of which he has for the first time given the entire collation.

17. Biblische Critische Reise in Frankreich, der Schweitz, Italien, Palästina, und im Archipel, in den Jahren 1818, 1819, 1820, 1821, nebst einer Geschichte des Textes des N. T. von Dr. Joh. Mart. Augustin Scholz. Leipzig und Sorau, 1823, 8vo.

This work is comparatively little known in England. It contains an account of Dr. Scholz's "Biblico-Critical Travels in France, Switzerland, Italy, Palestine, and the Archipelago, between the years 1818 and 1821." He has briefly described the manuscripts which came under his observation, and has extracted the most interesting various readings. He has also given a plate of fac-similes of ten of the most remarkable manuscripts. Many of his various readings are inserted by Dr. Schulz in his third edition of Griesbach's Greek Testament; and also by M. Dermout in the first part of his Collectanea Critica in Novum Testamentum. The most important part of Dr. Scholz's treatise is his Outlines towards a History of the Text of the New Testament, containing his second theory of recensions of MSS., an abstract of which has been given in Part I. Chap. III. Sect. III. of the first volume, pp. 209—212.

18. Natalitia Friderici Guilielmi III. Regis [Borussiæ] rite celebranda Academiæ Viadrinæ Vratislaviensis nomine indicit D. Davides Schulz. Disputatur de Codice IV. Evangeliorum Bibliothecæ Rhedigerianæ, in quo Vetus Latina Versio continentur. Vratislaviæ, 1814, 4to.

An inaccurate account of the Codex Rhedigerianus having appeared in the year 1763 from the pen of J. E. Scheibel, Dr. Schulz was induced to examine the manuscript with minute attention: he has investigated its external appearance, critical value, and age, at considerable length, and has inserted its most valuable various readings in his third edition of Griesbach's Greek Testament.

19. Descriptio Codicis Manuscripti, qui Versionem Pentateuchi Arabici continet, asservati in Bibliotheca Universitatis Vratislaviensis ac nondum editi, cum speciminibus Versionis Arabicæ. Auctore G. A. Theiner. Vratislaviæ, 1823, 4to.

The manuscript described in this dissertation formerly belonged to the Convent of Augustinians at Sagan: whence it was removed to the University of Breslau, together with some other oriental manuscripts. A note at the end indicates the date of this MS to be the year 1290. It is supposed to have been written in Egypt by a Christian Copt. (Journal de la Littérature Etrangère, 1823, p. 248.)

§ 2. TREATISES ON VARIOUS READINGS.

1. Ludovici Capelli Critica Sacra; sive de Variis, quæ in Sacris Veteris Testamenti libris occurrunt, Lectionibus Libri sex. Parisiis, 1650, folio. Halæ, 1775–1786, 3 vols. 8vo.

In this work Cappel attacked the notion, which at that time obtained generally among biblical critics, of the absolute integrity of the Hebrew text. So much were the French Protestants displeased at it, that they prevented it from being printed either at Sedan, Geneva, or Leyden. At length Father Morinus, and some other learned men, in communion with the church of Rome, obtained permission for its publication at Paris. It is now admitted that Cappel has fully proved his point. He was, however, severely attacked by Arnold Boott, in his Epistola De Textus Hebraici Veteris Testamenti Certitudine et Authentia, 4to. Parisiis, 1650, and especially by the younger Buxtorf, who in 1653 printed his Anti-Critica, seu Vindiciae Veritatis Ebraicae adversus Ludovici Capelli Criticam, quam vocat Sacram, &c. Basileæ, 4to.; in which Buxtorf most strenuously advocates the authority and absolute integrity of the Hebrew text. This standard work, which cost its learned author thirty-six years' labour, exhibits in six books the various readings which result, 1. From a juxta-position of different parts of the Old Testament; 2. From a collation of the parallel passages of the Old and New Testament; 3. From collations of the Masora, Samaritan version, and most ancient printed editions of the Hebrew Scriptures; 4. From a collation of the Septuagint with the Hebrew text, 5. From collations of the Hebrew text with the Chaldee Paraphrase; and the Greek versions of Aquila, Symmachus, and Theodotion, with the Latin Vulgate; and with the Masoretic and Rabbinical commentators; 6. The sixth and concluding book treats on the errors which are to be attributed to transcribers, and on the readings derived from conjectural criticism. The best edition of Cappel's work is the 8vo. one above noticed; it contains his various defences of himself against his bitter antagonists, and was superintended by MM. Vogel and Scharfenberg, who have inserted numerous valuable notes, in which the arguments and statements of Cappel are occasionally examined, corrected

2. Adami Rechenberghi Dissertatio Critica de Variantibus Novi Testamenti Lectionibus Græcis. Lipsiæ, 1690, 4to.

3. Joannis Clerici Ars Critica. 8vo. Londini, 1698.

The first two sections of the third part of this very valuable critical work treat on the origin and correction of false readings, both in profane, and particularly in the sacred writers.

- 4. Christoph. Matt. Pfaffii Dissertatio Critica de Genuinis Librorum Novi Testamenti Lectionibus. Amstelodami, 1709, 8vo.
- J. H. ab Elswich Dissertatio de Recentiorum in Novum Fœdus Critice. Vitebergæ, 1711.
- 6. J. W. BAIERI Dissertatio de Variarum Lectionum Novi Testamenti usu et abusu. Altdorf, 1712.
- 7. J. L. Frey Commentarius de Variis Lectionibus Novi Testamenti. Basil, 1713.
- 8. Chr. Ludert Dissertatio de Causis Variantium Lectionum Scripture. Lipsie, 1730.
- 9. Antonii Driessenii Divina Auctoritas Codicis Novi Testamenti, vindicata à strepitu Variantium Lectionum. Græningæ, 1733, 4to.
- 10. J. A. OSTANDRI Oratio de Originibus Variantium Lectionum Novi Testamenti. Tubingen, 1739, 4to.
- 11. J. A. OSIANDRI Disputatio de Præcipius Lectionibus Variis Novi Testamenti. Tubingen, 1747, 4to.
- 12. J. C. KLEMM Principia Criticæ Sacræ Novi Testamenti. Tubingen, 1746, 4to.
- 13. Jo. Geo. RICHTER Exercitatio de Arte Critica Scripturas Interprete. Ludg. 1750, 4to.
- 14. C. B. Michaelis Tractatio Critica de Variis Lectionibus Novi Testamenti caute colligendis et dijudicandis, in qua cum de illarum causis tum de cautelis agitur, simulque de codicibus, versionibus antiquis, et Patribus, partim curiosa, partim, utilia, asseruntur. Halæ, 1749, 4to.

This treatise was the foundation on which J. D. Michaelis built his "admirable chapter" on the various readings of the New Testament, as Bishop Marsh most truly terms it. This chapter forms by far the largest portion of the first volume of his Introduction to the New Testament. The Latin treatise of his father is of extreme rarity.

15. Jo. Jac. Wetstenii Libelli ad Crisin atque Interpretationem Novi Testamenti. Adjecta est Recensio Introductionis Bengelii ad Crisin Novi Testamenti, atque Glocestrii Ridley Dissertatio de Syriacarum Novi Fæderis Indole atque Usu. Illustravit Joh. Salomo Semler. Halæ Magdeburgicæ, 1766, 8vo.

The first 109 pages of this volume contain Wetstein's Animadversiones et Cautiones ad Examen Variarum Lectionum Novi Testamenti Necessaria, which were first printed in the second volume of his edition of the Greek Testament, pp. 859-874. They have been consulted for our observations on various readings. Wetstein's rules for judging of various readings are given with great clearness and precision; and the whole volume is "a publication which should be in the hands of every critic." (Bishop Marsh.)

- § 3. COLLATIONS OF MANUSCRIPTS AND COLLECTIONS OF VARI-OUS READINGS.
- * * Of the earlier collections of Various Readings, an account of may be seen in Le Long's Bibliotheca Sacra, vol. i. pp. 460—472.
- 1. Collatio Codicis Cottoniana Geneseos cum Editione Romanâ a viro clarissimo Joanne Ernesto Grabe olim facta; nunc demum summa cura edita ab Henrico Owen. Londini, 1778,
- 2. A Collation of an Indian copy of the Pentateuch, with preliminary remarks, containing an exact description of the manuscript, and a notice of some others, Hebrew and Syriac, collected by the Rev. C. Buchanan, D.D. in the year 1806, and now deposited in the Public Library, Cambridge. Also a collation and description of a manuscript roll of the book of Esther, and the Megillah of Ahasuerus, from the Hebrew copy, originally extant in brazen tablets at Goa; with an English Translation. By Thomas YEATES. Cambridge, 1812, 4to.

An account of the manuscript, which Mr. Yeates has collated in his learned and valuable publication, is given in Part I. Chap. III Sect. I. of the first volume, pp. 219—221. For an analysis of his work, see the Christian Observer for the year 1812, pp. 172—174.

3. Variæ Lectiones Veteris Testamenti, ex immensa MSS. Editorumque Codicum congerie hausta, et ad Samaritanum Textum, ad vetustissimas Versiones, ad accurationes Sacrae Criticæ Fontes ac Leges examinatæ: a Jo. Bern. De Rossi. Parmæ, 1784-87, 4 tomis, 4to.—Ejusdem Scholia Critica in Vetus Testamentum, seu Supplementum ad Varias Sacri Textûs Lectiones. Parmæ, 1799, 4to.

This collection of various readings to the Hebrew Scriptures may be considered as an indispensably necessary supplement to Dr. Kennicott's critical edition described in pages 7, 8. of this Appendix. Four hundred and seventy-nine manuscripts were collated for M. De Rossi's elaborate work, besides two hundred and eighty-eight printed editions, some of which were totally unknown before, and others very imperfectly known. He also consulted several Chaldee, Syriac, Arabic, and Latin manuscripts, together with a considerable number of rabbinical commentaries. Vol. I. contains the Prolegonumber of rabbinical commentaries. Vol. I. contains the Prolegomena of De Rossi, and the various readings of the books of Genesis, Exodus, and Leviticus. Vol. II. contains those of the books of mena of De Rossi, and the various readings of the books of Genesis, Exodus, and Leviticus. Vol. II. contains those of the books of Numbers, Deuteronomy, Joshua, Judges, Samuel, and Kings. Vol. III. comprehends Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel the twelve minor prophets, with the Song of Solomon, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes, and Esther: and in Vol. IV. are the various readings of the books of Psalms, Proverbs, Job, Daniel, Ezra, Nehemiah, and Chronicles. The supplemental volume of Scholia Critica, published at Parma in 1799, contains the results of M. De Rossi's further collations. His Prolegomena are a treasure of biblical criticism. The critical labours of this aminent bibliogram secontain (as. Dr. Kennjoott's Renjoott's Renjoott labours of this eminent philologer ascertain (as Dr. Kennicott's valuable and judicious labours had before done), instead of invalidating the integrity of the sacred text, in matters of the greatest importance; as all the manuscripts, notwithstanding the diversity of their dates, and of the places where they were transcribed, agree with respect to that which constitutes the proper essence and substance of divine revelution, viz. its doctrines, moral precepts, and historical relations. M. De Rossi charges the variations not merely on the copyists, but on the ignorance and temerity of the critics, who have in all ages been too ambitious of dictating to their authors: and who, instead of correcting the pretended errors of others, frequently substitute in their place real errors of their own.

4. Codex Criticus of the Hebrew Bible, wherein van der Hooght's Text is corrected from the Hebrew Manuscripts collated by Kennicott and De Rossi, and from the Ancient Versions; being an Attempt to form a Standard Text of the Old Testament. To which is prefixed an Essay on the Nature and Necessity of such an Undertaking. By the Rev. George Hamilton, M.A. London, 1821, 8vo.

Much as has been accomplished by the learned researches of Dr. Kennicott, Professor De Rossi, and other distinguished biblical critics, a standard text of the Books of the Old Testament is still a desideratum in sacred literature, which Mr. Hamilton's work is an able and successful attempt to supply. In his Codex Criticus, "the text of van der Hooght is adopted as the basis, being that to which both Kennicott and De Rossi have referred their collations. Every deviation from this text is marked by hollow letters, and the word or words, as they stand in van der Hooght, are exhibited in Vol. II.—App. 4 C, the outer margin, so that the entire of his text is printed. The inferior margin contains such various readings as were deemed worthy of notice, though not entitled to a place in the text; readworthy of hotel the being marked (†), and those possibly true (‡). In the text each variation is preceded by a numerical figure, and followed by two inverted commas (") to mark how far it extends: the figure refers to a corresponding one in the outer margin, if it be prefixed to a correction, in which case the margin exhibits the rejected reading, or to one in the inferior margin, if it be but a various reading. In every case there is also a corresponding number in the notes, which expresses the authorities by which the reading is supported, or on which the various reading rests. plan is in accordance with that of Griesbach's revision." (Eclectic Review, N. S. vol. xviii. pp. 319, 320.) "On the value and utility of the publication before us, it is unnecessary for us to expatiate. The purity of the text of the Bible is a subject which possesses the highest importance. This Codex Criticus presents in a condensate of conventions and what is of several conventions. densed and commodious, and, what is of no small consideration, cheap form, the results of Kennicott's and De Rossi's labours in sacred criticism." (Ibid. p. 324.)

5. C. A. Bode Pseudo-Critica Millio-Bengeliana, qua allegationes pro Variis Novi Testamenti Lectionibus refutantur. Halæ, 1767, 2 vols. 8vo.

Dr. Mill in his critical edition of the Greek Testament, not being sufficiently acquainted with the Oriental Versions, had recourse to the Latin translations of them in Bishop Walton's Polyglott, for the the Latin translations of them in Bishop Walton's Polyglott, for the various readings of those versions. Consequently he erred whenever these were incorrect. Similar mistakes were committed by Bengel from the same cause. The design of Professor Bode is to correct the defects and mistakes of those eminent critics. Bode is considered by his countrymen as a man of most extensive learning, but totally destitute of elegance as a writer.

6. Joannis Alberti Bengelli Apparatus Criticus ad Novum Testamentum, criseos sacræ compendium, limam, supplementum, ac fructum exhibens. Cura Philippi Davidis Burkii. Tubingæ, 1763, 4to.

The first impression of this work appeared in Bengel's edition of the Greek Testament, published at Tubingen, in 1734, 4to. It was materially enlarged and corrected by Burkius. Much as has been done by later critics, the researches of Bengel and his collec-Various Readings are not superseded by their learned labours

- 7. Jo. Jac. Griesbachti Symbols: Critics, ad supplendas et corrigendas Variarum N. T. Lectionum collectiones. Accedit multorum N. T. Codicum Græcorum Descriptio, et Examen. Halæ, 1785-93, 2 tomis, 8vo.
- 8. Criseos Griesbachianæ in Novum Testamentum Synopsis. Edidit Josephus WHITE, S.T.P. Oxonii, 1811, 8vo.

This small volume is exactly conformable in its design to the beautiful edition of the New Testament published by Dr. White in 1808, and noticed in p. 16. of this Appendix. It "contains all the variations of any consequence, which can be considered as established, or even rendered probable, by the investigation of Griesbach. The chief part of these readings was given in the margin of that edition, distinguished by the Origenian marks. Here the value of each reading or proposed alteration is stated in words at length, and therefore cannot be misapprehended. This book may therefore be considered as a kind of supplement to that edition, or illustration of it." (British Critic (O. S.), vol. xxxviii. p. 395.)

9. Remarks upon the Systematic Classification of Manuscripts, adopted by Griesbach in his edition of the New Testament, Richard LAURENCE, LL.D. Oxford and London, 1814, 8vo.

For a full analysis of this elaborate Treatise of Dr. (now Archbishop) Laurence, see the British Critic (N. S.), vol. i. pp. 173—192. 296—315. 401—428., and the Eclectic Review (N. S.), vol. iv. pp. 1-22. 173-189.

10. SAUBERTI (Johannis) Varize Lectiones Textûs Grzei Evangelii S. Matthzi, ex plurimis impressis ac manuscriptis Codicibus collectæ; et cum Versionibus partim antiquissimis, partim præstantissimis, nec non Patrum veteris Ecclesiæ Græco rum Latinorumque Commentariis collatæ; præmisså Epicrisi de Origine, Auctoritate, et Usu Variarum Novi Testamenti Lectionum Græcarum in genere. Helmestadii, 1672, 4to.

11. Θεός ἐρανες θου εν σαρκε. Or, a Critical Dissertation upon 1 Tim. iii. 16. wherein Rules are laid down to distinguish, in various readings, which is genuine; an account is given of above a hundred Greek Manuscripts of St. Paul's Epistles (many of them not heretofore collated); the writings of the Greek and Latin Fathers, and the ancient Versions are examined; and the common reading of that Text, 'Gon was manifest in the Flesh,' is prov'd to be the true One. Being the substance of eight Service. is prov'd to be the true One. Being the substance of eight Sermons preach'd at the Lady Moyer's Lecture, in the years 1737 and 1738. By John BERRIMAN, M.A. London, 1741, 8vo.

12. Examen Variarum Lectionum Joannis Millii S.T.P. in Novum Testamentum. Opera et studio Danielis Whither, S.T.P.

In vol. ii. of Dr. Whitby's Commentary on the New Testament, just but severe strictures from the pen of the Rev. Dr. Henderson. "They" [the terms of the label in question] "are obviously designed

This vehement attack on Dr. Mill's Collection of Various Readings, in his critical edition of the New Testament, was first published in 1710, and afterwards annexed to Dr. Whitby's Commentary. "His chief object was, to defend the readings of the printed text, and to show that Mill was mistaken in frequently preferring other readings. But, how frequently soever Mill has been guilty of an error in judgment, in the choice of this or that particular reading, yet the value of the collection itself remains unaltered. Whitby, though a good commentator, was a bad critic." (Michaelis's Introd. to the New Test. vol. ii. p. 460.) In the following page he severely censures Whitby's Examen.

13. Critical Remarks upon the Epistles, as they were published from several authentic copies, by John Bebelius, at Basil, in 1531. By Benjamin DAWNEY, York, 1735, 8vo.

This tract is not of very common occurrence. The common reading is placed first, to which is subjoined the text of Bebelius, from his edition of the New Testament printed at Basil, in 1531, together with such authorities as favour it. These authorities (which are nearly forty in number) consist of Manuscripts, Quotations of the New Testament in the writings of the Fathers, and printed copies; and are taken from Dr. Mill's critical edition of the Greek Testament, and other sources.

- 14. Jacobi Amersfordt Dissertatio Philologica de Variis Lectionibus Holmesianis locorum quorumdam Pentateuchi Mosaici. Lugd. Bat. 1815, 4to.
- 15. A Collection of Various Readings for the New Testament made from ancient Greek Manuscripts. (In the third volume of Dr. A. Clarke's Commentary on the New Testament.) London, 1817, 4to.

The manuscript, from which this collection of various readings is printed, formerly belonged to the Rev. Dr. Mangey, a distinguished divine in the early part of the eighteenth century: but it is not in his handwriting. Dr. Clarke has minutely described the watermarks of the paper on which the collection is written, but he is ignorant by whom it was made; nor does he know what MSS. have thus been collated, since no description of them appears. He states that the collector of these various readings was greatly attached to the Latin version, as in almost every case he has preferred those readings which agree with the Vulgate. Many of the readings thus preferred are those which were adopted by Griesbach, and received into the Greek text of his edition of the New Testament. Dr. Clarke is of opinion that this collection of various readings might have been made, either in England or in Holland, about one hundred years since, in the reign of King George I. It commences with Matt. xxiv. 2., and ends with Rev. xxii. 7.

· 16. Collectanea Critica in Novum Testamentum. Auctore Jacobo Dermout, Theol. Doct. Pars Prior. Lugduni Batavorum, 1825, 8vo.

This volume contains a collection of various readings (now published for the first time) from the Codex Gronovianus 131, a neatly written MS. of the four Gospels, and the Codex Meermannianus, containing the four Gospels, Acts and Epistles, with some chasms: both these MSS. are in the University Library at Leyden. He has also collated two other MSS. in the same library, the readings of which had been imperfectly given by Wetstein, viz. the Codex Petavii 1., containing the Acts and Epistles entire, and the Codex Scaligeri, which contains various passages of the New Testament. These four MSS. were collated with the Textus Receptus: and to the readings thus obtained, Dr. Dermout has added numerous lections from Scholz's Biblico-Critical Travels, and from the Codex Berolinensis, a MS. of the eleventh century, containing fragments of the Gospels, published by Pappelbaum. All these readings are disposed in the order of the several books and chapters of the New Testament by Dr. Dermout, who promised two other portions of his Collectanea Critica, which, however, have not yet been published. They were announced to contain accurate descriptions of the manuscripts consulted by him, together with commentaries on select passages of the New Testament, which have been or still are the subject of discussion among the learned.

17. An Historical Account of two notable Corruptions of Scripture, in a Letter to a Friend, by Sir Isaac Newton. London, 1830, 8vo.

A very imperfect copy of this tract, wanting both the beginning and the end, and erroneous in many places, was published at London in the year 1754, under the title of "Two Letters from Sir Isaac Newton to M. Le Clerc." But in the author's manuscript, which was printed for the first time entire in the fifth volume of Sir Isaac Newton's Works, the whole is one continued discourse. The texts in question are the disputed clauses in 1 Tim. iii. 16. and 1 John v. 7.: the title page above given is prefixed to "Newton's Letter," by its modern Socinian editors. The copy in the possession of the author of this work is labelled "Sir Isaac Newton on two Corruptions of Scripture." Other copies (it appears from Dr. Henderson's learned tract noticed in the ensuing article, p. 3.) were exposed to sale at the modern Socinian Depository, where this tract was published, and labelled "SIR ISAAC NEWTON on Trinitarian Corruptions of Scripture." This conduct called forth the following just but severe strictures from the pen of the Rev. Dr. Henderson. "They" [the terms of the label in question] "are obviously designed to answer a twofold purpose. First, they are intended to imbue the public mind with the belief that Trinitarians, in order to support their system, scruple not to falsify the records of divine truth; and that this falsification is not confined to a few solitary instances, but has been practised to some considerable extent. Had there been no such design, why not candidly state the whole head and front of their offending, as alleged in Sir Isaac's impeachment? Why, instead of announcing 'two corruptions,' or, if deemed preferable, 'two notable corruptions of Scripture,' is it given indefinitely, as if scores or even hundreds of passages had suffered from the fraudulent hand of Trinitarian corruption? Secondly, the celebrated name of Sir Isaac Newton is put forth to support with its high sanction the cause of anti-Trinitarianism; and superficial thinkers, or such as may not possess the means of determining what were the real sentiments of the 'first of philosophers,' will naturally suppose that he espoused that cause, and that a system of opinions, which commanded the approval of so mighty a mind, cannot but be true." (Ibid.)

18. The Great Mystery of Godliness incontrovertible: or Sir Isaac Newton and the Socinian foiled in the Attempt to prove a Corruption in the Text, 1 Tim. iii. 16. Θεος ἐφανερωθην ἐν σαρω, containing a Review of the Charges brought against the passage; an Examination of the Various Readings; and a Confirmation of that in the received Text on Principles of General and Biblical Criticism. By E. Henderson, [D.D.] London, 1830, 8vo.

The genuineness of the controverted clause in 1 Tim. iii. 16. is established beyond doubt in this ably executed and impartial treatise; which his grace the present Archbishop of Canterbury (Dr. Howley) is stated in the Andover Biblical Repository (vol. i. p. 777.) to have characterized as "a valuable specimen of critical ability, successfully exerted in the investigation and discovery of truth." In an appendix, Dr. Henderson has given a list of works, in which the genuineness of the disputed clause is discussed. It ought to be added, that his treatise was not originally intended for publication; but was printed in order to meet the exigency occasioned by an attempt on the part of the modern Socinians, to persuade the public that Sir Isaac Newton had proved a corruption of the passage in 1 Tim. iii. 16. Dr. Henderson's Treatise is reprinted in the second volume of the Andover Biblical Repository, with some additional observations by the Rev. Professor Stuart.

19. Lucubratio Critica in Acta Apostolorum, Epistolas Catholicas, et Paulinas: in qua de classibus Librorum manu scriptorum Quæstio instituitur, Descriptio et Varia Lectio VII. Codicum Marcianorum exhibetur, atque Observationes ad plurima loca cum apostoli tum evangeliorum dijudicanda et emendanda proponuntur, a Guil. Frid. Rink. Basilieæ, 1830, 8vo.

\S 4. Treatises on the genuineness of the disputed clauses in 1 john v. 7, 8.

-  As a copious statement of the evidence for and against the genuineness of the disputed clauses, in this memorable passage of the New Testament, is given in Vol. II. pp. 366. et seq. those publications or parts of publications enumerated in the following Bibliographical List, which maintain the Spuriousness of the clauses in question, are printed in Italics, in order that this section may not be unnecessarily protracted. For particulars respecting the line of argument advocated by their respective authors, the reader is referred to article 46. p. 82. infra.
- 1. Adnotationes Millii, auctæ et correctæ ex Prolegomenis suis, Wetstenii, Bengelii, et Sabaterii ad 1 Joann. V. 7. una cum duabus epistolis Richardi Bentleii, et Observationibus Joannis Seldeni, Christophori Matthiæ Pfaffii, Joannis Francisci Büddei, et Christiani Friderici Schmidii de eodem loco. Collectæ et editæ a Thoma Burgerss, S.T.P. Episcopo Menevenri [hodie Sarisburiensi]. Mariduni [Caermarthen], 1822, 8vo.

With the exception of Wetstein's note on 1 John V. 7, which impugns the genuineness of the disputed clause, all the pieces in this volume are from the pens of the most strenuous of its early vindicators. An appendix contains the shorter observations of J. G. Pritius, Frederick Lampe, J. F. Buddeus, John Laurence Mosheim, Bishop Fell, Pool's Compendium of the Annotations of Gerhard and Hammond, Küttner's abridgment of Griesbach's Disquisition on this clause; and the concluding remarks of the learned editor on Dr. Mill's opinion concerning the old italic version, and on Bengel's interpretation of the eighth verse and his transposition of the seventh and eighth verses.

- 2. Dissertatio, in quâ Integritas et au Sertia istius celeberrimi loco 1 Epist. Joannis cap. V. v. 7. a suppositionis notâ vindicatur. Authore Thoma Smith, S.T.P. [In his Miscellanea, pp. 121—150.] Londini, 1690, 8vo.
- 3. Critique du Passage de l'Epistre I de S. Jean, chap. V. v. 7. Par Richard Sinon. [In his Histoire Critique du Texte du Nouveau Testament, Part I. ch. xviii. pp. 203—218.] Rotterdam, 1689, 4to.

- 4. Defensio superioris Dissertationis contra exceptiones De Simonii. Authore Thoma Smith. [Miscellanea, pp. 151-173.] Londoni, 1690, 8vo.
- 5. Historia Dicta Johannei de Sanctissima Trinitate, 1 Joh. cap. V. vers. 7. per multa secula omissi, seculo V. restituti, et excunte seculo XVI. in versionem vernaculam [i. e. Germanicam D. Lutheri] recepti, una cum Apologia B. Lutheri, autore Friderico Ernesto Kettnero. Francofurti et Lipsia, 1713, 4to.

This publication was caused by Smoon's attack on the disputed clause, in behalf of which the weakest assertions and conjectures are here brought forward as irrefragable arguments.

- 6. A Full Enquiry into the original Authority of that Text 1 John V. 7. containing an Account of Dr. MdV's Evidences from Antiquity for and against its being genuine. With an Examination of his Judgment thereupon. [By Thomas Exist.] London, 1715; 1719, 8vo.
- 7. A Critical Dissertation upon the seventh Verse of the fifth Chapter of St. John's First Epistle. Wherein the authenticness of this text is fully proved against the objections of Mr. Simon and the modern Arians. By David Martin. Translated from the French [which was published in 1717], by Samuel Jehn, M.D. London, 1719, 8vo.
- 8. An Answer to Mr. Martin's Critical Dissertation on 1 John V. 7. showing the insufficiency of his proofs and the errors of his suppositions; by which he attempts to support the authority of that text from supposed MSS. By Thomas Emily Lym. London, 1718, 8vo.
- 9. An Examination of Mr. Emlyn's Answer to the Dissertation. By David MARTIN. Translated from the French. London, 1719, 8vo.
- 10. A Reply to Mr. Martin's Examination of the Answer to his Dissertation. By Thomas EMLYN. London, 1720, 8vo.
- 11. The genuineness of 1 John V. 7. demonstrated by Proofs which are beyond all exceptions. By David Martin, London, 1722. 8vo.
- 12. A Vindication of that celebrated text, 1 John V. 7. from being spurious; and an Explication of it upon the supposition of its being genuine. In four Sermons, by Benjamin Calamy, D.D. London, 1722.
- 13. Dissertation sur le Fameux Passage de la première Epitre de Saint Jean, chapitre V.v. 7. Par Augustin Calmet. Commentaire Littéral, tom. ix. pp. 744—752. Paris, 1726, folio; also in tom. xxiii. pp. 536—551. of the Bible de Vence. 8vo. Paris, 1824.
- 14. The Doctrine of the Trinity as it is contained in the Scriptures explained and confirmed, and Objections answered: . . . in eighteen Sermons preached at Nottingham. By the Rev. James Sloss, A.M. London, 1734. Second edition, revised and corrected, London, 1815, 8vo.

The first sermon contains a vindication of the disputed clause. In the second edition some few obsolete words have been expunged, and others more plain and intelligible have been substituted.

15. Joannes Salomonis Semlert Vindiciæ plurium præcipuarum Lectionum Novi Testamenti, adversus Whistonum atque ab eo latas leges criticas. Halæ, 1751, 8vo.

Michaelis characterizes this treatise as a profoundly learned and moderate vindication of the disputed clause. Semler, however, soon afterwards altered his opinion, and wrote what Michaelis pronounces to be "the most important work on this subject." (Introd. to New Test. vol. iv. p. 413.)

16. Two Letters of Sir Isaac Newton to Mr. Le Clerc, upon the reading of the Greek Text 1 John V. 7., and 1 Tim. iii. 16. London, 1754, 8vo.

See a notice of this publication, p. 80. supra.

- 17. Dissertation concerning the genumeness of 1 John V. 7,8. By George Benson, D.D. [In his Paraphrase and Notes on the seven Catholic Epistles, pp. 631—646. second edition.] London, 1756, 4to.
- 18. Letters to Edward Gibbon, Esq. in defence of the Authenticity of the seventh verse of the first Epistle of St. John. By George Travis, M.A. Archdeaconof Chester, third and best edition. London, 1794, 8vo.
- 19. Letters to Mr. Archdeacon Travis, in Answer to his Defence of the Three Heavenly Witnesses, 1 John V. 7. By Richard Pouson, M.A. London, 1790, 8vo.
- 20. Dissertation on 1 John V. 7. By John David MICHAELIS, [In vol. iv. pp. 412—441. of his Introduction to the New Testament, translated from the German, by Herbert Marsh, D.D.]

20.* Letters to Mr. Archdeacon Travis, in Vindication of one of his Notes to Michaelis's Introduction With an Appendix, containing a Review of Mr. Travis's Collection of the Greek MSS, which he examined in Pavis; an Extract from Mr. Pappelbaum's Treatise on the Berlin MS.; and an Essay on the Origin and Object of the Velesian Readings. By Herbert Mansh [now D.D. and Bishop of Peterborough]. Leipzig, 1795, 8vo.

A volume of extreme rarity.

21. Concerning the genuineness of 1 John V. 7. By John Her, D.D. [In Vol. II. pp. 280—291. of his Lectures in Divinity.] Cambridge, 1796, 8vo.

This little essay will amply repay the trouble of perusal from the candid spirit in which it is drawn up. The learned author appears to have cherished the hope that future MSS might be discovered, containing the disputed passage. Subsequent researches of other critics have shown that such a hope must now be abandoned.

- 22. Diatribe in Locum 1 Joann. V. 7, 8. Auctore Joanne Jacobo Griesbach. [At the end of Vol. II. of Dr. Griesbach's Critical Edition of the New Testament.] Halæ, 1806; Londini, 1810. Editio nova, 1818, 8vo.
- 23. A short Historical Outline of the Disputes respecting the Authenticity of the verse of the Three Heavenly Witnesses, or 1 John, Chap. V. ver. 7. By Charles Butlen, Esq. [Appendix II. to his Horæ Biblicæ, or in his Miscellaneous Works, vol. i. pp. 365—407]. London, 8vo.
- 24. Observations on the Text of the Three Divine Witnesses. By Adam Clarke, LL.D. [At the end of his Commentary on the first Epistle of John, and also in his Succession of Sacred Literature, published at London, in 1807]. 12mo.
- 25. The Question concerning the Authenticity of 1 John V. 7. briefly examined. [By the Rev. Joseph Jowett, Ll.D. Professor of Civil Law in the University of Cambridge.] In the sixth volume of the Christian Observer for the year 1807. 8vo.

A masterly and temperate discussion of the whole of the evidence which had been adduced for and against the genuineness of the disputed clause, previously to the year 1807.

- 26. Note on 1 John V. 7. By T. F. Middleton, D.D. [afterwards Bishop of Calcutta.] In pp. 633—653. of his Doctrine of the Greek Article. London, 1808, 8vo.
- 27. The Critique on the Eclectic Review [of the English Version of the New Testament, published by the modern Sociaians] on 1 John V. 7. confuted by Martyn's Examination of Emlyn's Answer; to which is added an Appendix, containing Remarks on Mr. Porson's Letters to Archdeacon Travis. By J. Phanez. London, 1809, 8vo.
- 28. Observations on 1 John V. 7. by Frederick Nolan, LL.D. In his "Inquiry into the Integrity of the Greek Vulgate, pp. 293—305. 540—564. London, 1815, 8vo.
- 29. Three Letters addressed to the Rev. Frederick Nolan, on his erroneous Criticisms and Mis-statements in the Christian Remembrancer, relative to the Text of the Heavenly Witnesses. . . . By the Rev John Oxlee. York, 1825, 8vo.
- 30. Extensive Controversy about the celebrated Text, 1 John V. 7. By the Rev. William Hales, D.D. In vol. ii. pp. 133—226. of his Treatise on "Faith in the Holy Trinity." London, 1818, 8vo.
- 31. Annotatio ad 1 Epistolam Joannis cap. V. ver. 7, 8. Auctore Joanne Nepomuceno Albeb. In vol. iii. p. 353—369. of his Institutiones Hermeneuticæ Novi Testamenti. Pestini, 1818, 8vo.
- 32. A Vindication of 1 John V. 7. from the Objections of M. Griesbach, in which a new View is given of the external evidence, with Greek Authorities for the Authoriticy of the Verse, not hitherto adduced in its Defence. By Thomas Burgers, D.D., Bishop of St. David's [now of Salisbury]. London, 1821, 8vo.
- 33. Review of the "Vindication," &c. in the Quarterly Review for March, 1822. [Attributed to the Rev. Dr. Turron, Regius Divinity Professor in the University of Cambridge.] London, 1822, 8vo.
- 34. A Vindication of 1 John V. S. &c. Second edition: to which is added a Preface in reply to the Quarterly Review, and a Postscript in answer to a recent publication entitled "Palæoromaica." By Thomas Bungess, D.D., Bishop of St. David's. London, 1823, 8vo.
- 35. Observations on 1 John V. 7. by Herbert Marsh, D.D., Bishop of Peterborough. In part vi. pp. 13-30. of his Lectures in Divinity. Cambridge, 1822, 8vo.

36. A Selection of Tracts and Observations on 1 John V. 7. | cipal Writers on both sides of the Question. Part the First, consisting of Bishop Barlow's Letter to Mr. Hunt; Bishop Smallbrooke's Letter to Dr. Bentley; Two anonymous Letters to Dr. Bentley, with Dr. Bentley's Answer; an Extract from Martin's Examination of Emlyn's Answer relative to that Letter; together with Notes of Hammond and Whitby on the controverted Verse; and Dr. Adam Clarke's Account of the Montfort Manuscript. [With a Preface by the Editor, Thomas Burgess, D.D., Bishop of St. David's.] London, 1824, 8vo.

37. Three Letters addressed to the Editor of the Quarterly Review, in which is demonstrated the Genuineness of the Three Heavenly Witnesses, 1 John V. 7. By Ben David [John Jones, LL.D.]. London, 1825, 8vo.

- 38. A Letter to the Clergy of the Diocese of St. David's on a Passage of the Second Symbolum Antiochenum of the Fourth Century, as an evidence of the authenticity of 1 John V. 7. By Thomas Burgess, D.D., Bishop of St. David's. London, 1825, 8vo.
- 39. Review of the two preceding Articles in the Quarterly Review for December, 1825. London, 8vo. [Attributed to the Rev. Dr. Turton.]
- 40. A Vindication of the Literary Character of Professor Porson from the Animadversions of the Rt. Rev. Thomas Burgess, D.D., Lord Bishop of Salisbury, in various publications on 1 John V. 7. By Crito Cantabrigiensis. [The Rev. Thomas Turton, D.D., Dean of Peterborough.] Cambridge, 1827, 8vo.
- 41. A Specimen of an intended publication, which was to have been entitled A Vindication of them that have the rule over us, for their not having cut out the disputed Passage, 1 John V. 7, 8. from the authorized Version. Being an Examination of the first six pages of Professor Porson's IVth Letter to Archdeacon Travis, of the MSS. used by R. Stephens. By Francis HUYSHE. London, 1827, 8vo.

This "Examination" was published after notice had been given in the Literary Journals that the 'Vindication' of Professor Porson's character was in the press, and before that work actually appeared. "Crito Cantabrigiensis," therefore, devoted pp. 388—404. to a refutation of Mr. H.'s tract.

- 42. Two Letters, respectfully addressed to the Lord Bishop of Salisbury, in Defence of certain Positions of the Author, relative to 1 John V. 7.; in which also the recent arguments of his Lordship are shown to be groundless Surmises and evident Mistakes. By the Rev. John Oxles. London, 1828, 8vo.
- 43. A Letter to the Rev. Thomas Beynon, Archdeacon of Cardigan, in Reply to a Vindication of the Literary Character of Professor Porson, by Crito Cantabrigiensis: and in further proof of the Authenticity of 1 John V. 7. By Thomas Burgess, D.D., Bishop of Salisbury. Salisbury, 1829, 8vo.
- 44. New Criticisms on the celebrated Text, 1 John V. 7. A Synodical Lecture, by Francis Anthony KNITTEL, Counsellor to the Consistory, and General Superintendent of the Grand Duchy of Brunswick Lünenbourgh. Published at Brunswick in 1785. Translated from the original German, by William Alleyn EVANson, M.A. London, 1829, 8vo.

The original German work of Knittel, which has long been scarce upon the continent, is thus characterized by Michaelis:—
"This is a valuable work, and much useful information may be derived from it: but in the proof of the principal point the author has totally failed." (Introd. to the New Testament, vol. iv. p. 413.) This opinion has been confirmed in the following terms by a modern biblical critic :-

'Knittel's 'New Criticisms' are laboured and ingenious, written "Anute's 'New Criticisms' are laboured and ingenious, written in a very declamatory style, and calculated by their plausibility to produce on the minds of novices in the controversy an impression in favour of the passage which he has taken under his protection. They are always wanting in the simplicity which an accomplished scholar will be concerned to maintain in the conduct of an important and the state of the state tant argument, and are not less deficient in the substantial proofs, and clear and strong presumptions which command our assent. With the appearance and pretension of a methodical arrangement of his materials, there is but little of it in the discussions which follow: and we close the work without having acquired any distinct apprehensions of the subject on which we have been engaged." (Eclectic Review, Third Series, vol. iii. p. 181.)

- 45. Remarks upon Mr. Evanson's Preface to his Translation of Knittel's New Criticisms on 1 John V. 7. By Clemens Anglicanus [The Rev. Thomas Turton, D.D.]. London, 1829, cipal Writers on both sides of the Question. By Criticus [the late Rev. William Orme, M.A.]. London, 1830, 12mo.

This work must have cost its author no small labour; although it does not pretend to exhibit a full and complete history of the controversy, yet not a single publication of any note is omitted. Numerous smaller notices relative to various other minor authors, who have treated directly or incidentally on the subject, are inter-spersed; and as many of the works given in the preceding biblio-graphical list are now become rare and with difficulty to be procured, the reader who is desirous of investigating the history of this memorable controversy, will be gratified with the candid spirit and diligent research which pervade every page of Mr. Orme's able and well-written Memoir.

47. An Introduction to the Controversy on the disputed verse of St. John, as revived by Mr. Gibbon. By Thomas Burgers, D.D., Bishop of Salisbury. Salisbury, 1833, 8vo.

The design of this publication is "to recall the attention of the The design of this publication is "to recall the attention of the readers to that state of the inquiry into the authenticity of the disputed verse of St. John, in which it was, prior to the publication of Archdeacon Travis's and Mr. Porson's Letters, when it was revived by Mr. Gibbon's celebrated note to the thirty-seventh chapter of his History." The following are the subjects discussed by the learned prelate. "Mr. Gibbon, an enemy to Christianity, and morally incapable of impartiality on any question relative to its scriptures and doctrines:—his falsification of authorities respecting the great doctrines of Christianity;—incorrectness of his general positions respecting the controverted verse:—incorrectness general positions respecting the controverted verse;—incorrectness of his particular objections to the verse."

48. Dr. Wiseman on 1 John V. 7, 8. By the Rev. Francis HUYSHE. London, 1834, 8vo.

An article thus intituled appeared in the British Magazine for June, 1834, advocating the genuineness of the disputed clause in 1 John V. 7, 8. Mr. Huyshe, the writer of it, is the author of numerous communications bearing upon this question, which are inserted in the third, fourth, and fifth volumes of that Journal (to which the reader is necessarily referred), under the title of "A Vindication of the Early Parisian Press."

SECTION V.

TREATISES ON VERSIONS OF THE SCRIPTURES.

§ 1. TREATISES ON ANCIENT VERSIONS.

- 1. Novi Testamenti Versiones Syriacæ, Simplex, Philoxeniana et Hierosolymitana, denuo examinatæ, et ad fidem Codicum Manuscriptorum Bibliothecarum, Vaticanæ, Angelicæ, Assemanianæ Mediceæ, Regiæ aliarumque; novis Observationibus atque Tabulis ære incisis illustratæ a Jacobo Georgio Christiano Adler. Hafniæ, 1789, 4to.
- 2. G. H. Bernstein de Versione Novi Testamenti Syriacâ Heracleensi Commentatio. Lipsiæ, 1822, 4to.
- 3. Veteris Interpretis cum Bezâ aliisque Recentioribus Col-Auctore Joanne Bois. Londini, 1655, 4to.
- In this work, which is now of extreme rarity, the author has successfully shown that, in many places, the modern translators had unduly depreciated the Vulgate, and unnecessarily departed
- 4. Dissertatio Theologico-Critica de Vi, quam antiquissimæ Versiones quæ extant Latinæ in Crisin Evangeliorum IV habeant, exhibita à M. C. A. BREYTHER. Merseburgi, 1824, 8vo.
- 5. De Nomine, Auctore, Emendatoribus, et Authentiâ Vulgatæ Dissertatio. Auctore Josepho Brunati. Viennæ, 1827, 8vo.
- 6. De Prophetarum Minorum Versionis Syriacæ, quam Peschito dicunt, Indole, Dissertationes Philogico-Critica. tatio I. Scripsit Carolus Augustus CREDNER. Gottinge, 1827,
- 7. J. A. Donn De Psalterio Æthiopico Commentatio. Lipsiæ, 1825, 4to.
- 8. J. F. FISCHERI Prolusiones de Versionibus Græcis Librorum Veteris Testamenti. Lipsiæ, 1772, 8vo.
- 9. Jo. Ernest. Grabii Epistola ad clarissimum, virum Jo. Millium; qua ostenditur, Libri Judicum Genuinam LXX. Interpretum Versionem eam esse, quam MS. Cod. Alexandrinus exhibet; Romanam autem Editionem, quòd ad dictum librum, ab illà prorsus diversam, atque eandem cum Hesychiana esse. Subnexa sunt tria Novæ τῶν ο Editionis Specimina. Oxonii, 1705, 4to.

46. Memoir of the Controversy respecting the Heavenly Witnesses, 1 John V.7., including critical Notices of the Prin-tuagint, which is described in p. 21, of this Appendix.

10. Joh. Ernst. Granti Dissertatio de variis Vitiis Septuaginta Interpretum Versioni ante B. Origenis avum illatis, et remediis ab ipso in Hexaplari ejusdem Versionis Editione adhibitis, deque hujus editionis Reliquiis tam manuscriptis quam prælo excusis. Oxonii, 1710, 4to.

A rare and valuable tract.

- 11. De Pentateuchi Versionis Syriaca, quam Peschito vocant, Indole, Commentatio Critico-Exegetica. Scripsit Ludovicus Hirzel. Lipsia, 1825, 8vo.
- 12. Bellum Papale, sive Concordia Discors Sixti Quinti, et Clementis Octavi, circa Hieronymianam Editionem. Auctore Thoma James. Londini, 1606, 4to. Londini, 1678.
- 13. Commentatio Critica de Ephremo Syro, S. S. interprete; quâ simul Versionis Syriacæ, quam Peschito vocant, Lectiones variæ ex Ephremi commentariis collectæ exhibentur. Scripsit Cæsar à Lengerre. Halæ, 1828, 4to.
- 14. Remarques sur la Version Italique de S. Matthieu, qu'on a découvert dans de fort anciens Manuscrits. Par Jean Martianar. Paris, 1695, 8vo.
- 15. Joan. Davidis MICHAELIS Curæ in Versionem Syriacam Actuum Apostolicorum. Cum Consectariis Criticis de Indole, cognationibus, et usu Versionis Syriacæ Tabularum Novi Fæderis. Gottingæ, 1755, 4to.
- 16. De Origine Versionis Septuaginta Interpretum: Auctore S. T. Muecke, correctore Lycei Soraviensis. Zullichoviæ, 1788, 8vo.
- Bp. Marsh pronounces this to be "a very useful work, as it represents both concisely and perspicuously the several topics which suggest themselves for consideration on the origin of the Septuagint version." (Lectures, part iii. p. 123.)
- 17. Friderici MÜNTER Commentatio de Indole Versionis Novi Testamenti Sahidicæ. Accedit Fragmentum Epistolæ Pauli ad Timotheum, ex membrano Sahidico Manuscripto Borgiano, Velitris. Hafniæ, 1789, 4to.
- 18. An Enquiry into the present State of the Septuagint Version of the Old Testament. By Henry Owen, D.D. London, 1769, 8vo.
- All Dr. Henry Owen's works are characterized by sound criticism and laborious research. Bp. Marsh, who says that he is an excellent critic, observes that his Historical and Critical Account of the Septuagint Version "should be read by every man, who wishes to be acquainted with the history of that version."
- 19. A Brief Account, Historical and Critical, of the Septuagint Version of the Old Testament. To which is added a Dissertation on the comparative Excellency of the Hebrew and Samaritan Pentateuch. By Dr. Henry Owen, F.R.S., &c. London, 1787, 8vo.
- "The learned author of this piece has bestowed very laudable pains upon his subject, and brought into a very small compass many just remarks, and much useful information; which will not fail to be highly acceptable to those who are engaged in the study of the Scriptures." (Month. Rev. (O. S.) vol. lxxviii. p. 266.)
- 20. F. V. REINHARDI Dissertatio de Versionis Alexandrinæ authoritate et usu in constituendà Librorum Hebraicorum Lectione genuinà. Vitembergæ, 1777, 4to.
- 21. De Syriacarum Novi Fœderis Versionum Indole atque Usu Dissertatio. Philoxenianam cum Simplice, e duobus pervetustis Codd. MSS. ab Amida transmissis, conferente Glocestrio Ridley. Londini, 1761, 4to.

This very scarce tract is reprinted at the end of Semler's edition of Weistein's Libelli ad Crisin atque Interpretationem Novi Testamenti (8vo. Halæ, 1766), pp. 247—339. from a copy then in the library of the celebrated Michaelis.

22. De Origine et Indole Arabicæ Librorem Veteris Testamenti Historicorum Interpretationis Libri II. Scripsit Æmilius Roedigen. Passim adjecta sunt Scholia Tanchumi Arabici, aliaque anecdota. Halis Saxonum, 1829, 4to.

The design of this publication is, to show that the Arabic Version was not made from the Septuagint; but that the greater part of it was executed from the Syriac Version; viz. the books of Judges, Ruth, Samuel, I Kings i. to xi. 2 Kings xii. 17.—xxv. and Nehemiah i. 28. to xiii.; that I Kings xii. to 2 Kings xii. 16. was made from the Hebrew; that Nehemiah i. to ix. 27., though made from the Hebrew, has, in several places, been interpolated from the Syriac. M. Roediger is of opinion that the author of the Arabic version was a Christian who lived in the thirteenth century.

23. Ern. Frid. Car. Rosenmüller de Versione Pentateuchi Persica Commentatio. Lipsiæ, 1813, 4to.

This academical disquisition treats on the author and editions of the Persic version, and on its sources and character. A critical examination of various passages is annexed.

- 24. Animadversiones, quibus Fragmenta Versionum Græca rum V. T. a Bern. Montefalconio collecta, illustrantur a Jo. Gottfr. Scharfenberg. Lipsiæ, 1776, 8vo.
- 25. SCHLEUSNERT (Joh. Frid.) Opuscula Critica ad Versiones Gracas Veteris Testamenti pertinentia. Lipsia, 1812, 8vo.

The first part of this volume contains observations on the authority and use of the Greek fathers in settling the genuine reading of the Greek versions of the Old Testament. The second part comprises observations and conjectural emendations on those versions.

- 26. Th. E. Toeplen de Pentateuchi Interpretationis Alexandrinæ Indole Critica atque Hermeneutica Commentatio. Halis Saxonum, 1830.
- 27. Usserii (Jacobi, Armachensis Archiepiscopi) de Græca Septuaginta Interpretum Versione Syntagma. Londini, 1665, 4to.
- "It is divided into nine chapters, and relates to the origin of the version according to the account of Aristeas (then supposed to be genuine), to the time when and the place where it was written, to the alterations which were gradually made in its text, to the corrections of Origen, to the modern editions, and other subjects with which these are immediately connected. Thus is a work of great merit: it displays much original inquiry; and may be regarded as the ground-work of later publications on the Septuagint." (Bp. Marsh's Loctures, part ii. p. 121.)
- 28. G. B. Winer de Onkeloso ejusque Paraphrasi Chaldaica Dissertatio. Lipsiæ, 1820, 4to.
- 29. Wiseman (Nicolaus) Horæ Syriacæ, seu Commentationes et Anecdota Res vel Litterarias Syriacas spectantia. Tomus I. Romæ, 1828, 8vo.

This profoundly learned volume comprises collections for the Literary History of the Syriac versions of the Old Testament, and particularly of the Peschito or Old Syriac version, drawn for most part from original sources. These are followed by details of great value respecting the Karkaphensian Recension of the Syriac version, which is here for the first time described. To the whole is prefixed an elaborate attempt to uphold the Romish gloss on Matt. xxvi. 26., respecting transubstantiation, drawn from Syriac sources, and containing a collection of words for a supplement to the Syriac lexicons extant. Dr. Wiseman's Syriac quotations have been subjected to a minute and critical examination by Professor Lee in his prolegomena to Mr. Bagster's edition of the Polyglott Bible, p. 29. pected to a limite and critical examination by Frolessor Lee in his prolegomena to Mr. Bagster's edition of the Polyglott Bible, p. 29. of the folio edition, or pp. 41, 42. of the quarto edition. Among the Syriac writers whom Dr. W. has quoted, as maintaining transubstantiation, is Dionysius Barsalibæus or Barsalibi (Hore Syriace, p. 57.): but he wrote the treatise cited by Dr. W. against the Franks or papists towards the close of the twelfth century. (Assemanni's Bibliotheca Orientalis, vol. ii. pp. 156, 157, &cc.) In pp. 57. and 58. of the Hore Syriacæ, according to Barsalibi and Maruthas, the bread and wine are called the body and blood of Christ; but the bread is NEVER said to be changed into the flesh of Christ; which, Prof. Lee remarks, is of great importance. And Barsalibi himself elsewhere teaches that these expressions are taken mystically; which Dr. Wiseman Forgot to show. In p. 191., he says (as Professor Lee translates him), "Panem, inquit, oculo animæ contemplamur," et (p. 159.) "facitque eum corpus divino et mystica Modo." That is, "We contemplate, he says, the bread with the ey of the soul." and in p. 159., "and he makes it his body in a divine and mystical manner." Dr. Wiseman having quoted (Hor. Syr. p. 59.) a passage from an Arabic translation from the Syriac of some very ancient canons of the Syrian church (made in the three hundred and eightycanons of the Syrian church (made in the three hundred and eightycanons of the Syriai church (made in the three habitation and spanses second year of the Mohammedan era of the Hegira, A.D. 1004), in order to show that transubstantiation was held by that church: Professor Lee charges Dr. Wiseman with having MISTRANSLATED Professor Lee charges Dr. Wiseman with having MISTRANSLATED the passage in question, which ought to be rendered thus, "He" (that is, Jesus Christ) "gave it" (his body) "to us for the remission of sins, after that he had assimilated it to himself: yea, he said, 'This is my body: but did not say, 'This is like to my body'—'Illud nobis dedit in remissionem peccatorum, postquam id sibimet assimilaverat: imo dixit, 'Hoc est corpus meum,' at NoN dixit, 'Simile est corpori meo.'" That is, that the sacrament ought to be received, with faith as my help itself, but not earny librors of it. received with faith, as my body itself, but not as any likeness of it, which indeed would be idolatry. The authorities, therefore, which Dr. Wiseman professes to quote in support of the Romish tenet of transubstantiation, do not afford him any support whatever. Further, as Dr. Wiseman has professed a wish for some philological illustrations in behalf of the Possessian and the professed as the p tions in behalf of the Protestant or TRUE mode of interpreting Matt. xxvi. 26., Dr. Lee proceeds to gratify his wish; and accordingly cites one passage from the Old Syriac version of I Kings xxii. II.; another from the Arabic poem, Hamasa, and from an Arabic scholiast on it; and another from the Persian poet, Saadi: all which ABUNDANTLY CONFIRM the Protestant mode of interpretation. fessor Lee has given the original passages in these oriental languages, accompanied with a Latin translation; which the limits guages, accompanied with a Latin translation; which the limits necessarily prescribed to this notice compel us to omit. And, finally, he concludes with observing that there are not wanting Syriac authors, of considerable repute, who testify that the Lord's supper is a mystical and rational representation of the unbloody sacrifice. For this statement, Dr. Lee refers to Assemanni's Bibliotheca Orients tis, tom. i. pp. 479-483., where the elements are called mysteries.

- § 2. TREATISES ON MODERN VERSIONS OF THE SCRIPTURES.
- 1. A History of the Translations which have been made of the Scriptures from the earliest to the present age, throughout Europe, Asia, Africa, and America. By Herbert Макви, D.D. [Bishop of Peterborough]. London, 1812, 8vo.
- 2. A Historical Sketch of the Translation and Circulation of the Scriptures, from the earliest period to the present time. By the Rev. W. A. Thomson, and the Rev. W. Orme. Perth, 1815, 8vo.
- 1. An Historical Account of the several English Translations of the Bible, and the Opposition they met with from the church of Rome. By Anthony Johnson. London, 1730, 8vo. Also in the third volume of Bishop Watson's Collection of Theological Tracts.
- 2. A Letter, showing why our English Bibles differ so much from the Septuagint; though both are translated from the Hebrew Original. [By Thomas Brett, LLD.] London, 1743, 8vo.
- A second edition was published in 1760, entitled a Dissertation, instead of a letter. It has been reprinted by Bishop Watson, Tracts, vol. iii.
- 3. A History of the principal Translations of the Bible. By John Lewis, M.A. London, 1739, 8vo.

The first edition of this valuable work, to which all succeeding writers on the history of the English versions of the Scriptures are indebted, was prefixed to Mr. Lewis's folio edition of the venerable John Wickliffe's English version of the New Testament. It was reprinted in 1818, at London, with some unimportant additions, in one volume, 8vo.

- 4. An Historical View of the English Biblical Translations; the expedience of revising by authority our present Translation, and the means of executing such a Revision. By William Newcome, D.D., Bishop of Waterford. Dublin, 1792, 8vo.
- 5. A List of Editions of the Bible, and Parts thereof in English, from the years MDV. to MDCCCXX. With an Appendix, containing Specimens of Translations and Bibliographical Descriptions. By the Rev. Henry Cotton, D.C.L. Oxford, at the Clarendon Press, 1821, 8vo.

Though the author of this unassuming but very interesting "List" modestly terms it "an Appendix" to the latter part of Lewis's work, it will be found a very useful publication to those who may not be possessed of Lewis's History. It is evidently the result of deep research, and is drawn up with great care. The notes, which are not numerous, are strictly bibliographical, and contain much valuable information for the collectors of rare books; while considerable additional interest is imparted to the work by the specimens of early translations which will be found in the appendix.

6. Dangerous Errors in several late printed Bibles, to the great scandal and corruption of sacred and true Religion. Discovered by William Kilburn. Printed at Finsbury, anno 1659.

This very curious tract points out numerous "pernicious, erroneous, and corrupt Erratas, Escapes, and Faults in several impressions of the Holy Bible and Testament, within these late years" [during the great rebellion] "commonly vended and dispersed, to the great scandal of religion, but more particularly in the impressions of Henry Hills and John Field, Printers. A copy is in the Library of the British Museum.

- 7. The Existing Monopoly an inadequate protection of the Authorized Version of the Scriptures. Four Letters to the Right Hon. and Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of London; with Specimens of the intentional and other departures from the authorized standard. To which is added a Postscript, containing the Complaints of a London Committee of Ministers on the subject; the Reply of the Universities; and a Report on the importance of the Alterations made. By Thomas Curtis. London, 1833, 8vo.
- 8. Mr. Curtis's Misrepresentations Exposed. By Edward Cardwell, D.D. Oxford, 1833, 8vo.
- 9. The Text of the English Bible Considered. By Thomas Turton, D.D., Regius Professor of Divinity in the University of Cambridge, and Dean of Peterborough. Cambridge and London, 1833, 8vo. Second edition, corrected and enlarged, 1834, 8vo.

The reader will find a full account of Mr. Curtis's misrepresentations, and an abstract of the refutation of them by the Rev. Drs. Cardwell and Turton, in the British Critic for July, 1833, pp. 1—26. There is also an impartial article on this subject in the Eclectic Review for June, 1833 (third series, vol. ix. pp. 509—533). It may suffice here to state, generally, that Mr. Curtis has altogether failed in his attacks upon our present authorized version, and upon the editions of it printed by the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge. It is proper to add that the sub-committee of dissenting ministers, who were appointed by the "London Committee," mentioned in Mr. Curtis's title-page, caused an advertisement to be inserted in the Times newspaper, of March 26, 1833, in which they stated that Mr. Curtis had acted without their concurrence, and that they did not consider themselves responsible for any statements already made by him, or which he might thereafter make. His pamphlet "seemed to announce some very great, serious, alarming, and crying evil, calling for immediate and decisive remedy. We apprehend, however, that every unprejudiced reader will feel that these evils have been exceedingly exaggerated; and that no case whatever, as far at least as affects our universities, has been established." (Christian Guardian, March, 1833, p. 107.)

- 10. Reasons why a new Translation of the Bible should not be published, without a previous statement and examination of all the material Passages which may be supposed to be misinterpreted. [By Thomas Burgess, D.D., now Bishop of Salisbury.] Durham, 1816, 8vo.
- 11. Reasons in favour of a New Translation of the Holy Scriptures. By Sir James Bland Burges, Bart. London, 1819, 8vo.
- 12. A Vindication of our authorized Translation and Translators of the Bible, and of preceding English Versions authoritatively commended to the Notice of those Translators, &c. By the Rev. H. J. Topp, M.A. London, 1819, 8vo.
- 13. An Historical and Critical Inquiry into the Interpretation of the Hebrew Scriptures, with Remarks on Mr. Bellamy's new Translation. By J. W. WHITTAKER, M.A. London, 1819, 8vo. Supplement, 1820, 8vo.
- 14. Vindiciæ Hebraicæ; or a Defence of the Hebrew Scriptures, occasioned by the recent strictures and innovations of J. Bellamy, and in confutation of his attacks on all preceding Translations, and on the Established Version in particular. By Hyman Hurwitz. London, 1820, 8vo.

This author is a learned Jewish teacher, who, while he has exposed Mr. Bellamy's misinterpretations with great learning, has rendered to British Christians an incalculable service, by showing the general excellence of our authorized English version; and has also, perhaps unwittingly, silenced the Jewish objector, who used to deny the validity of the Old Testament as cited from that version.

- 15. A Letter to the Rt. Rev. Herbert [Marsh], Lord Bishop of Peterborough, on the Independence of the authorized Version of the Bible. By Henry Walter, B.D. London, 1823, 8vo.
- 16. Hints for an improved Translation of the New Testament. By James Scholefield, M.A. Regius Professor of Greek in the University of Cambridge. Cambridge and London, 1832, 8vo.
- "In every part of these notes we observe a judicious treatment of the subjects brought under discussion; and there is scarcely an emendation proposed, to which we should be prepared to hazard an objection." (Eclectic Review, for April, 1833. Third Series, vol. ix. p. 317.)
- 17. Observations upon the Expediency of revising the present English Version of the four Gospels, and of the Acts of the Apostles. By John Symonns, LL.D., Professor of Modern History in the University of Cambridge. 1789, 4to.
- 17*. Observations on the Expediency of revising the present English Version of the Epistles in the New Testament. By John Symonus, LL.D. 1794, 4to.

The same method of classification is pursued in both these publications. "Of the observations themselves it must be said, that many are just and useful; but many also are minute and overrefined." (British Critic, O. S. vol. iii. p. 332.)

- 18. The Errata of the Protestant Bible: or the Truth of the English Translation examined. By Thomas WARD. Dublin, 1807, 4to.
- 19. An Analysis of Ward's Errata of the Protestant Bible. By Richard RYAN, D.D. Dublin, 1808, 8vo.
- 20. An Answer to Ward's Errata of the Protestant Bible. By Richard GRIER, D.D. Dublin, 1812, 4to.
- 21. Observations on the present State of the Roman Catholic English Bible, addressed to the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Dublin; showing that it has never been edited on any uniform plan; that the principles adopted by the Rhemish Translators have been abandoned; and that the Censures of Ward's Errata are as applicable to it, as to the Protestant Bible. By the Rev. George Hamilton, A.M. Dublin, 1826, 8vo.
- suffice here to state, generally, that Mr. Curtis has altogether failed in his attacks upon our present authorized version, and upon the editions of it printed by the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge. It is proper to add that the sub-committee of dissenting ministers, who were appointed by the "London Committee," mentioned in Mr. Curtis's title-page, caused an advertisement to be inserted in the Monta Sanction before the Committee of the House of Comcurtis's title-page, caused an advertisement to be inserted in the Ward's Errata of the Protestant Bible, which contain a vehement Ward's Errata of the Protestant Bible, which contain a venement attack upon our present authorized version, were first published anonymously in the reign of James II., and were reprinted in the former part of the eighteenth century. This book, after sleeping in oblivion for many years, was reprinted at Dublin in 1807, and extensively circulated under the patronage of the Romish clergy in Ireland. This called forth the two very able and satisfactory replies of the Rev. Drs. Grier and Ryan.

In consequence of the biblical discussions which have taken

In consequence of the biblical discussions which have taken place in Ireland, Mr. Hamilton was induced to collate five editions, besides the New Testament printed at Rheims in 1582, which have been circulated under the authority of the Romish archbishops of Dublin. The result is, that there is not one standard copy extant; Dublin. The result is, that there is not one standard copy extant; what, however, is most gratifying to us as Protestants is, that Dr. Murray's edition, printed in 1825, contains several corrections of the Anglo-Romish translation from our authorized Protestant Version, which identical passages had been denounced by Ward as heretical mistranslations! Mr. Hamilton's second pamphlet exposes the second pamphlet exposes the variations which occur in the notes of five several editions, printed between the years 1748 and 1826; and further shows that the Irish branch of the self-styled infallible Church has no fixed standard whatever, either in the Bibles printed for adults, or in the elementary Catechisms prepared for the use of children.

23. A Brief History of the Versions of the Bible of the Anglo-Roman Churches. Dublin, 1830, 18mo.

This carefully compiled little volume pretends to no originality of information. It contains the substance of two lectures delivered by a clergyman in Ireland to his parishioners: and it is particularly valuable as presenting in a small compass much important information respecting the alterations, additions, omissions, and varia-tions, which have been made by the popish bishops in the Anglo-Romish versions of the Bible.

24. An Historical Account of the British or Welsh Versions and Editions of the Bible. By Thomas LLEWELLYN, LL.D. London, 1768, 8vo.

A tract not of very frequent occurrence. In an Appendix, the author has printed the dedication which the translators prefixed to the first impressions of the Welch Bible.

25. A Dissertation on Hans Mikkelsen's (or the first Danish) Translation of the New Testament. By Ebenezer Hendenson, [D.D.] Copenhagen, 1813, 4to.

26. Biblical Researches and Travels in Russia, &c. &c. By Ebenezer Hennerson, [D.D.] London, 1826, 8vo.

This very interesting volume of Travels has a claim to be noticed in this place, on account of the numerous and important details which Dr. Henderson has communicated respecting the ancient and modern Russian versions and editions of the Holy Scriptures, and to which we have been largely indebted. Dr. H. has, in the course of his lengthened tour through the southern provinces of Russia, collected many very valuable elucidations of Scripture manners and customs. Independently of these circumstances, which necessarily arrest the attention of Bible students, his volume contains much valuable statistical information relative to the countries through which he travelled.

27. Christiani Andr. TEUBERI Tractatus Philologico-Exegeticus de Utilitate Linguæ Anglicanæ in Explicatione S. Scripture, ex Pericopis vulgo Epistolicis Vernaculæ Versionis cum Anglicana et Fontibus collatis demonstrata. Lipsiæ, 1733, 12mo.

The design of this publication is to show the utility of the English Language, and also, by actual collation, the importance of our authorized English version of the Bible for correcting the German translation. M. Teuber has adduced several instances in which the latter may be improved from our version.

28. Memoir of a French Translation of the New Testament, in which the Mass and Purgatory are found in the Sacred Text; together with Bishop Kidder's Reflections on the same: accompanied by Notes. By Henry Corron, LL.D. London, 1827, 8vo.

In 1690, Dr. Kidder, afterwards Bishop of Bath and Wells, introduced to the notice of the English public a French Translation of the New Testament, which had been printed at Bourdeaux in 1686; and he exposed the numerous falsifications of the sacred original which the translators had made, in order to uphold the erroneous tenets and superstitious practices of the church of Rome. Bp. Kidder's pamphlet having become extremely rare, Dr. Cotton has rendered a valuable service to the Protestant cause by reprinting it with some corrective notes; and he has prefixed an interesting bibliographical memoir on the Bourdeaux New Testament.

* * Many interesting details relative to the History of Modern Versions of the Scriptures, will be found in Dr. Townley's 'Illustrations of Biblical Literature,' and 'Introduction to the Literary History of the Bible,' a notice of which will be found in page 5, of this Appendix, CHAPTER IV.

TREATISES ON THE ORIGINAL LANGUAGES OF SCRIPTURE, AND GRAMMARS AND LEXICONS THEREOF.

SECTION I.

TREATISES, ETC. ON THE HEBREW LANGUAGE.

§ 1. TREATISES ON THE STUDY OF THE HEBREW LANGUAGE, AND ON THE VOWEL POINTS.

- LINGUE Hebraice Studium Juventuti Academice commendatum, Oratione Oxonii habita in schola Linguarum, a Georgio JUBB, S.T.P. Linguæ Hebraicæ Professore. Oxonii, 1781, 4to.
- 2. Dissertations on the Importance and best Method of Studying the Original Languages of the Bible, by Jahn, and others; translated from the Originals, and accompanied with Notes, by M. STUART, Associate Professor of Sacred Literature in the Theological Seminary at Andover. Andover (Massachusetts), 1821, 8vo.

These dissertations are three in number, and are translated from the Latin of Jahn and Wyttenbach, and the German of Gesenius: they comprise many important observations on the study of languages, the value of which is greatly enhanced by the original and instructive notes of the translator.

- 3. Johannis Buxtorfii Tiberias, sive Commentarius Masorethicus; quo primum explicatur quid Masora sit; tum Historia Masoretharum ex Hebræorum Annalibus excutitur; secundo clavis Masoræ traditur; denique Analytica Masoræ explicatio in primum caput Geneseos proponitur. Basileæ Rauracorum, 1620, 4to.
- 4. Ludovici CAPELLI, Filii, Arcanum Punctationis revelatum, sive de Punctorum Vocalium et Accentuum apud Hebræos vera et germana antiquitate Diatriba, in lucem edita a Thoma Erpenio. Lugduni Batavorum, 1624, 4to.

These two works almost exhaust the controversy respecting the vowel points of the Hebrew language. Buxtorf maintains, and Capellus opposes them, both with equal learning and ingenuity.

5. Jacobi Altingii Fundamenta Punctationis Linguæ Sanctæ; accedit ejusdem Synopsis Institutionum Chaldæarum et Syrarum. Francofurti ad Mænum, 1730, 8vo.

This is usually considered as the best edition: the treatise first appeared in 1692. It is considered by critics as indispensable to those who would penetrate the arcana of the Masoretic punctuation.

- 6. Josephi Dobrowsky de antiquis Hebræorum Characteribus Dissertatio. Pragæ, 1783, 8vo.
- "This tract contains, in a short compass, a perspicuous statement of all the arguments both for and against the antiquity of the Hebrew letters; and the conclusion, which the author deduces, is, that not the Hebrew but the Samaritan was the ancient alphabet of the Jews." (Bp. Marsh's Divinity Lectures, part ii. p. 135.)
- 7. A. B. SPITZNERI Vindiciæ Originis et Auctoritatis Divinæ Punctorum Vocalium et Accentuum in libris sacris Veteris Testamenti. Lipsiæ, 1791, 8vo.

In this treatise the author strenuously advocates the divine origin and authenticity of the vowel points.

8. An Essay on the Antiquity and Utility of the Hebrew Vowel Points. By John Moncrieff. Glasgow, 1833, 8vo.

§ 2. HEBREW GRAMMARS, AND OTHER TREATISES ON THE HEBREW LANGUAGE, WITH POINTS.

[i.] In the English Language.

1. An Easy Entrance into the Sacred Language, containing the necessary rules of Hebrew Grammar in English; with the Original Text of several chapters, select verses, and useful histories, translated verbatim and analyzed. Likewise some select pieces of Hebrew Poetry. By the Rev. Cornelius Bayley. London, 1782, 8vo.

This "Grammar may be very useful. Its rules, though concise, are perspicuous; the analysis and the examples illustrate their principles, and tend to facilitate the study of the Hebrew." (Monthly Review (O.S.), vol. lxviii. p. 190.) This Grammar has lately been reprinted.

2. The Scholar's Instructor; an Hebrew Grammar, by Israel L.TONS. Cambridge, 1735; 1757, 2d edition; 1810, 3d edition; 1829, 4th edition, 8vo.

3. Hebrew Grammar, with the principal rules compiled from some of the most considerable Hebrew Grammars. By Thomas Yeates. London, 1812, 8vo. and various subsequent editions.

These two Grammars have long been in use in different academies, as well as in the universities; and are recommended by their brevity. Mr. Yeates's Grammar is an improvement of one composed by Dr. Ashworth, and printed at Cambridge in 1763.

- 4. A Hebrew Grammar for the use of the Students of the University of Dublin. By the Rev. Gerald Fitzgerald, D.D., Hebrew Professor in [the] said University. Dublin, 1799, 8vo.
- "A plain, easy, and useful introduction to the Hebrew tongue, in English, for the use of students in our universities, and particularly in the university of Dublin." (Monthly Review (N. S.), vol. xxxiv. p. 151.) The author has pursued an intermediate method between adopting all the Masoretic notes and rejecting them altogether: viz. by retaining the vowel points and such of the accents as are most distinguishable and useful, and omitting all the other accents (the number of which is considerable) which he deems wholly unnecessary in the present state of the Hebrew language.
- 5. A Hebrew Grammar in the English Language, by Joseph Samuel C. F. Frex. London, 1813, 8vo. A new edition, with corrections and additions, by George Downes, A.M. London, 1823, 8vo.
- "The directions for the formation of verbs, through all their voices, modes, and tenses, are minutely given; and this part of the Grammar manifests the author's critical acquaintance with the language which he professes to teach.—Though we would not recommend this as superseding the use of other Grammars, especially to the classical scholar, but would rather advise it to be compared with the best of those which are written in Latin, yet we must remark that Mr. Frey's mode of teaching the Hebrew is very masterly; that it is singularly calculated to facilitate the student's intimate knowledge of that language; and that it makes us acquainted with the process adopted by the Rabbis in their education of Jewish youth. The Hebrew Psalter, or Book of Psalms, is subjoined to this Grammar, which considerably augments its value."
 (Monthly Review (N. S.); vol. lviii. p. 55.) The edition superintended by Mr. Downes contains a glossary of the first six psalms, a compendium of Chaldee Grammar, and other important additions.
- 6. Elements of Hebrew Grammar. In two parts. By J. F. GYLES, M.A. London, 1814, 8vo.

The difficulties which opposed his own progress in the Hebrew language originally suggested to Mr. Gyles the plan of the present Grammar, which is characterized by simplicity of manner, and clearness of illustration. His second part, which treats on the structure and idioms of the language, contains a good selection of rules and examples, principally from the first volume of Dathe's edition of Glassius's Philologia Sacra, one of the most elaborate systems of Hebrew Grammar perhaps that is extant, and which is indispensably necessary to the biblical student, who is desirous of fully investigating the language.

7. A Hebrew Grammar, with a copious Syntax and Praxis. By Moses Stuart, Professor of Sacred Literature in the Theological Seminary at Andover. Andover (Massachusetts), 1821, 8vo. Second edition, 1824, 8vo. Third edition, 1829. Fourth edition, 1831. Reprinted at Oxford, 1831, 8vo.

Professor Stuart has, with great industry, examined the copious Hebrew Grammars of the great Oriental scholars, among the Germans, and has chiefly followed the latest and best, viz. that of Professor Gesenius; whose German Grammar of the Hebrew tongue is on the continent considered as the completest system of Hebrew Grammar extant. In regard to the plan of the work, he does not profess to be a mere translator of Gesenius, whose Grammar is too large for common use; but he has adopted the general method of this writer as his model, deviating, however, from that eminent Hebraist, where Professor Stuart conceives that he has good reason for differing from him, and making some improvements upon his grammar. (North American Review (N. S.), vol. iv. pp. 473—477.) The Oxford edition, which was undertaken at the special recommendation of the Rev. Dr. Puscy, Regius Hebrew Professor, is a reprint of Mr. Stuart's last American edition. In preparing it for press, Mr. S. rewrote nearly the whole work, and some parts of it were written seven or eight times over. It has been materially compressed; and various additions, suggested by his long experience as a teacher of Hebrew Language and Literature, enhance the value of his grammar.

8. A Hebrew Chrestomathy. By Moses Stuart. Andover, 1829, 8vo. Third Edition, Oxford (reprinted), 1834, 8vo.

This volume consists, 1. Of a Selection of verbs and nonus of the various classes; 2. Of Easy Sentences for beginners; and 3. Of large select portions of the Hebrew Scriptures, in prose and poetry. Copious practical notes are appended to the several parts, with correct and convenient references to the grammar.

- 9. A Course of Hebrew Study. By Moses Stuart. Andover, 1830, 2 vols. 8vo.
- 10. Observations on the Idiom of the Hebrew Language respecting the Powers peculiar to the different Tenses of Verbs, and the Communication of Power from governing Verbs to Subordinates connected with them. By Philip Gell, M.A. London, 1821, 8vo.
- An Easy Method of acquiring Hebrew with the points, according to the Ancient Practice. By an experienced Teacher. [Mr. —— Borrenstein.] London, 1822, a folio sheet.
- "This 'easy method' is comprised in a very neatly and distinctly printed table, including three lessons; the first, containing the alphabet, with the collateral addition of the Rabbinical, German, and Hebrew characters; the second, the vowel points with a few useful rules; the third, a sort of Praxis on the Letters and Points. A useful chart is thus provided for constant reference." (Eclectic Review (N. S.), vol. xvii. p. 463.)
- 12. Nugæ Hebraicæ: or an Inquiry into the Elementary Principles of the Structure of the Hebrew Language. By a Member of the Royal Irish Academy. London, 1825, 4to.
- 13. A Comprehensive Hebrew Grammar: wherein the principles of the Language are simply and briefly explained. By George Jones, A.M. Dublin, 1826, 8vo.

This Grammar has been especially composed for the use of the students at the University of Dublin. It has been the author's endeavour to imbody in clear and concise rules every thing essential to the radical understanding of the language. "In this design Mr. Jones has certainly succeeded; his work contains a summary of all that is valuable in the Thesaurus Grammaticus of Buxtorf, presented in a manner well calculated to meet the difficulties generally felt by beginners. The last chapter, which is devoted to Syntax, contains a collection of useful remarks on the idioms of the language; the conversive vau is explained on the principles of Mr. Gell' [see No. 10. above]; and the work concludes with a brief statement of the theory of Hebrew poetry, as laid down by Bishops Lowth and Jebb. "On the whole, we cheerfully recommend this work, as calculated to teach the principles of the Hebrew language." (Christ. Examiner, or Church of Ireland Magazine, February, 1827.)

14. A Grammar of the Hebrew Language, comprised in a series of Lectures, compiled from the best Authorities, and augmented with much original matter, drawn principally from Oriental Sources; designed for the use of Students in the Universites. By the Rev. Samuel Lee, A.M. [now D.D.], Professor of Arabic in the University of Cambridge. London, 1827. Second edition, corrected, 1831, 8vo.

The following are the principal circumstances in which this grammar is stated to differ from every preceding work of the same kind; viz.—1. In the manner in which the system of vowel points is developed; and 2. In the mode in which the nouns and verbs are exhibited, so as to avoid that perplexity which is presented to learners in many Hebrew grammars. In the syntax, the character of the language is investigated according to the analogy discoverable within itself; and the conclusions to which the author arrives are confirmed by appeals to the Arabian grammarians. The enallages of gender and number, which have caused so much perplexity to students in the grammars that have been formed after the system of the celebrated Buxtorf, are here set aside; and principles are laid down, by which it is shown that, according to the genius of the Schemitic dialects, those rules are groundless, which make it necessary to call in these anomalies to our aid. To the syntax is appended a short essay on the use of the Hebrew accents, showing in what way they are to be understood as a commentary on the bearing of the context. The whole is divided into Twenty lectures.

- 15. An Analysis of the History of Joseph, upon the Principles of Professor Lee's Hebrew Grammar. By Alfred OLLIVANT, M.A. London, 1828. Second edition, 1833, 8vo.
- 16. Essentials of Hebrew Grammar, with points, arranged agreeably to the plan of Gesenius, for the use of Students. By the Rev. J. CROCKER, M.A. Cambridge and London, 1829, 8vo. Also on a folio sheet.

- 17. A Grammar of the Hebrew Language, with Points; together with a short Sketch of the Chaldee Grammar. By Selig Newman, Professor of the Hebrew Language. London, 1827,
- 18. The Elements of Hebrew Grammar, with a Praxis on the Book of Jonah. By William Thomas Philipps, B.D. Bristol and London, 1830, 8vo.
- "This is a very well-printed volume. The author has adopted in this work the plan of a grammar published many years ago by Dr. Bennet. Every section is numbered, and a praxis upon a portion of the Bible is added, from which continual references are made to the preceding rules. The advantage to be derived from this method is, that the most necessary rules are the most frequently referred to, and consequently make an impression on the memory in proportion to their importance; and as the learner is not obliged, in the first instance, to make himself master of all the rules, there can be no reason for limiting their number, or omitting any thing which may be essential to his future progress. The first part of this grammar explains the elements; the second, the etymology; the third contains the syntax." (Journal of Education, July, 1833, p. 97.)
- 19. A Grammar of the Hebrew Language, in two parts: I. Orthography, &c.; II. The Etymology and Syntax. By Hyman Hurwitz. London, 1831, 8vo.
- 20. An Easy Introduction to the Hebrew Language, on the Principles of Pestalozzi. By Parens [Mr. ———SYNGE.] London, 1831.

This Grammar is divided into three parts, containing I. A Teacher's Assistant for developing the elements of Hebrew, with a praxis; II. A short Hebrew Grammar, with and without points; and, III. The Hebrew Roots, arranged in twenty-four tables. "Mr. Synge does not intend, in this excellent elementary work, to provide for every possible case, and thus to encumber the outset with what ought to belong to a more advanced stage. He only provides for grammatical facts of frequent occurrence, leaving it to more elaborate works to furnish the explanation of insulated cases." (Journal of Education, July, 1833, p. 100.)

21. A Grammar of the Hebrew Language. By Edward HINCKS, D.D. Belfast, 1832, 8vo.

This Grammar "contains less learning than that of Stuart, but seems more intelligible for a beginner." (Journal of Education, July, 1833, p. 94.)

- 22. A Practical Introduction to Hebrew: with an Appendix, containing Observations on the Spanish and Portuguese Pronunciation of the Language. By S. G. WALKER. London, 1833. 8vo.
- "Mr. Walker's pamphlet is rather a strange one. The preface contains a quantity of very ill-judged matter about Freemssonry. The account of the pronunciation and the nouns is very good; but what relates to the verbs is so meagre, that it does not afford, by any means, sufficient direction to a learner. There is a very fair praxis on the first psalm." (British Magazine, May, 1833, p. 586.)
- 23. A Manual Hebrew Grammar for the use of Beginners. By J. Seixas. Andover (Massachusetts), 1833, 8vo.

This Grammar is designed so exclusively for the author's pupils, or for such persons as may learn Hebrew from them, as to be of no use to any student out of the American Union. The author acknowledges his obligations to Professor Stuart's admirable Hebrew Grammar.

24. Hebrew Aids: being, I. A Digest of the Principles of the Hebrew Grammar. II. Paradigms of Verbs. In two Charts. London, 1833.

These charts are little more than a digest from Professor Gesenius of Halle, Professor Stuart of Andover, and other modern and ancient grammarians and Hebrew scholars.

- [ii.] In the Latin, French, and German Languages.
- 1. Joannis Buxtorffii Thesaurus Grammaticus Linguæ Sanctæ Hebrææ. Basilæ, 1615, 8vo.

This manual is chiefly taken from the Hebrew Grammar of the Hebrew Language by the celebrated rabbi David Kimchi, and may be considered as the standard of Rabbinical Grammars.

- 2. Thomæ Bennet, S.T.P. Grammatica Hebræa cum uberrimà praxi in usum tironum, qui linguam Hebræam absque preceptoris vivà voce (idque in brevissimo temporis compendio) ediscere cupiunt. Londini, 1726, 8vo.
- 3. Alberti Schultens, Institutiones ad Fundamenta Linguæ Hebrææ. Lugduni Batavorum, 1731, 4to.

Vol. II.—App. 4 D

- 4. Institutiones ad Fundamenta Linguæ Hebrææ, edidit Nich. Guil. Schnoeder. Editio Tertia. Groningæ, 1810, 8vo. Edit. nova. Glasguæ, 1824, 8vo.
- 5. Grammatica Linguæ Hebrææ; cum notis, et variis quæstionibus philologicis, in quibus præcipuè disseritur de natura et indole Linguæ Hebrææ. Jacobo Robertson, A.M. Ling. Orient. Professore in Academia Edinburgena, auctore. Edinburgi, 1758, 8vo.

This Hebrew Grammar, which has always been held in the highest estimation, contains the most useful and necessary of those principles and rudiments, which are laid down in the elaborate works of Professor Schultens and Schroeder. It is therefore more full and complete than either.

- 6. Grammatica Hebræo-Harmonica cum Arabica et Aramæa, methodo logico-mathematica, etc. ex Altingio, Buxtorfio, Beveridgio, Buchero, Chappelovvio, Dantzio, Erpenio, Gerhordi, Hasæo, Koolhasio, Martini, Michaelis, Pfeiffero, Schickardo, Schultens, Simonis, Vriemotio, contracta et emendata; Charta Lusoria, analytice delineata, et directorio elucidata. Auctore J. G. Kals. Amstelædami, 1758, 8vo.
- Mr. John William Kals was for many years scholar, and afterwards assistant to the celebrated professor Albert Schultens; and for some time taught Hebrew at Oxford. His work consists of three parts. 1. A Hebrew Grammar, compiled from the labours of preceding writers on this branch of sacred philology; 2. A Harmonic Grammar of the Arabic and Syriac Languages; 3. An Analysis of the chief prophecies and promises concerning the Messiah.
- 7. Gottlob Christiani Storm Observationes ad Analogiam et Syntaxin Hebraicam pertinentes. Tubingæ, 1779, 12mo.

A very acute and accurate work: though defective in arrangement, it contains a mass of important observations on the genius and idiom of the sacred language. Much as it has been resorted to by modern Grammarians, it may still be considered as a valuable and almost indispensable help to the student who is desirous of becoming thoroughly acquainted with the Hebrew language.

8. Christ. Theo. Waltheri Ellipses Hebraicæ, sive de Vocibus quæ in Codice Hebraico per Ellipsin supprimuntur.... Denuo edidit et Observationes Novas adjecit Joh. Christ. Frid. Schulz. Halæ, 1782, 12mo.

This work is on the plan of Lambert Bos's well-known and justly esteemed treatise entitled "Ellipses Græcæ:" it renders to the student the same valuable help for the Hebrew language which Bos has afforded to students of the Greek language.

- 9. Janua Hebrææ Linguæ Veteris Testamenti, auctore Christiano Reineccio. Ex recensione I. F. Rehkopf. Lipsiæ, 1788, 8vo.
- 10. Grammatica Linguæ Hebraicæ. Auctore Joanne Jaux. Viennæ, 1809, 8vo.

The manner in which the verbs are treated is said not to be so perspicuous as in some other grammars; but a learned friend informs the author of the present work, that every other part is excellent; the syntax, in particular, is admirable; and upon the whole this Grammar of Jahn is among the best which can be consulted by those who have made some progress in the study of the Hebrew language.

11. De Radicum Linguæ Hebraicæ Natura nominali Commentatio Grammatica; quam Lectionibus suis præmisit J. Th. Plüschke, Phil. D. Theologiæ Prof. Extr. Lipsiæ, 1817, 8vo.

The design of this tract is, to prove that many of the words, hitherto considered in the dictionaries as radical verbs, are in fact only words derived from nouns; and, 2. That even verbs to which no root can be assigned, are rather to be regarded as nouns than as verbs. (Melanges de Religion et de Critique Sacrée, publiées à Nismes, tom. i. Gazette Littéraire, p. 24.)

12. Elémens de la Grammaire Hébra que, par J. E. Cellerier, fils, Pasteur et Professeur de Langues Orientales, Critique, et Antiquité Sacrée, à l'Académie de Genève. Suivis des Principes de la Syntaxe Hebra que, traduits librement de l'Allemand de Wilhelm Gesenius. Genève, 1820, 8vo.

To those who wish to study Hebrew with points, through the medium of the French language, this beautifully-printed volume will be peculiarly acceptable. That part of it which relates to the syntax is particularly valuable, as it presents in a small compass the results of the researches made by Professor Gesenius (noticed in page 86. No. 7.), whose prolixities he has abridged, while he has rendered clear what was left obscure, and has explained what the professor had stated with too much brevity.

13. Institutiones Linguæ Hebrææ, concinnatæ per Joannem Nep. Alben, S. Scripturæ Vet. Test. et Linguæ Hebrææ Professorum. Budæ, 1826, 8vo.

It appears from the author's preface, that this is a new edition of a Hebrew Grammar, published by him in 1800. It is composed entirely after the system of the Masorites. At the end there is a very useful grammatical praxis of ninety-five pages upon several chapters taken from various parts of the Old Testament, to which is annexed a concise Lexicon of the Hebrew Roots.

- 14. Narratio de Josepho e Sacro Codice desumpta. Textum Hebraicum, punctis appositis Masoreticis, ad Analysin revocavit, notisque philologicis instruxit Stephanus Reax. Oxonii, e Typographeo Clarendoniano, 1822, 8vo.
- 15. Linguæ Hebraicæ Literæ, Accentus, Pronomina, Conjugationes, Declinationes, Nomina numeralia, et Particulæ. Jenæ, 1822, folio.
- 16. Jac. Chr. Lindberg, Chrestomathia Hebraica historici argumenti, e libris Exodo, Numeris, et Deuteronomio, decerpta; præfatiunculà de accentibus Hebraicis et de nominibus derivatis præmisså. Havniæ, 1822, 8vo.
- 17. Nouvelle Grammaire Hébra; que Raisonnée et Comparée. Par M. Sarchi. Paris, 1828, 8vo.

This grammar, the most copious which is extant in the French language, consists of six chapters, the first of which "treats of pronunciation: the rules of this part of the grammar are given with clearness and precision; and the author has omitted nothing that is necessary, nor has he mentioned any thing superfluous. The second chapter is very large, containing one hundred and ninety pages, treating of lexicology: the matter contained in this chapter is developed with great superiority of talent. The third chapter treats of syntax, and contains many new and luminous ideas, which mark a consummate Hebraist. The fourth chapter treats of prosody: in this chapter the author has banished from his work a finitastical vocabulary imagined in the fifteenth century, which no one will regret but the lovers of routine, full of a blind respect to superannuated doctrines. The fifth chapter contains rules on orthography, letters, and vowel-points, &c.: this chapter contains new ideas on the point denominated daguesch (dagesh) which corresponds in general with the teshdid of the Arabs. Thematology forms the subject of the sixth chapter, which contains some excellent observations on servile and radical letters. The volume is terminated by an appendix on the Hebrew name of the Divinity, called ineffable by the Israelites, which they dare not pronounce. This dissertation proves the great erudition of the author." (Classical Journal, December, 1828, p. 332.)

- 18. Compendium Grammaticæ Hebraicæ. Oeniponti, 1829, 8vo.
- 19. Principes de Grammaire Hébra que et Chaldaique. Par J. B. GLAIRE. Paris, 1832, 8vo.

This grammar is divided into three parts, which treat, 1. On the Elements of Hebrew Writing; 2. On the different parts of speech, the conjugation of verbs, &c.; and, 3. On the syntax of the Hebrew language. As the syntax of the Chaldee language is nearly the same as that of the Hebrew, M. Glaire has confined his observations on it to the two first parts, or the elements and grammar of the Chaldee language. As this Grammar is strictly elementary, the author has studiously avoided all those scientific and controverted questions, which belong to literary criticism, and which would only perplex beginners. This work is clearly and methodically written; the principles are perspicuously and concisely stated, and in an order which is calculated to assist the memory. At the end of this grammar is a supplement, in which M. Glaire has explained the principal critical signs used in manuscripts and editions of the Hebrew Bible. (Journal des Savans, Juin, 1832, p. 379.)

20. Grammatica Hebræa: auctore Tacone Roonda. Lugduni Batavorum, 1831, 2 vols. 8vo.

The first volume treats on the elements and simple words of the Hebrew language. The syntax is copiously discussed in the second volume. Those observations, which, on a first perusal of this grammar, may be passed over by the student, are printed in smaller type.

21. Grammatik der Hebräischen Sprache des A. T. in völlstandiger Kürze, neu bearbeitet von Georg Heinrich August Ewald. Leipzig, 1832, 8vo.

This is an abridgment, or rather a condensation (with considerable improvements), of Professor Ewald's larger Hebrew grammar. "An ingenious novelty occurs in every page. In scientific arrangement and the explanation of anomalies, he is perhaps unrivalled. Many facts, which are faithfully and clearly stated singulatin by Gesenius, are exhibited by Ewald in a chain of philological relations, which at once removes the appearance of capriciousness from each, and helps the memory to retain them all." (Philadelphia Biblical Repertory for 1832, vol. iv. N. S. p. 575.)

- 22. Josephi Muller Hebraicæ Linguæ Elementa. Wratislaviæ, 1833, 8vo.
-  Many important observations on Hebrew Grammar will be found in Glassius's Philologia Sacra, noticed in p. 73. supra: from which, as well as from other sources, Dr. Gerard has digested much valuable information in his Institutes of Biblical Criticism, pp. 40—51. 290—377.

- § 3. HEBREW GRAMMARS without POINTS.
- 1. Francisci MASCLEF Grammatica Hebraica a punctis aliisque inventis Masorethicis libera. Accesserunt tres Grammaticae, Chaldaica, Syriaca, et Samaritana ejusdem instituti. Parisiis, 1731, 2 vols. 8vo.
- Of all the writers of Hebrew Grammar without points, Masclef has enjoyed the highest reputation. A late eminent divine and professor of the university of Cambridge has said of his work, "I know none more to be recommended; as it gives rules for the Chaldee, Syriac, and Samaritan, as well as for what is commonly called Hebrew." (Dr. Hey's Norrisian Lectures in Divinity, vol. i. p. 23.)—As Masclef's work is now extremely scarce and dear, Professor Hey recommends,
- 2. Elements of Hebrew Grammar; to which is prefixed a Dissertation on the two modes of reading, with or without points. By Charles Wilson, Professor of Hebrew at the University of Saint Andrew's. London, 1782. Fourth edition, 1810, 8vo.

See an analysis of this work in the Monthly Review (O. S.), vol. lxviii. pp. 422—427.

3. The Hebrew Guide, or an English Hebrew Grammar without points; to which is added, a view of the Chaldaic, and, for the further satisfaction of the inquisitive, a brief Introduction to the Knowledge of Hebrew Punctuation. By Peter Petit, M.A. London, 1752, 4to.

Though this Grammar contains nothing very extraordinary, besides what may be found in other productions of the same nature, yet it may be of considerable and peculiar use to learners. The author follows the plan of Masclef's Grammar, above noticed; but has reduced his work into a narrower compass, and has added a small praxis, consisting of short sentences, to illustrate the use of the several conjugations. For the sake of the more inquisitive scholar, who has acquired a competent knowledge of the Hebrew language, without points, Mr. Petit has subjoined a brief Introduction to the Knowledge of thebrew Punctuation; which he does not give as a complete system, but as a collection of as many substantials of the doctrine, as are generally retained even by those who would be thought adepts in that part of learning. (Monthly Review (O.S.), vol. vii. p. 234.)

4. A Methodical Hebrew Grammar without points: adapted to the use of learners, and even of those who have not the benefit of a master. To which is subjoined the Hebrew Grammar at one view. By John Parkhurst, M.A. 8vo.

This is admitted by all competent judges to be the shortest and most compendious Hebrew Grammar extant in the English language. It is prefixed to the learned author's Hebrew and English Lexicon, which is noticed in p. 91. infra.

- 5. A New and Easy Introduction to the Hebrew Language, upon the plan of Grammar in general, designed to encourage and promote the study of that language, by facilitating the acquirement of its principles upon a plan, which in no work of the kind has been hitherto adopted. By the Rev. James William Newton, M.A. London, 1806, 12mo.
- "The study of the Hebrew language has been attended with considerable difficulties, from the circumstance of there being no Grammar of that language constructed upon the model of grammar in general. In the present work this impediment has been removed, and the learner will find that, in acquiring a new language, he has to contend with none of those embarrassments that proceed from encountering a system of grammar entirely new to him; which to those who have been at the trouble of learning the grammar of several languages, is an obstacle which is not frequently to be surmounted.... The work is conducted with a simplicity and perspicuity which afford every assistance to those who may be disposed to become acquainted with the rudiments of the Hebrew tongue." British Critic (O. S.), vol. xxvii. p. 441.
- 6. A Hebrew Primer. To which are prefixed the opinions of Melancthon, Luther, and others, on the Utility, Necessity, and Easiness of the Study of the Hebrew Language. Durham and London, 1808, 12mo.
- 7. Hebrew Elements: or a Practical Introduction to the Reading of the Hebrew Scriptures. London, 1807, 8vo.

Both these publications are by the Rt. Rev. Dr. Burgess, the present learned Bishop of Salisbury; and together with his engraved copies of Hebrew letters and words, form the simplest and clearest introduction to the reading of Hebrew without points, which perhaps has ever been published.

haps has ever been published.

A new edition of the two preceding articles, neatly printed in one volume, 12mo. issued from the university press, Glasgow, in 1823.

8. Extracts from the Books of the Old Testament; to which are prefixed Sketches of Hebrew and Chaldee Grammar, for the Use of Students in the University of Edinburgh. [By the Rev. Dr. Brunton.] Edinburgh, 1814, 8vo.

9. An Easy Introduction to the knowledge of the Hebrew Language without the points. By James P. Wilson, D.D. 1818, 8vo.

This Grammar appeared in North America in 1818. We have not been able to obtain a sight of it, or to ascertain the place where it was printed.

- 10. An Introduction to Hebrew Grammar; in which the Genius of the Language is explained by a new and simple principle of Analysis, applied to the Improvements of the latest and most improved Grammarians; and particularly intended to reduce the Irregularities of the inflected parts of speech to the common analogy of the Language, and to explain the peculiarities of the construction by assimilating it to the Idiom of the English. By the Rev. Frederick Nolan, LL.D. London, 1821, 12mo.
- 11. A Hebrew Dictionary and Grammar, without points; together with a complete List of such Chaldee Words as occur in the Old Testament, and a brief Sketch of Chaldee Grammar. By James Andrew, LL.D. London, 1823, 8vo.
- 12. Three Tracts on the Syntax and Pronunciation of the Hebrew Tongue, with an Appendix, addressed to the Hebrew Nation. By Granville Sharp. London, 1804, 8vo.

Many very important rules and observations are comprised in these valuable tracts; of which a copious analysis appeared in the Christian Observer for the year 1804, p. 415.

- § 4. HEBREW GRAMMARS with AND without POINTS.
- A Plain and Complete Grammar of the Hebrew Language, with and without points. By Anselm Bayler, LL.D. London, 1774, 8vo.
- 2. Principia Hebraica; comprising a Grammatical Analysis of 564 verses, selected from the Hebrew Psalms, in which are found nearly all the radical words in common use occurring in the Hebrew Scriptures. To which is prefixed a concise Hebrew Grammar, adapted to the Analysis, and so arranged as to illustrate the principles of the language, both with and without points. By T[homas] K[enworth], and D[avid] J[ones]. London, 1817, 8vo.

In this very useful work, the Serviles are printed in hollow characters—the root and radical sense are pointed out—those rules of grammar are referred to, which account for the form of each word—and a literal version in English is interlined with the Hebrew text.

"The authors have unitedly produced an introduction to the reading of the Hebrew Bible, of distinguished excellence and utility. Nothing so complete of the kind was ever before put into the hands of the English scholar, who is here provided with a guide to Hebrew reading worthy of his confidence. In awarding the high praise to which the authors have an unquestionable claim, we cannot omit the commendation due to their unassuming manner: their learning is never used for the purpose of display, but is invariably employed to promote the solid improvement of those persons who may choose to avail themselves of the means here provided for their correct instruction in the knowledge of Hebrew. They have furnished the student with every admissible facility for his initiation and progress in the Hebrew language. The work is very judiciously constructed for the use of the two different classes of Hebrew readers, the Punctists and the Anti-punctists; it is, however, particularly adapted for the latter." (Eclectic Review, Nov. 1818.)

3. The Analytical Part of Principia Hebraica. By Thomas Kerworth. London, 1825, 8vo.

This publication is a much improved impression of part of the preceding work, separate from the grammar which originally accompanied it. "In this new edition, which contains a compendium and a key, the entire Hebrew text, of which the Analysis is explanatory, is printed by itself without remark, and is distributed into lessons, comprising examples of nouns and verbs, the usage of servile letters and points, which are explained in the corresponding portions of the Analytical Part. These short lessons are followed by a selection of upwards of two hundred words; intended to familiarize the learner with the pronunciation and forms of words; and the remaining part of the compendium includes three hundred verses from the Psalms, arranged in classes, and forming a series of connected subjects. The second or analytical part of the work is a complete and very minute explanation of the words, vowels, and various forms and modifications contained in the compendium; the whole of the text is here reprinted, the serviles in hollow characters, and the places of the dropped radicals supplied by small letters, accompanied by a literal interlineary version. The whole work may be used with any grammar, and will be found a most valuable assistant to every student of the Hebrew language, who will find in its pages the means of satisfying himself in respect to almost every difficulty which may occur to a learner." (Eclectic Review (N. S.), vol. xxv. p. 439.)

4. Rudiments of the Hebrew Language, with and without points. By James Noble, A.M. Glasgow, 1832, 8vo.

For an analysis of this Grammar see the Journal of Education for July, 1833, pp. 75—80.

 So great a number of Hebrew Grammars (considerably more than $1x$ hundred, we believe) has been published by distinguished Hebraists, at different times, that it is difficult to determine which is preferably to be adopted. An experienced tutor will be the best guide, in this case, to the Hebrew student. In the preceding pages, therefore, those only have been specified which have some pretensions to notice for their utility and simplicity of method.

§ 5. CHALDEE GRAMMARS.

1. A short Chaldee Grammar, without points, designed for the use of those who already understand Hebrew. [By the Rev. J. PARKHURST, M.A.]

This is subjoined to Mr. P.'s Grammar, which is prefixed to his Hebrew Lexicon. A Compendium of Chaldee Grammar is given in the second volume of Masclef's Grammatica Hebraica.

- 2. J. D. MICHAELIS Grammatica Chaldaica. Gottingæ, 1771,
- 3. An Introduction to Chaldee Grammar; in which the Genius of the language is explained by a new and simple Principle of Analysis. By the Rev. Frederick Nolan. London, 1821, 12mo.
- 4. Elements of the Chaldee Language; intended as a Supplement to the Hebrew Grammar, and as a General Introduction to the Aramean Dialects. By the Rev. W. HARBIS, LL.D. London, 1822, 8vo.
- 5. De Chaldaismi Biblici Origine et Auctoritate Critica Commentatio. Scripsit Ludovicus Hiroelius. Lipsiæ, 1830, 4to.
- 6. A Manual of the Chaldee Language; containing a Chaldee Grammar, chiefly from the German of Professor G. B. Winer; a Chrestomathy, consisting of selections from the Targums, and including the whole of the Biblical Chaldee, with Notes; and a Vocabulary, adapted to the Chrestomathy. With an Appendix on the Rabbinical character and style. By Elias Riegs, M.A. Boston [Massachusetts], 1832, 8vo.

This beautifully printed volume leaves nothing to be desired by the student of Chaldee literature. The plan and execution of the work throughout has received the high commendation of Professor Stuart, of Andover, who further says:—"The Grammar is brief, but quite copious enough for the student who is well versed in Hebrew. In the text, notes, and lexicon of the Chrestomathy, will be found all that is needful in an introduction to the Chaldee Language." (Pref. p. v.)

SECTION II.

HEBREW AND CHALDEE LEXICONS.

& 1. HEBREW LEXICONS with POINTS.

- 1. JOANNIS BUXTORFFII Lexicon Hebraicum et Chaldaicum. Basileæ, 1634, 1645, 1675, 1720, or 1735, 8vo. Glasguæ, 1824,
- 2. Joannis Buxtorffii Lexicon Chaldaicum, Talmudicum et Rabbinicum. Basiles, 1639, folio.
 - 3, Petri Guarini Lexicon Hebraicum et Chaldæo-Biblicum. Parisiis, 1746, 2 vols. 4to.
 - 4. Christiani STOCKII Clavis Linguæ Sanctæ Veteris Testamenti. Jenæ, 1739, 1743, 1753 (best edit.), 8vo.
 - 5. Lexicon et Commentarius Sermonis Hebraici et Chaldaici, post J. Cocceium et J. H. Maium, longe quam antehac correctius et emendatius edidit Joh. Ch. Fried. Schulz. Lipsiæ, 1777, 2 vols. 8vo.

Cocceius's Hebrew and Chaldee Dictionary was very highly esteemed in the former part of the last century. M. Schulz, in preparing his edition for the press, omitted all the superfluous Dutch and German words; and, in determining the signification of each Hebrew word, previously consulted the equivalent term in the Arabic and other Oriental languages. He also restored to their true places several scattered roots, together with their derivatives. The work is neatly and correctly printed; and may frequently be obtained at a reasonable price.

6. Lexicon Hebraicum et Chaldæo-Biblicum, ordine alphabetico tam primigenia quam derivata Veteris Testamenti Hebraica et Chaldaica, et Latinas eorumdem Interpretationes ex Johannis Buxtorfii aliorumque eruditissimorum Virorum operibus excerptas, exhibens. Digessit, multisque auxit atque illustravit Josephus Montaldi, Romæ in Collegio Germanico Controversiarum Fidei et Hebrææ Linguæ Professor. Romæ, 1789, 4 tomis, 8vo.

- cum ordine etymologico digestum: post J. Gothofr. Eichhornii curas denuo recensuit, emendavit, auxit Dr. Geo. Ben. WINER. Editio quarta. Lipsiæ, 1826, 8vo.
- Dr. Winer has so greatly altered, corrected, and improved this Lexicon that it may be regarded as a new work, rather than a new edition of Simonis's Hebrew Lexicon.
- 8. The Smaller Hebrew and Chaldee Lexicon of Professor Simonis, translated and improved from his second edition (published at Halle in 1766). By Charles SEAGER, M.A. London, 1832, 12mo.
- 9. Philipp. Ulric. Moser Lexicon Manuale Hebraicum et Chaldaicum, in quo omnium Textûs Sacri Vet. Test. Vocabulorum Hebraicorum et Chaldaicorum significatio explicatur, cum Indice Latino copiosissimo. Præfatus est D. Gottlob Christian Storr. Ulmæ, 1795, 8vo.
- 10. Joannis Dindorfii Novum Lexicon Linguæ Hebraico-Chaldaicæ. Lipsiæ, 1802, 2 vols. 8vo.
- 11. Lexicon Hebraicum et Chaldaicum Manuale, in Codicem sacrum Veteris Testamenti, curâ Everardi Scheidli et Joannis GROENEWOED. Lugduni Batavorum, 1805-10, 2 vols. 8vo.
- 12. A Hebrew, Latin, and English Dictionary; containing, 1. All the Hebrew and Chaldee words used in the Old Testament, including the proper names, arranged under one alphabet, with the derivatives referred to their proper roots, and the signification in Latin and English, according to the best authorities. 2. The principal words in the Latin and English languages, with those which correspond to them in Hebrew. By Joseph Samuel C. F. FREY. London, 1816, 2 vols. 8vo.

A book of more promise than performance, and now entirely superseded by the valuable Lexicons of Gesenius, which are noticed

- 13. E. F. C. ROSENMULLERI Vocabularium Veteris Testamenti Hebræo-Chaldaicum. Halæ (Libraria Orphanotrophei), 1822, 8vo.
- 14. A Hebrew Lexicon to the Books of the Old Testament; including the Geographical Names and Chaldaic Words in Daniel, Ezra, &c. By D. Wilhelm Gesenius, Doctor and Professor of Theology at the University of Halle. Translated from Translated from the German by Christopher Leo, Teacher of Hebrew and German in the University of Cambridge, and late Professor of German at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst. Cambridge, at the University Press, 1825-28. In two vols. royal 4to.

This very beautifully printed work is a valuable translation of the first edition of Professor Gesenius's Hebrew and German Lexicon which was published at Leipzig in 1810–12, in two thick octavo volumes, alphabetically arranged. "The intrinsic value of a critical lexicon consists chiefly in the views of lexicography held by the cal lexicon consists enteny in the views of textcography near by the author. The leading trait of Gesenius, in this respect, is judgment. He makes a sober and temperate use of the various means for determining the signification of a Hebrew word. His reasoning from grammatical analogy, from the usage of the Hebrew language, from the context, from the kindred dialects, and from the ancient versions, spontaneously commends itself to the understanding. It is not sufficient to say that he has rejected all mystical derivations. He has also avoided the error, nearly as dangerous, into which some He has also avoided the error, nearly as dangerous, into which some modern lexicographers have run, in their extravagant use of Arabic derivations, in disregard of the fact, that the Hebrew is a distinct dialect, and as such has its peculiarities. But although Gesenius has restricted himself in this particular; yet his accurate knowledge of the oriental languages, especially of their constructions and inflections, sheds a constant and powerful light on Hebrew criticism. Much, too, depends on the arrangement of the various significations. Much, too, depends on the arrangement of the various significations. Here Gesenius has been very successful in seizing hold of the primary physical acceptation of a word. This he has placed first; and the other significations in the order in which they might be supposed to be derived from the primary. Each signification and each construction is supported by pertinent citations; which, when attended with any peculiar difficulty, are written out and accompanied with a literal translation." The different shades of meaning, it is truly observed in the preface, can never be set in a clearer light than by citing the passage which presents the word in its most light than by citing the passage which presents the word in its most distinguished situation, with relation to other words. "Such a view distinguished situation, with relation to other words. "Such a view of the different meanings of a word is the best commentary on all the passages cited. Where the different significations of a root appear to have no logical connection, they are distinguished by Roman numerals: I no ther cases only by Arabic numerals. Gesenius has introduced into his lexicon many things which other lexicographers either wholly or partially omit; as (I.) A full account of the construction of verbs with different prepositions and particles. This is the more necessary, as the Hebrews have no composite verbs, but vary the signification of the verb by means of the preposition following, as in other languages by the preposition in composition. following, as in other languages by the preposition in composition. (2.) A full explanation of phrases and idioms,—a very important part of a good lexicon. (3.) A notice of poetical words and inflections, with the corresponding prosaic expression. (4.) A notice of

7. Johannis Simonis Lexicon Manuale Hebraicum et Chaldai- the peculiarities of the more modern Hebrew, in distinction from the more ancient. (5.) An account of those words which are defective in some of their forms, which are therefore borrowed from some other word, like the anomalous verbs in Greek. Gesenius first attended to this class of words in the Hebrew." In preparing his translation for the press, Professor Leo has not confined himself to merely rendering the Hebrew and German into the English language, but has made various improvements, which render this Lexicon preferable to every other. First, he has retained the original preface of Gesenius, in which reasons are assigned for retaining an old expression, or adopting a new one. Further, in order to afford beginners an opportunity of becoming more readily acquainted with the various forms of the conjugations of the verbs, he has added to each root of them the number of conjugations in which it occurs in the Bible. He has also verified all the citations of the Hebrew Scriptures with Van der Hooght's edition, and has thus tacitly corrected many errors which had escaped the critical eye of Gesenius. In this respect the translation has an advantage over the original. Lastly, Mr. Leo, having compared Gesenius's Ger-man abridgment of his lexicon with his own translation, and discovered several additions and improvements, he has interwoven them in his work; and has subjoined an appendix, containing an alphabet of such anomalous words as present more than ordinary difficulty to students.

> 15. Guilielmi Gesenti Thesaurus Philologico-Criticus Linguæ Hebrææ et Chaldææ Veteris Testamenti. Editio altera secundum radices digesta, priore Germanica longe auctior et emendatior. Pars I. Lipsiæ, 1827, 4to.; also on large paper in folio.

> Professor Gesenius, after making preparations, for several years, for a full and complete Thesaurus of the Hebrew language, in Hefor a full and complete Thesaurus of the Hebrew language, in Hebrew and Latin, printed the first portion of it so long since as the year 1827; but proceeded no further with this work. But in the mean time he has brought out two manual editions in German and Hebrew, which are the basis of Mr. Gibbs's Hebrew and English Lexicon, noticed in the next paragraph. The following are the leading characteristics of this Thesaurus:—(1.) Being intended for scholars, and not for beginners, the work is arranged in etymological order, while the Manuals are in alphabetical order. (2.) All the proper names are included and illustrated. (3.) In quoting a passage in which a word is found, in general all such passages are given, unless where the number is great, and the citation of them would be unimportant. (4.) When the author differs from the received opinions or sometimes from himself, the reasons are given at length, in order to avoid the charge of rashness. (5) In the citation of authorities, reference is more frequently had to the older interpreters, and every where, as much as possible, to the ultimate sources. (Andover Biblical Repository, vol. i. p. 188.) The portion already published comprises the first three letters of the alphabet; the work is to be completed in three more parts or numbers. are copies on thick folio paper, the typographical execution of which is truly beautiful.

> 16. A Hebrew and English Lexicon to the Old Testament. including the Biblical Chaldee, from the German Works of Prof. W. Gesenius. By Josiah W. Gibbs, A.M. Andover (North America), 1824, royal 8vo. London, 1827, 8vo. Second edition, 1832, 8vo.

> This is, strictly speaking, a new Hebrew and English Lexicon. It is is, in the German abridgment or smaller Lexicon of Prof. Gesenius, which was published at Leipsic, in 1815, in 8vo.; but Mr. Gibbs has throughout consulted the Thesaurus or larger Lexicon, and has also made some corrections from Gesenius's later philological works, especially his (German) Commentary on the Prophecy of Isaiah, which was published in 1820-21. Still further phecy of Isaiah, which was published in 1820-21. Still further to improve his Lexicon, Mr. Gibbs has not only corrected many errors and oversights which had crept into the original works of Gesenius, but has also commodiously broken the articles into paragraphs; making each signification of a word to commence a new paragraph; and he has, in addition, mentioned under each noun, which is found inflected in the Old Testament, the declension to which it belongs, as given in Prof. Stuart's Hebrew Grammar, which is noticed in p. 86.

> which is noticed in p. 86.
>
> The first London reprint was edited by the Rev. Lancelot Sharpe, M.A., who omitted the references to Prof. Stuart's Grammar, in order to render it more generally useful. Further, to insure greater correctness, the Hebrew words were printed from the second edition of Gesenius's "Neues Hebraisches Handworterbuch," which appeared at Leipsic, in 1825. The second London edition was superintended by the Rev. Dr. Henderson. Both reprints are very neatly executed.

17. Lexicon Manuale Hebraicum et Chaldaicum in Veteris Testamenti libros. Latinè elaboravit, multisque modis retractavit et auxit Guil. Gesenius. Lipsiæ, 1833, 8vo.

The third edition of Gesenius's Hebrew and German Lexicon is the basis of this work, which has been greatly enlarged and improved. It is formed upon the plan of the Thesaurus described in No. 15. supra.

18. A Manual Hebrew and English Lexicon, including the Biblical Chaldee, abridged with the latest Improvements from the Works of Professor W. Gesenius, and designed particularly for the Use of Students. By Josiah W. Gibbs, A.M. Andover [Massachusetts], 1828, 8vo. Second edition, revised and enlarged, New Haven, 1832, 8vo. Reprinted at London, 1833, 8vo.

This manual Lexicon is intended to embrace, in a condensed form, all the results of the preceding larger Hebrew and English Lexicon. It is specially designed for the use of students in the higher schools and colleges, and for all in the first stages of their study. All supposititious meanings, resting only on inference and analogy, are excluded, as well as the quoting and commenting on passages of the Bible. Phrases and idioms are introduced only sparingly; and the more difficult and anomalous forms are omitted. Professor Gibbs has announced his intention of supplying this last defect by an alphabetical vocabulary of difficult and anomalous forms, accompanied with a full analysis. The second edition was very carefully revised and corrected throughout, and the definitions of many words were improved. This Manual is quite sufficient for all common purposes of the Hebrew student. The study of the Hebrew language is much facilitated by this work. "So cheap and manageable a Lexicon will be reckoned a great acquisition by all students, and especially by those who have used Gesenius's or Stuart's grammar, as it contains references to them in the declension of nouns." (British Magazine, May, 1833, p. 586.) The London reprint is very neatly executed.

- 19. Lexicon Hebræo-Chaldaicum, in quo omnes voces Hebrææ et Chaldææ Linguæ, quæ in Veteris Testamenti libris occurrunt, exhibentur, adjectis ubique genuinis significationibus Latinis. Accurante Chr. Reineccio. Iterum editum, emendatum, auctum per J. Fr. Reinopf, denuo edidit, emendavit, auxit, atque in ordinem redegit alphabeticum, A. Ph. L. Sauerwein, Hannoveræ, 1828, 8vo.
- 20. Lexicon Manuale Hebraico-Latinum et Chaldwo-Biblicum: auctore J. E. Stadlen. Landishuti, 1831, 8vo.
- 21. Lexicon Manuale Hebraicum et Chaldaicum: auctore J. B. GLAIRE. Paris, 1831, 8vo.
- 22. Lexicon Hebraicum et Chaldaicum in Libros Veteris Testamenti, ordine etymologico compositum. Edidit Ernestus Fridericus Leopolo. Lipsiæ, 1832, 12mo.

This manual Lexicon is compiled expressly for the use of schools, and those who are commencing their studies in Hebrew literature. It is concise, yet comprehensive: it is very neatly printed, and is the cheapest Hebrew Lexicon which has issued from the press.

- 23. Thesauri Linguæ Hebraicæ, e Mischna augendi, Particula I. II. III. Auctore Ant. Theod. Habtmann. Rostochii, 1825-26, 4to.
-  Those who are commencing their Hebrew studies with the book of Genesis, will find Leusden's Clavis Hebraica Veteris Testamenti (Utrecht, 1683, 4to.), and Robertson's Clavis Pentateuchi (Edinburgh, 1770, Norvici, 1824, 8vo.), to be very useful manuals, as Bythner's Lyra Prophetica, noticed in page 9, of this Appendix, and Messrs. Keyworth and Jones's Principia Hebraica (noticed in p. 89.), are to those who begin with the book of Psalms. Of J. H. Meisner's Nova Veteris Testamenti Clavis, only two volumes have appeared (Lipsiæ, 1809, 8vo.): it is executed on the plan of Leusden's or Robertson's works, but does not go through the Old Testament. Its value is enhanced by the addition of the significations of Hebrew words from the Septuagint version; the differences of which from the Hebrew are often examined and accounted for with much critical acumen.

§ 2. HEBREW LEXICON without Points.

An Hebrew and English Lexicon without Points; in which the Hebrew and Chaldee Words of the Old Testament are explained in their leading and derived Senses; the Derivative Words are ranged under their respective Primitives, and the Meanings assigned to each, authorized by References to Passages of Scripture, and frequently illustrated and confirmed by Citations from various Authors. By John PARKHURST, M.A. London, 1792, 4to. Other editions in royal 8vo.

The first edition of this work (the value of which is sufficiently attested by the repeated impressions it has undergone) appeared in 1762; the second in 1778; and the third in 1792; all in quarto. The third is reputed to be the best edition, as being the last which was corrected by the learned author himself, who closed a long life of study and of piety in 1797. But the later genuine London editions, in royal 8vo., being printed under the critical eye of Mr. Parkhurst's accomplished daughter, are more easy of purchase, and justly claim a place in the library of every student. The Hebrew and Chaldee Grammars above noticed are prefixed to this Lexicon.

SECTION III.

GRAMMARS AND LEXICONS FOR THE GREEK TESTAMENT, AND FOR THE SEPTUAGINT VERSION.

§ 1. GRAMMARS AND OTHER TREATISES ON THE LANGUAGE OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

A PLAIN and Easy Greek Grammar, adapted to the use of Learners, and of those who understand no other Language than English. By John Parkhurst, M.A. 4to. and 8vo.

This Grammar is prefixed to the learned author's Greek and English Lexicon; which is noticed in p. 92. infra.

- 2. De Verâ Naturâ atque Indole Orationis Græcæ Novi Testamenti. Auctore Henrico Planck. Gottingæ, 1810. [Also in the first volume of Rosenmüller's Commentationes Theologicæ.]
- "The little tract of Professor Planck first opened the way fully to a correct estimate of the character of the style of the New Testament; and unfolded those philological principles of which the works of Wahl and Winer were intended to exhibit the practical application. Though of small dimensions, it is full of large views; and has exerted a wider influence in the critical world than all the ponderous tomes produced during the centuries of the Attic Controversy" respecting the style of the New Testament. (North American Review, for July, 1826, vol. xxiii. p. 106.) Two English translations of this treatise have appeared; one, in the first volume of the Andover Biblical Repository, the other, in the second volume of the Edinburgh Biblical Cabinet.
- 3. Grammatik des Neutestamentlichen Sprachidioms, als sichere Grundlage der Neutestamentlichen Exegese, bearbeitet von Dr. Georg. Benedict Wines. Dritte Auflage. Leipzig, 1830.

The first edition of this most valuable Grammar appeared at Leipsic in 1822, and was translated into English at Andover (Massachusetts) in 1825. [See the next article.] In 1826 the author published a second edition, which was soon followed by a second volume of excursus on some of the more important topics of the work. In 1830 the present (or third) edition was published, in which the former volumes are united, and the subjects are reduced to their proper order. Upon the elementary materials collected by Planck, and augmented by his own long-continued researches, Dr. Winer has erected a grammatical system of the later Greek as exhibited in the New Testament, including the deviations as to form and flexions of words, but having regard chiefly to the syntax, or at least to the use of words in connection, as well as to the structure of sentences. "In this," third edition, "the author has also given the further results of his continued studies; and especially those flowing from an attentive and systematic perusal of all the later Greek writers. It is not too much to say, that the labours of Planck and Winer have produced an entire revolution of opinion in regard to the language of the New Testament; and have placed the charac-ter of it in a light so strong and definite, that its general features can be no longer mistaken or perverted." (Andover Biblical Repository, vol. i. p. 640.)

4. A Greek Grammar of the New Testament translated from the German of George Benedict Winer, Professor of Theology at Erlangen. By Moses Stuart, Professor of Sacred Literature in the Theol. Seminary, Andover, and Edward Robinson, Assistant Instructor in the same Department. Andover, 1825. Large 8vo.

This is a translation of the first edition of the preceding work. The Anglo-American translators have greatly increased the value of this Grammar by verifying all the references to the New Testament, and by the addition of numerous learned notes, which are designated by the initials of their respective names.

- Grammatica Linguæ Græcæ quâ N. T. Scriptores usi sunt, composita a Joanne Carolo Guilelmo Alt. Halis Saxonum, 1829, 8vo.
- A valuable grammar of the Greek Language of the New Testament. The author professes to have availed himself of the labours of Winer, so far as they had been published.
- 6. De Modorum Usu in Novo Testamento: Quæstionis Grammaticæ Pars prima, Indicativi Usum explicans. Scripsit Carolus Henricus Adelbert Lipsius. Lipsiæ, 1827, 8vo.
- 7. Remarks on the Uses of the Definitive Article in the Greek Text of the New Testament: containing many new Proofs of the Divinity of Christ, from Passages which are wrongly translated in the common English Version. By Granville Sharp. Second edition. Durham and London, 1803, 12mo.
- 8. Six Letters to Granville Sharp, Esq. respecting his Remarks on the Uses of the Definitive Article in the Greek Text of the New Testament. By Christopher Wordsworth [now D.D.]. London, 1802, 8vo.

9. The Doctrine of the Greek Article applied to the Criticism and Illustration of the New Testament. By T. F. MIDDLETON, D.D. [late Bishop of Calcutta.] London, 1808. Second Edition, Cambridge and London, 1828. Third Edition, London, 1833, 8vo.

The value of Bishop Middleton's treatise has been too long and too well known, to require any additional testimony to its merits in this place. The opposers of the doctrine of our Saviour's supreme this place. The opposers of the doctrine of our Saviour's supreme divinity cavilled at, but could not fairly refute, the convincing philological proofs accumulated by Bp. M. The second impression was very carefully edited by the Rev. James Scholeffeld, A.M. Regius Professor of Greek in the University of Cambridge, and the third by the Rev. Hugh James Rose, B.D., who added many valuable remarks and illustrations. An Abstract of the Doctrine of the Greek Article, chiefly derived from Bishop Middleton's treatise, is prefixed to the first volume of Mr. Valpy's edition of the Greek Testament with English notes, printed in 1831.

- 10. Joannis van Voorst Animadversiones de Usu Verborum cum Præpositionibus compositorum. Pars I. Lugduni Batavorum, 1818. Pars II. 1822, 8vo.
- It is an important philological question, whether the prepositions, which the sacred writers of the New Testament have prefixed to the verbs employed by them, are useless (as Prof. Fischer asserted), or are designed to determine, strengthen, or restrain the sense of a word, and whether in consequence they ought to be taken specially into consideration. M. van Voorst establishes this last opinion; and in the second part of his disquisition he has happily illustrated the force and meaning of several words occurring in the New Testament. (Mélanges de Religion, tom. vi. pp. 242, 243. Nismes,
- 11. Christiani Abrahami WAHL Commentatio de Particulæ Es et Præpositionis Es apud N. T. Scriptores Usu et Potestate. Lipsiæ, 1827, 8vo.
- 12. Joh. Aug. Henr. TITTMANNI de Synonymis in Novo Testamento Liber Primus. Adjecta sunt alia ejusdem argumenti, Lipsiæ, 1829.—Ejusdem, Liber secundus. Post mortem auctoris edidit, alia opuscula exegetici argumenti adjecit, Guilielmus Becher, A.M. Lipsiæ, 1832, 8vo.
- 12*, Remarks on the Synonyms of the New Testament by John Henry Tittmann, D.D. Translated by the Rev. Edward Craig, M.A. Edinburgh, 1833-34, 2 vols. small 8vo.

The object of Dr. Tittmann was, to investigate the comparative force of those words in the New Testament, which appear to be synonymous, that is, which range under a common genus, as having one generic idea in common; but each of which have, in additional control of the contr tion, a specific difference of meaning. Of these he has given an extensive list, which will be of great service to future lexicographers of the New Testament; and the present work consists of enlarged observations upon some of these synonyms. They exhibit the result of deep erudition. The work is well translated, and is enriched with some valuable notes by the author of the translation, which forms part of the Edinburgh Biblical Cabinet.

§ 2. GLOSSARIES AND LEXICONS TO THE GREEK TESTAMENT.

Numerous Lexicons to the Greek Testament have been published at different times, a list of which is given by Schleusner, at the end of the preface to his Lexicon; and the defects of which are considered by J. F. Fischen in his "Prolusiones de vitiis Lexicorum Novi Testamenti, Lipsiæ, 1791," 8vo. The causes why the lexicography of the New Testament, until of late years, has not been studied in proportion to its importance, together with a statement of the requisites of a good Lexicon, are specified by J. Bröchner in his "Idea Lexicographiæ Novi Testamenti. Hauniæ, 1833," 8vo. The following are those most deserving of attention :-

- 1. Glossarium Græcum in Sacros Novi Fæderis Libros, ex MSS. primus edidit, notisque inlustravit Joannes Alberti. Ludg. Bat. 1735, 8vo.
- 2. Glossæ Sacræ Hesychii, Græce. Ex universo illius Opere in Usum Interpretationis Libr. Sacr. excerpsit, emendavit, notisque illustravit Jo. Chr. Gottlieb Ernesti. Accesserunt Glossæ Græcæ in Psalmos, ex Catalogo Manuscriptorum Bibliothecæ tament. By Edward Leigh, Esq. London, 1662, folio, with Supplement.

This work was first published in 1639 and 1646, in 4to. The folio impression of 1662 is the best English edition. The Critica Sacra was translated into Latin and printed at Amsterdam, with additional observations by John Heeser, 1696, in folio. Mr. Leigh was one of the most learned men of his time, and enjoyed the friendship of Arabbisher Learned. was one of the most learned men of his time, and enjoyed the friendship of Archbishop Usher. His work is a very valuable help to the understanding of the original languages of the sacred writings; and as it may frequently be obtained at a low price, it may be substituted for either of the following works, which a student may not perhaps be able to purchase. The Critica Sacra not only gives the literal sense of every word in the Old and New Testaments but original subsets word of fixings with shilled side of the control of the ments, but enriches almost every definition with philological and theological notes, drawn from the publications of the best grammarians and critics then extant. To this work most succeeding lexirians and critics then extant. To this work most succeeding lexicographers on the Old and New Testament have been greatly in-

- 5. Joannis Knollii Vocabularium Biblicum Novi Testamenti, ita secundum seriem capitum atque versuum adornatum, ut in lectione sacrorum Novi Testamenti Græci Librorum usum præbere possit extemporalem. Editio nova, auctior et emendatior, additis subinde præter Analysin Grammaticum Vocumque Themata Locorum difficiliorum explicationibus. Lipsiæ, 1777, 8vo.
- 6. Novum Lexicon Græco-Latinum in Novum Testamentum congessit et variis observationibus philologicis illustravit Johannes Friedericus Schleusnen. Lipsiæ, 1819. 4 parts in 2 vols. 8vo. Glasguæ, 1824. 4to. and also in 2 vols. 8vo.

This is the fourth and best edition of an invaluable work; the first appeared at Leipsic in 1791; the second in 1801; and the third in 1808. An elegant reprint of this Lexicon was executed at the in 1808. An elegant reprint of this Lexicon was executed at the University press, Edinburgh, in 1814, in two vols. 8vo.: the German quotations introduced by Schleusner are in this edition translated into English by the editors, Messrs. Smith, Strauchon, and Dickenson. Another reprint of this Lexicon issued from the Glasgow press in 1817, also in two volumes, 8vo. The fourth Leipsic edition contains many additional words, and new observations, which are interspersed through the work. The Prefitce contains a severe philippic against the two reprints just noticed. The Glasgow editions of 1824 are elegantly printed both in one volume, 4to. and in two vols. 8vo.¹ two vols. 8vo.1

- 7. Lexicon Græco-Latinum in Novum Testamentum. Congessit Joh. Frieder. Schleusner; in compendium redegit Joannes CAREY, LL.D. London, 1826, 8vo.
- "The main principle of this volume is that it contains all Schleus ner's Lexicographical interpretations, together with his Scripture references, and this without abridgment; while nothing is sacrificed but what, in a majority of instances, may be advantageously dispensed with.... Dr. Carey's name is a guarantee for correct impressions." (Eclectic Review, vol. xxvi. N. S. p. 180.) This manual Lexicon is very neatly printed.
- 8. Christiani Schoetgenii Novum Lexicon Græco-Latinum in Novum Testamentum: post J. T. Krebsium recensuit, et variis observationibus, philologicis et criticis, locupletavit G. L. Spohn. Lipsiæ, 1790, 8vo.1

The first edition of Schoetgenius's Lexicon was published at Leipsic, in 1746: Kreb's corrected and enlarged edition appeared also at Leipsic, in 1765, both in 8vo. Previously to the appearance of Schleusner's work, Spohn's third edition was justly considered as the best Greek and Latin Lexicon to the New Testament, for which it was be substituted by these who cannot affert to numbers. which it may be substituted by those who cannot afford to purchase Schleusner's volumes.

9. A Greek and English Manual Lexicon to the New Testament, with Examples of all the irregular and more difficult Inflections. By J. H. Bass. London, 1820; second edition, 1829,

This little volume is confessedly a manual Lexicon for young students of the Greek Testament. Its author has carefully abridged the more diffuse explanations of other Lexicons; but it is noticed here principally because it contains nearly fifty articles commonly omitted in other Lexicons of the New Testament, and which are supplied from the fourth edition of Schleusner above noticed. The second edition is much enlarged, and so materially improved, that it may almost be regarded as a new work. The definitions have

1 Indispensable as the Lexicons of Schleusner and Spohn are to biblical Græcæ in Psalmos, ex Catalogo Manuscriptorum Bibliothecæ Taurinensis denuo editæ. Lipsiæ, 1785, 8vo.

3. Suidæ et Phavorini Glossæ Sacræ Græcè, cum spicilegio
Gloss. SS. Hesychii et Etymologici Magni: congessit, emendavit, et notis illustravit, J. C. G. Ernesti. Lipsiæ, 1786, 8vo.

Schleusner has extracted the most valuable matter from these works, and inserted it in his well-known and excellent Greek Lexicon to the New Testament.

4. Critica Sacra: containing Observations on all the Radices of the Hebrew Words of the Old, and the Greek of the New Testament.

4. Critica Sacra: containing Observations on all the Radices of the Hebrew Words of the Old, and the Greek of the New Testament.

3. Indispensable as the Lexicons of Schleusner and Spohn are to biblical students who may happen to use (as with proper caution, all advanced students who may happen to use (as with proper caution, all advanced students who may happen to use (as with proper caution, all advanced students who may happen to use (as with proper caution, all advanced students who may happen to use (as with proper caution, all advanced students who may happen to use (as with proper caution, all advanced students who may happen to use (as with proper caution, all advanced students who may happen to use (as with proper caution, all advanced students who may happen to use (as with proper caution, all advanced students who may happen to use (as with proper caution, all advanced students who may happen to use (as with proper caution, all advanced students who may happen to use (as with proper caution, all advanced students who may happen to use (as with proper caution, all advanced students who may happen to use (as with proper caution, all advanced students who may happen to use (as with proper caution, all advanced students who may happen to use (as with proper caution, all advanced students who may happen to use (as with proper caution, all advanced students who may happen to use (as with proper caution, all advanced students who may happen to use (as are used in peculiar acceptations; and examples are quoted of unusual combinations of language. While every thing has been retained which adapted this Lexicon to the wants of the mere learner, the author has aimed to accommodate it also (as far as its limits would permit) to the use of those whose perusal of the sacred volume is more critical and discriminating.

10. A New Greek and English Lexicon to the New Testament; in which the quantity of all the doubtful Vowels is carefully marked, and Genealogical Tables connected with the Sacred History are annexed. By the Rev. Henry LAING, LL.D. London, 1821, 8vo.

"It is a convenient work for all who wish to read the New Testament in the Original, without making any further progress in the language." (British Review, vol. xxii. pp. 409, 410.)

11. Clavis Philologica Novi Testamenti, auctore Christophoro Abrahamo WAHL. Lipsiæ, 1822, 2 tomis, 8vo. Editio secunda, auctior et emendatior. Lipsiæ, 1829, 2 tomis, 8vo.

This truly valuable Greek and Latin Lexicon to the New Testament is expressly designed for those who cannot afford to purchase Schleusner's Lexicon. It is founded on the philological principles first developed by Professor Planck, in his elaborate dissertation 'De Verà Natura alque Indole Orationis Graca Novi Testamenti," De Vera Natura atque Indole Orationis Graca Novi Testamenti," 91. supra. "It was the object of the author to noticed in page 91. bring into a moderate compass the results of the latest and most extended investigations into both the philology and interpretation of the sacred volume; so that they might be made universally accessible, and be adapted to the daily convenience, and habitual use, of every student. The work was intended to embrace simply the results, without the processes, of investigation; with references to authorities sufficient to verify those results, should the student wish to prosecute his inquiries further. That such is the plan best suited to the purpose which the author had in view, there can be little doubt; nor can we hesitate to say that he has successfully accomplished that purpose. The object of a lexicon is not a commentary—not the exhibition of a system of theology: it is designed simply as an instrument in the hands of the student, by which is to aid himself in ascertaining the sense of a writer, and making out practically, if not formally, a commentary for himself. To do this fully he must of course go back to the same sources of informa-tion from which the lexicon itself was drawn. In a work of this kind, moreover, a great deal of the merit must necessarily depend on the power which the writer may possess of condensing his thoughts, and expressing them in terms at once concise and perspicuous. In this respect we think that a high rank must be assigned to Wahl; and that he is far removed both from the diffuseness of Parkhurst, and from that prolixity and unnecessary copiousness for which Schleusner is distinguished." (North American Review for July, 1826, vol. xxiii. pp. 106, 107.) In the first volume of the Andover Biblical Repository (pp. 554—568.) there is an elaborate comparative criticism, by Professor Tholuck, of Halle, on the respective merits of Wahl's Lexicon and of that by Dr. Bretschneider, No. 14. infra.

12. Clavis Novi Testamenti Philologica usibus Scholarum et Juvenum Theologiæ studiosorum accommodata. Auctore Christophoro Abrahamo WAHL. Editio minor. Lipsiæ, 1831, 4to.

This abridgment of Dr. Wahl's second edition of his larger Lexion fills 343 closely printed pages in large 4to. Professor Tholuck, of Halle, states that it "is very well done, although, viewed in the light of a truly Christian theology, it leaves much to be desired. The Spirit of God moves not upon the waters." (Andover Biblical Repository for 1832, vol. ii. p. 208.)

13. Greek and English Lexicon to the New Testament, from the Clavis Philologica of Christ. Abraham WAHL. By Edward ROBINSON, A.M., Assistant Instructor in the Department of Sacred Literature, Theol. Sem. Andover. Andover [Massachusetts], 1825, royal 8vo.

Though modestly announced as a translation from Wahl's Clavis, this beautifully and correctly printed work is, in fact, a new Lexicon to the New Testament, composed with great care and accuracy. The texts cited by Wahl have all been verified and corrected; and not a few of the references to classic authors have been corrected, where Mr. Robinson could have access to the editions consulted by Wahl. Many of the definitions have been framed de novo from the New Testament, rather than from the very general Latin defini-tions either of Wahl or Schleusner; and where any important re-mark or illustration could be derived from Schleusner or from other sources, Mr. R. has carefully introduced it. But, besides the labour of a general revision, he has introduced various improvements, which greatly enhance the value of his Lexicon. tially given the various constructions of verbs and adjectives with their cases: Mr. Robinson has done this in every instance throughout: he has further endeavoured to make each article, as far as was possible, include a reference to every passage of the New Testament where the word is found: the result is, that his Lexicon is, to a very considerable extent, a concordance of the Greek Testament. The last improvement which deserves to be noticed relates to the mode of printing. In the original Clavis of Wahl, the articles are printed in a solid form, without any divisions whatever, and on an inferior paper, which renders the book by no means been amplified; references are made to passages in which words | pleasant to read. Mr. Robinson has caused them to be printed in louble columns, and has broken them into convenient paragraphs. The student who can afford to purchase this Lexicon, in addition to Mr. Parkhurst's valuable work (which contains a greater number, at length, of illustrations from classic authors as well as from modern writers), will possess a rich treasure of sacred philology.

14. Lexicon Manuale Græco-Latinum in Libros Novi Testamenti, auctore Carolo Gottlieb Brietschnetder. Lipsiæ, 1824; Editio secunda, auctior et emendatior, Lipsiæ, 1829, 2 tomis,

This manual Lexicon exhibits a less strict adherence to the philological principles developed by Planck and Wahl, above noticed. The illustrations are drawn more frequently from the Septuagint and the apocryphal books, and also from the apocryphal gospels published by Fabricius, with which he is intimately acquainted; and it is this circumstance which imparts the chief value to Dr. Bretschneider's work.

15. A Greek and English Lexicon to the New Testament: in which the Words and Phrases occurring in those Sacred Books are distinctly explained, and the meanings assigned to each, authorized by References to Passages of Scripture, and frequently illustrated and confirmed by Citations from the Old Testament and from the Greek Writers. To this Work is prefixed a plain and easy Greek Grammar, adapted to the Use of Learners, and those who understand no other Language than English. By John Parkhurst, M.A. A new Edition, comprising the more valuable Parts of the Works of some later Writers. By Hugh James Rose, B.D. London, 1829, royal 8vo.

The first edition of this well-known and admirable Lexicon to the Greek Testament appeared in 1769, the second in 1794, both in quarto; the third in royal octavo, with the learned author's last corrections, and with large additions, in 1798. These have been retained in the numerous impressions which have subsequently appeared. In the course of the thirty years which have elapsed since the publication of Mr. Parkhurst's third and last edition, sacred philology has received great accessions; and, a new edition being required, the proprietors of this work confided it to the Rev. Hugh James Rose, B.D., who has conferred a high obligation on biblical students by the manner in which he has revised and edited the work. The following is the plan adopted by him:—

1. As Mr. Parkhurst was at least a great admirer of the peculiar cosmological opinions of Mr. Hutchinson, and had introduced many etymologies which were in the highest degree fanciful and uncertain, these etymologies, and the philosophical opinions of the Hutchinsonian school, have been omitted.

2. Valuable as Mr. Parkhurst's work confessedly was, it was defective in accurate discrimination between the of the same word. Great inconvenience had also arisen from the paucity of instances given under each head, and the looseness of banished Mr. P.'s Lexicon from the shelves of the critical reader, who had supplied its place by the labours of recent German lexi-cographers, especially those of Schleusner, Bretschneider, and Wahl. Mr. Rose has supplied both these defects, partly from his own researches, but principally from the valuable works of the scholars just named.

3. Various important additions have been made to Mr. Park-hurst's comprehensive Greek Grammar to the New Testament from the general Greek Grammars of the Professors Buttman and

4. For the convenience of those students who are attending to the style of the New Testament, he has distinguished, by a convenient mark, those words which do not occur in the Septuagint version of the Old: and he has added in such cases examples from the apocryphal writings where such instances are found.

Mr. Rose's additions to the present edition are enclosed within square brackets []; and, by enlarging the pages (which exceed the number in the former editions by more than two hundred), by omitting altogether the most fanciful etymologies of Parkhurst, as well see the property of well as by throwing much less important matter into notes, and entirely rewriting many articles, Mr. Rose has added at least one third of new matter to this work; which, in its present greatly improved state, is indispensably necessary to every one who is desirous of acquiring a critical and correct knowledge of the New Testament.

16. A Greek-English Lexicon to the New Testament, translated from the Greek-Latin Lexicon of John Dawson, A.B., and considerably enlarged: to which is prefixed an Outline of Greek Grammar, for the Use of Biblical Students who have not received a Classical Education. By W. C. TAYLOB, A.M. London, 1831, 8vo.

§ 3. LEXICONS TO THE SEPTUAGINT VERSION.

1. Jo. Christiani BIRL Novus Thesaurus Philologicus; sive Lexicon in LXX. et alios Interpretes et Scriptores Apocryphos Veteris Testamenti. Ex Autoris MScto edidit ac præfatus est E. H. Mutzenbecher. Hagæ Comitum, 1779-80, 3 tomis, 8vo.

¹ See the note in p. 92.

Lexici in Interpretes Græcos V. T. maxime Scriptores Apocryphos Spicilegium I. et II. Post Bielium congessit et edidit Jo. Fried. Schleusner. Lipsiæ, 1784–86.

Lexici in Interpretes Græcos V. T. maxime Scriptores Apocryphos Spicilegia. Post Bielium et Schleusnerum congessit et edidit C. G. Bretschneider. Lipsiæ, 1805, 8vo.

2. Novus Thesaurus Philologico-Criticus, sive Lexicon in LXX. et reliquos Interpretes Græcos, ac Scriptores Apocryphos Veteris Testamenti; post Bielium et alios viros doctos congessit et edidit Johannes Friedericus Schleusner. Lipsiæ, 1820, 1821; in 5 parts or vols. 8vo. Glasguæ et Londini, 1822. In three thick volumes, 8vo.

On the basis of Biel's Lexicon and his continuators, Schleusner has produced a Lexicon for the Septuagint Greek version, which, for philological research, is surpassed only by his Lexicon for the

New Testament.

The edition which in 1822 issued from the University Press at Glasgow, reflects great credit on the printers, Messrs. A. and J. M. Duncan, as well as on the publisher (Mr. R. Priestley), at whose expense it was undertaken: it is very beautifully executed. In this edition, many typographical errors, particularly in the Greek and Hebrew quotations, have been corrected; and the references to the chapters and verses, which in the foreign edition are said to be very inaccurate, have been carefully amended. Professor Schleusner's German explanations of particular words uniformly have English translations attached to them; and to the third volume there is appended an index of all the Hebrew words occurring in the work, together with a collation of verses and chapters, as set out respectively in the editions of the Greek Septuagint superintended by Wechel and Bos. The former of these will in a great measure supply the want of a Hebrew Lexicon. This Appendix, which fills nearly three hundred pages, is not to be found in the Leipsic edition.

3. E. G. A. BÜCKEL Novæ Clavis in Græcos Interpretes Veteris Testamenti, Scriptoresque Apocryphos, ita adornatæ ut etiam Lexici in Novi Fæderis Libros usum præbere possit, atque Editionis LXX. Interpretum Hexaplaris, Specimina, 4to. Lipsiæ, 1820

This work was never completed. In the fourth volume of the Commentationes Theologicæ (pp. 195—263.), edited by MM. Velthusen, Kuimöel, and Ruperti, there is a specimen of a Clavis Reliquiarum Versionum Gracarum V. T. by John Frederick Fischer: it contains only the letter A. Both these intended publications are superseded by Schleusner's elaborate Lexicon to the Septuagint just noticed.

4. A Greek and English Lexicon, originally a Scripture Lexicon, and now adapted to the Classics, with a Greek Grammar prefixed. By Greville Ewing. Glasgow and London, 1827, 8vo.

The third edition, greatly improved, of a truly valuable Lexicon; the first edition appeared at Glasgow in 1801, and the second in 1812. "From its size, cheapness, and laudable brevity (in most respects), this book is capable of becoming generally useful." (British Critic and Theological Review, vol. iii. p. 326.) The Grammar is sold separately: besides being a general introduction to the study of the Greek language, it contains many valuable observations on the style of the Septuagint and New Testament.

SECTION IV.

GRAMMARS AND LEXICONS OF THE COGNATE OR KINDRED LANGUAGES.

§ 1. GENERAL TREATIS S AND POLYGLOTT GRAMMARS OF THE COGNATE LANGUAGES.

1. INTRODUCTIO ad Lectionem Linguarum Orientalium:

Hebraicæ. Chaldaicæ. Samaritanæ.

Syriacæ.
Arabicæ.
Persicæ.

Ethiopicæ.
Armenæ.
Coptæ.

Consilium de earum studio fœliciter instituendo, et de Libris quos in hunc finem sibi comparare debent studiosi.......Per Brianum Walton, S.T.D. Londini, 1655, 12mo.

"This little tract," says Dr. Adam Clarke, "is really well written, and must have been very useful at the time it was published. It does not contain grammars of the different languages mentioned in the title, but only the different alphabets, and directions how to read them. At the end of his exposition of the alphabet of each language is a specimen in the proper character, each line of which is included between two others; the first of which is a literal Latin version of the original, and the second, the letters of the original expressed by italies. Short as these examples are, they are of great utility to a learner." (Bibliogr. Dict. vol. ii. p. 11.) As the copy in the Library of H. R. H. the Duke of Sussex is designated as editio secunda, priori emendatior, 1655, it should seem that two editions of this treatise were printed in the same year. (Bibl. Sussex. vol. i. part ii. p. 74.)

2. Briani Waltoni Dissertatio, in quâ de Linguis Orientalibus, Hebraica, Chaldaica, Samaritana, Syriaca, Arabica, Persica, Armena, et Copta: et de Textuum et Versionum, que in Complutensibus, Regiis, Parisiensibus, et Anglicanis Polyglottis Bibliis, habentur, antiquitate, authoritate, et usu, breviter disseritur. Accessit Johannis Wouweri Syntagma de Græca et Latina Bibliorum Interpretatione. Daventriæ, 1658, 12mo.

This dissertation is sometimes, erroneously, confounded with the preceding work, but it "is entirely of a different character." It displays, like all the other productions of the learned author, much sound knowledge and learning." (Bibl. Sussex. vol. i. part ii. p. 74.)

- 3. Joh. Henrici Hottingeri Grammatica quatuor Linguarum, Hebraicæ, Chaldaicæ, Syriacæ, et Arabicæ. Accedit Technologia Linguæ Arabicæ Theologico-historica. Heidelbergæ, 1659, 4to.
- 4. Stephani Morini Oratio Inauguralis de Linguarum Orientalium ad intelligentiam Sacræ Scripturæ utilitate. Lugduni Batavorum, 1686, 8vo.
- 5. Simonis Ockleii Introductio ad Linguas Orientales. Cantabrigiæ, 1706, 12mo.
- 6. Gulielmi Gesenii et J. A. Hoffmanni Rudimenta Orientalia: seu Tabulæ Verborum, Nominum, et Pronominum, Hebr. et Chald. Syr. Samar. Rabbin. Æthiop. cum brevi Institutione Grammatica. Pars I. Dialectos Aramæas cum Hebræa complectens. Lipsiæ, 1825, 4to.

§ 2. POLYGLOTT LEXICONS OF THE KINDRED LANGUAGES.

1. Lexicon Heptaglotton, Hebraicum, Chaldaicum, Syriacum, Samaritanum, Ethiopicum, Arabicum, conjunctim; et Persicum separatim. In quo omnes voces Hebrææ, Chaldææ, Syræ, Samaritanæ, Ethiopicæ, Arabicæ, et Persicæ, tam Manuscriptis, quam impressis libris, cum primis autem in Biblis Polyglottis, adjectis hinc inde Armenis, Turcicis, Indis, Japonicis, &c. ordine Alphabetico, sub singulis Radicibus digestæ, continentur, &c. Cui accessit brevis et harmonica (quantum fieri potuit) Grammaticæ omnium præcedentium Linguarum Delineatio. Authore Edmundo Castello, S.T.D. Regiæ M. à sacris: Linguæ Arabicæ apud Cantabrigienses Professore, &c. Londini, imprimebat Thomas Roycroft, LL. Orientalium Typographus Regius, 1669, 2 vols. folio.

This work, which forms the companion to Bp. Walton's Polyglott Bible noticed in pages 20, 21 of this Appendix, is perhaps the greatest and most perfect undertaking of the kind hitherto performed by human industry and learning. "Dr. Castell expended both his fortune and his life in this immense undertaking. It is true he had help from several learned men. Dr. Murray lent him assistance in the Arabic; Mr. (afterwards Bishop) Beveridge, in the Syriac; and Dr. Wansleb, in the Æthiopic. But the person to whom he was most indebted was the celebrated Dr. Lightfoot, a man who, for the amiableness of his disposition, the purity of his manners, and the extent and depth of his literary knowledge, had, even in that age of profound learning, no superior, and since no equal. So implicitly did Dr. Castell depend on his judgment, that when he began that work, in 1657, he wrote to him for direction and advice, promising either to proceed in or suppress it, as he should determine. Dr. Lightfoot not only helped on this immortal work by his counsels, corrections, &c., but he also contributed money, and procured subscriptions, so that Dr. Castell acknowledged that there was no man in the three kingdoms to whom he owed so much. When Dr. Castell sent him his Lexicon, he acknowledged that it owed a great part of its perfection to his learning and industry, and thought his name should occupy a distinguished place in the title-page. The Persic Lexicon is the fruit of the joint labour of himself and Golius. This part of Dr. Castell's work has been undervalued by such as either did not or could not consult it; but it is an excellent work; and to it even Meninski and Richardson are indebted for a multitude of articles. Its chief fault is want of distinct arrangement; the words are sadly intermixed, and many Persian words are printed with Hebrew types, probably because they had but few Persian characters. Dr. Castell laboured at this work for seventeen years, during which time he maintained in his own house, at his own cost, seven Englishme recommending the work, and earnestly soliciting pecuniary assistance in behalf of its distressed and embarrassed author; which was followed, three years after, by one from the Archbishop of Canterbury, directed to all the clergy, on the same behalf; and, afterwards, by another from twenty-nine English and Irish prelates, earnestly entreating the public not to permit this great man to sink under his labours, and the pecuniary embarrassments, brought on him by a work, which he had undertaken for the honour of God, the promotion of religion and learning, and consequently the good of mankind. Is it not strange, that when the king and the clergy laid this so much to heart, and recommended it so warmly, the author's embarrassments should still continue? The reason seems to have been this—the nation was impoverished, and the exchequer itself emptied, by the late civil wars.

"At the end of the third page of his preface, he makes the following complaint, which no scholar can read without pain of heart:

"Socios quidem habui in hoc opere, sed perexiguo tempore mecum in illo commorantes, nescio an dicam, immensitate laboris plane exterritos. Per plures annos, jam ætate provectus, et una cum patrimonio satis competenti, exhaustis etiam animi viribus, oculis caligantibus, corporis variis in hoc opere confractis, et dislocatis membris, relictus sum solus, sine amanuensi, aut vel correctore ullo.' He died in 1685. Some copies of this Lexicon have in the title, 'Londini, Scott, 1686;' but this proves nothing more than a re-impression of the title; for there never was a second edition of the work." (Clarke's Bibliographical Dictionary, vol. i. pp. 268—270.) For other interesting particulars concerning this distinguished but ill-requited scholar, see Chalmers's Biographical Dictionary, vol. viii. pp. 398—400.)

2. V. Schindleri Lexicon Pentaglotton, Hebraicum, Chaldaicum, Syriacum, Talmudico-Rabbinicum, et Arabicum. Hanoviæ, 1612, folio.

§ 3. SYRIAC GRAMMARS AND LEXICONS.

-  Professor Hoffman has given a Catalogue of all the Syriac Grammars and Lexicons extant, up to the year 1823, both ancient and modern, interspersed with bibliographical and critical remarks. The modern grammarians are fifty-four in number; and the lexicographers, sixteen. (Grammat. Syriac. pp. 36—59.) Those only are here noticed which are most easily procurable, and, in his judgment, most deserving of attention.
- 1. Theophili Philippi Christiani KAISER Commentarius, quo Linguæ Aramaicæ Usus adjudicanda et interpretanda plura Novi Testamenti loca, ea maximè quæ parallela sunt, novis exemplis defenditur. Norimbergæ, 1831, 8vo.
- 2. Caroli Schaaf Opus Aramæum, complectens Grammaticam Chaldaicam et Syriacam, Selecta ex Targumim, cum vérsione Latina, necnon Lexicon Chaldaicum, &c. Lugduni Batavorum, 1686, 12mo.

The Syriac letters are expressed in Hebrew characters, and the work affords more assistance to the Chaldee than to the Syriac student. (Hoffmanni Gram. Syr. p. 52.)

3. Christ. Benedicti MICHAELIS Syriasmus; id est, Grammatica Linguæ Syriacæ, cum fundamentis necessariis, tum paradigmatibus penioribus, tum denique ubere syntaxi, et idiomatibus linguæ, instructa. Halæ Magdeburgicæ, 1741, 4to.

This Grammar, Prof. Hoffman states, was compiled by the elder Michaelis with singular industry and learning from the Syriac Version of the Old and New Testaments; and is better arranged, as well as better furnished with examples, than any other previous grammar of the Syriac language. (Hoffmanni Gram. Syr. p. 53.)

4. J. D. MICHAELIS Grammatica Syriaca. Halæ, 1784, 4to.

This is nearly a reprint of the preceding work, with a few additions and alterations.

5. Joannis Jahn Elementa Aramaïcæ, seu Chaldæo-Syriacæ Linguæ. Latinè reddita, et nonnullis accessionibus aucta, ab Andr. Fr. Oberleitner. Viennæ, 1820, 8vo.

Professor Jahn's Grammar of the Aramean Language was first published, in German, in the year 1793. An imperial edict having enacted that the Latin language should exclusively be used in all schools and academies within the Austrian dominions, Dr. Oberleimer translated Jahn's treatise into Latin, and made various important additions. This grammar is perspicuously written, and very neatly printed.

- 6. A Syriac Grammar, principally adapted to the New Testament in that Language. By Thomas Yeates. London, 1821, 8vo.
- 7. An Introduction to the Syriac Language; in which the Genius of the Language is explained by a new and simple Principle of Analysis. By the Rev. Frederick Nolan, LL.D. London, 1821, 12mo.
- 8. Andreæ Theophili Hoffmanni Grammaticæ Syriacæ Libri III. cum tribus Tabulis varia Scripturæ Aramaicæ genera exhibentibus. 4to. Halæ, 1827.

Vol. II.—App. 4

This is the most copious as well as the most elaborate treatise on Syriac Grammar which is extant. Prof. Hoffmann has availed himself of every previous accessible help. The prolegomena contain a history of the Syrians, as well as of their language, together with a review of the labours of his predecessors in this department of sacred literature, and the history and mode of writing which has obtained at different times. The first of the three books into which this Grammar is divided treats on the elements or characters of the Syriac language; in the second are discussed the different parts of speech; and the third is appropriated to the syntax, which is illustrated with a great number of examples. The notes, which are very numerous, refer to the best authorities ancient and modern, on every topic of Syriac Grammar; and the work concludes with a copious Index.

 Martini Trostti Lexicon Syriacum ex inductione omnium exemplorum N.T. Syriaci adornatum; adjecta singulorum vocabulorum significatione Latina et Germanica cum Indice triplici. Cothenis Anhaltinorum, 1623, 4to.

Although the pronouns and particles are wanting in this Lexicon (as they are in all the older Lexicons which preceded it), yet Trostius has done much in accurately investigating the genuine meaning of every word. (Hoffmanni Gramm. Syr. p. 57.)

10. Ægidii Guthirii Lexicon Syriacum, continens omnes N. T. Syriaci dictiones et particulas. Hamburgi, 1667, 12mo.

11. Caroli Schaaf Lexicon Syriacum Concordantiale, omnes Novi Testamenti Syriaci voces, et ad harum illustrationem multas alias Syriacas, et linguarum affinium dictiones complectens, cum necessariis indicibus, Syriaco et Latino, ut et catalogo nominum propriorum et Gentilium N. T. Syr. Lugduni Batavorum, 1709, 4to.

This Lexicon fully answers the profession made in the title-page; and the reader of the Syriac New Testament, who may consult it, will rarely be disappointed. (Hoffmanni Gram. Syr. p. 59.) The work was published as a companion to the beautiful edition of the Syriac Testament printed at Leyden in the same year. In his preface, Schaaf makes honourable mention of the previous labours of Trostius, Gutbirius, and especially of the Syriac Lexicon contained in the Heptaglott Lexicon of our learned countryman Edmund Castell.

12. Lexicon Syriacum ab Antonio Zanolini collectum, voces omnes que in N. T. translatione Syriace inveniuntur complecters. Accedit ejusdem auctoris Disputatio de Linguâ Syriaca, Versionibus Syriacis et de Maronitis, quibus precipue nunc Lingua Syriaca in usu est. Patavii, 1742, 4to.

This work was composed by Dr. Zanolini for the use of the students in the seminary at Padua, where he was Professor of Oriental languages. Dr. Z. has not specified what authorities he consulted. Prof. Hoffmann states that he does not appear to have made any use of Schaaf's Lexicon. (Gramm. Syr. p. 59.)

§ 4. ARABIC GRAMMARS AND LEXICONS.

- 1. Philippi Guadagnoli Breves Arabica Lingua Institutiones. Roma, 1642, 4to.
- 2. Thomæ Erpenii Grammatica Arabica. Cum fabulis Lokmani, et excerptis anthologiæ veterum Arabiæ poetarum, Arabice et Latine. Interprete Alberto Schultens. Lugduni Batavorum, 1748, 1767, 4to.

The first edition of Erpenius's Arabic Grammar appeared in 1636, in 4to. Those of 1748 and 1767 are considered the best.

- 3. Thomæ ERPENII Rudimenta Linguæ Arabicæ. Florilegium sententiarum et Clavem dialectorum adjecit Albertus Schultens. Lugduni Batovorum, 1770, 4to. Best edition.
- 4. A Grammar of the Arabic Language, in which the Rules are illustrated by Authorities from the best Writers. By John RICHARDSON. London, 1776, 4to.
- 5. Grammaire Arabe, par Silvestre de Sacv. Paris, 1810, 2 tomes, 8vo. Seconde Edition, corrigée et augmentée. Paris, 1831, 2 tomes, 8vo.
- "An immortal work, which consigns to obscurity, by its superior lustre, all previous works of the same nature: and which has thrown more light upon the forms of words, the idiom, and the syntax of the Shemitish languages, than has been cast before for many centuries. By this work, which contains 462 pages of syntax, Gesenius has been substantially aided in the compilation of his Hebrew Grammar; and a multitude of things pertaining to the grammar and idiom of the Hebrew (though they may be learned by the diligent student without the aid of this work, so as to be useful to him), are seen, without a knowledge of De Sacy's Arabic Syntax, only as through a glass, darkly. De Sacy has placed them in the meridian sun. That a work, which was not designed to have the most remote bearing upon the Hebrew Scriptures, should be thus made to contribute in a signal manner to their illustration, ought surely to be a matter of gratitude to the Great Disposer of events, who
- Castell's Syriac Lexicon was reprinted at Göttin en in 1788, in two parts, forming one volume, small 4to.

tion of purchasers of the first edition.

- 6. Institutiones Grammaticæ Arabicæ, auctore Antonio ARYDA. Vindobonæ, 1813, 4to.
- 7. Institutiones ad Fundamenta Linguæ Arabicæ: accedunt Sententiæ et Narrationes Arabicæ, una cum Glossario Arabico-Latino. Auctore Ern. Frid. Car. ROSENMÜLLERO, Theol. Doct. et in Academia Lipsiensi Prof. ordinario. Lipsiæ, 1818, 4to.
- Of the very numerous grammars of the Arabic language which have been published in the Latin language, this of Professor Rosenmüller is considered the best. The author has made great use of Sacy's Grammaire Arabe; and the Chrestomathy, or selection of passages from Arabic writers, enhances the value of his publication.
- 8. J. A. Vullers Grammaticæ Arabicæ Elementa et Formarum Doctrina, per Tabulas descripta. In usum prælectionum. Bonnæ, 1832, 4to.
- 9. Antonii Giggeii Thesaurus Linguæ Arabicæ; seu Lexicon Arabicum Latinum. Mediolani, 1632, 4 vols. folio.

This is a very valuable work, though greatly inferior in point of correctness to the following Lexicon of Golius.

- 10. Jacobi Golii Lexicon Arabico-Latinum, contextum ex probatioribus orientes Lexicographis. Accedit Index Latinus copiosissimus, qui Lexici Latino-Arabici vicem explere possit. Lugduni Batavorum, 1653, folio.
- "This is an invaluable work, and the best on the subject ever "This is an invaluable work, and the best on the subject ever published. It is in every respect well edited. The arrangement of the words, the definitions given, the paper, types, and typographical execution—are all in the first style of accuracy and elegance." (Bibliog. Dict. vol. iv. p. 7.) A new edition of this Lexicon has been announced, with very important additions and corrections, by Professor Freytag, of Bonn, whose edition is expected to form two large volumes in quarto.
- 11. Jacobi Scheidii Glossarium Arabico-Latinum Manuale. Lugduni Batavorum, 1769, 4to.
- 12. Johannis Jahn Lexicon Arabico-Latinum, Chrestomathiæ Arabicæ accommodatum, et Chrestomathia Arabica. Vindobonæ, 1802, 2 vols, 8vo.

For a full account of Arabic Grammars and Lexicons, the reader is referred to Schnurrer's Bibliotheca Arabica, in which their dates, &c. are particularly specified.

6.5. ECYPTIAN GRAMMARS AND LEXICONS.

- 1. Lexicon Ægyptiaco-Latinum, ex veteribus illius Linguæ monumentis summo studio collectum à Maturino Veyssiere La Croze. Edentibus Christiano Scholtz et Carolo Godofredo Woide. Oxonii e Typographeo Clarendoniano, 1775, 4to.
- 2. Christiani Scholtz Grammatica Ægyptiaca utriusque dia-lecti: quam breviavit, illustravit, edidit Carolus Godofredus Woide. Oxonii e Typographeo Clarendoniano, 1778, 4to.

These publications are not of common occurrence, and have acquired additional value since various fragments of the ancient Coptic and Sahidic versions of the New Testament have been pub-Coptic and Sahidic versions of the New Testament have been published. Previously to the seventeenth century, Egyptian literature was but slightly regarded in Europe, and might possibly have been still disregarded, if the celebrated oriental traveller Bartolomeo De la Valle had not brought to Rome, from Egypt, among other curiosities, some Coptic or Egyptian manuscripts, of which he gave the perusal to Athanasius Kircher, a voluminous but very indifferent writer in regard to solidity and fidelity. Kircher, however, has the merit of being the first who published a book relating to the Egyptian language, under the title Lingua Ægyptiaca Restituta (Romæ, 1643, 410.), which was, in fact, nothing but the manuscript dictionary or vocabulary of De la Valle. Theodore Petræus, who had been in Egypt in the same century, enriched Europe with several valuable manuscripts; and he, well understanding the Egyptian tongue, would have proved a restorer of Egyptian literature, had he met with proper encouragement; but he could nowhere find it, he met with proper encouragement; but he could nowhere find it, not even in London, where he printed the first psalm as a specimen of the Egyptian language. Happily his manuscripts were sold to the elector of Brandenburg, and placed in his library at Berlin. Dr. Wilkins, a German, and La Croze, a Frenchman, distinguished themselves, in the beginning of the eighteenth century, by their cultivation of the Egyptian tongue. The former met with encountries of the contribution of the Egyptian tongue. ragement and preferment in England, and printed at Oxford, in 1716, the Egyptian New Testament in the Coptic or Lower Egyptian dialect. He also printed the Pentateuch, at London, in 1731. But being unacquainted with the Sahidic or Upper Egyptian dia-can overrule the designs of men to the accomplishment of his own purposes." (Stuart's Dissertations on studying the original Languages of the Bible, p. 84.) The second volume of the second edition is enlarged by the addition of nearly fifty pages, on the subject of the Prosody and Versification of the Arabs. This dissertation as announced for sale, apart from the work, for the accommodation of the Arabs. The Alacasta of the first addition. leet, he mistook the Sahidic or Thebaidic manuscripts, in the Bodleian library, for faulty Coptic ones. La Croze, being librarian to the king of Prussia at Berlin, and having free access to the Egyptian manuscripts of Petræus in that library, compiled from these and some other manuscripts a valuable dictionary, which he finished in 1722. He was much assisted in this undertaking by Dr. Jablonski, a learned professor at Frankfort, who collected several materials for him in the Bodleian library, and that of the king of France, at Paris. Dr. Jablonski gave La Croze the first hint that, besides the Coptic dialect, there was another of Upper Egypt, which is now commonly called the Sahidic or Thebaidic dialect. He sent him likewise a transcript of a manuscript of this kind (No. 393. Huntington in the Bodleian library), De Mysteriis Literarum Græcarum, from which La Croze took Collectionem vocum quarundam Sahidicarum, which is annexed to his Dictionary. Jablonski, who on his travels had copied several Egyptian manuscripts, communi-Sanatcarum, which is annexed to his Dictionary. Jacobiski, who on his travels had copied several Egyptian manuscripts, communicated them to his brother-in-law, Mr. Scholtz, chaplain in ordinary to the king of Prussia; who being furnished with the manuscripts at Berlin, and the Dictionary of La Croze, wrote, in 1750, an Egyptian Granmar of both dialects, in two vols. 410. Several learned men wished that both the Dictionary and the Grammar might be published, but they could not find a printer furnished with Egyptian types, or who would hazard the undertaking; till, at last, the university of Oxford, on a noble principle of public spirit, determined to take the business in hand. When the Dictionary was printing, Dr. Woide was desired to make some additions to it; but this not being proposed to him till more than half the work was printed off, he could extend his remarks to three letters only; and, to render the undertaking more useful, he added an index.

It was intended to print the Grammar of Mr. Scholtz, in two 4to. vols. immediately after the Dictionary, but it being found too voluminous, Dr. Woide very properly abridged it; and the work, so far from losing by its abridgment, has gained very considerably; for Dr. W. has carefully examined, corrected, and improved the Grammar by means of manuscripts unknown to Mr. Scholtz, of which he gives an account in the preface prefixed to the Grammar. The Sahidic part, which is now to be found in this Grammar, was entirely supplied by Dr. Woide.

Two given metabods.

Two circumstances must particularly recommend this Grammar: first, that the rules laid down are illustrated and supported by examples, quoted from the above-mentioned manuscripts; secondly, that it exhibits both dialects, to one of which we have hitherto been entire strangers. (Monthly Review (O. S.), vol. lx. p. 1. Nichols's Anecdotes of Bowyer, vol. ix. pp. 9—11.)

3. Pauli Ernesti Jablonskii Collectio et Explicatio Vocum Ægyptiacarum, quarum mentio apud Scriptores Veteres occurrit. Apud Jablonskii Opuscula, Tom. I. Lugduni Batavorum, 1804, 8vo.

Jablonski was one of the most eminent scholars in Egyptian literature, in the eighteenth century. Besides various disquisitions which are collected in his Opuscula (of which an account will be found in a subsequent part of this Appendix), he laboured for many years at an Egyptian Glossary, in which he collected in alphabetical order, and explained, by the aid of the Coptic Dialect, all the Egyptian words dispersed in the writings of Greek and Latin authors, and also in the Hebrew text of the Old Testament. (The latter are about fifty in number.) On his death, corrected copies of many of his dissertations and some of his MSS, were sent to the celebrated critic Ruhnkenius, at Leyden; where, after various impediments, they were at length published by Prof. Te Water, in four volumes, 8vo. between the years 1804 and 1813.

This Egyptian Glossary, which forms the entire first volume of Jablonski's Opuscula, is pronounced by M. Quatremère (the most competent judge in Europe of such subjects) to be the completest work in this department of literature, and to evince the most profound erudition; though, in some instances, he seems to have been Jablonski was one of the most eminent scholars in Egyptian lite-found erudition; though, in some instances, he seems to have been rather too desirous of displaying his Coptic learning, and has hazarded many improbable etymologies. Important as this Glossary is in itself, its value is greatly enhanced by the editorial labours of Prof. Te Water; who, in addition to a preface containing many interesting details respecting Jablonski's life and writings, and especially concerning the Glossary, has contributed numerous very learned notes, together with a supplement containing such Egyptian words as had escaped the researches of Jablonski. (Quapp. 87, 88.)

Mr. Tattam has also announced a new edition of the Egyptian

Lexicon by La Croze, Scholtz, and Woide above noticed, which had become extremely rare; incorporating the results of all the most recent discoveries in Egyptian Literature.

- 4. Fr. A. Guil. Spohn de Lingua et Literis Veterum Ægyptiorum. Accedunt Grammatica atque Glossarium Ægyptiacum. Edidit et absolvit G. Seyffarth. Lipsiæ, 1825, 4to.
- 5. A compendious Grammar of the Egyptian Language, as contained in the Coptic and Sahidic Dialects; with Observations on the Bashmuric: together with Alphabets and Numerals in the Hieroglyphic and Enchorial Characters; and a few explanatory Observations. By the Rev. Henry TATTAM, M.A. an Appendix consisting of the Rudiments of a Dictionary of the ancient Egyptian Language, in the Enchorial Character. By Thomas Young, M.D. London, 1830, 8vo.

& 6. ETHIOPIC GRAMMAR AND LEXICONS.

- 1. Jobi Luddenii Grammatica Linguæ Amharicæ (vel Æthiopicæ), quæ vernacula est Hebessinorum. Francofurti ad Mænum, 1698, folio; 1702, folio. Best edition.
- 2. Jobi Lubolphy Lexicon Amharico-Latinum. Francofurti ad Manum, 1698, folio.

This is commonly bound up with the first edition of Ludolph's Amharic Grammar.

3. Jobi Ludolphi Lexicon Æthiopico-Latinum. Francofurti ad Mænum, 1698, folio.

§ 7. PERSIAN GRAMMARS AND LEXICONS.

- 1. Ludovici de Dieu Rudimenta Linguæ Persicæ: accedunt duo priora capita Geneseos ex Persica translatione Jacobi Tawusi. Lugduni Batavorum, 1639, 4to.
- 2. Angeli à S. Joseff Gazophylacium Linguæ Persarum. Amstelodami, 1684, folio.
- 3, A Grammar of the Persian Language. By Sir William JONES. London, 1809, 4to. Seventh edition.

The first edition of this Grammar appeared in 1775, in 4to.: in that of 1809 the orthography is adapted to the mode of spelling adopted by Dr. Wilkuns in his improved edition of Richardson's Persian Dictionary. Sir W. Jones's Grammar forms the fifth volume of the octave edition of his works.

- 4. Francisci de Dombay Grammatica Linguæ Persicæ; accedunt dialogi, historiæ, sententiæ, et narrationes Persicæ. Viennæ, 1804, 4to.
- 5. A Grammar of the Persian Language. By M. Lumsden, LL.D. London, 1811, 2 vols. Small folio.

- 6. Francisci Wilken Institutiones ad Fundamenta Linguæ Persarum, cum Chrestomathia et Auctario ad Chrestomathiam. Lipsiæ, 1805; two parts, forming 1 vol. 8vo.
- 7. A Dictionary, Persian, Arabic, and English; with a Dissertation on the Languages, Literature, and Manners of Eastern Nations. By John Richardson, Esq. F.S.A. A new Edition, with numerous Additions and Improvements, by Charles Wilkins, LL.D. F.R.S. London, 1806—1810, 2 vols. royal 4to.
- The first edition of this great and elaborate work appeared at Oxford and London in 1777, in one large folio volume. Dr. Wilkims has revised it throughout, corrected the orthography of every word, and enlarged it to a great extent, with very numerous additions, which his long residence in India and profound knowledge of the Persian language peculiarly qualified him to make. As the bulk and price of this work rendered it accessible to comparatively few students of Persian, Mr. Hopkins compiled from it an abridgment, entitled a Vocabulary, Persian, Arabic, and English, which was printed at London in 1810, in 8vo.
- 8. Outlines of Persian Grammar, with Extracts. Edinburgh, 1822, 8vo.

These outlines were originally published for the use of students in the University of Edinburgh. The author's "view has evidently been, to simplify, as much as possible, the elements of the language. No extraneous matter has been introduced for a show merely of erudition; when, in reality, it can be of use for nothing, but to distract and impede the learner." (Edinburgh Christian Instructor for May, 1822, p. 329.)

The reader, who is desirous of further information respecting elementary works on Oriental Literature, is referred to Professor Lee's Sylloge Librorum Orientalium, quibus Linguarum Biblicarum Studiosi maximo cum fructu uti queant. (Cantabrigis, 1821, 8vo.) In this manual, Prof. Lee has particularly specified those treatises which are most worthy of the student's attention.

CHAPTER V.

COMMENTATORS, INTERPRETERS, AND PARAPHRASTS ON THE SCRIPTURES.

A COMPLETE History of Commentators would require a volume of no ordinary dimensions. The present list is therefore necessarily restricted to an account of the Principal Commentaries and Critical Works illustrating the Holy Scriptures. reader, who may be desirous of prosecuting this subject more at length, will find much interesting information in the elaborate works of Rosenmüller, Dorscheus, and Simon, noticed below. Father Simon's Histoire Critique du Vieux Testament (pp. 416 -466, 4to. 1680) also contains many valuable strictures on the Expositors of the Old Testament. The merits and demerits of commentators are likewise discussed in Walchius's Bibliotheca Theologica Selecta, vol. iv. pp. 369-931.; in Ernesti's Institutio Interpretis Novi Testamenti, part iii. cap. ix. pp. 278-311.; in Morus's Acroases Academicæ, vol. ii. pp. 204—340.; by Mr. Orme in his Bibliotheca Biblica (Edinburgh, 1824, 8vo.); by Rambach, in his Institutiones Hermeneuticæ, pp. 663-726.; by Professor Keil, in his Elementa Hermeneutices Novi Testamenti (8vo. Leipsic, 1811), p. 159. et seq.; and by Professor Beck, in his Monogrammata Hermeneutices Librorum Novi Fæderis (8vo. Lipsiæ, 1803), part i. p. 168. et seq.

- 1. Jo. Georg. Rosenmülleri Historia Interpretationis Librorum Sacrorum in Ecclesia Christiana; ab Apostolorum ætate ad Literarum Instaurationem. Hildburghusæ et Lipsiæ, 1795–1814, 5 parts, 8vo.
- 2. Joh. Georg. Dorscher Biblia Numerata, seu Index Specialis in Vetus Testamentum ad singula omnium Librorum Capita, et Commata. Francofurti, 1674, 2 vols. folio.

This work contains a list of commentators (four hundred and ninety-one in number), with references to their several books, chapters, and pages, in which they have illustrated any book, chapter, or verse, and even every word, which has been the subject of controversy. The word "Elohim," for instance, has not fewer than sixty references. An edition of the Biblia Enumerata was published at Frankfort, in 1694, with numerous additions, by J. Gramm, son-in-law of the original author. (Biogr. Universelle, tom. xi. p. 598.)

3. Histoire Critique des Principaux Commentateurs du Nouveau Testament, depuis le Commencement du Christianisme jusques à notre Tems. Par le Père Simon. Rotterdam, 1693, SECTION I.

ON THE INTERPRETATION OF SCRIPTURE.

- \S 1. General treatises on the interpretation of scripture.
- SCRIPTURE.

 1. ABICHTII (Jo. Georg.) Ars distinctè Legendi et Interpretandi Scripturam Sacram Veteris Testamenti. Lipsiæ, 1710, 8vo.
- 2. Hermeneutica Biblica Generalis, Usibus Academicis accommodata ab Antonio Arigler. Viennæ, 1813, 8vo.
- A learned epitome of the general principles of interpretation. This author, as well as Jahn, was a Romanist professor, at Vienna; and the works of both have been prohibited within the dominions of the emperor of Austria.
- 3. Benner (Joh. Herm.) Sylloge Thesium, Hermeneutice Sacræ inservientium. Francofurti et Giessæ, 1753, 12mo.
- 4. Joh. Benedicti Carpzov Primæ Lineæ Hermeneuticæ et Philologiæ Sacræ cum Veteris, tum Novi Testamenti, brevibus aphorismis comprehensæ. Helmstadii, 1790, 8vo.
- 5. CHLADENII (Martini) Institutiones Exegetica. Witteberga, 1725, 8vo.
- 6. DANHAUERI (Joh. Conradi) Hermeneuticæ Sacra, sive Methodus exponendarum Sacrarum Literarum. Argentorati, 1684, 8vo.
- 7. Sinopsi della Ermeneutica Sacra, o dell' Arte di ben interpretare la Sacra Scrittura, del Professore G. Bernardo Dz Rossi. Parma, 1819, 8vo.
- 8. Ernesti (Jo. Aug.) Institutio Interpretis Novi Testamenti, 8vo. Lipsim, 1761, 1809, 8vo.

The edition of 1809 is generally considered as the best of Ernesti's admirable little manual; but the prefatory remarks and some of the notes of Dr. Ammon must be read with great caution, as they are too frequently destitute of those primary and indispensable characteristics of a good interpreter, sobriety and discretion. Two volumes of Supplementary Remarks, by Professor Morus, entitled "Acroases super Hermeneutica Novi Testamenti," were published at Leipsic between 1795 and 1797, in 8vo.; they relate only to part of Ernesti's volume, and they contain much valuable matter respecting the criticism and interpretation of the New Testament.

An accurate English translation of the whole of Ernesti's Institutio. with valuable corrective notes, by the Rev. C. H. Terrott, M.A., was published at Edinburgh in 1832–33, in two volumes, small 8vo. forming part of the Edinburgh "Biblical Cabinet."

9. Elements of Interpretation, translated from the Latin of J A. Ernesti, accompanied with Notes. By Moses Stuart, Professor of Sacred Literature in the Theological Seminary at Andover. 12mo. Andover (Massachusetts), 1822. London, 1827, 12mo.

A translation of part of the preceding treatise. The work of Ernesti, in passing through the hands of its translator, has undergone some alterations. Some things have been omitted; notes have been added where the subject appeared to require further elucidation; and copious extracts are translated from Morus's Acroases, as well as from Beck's Monogrammata Hermeneutices Novi Testamenti, and Keil's Elementa Hermeneutices Novi Testamenti, noticed below. The London reprint was edited by the Rev. Dr. Henderson, who has increased the utility of this little manual by adding some valuable observations, the result of his own reading.

10. Matthiæ Flacti Illyrici Clavis Scripturæ Sacræ, seu de Sermone Sacrarum Literarum. Jenæ, 1674, folio.

This work was one of the best of the early Protestant treatises on the Interpretation of Scripture. Various editions of it were printed at Basle between the years 1567 and 1629: it was also printed at Leipsic, in 1695, and at Erfurt, in 1719; but Walchius states the Jena edition of 1674 to be the best. The "Clavis" of Flacius consists of two parts. The first is in the form of a Dictionary, in which all the words and forms of expression, occurring in the Bible, are explained. The second contains numerous rules of interpretation, and a series of tracts on the style of Scripture difficulties, and mode of surmounting them, &c.

- 11. Franckii (Aug. Herm.) Prælectiones Hermeneuticæ ad viam dextre indagandi et exponendi Sensum Scripturæ Sacræ.... Adjecta est in fine Brevis et Luculenta Scripturam Sacram cum fructu legendi Institutio. Halæ, 1717, 8vo.
- 12. Franckii (Aug. Herm.) Commentatio de Scopo Librorum Veteris et Novi Testamenti. Halæ, 1724, 8vo.
- 13. Franckii (Aug. Herm.) Christus S. Scripturæ Nucleus. Accedunt tres Meditationes cognati Argumenti. Ex Germanico in Latinum Sermonem vertit Henricus Grischovius. Halæ, 1724,
- 14. Franzii (Wolfgangi) Tractatus Theologicus novus et perspicuus de Interpretatione Sacrarum Literarum. Wittebergæ, 1619, 4to. 1708, 8vo. (best edition.)
- 15. Glassii (Salomonis) Philologia Sacra, his temporibus accommodata. Post primum volumen Dathii in lucem emissum, nunc continuata, et in novi plane operis formam redacta a Georg. Laurent. Bauero. Tomi secundi, sectio posterior.—Hermeneutica Sacra. Lipsiæ, 1797, 8vo.

This volume, as already noticed in page 73 is a corrected edition of that part of Glass's Philologia Sacra which relates to the interpretation of the Scriptures. It is sometimes to be met with as a distinct work, with a separate title-page: and such in effect it is, the alterations and additions being so numerous as to render it a new publication. It is unquestionably of great value, and has furnished the writer of these pages with many important observations and explanations of Scripture; but it is at the same time so strongly characterized by that licentiousness of interpretation which so eminently marks many of the modern divines of Germany, that the student cannot be put too much on his guard with respect to Professor Bauer's volume.

- 16. Enchiridion Hermeneuticæ Generalis Tabularum Veteris et Novi Fæderis. Authore Johanne Jahn. Viennæ, 1812, 8vo.
- 17. Appendix Hermeneuticæ, seu Exercitationes Exegeticæ. Auctore Johanne Jahn. Fasciculi II. Vaticinia de Messià. Viennæ, 1813-15, 8vo.
- 18. Institutiones Hermeneuticæ Scripturæ Sacræ Veteris Testamenti, quas Joannes Nepomucenus Alber, juxta Systema Theologiæ novissime præscriptum concinnatas, tertium edidit. Pestini [Pest, in Hungary], 1827, 3 tomis, 8vo.

The first edition of this work was published in 1807. In consequence of the system of theology which is taught in the University of Vienna having been introduced into that of Pest, Professor Alber re-modelled and revised his work, in order to render it conformable to that system. The first volume contains a summary of Biblical Archæology; the second, an introduction to the several books of the Old Testament; and the third, the principles of interpretation, and an exegetical elucidation of various difficult passages of the Old Testament.

19. Institutiones Hermeneuticæ Scripturæ Sacræ Novi Testamenti, quas Joannes Nep. Alber, juxta Systema Theologiæ novissime præscriptum concinnatas, edidit. Pestini, 1818, 3 tomis, 8vo.

The first volume contains general rules of interpretation, a general introduction to the writings of the New Testament, and an apology for them; the second and third volumes comprise a special introduction to the various books, and an exceptical exposition of the most difficult and important passages.

Throughout both this and the preceding work, Professor Alber evinces himself to be an able and vehement adversary of the modern school of German neologists.

- 20. Thomæ Hunt de Usu Dialectorum, ac præcipuè Arabicæ, in Hebraico Codice interpretando, Oratio. Oxonii, 1748, 4to.
- 21. Monogrammata Hermeneutices Librorum Novi Fæderis. Scripsit Christianus Daniel Beckius. Pars Prima. Hermeneutice N. T. universa. Lipsiæ, 1803, 8vo.

This work was never completed. An English translation of it, so far as it has been published, is given in the first volume of Dr. Hodge's "Biblical Repertory," Princeton (New Jersey), 1825, 8vo.

- 22. Keilii (Car. Aug. Theoph.) Elementa Hermeneutices Novi Testamenti, Latine reddita à Christ. Aug. Godefr. Emmerling. Lipsiæ, 1811, 8vo.
- 23. Hierolexicon, sive Sacrum Dictionarium Variorum Sacrus Scripturus Sensuum, cum Locorum, in quibus hos patiuntur, Annotatione. Opera et studio Francisci Philippi L'Alouette. Lutetius Parisiorum, 1694, 8vo.

A book not of common occurrence. It consists, in fact, of three parts. In the first are delivered rules for interpreting the Bible; the second contains a summary of the contents of the several books of Scripture, in Latin hexameter verses; and the last part of the volume contains an alphabetical index of the various senses of Scripture, with references to passages which, in the author's judgment, admit of those senses. Some of his interpretations are rather fanciful.

24. Langii (Joachimi) Hermeneutica Sacra, exhibens primum Genuinæ Interpretationis Leges de Sensu Litterali et Emphatico investigando; deinde Idiomata Sermonis Mosaïci, Davidici, et Prophetici, necnon Apostolici et Apocalyptici; cum uberiori ipsius Praxeos Exegeticæ appendice. Halæ, 1733, 8vo.

25. Six Sermons on the Study of the Holy Scriptures, their Nature, Interpretation, and some of their most Important Doctrines, preached before the University of Cambridge in the years 1827–8. To which are annexed two Dissertations; the first on the Reasonableness of the Orthodox Views of Christianity as opposed to the Rationalism of Germany; the second on the Interpretation of Prophecy generally, with an Original Exposition of the Book of Revelation, showing that the whole of that remarkable Prophecy has, long ago been fulfilled. By the Rev. Samuel Lee, B.D. [now D.D.], Regius Professor of Hebrew in the University of Cambridge. London, 1830, 8vo.

26. LOESCHER (Val. Ern.) Breviarium Theologiæ Exegeticæ, Legitimam Scripturæ Sacræ Interpretationem tradems. Wittebergæ, 1719, 8vo.

27. Monsperger (Josephi Juliani, in Universitate Vindobonensi P. O.) Institutiones Hermeneuticæ V. T. Prælectionibus Academicis accommodatæ. Lovanii, 1787, 2 vols. 8vo.

28. Institutio Interpretis Veteris Testamenti, auctore Joanne Henrico Pareau, Litterarum Orientalium Professore in Academia Rheno-Trajectina. Trajecti ad Rhenum, 1822, 8vo.

A very valuable compendium of the principles of Sacred Hermeneutics.

29. Disputatio de Mythica Sacri Codicis Interpretatione. Auctore Joanne Henrico Parray. Editio altera, additamento et indicibus aucta. Trajecti ad Rhenum, 1824, 8vo.

This treatise contains a masterly investigation and refutation of the notion advocated by the modern school of German neologists. It was originally a prize essay, published in 1814 in the transactions of the Teylerian Society, with a Dutch translation. In this new edition the learned author has revised and corrected his treatise, and has enlarged it with valuable additions at the end, and with a copious index.

30. PFEIFFERI (Augusti) Hermeneutica Sacra, sive Tractatio luculenta de Interpretatione Sacrarum Literarum. Dresdæ, 1684, 8vo. Lipsiæ, 1690, 4to.; also in the second volume of the collective edition of his philological works.

31. PFEIFFERI (Joach. Ehrenfrid.) Institutiones Hermeneuticæ Sacræ, veterum atque recentiorum et propria quædam præcepta complexa. Erlangæ, 1771, 8vo.

32. De Usu Philonis in Interpretatione Novi Testamenti. Scripsit Gulielmus Scheffer. Marburgi, 1831, 8vo.

33. The Literal Interpretation of Scripture exposed. By T. Pell Platt, Esq. London, 1831, 8vo.

"This pamphlet is little more than an attack on some expositions contained in the excellent volume of Sermons on the Divine Authority and Perpetuity of the Lord's Day, published by the Rev. Daniel Wilson [D.D., now Bishop of Calcutta], and an Encomium on the Modes of Interpretation adopted by certain divines, and a recommendation of the soi-disant Students of Prophecy, as those who have called men back to the literal Interpretation of Scripture."-Congregational Magazine, May, 1831, vol. xiv. p. 314.)

34. Rambachii (Johannis Jacobi) Institutiones Hermeneutice Sacre, variis observationibus copiosissimisque exemplis biblicis illustratæ. Cum præfatione Jo. Francisci Buddei. Jenæ, 1723, 8 vo.

35. SEEMILLERI (Sebastiani) Institutiones ad Interpretationem Sanctæ Scripturæ, seu Hermeneutica Sacra. Augsburgi, 1771, 8vo.

35*. Sacred Hermeneutics, or the Art of Biblical Interpretation: containing Principles and Rules for expounding the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament, translated from the German of George Frederick SEILER, by the Rev. William Wright, LL.D., with the comments of the Dutch Professor Jodocus Heringa, and additional notes by the Translator. London, 1834, 8vo.

36. Semleri (Jo. Sal.) Apparatus ad Liberalem Veteris Testamenti Interpretationem. Halæ Magdeburgicæ, 1773, 8vo.

37. Semleri (Jo. Sal.) Apparatus ad Liberalem Novi Testamenti Interpretationem. Illustrationis exempla multa ex epistola ad Romanos petita sunt. Halæ Magdeburgicæ, 1767, 8vo.

"Liberal, indeed, with a vengeance; if it be deemed liberality to give up all material points to those who impugn the authenticity of the sacred books."—Such is the severe but just censure of Bishop Blomfield (Diss. on the Tradit. Knowl. of a Promised Redeemer, p. 123.) on the first of these works of Semler, which is equally applicable to the second. On the value of this heterodox German critic's labours, see Conybeare's Bampton Lectures for 1825, pp. 277-279.

38. TURRETINI (Joan. Alphonsi) De Sacræ Scripturæ Interestandæ methodo, Tractatus bipartitus. Trajecti Thuriorum, pretandæ methodo, Tractatus bipartitus. Trajecti Thuriorum, 1728, small 8vo. Francofurti ad Viadrum, 1776, 8vo. Also in Vol. II. of the quarto edition of his collective works, with the author's last corrections.

The edition of 1776 is considered the best; it professes to be "restitutus et auctus," by William Abraham Teller, some of whose remarks are certainly valuable; but others convey doctrinal inter-pretations which Turretini (or Turretin as he is most usually termed) held in utter abhorrence. The edition of 1728 is therefore to be preferred, when his collective works cannot be consulted.

39. Hermeneutica Biblica Generalis juxta Formam Studii Theologici in Imperio Austriaco præscriptam, edita à Casparo UNTERKIRCHER. Œniponti, 1831, 8vo.

The basis of this work is Arigler's Hermeneutica Biblica, No. 2. p. 97., supra, with which the editor has made very free, altering some things, omitting others, and adding many more, in order to adapt it to the modern standard of Romish orthodoxy established in the Austrian dominions.

40. An Inquiry into the General Principles of Scripture Interpretation, in Eight Sermons preached before the University of Oxford in the year 1814, as the Lecture founded by the late Rev. John Bampton, M.A. By the Rev. William VANNILDERT, D.D. [now Bishop of Durham]. Oxford, 1815, 8vo.

41. Dissertatio de SS. Scripturarum Interpretatione, secundum Patrum commentarios. Auctore Daniele Whiter. Londini, 1714, 8vo.

42. G. B. WINER Oratio de Emendanda Interpretatione Novi Testamenti. Lipsiæ, 1823, 8vo.

§ 2. TREATISES ON THE INTERPRETATION OF THE FIGURA-TIVE LANGUAGE, AND ON THE SPIRITUAL AND TYPICAL INTERPRETATION OF SCRIPTURE.

1. RAMBACHII (Johannis Jacobi) Commentatio Hermeneutica de Sensûs Mystici Criteriis, ex genuinis principiis deducta, necessariisque cautelis circumscripta. Jenæ, 1728; 1731, 8vo.

2. The Bampton Lectures for the year 1824. Being an Attempt to trace the History, and to ascertain the Limits of the Secondary and Spiritual Interpretation of Scripture. Bp. J. J. CONYBEARE, M.A. Oxford, 1824, 8vo. Price 10s. 6d.

3. A Course of Lectures on the Figurative Language of Holy Scripture, and the Interpretation of it from the Scripture itself. To which are added, four Lectures on the Relation between the Old and New Testaments, as it is set forth in the Epistle to the Hebrews. By the Rev. William Jones, M.A. London, 1786, 8vo. and various subsequent editions.

These valuable and pious lectures were delivered in the learned author's parish church of Nayland, in Suffolk: they are also to be By John Peers, A.M. London, 1828, 8vo.

found in the fourth volume of Mr. Jones's Theological, Philosophical, and Miscellaneous Works.

4. On the Historical Types contained in the Old Testament. Twenty Discourses preached before the University of Cambridge in the year 1826, at the Lecture founded by the Rev. John Hulse. By the Rev. Temple CHEVALLIER, M.A. Cambridge, 1826, 8vo.

The subject chosen is important and interesting, and has been illustrated with ability and judgment. (British Critic, October, 1827, p. 442.)

5. The Nature and Use of a Type. By George LAVINGTON [D.D. and afterwards Bishop of Exeter]. London, 1724, 8vo.

6. A Brief View of the Figures, and Explication of the Metaphors contained in Scripture. By the late Rev. John Brown. Edinburgh, 1803, 12mo. Also in the first volume of the author's collected smaller works.

7. A Key to open the Scripture Metaphors and Types; to which are prefixed Arguments to prove the Divine Authority of the Holy Scriptures. By Benjamin Keach. London, 1779, folio.

This is usually considered as the best edition: the work was first published towards the close of the seventeenth century. he Metaphors and Types are spiritualized almost to absurdity: the work contains good materials, which persons of sober judgment may employ to advantage. The Introduction was translated from Glassius's Treatise de Typis et Metaphoris, in his Philologia Sacra.

8. A Treatise on the Nature and Use of the Tropes of the Holy Scripture. By J. Wood. Bristol, 1831, 12mo.

This little volume is extracted principally from the introduction to the preceding work of Keach.

9. Moyse Devoilé, ou l'Explication des Types et Figures du Vieux Testament. Par Jacob GIRARD. Génève, 1670, 8vo.

10. Moses and Aaron; or, the Types and Shadows of our Saviour in the Old Testament opened and explained. By T. TAYLOR, D.D. London, 1653, 4to.

This book was repeatedly printed in the course of the seventeenth century; a circumstance that marks the estimation in which it was held. It was also translated into Latin, and several times printed It contains many fanciful analogies; a remark which is applicable to the two following works

11. The Figures or Types of the Old Testament, by which Christ and the Heavenly Things of the Gospel were preached and shadowed to the People of God of old; explained and improved in sundry Sermons. By Samuel MATHER. Dublin, 1673, 4to.

11*. The Gospel of the Old Testament: an Explanation of the Types and Figures, by which Christ was exhibited under the Legal Dispensation. Re-written from the work of Samuel Mather. By [Mrs. Caroline Wilson (late Fax)] the Author of the "Listener," &c. London, 1833, 2 vols. 12mo. Re-written from the work of Samuel

12. Grace and Truth; or, the Glory and Fulness of the Redeemer displayed in an Attempt to explain the most Remarkable of the Types, Figures, and Allegories of the Old Testament. By William Mac Ewen. Edinburgh, 1763, 12mo. and various subsequent editions.

13. A Popular Inquiry into the Doctrine of Scripture Types. By John Wilson. Edinburgh, 1823, 8vo.

* 14. De Symbolis ac Typis Scripturæ Sacræ Dissertatio. Auctore S. RUDELBACH. Hauniæ, 1824, 8vo.

The author does not stop to copy his predecessors; he endeavours to give a solid foundation to his discussion. After fixing the general to give a solid foundation to his discussion. After fixing the general nature of a Symbol and Type, and determining the meaning of the figurative diction of the Scriptures, and the relation subsisting in this respect between the Old and New Testament, he proceeds to apply it to the interpretation of the Symbols and Types. He allows those prophetic images only to be real Types, which have been fulfilled in the life, passion, and death of Christ, and in the ulterior state of the Church; and requires that such fulfilment be indicated in express terms in the New Testament. (Revue Encyclopédique, Novembre, 1826, p. 410.)

15. The Character and Offices of Christ illustrated by a Comparison with the Typical Characters of the Old Testament. In a Series of Discourses by John CROMBIE, A.M. London, 1827. 8vo.

16. Typical Instruction considered and illustrated, and shown to be suited to all, but particularly to the early ages of the church.

- § 3. TREATISES ON THE INTERPRETATION OF SCRIPTURE PARABLES, PROVERBS, AND PROMISES.
- 1. G. A. Van Limburg Brouwen de Parabolis Jesu Christi. Lugduni Batavorum, 1825, 8vo.
- 2. Wesselii Scholten Diatribe de Parabolis Jesu Christi. Delphis Batavorum. 1827, 8vo.

The order pursued in each of these treatises is similar, but the mode of discussing the particular topics is somewhat different. Each consists of two parts, in the first of which are considered the nature of a parable, and the different classes into which the parables of Jesus Christ may be divided. The second part discusses the interpretation of parables; and each treatise contains many ingenious remarks peculiar to itself.

- 3. De Parabolis Jesu Christi Indole Poeticâ Commentatio. Auctore A. H. A. Schultze. Gottingæ, 1827, 4to.
- 4. De Parabolarum Naturâ, Interpretatione, Usu. Juvenibus potissimum Theologiæ cultoribus aperuit Augustus Fridericus Unger. Lipsiæ, 1828, 8vo.
- 5. Martini Delrii Adagialia Veteris ac Novi Testamenti. Lugduni, 1614-18, 2 tomes, 4to.
- 6. Joannis Drusii Adagia Hebraica. Apud Crit. Sacr. tom. viii. folio.
- 7. Andreæ Schotti Adagialia Sacra Novi Testamenti Græco-Latina, selecta atque exposita. Antverpiæ, 1629, 4to.
- 8. Joannis Vorstii Diatribe de Adagiis Novi Testamenti. In Crenii Opusculorum Fasciculo III. Roterodami, 18mo. Also in Fischer's second edition of Leusden, de Dialectis Nov. Test. pp. 168—252.
- 9. The Wells of Salvation opened; or, a Treatise discovering the Nature, Preciousness, and Usefulness of Gospel Promises, and Rules for the Application of them. By William Spunstowe. London, 1655, 8vo. Reprinted at London, 1814, 12mo.

§ 4. TREATISES ON THE INTERPRETATION OF SCRIPTURE PROPHECIES.

- 1. The Use and Intent of Prophecy, in the several Ages of the World. To which are added four Dissertations. 1. The Authority of the Second Epistle of Peter; 2. The Sense of the Ancients before Christ, upon the Circumstances and Consequences of the Fall; 3. The Blessing of Judah, Gen. xlix.; 4. Christ's Entry into Jerusalem. By Thomas Sherlock, D.D., Bishop of London. Fourth edition. London, 1744, 8vo.
- 2. Campegii VITRINGÆ Typus Doctrinæ Propheticæ. Franckeræ, 1708, 8vo.
- 3. Aug. Herm. Franckii Introductio ad Lectionem Prophetarum, I. Generalis, II. Specialis ad Lectionem Jonæ, quæ in reliquis exemplo esse possit: Utrâque directà ad comparandam è prophetis agnitionem Jesu Christi. Halæ, 1724, 8vo.
- 4. Christiani Augusti Caustr Hypomnemata ad Theologiam Propheticam. Lipsiæ, 1764-71-78, 3 parts, 8vo.

A work very little known in this country. The first part or volume comprises a general introduction to the study of Prophecy: the other two volumes contain illustrations of the principal predictions in the Old Testament, from the Book of Genesis to the Prophecies of Isaiah, inclusive. A copy of this work is in the library of the University of Cambridge.

- 5. Hermanni Venema Prælectiones de Methodo Propheticâ, seu de Argumento Prophetiarum Veteris et Novi Testamenti ac utriusque periodis. Quibus accedunt Sermones Academici quatuor. Leovardiæ, 1775, 4to.
- 6. The Divine Origin of Prophecy illustrated and defended, in a Course of Eight Sermons, preached before the University of Oxford, at the Lecture founded by the Rev. John Bampton, M.A. By George RICHARDS, [D.D.] Oxford, 1800, 8vo.
- 7. A Key to the Language of Prophecy, with References to Texts of the Old and New Testaments. By the Rev. William Jones, M.A. In Vol. XI. of his Theological, Philosophical, and Miscellaneous Works.
- 8. The Fulfilling of the Scriptures. By Robert Fleming. London, 1726, folio.
- 9. Dissertations on the Prophecies which have been remarkably fulfilled, and at this time are fulfilling in the World. By Thomas Newton, D.D., Bishop of Bristol. London, 1759 or 1766, 3 vols. 8vo. Various subsequent editions in 2 vols. 8vo. and 12mo.; also in one volume, 8vo.
 - 10. History the Interpreter of Prophecy. By the Rev. Henry

- Kett, B.D. Oxford, 1799, 3 vols. 12mo. and various subsequent editions in 2 vols. 8vo.
- 11. A Key to the Prophecies: or, a Concise View of the Predictions contained in the Old and New Testaments. By the Rev. David Simpson, M.A. Macclesfield, 1795; and numerous subsequent editions.
- A valuable compendium of the fulfilment of prophecy, worthy the attention of students who may not be able to procure larger or more expensive works on this subject.
- 12. Lectures on Scripture Prophecy. By William Bengo COLLYER, D.D. London, 1811, 8vo.
- 13. A Manual of Prophecy; or, a Short Comparative View of Prophecies contained in the Holy Scriptures, and the Events by which they were fulfilled. In which are introduced several new Observations on several of them, and particularly on difficult Passages in Isaiah and Daniel. By the Rev. Peter ROBERTS, A.M. London, 1818.
- 14. A Dissertation on the Prophecies that have been fullfilled are now fulfilling, or will hereafter be fulfilled, relative to the great Period of 1260 Years; the Papal and Mohammedan Apostacies; the Reign of Antichrist; and the Restoration of the Jews. By George Stanley FABER, B.D. Fifth edition. London, 1814-18, 3 vols. 8vo.
- 15. The Sacred Calendar of Prophecy. By George Stanley Faber, B.D. London, 1830, 3 vols. 8vo.

This work (the learned author has announced) is designed to supersede entirely the preceding treatise. Mr. Faber has endeavoured to combine together the various prophecies both of the Old and New Testament, which treat of the grand double period of seven times; a period coinciding with those times of the Gentiles, which are styled by Mr. Mede "the Sacred Calendar of Prophecy." In the present more extensive work, the author has rectified various errors in his preceding publications on Prophecy. For an analysis of it, see the British Critic for April, 1833, vol. vii. pp. 328—343.

16. Evidence of the Truth of the Christian Religion, derived from the literal fulfilment of Prophecy; particularly as illustrated by the History of the Jews, and by the Discoveries of recent Travellers. By the Rev. Alexander Keith. Sixth edition, enlarged. Edinburgh, 1832, 12mo. Also a handsome edition, in Svo.

Edinburgh, 1832, 12mo. Also a handsome edition, in 8vo.

The design of this treatise is to give a general and concise sketch of such of the prophecies as have been distinctly foretold and clearly fulfilled, and as may be deemed sufficient to illustrate the truth of Christianity. Very many illustrations are derived from the discoveries of recent voyagers and travellers. The subjects discussed are, Prophecies concerning Jesus Christ and the Christian Religion,—the Destruction of Jerusalem,—the Jews,—the land of Judæa and the circumjacent countries,—and predictions relative to the Macedonian, Tyrian, Egyptian, and Roman Empires, the subversion of the Jewish State, &c.,—long continued spiritual tyranny of the papacy, and the Turkish empire. This beautifully printed volume contains a large mass of valuable information, condensed into a comparatively small compass, and at a moderate price. The multiplied editions, which have been required within a very few years, sufficiently attest the high estimation in which Mr. Keith's work is deservedly held.

17. The Signs of the Times, as denoted by the Fulfilment of Historical Predictions, traced down from the Babylonish Captivity to the present Time. By Alexander Кеттн, D.D. Edinburgh, 1832, 2 vols. 12mo., and various subsequent editions.

burgh, 1832, 2 vols. 12mo., and various subsequent editions.

The portions of prophecy illustrated in this work are, Daniel's Visions of the great Images and of the Four Beasts, interpreted kingdoms, and of the Ram and He-Goat, and his literal prophecy of the things noted in the Scripture of Truth. These are followed by an original exposition of the prophecies contained in the Apocalypse. In many parts of his work, Dr. Keith has with great felicity applied the history of the infidel Gibbon to the fulfilment of prophecy. "Among the expounders of prophecy, we are inclined to assign Mr. [Dr.] Keith a high place. It is perfectly true that in some of his views we are unable to go along with him, and dissent from some of his conclusions. But it is refreshing to meet with a writer, who treats such a subject in a cautious and reverent manmer. There is no presumptuous attempting to penetrate into what is hidden, no rash anticipation of future history, no arrogant assumption of the prophetic character, and no impious denunciation of vengeance on those who acquiesce not in his views, or deny his divine mission. He writes every where in the very best spirit, and if he does not always command our convictions, he uniformly secures our respect." (Edinburgh Christian Instructor, Sept. 1832, p. 638)

18. The Scheme and Completion of Prophecy, wherein its Design and Use, together with its Sense and Application as the grand fundamental Proof of Religion, specially adapted to all Periods of the World, and all Stages of the Church, are considered and explained; together with an Inquiry into the Shekinah and Cherubim in the Holy of Holies, and the Visions of the Prophets. By the Rev. John WHITLEY, D.D. London, 1830, 8vo.

19. Les Caractères du Messie vérifiés en Jesus de Nazareth. [Par M. CLEMENCE.] Rouen, 1776, 2 tomes, 8vo.

"The author determines the characteristical marks of the Messiah with precision and accuracy; points out in consequence of these characters (which are drawn from the clearest predictions the prophecies that, taken in a literal sense, regard the Messiah and, by a comparison of these prophecies with the events, sets the divine mission of Christ in the most striking light. There is a great deal of good crudition and sound judgment in this work" (Monthly Review, O. S. vol. lvi. p. 218.), which is now both scarce and dear

20. Prophéties concernant Jesus Christ et l'Eglise, éparses dans les Livres Saints, avec des Explicationes et Notes. [Par M. le Président Agien.] Paris, 1819, 8vo.

A concise and valuable little manual of Scripture Prophecies relative to Jesus Christ.

Warburtonian Lectures on Prophecy.

* * These Lectures were founded by Dr. William Warburton, Bishop of Gloucester (each course consisting of twelve Sermons, to be preached in Lincoln's Inn chapel), for the purpose of proving "the truth of Revealed Religion in general, and of the Christian in particular, from the completion of the Prophecies of the Old and New Testament, which relate to the Christian Church, and especially to the apostacy of Papal Rome." The following portions of these Lectures are all that have been published.

Besides illustrating the completion of the prophecies, in conformity with the founder's design, most of the lecturers have treated, in a greater or less degree, upon the Symbolical Language of Scripture Prophecy.

An Introduction to the Study of the Prophecies concerning the Christian Church, and in particular concerning the Church of Papal Rome. By Richard Hund, D.D. [afterwards Bishop of Worcester]. London, 1772, 8vo.

This elegantly written and learned volume has long been known and duly appreciated by the public. The subject of Prophecy is and duly appreciated by the public. The subject of Prophecy is here opened in the most masterly and instructive manner by Bishop Hurd; who "discussed, in the first place, the true idea of prophecy, and the general argument deducible from it; then specified some prophecies of primary importance, and more particularly those which relate to the rise of Antichrist. In relation to this subject, he combated the prejudices most generally entertained against the doctrine; he considered and explained the prophetic style; and after opening the style and method of the Apocalypse, and the prophetic characters of Antichrist, he concluded by pointing out distinctly the uses of the whole inquiry." (British Critic, O. S. vol. xxvii. pp. 652, 653.)

2. Twelve Sermons on the Prophecies concerning the Christian Church: and, in particular, concerning the Church of Papal Rome. By Samuel HALIFAX, D.D. [afterwards Bishop of Gloucester]. London, 1776, 8vo.

"Bishop Halifax paid his primary attention to the Prophecies of Daniel, and next to those of Saint Paul concerning the man of sin; and he concluded by establishing the canon and authority of the Apocalypse, and by giving a clear and able view of its visions. His two concluding discourses contain a history of the corruptions of Popery, and a just and luminous vindication of the Reformation." (British Critic, O. S. vol. xxvii. p. 653.)

3. Twelve Discourses on the Prophecies, concerning the first Establishment and subsequent History of Christianity. By Lewis BAGOT, LL.D. [afterwards Bishop of Norwich]. London, 1780, 8vo.

"Bishop Bagot opened his Lectures by preliminary observations on the nature and value of the evidences drawn from prophecies; including some pointed remarks on Lord Monboddo and Mr. Gib-The subjects of his subsequent discourses were, the promise of a second dispensation under the first; the progressive nature of the kingdom of God; the distinctive characters of the Messiah, and the nature of his kingdom; the time limited by the prophets, and the proofs of its fulfilment; the conformity of the life of Christ and of his kingdom to the predictions; the prophecies concerning the latter times; and the general recapitulation of the whole subject." (British Critic, vol. xxvii. p. 653.)

4. Discourses on Prophecy. By East APTHORP, D.D. London, 1786, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Dr. Apthorp began by giving the history of Prophecy. He then carefully laid down the canons of interpretation: after which he proceeded to the prophecies relating to the birth, time, and theological characters of the Messiah. The prophecies of the death of Christ are next distinctly handled, and those which relate to his earthly kingdom. Finally, he traces the characters of Antichrist, gives a view of the mystic Tyre, and concludes by the prophecies which he considers as announcing the Reformation. Though some of this author's applications will to most readers appear harsh, and some questionable, yet his books display altogether much knowledge of the subject, much learning, and no small share of ingenuity." (British Critic, O. S. vol. xxvii. p. 653.)

5. A Connected and Chronological View of the Prophecies relating to the Christian Church. By Robert Nares, A.M., Archdeacon of Stafford. London, 1805, 8vo.

These Lectures are divided into two parts, viz. I. The Prophecies which relate to our Saviour as the Author and perpetual Head of the Christian Church; and, II. Those which foretell the fate of his disciples, whether adverse or prosperous, from the time of his departure from them to that of his last most solemn advent.

6. Twelve Lectures on the subject of the Prophecies relating to the Christian Church. By Edward PEARSON, D.D. London, 1811, 8vo.

The design of Prophecy,—the progress of Christianity as predicted in the Scriptures,—the state of the Christian Church as supposed to be predicted in the apostolic epistles,—the corruptions of the Christian faith as predicted by Daniel, and the various fortunes of the Christian Church, from her first foundation to the end of the world, as foretold in the Apocalypse,—are the subjects discussed in these lectures: a copious analysis of which is given in the British Critic, O. S. vol. xl. pp. 238—248. 467—479.

7. Twelve Lectures on the Prophecies relating to the Christian Church, and especially to the Apostacy of Papal Rome. By Philip Allwood, B.D. London, 1815, 2 vols. 8vo.

The first six of these Lectures discuss the predictions relative to Jesus Christ; and the remaining Lectures are devoted to an exposition of the Apocalypse, particularly with reference to the apostacy of the Romish Church. See an analysis of them in the British Critic, N. S. vol. ix. pp. 44-65.

8. Discourses on Prophecy, in which are considered its Structure, Use, and Inspiration: being the Substance of Twelve Sermons preached by John Davidson, B.D. London, 1824, 8vo.

The first of these Discourses is employed in treating of the Christian Evidences in general, and the connection of Prophecy with the rest; and the second, in considering the contents of the prophetic volume as distinguished from its predictions. The next four discuss the structure of prophecy and the cause of its dispensation: and in the last six, its inspiration and divine prescience are examined. "The subject of the work is one of very general importance, and which will excite an interest with every reader of Scripture. More especially must value attach to every part of the inquiry, from the admirable practical tendency which is every where given to it; so that, while the student is carried forward by the interest of critical research, and his understanding enlightened by the wide and clear views opened to him, his piety will not fail by the warmed, his faith strengthened, and his best affections exalted and improved." (British Critic, N. S. vol. xxii. p. 389.)

Besides the preceding valuable Lectures, the subject of Prophecy is discussed at considerable length in the great Collection of the Boyle Lectures, published in 1739, in three vols. folio.

SECTION II.

JEWISH WRITERS AND COMMENTATORS, AND ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE SCRIPTURES DERIVED FROM JEWISH SOURCES.

& 1. JEWISH WRITERS AND COMMENTATORS.

1. Philonis Judzei, que reperiri potuerunt, omnia. Textum cum MSS. contulit; quamplurima e codd. Vaticano, Mediceo, et Bodleiano, scriptoribus item vetustis, necnon catenis Græcis ineditis, adjecit; interpretationemque emendavit; universa notis et observationibus illustravit Thomas Manger, S.T.P. Canonicus Dunelmensis. Londini, 1742, 2 tomis, folio.

This is a noble edition, equally creditable to the editor, Rev. Dr. Mangey, and to the printer, the celebrated William Bowyer. Dr. M. revised the works of Philo, which he collated with thirteen manuscripts, and corrected the Latin version of them, which had been made by Sigismund Gesenius, Moreli, and others. The different treatises are arranged in a much better order than that which appears in preceding editions, and many obscure and diffi-cult passages are excellently corrected and illustrated.

2. Philonis Judzi Opera omnia, Græcè et Latinè, ad editionem Th. Mangey, collatis aliquot MSS. Edenda curavit Aug. Frider. Pfelffer. 8vo. Vols. I.—V. Erlangæ, 1785-1792.

The text of Dr. Mangey is adopted in this valuable edition, which has never been completed, in consequence of the death of the learned editor, whose critical materials for the sixth and concluding volume are reported to be still preserved. Pfeiffer collated three Bavarian manuscripts, and retained only such of Mangey's notes as contain either some new information, or some emendation of the text; to which he added observations of his own, chiefly settling the various lections.

3. Phylonis Judæi Opera omnia, Græce. Textum ad fidem optimarum editionum edidit Carolus Ernestus Richten. Lipsiæ, 1828-29, 8 tomis, 12mo.

The most complete edition of the works of Philo. In preparing it for the press, the editor followed the text of Dr. Mangey's edition (No. 1.), with which he collated Pfeiffer's edition (No. 2.), and another, printed at Paris in 1640. To the previously published treatises of Philo, M. Richter has added two others, viz. 1. De Festo Cophini, and 2. De Parentibus colendis, which were discovered by Signor Mai in the Medicean Library at Florence, and published for the first time at Milan in 1818, with a Latin version and refer the first time at Milan, in 1818, with a Latin version and notes. The last volume contains copious indexes of matters, and of the texts of Scripture explained by Philo.

3*. Quæstiones Philonæe. I. De Fontibus et Auctoritate Theologiæ Philonis. Quæstionis primæ Particula prima. Π. De Αύρω Philonis. Quæstio altera. Scripsit C. G. L. Grossmann. Lipsiæ, 1829, 4to.

4. Flavii Josephi Opera, quæ reperiri potuerunt, omnia. Ad codices fere omnes, cum impressos tum manuscriptos, diligenter recensuit, nova versione donavit, et notis illustravit Johannes Hudsonus. Oxonii, e Theatro Sheldoniano, 1720, 2 vols. folio.

Those distinguished bibliographers, Fabricius, Harwood, Harles, and Oberthür, are unanimous in their commendations of this elegant and most valuable edition. The learned editor, Dr. Hudson, died the year before its publication, but, fortunately, not till he had acquired almost every thing requisite for a perfect edition of his author. "He seems to have consulted every known manuscript and edition. The correctness of the Greek text, the judgment disand edition. The correctness of the Greek text, the judgment dis-played in the annotations, the utility of the indexes, and the consummate knowledge which is evinced of the history and antiquities of the time, render this work deserving of every thing said in commendation of it. Copies on large paper are very rare and dear, as well as magnificent." Dibdin on the Classics, vol. ii. p. 11.

5. Flavii Josephi, quæ repiriri potuerunt, Opera omnia, Græcè et Latine, ex nova versione, et cum notis Joannis Hudsoni. Accedunt Notæ Edwardi Bernardi, Jacobi Gronovii, Fr. Combefisii, Ezechielis Spanhemii, Adriani Relandi, et aliorum, tam editæ quam ineditæ. Post recensionem Joannis Hudsoni denuo recognita, et notis ac indicibus illustrata, studio et labore Sigeberti Havercampi. Amstelodami, 1726, 2 vols. folio.

This is usually considered the editio optima, because it contains much more than Dr. Hudson's edition. The Greek text is very carelessly printed, especially that of Josephus's seven books on the wars of the Jews with the Romans. Havercamp collated two manuscripts in the library of the university at Leyden; and, besides the annotations mentioned in the title, he added some observations by Vossius and Cocceius, which he found in the margin of the editio princeps, printed at Basil, in 1644, folio. The typographical execution of Havercamp's edition is very beautiful.

6. Flavii Josephi Opera, Græcè et Latinè, excusa ad editionem Lugduno-Batavam Sigeberti Havercampi cum Oxoniensi Joannis Hudsoni collatam. Curavit Franciscus Oberthür. Lipsiæ, 1782–1785. Vols. I.—III. 8vo.

This very valuable edition, which has never been completed, comprises only the Greek text of Josephus. The succeeding volumes were to contain the critical and philological observations of the editor, who has prefixed to the first volume an excellent critical notice of all the preceding editions of Josephus. "The venerable Oberthiir is allowed to have taken more pains in ascertaining the correct text of his author, in collating every known MS., in examining every previous edition, and in availing himself of the labours of his predecessors, than have yet been shown by any editor of Josephus." It is therefore deeply to be regretted that such a valuasephus." It is therefore deeply to be regretted that such a valuable edition as the present should have been discontinued by an editor so fully competent to finish the arduous task which he has begun. (Dibdin on the Classics, vol. ii. p. 13. 3d edition.)

7. Flavii Josephi Judæi Opera omnia [Græce]. Textum edidit Carol. Ernest. RICHTER. Lipsiæ, 1826, 6 tomis, 12mo.

A very neatly printed edition: it forms the first portion, as the works of Philo form the second part, of a Bibliotheca Patrum, which is to be edited by M. Richter.

Several English translations of Josephus have been published by Court, L'Estrange, and others; but the best is that of Mr. Whiston, folio, London, 1737, after Havercamp's edition; to which are prefixed a good map of Palestine, and seven dissertations by the translator, who has also added many valuable notes, correcting and illustrating the Jewish historian. Whiston's translation has been repeatedly printed in various sizes. repeatedly printed in various sizes.

8. Mischna: sive Totius Hebræorum Juris, Rituum, Antiquitatum ac Legum Oralium, Systema: cum clarissimorum Rabbinorum Maimonidis et Bartenoræ Commentariis integris Hebraice et Latine. Notis illustravit Gul. Surenhusius. Amstelodami, 1698, 6 tomis, folio.

"This is a very beautiful and correct work, necessary to the library of every biblical critic and divine. He who has it, need be solicitous for nothing more on this subject." (Dr. A. Clarke's Succession of Sacred Literature, p. 56.)

- 9. Talmud Babylonicum Integrum Hebraice. Berolini et Francofurti, 1715, 12 tomis, folio.
- 10, Talmud Hierosolymitanum. Hebraice. Amstelodami, 1710, folio.

A few only of the Jewish Rabbins have illustrated every individual book of the Old Testament: those only are specified which are held in the highest estimation by the Jews.

- 10*. RABBI SOLOMON JARCHI, Ben Isaac, usually cited as RASCHI from the contraction of his names, was a native of Troyes in Champagne; he wrote commentaries on the entire Bible, as well as the chief part of the Talmud, and from his extensive learning is accounted one of the most eminent Jewish expositors. His style, however, is so exceedingly obscure as to require an ample comment to make it intelligible. He died A.D. 1180. Many of his commentaries have been printed in Hebrew, and some have been translated into Latin by Christians; as that on Esther by Philip Daquin, that on Joel by Genebrard, and those on Obadiah, Jonah, and Zephaniah, by Pontac.
- 11. Rabbi ABRAHAM ABEN EZRA was a native of Spain, and flourished in the twelfth century; his Commentaries on the Scriptures, written in an elegant style, are much esteemed both by Jews and Christians.
- 12. Rabbi DAVID KIMCHI was also a native of Spain, and flourished towards the close of the twelfth century; he wrote Commentaries on the Old Testament, which are highly valued, particularly that on the prophet Isaiah.
- 13. Rabbi Levi Ben Gersном, a Spanish Jew, was contemporary with Kimchi: his Commentaries on the Scripture, especially on the Pentateuch, are much esteemed. He accounted for the miracles from natural causes.
- 14. Rabbi AARON BEN ELIHU was an eminent Jewish teacher, who flourished in the fourteenth century. He left a Commentary on the Pentateuch.
- 15. Rabbi Isaac Abarbenel, or Abravanel (as he is sometimes called), a Portuguese Jew, flourished in the fifteenth century, and wrote Commentaries on the Pentateuch, the whole of the Prophets, and some other books of Scripture: notwithstanding his inveterate enmity against Christianity, his writings are much valued by Christians, and are highly extolled by the Jews.
- 16. Rabbi Solomon Abenmelech, a native of Spain, flourished in the sixteenth century, and wrote Scholia on the whole of the Old Testament, in which he has interspersed the best of Kimchi's Grammatical Observations.

The Commentaries of these Rabbins are inserted in the Biblia Rabbinica, published by Bomberg at Venice, in 4 vols. folio, 1518, and again in 1525 and 1526, and in Buxtorf's edition, printed at Basle, 1618, in 4 vols. folio.

17. Rabbi Moses Ben Haimon, usually called Maimonides, though not a commentator on the whole of the Old Testament, ought not to be omitted, on account of his Moreh Nevochim, or Teacher of the Perplexed, a valuable work, that explains difficult phrases, passages, parables, and allegories. The best edition of this work is that of Basil, 1629, 4to. An English translation of this treatise was published in 1827 by the Rev. Dr. Townley, entitled "The Reasons of the Laws of Moses." Dr. T. has enriched his translation with a life of Maimonides, and with numerous valuable notes and dissertations. The Porta Mosis of Maimonides was edited by Pococke (in Arabic and Latin) at Oxford, 1645, 4to., and his treatises De Jure Pauperis, &c. (Heb. and Lat.) by Prideaux, Oxford, 1679; and De Sacrificiis, 4to. London, 1683.

Several parts of the works of the above-mentioned Rabbins have been printed in a separate form; viz.:-

- 1. AARON the Karaite.-Libri Coronæ Legis, id est, Commentarii Karaitici inediti, ab Aarone ben Elihu seculo decimo quarto conscripti, Particulam ex duobus codicibus manuscriptis, altero Jenensi, altero Lugdunensi, edidit, in Latinum transtulit, atque illustravit J. G. L. Kosegarten. Jenæ, 1823, 4to.
- 2. ABARBENEL.—Commentarius in Pentateuchum, curâ Henrici Van Bashuisen. Hanoveræ, 1710, folio.

¹ In this account of the Jewish Expositors, we have chiefly followed Carpzov, in his Introductio ad Libros Canonicos Veteris Testamenti, p. 35. et seq., and De Rossi's scarce work, entitled Bibliotheca Judiaca Anti-christiana, quâ editi le inediti Judacorum Libri recensetur. Royal 8vo. Parma, 1800. Wolfins has also treated on the Jewish Commentators in his Bibliotheca Hobraca, 40m. it. p. 368. et passim. For an account of the Chaldee Paraphrases, see Part I. Chap. II. Sect. I. pp. 195—203. of the first Volume Pfeiffer. Lipsiæ, 1686, folio.

Ejusdem, Commentarius in Hoseam, Latine, cum notis Fr. ab Husen. Lugd. Bat. 1686.

Ejusdem, Commentarius in Nahum, curâ J. D. Sprecheri. Helmstadii, 1703, 4to.

- 3. ABENMELECH,-Ex Michlal Jophi seu Commentario R. Salom. Abenmelech in Veteris Testamenti Libros, una cum spicilegio R. Jac. Abendanæ, Particula, complectens prophetiam Heb. et Lat. edente Ernest. Christ. Fabricio. Gottingen,
- 4. JARCHI.-R. Sal. Jarchii Commentarius in omnes Veteris Testamenti Libros, versus et illustratus a Jo. Frid. Breithaupto, 3 vols. 4to. Gothæ, 1713.
- 5. Kimchi.—R. D. Kimchii Commentarius in Jesaiam, Latine versus a Cæsare Malamineo, Florentiæ, 1774, 4to.
- 6. MALACHIAS, cum Commentariis Aben Ezræ, Jarchii et Kimchii disputationibus. Curâ Sam. Bohl. Rostochii, 1637, 4to.
- 7. Hoseas, illustratus Chaldaica Versione et philologicis celebrium Rabbinorum Raschi, Aben Ezræ, et Kimchii Commentariis. Helmstadii, 1702, 4to. Reprinted at Gottingen, 1780.
- 8. JOEL et OBADIAH, cum Paraphrasi Chaldaica, Masora, et Commentariis trium Rabbinorum. Heb. et Lat. curâ Jo. Leus-Utrecht, 1657, 4to.
- 9. Johannis Mercert Commentarii in Vates quinque priores, quibus adjuncti sunt R. Sal. Jarchii, Aben Ezræ, et Dav. Kimchii Commentarii, ab ipso Latinitate donati. Editio altera, curâ G. C. Bürklini. Gissæ, 1695.
- 10. J. B. CARPZOVII Collegium Rabbinico-Biblicum in libellum Ruth. Heb. et Lat. Lipsiæ, 1703, 4to.

This work contains the Hebrew text of the book of Ruth, the Targum, the great and little Masora, and four Rabbinical Commentaries, together with Latin versions, and copious notes by the editor, J. B. Carpzov. Calmet states, that this book will be found of great service to those who are learning Hebrew, and will also serve as an introduction to the reading of the rabbinical writers.

§ 2. ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES, DERIVED FROM JEWISH SOURCES.

- 1. Georgii Johannis Henkii Dissertatio de Usu Librorum Apocryphorum Veteris Testamenti in Novo Testamento. Halæ, 1711, 4to.
- 2. Christ. Theophili Kuinörl Observationes ad Novum Testamentum ex Libris Apocryphis Veteris Testamenti. Lipsiæ, 1794, 8vo.
- 3. Joh. Benedicti Carpzovii Exercitationes in S. Pauli Epistolam ad Hebræos ex Philone Alexandrino. Præfixa sunt Philoniana Prolegomena, in quibus de non adeo contemnenda Philonis eruditione Hebraica, de convenientia stili Philonis cum illo D. Pauli in Epistola ad Hebræos, et de aliis nonnullis varii argumenti exponitur. Helmstadii, 1750, 8vo.
- 4. J. B. CARPZOVII Stricture Theologice in Epistolam Pauli ad Romanos. Adspersi subinde sunt Flores Philoniani. Helmstadii, 1758, 8vo.

This is the second and best edition of Carpzov's Observations on St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans; they originally appeared in detached portions, at Helmstadt, in quarto, between the years 1752

5. Christophori Frederici Loesneri Observationes ad Novum Testamentum e Philone Alexandrino. 8vo. Lipsiæ, 1777.

This work was preceded by a quarto tract of Loesner's, entitled Lectionum Philonianarum Specimen, published at Leipsic, in 1758. The force and meaning of words are particularly illustrated, together with points of antiquity and the readings of Philo's text. The light thrown upon the New Testament, by the writings of Philo, is admirably elucidated by Loesner; to complete whose work there should be added Adam Frid. Kuhnii Spicilegium Loesneri Observationum ad N. T. e Philone Alexandrino. Sorau, 1783, 4to.; 2d ed. Pfortze, 1785, 8vo. The second is the best edition.

- 6. Jo. Baptistæ Ottil Spicilegium, sive Excerpta è Flavio Josepho ad Novi Testamenti Illustrationem. Curâ Sigeberti Havercampi. Lug. Bat. 1741, 8vo.
- 7. Jo. Tobiæ Krebsii Observationes in Novum Testamentum e Flavio Josepho. Lipsiæ, 1755, 8vo.

Both these works are necessary to the Biblical Student, as Krebs VOL. II.—APP.

Ejusdem, Commentarius in Prophetas priores, curâ Augusti | has illustrated a great number of passages in the New Testament, from Josephus, which are not noticed in Ott's Spicilegium. In pp. 527—612. of the latter publication, there is a curious collection of sixty-eight articles, omitted by Josephus, of which he could not have been ignorant; and to this is annexed an interesting dissertation of C. Bos, on the genuineness of the celebrated passage con-cerning Jesus Christ.

> 8. Mellificium Hebraicum, sive Observationes ex Hebræorum Antiquiorum monumentis desumptæ, unde plurima cum Veteris, tum Novi Testamenti, loca explicantur vel illustrantur. Autore Christophoro CARTWRIGHTO. In the eighth volume of the Critici Sacri, pp. 1271-1426.

> To our learned countryman Cartwright belongs the honour of being the first who applied the more ancient writings of the Jews to the illustration of the Bible. He was followed in the same path of literature by Drusius, whose Præterita sive Annotationes in Totum Jesu Christi Testamentum (4to. Francquera, 1612) contain many valuable illustrations of the New Testament. Some additions were subsequently made to his work by Balthasar Scheidius, whose Præterita Præteritorum are included in the publication of Meuschen, poticed in No. 11 below. noticed in No. 11. below.

> 9. The Works of the Rev. John Lightfoot, D.D., Master of Catharine Hall, Cambridge. Edited by the Rev. J. R. Pitnam, A.M. London, 1822-25, 13 vols. 8vo.

> The writings of Dr. Lightfoot are an invaluable treasure to the Biblical Student. By his deep researches into the Rabbinical writings, he has done more to illustrate the phraseology of the Holy Scriptures, and to explain the various customs, &c. therein alluded to, particularly in the New Testament, than any other author before or since. Two editions of this learned Divine's works were fore or since. Two editions of this learned Divine's works were published previously to that now under consideration, viz. 1. The English edition of Dr. G. Bright, in two folio volumes, London, 1684; and, 2. A Latin edition, published at Rotterdam, in 2 vols. folio, 1686, entitled Joannis Lightfooti Opera Omnia, and again at Franeker in three folio volumes, which were superintended by the celebrated critic, Leusden. These foreign editions are taken from the English one, the English parts being translated into Latin: the third volume in Leusden's edition is composed chiefly of several pieces, which Lightfoot had left unfinished, but which were too valuable to be altograther omitted. They were communicated by valuable to be altogether omitted. They were communicated by Mr. Strype, who in 1700 published "Some genuine Remains of the late pious and learned John Lightfoot, D.D." in 8vo. In preparing his edition, Mr. Pitman has adopted for his basis the London edition of 1684, and Strype's supplemental volume, incorporating the additional matter in Leusden's edition: and, by indefatigable researches, tional matter in Leusden's edition: and, by indefatigable researches, he has succeeded in recovering some pieces of Lightfoot's which were never before published. New Indexes and other facilities of reference, are given in the concluding volume of this edition. It is but justice to add that they are neatly and correctly printed, and from their reasonable price, demand a place in every biblical library. In order to complete Dr. Lightfoot's Horæ Hebraicæ et Talmudicæ, or Hebraw and Talmudical Exercitations on the New Testament, which proceed no further than the first Epistle to the Corinthians, Christian Schoetgenius published

10. Horæ Hebraicæ et Talmudicæ in Universum Novum Testamentum, quibus Horæ Jo. Lightfooti in libris historicis supplentur, epistolæ et apocalypsis eodem modo illustrantur. Dresdæ, 1733, 2 tomis, 4to.

In this elaborate work, Schoetgenius passes over the same books on which Dr. Lightfoot has treated, as a supplement, without touching the topics already produced in the English work; and then continues the latter to the end of the New Testament. Copies in good condition generally sell at from two to three guineas.

11. Novum Testamentum ex Talmude et Antiquitatibus Hebræorum illustratum, a Johanne Gerhardo Meuschenio. Lipsiæ, 1736, 4to.

In this work are inserted various treatises by Danzius, Rhenford, Scheidius, and others, who have applied themselves to the illustra-tion of the New Testament from the Jewish writings.

SECTION III.

CHRISTIAN COMMENTATORS, INTERPRETERS, AND PARAPHRASTS ON THE SCRIPTURES.

§ 1. COMMENTARIES BY THE FATHERS, AND OTHER DIVINES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH, PREVIOUSLY TO THE REFOR-MATION.

THE following are the principal commentators on the sacred writings, who are to be found among the PRIMITIVE FATHERS OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH: but, in consulting their writings, the best editions only should be referred to, especially those by Protestants; as the editions superintended by divines of the writings are also often ascribed to the fathers, in order to support the anti-scriptural dogmas of that church.1

[i.] Greek Fathers.

ORIGENIS in Scripturas Sacras Commentaria, quecunque Græce reperiri potuerunt. Edidit, partim Latinè vertit, et universa notis et observationibus illustravit Petrus Daniel Huetius. Rothomagi, 1668, 2 tomis, folio.

Rothomagi, 1668, 2 tomis, folio.

Origen flourished in the latter part of the second and through the first half of the third century; and was distinguished not more by his learning than by his piety and eloquence. He wrote Commentaries on the Old and New Testaments, the greater part of which is now lost: the best separate edition of what has been preserved is this of Huet. He also wrote Scholia or short notes explanatory of difficult passages of Scripture, in which he chiefly attended to the literal sense. Of these Scholia some extracts only are preserved in the collection made by Gregory Nazianzen and Basil the Great, entitled Philocalia, and published at Paris, in 1618, 4to. His Homilies, in which he addressed himself to the capacities of the people, as well as his numerous other works, both practical of the people, as well as his numerous other works, both practical and controversial, our limits permit us not to detail; and his critical labours on the sacred writings are noticed in another part of this work. In the Commentaries above mentioned, Origen gave full scope to his learning and imagination, in what appeared to to be the historical, literal, mystical, and moral sense of the Bible.³ Origen's grand fault is that of allegorizing the Scriptures too much; and this method of interpretation he adopted from the Alexandrian philosophers, in the hope of establishing an union between heathen philosophy and Christian doctrine. His fundamental canon of criticism was, that, wherever the literal sense of Scripture was not obvious, or not clearly consistent with his peculiar tenets, the words were to be understood in a spiritual and mystical sense; a rule by which he could easily incorporate any fancies, whether original or which he could easily incorporate any fancies, whether original or borrowed, with the Christian creed. Mosheim has justly charac-terized this father as one of the most eminent of the writers of the third century, who distinguished themselves by their learned and pious productions; and as "a man of vast and uncommon abilities, the greatest luminary of the Christian world that this age exhibited to view. Had the justness of his judgment been equal to the immensity of his genius, the fervour of his piety, his indefatigable patience, his extensive erudition, and his other eminent and superior talents, all encomiums must have fallen short of his merit. Yet, such as he was, his virtues and his labours deserve the admiration of all ages; and his name will be transmitted with honour through the annals of time, as long as learning and genius shall be esteemed among men."—The expository writings of Origen are to be found in the collective editions of his works: the most complete is the édition published by M. de la Rue, in four vols. folio, Paris, 1733–59; reprinted by M. Oberthür at Wurceburg, in 15 vols. 8vo. 1780 and following years.

2. Joannis Chrysostomi Sermones tres in Genesim; -Quatuor Homiliæ in Psalmos;—Expositio perpetua in Novum Jesu Christi Testamentum; folio. In the various editions of his collective works

JOHN CHRYSOSTOM, who flourished in the fourth century, was a pupil of Diodorus of Tarsus, who had himself been a disciple of Origen's. He wrote homilies on the greater part of the Old Testament, and on the whole of the New Testament, with the exception of the Catholic epistles. His homilies on the New Testament are every way preferable to those on the Old. Ernesti is of opinion that none of the productions of the fathers are equal to those of Chrysostom on St. Paul's Epistles; and that all subsequent Greek commentators on them have exclusively followed him. On the historical books, his commentary on St. Matthew is incomparably the best and most copious, and is particularly worthy of being perused. Chrysostom's manner of expounding is this: he first takes a verse of Scripture, which he explains; and then investigates and elucidates the meaning of particular words required. the meaning of particular words, pointing out the scope of the sacred author, whose style and genius he examines, and rendering all Hebraisms by equivalent intelligible Greek expressions. He all Hebraisms by equivalent intelligible Greek expressions. He throughout adheres to the literal sense, which he maintained to be the true one. The homilies are found in the beautiful Editio Princeps of his works published by Sir Henry Saville, in 8 vols. folio, Eton, 1612; and in Montfaucon's edition, which is the best, published at Paris, in 13 vols. folio, 1718–1738. An admirable French translation of a selection from Chrysostom's Homilies, and other works, was printed by Auger, at Paris, 1785, in 4 vols. 8vo. In ¹ See numerous proofs of this remark in James's Treatise of the Corruption of Scripture Councils and Fathers by the prelates, &c. of the church of Rome, for maintenance of popery, pp. 1—271. London, 1688, Svo.

² See Vol. I. Part I. pp. 267, 268.

³ Jahn's Enchiridion Hermeneuticæ Generalis, pp. 163, 164. A further account of Origen's expository labours may be seen in Ernesti's Institutio Interpretis Novi Teatement, pp. 286, 287, and in Morus's Acroases super Hermeneutica Novi Federis, tom. ii. pp. 230—236.; in Rosenmüller's Historia Interpretationis Librorum Sacrorum, tom. iii. pp. 17—156. and Simon's Hist. Crit. du Vieux Test. liv. iii. ch. ix. pp. 439—442.

⁴ Mosheim's Eccl. Hist. vol. i. p. 270. edit. 1806. On the merits of Origen as an interpreter of Holy Writ, see Conybeare's Bampton Lectures for 1824, pp. 131—143.

Romish Church are not only frequently corrupted, but spurious | 1807, Matthiæ published fifty-two of his homilies at Moscow, in 8vo. with various readings, a commentary and index.5

3. Theodorett, Episcopi Cyrensis, Explanationes in Pauli Epistolas omnes. Inter Opera, Parisiis, 1608, 2 tomis, folio. Parisiis, 1642, 4 tomis, folio. Halæ, 1769-74, 5 tomis, 8vo.

THEODORET, Bishop of Cyrus, or Cyropolis, in Syria, wrote in the fifth century: though he chiefly follows Chrysostom in his commentary on St. Paul's Epistles, he has added many new and striking observations of his own, and has successfully vindicated many passages against the Arians and other sectaries of his time. The critical merits of Theodoret as an expositor of Scripture, were investigated by M. Richter in a treatise entitled De Theodoreto Epistolarum Paulinarum Interprete Commentarius Historico-Executives. Lineia, 1899, 800. geticus. Lipsiæ, 1822, 8vo.

4. Nonni Panopolitæ Metaphrasis Evangelii Joannei. Recensuit, Lectionumque varietate instruxit Franciscus Passovius. Accessit Evangelium Joannis. Defuncto Passovio editionem curavit Nicolaus Bachius. Lipsiæ, 1833, 8vo.

Nonnus, of Panopolis in Egypt, lived in the early part of the fleenth century. His paraphrase on St. John's Gospel, which is fifteenth century. His paraphrase on St. John's Gospel, which is written in Greek verse, contains some various readings which have been noticed by Mill, Bengel, Wetstein, Griesbach, and Scholz, in their several critical editions of the Greek Testament. Passow's edition of Nonnus is the best that has ever been published.

[ii.] Latin Fathers.

1. HIERONYMI Quæstiones Hebraicæ in Genesin; - Ejusdem Commentarii in Ecclesiasten; duæ in Canticum Canticorum Homiliæ, ex Græco Origenis; -- Commentarii in Iesaiam; -- Homiliæ novem in Visiones Isaiæ, ex Græco Origenis;--Commentarius in Jeremiam; - Commentarii in Ezechielem Libri XIV.; —Commentarius in Danielem. Homiliæ Origenis XXVIII., Explanationes in Jeremiam et Ezechielem continentes;-Commentarii in XII Prophetas Minores; Commentarii in Matthæum Libri IV.; -- Commentarii in Pauli Epistolas ad Galatas, Ephesios, Titum, et Philemonem, folio. In the different editions of his JEROME, of all the Latin fathers, has rendered the most imporand the Latin lathers, has rendered the most important services to the Christian world, by his elaborate Commentary on the Scriptures, and his prefaces to the different books. His commentary on the Prophets is reckoned the best part of his works; his valuable Latin version of the Scriptures has been noticed in the latter part of the first volume. The principal editions of this eminently learned father's works are those of Paris, 1693—1706, in five vols. folio) and of Verona, 1734—1742, in eleven vols. folio.

2. HILARII Commentarius in Psalmos et in Evangelium Matthæi, folio, in the various editions of his works.

HILARY, Bishop of Poitiers, in the fourth century, wrote Commentaries on the Psalms, and on the Gospel of St. Matthew, which consist more of what he borrowed from Origen than of the results of his own studies: and on this account Morus is of opinion, that little assistance can be derived from consulting them. This author must not be confounded with Hilary, surnamed the Deacon, from the office which he filled in the Church at Rome in the middle of the fourth century: and who wrote a Commentary on St. Paul's Epistles, which is printed in the second volume of the Benedictine edition of Ambrose's works (Paris, 1686-1690, 2 vols. folio), to whom they are erroneously ascribed.

3. Aurelii Augustini Commentarii tam in Vetus quam in Novum Testamentum, ex omnibus ejusdem lucubrationibus collecti. Studio et labore Joannis Gastii. Venetiis, 1543, 2 vols. 4to.

AUGUSTINE, the celebrated Bishop of Hippo in Africa, in the Augustine, the celebrated Bishop of Hippo in Africa, in the fourth century, wrote several Treatises on the Scriptures, and particularly Commentaries on the Psalms, neither of which are now held in much estimation, notwithstanding the high rank he holds in ecclesiastical history. His piety, indefatigable application, sublime genius, unwearied pursuit of truth, and the acuteness of his wit, are universally allowed. "It is however certain," says Mosheim, "that the accuracy and solidity of his judgment were by no means proportionable to the eminent talents now mentioned; and that upon many occasions he was more guided by the violent imthat upon many occasions, he was more guided by the violent impulse of a warm imagination, than by the cool dictates of reason and prudence. Hence that ambiguity which appears in his writings, and which has sometimes rendered the most attentive readers uncertain with respect to his real sentiments; and hence also the just complaints which many have made of the contradictions that are so frequent in his work, and of the levity and precipitation with which he set himself to write upon a variety of subjects, before he had examined them with a sufficient degree of attention and diligence. If Jahn has remarked that the genius of Augustine resembled that of Origen rather than that of Jerome, to both of whom he was greatly

5 Several editions of Chrysostom's Homilies are enumerated by Harles, in his Brevior Notitia Literaturæ Græcæ, pp. 739—741.; to which work, as well as to those of Ernesti and Morus, above referred to, we are chiefly indebted for the following notices of the Conunentaries of the Greek fathers.
6 Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History, vol. i. p. 363.

inferior in learning, being totally ignorant of Hebrew, and but moderately versed in Greek. His Treatises on the Scriptures form the third, and his Commentaries on the Psalms the fourth volume of the Benedictine edition of his works. He accommodates the Scriptures more frequently to his own ideas than he accommodates these to the former, and is perpetually hunting out mysteries, especially in numbers.² Such was the authority in which the writings Augustine were held, that his expositions continued to be fol-wed by all Latin interpreters from his time until the Reformation; who have selected expositions not only from his professedly biblical labours, but also from his other practical and controversia writings. Among the principal compilations of this kind is the Gloss, or short interpretation of Strabo, which is mentioned in the next column, No. 1.

[iii.] Later Divines of the Greek and Latin Churches.

Of the Doctors, or Divines of the Greek and Latin Churches, who flourished between the sixth and fourteenth centuries, the following are reputed to be the most judicious commentators.

Greek Writers.

1. THEOPHYLACTI Archiepiscopi Bulgariæ Enarrationes, sive Commentarii in IV. Evangelia, Græce, Romæ, 1542, folio; Græce et Latine, Parisiis, 1631, folio.—Ejusdem Explicationes in Acta Apostolorum, Græce et Latine, Coloniæ, 1567, folio.— Ejusdem Commentarii in D. Pauli Epistolas, Græce et Latine, Londini, 1636, folio.-Ejusdem Commentarii in Epistolas et in aliquot Prophetas Minores, Latine, Parisiis, 1542, folio.

THEOPHYLACT, metropolitan of Bulgaria, flourished in the 11th century: his Scholia on the principal books of Scripture are chiefly abridged from Chrysostom. Those on the Gospels, Acts, and St. Paul's Epistles, are particularly valuable. Professor Stuart, characterizing the Greek Commentators on the Epistle to the Hebrews, observes that "Theophylact is by far the most agreeable, especially observes that "Theophylact is by far the most agreeable, especially for beginners in the study of Greek Commentary. He comprises all that is valuable in Chrysostom, and, for the most part, nearly in Chrysostom's words; while at the same time he has given to the whole more ease, simplicity, and compactness. Seldom does he venture upon any new opinion of his own; and when he does, it is with great deference to his predecessors." (Commentary on the Hebrews, vol. i. p. 345.) The best edition of his works is that published at Venice, 1754–1763, in 4 vols. folio.

2. ŒCUMENII Commentaria in Acta Apostolorum, in omnes Pauli Epistolas, et in Epistolas Catholicas omnes. Accesserunt Arethæ, Cappadociæ Episcopi, Explanationes in Apocalypsin. Græce et Latine, cura Fred. Morelli. Parisiis, 1631, 2 tomis, ŒCUMENIUS, Bishop of Tricca in Thessaly, towards the close of the tenth century, wrote Commentaries on the Acts of the Apos-tles, and the whole of the Epistles. His work is a judicious com-pilation from Origen, Chrysostom, Eusebius, and others. It is wor-thy of observation, that the controverted clause in St. John's First Epistle (1 John v. 7.) was not known to this writer. The best edi-tion is that of Paris, 1631, in 2 vols. folio.

3. Very similar to the works of Theophylact and Œcumenius above noticed, are the CATENE, or Commentaries on the Scriptures, consisting of several passages or interpretations of the fathers, reduced to the order of chapters and verses of the books; they are denominated Catenæ, because as a chain is composed of several links connected together, so these compilations consist of numerous different passages, or the sentences and expositions of different writers, so connected together as to form one continued

The earliest compiler of a Catena was Procopius of Gaza, whose entire work on the Scriptures has never been printed; though particular portions have been published, as his Catena on the Octateuch, or eight first books, in Latin, Tiguri (Zurich), 1555, folio: on the two books of Kings and Chronicles, Gr. Lat. 4to. Lug. Bat. 1620; a specimen of his Catena on the Heptateuch, or seven first books, and on the Song of Solomon, edited by Ernesti, Leipeic, 1785, 4to.; on Isaiah, edited by Courtier, folio, Paris, 1580. Procopius was followed by Olympiodorus, who is supposed to have flourished in the seventh century; his Catena on the book of Job was published at Venice in 1587, 4to. A Catena on Job, Psalms, Matthew, and John, was printed by Plantin at Antwerp, in Greek and Latin, in seven vols. folio, 1630, and following years. One of the most valuable works of this kind is the Catena of Nicephorus on the Octateuch, the two books of Samuel, and the two books of the most valuable works of this kind is the Calena of Nicephorus on the Octateuch, the two books of Samuel, and the two books of Kings; it is a compilation from fifty-one writers, and was published in Greek, in 2 vols. folio, at Leipsic, 1792. Possin and Corderius published a Catena in Greek and Latin, on the four Evangelists, in 1628, 1630, 1646, and 1647, at Antwerp and Thoulouse, in four large folio volumes; and a Greek Catena of Victor, a presbyter of Antioch, and other fathers, on the Gospel of St. Mark, was edited by Matthæi, at Moscow, 1775, in 2 vols. 8vo.3

4. EUTHYMII Zigabeni Monachi Commentarii in Psalmos. Grace et Latine; apud Theophylacti Operum Tom. IV. Vene tiis, 1763, folio.

Euthymii Zigabeni Commentarius in quatuor Evangelia, Grace et Latine. Textum Gracum nunquam antea editum ad fidem duorum Codicum Membranaccorum Bibliethecarum S. S. Synodi Mosquensis auctoris ætate scriptorum, diligentur recensuit, et repetita Versione Latin'à Joannis Hentenii suisque adjectis animadversionibus edidit Christianus Frider. Matthæi. Lipsiæ, 1792, 3 tomis, 8vo.

EUTHYMIUS ZIGABENUS, a monk of Constantinople, in the early part of the twelfth century, wrote commentaries on different parts of the Bible, the whole of which have not been printed. His principal work is a commentary on the four Cospels, published by Matthæi at Leipsic, in 1792, in 3 vols. 8vo. The hitherto incdited Greek text is diligently revised from two MSS, in the library of the Greek lext is diligently revised from two MSS. in the library of the Holy Synod at Moscow, written in the time of the author. Vol. L. contains the prefaces and Gospel of St. Matthew; Vol. II. the Gospels of St. Mark and St. Luke; Vol. III. the Gospel of St. John, with Hentenius's Latin version of the whole of Euthymius's Commentary, his Critical Remarks, and those of the learned editor. Euthymius's Commentary on the Psalms was published with the works of Theophyllact. works of Theophylact.

Latin Writers.

1. Biblia Sacra cum Glossa Ordinaria a Walafrido STRABO; et Postilla Nicolai Lyrant, necnon additionibus Pauli Burgensis Episcopi, et Matthiæ Doringi replicis. Duaii, 1617, 6 tomis, WOLAFRIDUS STRABO OF STRABUS, who flourished in the ninth century, composed a work on the whole Bible, which was called Glossa Ordinaria or marginalis; because the entire margin, at the top and bottom, as well as on each side of the page, was filled with annotations. His work is, in fact, a catena or collection of comannotations. His work is, in fact, a catena or collection of comments from all the Latin fathers who preceded him, and particularly from Augustine and Rabanus Maurus, whose pupil Strabo was, and who wrote a voluminous catena on the Gospel of St. Matthew, and St. Paul's Epistles, besides an entire comment on the Bible, which is still in manuscript. Strabo endeavours to show the literal, historical, and moral sense of the Scriptures, but not always with success. For many years the labours of Strabo continued to be received as the sole authorized interpretation of the Bible. The best edition of his work is that of Antwerp, 1634,

NICHOLAS DE LYRA Or LYRANUS, so called from the place of his nativity, Lire, a small town in Normandy, is reputed to have been a Jew by descent, but having embraced Christianity, he entered into the religious society of Friars Minors at Verneuil. He flourished towards the beginning of the fourteenth century; and deservedly holds a distinguished rank among commentators, his explanations of the Scriptures being far superior to the manner and spirit tions of the Scriptures being far superior to the manner and spirit the age in which he flourished. His compendious expositions of the Bible were called postills, from his manner of placing them, viz. first exhibiting the sacred text, and post illa (after the words of the text) offering his own explication. They were repeatedly printed in the latter part of the fifteenth and in the early part of the sixteenth century; and (as in the edition above noticed) were sometimes printed in conjunction with the gloss of Strabo. In his sometimes printed in conjunction with the gloss of Strabo. In his postils, Lyra shows a greater acquaintance with the literal sense of Scripture than any preceding commentator, and has availed himself of his intimate knowledge of Hebrew to select the best comments of the most learned Rabbins, particularly Jarchi. Being, however, less intimately acquainted with the Greek than with the Hebrew, he is less happy in his expositions of the New Testament than in those of the Old. His notes are allowed to be very judicious, and he principally attends to the literal sense, with which, however, he occasionally intermineles the subtilities of the school. cious, and he principally attends to the literal sense, with which, however, he occasionally intermingles the subtilties of the schoolmen. "It is no inconsiderable praise that, by the general soundness and justness of his expositions, he attracted the admiration, and contributed probably in some measure to the instruction of Luther and of his great coadjutors in the work of reformation." The best edition of Lyra's commentary is that of Antwerp, 1634, in 6 vols. folio; it is also found in the Biblica Maxima, edited by Father de la Haye, in 19 vols. folio. Lyra was also the author of Moralia, or Moral Commentaries upon the Scriptures.⁵

Jahn, Enchiridion Hermeneuticæ Generalis, p. 167.
 Rambachii Instit. Herm. p. 679.

Morus (tom. ii. p. 253.) has enumerated several catenæ on particular parts of the New Testament. The best account of these compilations is to be found in Ittigus's Tractatus de Catenas Patrum, Leipsic, 1707, 8vo.; and in Noesselt's Observationes de Catenis Patrum Gracorum in Novum Testamentum, Halæ, 1762, 4to. See also Walchii Bibliotheca Theologica, vol. iv. pp. 388—391.
 Much curious information relative to the Biblia Glossata, or Glosses on the Scriptures, is contained in Masch's edition of Le Long's Bibliotheca Sacra, part ii. vol. iii. cap. ii. sect. iii. p. 353. et seq.
 Masch's edition of Le Long's Bibliotheca Sacra, partii. vol. iii. pp. 357—362. Conybeare's Bampton Lectures for 1824, pp. 210—215. Lyra's Commentaries were attacked by Paul, Bishop of Burgos (Paulus Burgensis), a converted Jew, and were defended by Matthias Doring. Ibid. pp. 363, 264. Walchii Bibliotheca Theologica, vol. iv. pp. 396, 397.

2. Thomæ Aquinatis, Doctoris Angelici, Commentaria in | quosdam libros Veteris et Novi Testamenti; scilicet, in Job; Prima Quinquagena Davidis; Canticum Canticorum; Esaiam: Jeremiam, et Lamentationes; in Evangelia secundum Matthæum et Joannem; Catena Aurea in quatuor Evangelia; ex dictis Patrum connexa; Commentaria in omnes D. Pauli Apostoli Epistolas; folio, inter operum Tomos xIII-xvi. Venitiis, 1593-4, besides numerous editions of detached portions in various sizes.

THOMAS AQUINAS, a celebrated scholastic doctor of the thirseenth century, compiled a Catena on the four Gospels, from upwards of eighty Greek and Latin fathers, whose words he chiefly gives, rather than their meaning, and quotes the Greek fathers from Latin versions of their works. His comment long held a distinguished place in the Western Church.

There were however a few, though but few, interpreters of better note, who flourished during the period now under consideration, and who followed a better mode of interpretation. We shall briefly enumerate them.

3. BEDÆ Expositio in Libros Historicos Veteris Testamenti, in librum Tobie, Jobum, Parabolas Salomonis, et Cantica Canticorum: Expositio in Novum Testamentum, Retractationes et Quæstiones in Acta Apostolorum, folio. In his works.

The venerable BEDE, who lived in the eighth century, composed a Catena on nearly the whole of the New Testament, from the writings of the fathers, in which he interspersed but few remarks of his own. Deeply versed in Greek literature, he has the peculiar praise of drawing from original sources.

4. ALCUIN, the countryman and contemporary of Bede, compiled a commentary on some parts of the Scriptures, in which he made selections from Jerome, Chrysostom, Augustine, Bede, and other writers; not always with the best judgment. His biblical labours are contained in the editions of his collected works, printed at Paris in 1617, and at Ratisbon in 1777, in 2 volumes, folio.

§ 2. SCHOLIA ON THE ENTIRE BIBLE, OR THE GREATER PART THEREOF.

- 1. Joannis Marianæ Scholia in Vetus et Novum Testamentum. Paris, 1620, folio.
- 2. HUGONIS GROTII Annotationes ad Vetus et Novum Testamentum.

The Scholia on the Old Testament were first published at Paris, in 1644; and those on the New Testament at the same place, in three volumes, in 1641, 1646, and 1650. They are also to be found in the fourth volume of his Opera Theologica (Basil, 1732, folio), as well as in the Critici Sacri, and in Calovius's Biblia Illustrata. They were republished in 4to, with numerous corrections by Vogel, vol. i. Halæ, 1775; vol. ii. and vol. iii. were published in 1776 by Doederlein, who, in 1779, published an Auctarium, also in 4to, which was separately sold under the title of Scholia in Libros Pocticos Veteris Testamenti. An edition of them was published by Mr. Moody, in two vols. 4to., London, 1727; and his Scholia on the New Testament were reprinted at Erlang in 1755 and following years, in 4to. In 1830 a very neat edition of the Scholia on the New Testament appeared at Groningen, in 8 vols. 8vo., the anonymous editor of which professes that he carefully corrected the numerous errors which had crept into preceding impressions. We have been thus minute in stating the editions of Grotius's Scholia, on account of their intrinsic value. Father Calmet has criticised many parts of them with great severity, particularly his preface to and explanation of the Canticles. "Grotius," says Dr. Doddridge, "has done more to illustrate the Scriptures, by what is generally called profane learning, than perhaps almost all the other commentators put together; nevertheless he too often gives up prophecies which, in their original sense, relate to the Messiah. His notes on some texts are large and learned dissertations, which might have profitably been published by themselves." "His learning." says some texts are large and learned dissertations, which might have profitably been published by themselves." "His learning," says an emiment biblical critic of the present day, "was very extensive; his erudition profound; and his moderation on subjects of controversy highly praiseworthy. No man possessed a more extensive and accurate knowledge of the Greek and Latin writers; and no and accurate knowledge of the Greek and Latin writers; and no man more successfully applied them to the illustration of the sacred writings. He is, perhaps justly, suspected of Socinian sentiments; and is, in general, so intent upon the literal meaning of the Scriptures, as to lose sight of the spiritual." (Dr. A. Clarke). On the New Testament Grotius is particularly valuable for understanding the history and Hebraisms. The character of Grotius, as a commentator, is both fairly and ably estimated by Mr. Conybeare in his Bampton Lectures for 1824, pp. 259–263.

3. DIODATI (John) Annotations on the Bible, translated from the Italian. London, 1664, folio.

¹ The references above, as well as in the following pages, to Drs. Doddridge and Adam Clarke, are to the "Lectures on Preaching" of the former, inserted in the fifth volume of his detached Works, printed at Leeds, 1804, p. 471. et seq., and to the "General Preface" of the latter, prefixed to vol. i. of his Commentary on the Bible, which is noticed in a subsequent page.

Diodati was an eminent Italian divine and reformer in the early part of the 17th century; his annotations are properly Scholia, rather practical than critical, but containing many useful hints; a considerable portion of them was introduced into the "Assembly's Annotations," noticed in p. 109. No. 4.

4. Jo. Christ. Frid. Schulzii et Geo. Laur. BAUERI Scholia in Vetus Testamentum. Norimbergæ, 1783-1797, 10 vols. 8vo.

The three first volumes only of these learned Scholia were ostensibly written by Professor Schulze, who states in his preface, that, in imitation of Rosenmüller's Scholia on the New Testament, he undertook similar short notes on the Old Testament. For this purpose, he has made extracts from the best philological and critical Scholia, chiefly from German works which are not readily accessible or intelligible by foreigners; this is no small advantage; and, independently of it, Schulze has added numerous critical notes of his own, besides the contributions of his learned friends. (Maty's Review, vol. v. pp. 406-412.) On the death of Schulze, Professor Bauer continued the work, and published the remaining seven volumes on the same plan.

5, Ernest. Frid. Car. ROSENMÜLLERI Scholia in Vetus Testamentum. Lipsiæ, 1795-1826, 18 vols. 8vo. 1823-34.

The Scholia of the younger Rosenmüller have long enjoyed a high reputation on the Continent. When he began to publish the first edition of his work, he was a neologian of the lowest class. In the new edition, he has given up many of these offensive tenets. He now admits the Pentateuch to be the composition of Moses, and finds predictions concerning the Messiah almost as often as one could desire; although some few of the psalms he still considers as not referring to the Messiah. But now and then the wary reader will plainly see that, as to any belief in inspiration, he is still as much a rationalist as ever he was. The student will find in most of his works very important treasures, if he knows how to make a right use of them. (Andover Biblical Repository for Jan. 1832, pp. 213—215) The new edition of Rosenmüller's larger

Scholia appeared at Leipzic in the following order:

Parts I. and II. comprising the Pentateuch. Vol. I. Genesis, 1821; Vol. II. Exodus, 1822; Vol. III. Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy.

Part III. Isaiah, 3 vols. 8vo. 1818—1829—1833.
Part IV. The book of Psalms, 3 vols. 1821—1823.
Part V. The book of Job, 1824.
Part VI. Ezekiel, 2 vols. 8vo. 1826.
Part VII. The Minor Prophets; Vol. I. Hosea a

VII. The Minor Prophets; Vol. I. Hosea and Joel, 1827; Vol. II. Amos, Obadiah, and Jonah, 1827; Vol. III. Nahum, Micah, and Habakkuk; Vol. IV. Zephaniah, Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi.
Part VIII. Jeremiah, 2 vols. 1826–27.
Part IX. The Writings of Solomon, Vols. I. and II., 1829.
Part X. Daniel, 1833.
Part XI. The Historical Books. Vol. I. Joshua, 1832.

6. Ern. Frid. Car. Rosenmülleri Scholia in V. T. in Compendium redacta. Vols. I. III. Lipsiæ, 1828—1833, 8vo.

"In a brief preface to the first volume, the author states that he "In a oriet preface to the first volume, the author states that he had frequently been solicited to publish an abridged edition of his copious original work, which amounts to [upwards of] twenty volumes; and several others are yet to be added, in order to complete his design. The price of this is so high, even in Germany, that many who wish for the work are unable to purchase it. Principally with a view to accommodate persons of this class, the authority of the state o thor has undertaken to publish a compendium of his original work.

This labour he performs in the main by proxy. The gentleman, thor has undertaken to publish a compendium of his original work. This labour he performs in the main by proxy. The gentleman, who actually executes the task, is named John Christopher Sigismund Lechner, and is evening preacher at St. Paul's church in Leipzic. The professor speaks of him as 'vir clarissimus, in sacrarum literarum dextre versato.' His commission is, to select from the larger commentary whatever pertains to the explanation of the meaning and forms of words in which there is any difficulty; also, whatever is requisite in order to give a correct understanding of facts and events, ancient rites, the names of persons and places, and other things of a similar nature. In passages of special difficulties facts and events, ancient rites, the names of persons and places, and other things of a similar nature. In passages of special difficulty, some account of the views of other critics is given. Various readings that are important, are also noticed. The commission being executed, the whole is reviewed by Rosenmüller himself; corrections are made of his former opinions where he deems them necessary; now and then new matter is added; and a reference is made to important works on various subjects pertaining to sacred criticisms which have been published investible last edition of the criticism, which have been published since the last edition of the larger Commentary. Such is the plan of the Compendium; a work which, in many respects, will be welcome to all the friends of sacred literature. Mr. Lechner appears to have executed his task with a Jahn affirms that they were not written by Schulze himself, but by Schoeder under his name: and he further adds, that, in general, on difficult passages, an ancient and a modern interpretation is given, and the decision between them is left to the reader's judgment. (Jahn, Enchiridion Hermeneutica Generalis, p. 173.) Whether Schöeder or Schulze wrote the first three volumes, is not material now to know: useful as the work unquestionably is, the reader should be informed that the author has adopted the fashionable hypothesis of many German divines, that Moses was a clever mythologue, who compiled his history from certain mythior traditional narratives! This hypothesis is also adopted by Dathe; and it was embraced by the late Dr. Geddes in his version of the Bible. See it examined, and (we trust satisfactorily) refuted, supra, Vol. II. Part V. Chap. I. Sect. II.

out, so far as I have been able to make the comparison. slight differences, that now and then occur between the abridgment and the original, I presume, are to be attributed to the author himself, and not to the writer of the Compend." (Professor Stuart, in the Andover Biblical Commentary for 1832, vol. ii. p. 211.) (Professor Smart, in The volumes hitherto published contain the following Books of the Old Testament, viz. Vol. I. the Pentateuch; [Vol. II. will contain Isaiah]; Vol. III. the Psalms; Vol. IV. the book of Job; Vol. V. the book of Ezekiel. Besides the abridgment of Resembiller's Scholia, this volume comprises a literal Latin translation of the fortieth, forty-first, and forty-second chapters of Ezekiel's Prophecies (illustrated by three engravings representing the plan of the temple as described by Ezekiel, executed by Julius Frederick Boettcher, who has endeavoured to elucidate that very difficult portion of the prophet's writings.

7. J. G. ROSENMÜLLERI Scholia in Novum Testamentum. Edit. Nova, Norimbergæ, 1801-1808. Editio sexta, 1827 et annis sequentibus. 5 vols. 8vo.

These Scholia on the New Testament are written by the father of the author of the preceding Scholia. His work is characterized by Professor Stuart as "a very neat specimen of the second order of commentary, that is, an explanation of words and phrases. is almost every where a local investigator; and scarcely ever does he take a stand, from which he looks out and surveys the whole field in which he is labouring. His philology, in the main, is safe, and worthy of credit: but he is one of those commentators who are more successful in explaining easy than difficult things. Where you most need aid, you find yourself often deserted..... The stuyou most need aid, you find yourself often descrited.....The stu-dent must not expect to find in Rosenmüller those high and com-manding views, which such a man as Calvin was capable of taking. The development of ratiocination, design, and great object, are not his province. A secondary, but a pleasant, and generally accurate annotator on the philology of particular passages and expressions, he will find in him.... Much of Rosenmüller's commentary is like the production of the poet, whom Horace introduces:—Trecentos in hora versus — stans pede in uno. It might be written, and doubtless was written, off-hand. It is none the worse for this, so far as it respects the beginner in the study of exegesis. But he must not expect to obtain from it the higher and ultimate ends of commentary of the first order; to meet and to solve formidable difficul-ties; to throw strong light on the general cause of thought and reasoning; to compare with other writers, and educe a harmonious sentiment from the whole; to render prominent the great doctrines which are urged.....His book was designed, as it seems to me, for tyros; and, as such, it remains, for philological tyros, still a very valuable book." (Andover Biblical Repository for January, 1833, vol. iii. p. 153.) The sixth edition was revised and edited by John Christopher Sigismund LECHNER.

8. Reeves .- The Holy Bible, containing the Old Testament and the New, translated out of the Original Tongues, and with the former translations diligently compared and revised. London, printed for John REEVES, Esq., one of the Patentees of the office of King's Printer, 9 vols. royal 4to. 9 vols. royal 8vo. 9 or 10 vols, crown 8vo.

Although the beautiful editions of the Bible here noticed do not profess to be commentaries, yet, as they are accompanied by short explanatory and philological Scholia, it would be injustice towards explanatory and philological Scholia, it would be injustice towards Mr. Reeves's splendid and public-spirited efforts to render the Scriptures attractive to the higher classes, were we to pass them in silence. On this account Mr. Reeves's editions may justly claim a place in the present list of Scholia on the Bible. His Scholia are selected from the labours of Bishop Patrick, Lowth, Whitby, and others; and his mode of printing the text is admirable. The historical parts, which are in prose, are printed in continuous paragraphs: and the poetical parts are divided into verses. Each book is divided into sections, conformable to the natural divisions of the several subjects; and, to facilitate reference, the chapters and is divided into sections, conformable to the natural divisions of the several subjects; and, to facilitate reference, the chapters and verses are distinctly pointed out in the margin. There is a learned preface to all the editions. In our analysis of the different books of Scripture, particularly of the Old Testament, we have frequently adopted Mr. Reeves's sectional divisions, which are for the most part very judiciously made. It may be proper to add, that the printing of Mr. Reeves's editions was executed by Messrs. Bulmer & Co., and by Mr. Bensley, and may safely challenge competition with the most beautiful specimens of British typography. There are some copies extant in four volumes, 8vo., without the Scholia.

§ 3. THE PRINCIPAL COMMENTATORS ON THE SCRIPTURES GENERALLY SINCE THE REFORMATION.

[i.] Foreign Commentators on the whole Bible.

1. The illustrious reformer, Martin Luther, wrote Commentaries on most of the books of Scripture. A collection of them was published at Wittenberg, in four volumes, folio, 1549; and an octavo edition of them appeared at Erlang in 1829 and following years. All the writings of this great man are deservedly held in the highest estimation in Germany, especially his great diligence and care. He remains true to his original through- | Commentaries on Genesis and on St. Paul's Epistles to the Romans and Galatians. His Commentary on the Galatians is best known in this country by a translation, which was first printed in 1580, in 4to. and subsequently in folio, 8vo. and in two vols. 12mo. In 1821, was published, in 8vo. a translation of Luther's "Commentary on the Psalms called Psalms of Degrees; in which, among many other valuable Discourses on Individual. Household, and Civil Affairs, the Scriptural Doctrine respecting the divinely instituted and honourable Estate of Matrimony is explained and defended against the Popish Perversion of enforced Celibacy, Monastic Vows, Orders, &c. &c. To which is prefixed, An Historical Account of the Monastic Life, particularly of the Monasteries of England."

- 2. The biblical writings of John Calvin, another illustrious reformer, consists of Commentaries, Homilies, and Lectures on almost the whole of the Scriptures: they are to be found in the folio edition of his works, printed at Amsterdam, in 1671, in nine volumes. His Harmony of the last four Books of the Pentateuch has been much and deservedly admired for its ingenuity. The history contained in them forms a distinct part. The rest is comprised under the following divisions:—1. Those passages which assert the excellence of the LAW, by way of preface;— 2. The Ten Commandments, under each of which are comprehended all those parts of the law which relate to the same subject, and this forms the great body of the harmony ;- 3. The Sum of the Law, containing those passages which enjoin love to God, and love to our neighbour;—4. The Use of the Law; and, lastly, its Sanctions of promises and threats. The Commentaries and other expository writings of this great man have always been deservedly celebrated and admired; though it has been the fashion with some modern divines to depreciate them, on account of those peculiar dogmas which Calvin deduced from the Sacred Writings. "Calvin's Commentaries," says the learned Matthew Poole, in the preface to the "Synopsis Criticorum Sacrorum," noticed below, "abound in solid discussions of theological subjects, and in practical improvements of them. Subsequent writers have borrowed most of their materials from Calvin; and his interpretations adorn the books even of those who repay their obligation by reproaching their master." The great critic Scaliger said that no commentator had better hit the sense of the prophets than Calvin; and another eminent critic of our own time (Rosenmüller) has remarked, that although Calvin was not deeply versed in Hebrew, yet as he possessed an acute and subtle genius, his interpretations of Isaiah in particular contain many things which are exceedingly useful for understanding the prophet's meaning. Nothing, indeed, can more satisfactorily evince the high estimation to which the commentaries of Calvin are still entitled from the biblical student, than the following eulogium of one of the most learned prelates that ever adorned the Anglican church-Bishop Horseev. "I hold," says he, "the memory of Calvin in high veneration; his works have a place in my library; and in the study of the Holy Scriptures, he is one of the Commentators whom I most frequently consult." To this testimony may be added that of another accomplished scholar lately deceased, the Rev. J. J. CONYBEARE. The Commentaries of Calvin, he says, "though in the exercise of our Christian liberty we may freely question and dissent from many points, both of doctrine and discipline, maintained by their illustrious author, are yet never to be perused without admiration or instruction." The writer of these pages has not often had occasion to refer to the writings of Calvin in the prosecution of this work; yet he has never consulted them but with advantage and with pleasure.
- 3. VICTORINUS STRIGELIUS was nearly contemporary with Luther and Calvin, and wrote arguments and notes to the whole of the Bible, which were published at different times between the years 1565 and 1586, and in various sizes.2 They are much admired for their exactness, particularly his Troumpara on the New Testament, which are noticed in a subsequent page.
- 4. LUDOVICI DE DIEU Critica Sacra, sive Animadversiones in Loca quædam difficiliora Veteris et Novi Testamenti. Amstelodami, 1693, folio.

A work of acknowledged character: "Perhaps no man ever possessed a more consummate knowledge of the Oriental languages than de Dieu, nor employed his knowledge to more useful purposes." (Bibliog. Diet. vol. iii. p. 123.)

5. Sebastiani Schmidii Commentarii in Genesin, Josuam, Ruth, Reges, Samuelem, Jobum, Psalmos, Ecclesiasten, Iesaiam, Jeremiam, Hoseam, Evangelium Johannis, et Epistolas Pauli ad Romanos, Galatas, et Hebræos. Argentorati, 1687, et annis sequentibus. 4to.

Sebastian Schmidt was at least the most laborious and voluminous commentator of his age (the seventeenth century). Mosheim's Eccles. Hist. vol. v. p. 296.

6. CRITICI SACRI: sive Annotata doctissimorum Virorum in Vetus ac Novum Testamentum; quibus accedunt Tractatus varii, Theologico-Philologici, 9 tomis in 12 voluminibus. Amstelodami, 1698, folio.

This great work, first published at London in 1660, in 9 vols. folio, under the direction of Bishop Pearson, John Pearson, Anthony Scattergood, and Francis Gouldman, is considerably augmented in the above second and best edition. The notes of Grotius, Vatablus, and Drusius, Munster, Castalio, Clarius, Junius, and Tremellius, are to be found in this collection, besides a multitude of commentators on particular books, and numerous valuable disquisitions on particular subjects, which are enumerated by Dr. A. Clarke in the general preface to his Commentary, vol. i. p. xiii. To complete this great work, there were published at Amsterdam, in 1701, Thesaurus Theologico-Philologicus, in 2 vols. folio, and in 1732, in two folio volumes also, Thesaurus Novus Theologico-Philologicus,—two valuable collections of critical and philological dissertations by the most eminent biblical critics of that day. These are necessary to complete the Critici Sacri; of which great work an admirable abridgment has been published under the title of, 7. Matthæi Poli Synopsis criticorum aliorumque SS. Interpretum. London, 1669—1674, 5 vols. folio. Utrecht, 5 vols. folio, 1684; also Frankfort, 1712, 5 vols. folio, and 1694, 5 vols. large 4to.

On this most elaborate work the learned author spent ten years; it consolidates with great skill and conciseness all the Critici Sacri of the London edition into one continued comment, besides many valuable additions from other authors of note, Hammond, &c. and his own corrections and decisions in several places. It has many advantages over the Critici Sacri, not only in point of size, but also in its admirable arrangement and concentration of evidence, and in the author's remarks; and it furnishes a most complete material index to the Critici Sacri. (Dr. Hales's Analysis of Chronology, vol. ii. preface, p. xviii.) Of the various editions above noticed, that edited at Utrecht by Professor Leusden, is by far the best and most correct. The folio Frankfort edition is not worth purchasing, on account of its incorrectness. The 4to. edition, which is somewhat better, is nevertheless very inaccurate: it is badly printed, and sells at a very low price.

8. Biblia Sacra Vulgatæ Editionis, Sixti V. et Clementis VIII. Pont. Max. auctoritate recognita, unà cum selectis Annotationibus ex optimis quibusque Interpretibus excerptis, Prolegomenis, novis Tabulis Chronologicis, Historicis, et Geographicis illustrata, Indiceque Epistolarum et Evangeliorum aucta. Auctore J. B. DU HAMEL. Parisiis, 1706, 2 tomis, folio.

The Prolegomena treat briefly on the canon and inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, and on their transmission to our times, incorrupt; on the authority and various editions of the Hebrew text and ancient Versions; and on the exposition of the Bible, including its style, figurative language, and spiritual sense. A short Chronological and Geographical Appendix is subjoined, in which the weights, measures, and money of the Hebrews are discussed.

9. LA SAINTE BIBLE, expliquée par DAVID MARTIN. Amsterdam, 1707, 2 vols. folio.

M. Martin revised the Geneva version of the French Bible, and corrected it so materially, that it is frequently considered as a new translation. The short notes, which he has annexed, contain much good sense, learning, and piety.

10. Joannis Clerici Translatio Librorum Veteris Testamenti, cum ejusdem Paraphrasi perpetuâ, Commentario Philologico, Dissertationibus Criticis, Tabulisque Chronologicis et Geographicis, folio, 4 vols. Amstelodami, 1708, 1710, 1713.—Ejusdem, Translatio ex Anglicâ Linguâ Henrici Hammondi Paraphrasis et Adnotationum in Novum Testamentum, Animadversionibus suis illustrata. Francofurti, 1714, 2 vols. folio.

Le Clerc's Translation and Commentary are highly commended by Bishop Watson: of Dr. Hammond's Paraphrase and Notes on the New Testament, some account is given below. Many of Le Clerc's observations throw great light on the Scriptures; in others he has indulged his own fancy, and, what is most to be regretted, has completely frittered away the meaning of the Prophecies concerning our Saviour. He considers miracles as effects of nature. His commentaries on the Prophets and on the Hagiographa are greatly inferior to those on the Pentateuch. John Justus von Einem published a volume of Animadversiones ad Joannis Clerici Commentarios, at Magdeburg, 1735, 8vo.

11. OSTERVALD (Jean-Frederic) La Sainte Bible, avec les Argumens et Réflexions. Neufchatel, 1772, folio.

M. Ostervald was an eminent divine of the French Protestant church. The French text of the Bible is that of the Geneva version, revised and corrected by himself; whence it is often considered as a new version. Ostervald's arguments and reflections are very valuable, and have been liberally consulted by later commentators. A detached translation of them, in three vols. 8vo., was published by Mr. Chamberlayne in the early part of the eighteenth century, at the request and under the patronage of the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge: the latter editions of this translation are in two volumes, 8vo.

12. Joannis Cocceii Commentarii in Sacras Scripturas, in ejus Operibus. Amstelodami, 10 vols. folio.

The Commentaries of Cocceius are also extant in quarto and folio, under different dates as they were published. It is the fault of this learned man, that he has in the Old Testament spiritualized every thing to the utmost; his commentaries, however, particularly on the New Testament, abound with valuable illustrations, and will amply repay the trouble of perusal. He is "a commentator from whom a judicious expositor may derive much assistance. Often fanciful, and even fanatical, he is learned, pious, and far more discerning in the true scope of prophecy than many who succeeded him." (Dr. Apthorpe's Disc. on Prophecy, vol. i. p. 106.)

13. CALMET.—Commentaire Littéral sur tous les Livres de l'Ancien et du Nouveau Testament, par Augustin CALMET. Paris, 1719—1726, 8 tomis, in 9 vols. folio.

It contains the Latin text of the Vulgate, and a French version in collateral columns, with the notes at the bottom of each page. It has a vast apparatus of prefaces and dissertations, in which immense learning, good sense, sound judgment, and deep piety are invariably displayed. "This is without exception the best comment on the Sacred Writings ever published, either by Catholics or Protestants." (Dr. A. Clarke.) Walchius (Bibl. Theol. vol. iv. p. 433.) has pronounced an equally strong but well-deserved eulogium on this valuable work, to which we have been largely indebted in the course of these volumes.

14. La Sainte Bible de Vence, en Latin et en Français, avec des Notes Littéraires, Critiques et Historiques, des Prefaces, et Dissertations, tirées du Commentaire de Dom Calmet, Abbé de Senones, de l'Abbé de Vence, et des autres auteurs les plus célèbres, pour faciliter l'intelligence de l'Ecriture Sainte; enrichie d'un Atlas et de Cartes Géographiques. Cinquième édition, soigneusement révue et augmentée d'un grand nombre de Notes par M. Drach, Rabbin converti, et enrichie de nouvelles Dissertations. Paris, 1827—1834, 27 tomes, 8vo. Avec Atlas.

This was, originally, a reprint of the Bible published in Latin and French by L. E. Ronder, first in 1748 in fourteen volumes, quarto, and, a second time, between the years 1767 and 1774. The date of the third edition we have not been able to ascertain. The French translation, with the exception of a few corrections, is that of father Carrières. Besides the Latin Vulgate and French version, this work contains prefaces to the several books, notes, and dissertations, chiefly taken from Calmet, but abridged in some places, and in others altered or enlarged: most of the alterations are pointed out. There are also notes, and several dissertations from the Abbé DE VENCE, and the fathers Houbigant and Carrières, with many additions by Rondet; though these last are not very distinctly specified. The critical and historical dissertations, which are one hundred and seventy in number, treat on various passages of Scripture and biblical subjects. There are seven large indexes relative to Scripture chronology and geography, to the Hebrew, Chaldee, Syriac, and Greek names, and in general to the contents of the text, prefaces, dissertations, notes, &c. The Atlas contains thirty-eight maps and engravings. There is an edition of this Bible printed at Nismes, in seventeen volumes, 8vo. (Peignot. Manuel du Bibliophile, tom. ii. p. 134. Month. Rev. O. S. vol. lii. p. 344.) The fourth edition was published at Paris in 1820—1824, in twenty-five volumes, 8vo.

The superintendence of the fifth edition was confided to M. Drach, formerly a Jewish rabbi, who embraced Christianity in the form professed by the Romish church. This edition was intended, at first, to be a mere reprint of the Bible de Vence, revised and accompanied with additional notes. But, with the seventh volume, the editor entirely changed the plan which he had adopted at the commencement of the undertaking, and instead of revising the French version of father Carrières, he has so altered the latter in the seventh, and following volumes, as to render it a new translation. M. Brunet states that these alterations, which were made in order to please the then dominant party in the Romish Church in France, were by no means satisfactory to divines. (Supplément au Manuel du Libraire, tom. i. p. 152.) Besides the correction of typographical errors, this edition contains the following among other improvements: viz. I. New Dissertations relative to alleged difficulties drawn from geology, astronomy, chronology, the zodiac of Dendera, &c. &c. by various distinguished scholars, especially the Abbé Halma;—2. References to the best authors who have refuted, in detail, the objections of modern infidels;—3. Numerous notes by M-

Drach;—4. A new and corrected Atlas, on thirty-seven plates, consisting of maps and other engravings, to illustrate the Scripture History;—and, 5. A notice of the best works treating on the Bible generally, and on each book in particular. And as M. Drach in his notes often refers to his "Letters d'un Rabbin Converti aux Israelites ses Frères" (Paris, 1825—1827, 8vo.), it will be desirable to add these letters to the work itself. An Italian translation of M. Drach's edition of the Bible de Vence was published at Milan in 1830 and following years.

15. Chais.—La Sainte Bible, avec un Commentaire Littéral, et des Notes choisies, tirées de divers Auteurs Anglois, &c., par Charles Chais. Hague, 1743—1790, 7 vols. 4to.

Besides a French translation, which in general is judicious, this learned and elaborate work contains a valuable comment on the Old Testament as far as the end of the historical books. The seventh volume was posthumous, and was edited by the late Rev. Dr. Maclaine. "It is much to be regretted that the learned and pious author did not complete the whole. What he has published however, at long intervals, is excellent. His notes are chiefly taken, as he professes, from the best English commentators, to whom he gives a decided preference above the foreign, Houbigant, Calmet, &c.; all of whom he appears to have carefully studied. It may therefore be justly considered as a considerable and valuable improvement upon his predecessors, of every description, as far as it goes." (Dr. Hales.)

16. HOUBIGANT.—Caroli Francisci HOUBIGANTII Notæ Criticæ in Universos Veteris Testamenti Libros, cum Hebriace, tum Græce scriptos. Cum integris ejusdem Prolegomenis. Francofurti ad Mænum, 1777, 2 tomis, 4to.

A neat reprint of the Prolegomena and notes annexed by Houbigant to his Critical Edition and Version of the Old Testament, which has already been noticed in p. 36. of this Appendix.

17. Jo. Aug. Datrii Libri Veteris Testamenti, ex Recensione Textûs Hebræi et Versionum Antiquarum, Latine versi, notis philologicis et criticis illustrati. Halæ, 1773—1789, 6 vols. 8vo.

This work is in high repute on the Continent: see a notice of Dathe's Latin version in p. 32. of this Appendix. The difficult and obscure passages are illustrated by notes placed at the bottom of the page. After M. Dathe's decease, Rosenmüller edited a collection of his Opuscula ad Crisin et Interpretationem Veteris Testamenti spectantia, 8vo. Lipsiæ, 1795. These should be added to the above work, as they contain critical disquisitions on some ancient versions, &c.

18. Interpretatio Sacræ Scripturæ per omnes Veteris et Novi Testamenti Libros, ab Joanne Nep. Alber, Clerico Regulari e Scholis Piis, S. Theologiæ Doctore, Linguarum Orientalium et Sacræ Scripturæ in Archiepiscopali Lyceo Professore. Pesthini [Pesth, in Hungary], 1801—1804, 16 large vols. 8vo.

Though published upwards of thirty years since, this exposition was unknown, in England until the year 1827, when a few copies were imported. Professor Alber dedicated it to the clergy of the Romish church in Hungary, for whose use he undertook its compilation. There are three maps, and to each volume there is a list of numerous errata, besides a copious supplementary list in the last volume, all of which ought to be corrected before the work can be consulted. To the first volume are prefixed about fifty pages of preliminary observations on the various aids for the interpretation of Scripture, which are not characterized either by novelty or depth of information. The following is the method pursued by the author. At the beginning of each book are placed a short preface, treating on its author, and a synopsis of its contents. The text of the Latin Vulgate is then inserted: and when any passage occurs which appears to be either difficult or obscure, he endeavours to elucidate it,—more in the way of exposition than of concise critical annotations. Dr. Alber professes to have consulted the various exegetical labours, both of Protestants and Romanists; and that he has endeavoured to state the various points of difference between them without asperity and with Christian candour. In this endeavour, truth requires it to be stated, that the author has succeeded. Wherever an occasion presents itself, he fails not to impugn and to refute the notions of the antisupermaturalist divines of Germany, as well as of the enemies of divine revelation. The profoundest reverence to the opinions of the fathers of the Christian church, and to the doctrinal decisions and decrees of the Romish church, pervades this exposition.

19. Libri Sacri Antiqui Fæderis ex Sermone Hebræo in Latinum translati; notatione brevi præcipuæ Lectionum et Interpretationum diversitatis addita. Auctoribus D. Henrico Augusto Schott et Julio Friederico Winzer. Volumen primum. Altonæ et Lipsiæ, 1816, 8vo.

This volume comprises the Pentateuch only. With a few exceptions, the version is said to be close; and the annotations, which are very brief, are strictly confined to the indication of the principal various lections, and of the different interpretations proposed by eminent biblical critics. The three first books were translated by Dr. Schott, and the last two by M. Winzer. This work has not been continued.

20. Commentarius Grammaticus, in Vetus Testamentum in usum maxime Gymnasiorum et Academiarum adornatus. Scripsit Franc. Jos. Valent. Dominicus Maunen. 3 Fasciculi forming one volume. Lipsiæ, 1832–1834, 8vo.

This is strictly a grammatical commentary, the author of which has a strong leaning in favour of those neologian interpretations which explain the Messianic Prophecies of any one rather than the Messiah himself. Dr. Maurer has so perpetually referred his readers to the valuable Hebrew Grammars of Gesenius and Ewald (expressly in order that they may familiarize themselves with them), that his work is of comparatively little use, except to those who may happen to possess those Grammars.

21. La Sainte Bible, en Latin et en François, suivie d'un Dictionnaire Etymologique, Géographique, et Archéologique. Paris, 1828-1834, 13 tomes, 8vo.

The principal recommendation of this beautifully printed but costly edition of the French Version of the Scriptures, is the Etymological, Geographical, and Archæological Dictionary, which was announced as being compiled by M. Barbier du Bocage, under whose direction an Atlas, possessing more than ordinary claims to attention on account of its accuracy, was to be designed and engraved. The version is that of De Sacy, which is printed in columns, and below it is given in smaller characters the Latin Vulgate. The first volume contains a Dissertation on the Authenticity of the Books of the Old Testament; and to each book of Scripture is prefixed a short preface explanatory of its contents. The work is adorned with sixty-four engravings, executed by the most distinguished French artists, after the designs of Devéria. The thirteenth volume contains the Chronology of the Bible, together with an index of the matters contained in the Scriptures, an explanatory Dictionary of the Hebrew, Chaldee, Syriac, and Greek names occurring therein, and an archæological and philological Dictionary of the Bible. This last is for the most part derived from Calmet's well-known Dictionary: those articles, which are not designated by his name, have been compiled from the most recent authorities.

[ii.] British Commentators on the whole Bible.

1. The Reformer's Bible.—The Holy Bible, containing the Old and New Testaments, according to the Authorized Version; with short Notes by several learned and pious Reformers, as printed by Royal Authority at the time of the Reformation, with additional Notes and Dissertations. London, 1810, 4to.

The notes on the Old Testament in this edition are reprinted from those appended to the English version of the Bible, published at Geneva by Coverdale, Sampson, and other reformers, who fled to that city during the reign of Queen Mary: whence their translation is generally known by the appellation of the Geneva Bible. An account of this is given in p. 36. of this Appendix. The annotations on the New Testament are translated from the Latin of Theodore Beza. Although in this edition the orthography is modernized, and the style has in some few instances been improved, the editor (the Rev. Thomas Webster, B.D.) states that the utmost caution has been observed, that no alteration should be made in the sentiments of the reformers, whose "notes and illustrations late eminent Bishop Horsley (no mean judge of biblical literature) has pronounced to be "very edifying, except that in many points they savour too much of Calvinism." The notes on the Apocalypse are selected by the editor from various commentators: he has also occasionally supplied arguments to the different books of the Old and New Testaments: his dissertations on which, though concise, are sufficiently comprehensive for those readers who have not leisure to consult more expensive commentaries. A few useful maps and tables accompany the work, which is further ornamented with some neatly executed vignette engravings.

2. Hall (Bishop).—Contemplations on the Old and New Testaments. London, 1808, 2 vols. 8vo.

These have been reprinted at various times and in different forms; the edition now noticed was published by the Rev. Josiah Pratt, B.D., and is very correctly printed. Bishop Hall's Contemplations "are incomparably valuable for language, criticism, and devotion." (Dr. Doddridge.) The Bishop also wrote a "Paraphrastic Exposition of hard Texts," which forms the 3d and 4th vols. of Mr. Pratt's edition of his whole works. These expository notes Dr. D. pronounces to be "very valuable, especially for showing the spirit and force of many expressions that occur." They do not, however, contain much learned criticism. Most of them, if not all, are inserted in the valuable Commentary of Bp. Mant and Dr. D'Oyly, noticed below.

- 3. MAXER.—A Commentary upon the Bible; wherein the Divers Translations and Expositions, Literall and Mysticall, of the most famous Commentators, both ancient and modern, are propounded and examined, by John MAXER. London, 1653, 5 vols. folio.
- 4. Annotations upon all the Books of the Old and New Testament: this third, above the first and second editions, so enlarged, as they make an entire Commentary on the Sacred Scripture; the like never before published in English. Wherein the text is explained, doubts resolved, Scriptures paralleled, and various readings observed; by the labour of certain learned divines thereunto appointed, and therein employed, as is expressed in the preface. London, 1657, 2 vols. folio.

Lamentations: printed 1728. A general discourse, p. i—xvi. Isaiah, p. 1—162. Jeremiah and Lamentations, p. 1—168.

Part VIII. "An Help," &c. containing Ezechiel: printed 1728. The text of Ezechiel, p. 1—178.

Part IX. "An Help," &c. containing Daniel: printed 1716. preface. London, 1657, 2 vols. folio.

This valuable work (for valuable and learned it is, considering the time when it was composed), is usually called the "ASSEMBLY'S Annotations;" from the circumstance of its having been composed by members of the Assembly of Divines who sat at Westminster during the great rebellion. The reader will find an account of its during the great rebellion. The reader will find an acc authors in Dr. Calamy's Life of Mr. Baxter, p. 86. et seq.

5. POOLE .- Annotations upon the Holy Bible, wherein the sacred text is inserted, and various readings annexed; together with the parallel Scriptures. The more difficult terms are explained; seeming contradictions reconciled; doubts resolved, and the whole text opened. By the Rev. Matthew Poole. London. 1683, 2 vols. folio. Edinburgh, 1803, 4 vols. 4to.

The Annotations are mingled with the text, and are allowed to be very judicious; the author (who was an eminent non-conformist them only as far as the 58th chapter of Isaiah; the remainder of the notes was compiled after the same manner, by several eminent dissenting ministers.

6. CLARKE.-The Old and New Testament, with Annotations and parallel Scriptures. By Samuel CLARKE, A.M. London, 1690, folio.

The selection of parallel texts is admirable; and the notes, though The selection of parallel texts is admirable; and the notes, though very brief, are written with great judgment. The work was commended in very high terms by Drs. Owen and Bates, as well as by Mr. Baxter and Mr. Howe. "It has been an excellent fund for some modern commentators, who have republished a great part of it with very little alteration." (Chalmers's Biog. Dict. vol. ix. p. 403.) This work, notwithstanding the learned author was a non-conformist, is inserted in the list of books recommended by Rishon Cleaver to the attention of the repursar elegant. Bishop Cleaver to the attention of the younger clergy. It is unfortunately very scarce and dear. The purchaser must be careful that he be not misled by another Bible published also in one vol. folio, in 1811, in the name of S. Clarke, in numbers; and which is a very indifferent compilation by some anonymous editor from various commentators, all of whom lived long after the time of

7. The Rev. Dr. Edward Wells published a Help for the Right Understanding of the Scripture, in various parts, between the years 1709 and 1728. As this useful work is not often to be met with complete, the following bibliographical notice of it is copied from the Rev. Dr. Cotton's List of Editions of the Bible and of parts thereof. (Appendix, pp. 163-165.)

Wells's Paraphrase of the Old Testament.

Part I. The Title, "An Help for the more easy and clear understanding of the Holy Scriptures: being the book of Genesis explained after the following method: viz. The common English Translation rendered more agreeable to the original. A paraphrase. Annotations." Oxford, printed at the Theatre, 1724. "A preface to the reader," 5 pages. "The general preface," xv pages. "A discourse of the year, &c. in use among the Jews," p. 1—91. "A Chronological Account," &c. 23 pages, 91. not numbered. Additional notes, 6 pages, not numbered. The text, p. 1—277. A synopsis to the Pentateuch, 2 pages.

Part II. Title, "An Help," &c. as before: containing Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy, printed 1725. "A preface to the reader," p. i—xi. Errata, 1 leaf, not numbered. face to the reader," p. i—xi. Errata, 1 leaf, not numbered. Exodus, p. 1—149. Leviticus, p. 1—86. Numbers and Deu-

Part III. Title, "An Help," &c. containing Joshua, Judges, and Ruth: printed 1725. A preface to the reader, 11 pages, Joshua, p. 1—84. Synopsis, I leaf, not numbered. Judges and Ruth, p. 1-102.

Part IV. "An Help," &c. containing two books of Samuel, and two of Kings: printed 1726. Preface, p. i—vi. Samuel to 1 Kings, chapter i. p. 1—182. Errata, 1 leaf, not numbered. 1 Kings, chapter ii. &c. p. 1—148.

Part V. "An Help," &c. containing Chronicles, Ezra, Nehemiah, and Esther: printed 1727. Preface to the reader, p. i-y. Chronicles, p. 1-136. Ezra, Nehemiah, and Esther, p. 1-80. a continuation of Jewish history, p. 81-109. Chronological Part VI. "An Help," &c. containing Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and Canticles: printed 1727. Preface to the reader, 2 pages. Job to Psalm lx. p. 1—160. Psalm lxi—cl. p. 1—115. Preface to Proverbs, &c. 4 pages, unnumbered. Proverbs, &c. p. 1-116.

Part VII. "An Help," &c. containing Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Dedication, 4 pages, not numbered. General preface, with a table, p. 1-10. Discourse, with four tables, p. 11-44. Daniel, p. 1—134. Synopsis, 1 leaf. Various readings, p. 137—170. N. B. This edition of Daniel was published with the New Testament: a second was printed 1728.

Part X. "An Help," &c. containing the twelve Minor Prophets: printed 1723. General preface, p. i—v. Preface to Hosea, p. i—vi. Hosea to Obadiah, p. 1—121. Jonah to Zephaniah, p. 1—88. Haggai to the end, p. 1—77. N. B. A second edition was published in 1729, containing a preface, 2 pages. Text, p. 1-244.

Paraphrase of the New Testament.

Part I. "An Help," &c. containing the Gospels and Acts. Oxford, at the Theatre, 1718. General preface, p. i-iv. Two discourses, p. v-xx. Chronological tables, p. xxi-xxxv. The contents of St. Matthew and St. Mark, 5 pages, not numbered. Then follows a second title, "An Help," &c. containing the Gospels of St. Matthew and St. Mark, dated 1717. The text, p. 3—411.

Part II. "An Help," &c. containing St. Luke and the Acts: dated 1719. Advertisement, &c. 6 pages. St. Luke, p. 1-225.

Acts, p. 1—209, Part III. "An Help," &c. containing St. John's Gospel: dated 1719. Advertisement, &c. 4 pages. Text, p. 1—195.

Part IV. A treatise on the harmony of the four Gospels, with a table. Preface, 2 pages. The treatise, p. 1—83.

Part V. "The second part of an Help," &c. containing the Epistle to the Romans: dated 1711. Preface, 2 pages. Proce-mial discourse, p. 1—24. Text, p. 1—125. A second edition was published in 1715, with a title professing the part to contain all St. Paul's Epistles. General preface, synopsis, and lists of books written by Dr. E. Wells, 6 pages, not numbered. Advertisement, &c. 2 pages. Proæmial discourse, p. 1—20. Text, p. 21-145.

Part VI. "An Help," &c. containing the Epistles to the Corinthians: printed 1714. Errata, 1 leaf. Text, p. 1—171. Part VII. "An Help," &c. containing the Epistles to the Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, Timothy, Titus, and Philemon: printed 1715. The text, p. 1—173.

Part VIII. "A specimen of an Help," &c. being the Epistles to the Thessalonians and Galatians: printed 1709. Dedication, 2 pages. Preface, 5 pages. Text, p. 1—76. N. B. In 1716 was published a second edition; the contents and pages the same.

Part IX. "An Help," &c. containing the Epistle to the Hebrews: printed 1713. Preface, 2 pages. Text, p. 1—95.

Part X. "An Help," &c. being the Catholic Epistles: printed 1715. Advertisement, &c. 2 pages. Text, p. 1—149.

Part XI. "An Help," &c. being the Revelation of St. John:

printed 1717. Dedication, 2 pages. Preface, 3 pages. Table and Explanation. Text, p. 1-184.

8. PATRICK, LOWTH, WHITBY, and ARNALD'S Commentary on the Bible. London, 1727-1760, 7 vols. folio. London, 1809, 8 vols. 4to. 1821, 7 vols. 4to.

8 vols. 4to. 1821, 7 vols. 4to.

Bishop Patrick wrote the commentary on the historical and poetical books of the Old Testament, in 2 vols.; Mr. W. Lowth (father of Bishop Lowth) that on the Prophets, in one vol.; Dr. Whithey that on the New Testament, in 2 vols.; and Mr. Arnald the commentary on the Apocryphal books. The four volumes of Patrick, Lowth, and Arnald, are justly valued, as containing one of the best commentaries on the Old Testament and Apocrypha which we have in the English language. As Dr. Whithy's work on the New Testament is very frequently found separate from the above commentators, the reader will find some account of it, infra, in the list of commentators on the New Testament.

9. HENRY .- An Exposition of the Old and New Testament, by the Rev. Matthew Henry, folio, 5 vols. 4to. 6 vols. various Editions; also in 6 vols. 4to. London, 1827, 3 vols. imperial 8vo. London, 1828.

More than a century has elapsed since this Exposition was first published. It is chiefly practical; yet, without any parade of learning, it frequently contains good explanations of difficult passages. The numerous editions through which it has passed sufficiently attest the great estimation in which it has been held. It is perhaps the only commentary, "so large, that deserves to be entirely and attentively read through. The remarkable passages should be marked: there is much to be learned in this work in a speculative.

and still more in a practical way." (Dr. Doddridge.) The London quarto edition of 1811 was superintended by the Rev. Messes. Burder and Hughes, and is very correct. The text of this impression has been followed in the beautifully printed edition of 1827, to Testaments, in which are inserted the Notes and Collections of which is prefixed an Introductory Essay by the Rev. Edward Bickersteth. The imperial octavo edition is also beautifully printed: to the first volume is prefixed a Life of the Author, by Mr. J. B.

10. GILL.-An Exposition of the Old and New Testament, in which the sense of the sacred text is given; doctrinal and practical truths are set in a plain and easy light; difficult passages explained; seeming contradictions reconciled; and whatever is material in the various readings, and the several Oriental versions, is observed. The whole illustrated by notes from the most ancient Jewish writings. By John GILL, D.D. London, 1748-1763, 9 vols. folio. London, 1809, 9 vols. 4to.

In rabbinical literature Dr. Gill had no equal, and he has hence been enabled to illustrate many important passages of Scripture. But he has often spiritualized his text to absurdity. "The massy volumes of Dr. Gill might almost form a class of their own, as they comprehend every method of interpretation; and sometimes, by giving to the same passage too great a variety of meanings, they leave the weak reader to doubt whether that book can have any certain meaning, which an ingenious expositor can interpret, or rather torture in so many different ways." An occasional reference to this learned work is all, perhaps, that can be recommended.

11. PURVER .- A New and Literal Translation of all the Books of the Old and New Testaments, with Notes critical and explanatory. By Antony Purver. London, 1764, 2 vols.

The author of this translation was a member of the Society of Friends or Quakers; who, under very considerable disadvantages, acquired a competent knowledge of the Hebrew and other Oriental languages, and also of the Greek. His work was published at the expense of Dr. J. Fothergill. Although it contains many improved renderings and useful notes, it "has never been highly valued, and is much less literal and much less simple than the habits of the man, and those of the religious community to which he belonged, might authorize one to expect." (Dr. A. Clarke.) See a further account in the Monthly Review (O. S.), vol. xxxii. pp. 194—205.

12. WESLEY .- Notes on the Old and New Testaments, by the Rev. J. WESLEY, M.A. Bristol, 1764, 4 vols. 4to.

In consequence of the author being obliged to retrench his notes, in order to comprise the work within the prescribed limits of four volumes, "the notes on the Old Testament are allowed on all hands to be meagre and unsatisfactory. The notes on the New Testament, which have gone through several editions, are of a widely different description; though short, they are always judicious, accurate, spiritual, terse, and impressive, and possess the happy and rare quality of leading the reader immediately to God and his own heart." (Dr. A. Clarke.) The Rev. Dr. Hales pronounces these notes to be "commendable for their conciseness, and acutely pointed to the hearts and consciences of his readers; and he mentions the notes on the Apocalypse, which are chiefly abridged from the retrieval and expository writings of Bengel, as being the most valuable part of Mr. Wesley's work. (Analysis of Chronology, vol. ii. pp. 1287, 1288.) The text is inserted in continuous paragraphs, the verses being thrown into the margin, and it contains several happy corrections of the received version, which are frequently cited by Mr. Granville Sharp and Dr. Hales.

13. The Holy Bible, containing the Old and New Testaments, according to the present authorized English Version, with Notes, critical, explanatory, and practical; all the marginal readings of the most approved printed copies of the Scriptures, with such others as appear to be countenanced by the Hebrew and Greek originals; a copious collection of references to parallel texts; summaries of the contents of each book and chapter, and the date of every transaction and event recorded in the Sacred Oracles, agreeably to the calculation of the most correct chronologers. By the Rev. Joseph Benson. London, 1811-1818, 5 vols. 4to. Various subsequent editions, also in five volumes, quarto.

An elaborate and very useful commentary on the Sacred Scriptures, which (independently of its practical tendency) possesses the merit of compressing into a comparatively small compass the substance of what the piety and learning of former ages have advanced, in order to facilitate the study of the Bible. Its late learned author was particularly distinguished for his critical and exact acquaintance with the Greek Testament.

14. CRUDEN.—The Complete Family Bible: or a Spiritual Exposition of the Old and New Testament; wherein each chapter is summed up in its context, and the sacred text inserted at large, with Notes, spiritual, practical, and explanatory. By the Rev. Mr. CRUDEN. London, 1770, 2 vols. folio.

VOL. II .- APP.

Testaments, in which are inserted the Notes and Collections of John Locke, Esq., Daniel Waterland, D.D., and the Right Hon. Edward Earl of Clarendon, and other learned persons, with practical improvements. By W. Donn, LL.D. London, 1770, 3 vols. folio.

In the compilation of this work, Dr. Dodd availed himself liberally of the labours of Calmet, Chais, and Houbigant, besides the most eminent commentators of our own country, and the manuscript collections mentioned above. The purchaser should see that vol. i. most emment commentators of our own country, and the maintest-recollections mentioned above. The purchaser should see that vol. i. contains a Dissertation on the Pentateuch, and vol. iii. another on the Inspiration of the New Testament; which are not unfrequently wanting, especially the first, probably from the work being originally published in numbers. Dr. Dodd's Commentary was reprinted a few years since by the Rev. Dr. Coke, with several retrenchments and some unimportant additions, in six handsome volumes, quarto. and some unimportant additions, in six handsome volumes, quarto.

16. GOADBY .- An Illustration of the Holy Scriptures by Notes and Explications on the Old and New Testaments. 3 vols, folio.

The publication of this work commenced in the year 1759, and it has been frequently reprinted. It was edited by Mr. Goadby of Sherborne; "it contains many judicious notes:" but "while it seems to be orthodox, is written entirely on the Arian hypothesis." (Dr. A. Clarke.) The false and erroneous interpretations contained in this work were forcibly and ably exposed by the Rev. Walter Sellon, in his "Remarks upon certain passages in a work entitled an Illustration of the Holy Scriptures." London, 1765, 12mo.

17. HAWEIS.—The Evangelical Expositor; or a Commentary on the Holy Bible wherein the Sacred Text is inserted at large, the sense explained, and different passages elucidated, with practical observations, &c. By T. HAWEIS, LL.B. M.D. London, 1765, 2 vols. folio.

18. WILSON (Bishop). — The Holy Bible; containing the Books of the Old and New Testaments, carefully printed from the first edition (compared with others) of the present translation: with notes by Thomas Wilson, D.D., Bishop of Sodor and Man, and various renderings, collected from other translations, by the Rev. Clement Crutwell, editor. London, 1785, 3 vols. 4to.

This edition contains a translation of the apocryphal third book of Maccabees, which has not appeared in any English Bibles since Becke's edition of 1551. The text and marginal references are printed with equal beauty and correctness. "The editor has Becke's edition of 1551. The text and marginal references are printed with equal beauty and correctness. "The editor has greatly increased the value of this edition by inserting in the margin different renderings of the same passage, from all the translations he could procure. He also prefixed a particular account of the several English translations of the Bible, and of their authors. The bishop's notes are only to be considered as brief hints either for the explanation or the practical improvement of particular passages. As illustrations of the text, their value is inconsiderable. (Monthly Review, O. S. vol. lxxiv. p. 297.)

19. Yonge.-A Practical and Explanatory Commentary on the Holy Bible, taking the whole in one point of view, from the Creation to the End of the World. By I. YONGE. London,

"The point of view in which the Scriptures are here considered, is their reference to the redemption of the world by Jesus Christ; which great event is traced through the historical and prophetical writings of the Old Testament, and the narrative and epistolary records of the New, to show that the whole has one leading object and design. This work is rather intended as a practical help to the meditations of the pious Christian, than as a critical elucidation of the sacred writings." (Monthly Review, O. S. vol. lxxviii. p. 173.)

20. Scott.-The Holy Bible, containing the Old and New Testaments; with original notes, practical observations, and copious marginal references. By Thomas Scott, Rector of Aston Sandford. London, 1822, 6 vols. 4to. Fifth and best edition, with the author's last corrections. Also in 1830, in 3 vols. im-

The first edition of this work (the constant and increasing sale of which proves the high estimation in which it is deservedly held), begun in 1788, and published in numbers, consisted of five thousand copies; the second, in 1805, of two thousand; the third, in 1810, of two thousand; the fourth, in 1812, of three thousand; and the fifth and latest edition, completed and published in 1822, is stereo-typed—the largest work ever submitted to that process. Besides these, eight other editions, consisting altogether of twenty-five thousand two hundred and fifty copies, were printed in the United States of America from 1808 to 1819; where the local and temporary prejudices, from which the writer could not escape in his own country, having less force, its value seems to have been at once acknowledged. On the last edition of this Commentary its learned The compiler of this indifferently executed commentary is not to be confounded with Mr. Alexander Cruden, author of the well-known Concordance to the Holy Scriptures. It appears to have blc. More particularly, I. As sundry small variations have, during the lapse of two centuries, crept into our common Bibles, considerable pains have been taken, by the collation of different editions, to exhibit an accurate copy of the sacred text according to the authorized version.—2. Not only have the marginal references throughout been revised with the utmost care, but it will be found that the author has inserted, in the notes, and practical observations, frequent references to other parts of his Commentary. To this improvement he attached considerable importance: and its value will, no doubt, be felt by those readers who may bestow sufficient pains upon the subject to enter into his design. The student may be advantageously referred to the book of Proverbs for a specimen of this addition to the work.—3. But the most important improvement which it has received, consists in the copious critical remarks which have been introduced. Many of these occur in the Old Testament, in all which the original words in Hebrew characters, pointed, have been substituted for the English letters, by which they had been before expressed, wherever any thing of the kind occurred. In the New Testament these remarks are numerous. Here also new authorities are adduced in support of the criticisms which had been previously made, particularly from Schleusner, to whose valuable Lexicon of the Greek Testament the author was indebted for much assistance. The critical remarks, it is also to be observed, are now uniformly carried to the end of the note, instead of being interspersed in the body of it.—4. Mr. Scott had finished the actual revision of this great work nearly to the end of the Second Epistle to Timothy. The last passage to which he put his hand was that striking declaration of St. Paul (2 Tim. iii. 1, 2.) so applicable to the present times. Although several alterations (and some of them of considerable importance) have been made in the fifth edition, subsequent to the verse just named; yet these have not been introduced without authority, but are taken, according to the author's directions, parts of the work. The capital excellency of this valuable and immense under-"The capital excellency of this valuable and immense undertaking, perhaps, consists in following, more closely than any other, the fair and adequate meaning of every part of Scripture, without regard to the niceties of human systems: it is, in every sense of the expression, a scriptural comment. It has likewise a further and a strong recommendation in its originality. Every part of it is thought out by the author for himself, not borrowed from others. The later editions, indeed, are enriched with brief and valuable questions from several writers of credit—but the substance of the quotations from several writers of credit—but the substance of the work is entirely his own. It is not a compilation, it is an original production, in which you have the deliberate judgment of a masculine and independent mind on all the parts of Holy Scripture. Every student will understand the value of such a work. Further, it is the comment of our age, presenting many of the last lights which history casts on the interpretation of prophecy, giving several of the remarks which sound criticism has accumulated from the different branches of sacred literature, obviating the chief objections which modern annotators have advanced against some of the distinguishing doctrines of the Gospel, and adapting the instruc-tions of Scripture to the peculiar circumstances of the times in which we live. I may observe, also, that the faults of method and style, which considerably detract from the merit of some of his other writings, are less apparent here, where he had only to follow the order of thought in the sacred book itself; whilst all his powthe order of thought in the sacred book itself; whilst all his powers and attainments had their full scope. It was the very undertaking which required, less than any other, the qualifications which he did not possess, and demanded, more than any other, those in which he excelled. It required matured knowledge of Scripture, skill as a textuary, sterling honesty, a firm grasp of truth, unfeigned submission of mind to every part of the inspired records, a holy temper of heart, unparalleled diligence and perseverance: and these were the very characteristics of the man. When to these particulars it is added that he lived to superintend four editions, each enriched with much new and important matter, and had been each enriched with much new and important matter, and had been engaged above three years in a new one, in which for the fifth time he had nearly completed a most laborious revision of the whole work, we must at least allow the extent and importance of the author's exertions. Accordingly the success of the work has been rapidly and steadily increasing from the first, not only in our own country, but wherever the English language is known. It will soon be in the hands of most careful students of the holy volume, whether, in the first instance, they agree with the author's chief sentiments or not. Nor is the time distant when, the passing controversies of the day having been forgotten, this prodigious work will generally be confessed, in the Protestant Churches, to work will generally be confessed, in the Protestant Churches, to be one of the most sound and instructive commentaries produced in our own or any other age."—(The Bishop of Calcutta's Sermons, occasioned by the death of the Rev. Thomas Scott, pp. 33—35. 98. 3d edition.) To the preceding just character of this elaborate commentary, the writer of these pages (who does not view all topics precisely in the same point of view with its late learned author) deems it an act of bare justice to state that he has never consulted it in vain on difficult passages of the Scriptures. While occupied in considering the various objections of modern infidels he for his in considering the various objections of modern infidels, he for wwn satisfaction thought out every answer (if he may be allowed the expression) for himself: referring only to commentaries in questions of more than ordinary difficulty. And in every instance—especially on the Pentateuch—he found, in Mr. Scott's Commentary, brief but solid refutations of alleged contradictions, which he could find in no other similar work extant in the English language. The edition in imperial 8vo. was superintended by the Rev. Messrs. Josiah Pratt (sen. and jun.), upon the following plan:—the Practical Observations, as found in the stereotyped quario editions, are divided according to the portions of the text to which they belong; and are printed, not as in those editions, at the foot of the page, but immediately after their respective portions of the text. Headlines of Contents are prefixed to the respective columns. The Marginal References and Renderings are omitted; such excepted as appear to be of considerable importance, and these are interwoven with the notes; various passages more strictly philological, and involving Hebrew or Greek criticism, are likewise omitted. Some remarks in the notes, of a more practical nature, have been removed, and introduced, in their proper places, into the Practical Observations. The high estimation in which this commentary is held in France, caused it to be translated into French. Three portions have appeared, comprising the Gospel of St. Matthew, the Acts of the Apostles, and the Epistle of St. Paul to the Romans.

21. Macrae.—A revised Translation and Interpretation of the Sacred Scriptures, after the Eastern manner, from concurrent authorities of critics, interpreters, and commentators, copies, and versions; showing that the inspired writings contain the seeds of the valuable sciences, being the source whence the ancient philosophers derived them, also the most ancient histories and greatest antiquities, and are the most entertaining as well as instructing to both the curious and serious. [By David Macrael] Glasgow, 1799, 8vo. Second edition, 1815, 4to.; also in 3 vols. 8vo.

We have transcribed the long title of this work, in which the author has certainly succeeded in introducing very many approved renderings; but in which he has also marred exceedingly that venerable simplicity and dignity which are so eminently conspicuous in the authorized version. His explanations of different passages are included in short paraphrases, comprehended between parentheses. No sober student or critic, however, can approve of the manner in which the author has attempted to elucidate "Solomon's Allegoric Song" (as he terms it) "on the mutual love of Christ and the church, written twenty years after his Egyptian nuptials." As this work is very little known, we transcribe the first seven verses of the twelfth chapter of Ecclesiastes, containing Solomon's admirable portraiture of old age, by way of specimen:—

manner in which the author has attempted to elucidate "Solomon's Allegoric Song" (as he terms it) "on the mutual love of Christ and the church, written twenty years after his Egyptian nuptials." As this work is very little known, we transcribe the first seven verses of the twelfth chapter of Ecclesiastes, containing Solomon's admirable portraiture of old age, by way of specimen:—

"1. Remember thy Creator in the days of youth, before the days of affliction come, and the years of old age approach, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them. 2. Before the sun, and the light, and the moon, and the stars, become dark to thee, and the clouds return after rain, or one trouble come upon another. 3. When (the arms) the keepers of the (corporeal) house shall shake, and the strong ones (the limbs) be feeble, and (the teeth) the grinders shall cease, as being few (and unfit for use); and they that look out at the windows (the optic nerves of the eyes) become dim; 4. And the doors be shut in the streets (the lips fall in, the teeth being gone), and the sounding of the grinding (in eating) be low; and they shall rise up at the sound of the bird (sleep being diminished, and easily broken); and all the daughters of music (the accents of the voice, and acuteness of the ear) fail. 5. They shall also be afraid of (ascending) the place which is high (being weak and breathless); and fears (of stumbling) shall be in the way; and (grey hairs like) the almond tree's leaves shall flourish; and the grasshopper shall be a burden (small matters being troublesome, as being crooked and fretful); and the desire of enjoyment shall fail; for man goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets. 6. Before the silver cord (the marrow of the backbone, with its root and branches) be contracted; or the golden vial (the brain's membranes) be cracked, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain (the cavities and conveyers of the blood from the heart), or the wheel be broken at the cistern (the returners of it from the lungs, liver, he

22. BULKLEY.—Notes on the Bible, by the late Rev. Charles BULKLEY, published from the author's manuscript by Joshua Toulmin, D.D. London, 1802, 3 vols. 8vo.

"These notes are not so much of a philological as of an explanatory nature. They are filled with what the author considers parallel passages in the Greek and Roman classics, in which the same moral precepts and sentiments occur. Sometimes the coincidence appears to be striking; at other times, the correspondence is far from marked. There is a great mass of quotation, which would seem to answer no valuable purpose, unless to produce the belief, that a book nearly as good as the Bible might be compiled from the writings of the poets and philosophers of Greece and Rome." (Orme's Bibliotheca Biblica, p. 64.)

23. PRIESTLEY (Dr.)—Notes on all the Books of Scripture, for the use of the Pulpit and of Private Families, by Joseph PRIESTLEY, LL.D. F.R.S. Northumberland (N. Am.), 1803, 4 vols. 8vo.

These notes are well worthy of being consulted by the advanced biblical student; for, though the author "keeps his own creed"

[modern socinianism] " continually in view, especially when considering those texts which other religious people adduce in favour of theirs, yet his work contains many invaluable notes and observations, particularly on the philosophy, natural history, geography, and chronology of the Scriptures: and to these subjects few men in Europe were better qualified to do justice." (Dr. A. Clarke, Commentary on the Bible, vol. i. p. xi.)

24. TRIMMER (Mrs.)—A Help to the Unlearned in the Study of the Holy Scriptures; being an attempt to explain the Bible in a familiar way, adapted to common apprehensions, and according to the opinions of approved Commentators. By Mrs. Taim-MER. London, 1805, 8vo. Also in 2 vols. 12mo.

The benevolent authoress of this work was well known by her unwearied assiduity in promoting the welfare of the rising generation. Novelty of information she did not pretend to offer; but with out approving of every sentiment asserted in her work, it is but just to say, that it is a most useful help to the unlearned, and that the object announced in her preface has been fully accomplished; viz.

To render "the study of the Bible easy and profitable to those who have but little leisure, or who may not be able to understand expositions of Scripture, in which more learning is displayed. endeavour of the compiler has been to explain what is difficult, as far as is necessary for Christians in general to understand it; and to direct the attention of the Bible student to such passages and texts as require particular consideration, in order to produce a rational faith, and a right practice, founded immediately upon the word of Cod." God.

25. BURDER.—The Scripture Expositor; a new Commentary, Critical and Practical, on the Holy Bible. By the Rev. Samuel BURDER, A.M. London, 1809, 2 vols. in 4 parts, 4to.

One prominent object of this work, which is both critical and practical, is, to illustrate the Scriptures by the assistance of Eastern customs. The author is advantageously known by his Oriental Customs and Oriental Literature, which publications are noticed in the subsequent part of this Appendix.

26. FAWCETT.-The Devotional Family Bible; containing the Old and New Testaments, with copious notes and illustrations, partly original, and partly selected from the most approved Commentators, both ancient and modern. With a devotional exercise or aspiration at the close of every chapter, by way of improvement. By John Fawcett, D.D. London, 1811, 2 vols. royal

This work is wholly designed for family use; but the marginal renderings and parallel texts have been entirely omitted. The abthese is inexcusable in any edition of the Bible above the size of a duodecimo volume.

27. HEWLETT .- The Holy Bible, containing the Old and Testament, with the Apocrypha, with critical, philological, and Explanatory Notes. By the Rev. John HEWLETT, B.D. London, 1812, 3 vols. 4to.

The typographical execution of this variorum edition of the Scriptures is singularly correct and beautiful; the parallel texts and marginal renderings are put at the foot of the text, and above the notes, which are selected with great industry. To the first volume are prefixed very copious prolegomena, containing every requisite information relative to the authenticity and inspiration of the Scriptures; the formation of the sacred Canon, MSS. and editions of the tures; the formation of the sacred Canon, MSS, and editions of the Bible, sects, &c., with a variety of useful tables; and to the third volume is prefixed a compendious history of the Jews, from their restoration to Judea, to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans; the whole forming a connection between the history of the Old and New Testament; and the work is terminated by three useful indexes. There are, however, some discrepancies in the notes, which are stated and animadverted upon in an ably conducted critical journal. (See British Critic, New Series, vol. ii. pp. 339. et seq.) Several of Mr. Hewlett's notes are elaborate critical disquisitions on important topics. Copies of this work may be purdisquisitions on important topics. Copies of this work may be purchased with maps, and numerous well executed engravings, after pictures by the most celebrated painters. In 1816, an edition of the notes, &c. was published without the text, entitled "Commentaries and Disquisitions on the Holy Scriptures," in 5 vols. 8vo., which may frequently be obtained at a very low price.

28. D'OYLY and MANT .- The Holy Bible according to the Authorized Version, with Notes explanatory and practical; taken principally from the most eminent writers of the United Church of England and Ireland; together with appropriate introductions, tables, indexes, maps, and plans, prepared and arranged by the Rev. G. D'OYLY, B.D. (now D.D.), and the Rev. Richard Many, D.D. (now Bishop of Down and Connor). Oxford and London, 1814, 3 vols. 4to., and various subsequent editions printed at Cambridge and Oxford. New York, 1818-20, 2 vols. 4to.

This work, which is published under the sanction of the venerable Society for promoting Christian Knowledge, professes to communicate only the result of the critical inquiries of learned men, without giving a detailed exposition of the inquiries themselves. These results, however, are selected with great judgment, so that the reader who may consult them on difficult passages will of the United States. Philadelphia, 1808, 4 vols. 8vo.

rarely be disappointed. Of the labour attending this publication some idea may be formed, when it is stated that the works of upwards of one hundred and sixty authors have been consulted for upwards of one hundred and sixty authors have it, amounting to several hundred volumes. On the fundamental articles of Christian verity,—the Deity and atonement of Jesus Christ, and the personality and offices of the Holy Spirit,—this christ, and the personality and offices of the Holy Spirit,—this christ, and the personality and offices of the Holy Spirit,—this work may be pronounced to be a library of divinity. The impa-and engravings, though only outlines, are executed with much spirit. An index of matters is subjoined. There is a useful con-cordance in 4to, edited by the Rev. T. W. Bellamy, B.D., which is usually bound up with this commentary: and in the year Rev. Dr. Wilson published another index, which is mu complete than that annexed to the work; and the student who can meet with it will do well to purchase it. The reprint at New York, which is very neatly executed in two large quarto volumes, was edited by the Rt. Rev. John Henry Hobart, D.D., Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the State of New York; who has greatly enhanced the value of this work by numerous additional notes, selected from the writings of upwards of thirty of the most eminent divines (not noticed by the Drs. Mant and D'Oyly), whose names are a sufficient pledge for the orthodoxy of the annotations names are a sufficient pledge for the orthodoxy of the annotations taken from their writings. Among the authors thus consulted are Bishops Brown, Law, Leng, Mant, Middleton, and Van Mildert, of the Anglican Church; Bp. Gleig, of the Scottish Episcopal Church; and Bps. Seabury and White, of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America; Archdeacons Pott and Daubeny, Rev. Drs. Nott, Rennel, William Sherlock, Spry, Wordsworth, A. Clarke, Scott, Allestree and Bisse, &c. &c. Many other notes the likewise selected from several of the authors sited by the Notes are likewise selected from several of the authors cited by Bp. Mant and Dr. D'Oyly. Bp. Hobart's additional notes are twofold; 1. Critical and Explanatory; and, 2. Practical. The latter are most numerous, and are calculated greatly to increase the value of this Commentary as a FAMILY BIBLE.

28*, The Plain Reader's Help in the Study of the Holy Scriptures; consisting of Notes, explanatory and illustrative, chiefly selected or abridged from the Family Bible published by the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge. By the Rev. William Thomas Bree, M.A. Coventry, 1821-22. In two parts, forming one volume in small quarto.

Although the greater part of the present volume is extracted or abridged from the preceding work, the editor has not confined himself exclusively to it. He has given some notes, which, though they do not occur in the Family Bible, are yet extracted from the same authors to whom Bp. Mant and Dr. D'Oyly had recourse in their compilation. Besides these, the editor has occasionally added a few notes of his own; and he has further availed himself of such notes in Sir John Bailey's edition of the book of Common Prayer, as suited his purpose. The editor's aim has been, to comprise as suited his purpose. The editor's aim has been, to comprise within the space of a cheap and moderately sized volume a collection of notes on the Holy Scriptures, adapted to the capacity of ordinary readers, and designed for the benefit of such as have it not in their power to procure or consult larger works. This cheap and unpretending work, which is very little known, is neatly printed on two sorts of paper, in order to accommodate every class of purchasers.

29. CLARKE (Dr. A.)—The Holy Bible, containing the Old and New Testaments: the Text carefully printed from the most correct copies of the present authorized translation, including the marginal readings and parallel texts; with a Commentary and Critical Notes, designed as a help to a better understanding of the Sacred Writings. By Adam CLARKE, LLD. F.A.S. London, 1810–1826, 8 vols. 4to. A new edition, revised and improved, 1833-34, in five volumes, royal 8vo. also in quarto.

The commentary on the New Testament fills three volumes of this elaborate work: the remainder is devoted to the elucidation of the Old Testament. In this commentary, Dr. Clarke states, that the whole of the text has been collated with the Hebrew and Greek originals, and all the ancient versions: "the most difficult words are analyzed and explained; the most important readings in the col-lections of Kennicott and De Rossi on the Old Testament, and in those Wetstein, and Griesbach, on the New, are noticed; the date of every transaction, as far as it has been ascertained by the best chronologers, is marked; the peculiar customs of the Jews and neighbouring nations, so frequently alluded to by the prophets, evangelists, and apostles, are explained from the best Asiatic authorities; the great doctrines of the Law and Gospel of God are defined, illustrated, and defended; and the whole is applied to the important purposes of practical Christianity." The work concludes with a copious index, and a selection of important various Readings of the New Testament, from ten ancient MSS. The literary world in general and hillied students in particular, are greatly indebted in general, and biblical students in particular, are greatly indebted to Dr. Clarke for the light he has thrown on many very difficult passages. The royal 8vo. edition was revised throughout, and prared by the learned author for the press, before his decease. It is a cheap and very beautifully printed work.

30. Thomson.—The Old Covenant, commonly called the Old Testament, translated from the Septuagint.—The New Covenant, commonly called the New Testament, translated from the Greek. By Charles Thomson, late Secretary to the Congress This translation is, upon the whole, faithfully executed, though that of the Old Testament, being a version of a version, can hardly afford much assistance to the biblical student. The translation of the New Testament is much improved in the punctuation, and also in the arrangement of the objections and replies that occasion such frequent transitions in St. Paul's Epistles. The notes which accompany this work are very brief, but satisfactory as far as they go. Very few copies of Mr. Thomson's work have reached England; and even in America it has become very scarce and dear.

31. Bellamy.—The Holy Bible, newly translated from the original Hebrew, with Notes, critical and explanatory. By John Bellamy. London, 1818-21, 4to.

Three parts only of this new translation have been published. The arrogant claims of the author and his extravagancies of interpretation have been exposed in the Quarterly Review, vols. xix. pp. 250—280. and xxiii. pp. 290—325.; in the Eclectic Review, vol. x. N. S. pp. 1—20. 130—150. 280—299.; in the Anti-jacobin Review, vol. liv. pp. 97—103. 193—207. 305—316.; in Mr. Whittaker's Historical and Critical Inquiry into the Interpretation of the Hebrew Scriptures, and Supplement to it, 8vo., Cambridge, 1819, 1820; in Proiessor Lee's Letter to Mr. Bellamy, Cambridge, 1821; and last, though not least in value, in Mr. Hyman Hurwitz's "Vindiciæ Hebraicæ," London, 1821, 8vo.

32. BOOTHROYD.—A new Family Bible, and improved Version, from corrected Texts of the Originals, with Notes, critical and explanatory; and short Practical Reflections on each Chapter. By the Rev. B. BOOTHROYD, LL.D. Pontefract and London, 1818, 1821, 1823, 3 vols. 4to.

The Rev. Dr. Boothroyd has long been advantageously known as the editor of the critical edition of the Hebrew Bible with philological notes, of which we have given an account in rage 8. of this Appendix. His improved English Version of the Bible will be found a valuable help to the critical understanding of the Sacred Scriptures. Where any reading in the original is supported by the authority of ancient MSS. and Versions, Dr. B. has availed himself of it, and has inserted it in the text; always apprizing his readers of such changes, which (as we have had occasion to remark in our chapter on various readings) are not unfrequently real improvements. The Historical Books are printed in continuous paragraphs, the Poetical Books being printed in single lines. The first two volumes contain the Old Testament; the third, the New Testament. The numbers of the different verses are judiciously thrown into the margin; and the notes, which are placed at the foot of each page, possess the rare merit of condensing much important critical and explanatory matter in comparatively a small compass. To the whole, Dr. B. has prefixed a well-executed abridgment of Michaelis's Commentaries on the Law of Moses.

33. Williams.—The Cottage Bible and Family Expositor; containing the Authorized Translation of the Old and New Testaments, with Practical Reflections and short Explanatory Notes, calculated to elucidate difficult and obscure Passages. By Thomas Williams. London, 1825–27, 3 vols. 8vo.

This unassuming but cheap and useful commentary on the Holy Scriptures, though professedly designed for persons and families in the humbler walks of life, is not unworthy the attention of students of a higher class, who may not be able to purchase more bulky or more expensive commentaries; and on this account it is here noticed. The work is dedicated by permission to the learned and venerable Bishop of Salisbury. The first volume contains the whole of the Historical Books, and also the Book of Job: the second volume comprises the rest of the Old Testament. The New Testament forms the third volume. The following is the plan of publication: The authorized Version is neatly and clearly printed. Long chapters are broken into paragraphs of a suitable length, regulated by the subject-matter of them; and the Genealogies, Enumerations of the Tribes, and certain Ceremonial Laws of the Jews, which are not suitable for reading in families or schools, are printed in a smaller type, and are so distinguished that they may be omitted in reading, without difficulty or confusion. A few words, which are not in strict accordance with modern European ideas of propriety, are exchanged for others; and to each chapter is given a concise practical exposition, compiled from various sources, together with brief critical notes (in which are interwoven the principal marginal readings and references) on difficult and obscure passages, especially such as have been alleged to be contradictory. The editor has carefully indicated the sources whence he has drawn his annotations;—a practice which, it were to be wished, had been followed by the anonymous compilers of some commentaries now circulating in numbers, as also in volumes, who have contrived to comprehend the most valuable remarks of others without any acknowledgment of the authors to whose labours they are indebted. Mr. Williams has also paid a laudable attention to those passages against which objections have been taken by modern skeptics; for which portion of his work he was well qual

34. Devotional Comments: being a Series of Scriptural Expositions, with a Prayer annexed to each subject. By Mrs. Stevens. Knaresborough and London, 1823-31, 20 vols. 8vo.

35. The Comprehensive Bible; containing the Old and New Testaments, according to the authorized Version, with the various readings and marginal notes usually printed therewith: a general introduction, containing disquisitions on the genuineness, authenticity, and inspiration of the Holy Scriptures,—various divisions and marks of distinction in the sacred writings,—ancient versions,—coins, weights, and measures,—various sects among the Jews: introductions and concluding remarks to each book: the parallel passages contained in the Rev. J. Scott's Commentary, Canne's Bible, Rev. J. Brown's Self-Interpreting Bible, Dr. A. Clarke's Commentary, and the English Version of the Polyglott Bible [noticed in p. 21. of this Appendix], systematically arranged; philological and explanatory notes. With chronological and other indexes. [By William GREENFIELD.] London, 1827, crown 4to. demy 4to. and royal 4to.

36. A Commentary on the Holy Bible, from Henry and Scott. With occasional observations and notes from other writers. Vols. I.—III.—V. [comprising Genesis to Solomon's Songs, and the Gospel of Matthew to the Acts of the Apostles. By George Stokes.] 1831-34, royal 12mo. or crown 8vo.

The object of this work is, to provide a commentary on the Holy Scriptures, compact in size and moderate in price, which may be useful to those whose opportunities for reading, or whose means of purchasing, render such a publication desirable; while the contents are suited for Christians of every station, rank, and denomination. The valuable Commentaries of Henry and Scott have principally supplied the materials for the present publication. Their most important observations are condensed and blended together, so as to form a continuous exposition. The editions used, are Henry's Exposition, edited by the Rev. Messrs. Burder and Hughes; and the first edition of Scott's Commentary. Numerous extracts from other authors (one hundred in number) have been inserted, where they appeared needful, and explanatory notes upon some passages have been added, most of which are designed to meet the misrepresentations of infidels. Due acknowledgment is made to the authors from whom the additional paragraphs are taken. This commentary, which is published at the expense of the Religious Tract Society, is beautifully and correctly printed with a new type. As the text is not inserted, it may be used with any edition of the authorized English version of the Bible: but, in size, it is principally adapted to the beautifully printed Oxford ruby Bible in small 8vo. published in 1827.

37. The Christian Expositor; or, Practical Guide to the Study of the Holy Scriptures, intended for the use of General Readers, By the Rev. George Holden, A.M. London, 1824-30, 3 vols. 12mo.

Although many expositions of the Bible, of great and deserved celebrity, are happily extant in our language, a commentary sufficiently short to be read by those who have not leisure to consult learned and extensive works, yet sufficiently comprehensive to serve as a guide to the study of the Holy Scriptures, for general readers, is a desideratum. To supply this deficiency is the object of the present beautifully printed, cheap, and truly valuable work; which, though 'intended for the use of general readers,' comprises so much and such various information in a condensed form, expressed in neat and perspicuous language, that not only general readers, but also critical students, may gladly, profitably, and safely avail themselves of Mr. Holden's labours, without any apprehension of having imposed upon them the neologian interpretations of modern German critics and commentators. Every page indicates Mr. Holden's intimate acquaintance with all the best exegetical works on the Holy Scriptures, both British and Foreign. Vols. I. and II. appeared in 1834, Vol. III., containing the New Testament, was published as a separate work in 1830. See a notice of it in § 6. No. 46. p. 130. infra.

\S 4. PRINCIPAL COMMENTATORS ON THE OLD TESTAMENT AND ON DETACHED BOOKS THEREOF.

[i.] Commentators on the Old Testament.

1. RICHARDSON (Bishop).—Choice Observations and Explanations upon the Old Testament, containing in them many remarkable matters, either not taken notice of, or mistaken by most: which are additionals to the large annotations made by some of the Assembly of Divines: to which are added some further and larger Observations on the whole book of Genesis. By John RICHARDSON, Bishop of Ardagh. London, 1665, folio.

Bishop Richardson has been characterized by his contemporaries as a man of profound learning, well versed in the Scriptures, and of exact knowledge in sacred chronology. His Harmony of the Four Gospels, in which he led the way to a more exact arrangement Usher's Annals. Bishop Richardson's Annotations were published after his death: as they sell at a low price, they are not unworthy of the student's attention.

2. PYLE. A Paraphrase with short and Useful Notes on the Books of the Old Testament. By the Rev. Thomas PYLE, M.A. London, 1717-1725, 4 vols. 8vo.

These volumes extend to all the historical books of the Old Testament. Dr. Doddridge calls it "an elegant and judicious contrac-tion" of Bishop Patrick's work, noticed in p 410 supra; and adds, that it is "vastly to be preferred to his Paraphrase on the Epistles, which is mentioned in p. 131. infra.

- 3. MARCHANT.—An Exposition of the Books of the Old Testament, extracted from the Writings of the best Authors, ancient and modern. By John MARCHANT. London, 1745, folio.
- 4. Oaron.-A short and plain Exposition of the Old Testament, with devotional and practical Reflections for the use of families, subjoined to each chapter, somewhat in the manner of Dr. Doddridge's Family Expositor. By the late Rev. Job ORTON. 6 vols. 8vo. 1788-1791; second edition. London, 1822, 6 vols. 8vo.

The work was published after the author's death by Mr. Gentleman of Kidderminster: it contains notes chiefly collected from modern expositors, of which "it cannot be said that they are emicritical; but they often convey valuable instruction, and the reflections are admirably adapted to promote the purposes of serious religion." (Biographia Britannica, 2d edit. vol. v. p. 311. See also Month. Rev. O. S. vol. lxxix. p. 329.) To form a complete comment on the Scriptures, Mr. Orton's paraphrase may be joined with Mr. Palmer's abridgment of Dr. Doddridge, noticed in page 129. infra.

5. Gendes.—The Holy Bible, or the Books accounted sacred, otherwise called the Books of the Old and New Covenants, faithfully translated from the corrected Texts of the Originals, with various readings, explanatory notes, and critical remarks. By Alexander Geddes, LL.D. 4to. London, vol. i. 1792, vol. ii. 1797. Critical Remarks on the Hebrew Scriptures, 4to. London, 1800, vol. i. on the Pentateuch.

The two volumes of Dr. Geddes's version include the historical books from Genesis to Chronicles, and the book of Ruth. Of the doctor's heterodox commentaries and versions, the reader may see an ample examination and retitation in the 4th, 14th, 19th, and 20th volumes of the British Critic, old series. The learned doctor's work is here noticed, lest the author should be charged with designedly omitting it.

[ii.] Commentators on detached Books of the Old Testament.

ON THE PENTATEUCH.

1. Hore Mosaice; or a Dissertation on the Credibility and Theology of the Pentateuch. By George Stanley FABER, B.D. Second Edition. London, 1818, 2 vols. 8vo.

This elaborate Treatise contains the substance of the eight Bampton Lectures delivered by Mr. Faber before the University of Oxford, and published in 1801. "Those who have not the means or leisure to consult the very valuable works of Mr. Bryant, Mr. Mauof the most striking facts brought together, and so arranged as jointly to corroborate and confirm the events recorded in the Pen-The references to other authors are numerous; nor are these confined solely to the ancients. Additional notes and illustra-tions are to be found at the end of each volume." (Brit. Crit. vol. xix. O. S. pp. 382, 388.) The second edition, published in 1818, is very materially enlarged and greatly improved by its learned author.

- 1*. Principles for the Proper Understanding of the Mosaic Writings stated and applied. By the Rev. J. J. BLUNT, B.D. London, 1833, 8vo.
- 2. The Character of Moses established for Veracity as an Historian, recording Events from the Creation to the Deluge. By the Rev. Joseph TOWNSEND, M.A. Vol. I. London, 1813; Vol. II. Bath, 1815, 4to.
- For an analysis of this work, see the Quarterly Review, vol. xiv. pp. 96—112. and the Eclectic Review, O. S. vol. x. pp. 32—49.
- 3. Annotations upon the Five Books of Moses, the Book of Psalms, and the Song of Songs or Canticles. By Henry AINS-WORTH. London, 1639, folio.

This work "is a good book, full of very valuable Jewish learning; and his translation is in many places to be preferred to our own, especially on the Psalms." (Dr. Doddridge.) It was translated into Dutch in 1690, and is highly esteemed on the continent.

4. A Commentary on the Five Books of Moses, with a Dissertation concerning the Author or Writer of the said Books, of the narratives of the four evangelists, is printed in Archbishop | and a general argument to each of them. By Richard Kidden. Bishop of Bath and Wells. London, 1691, 2 vols. 8vo.

> A learned and valuable work, though now not often to be met with.

- 5. Johannis Marckii in præcipuas quasdam partes Pentateuchi Commentarius: seu ultimorum Jacobi, reliquorum Bilhami, et novissimorum Mosis, quæ leguntur Genes. xlvii. 9. Numer. xxii .- xxiv. et Deut. xxix .- xxxiii. Analysis Exegetica. Lugd. Bat. 1713, 4to.
- 6. A Critical and Practical Exposition of the Pentateuch; with Notes, theological, moral, critical, philosophical and historical. To which are subjoined two Dissertations:-1. On the Mosaic history of the creation, and 2. On the destruction of the seven nations of Canaan. London, 1748, folio.

This Exposition is compiled with considerable industry from the labours of the best interpreters ancient and modern. It was origimally pablished in numbers, and was designed to have been a complete commentary on the entire Bible: but not meeting with sufficient encouragement, the author (a Mr. Jameson) proceeded no further than the Pentateuch. It is not of common occurrence.

- 7. A New and Literal Translation, from the original Hebrew, of the Pentateuch of Moses, and of the Historical Books of the Old Testament to the end of the second book of Kings; with Notes, critical and explanatory. By the late Rev. Julius BATE. London, 1773, 4to.
- "It is most certainly a new translation, and so very literal as to be really unintelligible to a plain English reader." (Monthly Review, O. S. vol. l. p. 106.)
- 8. The Pentateuch, or the Five Books of Moses illustrated being an Explication of the Phraseology incorporated with the text, for the use of Families and Schools. By the Rev. S. CLAP-HAM. London, 1818, 12mo.
- " As a substitute for expensive commentaries on the B ble, and "As a sinsuffice for expensive commands as the means of providing in many interesting respects for the instruction and edification of those persons who may not have leisure to procure more copious volumes, the present work will be acceptablc. The plan of it is judicious, and the execution is on the whole respectable, and must have cost the editor no inconsiderable expense of labour." (Eclectic Review, N. S. vol. xiii. p. 74.)
- 9. An Analytical Exposition of the whole First Book of Moses, called Genesis, and of xxiii. chapters of his Second Book, called Exodus. Wherein the various readings are observed; the original text explained; doubts resolved; Scriptures paralleled; the Scripture Chronology from the Creation of the World to the giving of the Law at Mount Sinai cleared; and the whole illustrated by doctrines collected from the text. Delivered in a Morning Exercise on the Lord's Day. By George Hughes, B.D., late Minister of the Gospel in Plymouth. (Plymouth), 1672, folio.

A very elaborate and curious work; it is not of common occurrence.

10. The Hebrew Text of the Parallel Prophecies of Jacob and Moses, relative to the Twelve Tribes, with a translation and notes, and the various lections of near forty MSS., &c. &c. By D. Durell, D.D., Principal of Hertford College. Oxford, 1764, 4to.

GENESIS.

- 11. Joannis Mercert Commentarius in Genesin. Genevæ, 1598, folio.
- 12. Hexapla in Genesin: that is, a Sixfold Commentary upon Genesis, wherein six several translations are compared, where they differ, with the Originall Hebrew, and Pagnine and Montanus' Interlinearie Interpretation. Together with a sixfold use of every chapter, showing 1. The Method or Argument; 2. The Divers Readings; 3. The Explanation of Difficult Questions, and Doubtfull Places; 4. The Places of Doctrine; 5. Places of Confutation; 6. Morall Observations. By Andrew WILLET. London, 1608, folio.
- 13. A Few and New Observations upon the Book of Genesis; also a Handful of Gleanings out of the Book of Exodus. John Lightfoot, D.D. Works, vol. i. p. 698. London, 1684, folio.
- 14. A Specimen of an Universal View of all the Eminent Writers on the Holy Scriptures: being a Collection of the Dissertations, Explications, and Opinions of the learned Men, in all ages, concerning the Difficult Passages and Obscure Texts of the Bible; and of whatever is to be met with in profane authors which may contribute to the better understanding of them. By the Rev. Jonathan SMEDLEY, Dean of Clogher. 1728, folio.

This Specimen contains only the first chapter of Genesis; the work which it announces never having been published.

author proposed, 1. To exhibit at length the words of the inspired authors; 2. To quote the chief commentators in Pool's Synopsis, on every subject, as they are ranged by him; 3. To set down the judgment of ancient historians, philosophers, poets, &c.; and to reserve the last place for moderns, especially English and French Divines. A copy of this specimen is in the library of the British Museum.

- 15. A New English Translation, from the original Hebrew, of the First Three Chapters of Genesis, with marginal illustrations, and notes, critical and explanatory. By Abraham Dawson, M.A. London, 1763, 4to.
- 16. A Fourth and Fifth Chapter of Genesis, translated from the original Hebrew. By Abraham Dawson, M.A. London,
- 17. The Sixth, and Eleven following Chapters of Genesis, translated from the original Hebrew, &c. &c. By Abraham DAWSON, M.A. London, 1786, 4to.

For an account of these publications see the Monthly Review, Old Series, vol. xxix. pp. 293—299.; vol. xlvii. pp. 1—7.; and vol. Ixxvii. pp. 140-147.

18. Annotations upon Genesis, with Observations, doctrinal and practical. By the Rev. Thomas HARWOOD. London, 1789,

This is a compilation from various authors, "which, if not a brilliant, may in some degree be considered as a useful performance." (Month. Rev. New Series, vol. iv. p. 106.)

19. Sacred Literature, or Remarks on the Book of Genesis, corrected and arranged to promote the knowledge and evince the excellency of the Scriptures. By James Franks, A.M. Lon-on, 1802, 8vo.

This work is nearly similar in design and execution to the preeding; it consists principally of extracts from other books. The author "has contented himself with forming the arrangement, author "has contented himself with forming the arrangement, which is clear and good, and inserting short passages to serve for connection and elucidation. The volume begins with general remarks on the Scriptures, and then proceeds through the book of Genesis in the order of the chapters; containing in the whole three hundred and fifteen remarks upon that book, illustrative of the matter contained in it, and collected from the best authors of all descriptions." (Brit. Crit. O. S. vol. xxi. pp. 680, 681.)

- 20. Hermanni Venema Dissertationes Selectæ ad Sacram Scripturam Veteris et Novi Testamenti : quarum Tom. I. Pars I. continet Dissertationes quinque ad Librum Geneseos: Pars II. continet Commentarium ad Gen. xlix. 1—27. Leovardiæ, 1747-50, 4to.
- 21. Critical and Explanatory Notes on Genesis, Exodus, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Daniel, and the Minor Prophets; together with some Dissertations on several difficult Passages of Scripture, &c. &c. By the Rev. Henry Dimock. Gloucester, 1804, 4to.
- 22. A Dissertation on the Fall of Man; in which the Literal Sense of the Mosaic Account of that Event is asserted and vindicated. By the Rev. George Holden, M.A. London, 1823,

The Scripture History of the Fall of Man has met with many strenuous adversaries, who have endeavoured to explain it away in various ways; while it is utterly rejected by many of those who have rejected the doctrine of the atonement. In the second volume of this work (Chap. I. Sec. II. pp. 205, 206.), the literal sense of the first three chapters of Genesis is briefly vindicated; but it has been reserved for Mr. Holden to consider the subject most fully been reserved for Mr. Holden to consider the subject most juited and distinctly. All the efforts of perverted criticism to reduce the Mosaic History of the Fall of Man to allegory, fable, or mythos, are here examined in detail; and the objections of its adversaries to the literal sense of that history are minutely and satisfactorily

- 23. Two Dissertations:-1. On the Tree of Life in Paradise, with some Observations on the Fall of Man. 2. On the Oblations of Cain and Abel. By Benjamin Kennicott, M.A. Oxford, 1747, 8vo.
- 24. An Essay towards a Vindication of the vulgar Exposition of the Mosaic History of the Fall of Man. By John WITTY. London, 1705, 8vo.
- 25. The Historical Sense of the Mosaic Account of the Fall, proved and vindicated. By William WORTHINGTON. London,
- 26. The Defence of the Veracity of Moses, in his Records of the Creation and General Deluge; illustrated by Observations in the Caverns of the Peak of Derby. By Philobiblos [Thomas Rodd]. London, 1820, 8vo.
- 27. STÄHELIN (J. J.) Animadversiones quædem in Jacobi Vaticinium, Genes. cap. xLIX. Basilee, 1827, 4to.

- 28. Brief Observations upon some of the first Chapters of the Book of Genesis. London, 1827, 8vo.
- 29. Libri Geneseos secundum Fontes rite dignoscendos Adumbratio nova. In usum Prælectionum scripsit Dr. C. P. W. GRAMBERG, Lipsiæ, 1828, 8vo.

This writer adopts the hypothesis of some modern German critics, that the book of Genesis is a compilation by a third person from two primary documents, which he designates by the terms "Jehovista" and "Elohista," from the appellation of Jehovah and Elohim given to the Almighty. He adopts the untenable notion that the history of the creation and Fall of Man is a philosophical and poetical mythos, or fable.

- 30. T. P. C. Kaiser Commentarius in priora Geneseos Capita, quatenus universæ populorum mythologiæ claves exhibent. Norimbergæ, 1829, 8vo.
- 31. An Essay on the Book of Genesis; being an attempt to reconcile the Incongruities in the Mosaical Account of the Creation of the World. Dublin, 1830, 12mo.
- 31*. The Worship of the Serpent traced throughout the world, and its Traditions referred to the Events in Paradise; proving the Temptation and Fall of Man by the Instrumentality of a Serpent Tempter. By the Rev. John Bathurst Deane, M.A. London, 1830, 8vo. Second Edition, 1833, 8vo.

Though not a commentary on the book of Genesis, "The Mosaic History of the Creation of the World, illustrated by Discoveries and Experiments derived from the present State of Science, by Thomas Woon" (8vo. London, 1818), deserves a notice in this place, as a very elaborate illustration of the first chapter of Genesis. Science is here rendered the handmaid of Revelation. To the work is prefixed a view of the cosmogony of the ancients, which exhibits very considerable research. The religious improvements are both natural and scriptural: the doctrine of the Trinity is here expirit, which defended and its authorities are alongly adopted. scripturally defended, and its authorities are clearly adduced. A philosophical exposition of the first chapter of Genesis is attempted in "The Ancient Principles of the True and Sacred Philosophy, as lately explained by John Hutchinson, Esq. Originally published in Latin by A. S. Catcott. Translated with Notes, and a Preliminary Dissertation on the Character and Writings of Moses. By Alexander Maxwell." London, 1822, 8vo.

EXODUS.

32. Hexapla in Exodum: that is, a sixfold Commentary upon the Book of Exodus, according to the Method propounded in Hexapla upon Genesis. By Andrew Willer. London, 1608,

33. Exodus; a corrected Translation, with notes, critical and explanatory. By William HOPKINS, B.A. London, 1784, 4to.

The translator has, in general, executed his task with fidelity; and, "where it could be done with propriety (or where the readings of the Samaritan copy would permit it) 'he has adopted,' he says, 'the English vulgar translation, in order to prevent any prejudices that might be infused into the minds of the common people by uncharitable bigots.' In the notes we meet with little that can gratify the taste of curious and critical readers; and his severe reflections on the articles and liturgy of the Church of England might well have been spared in a work of this nature." (Monthly Rev. O. S. vol. lxxii. p. 412.)

JOSHUA AND THE OTHER HISTORICAL BOOKS.

- 34. Josuz Imperatoris Historia, illustrata atque explicata ab Andrea Masio. Antwerp, 1574, folio; and also in the Critici Sacri.
- A work of very considerable value, on account of its containing the readings of the Syriac Hexaplar version, the manuscript of which Masius possessed. This manuscript is said to have been written in the year 606, and is the only one that preserves the readings of Joshua, as given by Origen.
- 35. C. H. van Herwerden Disputatio de Libro Josuæ, sive de diversis ex quibus constat Josus Liber monumentis, deque ætate quâ eorum vixerunt auctores. Groningæ, 1828, 8vo.
- 36. Historia Ruth, ex Ebræo Latinè conversa et Commentario explicata. Ejusdem Historiæ Translatio Græca ad Exemplar Complutense, et Notæ in eandem. Opera ac Studio Joannis DRUSII. Amsterdami, 1632, 4to.
 37. A Comment on Ruth by T[homas] F[ULLER], B.D.
- London, 1654, 8vo.
- 38. John Henr. MICHAELIS, Chr. Ben. MICHAELIS, et Joh. Jac. RAMBACHII, Note Uberiores in HAGIOGRAPHA. Halm, 1735-1751, 3 vols. 4to.

Of this work, the elder Michaelis wrote the annotations on the first book of Chronicles, the Psalms, book of Job, and Song of Solomon; C. B. Michaelis was the author of those on Proverbs the Lamentations of Jeremiah, and the Prophet Daniel; and the notes on the second book of Chronicles, Ruth, Esther, Nehemiah, and Ecclesiastes, were written by Rambach.

- 39. J. D. Dahler, de Librorum Paralipomenonum auctoritate atque fide historica. 8vo. Lipsiæ, 1819.
- 40. GREY (Richard) The Last Words of David, divided according to the Metre, with Notes critical and explanatory. London, 1749, 4to.
- 41. Commentatio ad Elegiam Davidis in Saulum et Jonathanem. Auctore Antonio Henrico Pareau. Groningæ, 1829, 4to.

This dissertation consists of three parts. In the first is given a critical examination of David's exquisitely beautiful elegy on the death of Saul and of Jonathan; in the second we have an exegetical interpretation of it; and the third contains an ingenious comparison of it with the other elegiac productions of the Hebrew Sacred Poets, and with those of other Oriental poets and of the Greeks. The result of this collation establishes more satisfactorily the infinite superiority of David's elegy over every similar composition, sacred or profane.

42. A. G. F. SCHIRMER, Observationes Exegetico-Critica in Librum Esdræ. Vratislaviæ, 1820, 4to.

ON THE POETICAL BOOKS GENERALLY.

- 43. The Annotations of MICHAELIS above noticed, in No. 38.
- 44. A Paraphrase on the Books of Job, Psalms, Proverbs, and Ecclesiastes, with notes, critical, historical, and practical. By Lawrence Holden, 1764, 4 vols. 8vo.
- "To what class of readers this performance will be useful or agreeable, we really know not; but this we verily believe, that persons of taste, learning, or judgment, will find very little in it to engage their attention." (Monthly Review, O. S. vol. xxxi. p. 73.) The public opinion seems to have been in unison with that of the Monthly Reviewers; the book has never been popular, and it is to be purchased at a very low price; on which account, this notice is inserted as a caution to the student who may be inexperienced in the real value of books.
- 45. Critical Remarks on the Books of Job, Proverbs, Psalms, Ecclesiastes, and Canticles. By D. Durell, D.D. London, 1772, 4to.

See an analysis of this work in the Monthly Review, O. S. vol. xlvii. pp. 119—129.

- 46. Joh. Chr. Doederlein Scholia in Libros Veteris Testamenti Poeticos. Halæ, 1779, 4to.
- 47. The Poetical Parts of the Old Testament newly translated from the Hebrew, with notes critical and explanatory. By William Green, M.A. London, 1781, 4to.

For an account of this work, see the Monthly Review. O. S. vol. lxviii. pp. 1-8.

JOB.

- 48. Friderici Spanhemii Filii Historia Jobi. Genevæ, 1670, 4to. Also in the second volume of the folio edition of his collective works published at Leyden, in 1701-3, in 3 volumes, folio
- 49. A Translation of the Book of Job, with annotations, arguments, and dialogues on each chapter, is given in the second tome or part of the celebrated Hugh BROUGHTON'S works, pp. 246—294.
- 50. An Exposition, with Practical Observations on the Book of Job. By Joseph Carll. London, 1676, 2 vols. folio.

This work was originally published in six volumes, 4to. at different times. I have never had an opportunity of examining it; but Wachi eulogizes it in very high terms. (Biblioth. Theol. vol. iv. p. 487.) It is now very little read or even consulted, few readers being able to wade through two large folio volumes.

- 51. Francisci Vavassoris Jobus, brevi Commentario et Metaphrasi Poetica illustratus. Paris, 1679, 8vo.
- 52. Dissertationes in Librum Jobi. Autore Samuele Wesley. Londini, 1736, folio.

This volume contains fifty-three elaborate Dissertations, which embrace almost every critical question or difficulty that is to be found in the book of Job. The learned author collated all the copies which he could procure, both of the original Hebrew, and also of the Greek and other versions.

53. Liber Jobi, cum nova versione et commentario perpetuo. Edidit Albertus Schultens. Lug. Bat. 1737, 2 vols. 4to.

Of this learned and elaborate work, an abridgment was printed at Halle, in 1773, by Prof. Vogel, entitled Alberti Schultensii Commentarius in Jobum, in compendium redactus, cum observationibus criticis et exegeticis. 2 vols. 8vo.

- 54. Liber Jobi in versiculos metrice divisus, cum Versione Latinà Alberti Schultens, Notisque ex ejus Commentario excerpsit atque adnotationes suas adjecit Ricardus Grev. Londini, 1742.
- A learned and valuable work. Mr. [afterwards Bp.] Warburton having attacked Dr. Grey, the latter defended himself in "An Answer to Mr. Warburton's Remarks so far as they concern the Preface to a late edition of the Book of Job." London, 1744, 8vo.
- 55. Some Observations tending to illustrate the Book of Job, and particularly Job xix. 25. By the Rev. Charles Costand, M.A. London, 1747, 8vo.
- 56. A Dissertation on the Book of Job, its Nature, Argument, Age, and Author. Wherein the celebrated Text, ch. xix. 25. is occasionally considered and discussed. To which is prefixed an Introductory Discourse, with a short Analysis of the whole Book. Ry John Garnett, B.D. [afterwards Bishop of Clogher]. London, 1751. Second edition, 1754, 4to.
- 57. Observationes Miscellaneæ in Librum Jobi. [Auctore D. R. BOULLIER.] Amsterdami, 1758, 8vo.

This work is an attack on the labours of Professor Schultens, whose system of explaining Hebrew words and idioms, chiefly by the aid of the Arabic, is here severely criticised.

58. Elihu, or an Inquiry into the principal Scope and Design of the Book of Job. By Walter Honges, D.D. London, 1750, 4to.

This work is written on the Hutchinsonian system, and is designed to show that Elihu was no other personage than the Son of God himself! See Monthly Review, (O. S.), vol. ii. pp. 219—225. 347—352.

59. A Commentary on the Book of Job, in which are inserted the Hebrew text and English translation, &c. By Leonard Chappelow, B.D., Arabic Professor in the University of Cambridge. 1752, 2 vols. 4to.

See an account of this work in the Monthly Review (O. S.), vol. vii. pp. 197-205.

- 60. An Essay towards a New English Version of the Book of Job, from the original Hebrew, with a Commentary, and some account of his Life. By Edward Heath, Esq. London, 1756, 4to.
- "It is but justice to this new Essay upon Job, to observe, that the translation is in many places very different from that in common use; and that, in the notes, there are many observations entirely new—all of them ingenious, and many of them true." (Month. Rev. O. S. vol. xiv. p. 156.)
- 61. A Critical Dissertation on the Book of Job. By Charles Peters, A.M. Second edition. London, 1757, 8vo.

The first edition of this work appeared in 1751. (See Month. Rev. O. S. vol. iv. pp. 401—409.) In it, the author particularly considers Bishop Warburton's account of the Book of Job, vindicates its antiquity, and shows that the ancient Jews did believe in a future state.

- 62. The Book of Job in English verse, translated from the original Hebrew; with remarks, historical, critical, and explanatory. By T. Scott. London, 1773, 8vo.
- A close and exact translation, as far as a metrical version can be. The notes display much research and good sense.
- 63. An Improved Version attempted of the Book of Job, with a preliminary Dissertation and Notes, critical, historical, and explanatory By Charles Garden, D.D. London, 1796, 8vo.

A book of great pretensions, but indifferent execution. See an analysis of it in the British Critic, O. S. vol. ix. pp. 168—175.

- 64. Jo. Jac. Reiske Conjecturæ in Jobum et Proverbia, cum ejusdem oratione de studio Árabicæ Linguæ. Lipsiæ, 1779, 8vo.
- 65. Jobi antiquissimi Carminis Hebraici Natura atque Virtutes. Scripsit Carolus David Ilgen. Lipsiz, 1789, 8vo.
- 66. Animadversiones in Librum Job; scripsit Jac. Christ. Rud. Eckermann. Lubecæ, 1779, 8vo.
- 67. Joannis Henrici Pareau Commentatio de Immortalitatis ac Vitæ Futuræ Notitiis ab antiquissimo Jobi scriptore in suos usus adhibitis. Accedit Sermo Jobi de Sapientia mortuis magis cognita quam vivis; sive Jobeidis caput xxvIII. philologicè et criticè illustratum. Daventriæ, 1807, 8vo.
- 68. The Book of Job, metrically arranged according to the Masora, and newly translated into English; with Notes, critical and explanatory, accompanied, on the opposite page, by the authorized English version. By the Right Rev. Joseph Sτοck, D.D., Bishop of Killala. Bath, 1805, 4to.

This translation was executed in the short space of six weeks. Many of the author's opinions and conjectural emendations were objections to the antiquity of the Book of Job were unfounded. (On the Atonement, vol. i. pp. 354-422.)

69. The Book of Job, translated from the Hebrew, by the late Miss Elizabeth Smith: with a preface and annotations, by the Rev. T. Randolph, D.D. London, 1810, 8vo.

This was a posthumous publication of an amiable and accomplished young lady.—"Considering the age of Miss Smith, and the circumstances under which she studied the Hebrew language, her circumstances under which she studied the Hebrew language, her translation of the Book of Job may certainly be deemed a very surprising work; and had it not been characterized in the extravagant terms of commendation with which Dr. Randolph has introduced it to the public, it might have borne generally a more favourable report than it will gain from that scrutiny which his eulogium seems to challenge. It was evidently left in an unfinished state; and the editor felt himself bound in honour not to make the smallest correction. We have it, therefore, just as Miss Smith wrote it; and we receive it as a monument of her industry and genius, though we cannot regard it as having effected much towards the elucidation of the Book of Job." (Month. Rev. N. S. vol. lxv. p. 152.) See also a similar critique in the Eclectic Review, vol. vi. part ii. p. 780.

70. The Book of Job, literally translated from the original Hebrew, and restored to its natural arrangement, with Notes, critical and illustrative, and an Introductory Dissertation on its scene, scope, language, author, and object. By John Mason Goop, M.D. F.R.S. &cc. London, 1812, 8vo.

"On the whole, we regard this work as a valuable accession to our stock of sacred literature; and we can recommend it with confidence to the biblical student, as containing a great mass of useful information and valuable criticism." (Christian Observer, vol. xii. p. 306.)

71. Henr. MIDDELDORFF Curæ Hexaplares in Johum, e Codice Syriaco-Hexaplari Ambrosiano Mediolanensi. 4to. Vratislaviæ, 1817.

72. Le Livre de Job, nouvellement traduit d'après le texte original non ponctué et les anciennes versions, notamment l'Arabe et la Syriaque; par J. Louis Bridel, Professeur de Langues Orientales, et de l'interprétation des Livres Saints, dans l'Académie de Lausanne. Paris, 1818, 8vo.

73. The Book of Job, translated from the Hebrew by George HUNT. Bath, 1825, 8vo.

74. Le Livre de Job, traduit en Vers Français, avec le Texte de la Vulgate en regard; suivi de Notes Explicatives, ainsi que de Variantes, tirées de plus célèbres Interprètes de la Bible. Par B. M. F. LEVAVASSEUR. Paris, 1826, 8vo.

75. A New Translation and Exposition of the very ancient Book of Job; with Notes, explanatory and philological. By the Rev. John FRY, B.A. London, 1827, 8vo.

76. An Amended Version of the Book of Job, with an Introduction, and Notes, chiefly explanatory. By George R. Noves. Cambridge [North America], 1827, 8vo.

"Mr. Noyes, in the present translation, has aimed at combining the fruits of the labours of the learned in sacred literature, as far the fruits of the labours of the learned in sacred literature, as far as they relate or can be applied to the book of Job. He has presented the public with a version of this highly interesting portion of Scripture, the basis of which is laid in the former received" [our authorized] "translation; but into which have been incorporated, with a judicious selection, the most important suggestions of the critics, lexicographers, and divines, which have been made since the received version of the Bible was promulgated...... To the general ability, fidelity, good sense, and good taste, with which he has executed his task, we bear willing and ample testimony." (United States' Review and Literary Gazette, vol. ii. p. 343.)

77. The Book of Job, in the words of the Authorized Version, arranged and pointed in general conformity with the Masoretical Text. Dublin, 1828, 8vo.

"The principal feature in this work is the adoption of what the editor calls a half-pause in each line of every verse, which he has marked by a dot, placed, like the Greek colon, at the top of the last letter of the word to which it is affixed. In the determination of this pause he has been directed by the Masoretical punctuation, of this pause he has been directed by the masoretical patients, which not only divides the respective verses into couplets or triplets, but every line into two distinct parts. The editor has not followed Bishop Lowth and others in printing each line separately, but has retained the usual form of the verse, as in the authorized version, and as established by the Masorets. The words also of version, and as established by the Masorets. The words also of the English translation have been retained throughout, except where a slight alteration was rendered necessary by the change in their collocation, in which the order of the Hebrew is followed as closely as the difference of language will permit. By this means the majestic simplicity of the original is materially preserved; and, in many instances, the sense of a passage more accurately developed." (Christian Remembrancer, vol. x. pp. 492, 493.)

78. Conjectures concerning the Identity of the Patriarch Job, his Family, the Time when he lived, and the Locality of the severely criticised by Archbishop Magee, who has shown that his | Land of Uz. By the Rev. Samuel Lysons, B.A. Oxford and London, 1832, 8vo.

79. J. G. STICKEL Commentatio Historico-philologico-critica in Jobi locum celeberrimum, cap. XIX. 25-27. de G. ele. Jenæ, 1832, 8vo

PSALMS.

80. GREGORII BARHEBREI Scholia in Psalmum quintum et decimum octavum, e Codicis Bibliothecæ Bodleianæ Apographo Bernsteniano edidit, interpretatus est, et annotationibus prolegomenisque instruxit Joannes Theophilus Guilielmus Henricus RHODE. Vratislaviæ, 1832, 8vo.

81. Annotations upon the Book of Psalms. By Henry AINSworth. See p. 115, No. 3. supra.

82. Marci Marini, Brixiani, Annotationes Literales in Psalmos, Novâ Versione ab ipsomet illustratos. Editæ operâ et studio Joannis Aloysii Mingarelli. Bononiæ, 1748-50, 2 vols. 4to.

A learned and useful work, the author of which died in 1594. To his profound knowledge of Hebrew literature the younger Bux-To his protonia knowledge of free with the first torf, Le Long, Turretini, and other eminent philologists of the settorf, Le Long, Pare have home ample testimony. These Annotaventeenth century, have borne ample testimony. These Annotations are strictly literal; and to them is prefixed the original Hebrew text of the Psalms, together with the Vulgate Latin version, and a new translation of them by Marco Marini.

83. A brief Explication of the Psalms. By David DICKSON, Professor of Divinity in the College of Edinburgh. London, 1653-54, 3 vols. 8vo. Glasgow and London, 1834, 12 vols.

This work was very popular during the latter part of the seventeenth century. The Glasgow reprint is very neatly executed, and is enlarged with a memoir of the author, by the Rev. Robert Wodrow.

84. Paraphrases and Annotations upon the Book of Psalms By Henry Hammond, D.D. London, 1659, folio.

Dr. Hammond's notes are exceedingly valuable, and contain many learned observations that had escaped preceding commenta-tors on the Book of Psalms. They are also to be found in the fourth volume of his collected works, published at London in 1684, in folio.

85. David's Harp Strung and Tuned: or an Easie Analysis of the whole Book of Psalms, cast into such a method that the Summe of every Psalm may be quickly collected and remembered. With a Devout Meditation or Prayer at the end of every Psalm, framed for the most part out of the words of the Psalm, and fitted for several Occasions. By William [Nicholson], Bishop of Gloucester. London, 1662, folio.

In this work every verse of the Psalms is divided and subdivided with great minuteness; it is wholly practical and explanatory. In his explications, the Rt. Rev. Author steers between the two extremes of literal and spiritual interpretation. The prayers at the end of each Psalm are expressed nearly in the very words of the inspired authors. Though the quaint and scholastic mode which the prayer is the words of the content of the words of the properties of the prayers are not provided to the prayer of the prayers are not provided to the prayers of the prayers are not provided to the prayers of the prayers obtains in this work is somewhat repulsive, it may nevertheless be consulted with advantage by those who cannot command other and more critical commentaries; especially as the book may be occasionally met with at a low price. Dr. A. Clarke has inserted Bishop Nicholson's Analysis in his commentary on the Psalms, omitting his prayers.

86. Martini Geieri Commentarius in Psalmos Davidis, fontium Ebræorum mentem, et vim vocum phrasiumque sacrarum sensumque adeo genuinum, adductis copiose locis parallelis, collatis etiam (ubi opus) versionibus interpretumque sententiis, et enodatis difficultatibus, cum cura eruens. Lipsiæ, 1681; 1697; Amstelodami, 1685; Dresdæ, 1709, folio.

Geier was an eminently learned divine of the Lutheran church, and Professor of Hebrew at Leipsic, where the substance of his commentary on the Psalms was delivered in lectures to the students. It is very little known in this country; but on the continent it is very highly esteemed for its erudition and piety. (Walchius, vol.

87. The Book of Psalms, with the argument of each psalm, and a preface giving some general rules for the interpretation of this sacred book. By a Divine of the Church of England. [Peter ALLIX, D.D.] London, 1701, 8vo.

88. An Essay towards a New English Version of the Book of Psalms, from the original Hebrew. By Z. Mudge. London, 1744, 4to.

The learned author of this work, which is now of rare occurrence, The learned author of this work, which is now of rare occurrence, professes to give a plain literal version, without offering to deviate into any affected ornaments. The transitions of persons and scenes, which are frequent in the Psalms, are carefully indicated; and the numerous, though brief, notes are designed partly to point out the critical meaning of each psalm, and partly to account to the reader for the changes made in the version. Some of these notes, however, are more ingenious than solid. How highly Mr. Mudge was esteemed by Dr. Johnson, may be seen, in the character of him drawn by the latter, in Boswell's Life of Dr. Johnson, vol. iv. pp. 80—81.

People of Israel, is illustrated; and their application to the Message and the second
89. A new English Translation of the Psalms, from the original Hebrew, reduced to Metre by the late Bishop Hare; with Notes critical and explanatory; Illustrations of many passages drawn from the classics; and a preliminary Dissertation, in which the truth and certainty of that learned prelate's happy discovery is stated and proved at large. By Thomas Edwards, A.M. London, 1755, 8vo.

The design of this learned work was "to make Bishop Hare's discovery of the Hebrew metre better known; to show its truth and certainty; and to prove that, by a judicious application of it, great light may be thrown upon the poetical parts of the Holy Seriptures:" (Monthly Review, O. S. vol. xii. pp. 485—487.) Mr. Edwards was of opinion that Dr. Hare's hypothesis was rejected by many persons, partly from an overhasty determination, and partly from too scrupulous a veneration for the Hebrew text. Of Dr. Hare's system, a short account is given.

90. The Psalter, in its original form; or the Book of Psalms reduced to lines, in an easy and familiar style, and a kind of blank verse of unequal measures, answering for the most part to the original lines, with arguments pointing out the general design of each Psalm, and notes, accounting for some passages in the translation; opening and explaining also, in some places, the prophetical views, &c. [By the Rev. George Ferwice, B.D.] London, 1759, 8vo.

The object of this publication is, to show that the Psalms were written in the spirit of prophecy, with a special and direct reference to Christ and his church, in the different ages and periods of the Christian dispensation. Writing on this hypothesis, Mr. Fenwick is often fanciful in his interpretations. He has, however, many happy renderings.

91. Phil. Davidis Burkii Gnomon Psalmorum. Stutgardiæ, 1760, 2 vols. 4to.

This work "is written in a pure strain of piety, but rather too much in a technical form." (Dr. Clarke.)

92. A New Translation of the Psalms from the Hebrew Original, with Notes critical and explanatory; to which is added a Dissertation on the last prophetic words of Noah. By William Green, M.A. 1762, 8vo.

This work contains "some judicious alterations in the version, and valuable criticisms in the notes; which throw considerable light on many obscure passages in the Psalms, and will cause those excellent compositions, which have been the admiration and delight of pious minds through so many ages, to be read with still more pleasure and advantage." But "the language of the translation, though correct, has neither that force nor harmony which we find in the common version in our Bibles." (Monthly Review, O. S. vol. xxviii. p. 267.)

93. Hermanni Venema Commentarius ad Psalmos: quo singulorum Argumentum, Tempus et Hypothesis explicandi studiose inquiritur, corumque Partes continuâ Paraphrasi et selectis Observationibus illustrantur. Leovardiæ, 1762-67, 6 tomis, 4to.

"Through its great scarcity, the work is little known in Great Britain. What was said by David of Goliath's sword, may be justly said of Venema's Commentary on the Book of Psalms — There is none like it." (Dr. Clarke.) It is held in the highest esteem abroad, particularly in Holland.

94. Francisci Vatabli Annotationes in Psalmos, subjunctis Hugonis Grotii Notis, quibus Observationes suas adspersit G. J. L. Vogel. Halæ, 1767, 8vo.

95. Annotations on the Psalms. By James Merrick, M.A. Reading, 1768, 4to.

This volume is adapted to Mr. Merrick's Poetical Version of the Psalms, published in 1765, in 4to. and justly considered as the best English poetical translation extant. In the compilation of these notes he was assisted by Bishop Lowth (then Bishop of Oxford) and Archbishop Secker. "A large part of them relate to the readings of the ancient versions, and propose the conjectural emendations of various writers. Many of them abound with passages, principally from the Greek authors, which justify the modes of expression used by the Psalmist; and for this part of his design Mr. Merrick was admirably qualified, by his extensive and uncommon acquaintance with Grecian literature. Some of the notes, which are the most curious and entertaining, are those which treat upon the plants, trees, and animals mentioned in the Psalms." (Monthly Review, O. S. vol. xl. p. 374.)

96. Mosis Amyraldu Paraphrasis in Psalmos Davidis, una cum Annotationibus et Argumentis. Editio altera, emendatior et auctior, nova Præfatione Jac. Cremeri. Traj. ad Rhenum, 1672, 4to.

97. A Commentary on the Book of Psalms; in which the literal or historical sense, as they relate to King David and the late Alexander Geddes, LL.D. London, 1807, 8vo. Vol. II.—App. 4 H

People of Israel, is illustrated; and their application to the Messiah, to the church, and to individuals as members thereof, is pointed out. By George Horne, D.D. [late Bishop of Norwich]. 4to. 2 vols. Oxford, 1771; also in one and two volumes, 8vo.; 12mo. 3 vols.; and 18mo. 2 vols. They also form vols. ii. and iii. of the collective edition of his works in 6 vols. 8vo.

The variety and number of the editions of this learned and pious work sufficiently attest the very high estimation in which it is held: the critics of the day, however, when it first appeared, were of opinion that Bishop Horne applied too many of the Psalms to the Messiah. A judicious "Selection" from this work was published by Mr. Lindley Murray, in 12mo. 1812, comprising the most striking, pathetic, and instructive parts of the commentary.

98. Davidis aliorumque Poetarum Hebræorum Carminum Libri quinque, e Codd. MSS. et Antiquis Versionibus recensuit et Commentariis illustravit Jo. Aug. Stark. 8vo. vol. i. pars 1. et 2. Regiomonti, 1776.

These two parts contain only an introduction to the Psalms; the work was never continued.

99. A new Literal Version of the Book of Psalms, with a Preface and Notes. By the Rev. Stephen STREET, M.A. London, 1790, 2 vols. 8vo.

The author's object in this work is to give a close literal translation of the Psalms. In several instances, the Monthly Reviewers state that this version "is an improvement of those which have preceded it; that in some the alterations are doubtful, and that in many others they are unnecessary, if not mistaken; yet that all are worthy of attention, and may open the way to further amendments. We consider this work as a useful addition to this branch of learning. The author may, perhaps, be too ready in advancing conjectures; but he always gives notice when he does it, and he never dogmatically affirms." (Monthly Review, N. S. vol. viii. p. 50.)

100. Notes on the Books of Psalms and Proverbs. By the Rev. H. Dimock. Gloucester, 1791, 4to.

101. J. F. Stange Anticritica in Locos Psalmorum varios. Lipsiæ et Halæ, 1791—1795, 2 vols. 8vo.

102. A New and Liberal Version of the Psalms into Modern Language, according to the Liturgy Translation, with copious Notes and Illustrations, partly original, and partly selected from the best Commentators, calculated to render the Book of Psalms intelligible to every capacity. By the Rev. W. WAKE. Bath, 1793, 2 vols. 8vo.

The alterations in this version are by no means such as to render it intelligible to every capacity. "This fault pervades the book, which in other respects is well executed. The arguments in general are well drawn up, and the notes appear to be judicious. The translation of the Psalms contained in the liturgy is by many considered to be the best, though the most ancient. At all events, as it is used so much, it ought to be duly explained. This book will, we doubt not, be well received among persons of some education." (British Critic, O. S. vol. iv. p. 311.)

103. An Attempt to render the Daily Reading of the Psalms more intelligible to the Unlearned, with a Paraphrase selected from the best Commentators, and illustrated with occasional Notes. By F. T. TRAVELL, A.M. Oxford, 1794, 8vo.

The design of the work is "to make the daily reading of the Psalms more easy and pleasant to those serious and unlearned Christians who make it a point of conscience to attend the public worship of God, and are desirous of joining in his praises with understanding." (Preface, p. xi.) "Mr. Travell appears to have studied carefully, and explained judiciously, the scope of the several psalms, and the sense of their distinct parts. A plain Christian, who takes up this book with the best of all purposes, that of being made better by it, can hardly fail of success." (British Critic, O. S. vol. vi. pp. 625. 627, 628.)

104. Psalmi, ex recensione Textûs Hebræi et Versionum Antiquarum Latine versi, notisque criticis et philologicis illustrati [à N. M. Berlin]. Upsaliæ, 1805, 8vo.

This is one of the most useful Latin versions of the Psalms that has appeared in modern times; it is faithfully executed, without being servilely literal. The notes, though brief, are sufficiently explicit, and are designed to explain obscure passages; to elucidate, by a short paraphrase, peculiar expressions that could not be rendered in the text by a single word; to point out the principal various readings worthy of note; to state briefly those arguments for the renderings of particular words, concerning which interpreters are by no means agreed, with references to philological works in which those arguments are more copiously discussed; and to suggest probable meanings to words of doubtful interpretation, which are submitted to the reader's judgment.

105. A New Translation of the Book of Psalms from the Original Hebrew, with various Readings and Notes. By the late Alexander Geddes, LL.D. London, 1807, 8vo.

meaning of the inspired authors, leaving secondary applications to professed commentators. "Though many things have displeased professed commentators. "Though many things have displeased us in the perusal of this work, we are not prepared to say that the learned editors should have altogether withheld this new version from the public. Dr. Geddes was undoubtedly a considerable scholar, and his lucubrations may be turned by other scholars to good account, though they cannot be implicitly adopted." (British Critic, O. S. vol. xxxiii. p. 358.)

106. Psaumes nouvellement traduits sur l'Hébreu, et mis en leur ordre naturel, avec des Explications et Notes Critiques. [Par le Président Agier.] Paris, 1809, 2 tomes, 8vo. 106*. An entire New Version of the Book of Psalms; in which an attempt is made to accommodate them to the worship of the Christian Church, with original Prefaces, and Notes critical and explanatory. By the Rev. Wm. Goode, M.A. London, 1811, 2 vols. 8vo.

A useful help to the devotional understanding of the Psalms, which are here translated into English verse, and in various metres.

107. The Book of Psalms, translated from the Hebrew, with Notes explanatory and critical. By Samuel Horsley, LL.D., late Lord Bishop of St. Asaph. London, 1815, 2 vols. 8vo.

This was a posthumous work of Bishop Horsley, many of whose applications of the psalms to the Messiah are fanciful. For a copious critique on it, see the British Review, vol. xi. pp. 1—25.

108. Lyra Davidis; or, a New Translation and Exposition of the Psalms. By the Rev. John Fry, B.A. London, 1819, 8vo.

This work is avowedly grounded on the principles adopted in the posthumous work of the late Bishop Horsley; viz. that these sacred oracles have for the most part an immediate reference to Christ, and to the events of his first and second advent. Of course it is subject to the same defects which characterize all those interpreters of the Book of Psalms who expound them wholly of the Messiah.

109. Practical Reflections on the Psalms. To which is added a Prayer adapted to each Psalm. By Mrs. Sheriffe. London, 1821, 2 vols. 12mo.

110. The Book of Psalms in an English Metrical Version founded on the Basis of the English Bible Translation, and compared with the original Hebrew; with Notes critical and illustrative. By Richard Mant, D.D., Bishop of Down and Connor. London, 1824, 8vo.

The notes of Bishop Mant are always interesting, and are particularly valuable for pointing out the poetical beauties of the psalms. His work is much less known than it deserves.

111. A Key to the Book of Psalms. By the Rev. Thomas Boys, M.A. London, 1825, 8vo.

An ingenious application of Bp. Jebb's system of Poetical Paral-lelisms to the Interpretation of the Book of Psalms. "If we have not felt ourselves at liberty to award to Mr. Boys's labours the full measure of value which he claims for them, still we cannot but the present work to the attention of every biblical student, as deserving of a careful examination, and as entitling the author to his thanks for the curious and interesting discussions which it comprises." (Eclectic Review, N. S. vol. xxvi. p. 25.)

112. A Literal Translation of the Psalms of David, solely upon the Authority of the Rev. J. PARKHURST, M.A. London, 1825, 8vo.

113. A Practical Illustration of the Book of Psalms. By the Author of the Family Commentary on the New Testament. [Mrs. —— Thomson.] York, 1826, 2 vols. 12mo.

114. Psalms according to the Authorized Version; with Prefatory Titles, and Tabular Index of Scriptural References, from the Port Royal Authors, marking the Circumstances and Chronologic Order of their Composition. To which is added an Essay upon the Psalms, and their Spiritual Application. By Mary Ann Schimmelpenninck. London, 1825, 12mo.

115. The Psalter; or Psalms of David according to the Version of the Book of Common Prayer: illustrated, explained, and adapted to general use, in public and private worship: with Preliminary Dissertations and accompanying Notes. By the Rev. Richard WARNER. London, 1828, 8vo.

116. A New Translation of the Book of Psalms from the Original Hebrew, with explanatory Notes. By William Frence, D.D. and George Skinner, M.A. Cambridge and London, 1830, 8vo.

This is a posthumous publication of Dr. Geddes, edited by Dr. Disney and Charles Butter, Esq. The doctor's version extends only to the eleventh verse of Psalm exviii.; the reat is added from an interleaved copy of Bishop Wilson's Bible, corrected by Dr. G., who professes to have confined himself to the direct and literal meaning of the inspired curious confined himself to the direct and literal meaning of the inspired curious confined himself to the direct and literal meaning of the inspired curious confined himself to the direct and literal meaning of the inspired curious confined himself to the direct and literal meaning of the inspired curious confined himself to the direct and literal meaning of the inspired curious confined himself to the direct and literal meaning of the inspired curious confined himself to the direct and literal meaning of the inspired curious confined himself to the direct and literal meaning of the inspired curious confined himself to the direct and literal meaning of the inspired curious confined himself to the direct and literal meaning of the inspired curious curious curious confined himself to the direct and literal meaning of the inspired curious cu ful version: and in no case have they intentionally departed from the literal meaning of the text, further than the difference between the English and the Hebrew idioms seemed absolutely to require. The notes, though concise, are judicious, and strictly explanatory of the Psalms of David.

> 117. A New Translation of the Book of Psalms, with an Introduction. By George R. Noves. Boston [Massachusetts], 1831, 12mo.

> In this publication "Mr. Noyes has admitted no unnecessary The language of our authorized version, which in many changes. of the best psalms has become, by its beauty and expressiveness, language of devotion, is retained, whenever a true will admit. The translator has been too faithful to interpretation will admit. his work, to multiply corrections merely for the sake of correction."
> (Christian Register, Boston, 1831.) The Introduction is chiefly derived from Rosenmüller's elaborate preface to his Commentary on the Book of Psalms.

> 118. An Explanation of the Psalms as read in the Liturgy of the Church. By the Rev. James SLADE, M.A. London, 1832, 12mo.

> 119. A Plain and Familiar Explanation of the most difficult Passages in the Book of Psalms, interwoven with the Text. By the Rev. J. A. Gower. London, 1831, 12mo.

> 120. A Commentary on the Second Psalm. By John Hil-DROP, M.A. London, 1742, 8vo.

> 121. Specimen Academicum inaugurale, exhibens Commentarium in Psalmum XVI. Quam.....publico examini submittit Marius Antonius Gisbertus Vorstman. Hagæ Comitum, 1829, > 122. HASSLER (C. D.) Commentatio Critica de Psalmis Maccabaicis quos ferunt. Particula I. Ulmæ, 1827, 4to.

> 123. Psalmi Quindecem Hammaäloth, philologicè et criticè illustrati; a Theodoro Adriano Clarisse, Theol. Doct. Lugduni Batavorum, 1819, 8vo.

> An ingenious and useful commen.ary on Psalms cxx.-cxxxv. which are usually called Psalms of Degrees.

> 124. C. G. FRIEDRICHII Symbolæ Philologico-criticæ, et Lectionis Varietatem continentes, ad interpretationem Psalmi Centesimi. Lipsiæ, 1814, 4to.

> 125. The Hundred and Ninth, commonly called the Imprecating Psalm, considered on a Principle by which the Psalm explains itself. [A Sermon.] By the Rev. William Keate, M.A. London, 1794, 4to.

> 125. The Hundred and Ninth Psalm explained and vindicated, in a Sermon, by Samuel PARTRIDGE, M.A. London, 1798, 8vo.

> The principle established by Mr. KEATE is, that the imprecations introduced in the hundred and ninth psalm are not the imprecations of David against his enemies, but those of his enemies against him, which he recites in order to show their malice. This principle is adopted by Mr. Partridge, who has successfully obviated some little difficulties which remained after the researches of Keate. (See the Analysis of these two publications in the British Critic, O. S. vol. v. pp. 157—159. and vol. xii. p. 429.)

> 126. Commentatio in Psalmum Centesimum Decimum. Auctore Johanne Theodoro Bergman. Lug. Bat. 1819, 4to.

Many valuable critical illustrations of the Psalms will be found in Dr. Kennicott's "Remarks on several Passages in the Old Testament." London, 1777, 8vo.

THE WRITINGS OF SOLOMON COLLECTIVELY.

127. Salomonis Regis et Sapientis, quæ supersunt ejusque esse perhibentur, Omnia ex Ebræo Latine vertit. Notasque, ubi opus esse visum est, adjecit Josephus Fridericus Schelling. Stuttgardiæ, 1806, 8vo.

PROVERBS.

128. CARTWRIGHTI (Thomæ) Commentarii succincti et dilucidi in Proverbia Salomonis. Amstelodami, 1638, 4to.

129. Proverbia Regum et sapientissimi Salomonis, cum curâ enucleata à Martino Geteno. Lipsiæ, 1669, 1725, 4to.

This work is executed on the same plan, and with the same ability, as Geier's Commentary on the Psalms, already noticed in p. 118.

130. Proverbia Salomonis: Versionem integram, ad Hebræum fontem expressit, atque Commentarium adjecit, Albertus Schul-TENS. Lugd. Bat. 1648, large 8vo. (sometimes called 4to.)

The text, taken for their standard by the translators (whose labours have not been appreciated according to their value) is that 8vo. 1769, by Professor Vogel, who added some critical remarks.

The preface was written by Semler, and an auctarium was furnished by Teller.

131. Cornelii De Witt Trias Dissertationum ad Clariorem Proverbiorum Salomonis Elucidationem. Amstelodami, 1762.— Ejusdem Pentas Dissertationum ad Proverbiorum Salomonis Elucidationem. Amstelodami, 1766.—Ejusdem Pissertationum Trias altera, quà Proverbiorum Divinitas, cateraque corum Attributa asseruntur. Amstelodami, 1770, 8vo.

132. Observations on several Passages in the Book of Proverbs: with Two Sermons. By Thomas Hunt, D.D., Regius Professor of Hebrew, &c. Oxford, 1775, 4to.

These observations are twenty-six in number. "They display in a very advantageous light the critical acumen of the author, and his extensive acquaintance with the eastern languages." (Monthly Review, O. S. vol. lii. p. 302), where the result of Dr. Hunt's elaborate criticisms is given, first in the words of the authorized translation, and then in the version proposed by him.) As the book is meither very scarce nor very dear, it will be worth the student's while to procure it.

133. Joannis Jacobi Reiske Conjecturæ in Johum et Proverbia Salomonis. Lipsiæ, 1779, 8vo.

134. The Proverbs of Solomon; translated from the Hebrew, with Notes. By the Rev. Bern. Hongson, LL.D., Principal of Hertford College. Oxford, 1788, 4to.

"The notes are not numerous, and, we must say, not very important. They are intended chiefly to explain, or to justify, the version, where it departs from the usual mode of translating. On the whole, though we do not think that Dr. H. has been singularly happy as a translator, yet we cannot frequently charge him with wanton deviations from the common version: he has not often changed merely for the sake of changing." (Monthly Review, N. S. vol. v. p. 294.)

135. Observations in Proverbiorum Salomonis Versionem Alexandrinam, scripsit Jo. Gottliebb Jaeger. Meldorpi et Lipsiæ, 1788, 8vo.

136. Commentarii Novi Critici in Versiones Veteres Proverbiorum Salomonis, à J. F. Schleusnero. Goettingæ, 1794, 8vo.

137. An Attempt towards an improved Translation of the Proverbs of Solomon, from the original Hebrew; with Notes, critical and explanatory, and a Preliminary Dissertation. By the Rev. George Holden, M.A. London, 1819, 8vo.

This is the most valuable help to the critical understanding of the Book of Proverbs extant in our language. The translation is, in substance, the same as that in general use, with such alterations only as appear to be warranted by a critical interpretation of the original Hebrew, and to be demanded by evident necessity. In those passages where the author has deemed it right to desert the authorized translation, he has laudably endeavoured to assimilate his version to its style and manner of expression. The notes accompanying Mr. Holden's version, and which are in no case unnecessarily prolix, are partly critical, and partly explanatory. The former are designed to ascertain the full meaning of the sacred text, by a philological inquiry into the signification of words and phrases. In the latter the author has explained the allusions to ancient facts and customs; has introduced such observations as may serve to illustrate the original; and has occasionally presented, in a short paraphrase, an exposition of the meaning intended by the inspired author of the Book of Proverbs. The notes on the eighth chapter will be read with peculiar interest by the Christian student. Mr. Holden expounds the attributes there given to Heavenly Wisdom, of the second Person in the Holy Trinity: and he has supported this exposition by proofs and arguments not easily to be refuted, which he has drawn from Scripture, and from the fathers of the church during the first three centuries, as well as from the ancient Jewish writers.

139. A New Translation of the Proverbs of Solomon, from the original Hebrew, with explanatory Notes. By William French, D.D. and George Skinner, M.A. Cambridge and London, 1831, 8vo.

This translation is executed on the same principles as the version of the Psalms noticed in No. 116. p. 120. supra.

140. A Commentary on the Proverbs of Solomon. By R. J. Case. London, 1822, 12mo.

ECCLESIASTES.

141. Martini Geieri Commentarius in Salomonis Ecclesiasten. Lipsis, 1711, best edition, 8vo.

142. A Philosophical and Critical Essay on Ecclesiastes, wherein the author's design is stated; his doctrine vindicated; his method explained in an analytical Paraphrase annexed to a new version of the Text from the Hebrew; and the differences between that new translation and the received version accounted for, in philological Observations. By A. V. Desvueux. London, 1762, 4to.

In this work "the author has shown very considerable abilities as a critic, and appears in the character of a candid and judicious writer. He has taken infinite pains to render his work as perfect as possible; and those who are acquainted with the Hebrew language will find in his philological observations many new, and some pertinent remarks." (Monthly Review, O. S. vol. xxvii. p. 485.) Mr. Desvouv's claborate essay was translated into German, and published at Halle, in 1764, 4to.

143. Ecclesiastes translated, with a Paraphrase and Notes-By Stephen Greenaway, A.B. Leicester, 1781, 8vo.

This singularly executed volume consists of three parts, the two former of which (originally sold for one penny and three-pence) are rarely to be met with. Besides Ecclesiastes, it contains translations of 2 Samuel xxiii. ver. 1. to 7. Isaiah vii. 20, 21, 22. and ix. 1. to 5.; also Psal. xxvii. in prose and verse. (Dr. Cotton's List of Editions of the Bible, p. 46.)

144. Ecclesiastes: a New Translation from the original Hebrew, by Bernard Honoson, LL.D., Principal of Hertford College, Oxford. London, 1791, 4to.

The same remarks which have been offered on this author's version of the Book of Proverbs, are nearly applicable to his translation of Ecclesiastes. See Monthly Review, N. S. vol. ix. p. 59.

146. An Exposition of the Book of Ecclesiastes. By Edward REYNOLDS, D.D. Bishop of Norwich. Revised and corrected by the Rev. Daniel Washbourne. London, 1811, 8vo.

This work originally formed part of the collection of notes on the Bible, usually called the Assembly's Annotations, noticed in p. 109. supra. The editor of this impression states that the whole of the commentary has been carefully transcribed; and that the author's ideas are strictly and fully retained; he has however "deemed it necessary to alter the construction of most of the sentences, frequently to exchange obsolete words for those now in use, and in a few instances to omit redundant paragraphs." Bishop Reynolds's work concludes with important practical reflections.

147. An attempt to illustrate the Book of Ecclesiastes. By the Rev. George Holden, M.A. London, 1822, 8vo.

Of the various publications which have been issued from the press relative to this, in many respects, difficult book, this "Attempt" (as its author modestly terms it) is the best that has fallen under the notice of the writer of the present work. It is a kind of Paraphrase (similar to that in Dr. Doddridge's Family Expositor); in which the expressions of the Hebrew author are interwoven with a commentary. Mr. Holden has taken the authorized version as his basis, from which he has departed only where a departure appeared to him absolutely necessary, and supported upon the soundest principles of criticism. The reasons of these deviations are stated in distinct notes. The work is further accompanied by useful notes, establishing the scope and design of the Book of Ecclesiastes, and imbodying such observations as seem proper to enforce and elucidate the whole. We are indebted to Mr. Holden's labours for the excellent view of the Scope and Synopsis of the Book of Ecclesiastes, given in the second volume of this work.

SONG OF SOLOMON.

148. Caroli Maria DE VEIL Explicatio Litteralis Cantici Canticorum, ex ipsis Scripturarum fontibus, Ebræorum ritibus et idiomatis, veterum et recentiorum monimentis eruta. London, 1679, 8vo.

A rare and valuable work: the author confines himself to the explication of the literal sense.

149. Joannis Marckii in Canticum Schelomonis Commentarius, sive Analysis Exegetica. Amsterdam, 1703, 4to.

150. Cantici Salomonis Paraphrasis Gemina, Notis Criticis et Philologicis illustrata. Auctore Joanne Ken. Edinburgh, 1727, 12mo.

This illustration of Solomon's Song is not of common occurrence. Mr. Orme says that it "is a very beautiful little work. It is dedicated, in a poetical epistle, to the marquis of Bowmont, son of the duke of Roxburgh, the head of the family of Ker. There is then a long preface, giving some account of the opinions entertained of the Song, of the attempts which had been made to translate and explain it, and of the origin of Mr. Ker's translation. Then follow the two versions: the first, a kind of irregular verse; the second, in sapphic numbers. The notes, which are partly philological and partly explanatory, are inserted at the foot of the page of both versions. The poem is dramatically divided and arranged." (Orme's Biblioth, Biblica, pp. 271, 272.)

151. An Exposition of the Book of Solomon's Song, commonly called Canticles; wherein the divine authority of it is established; several versions compared with the original Text; the different senses both of Jewish and Christian interpreters considered; and the whole opened and explained. By John Gill, D.D. 1728, 1751, folio, 4to.; and again in 1767. In 2 vols. 8vo. 1805.

This work is frequently mistaken for an extract from Dr. Gill's commentary on the Bible, noticed in p. 111. supra, whereas it pre-152. A Dissertation concerning the Song of Solomon; with the original Text divided according to the metre, and a Poetical Version. [By Mr. GIFFORD.] London, 1751, 8vo.

153. The Song of Solomon, newly translated from the original Hebrew; with a Commentary and Annotations. [By Thomas Pency, D.D., Bishop of Dromore.] London, 1764, 12mo.

The elegance of this version, and of its accompanying criticisms. has caused it to be held in the highest esteem; and all subsequent commentators have diligently availed themselves of it. It is now exceedingly scarce, and extravagantly dear.

154. Outlines of a new Commentary on Solomon's Song, drawn by the Help of Instructions from the East: containing, 1. Remarks on its general nature; 2. Observations on detached places of it; 3. Queries concerning the rest of the Poem. By the author of Observations on divers Passages of Scripture. London, 1768; second edition, 1775, 8vo.

For this valuable work, Bible students are indebted to the Rev-Thomas Harmer, whose Observations on divers Passages of Scripture are noticed in a subsequent page of this appendix: in it very many difficult passages of Solomon's Song are happily elucidated, and hints are offered, of which subsequent commentators have not failed to avail themselves. It bears a high price.

155. A Poetical Translation of the Song of Solomon from the Original Hebrew; with a Preliminary Discourse, and Notes, historical, critical, and explanatory. By Anne Francis. London, 1781, 4to.

The translatress has chiefly followed the plan and illustrations of Mr. Harmer. Her version is elegantly executed.

156. Solomon's Song, translated from the Hebrew. By the Rev. Bernard Hongson, LL.D. Oxford, 1785, 4to.

In this work the literal meaning only of Solomon's Song is illustrated, there being not the slightest allusion to its mystical meaning. An account of it, with extracts, may be seen in the Monthly Review (O. S.), vol. lxxvi. pp. 26—29.

154*. The Song of Songs, which is Solomon's. A new Translation, with a Commentary and Notes. By Thomas WILLIAMS. London, 1801, 8vo.

This version is as literal as our language will admit, and is rendered in conformity with the authorized translation whenever it was practicable. The notes are for the most part judiciously selected from the labours of all preceding commentators, and give a sober but practical and evangelical exposition of the allegory. Two dissertations are prefixed: 1. On the origin of language, particularly figurative and allegorical language, and on Hebrew po and music: and, 2. On the nature, design, and authority of Solomon's Song. In pp. 100—109. is given an interesting account of nearly 40 expositors and commentators on this book. See a further account of this work in the Monthly Review (N. S.), vol. xlvii.

155*. Song of Songs, or Sacred Idyls. Translated from the original Hebrew, with Notes critical and explanatory. By John Mason Good. London, 1803, 8vo.

"The present work offers two versions of the original; the one in prose, marked with the divisions of the Bible version; the other in couplet verses, of no inferior construction Each idyl is illustrated with notes, in which very various learning is displayed, with much taste in the selection of beautiful parallelisms from a great variety of authors.—So much elegant learning and successful illustration we have seldom seen within so small a compass as the present volume." (British Critic, O. S. vol. xxvi. pp. 454, 455.) See also Monthly Review, N. S. vol. xlvii. pp. 302—312.

156*. Canticles, or Song of Solomon: a new Translation, with Notes, and an attempt to interpret the Sacred Allegories contained in that book. To which is added an Essay on the name and character of the Redeemer. By the Rev. John FRY, A.B. London, 1811, 8vo. 2d edit. 1825, 8vo.

In this publication the author's plan is, first to give an accurate In this publication the author's plan is, his to give an accurate translation of the Song of Solomon, and to show the nature and design of the book. He has availed himself of the labours of previous translators, especially Bishop Percy and Dr. J. M. Good; after the latter of whom he considers the Song of Solomon as a collection of idyls or little poems, which are designed for instruction and edification in the mysteries of our holy religion. Though the translator has taken much pains in consulting other writers, his work bears ample testimony that he has not servilely followed them, but has evidently thought for himself.

157. Cantícum Canticorum illustratum ex Hierographia Orientalium, à J. H. KISTEMAKER. Münster, 1818, 8vo.

158. A Brief Outline of an Examination of the Song of Solomon; in which many beautiful Prophecies contained in that inspired Book of Holy Scripture are considered and explained, tion, and Notes critical, philological, and explanatory. By ceded the latter by more than twenty years. It is highly allegori- | with Remarks critical and expository. By William DAVIDSON. London, 1817, 8vo.

> The author of this work considers the Canticles as an inspired song wholly referring to the spiritual Solomon, or Christ and his true spiritual church, and particularly to their espousals; and as giving a general prophetic outline of her history, from the preaching of John the Baptist, the baptism of our Lord, to the conversion the Jews, and that of the wild Arabians, and their union with the Christian church. And while her particular, often invisible, progressive state here on earth is mentioned, and her duties are progressive state there on earth is mentioned, and her duties are pointed out, her outward state, trials, and persecutions do not pass unnoticed. Mr. Davidson has consulted the previous labours of most of the commentators on this poem; and at the end of his volume he has divided it into hemistichs according to Dr. Kennicott's mode of printing the poetical parts of the Old Testament.

> 159. Canticum Canticorum. Præfatione, Versione Latina, et Commentario exegetico-critico, instruxit M. F. Uhlemann. Lipsiæ, 1821, 8vo.

ON THE PROPHETS, GENERALLY,

160. Henrici Arentii HAMAKER Commentatio in Libellum de Vita et Morte Prophetarum, qui Græce circumfertur: sive Disputatio Historico-Chorographica de Locis, ubi Prophetæ Hebræorum nati et sepulti esse dicuntur. Amstelodami, 1833, 4to.

161. A Summary View and Explanation of the Writings of the Prophets. By John SMITH, D.D. Edinburgh and London, 1787, 12mo.

This work is a judicious abstract of all that is valuable in the writings of Bishop Lowth, Archbishop Newcome, Bishop Newton, and Drs. Kennicott and Blayney: it was originally compiled to accompany a Gaelic version of the Prophets, and was subsequently translated into English by the author himself. The writer of this translated into English by the author himself. The writer of this account was informed many years since by one of the original London publishers (Mr. Kay, of the firm of Elliott and Kay, in the Strand), that Dr. Moore, at that time Archbishop of Canterbury, held this little work in great estimation, and was in the habit of purchasing copies for gratuitous distribution among students and others who could not afford to buy many books.

162. Les Prophètes, nouvellement traduits sur l'Hébreu, avec des Explications et Notes Critiques. [Par le Président AGIER.]

Isaïe. Paris, 1820, 2 tomes, 8vo.

Jérémie, avec une Appendice. Paris, 1821, 2 parties, 8vo. The appendix to this Version of the Predictions of Jeremiah contains the Lamentations, and the Apocryphal book of Barneh.

Ezéchiel. Paris, 1821, 2 tomes, 8vo. Daniel. Paris, 1822, 2 tomes, 8vo.

Petits Prophètes. Paris, 1822, 2 tomes, 8vo.

163. A Commentary on the Prophecies and the New Testament; with an Epitome of Ancient History, Sacred and Profane, by way of Prelude. Printed with the Text. By John Webb Cole. London, 1826, 2 vols. 8vo.

164. A New Translation of the Hebrew Prophets, arranged in Chronological Order. By George R. Noves. Vol. I. containing Joel, Amos, Hosea, Isaiah, and Micah. Boston [Massachusetts], 1833, 8vo.

Mr. Noyes has here followed the same judicious plan which he adopted in his new Translation of the Psalms (see No. 117. p. 120. of this Appendix). He has diligently availed himself of all the best critical aids. The volume is terminated by thirty-six pages best critical aids. The volume is terminated by thirty-six pages of concise but useful explanatory notes. Mr. N. expects to complete his undertaking in two more volumes.

165. A Commentary on the Prophet Isaiah, wherein the Literal Sense of his Prophecies is briefly explained. By Samuel WHITE. London, 1709, 4to.

166. Campegii VITRINGÆ Commentarius in Librum Prophetiarum Jesaiæ. Leovardiæ, 1714, and 1720, 2 vols. folio.

In this most elaborate Commentary on the "Evangelical Prophet," to which all subsequent expositors have been deeply indebted, the to which all subsequent expositors have been deeply indebted, the literal sense is carefully investigated; the different interpretations of the prophetic visions are examined; and the interpretation which Vitringa has deduced from them is confirmed and illustrated by historical documents. Copious prolegomena are prefixed, treating of the prophet's personal history, the argument of his prophecy, his style, time of writing, and canonical authority. The value of the work is further augmented by the geographical and historical notices interspersed throughout, concerning the Babylonians, Philistines, Moabites, Syrians of Damascus, Egyptians, Tyrians, and other Gentile nations; by which not only Isaiah, but also very many other passages of Scripture, are admirably elucidated.

167 Isaiah: a New Translation with a preliminary Disserta-

Robert Lowth, D.D., Bishop of London, 4to. London, 1778, 2 vols. 8vo.

Of this subline and admirably executed version, a German translation was published by M. Koppe, at Gottingen, 1779—1781, in 4 vols, 8vo. The preliminary dissertation is invaluable for the light it throws on the genius and structure of prophetic possy. The merits of this work are ably appreciated in the Bruish Critic, O. S. vol. xxix, pp. 144-146., and the integrity of the Rebrew text was asserted against some of the bishop's corrections in a tract that is now of rare occurrence, by Koecher in his Vindicia Sacri Textus Hebrai Esaia adversus Lowthii Criticam, 8vo. Bern, 1786, reprinted at Tubingen in 1790. The rarity of Koecher's book, however, is no great loss to the student; for the late emment learned orientalist, the professor Henry Albert Schultens (of Leyden), speaking of his book, says :- "It violates the bounds of moderation and decency by the assertion that the text of Isaiah would not gain any thing by Dr. Lowth's conjectures. I am of a very different opinion. When in Oxford and London, I was intimately acquainted with Bishop Lowth, and had an opportunity of knowing his excellent disposition; and am therefore much vexed that Koecherus, from his fiery zeal against innovations, should have been induced to treat him with severity, as if the bishop had been a rash and petulant critic." (Letter of Professor Schultens to the late Dr. Finlay of Glasgow, cited in the Monthly Review, N.S. vol. xv. p. 504.) Bishop Lowth's version was attacked by the late Mr. Dodson, in his supplementary notes to his "New Translation of Isaiah" (8vo. London, 1790), with considerable asperity. The bishop was ably vindicated by the Rev. Dr. Sturges, in "Short Remarks on a New Translation of Issiah" (8vo. London, 1790): to these Mr. Dodson replied in 1791, in a "Letter to the Rev. Dr. Sturges," in which he justifies the freedom with which he had censured Bishop Lowth's mistakes and defects. Mr. D.'s version and notes were framed in support of modern Sociman tenets, and were published by the (Sociman) "Society for promoting the Knowledge of the Scriptures." Some further "Remarks on the Principles adopted by Bishop Lowth in correcting the Text of the Hebrew Bible" were published by the were published by the Rev. J. Rogers, M.A. at Oxford, in 1832, 12mo.

168. Esaias ex Recensione Textus Hebrei, ad fidem quorundam Codd. MSS. et Verss. Latine, vertit, Notasque varii argumenti subjecit, J. C. Doederlein. Norimberge, 1789, 3d edition, 8vo.

The first edition was published at Altdorf, in 8vo. 1780; the critical Notes are excellent.

169. The Book of the Prophet Isaiah, in Hebrew and English. The Hebrew Text metrically arranged; the Translation altered from that of Bishop Lowth. By the Right Rev. Joseph Sτοcκ, D.D., Bishop of Killala. 1804, 4to.

"The right reverend translator had conceived a wish to see the original language of Isaiah reduced to a metrical arrangement, and to have this accompanied with the version of Bishop Lowth, reserving to himself the liberty of adding such corrections as later critics, or his own investigations, might supply. These corrections multiplied to such a degree as to assume almost the form of a new version. There is also a variety of notes, critical and explanatory, supplied partly by the translator, and partly by others. Many of these are very valuable for their uncommon depth and acuteness, and tend to elucidate, in a high degree, the subject matter of these prophecies." (British Critic, vol. xxviii. O. S. p. 466.) "Bishop Stock's version is by no means to be considered as an attempt to rival or to supersede that of Dr. Lowth. Both versions exhibit a close, nervous, and manly style. That of Dr. Lowth may by every class of readers be perused with profit. Superadded to this, Dr. Stock invites the Hebrew scholar to investigate and to compare, by the Hebrew and the English meeting the eye in the same page; and may tempt even the careless to know something of that language in which the oracles of God were originally conveyed." (British Critic, O. S. vol. xxix. p. 146. See also the Monthly Review, N. S. vol. xxix. p. 253—265.)

170. The Book of the Prophet Isaiah. Translated from the Hebrew Text of Vander Hooght. By the Rev. John Jones, M.A. Oxford and London, 1830, 12mo.

This version is made from the Hebrew text of Vander Hooght's edition of the Bible, which may now be regarded as the received Hebrew text. In the elucidation of obscurities, the translator has diligently compared the versions and illustrations of Schmidt, De Dieu, Vitringa, Bishops Lowth and Stock, Dathe, Rosenmüller, Gesenius, and others; and he states that he is indebted to the late distinguished orientalist, the Rev. Dr. Nicoll, for his kind and able assistance. No notes or criticisms accompany this translation. "On the whole, we consider it to be a valuable specimen of translation. The language of our authorized version is retained, where no change was absolutely required; the style is spirited and fluent throughout, and numerous passages, which have either been misconceived, or badly expressed, by former translations, are here presented to the view in harmony with the circumstances of the connection in which they occur, and adapted to easy and general comprehension. Comparing the two versions together" (the present and that of Mr. Jenour) "we consider that of Mr. Jones to be decidedly the better on the whole; but are nevertheless of opinion that Mr. Jenour generally gives the meaning of the original with fidelity and success." (Congregational Magazine, vol. xiv. p. 357.)

171. The Book of the Prophet Isaiah, translated from the Hebrew, with Critical and Practical Remarks: to which is prefixed a Preliminary Dissertation on the Nature and Use of Prophecy. By the Rev. Alfred Jenoun. London, 1831, 2 vols. 8vo.

The object of Mr. Jenour is to render the predictions of Isaiah more generally interesting than they ordinarily prove to the English reader. With this view he has endeavoured to combine the advantages of a critical and devotional commentary together with a new version and a metrical arrangement. His work is divided into sections, to each of which is prefixed a summary of its contents; then follow the version and explanatory notes, the practical remarks and the critical notes. Occasionally the sections are divided into interlocutory parts. "What constitutes the most valuable part of the work, are the explanatory and practical remarks with which each section is accompanied..... While the author throws light on numerous passages of this ancient book, which relate to people and places that have long since vanished from the theatre of human affairs, he brings forward much important matter, calculated to rouse the conscience, and to purify, console, and strengthen the heart." (Congregational Magazine, June, 1831, vol. xiv. p. 355.) "We cordially recommend the work to all of our read ers who may wish to possess the inspired productions of the greatest of the ancient prophets, excellently translated, and accompanied with a judicious and instructive commentary." (Eclectic Review, November, 1831, p. 421.)

172. Prophéties d'Isa'e, traduites en Français, avec des Notes. [Par M. Paunelle de Lière.] Paris, 1823, 8vo.

173. Caroli Ludovici Hohetselli Observationes Philologico-Exegetice: quibus nonnulla formatz Esaje loca, ex indole lingua sancta, ex accentuatione Ebraeorum, et antiquitatibus, illustrantur et exponuntur, aliorumque versiones et interpretationes modeste examinantur. Gedani, 1729, 8vo.

174. A Commentary on the Fifty-third Chapter of Isaiah, By S. HARRIS, D.D. London, 1739, 4to.

175. Animadversiones Philologico-Criticæ in Loca difficiliora Jesaiæ; quibus præstantissimorum Interpretum Sententias exponit, suam novamque proponit Josephus Fridericus Schelling. Lipsiæ [1797], 8vo.

176. Critical Disquisitions on the Eighteenth Chapter of Isaiah, in a Letter to Edward King, Esq., F.R.S. A.S. By Samuel [Horsley], Lord Bishop of Rochester, F.R.S. A.S. London, 1801, 4to.

177. N. G. Schnoedert Commentarius Philologico-Criticus de Vestitu Mulierum Hebrearum, ad Jesai. III. v. 16—24., quo vocabulorum abstrusiorum tenebras, ad facem dialectorum, discutere conatus est. Lug. Bat.1 745, 4to.

178. Everhardi Scheldi Dissertatio Philologico-Exegetica ad Canticum Hiskiæ, Jes. xxxvii. 9-20. Lug. Bat. 1769, 8vo.

JEREMIAH, AND LAMENTATIONS.

179. A Translation of the Lamentations of Jeremiah, accompanied by short notes, is given in the second tome or part of the works of Mr. Hugh BROUGHTON, pp. 317—323, folio.

180. Hermanni Venema Commentarius ad Librum Prophetiarum Jeremiæ. Quo Conciones rite distinguuntur; Scopus, Nexus, et Series Sermonis accurate investigatur; perpetua Paraphrasi exponitur; et selectis Observatis Voces ac Phrases illustrantur, ac Implementi demonstratione, ubi opus fuerit, confirmantur. Leovardiæ, 1765, 2 parts, 4to.

181. Jeremiah, and Lamentations: a new translation, with Notes, critical, philological, and explanatory. By Benjamin BLAYNEY, D.D. Oxford, 1784, 4to. Edinburgh, 1810, 8vo.

This work is executed on the same plan as Bishop Lowth's version of Isaiah; "and, though not with equal success, yet with much credit to the author, both as a translator and a critic. His subject is not of equal eminence with that which was undertaken by the bishop. It has less variety in the matter, and contains a less fund for curious inquiry and critical illustration. The translation is very exact, and preserves the tone and majesty of sacred writing. The notes are very copious. Many of them are very useful, and some discover much critical knowledge in the Hebrew language and a good acquaintance with ancient history. The various readings are noticed with the most scrupulous exactness: conjectural emendation is sometimes hazarded, but not rashly or njudiciously." (Monthly Review, O. S. vol. Ixxi pp. 162, 163.) Besides a valuable preliminary discourse, there is an appendix, comprising a selection from Archbishop Secker's manuscript notes (now deposited in the archiepiscopal library at Lambeth), relative to the prophecy and lamentations of Jeremiah.

182. J. D. MICHAELIS Observationes Philologicæ et Criticæ in Jeremiæ Vaticinia et Threnos. Edidit, multisque animadversionibus auxit, Joh. Frid. Schleusner. Gottingen, 1793. 4to.

These observations were collected from the loose papers of that late eminent scholar, J. D. Michaelis, by Professor Schleusner, with many additional remarks by the latter. M. Schleusner, in the same year published, at Tubingen, in 4to. Dissertationes Tres, quæ continent Observationes ad Vaticinia Jeremiæ.

183. Jeremias Vates, è Versione Judæorum Alexandrinorum, ac reliquorum Interpretum Græcorum emendatus, Notisque criticis illustratus à G. L. Spohn. Vol. I. Lipsiæ, 1794. Vol. II. Lipsiæ, 1823. 8vo.

A continuation of the first volume of these illustrations of Jeremiah is given in Pou's and Ruperu's Sylloge Commentationum Theologicarum. These are enlarged and completed in the second volume, which was published, after the author's death, by his son, F. A. W. Spohn.

184. Jérémie, traduit sur le Texte Original, accompagné des Notes explicatives, historiques, et critiques. Par Jean-George DAHLER. Strasbourgh, 1825, 8vo.

Professor Dahler has conferred a considerable service on biblical literature by this translation of the predictions of Jeremiah. The historical parts are printed as prose; the poetical parts are in hemistichs, as in the original Hebrew. The introduction and notes are very judicious. Dr. D. announces a second volume (in the event of this first volume being favourably received), which will be particularly designed for ministers of the Gospel, and those who are studying for the sacred office.

185. Commentarii in aliquot Jeremiæ Loca. Auctore T. ROORDA. Groningæ, 1825, 8vo.

186. Threni Jeremiæ philologice et critice illustrati à Joh. Henr. Pareau. Lugd. Bat. 1793, 8vo.

187. Threnos Jeremiæ et Vaticinium Nahumi metrice reddidit, Notisque Philologicis illustravit, C. A. Bionn. Hauniæ, 1814, 8vo.

187*. Curæ Exegetico-Criticæ in Jeremiæ Threnos; auctore Fr. Erdmann. Rostochii, 1819. 8vo.

EZEKIEL.

188. Hieronymi Pradi et Jo. Baptistæ Villalpandi in Ezechielem Explanationes, et Apparatus Urbis ac Templi Hierosolymit. Commentariis illustratus. Romæ, 1596—1603, 3 vols. folio.

This is a work of extreme rarity, and the best commentary on the prophet Ezekiel that ever was written. An extract of Villalpandi's comment on Ezekiel, c. xlii. xli. xl. and xlvi., illustrating the prophetic vision of the temple, is to be found in the first volume of Bishop Walton's edition of the Polyglott Bible. Mr. Lowth made great use of this work in his learned commentary on Ezekiel.

189. An Exposition of the Prophecy of Ezekiel. By George GREENHILL. London, 1645, and following years, 5 vols. 4to.

This work is seldom to be found complete; the fifth volume is particularly scarce. A second edition of vol. i. appeared in 1649. The author was one of the Westminster Assembly of Divines; and his exposition was originally delivered in lectures to his congregation. "Like all the productions of the Puritans, it is evangelical, and stored with the knowledge of the Scriptures; but, like most of them, it is distinguished by its sound doctrinal and practical views, rather than by the elegance of the composition, or the critical acumen of the reasonings and illustrations." (Orme's Biblioth. Bibl. p. 217.)

190. Scholæ Propheticæ, ex Prælectionibus Georgii Callati in Jesaiam, Jeremiam, et Ezechielem, collectæ. Quedlinburgi, 1715, 4to.

191. J. Fr. STARCKII Commentarii in Ezechielem. Francofurti ad Mænum, 1731, 4to.

192. Hermanni Venema Lectiones Academicæ ad Ezechielem. Edidit et præfatus est Johannes Henricus Verschuir. Leovardiæ, 1790, 2 parts, 4to.

193. An Attempt towards an Improved Version, a Metrical Arrangement, and an Explanation of the Prophet Ezekiel. By William Newcome, D.D. (Bishop of Waterford, afterwards Archbishop of Armagh). Dublin, 1788, 4to.

Archbishop of Armagh). Dublil, 1708, 240.

This work is executed on the same plan as the version of the minor prophets noticed in p. 125. "The numerous admirers of that valuable production will find not less to commend in the present work. They will observe with pleasure, that the right reverend author not only pursues the path which he had before so wisely chosen, but that, instead of treading only the smoothest and most flowery parts of it, he surmounts, with a firm, though cautious step, difficulties which the boldest traveller might shun without disgrace. Instead of lavishing most explanation on what is most intelligible, and betraying the pride of erudition where erudition is least necessary, he successfully employs his solid judgment and effectual learning in the elucidation of a writer who has been called the Æschylus of Hebrew poetry." (Monthly Review, N. S. vol. iv. p. 1.)

DANIEL.

194. Rolloci (Roberti) Commentarius in Librum Danielis Prophetæ. Edinburgi, 1591, 4to.

195. Hexapla, or a Sixfold Commentary on Daniel. By Andrew Willer. Cambridge, 1610, folio.

This "is a work of much information, as it contains the opinions of many authors on each point of difficulty." The same "author has written comments on Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Samuel, Romans, Jude, and some detached parts of books; but in none does he discover more skill and judgment than in the present work." (Dr. William's Christian Preacher, p. 431.)

196. A Translation of the Book of Daniel, with a Commentary in English and in Latin, is in the first tome or part of the learned but eccentric Hugh BROUGHTON'S Works, pp. 164—337.

197. Martini Geieri Prælectiones Academicæ in Danielem Prophetam. Leipsic, 1702, 4to, best edition.

One of the most valuable of all Geier's expository works.

198. Prodromus Danielicus, sive Novi Conatus Historici, Critici, in celeberrimas difficultates Historiæ Veteris Testamenti, Monarchiarum Asiæ, &c. ac præcipuè in Danielem Prophetam. Auctore Gerardo Kerkherdere. Lovanii, 1710, 8vo.

199. Observations upon the Prophecies of Daniel, and the Apocalypse of St. John. By Sir Isaac Newton. London, 1733, 4to.

A Latin version of this well-known and elaborate work was published by M. Sudemann, in 4to., at Amsterdam, 1737. All subsequent commentators are largely indebted to the labours of Sir Isaac Newton.

200. Hermanni Venemæ Dissertationes ad Vaticinia Danielis Cap. 11. v11. et v111. Leovardiæ, 1745, 4to.—Ejusdem, Commentarius ad Danielis Cap. x1. 4.—x11. 3. Leovardiæ, 1752, 4to.

201. Daniel: an Improved Version attempted: with Notes, critical, historical, and explanatory. By Thomas Wintle, B.D. London, 1807, 4to.

A very valuable translation, executed on the same plan as Bishop Lowth's version of Isaiah, and Dr. Blayney's of Jeremiah. In the fourth sermon of his Bampton Lectures (8vo. Oxford, 1795.), Mr. W. has some excellent remarks on the predictions of Haggai, Malachi, and Daniel. See an analysis of this work in the Monthly Review, N. S. vol. x. pp. 245—250.

202. An Essay towards an Interpretation of the Prophecies of Daniel, with occasional remarks upon some of the most celebrated Commentators on them. By Richard Amner. London, 1776, 8vo.

The author adopts the exploded and untenable hypothesis of Grotius (who has been followed by Le Clerc and others), that all the prophecies of Daniel terminated in the persecution of the Jews by Antiochus Epiphanes. This work (which is noticed only to put the unwary reader on his guard against it) was reprinted in 1798, with some other tracts, tending to show that certain passages of Scripture, which clearly announce a future resurrection, relate to nothing more than a mere temporal deliverance! An exposure of some of this author's erroneous notions may be seen in the British Critic, O. S. vol. xiii. pp. 290—295.

203. Observations on the Visions of Daniel, and on part of the Book of the Revelation of St. John. With an appendix [on the Twenty-fourth Chapter of St. Matthew, &c.] By the Rev. William Girdlestone, A.B. Oxford, 1820, 8vo.

204. Hore Prophetice; or Dissertations on the Book of the Prophet Daniel. By Joseph Wilson, A.M. Oundle, 1824, 8vo.

Numerous disquisitions relative to particular prophecies of Daniel have been published, particularly concerning the seventy weeks: the following are the most worthy of note.

205. Adriana Kluit Vaticinium de Messia Duce Primarium, sive Explicatio LXX. Hebdomadum Danielis. Medioburgi, 1744, 8vo.

206. Joannis Davidis Michaelis Epistolæ de LXX. Hebdomadibus Danielis ad D. Joannem Pringle, Baronetum. London, 1773, 8vo.

For an account of these highly curious letters, see the Monthly Review, O. S. vol. xlix. pp. 263-267.

207. A Dissertation, by way of Inquiry, into the true Import and Application of the Vision related Dan. ix. 20. to the end, usually called Daniel's Prophecy of Seventy Weeks, &c. By Benjamin Blayney, B.D. Oxford, 1775, 4to.

Dr. Blayney controverts some points of Professor Michaelis's opinion, which our limits permit us not to notice. The reader will find an account of this learned tract in the Monthly Review, O. S. vol. lii. pp. 487—491.

208. XX. Hebdomadum, quas Gabriel ad Danielem detulerat, Interpretatio, Paraphrasis, Computatio, cum Vocabulorum Difficiliorum Explicatione, &c. Auctore Johanne Urr. Oxonii, 1788 8vo.

209. A Dissertation on Daniel's Prophecy of the Seventy Weeks. By George Stanley Faber, B.D. London, 1811, 8vo.

210. A Dissertation on the Seventy Weeks of Daniel the Prophet. By the Rev. John Stonard, D.D. London, 1826, 8vo.

"The Dissertation is exceedingly elaborate, and for the distribution of the materials of which it is composed, and the order and fitness of the discussion which it includes, is entitled to high praise as the work of a scholar."......" On the whole, we feel bound, both on account of the interest, importance, and difficulties of the subject to which it relates, and of the manner in which it is executed, to recommend it to our theological readers, as highly deserving of their attention." (Eclectic Review, N. S. vol. xxvi. pp. 244. 957)

211. A Dissertation concerning the Chronological Numbers recorded in the Prophecies of Daniel, as compared with those in the Revelation of St. John. By the Rev. Philip Alwood, B.D. London, 1833, 8vo.

COMMENTARIES ON ALL OR MOST OF THE MINOR PROPHETS.

212. Victorini Striggerin Argumenta et Scholia in Duodecim

Prophetas Minores. Lipsiæ, 1561, 8vo.

213. Joannis Mercert Commentarii Locupletissimi in Prophetas Quinque Minores, inter eos qui Minores vocantur. Quibus adjuncti sunt aliorum, etiam et veterum (in quibus sunt Hebræi) et recentium Commentarii. Sine anno et loco.

214. Lamberti Dan Bi Commentarius in Joelem, Amos, Micham, Habacuc, Sophoniam, Haggæum, Zachariam, et Malachiam. Genevæ, 1578, 8vo. Also with commentaries on the other four minor prophets, in 8vo. Geneva, 1586, 1594.

216. Johannis Dausii Commentarius in Prophetas Minores.

Amstelodami, 1627, 4to.

These commentaries were originally published at different times, between the years 1595 and 1627. They are also to be found in the third volume of the Critici Sacri.

217. As Fatidicus, sive Duodecim Prophetæ Minores, Latina Metaphrasi Poetica expositi, partim a Jacobo Augusto Thuano, partim a Cunrado RITTERSHUSIO. Ambergæ, 1604, 8vo.

This is a work of rare occurrence. The younger Rosenmüller pronounces the paraphrases of the celebrated president De Thou, and his coadjutor Rittershusius, to be executed with great elegance. Besides the arguments to the prophecies, and the summaries translated into Latin by Rittershusius from the Greek of Hesychius, a presbyter of the church of Jerusalem, this volume contains, 1. Three Latin paraphrases of the Lamentations of Jeremiah, by De Thou, Jonchim Camerarius, and Adam Siberus;—2. A poetical paraphrase of the first chapter of Isaiah, by an anonymous French author;—3. A paraphrase of the third chapter of the same prophet, by Henry Meibomius;—4. A poetical paraphrase of chapters xxxvi.—xxxvii. of Isaiah, by John Conrad Rumellins;—5. Daniel preserved among the lions, by Rittershusius;—and, 6. Nine of the Psalms of David translated into Greek hexameters, also by Rittershusius. Rosenmüller has frequently cited this work in his Scholia on the Minor Prophets.

218. A Paraphrastical Explication of the Twelve Minor Prophets. By David Stokes. London, 1659, 8vo.

219. Caroli Mariæ de Veil Expositio Litteralis Duodecim Prophetarum Minorum, ex ipsis Scripturarum fontibus, Ebræorum ritibus et idiomatis, veterum et recentiorum monimentis. Londini, 1680, 8vo.

220. Joannis Tarnovii in Prophetas Minores Commentarius, in quo Textus Analysi perspicua illustratur, ex fonte Hebræo explicatur, locis SS. parallelis confirmatur, à pravis expositionibus vindicatur; usus vero in locis communibus ex ipsa Scriptura natis et probatis indicatur, cum Præfatione Jo. Benedicti Carpzovii. Francofurti et Lipsiæ, 1688, 1706, 4to.

Tarnovius was justly considered as one of the most learned and eminent divines of his day. His commentaries on the several prophets were published at different times in a detached form, and were first collected together by the elder Carpzov.

221. Commentaries on the Prophecies of Hosea, Joel, Micah, and Malachi. By Edward Pococke, D.D.

These learned commentaries were published at several times between the years 1667 and 1691. They are also extant in the collective edition of his "Theological Works," published by Dr. Twells, in 2 vols. folio. London, 1740.

222. Joannis Marckii Commentarius in Prophetas Minores, seu Analysis Exegetica, quâ Hebræus Textus cum Versionibus veteribus confertur, vocum et phrasium vis indagatur, rerum nexus monstratur; et in sensum genuinum, cum examine variarum interpretationum, inquiritur. Amstelodami, 1696—1701 4 vols. 4to.

These commentaries are much esteemed: they were reprinted in 1734, at Tubingen, in two folio volumes, under the care of Professor Pfaff, who prefixed an account of the life and writings of Marckius.

223. Phil. Davidis Burkii Gnomon in Duodecim Prophetas Minores, in quo, ex nativa verborum vi, simplicitas, profunditas, concinnitas, salubritas sensuum cœlestium indicatur. Heilbron, 1753, 4to.

The remark already offered on Burkius's Gnomon Psalmorum (p. 120. supra) is equally applicable to his work on the minor prophets.

224. Vaticinia Chabacuci et Nachumi, itemque nonnulla Jesaiæ, Micheæ, et Ezechielis Oracula, observationibus historico-philologicis ex historia Diodori Siculi circa res Sardanapali illustrata. Auctore R. T. Gottlieb Kalinsky. Vratislaviæ, 1748, 4to.

A work of rare occurrence in this country: it is in the list of biblical treatises recommended to students by the late Bishop of Llandaff (Dr. Watson).

225. An Attempt towards an Improved Version, a Metrical Arrangement, and an Explanation of the Twelve Minor Prophets. By W. Newcome, D.D., Bishop of Waterford. London, 1785, 4to. Pontefract, 1809, 8vo.

"The notes are copious and pertinent, untainted by an ostentatious display of erudition, and abounding with such illustrations of eastern manners and customs as are best collected from modern travellers. As a commentator, the learned prelate has shown an intimate acquaintance with the best critics, ancient and modern. His own observations are learned and ingenious. It is, moreover, not the least merit of his criticisms, that they are continually enlivened by the introduction of classical quotations—an expedient by which the teadium of grammatical disquisition is happily relieved, the taste of the commentator displayed, and the text, in some instances, more successfully explained, than in diffuse and laborious modes of instruction." (Monthly Review, O. S. vol. lxxvi. p. 58.)—The 8vo. edition above noticed is a reprint of the 4to. edition, enriched with the addition of the most important of Bishop Horsley's criticisms on Hosea, and those of Dr. Blayney on Zechariah. It is neatly printed, and of easy purchase, but there are numerous errata in the Hebrew words.

226. Prophetæ Minores perpetua annotatione illustrati à Dre. Petro Fouerio Ackermann. Viennæ, 1830, 8vo.

A valuable commentary on the Minor Prophets. The author, who does not lay claim to much originality, offers it as a compilation from the works of preceding commentators, which are not accessible to every one: and he especially cites the more ancient expositors, for the purpose of showing that they were not quite so ignorant of the principles of Hermeneutics as some modern critics affect to suppose. Dr. Ackermann has made considerable use of the cognate dialects, for the more difficult forms of Hebrew words, as well as of the Septuagint Greek, and the Latin Vulgate versions, and the best modern commentators. He has further added his own philological observations, where they appeared to be necessary. Critical discussions respecting the authors, genuineness, and canonical authority, of the several books are designedly omitted; as Dr. Ackermann refers, for these topics, to his "Introductio ad Libros Canonicos Veteris Fæderis," of which a notice has been given in p. 171. supra.

227. A Literal Translation from the Hebrew of the Twelve Minor Prophets; with some Notes from Jonathan's Paraphrase in the Chaldee, and Critical Remarks from R. S. Yarchi, Abenezra, D. Kimchi, and Abarbenel. By A. Pick. London, 1833, 8vo.

The author of this version is a Jew, who, many years since, embraced the faith of the Gospel, from the full conviction that the Lord Jesus is indeed "THE Messiah, the Son of the living God." The design of his version is, not to supersede our venerable authorized translation, but to act as an assistant to it, by directing the reader to the plain grammatical sense of the original; in order that he may be enabled to enter more simply into the mind of the Spirit, unshackled by the views of men. The notes are strictly grammatical and explanatory.

228. Observationes Philologicæ atque Criticæ ad quædam Prophetarum Minorum Loca, subjuncta vernacula Chabacuci Interpretatione. Auctore J. Ch. Darl. Neo-Strelitiæ (New Strelitz), 1798, 8vo.

HOSEA

229. An Exposition, with practical Observations, on the Prophecy of Hosea; first delivered in several Lectures at St. Michael's, Cornhill. By Jeremiah Burroughes. London, 1643—1650, Svo.

230. The Prophecies of Hosea, translated, with a Commentary and Notes. By James NEALE, A.M. London, 1771, 8vo.

231. Samuelis Henrici MANGERI Commentarius in Librum Propheticum Hoseæ. Campis, 1782, 4to.

232. Hoseæ Oracula, Hebraice et Latine, perpetua annotatione illustravit Ch. Fr. KUINÖEL. Lipsiæ, 1792, 8vo.

Prof. Kuinöel has applied Heyne's mode of illustrating Virgil to be elucidation of the prophecy of Hosea. The text rarely varies the elucidation of the prophecy of Hosea. from the Masora.

233. Hosea: translated from the Hebrew, with Notes explanatory and critical. By Samuel Horsley, Bishop of Saint Asaph. 2d edition. London, 1804, 4to.

This edition contains additional notes and corrections: the first edition appeared in 1801; the preface contains a treasure of biblical criticism. "This translation, with its notes, forms a most valuable accession to sacred learning; and evinces at once the best qualities of the scholar and the divine, supported by sagacity and a powerful judgment." (British Critic, O. S. vol. xix. p. 176.) A new edition of this valuable work, with the learned author's last corrections and alterations, forms part of the third and fourth volumes of his "Biblical Criticism," which is noticed infra.

234. Hoseas Propheta. Introductionem præmisit, vertit, commentatus est Joannes Christianus Stuck. Lipsiæ, 1828, 8vo.

A valuable help to the study of the writings of Hosea. troduction contains a history of the prophet, and of the time when he lived; disquisitions on the genius and argument of his prophecy, and on some particular portions of it; philological observations on the prophet's style, and the history of his predictions, which are divided by Dr. Stuck into nineteen sections. He professes to have consulted the labours of preceding commentators and critics, especially Eichhorn, Kuinöel, Boeckhel, Rosenmiiller, Gesenius, and Dr. Wette.

JOEL.

235. A Paraphrase and Commentary on the Prophecy of Joel. By Samuel CHANDLER. London, 1735, 4to.

236. Joel, Latine versus, et notis philologicis illustratus, ab A. Syanbone, Lingg. OO. Professoris in Academia Upsaliensi. Upsal. 1806, 4to.

AMOS.

237. Amos Propheta, expositus, interpretatione nova Latina instructus, amplissimo commentario ex theologia Ebræa ac Israelitica illustratus, cum quatuor appendicibus. Cura et studio J. Ch. HARENBERGII. Lugd. Bat. 1763, 4to.

238. Oracula Amosi. Textum, et Hebraicum, et Græcum Versionis Alexandrinæ, notis criticis et exegeticis instruxit, adjunctaque versione vernacula [i. e. Germanica] edidit Joannes Severinus VATER. Halæ, 1810, 4to.

239. Disputatio Academica de Amoso. Quam....publico examini submittit Theodorus Gulielmus Johannes Junnboll. Lugduni Batavorum, 1828, 4to.

240. Aug. PFEIFFERI Prælectiones in Prophetiam Jonæ, recognitæ et in justum commentarium redactæ, quibus emphases vocum eruuntur, verus sacræ Scripturæ sensus exponitur, sententiæ variæ et Judæorum et Christianorum adducuntur, falsæ refelluntur, et quæstiones dubiæ resolvuntur. Wittebergæ, 1671, 1706; Lipsiæ, 1686, 4to.

This commentary is also extant in the collective edition of Pfeiffer's works, printed at Utrecht, in two volumes, 4to. in 1704. See tom. ii. pp. 1131—1165.

241. Jonah: a faithful translation from the original, with philological and explanatory Notes; to which is prefixed a preliminary discourse, proving the genuineness, the authenticity, and the integrity of the present text. By George Benjoin. Cambridge, 1796, 4to.

Literally good for nothing.—In proof of this remark, see the British Critic, vol. x. O. S. pp. 493—506. 622—636.

242. Johannis Tannovii in Prophetam Micham Commentarius. Rostochii, 1632, 4to.

NAHUM AND HABAKKUK.

243. Adami Wildi Meditationes Sacræ in Prophetam Nahum. Francofurti, 1712, 4to.

A learned and elaborate work, which contributes greatly to the elucidation of the prophet Nahum. (Walchius.)

264. Symbolæ Criticæ ad Interpretationem Vaticiniorum Ha-Auctore Henr. Car. Alex. HAENLEIN. Erlang, bacuci, etc. 1795, 8vo.

245. Chabacuci Vaticinium Commentario Critico atque Exegetico illustratum. Edidit B. P. Kofon. Göttingæ, 1792, 8vo.

246. Prolusio ad Interpretationem tertii capitis Habacuci, Auctore Joanne Gustavo STICKEL. Neostadii, 1828, 8vo.

HAGGAL.

247. Haggeus, the Prophet; whereunto is added a most plentiful Commentary, gathered out of the Publique Lectures of Dr. J. J. Gryneus, faithfully translated by Christopher Feather-STONE. London, 1586, 12mo.

248. An Exposition upon the Prophet Aggeus. By James PILKINGTON, Master of St. John's College, Cambridge. London, 1560, 8vo.

ZEPHANIAH.

249. Spicilegium Observationum Exegetico-criticarum ad Zephaniæ Vaticinia. Auctore Dan. à Coelin. Breslau, 1818, 4to.

250, Hermanni Venema Sermones Academici, vice Commentarii ad Librum Prophetiarum Zachariæ. Leovardiæ, 1787, ZECHARIAH.

251. Zechariah: a New Translation, with Notes, critical, philological, and explanatory, etc. By Benjamin BLAYNEY, D.D., Regius Professor of Hebrew. London, 1797, 4to.

This work is executed on the same plan as the author's version of eremiah, already noticed in p. 123. supra. "We think it our duty to Jeremiah, already noticed in p. 123. supra. "We think it our duty to say that Dr. Blayney has produced a valuable illustration of Zechariah, and afforded great assistance to the biblical student." (British Critic, O. S. vol. xiii. p. 655.) See also the Monthly Review, N. S. vol. xxviii. pp. 26—28.

252. F. B. Koester Meletemata Critica et Exegetica in Zachariæ Prophetæ partem posteriorem, cap. ix.-xiv. pro tuenda ejus authentia. Gottingæ, 1818, 8vo.

253. A Commentary on the Vision of Zachariah the Prophet, with a corrected Translation, and Critical Notes. By John Sto-NARD, D.D. London, 1824, 8vo.

"The specimens we have given will sufficiently recommend the volume to the perusal of our readers, as highly deserving of their most careful perusal, and as entitling the learned author to the cordial thanks of every biblical student." (Eelectic Review, N. S. vol. xxiii. p. 416. See also the Quarterly Theological Review, vol. i. pp. 329—347.)

254. An Amicable Controversy with a Jewish Rabbi on the Messiah's Coming. With a New Exposition of Zechariah on the Messiah's Kingdom. By J. R. Park, M.D. London, 1832, 8vo.

MALACHI.

255. A Commentary upon the whole Prophesye of Malachy. By Richard Stock. London, 1641, folio.

This work was recommended by Bishop Wilkins as the best ex tant in his day on the prophet Malachi.

256. A Brief and Plain Commentary, with Notes not more useful than seasonable, upon the whole Prophecie of Malachy; delivered sermonwise divers years since at Pitminster in Summerset. By William Sclater, D.D. London, 1650, 4to. 257. Salomonis Van Til Malachias Illustratus. Lugd. Bat.

258. Hermanni VENEMA Commentarius ad Librum Elenchtico-Propheticum Malachiæ; quo variis simul aliis Scripturæ Sacræ locis nova lux infunditur. Leovardiæ, 1759, 4to.

259. C. F. BAHRDT Commentarius in Malachiam, cum Examine Critico Versionum Veterum, et Lectionum Variarum Houbigantii. Accedit Specimen Bibliorum Polyglottorum. Lipsiæ, 1768, 8vo.

§ 5. COMMENTATORS ON THE APOCRYPHAL BOOKS OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

1. A Critical Commentary on such Books of the Apocrypha as are appointed to be read in Churches: viz. Wisdom, Eccle-Tobit, Judith, Baruch, History of Susannah, and Bel siasticus, and the Dragon. With two Dissertations on the Books of Maccabees and Esdras. By Richard Arnald, B.D. Second edition, corrected. London, 1760, folio; also various editions in 4to.

This valuable Commentary on the Apocryphal Books originally appeared at different times: it is frequently bound up with the Commentaries of Patrick, Lowth, and Whitby on the Canonical Books of Scripture, and is deservedly held in high estimation.

2. Jo. Phil. BAUERMEISTERI Commentarius in Sapientiam Salomonis, Librum Veteris Testamenti Apocryphum. Gettingæ,

 Some Commentaries, annexed to critical editions of particular Apocryphal Books, will be found in p. 163. of this Appendix.

- § 6. PRINCIPAL COMMENTATORS ON THE NEW TESTAMENT, AND ON DETACHED BOOKS THEREOF.
 - [i.] Commentators on the entire New Testament.
- 1. Laurentii Valtæ Annotationes in Novum Testamentum, ex diversorum utriusque linguæ, Græcæ et Latinæ, codicum collatione. Parisiis, 1505, 8vo.

Valla held a distinguished rank among the revivers of literature, and was one of the first who considered the sense of the New Testament as a critic rather than as a divine; whence he was led to make many corrections in the Latin Vulgate translation. His annotations were first edited by Erasmus: they are also to be found in the Critici Sacri.

2. Desiderii Erasmı Paraphrasis in Novum Testamentum. Basilez, 1524, folio.

"Not inferior to any of the old commentators in sensible and ingenious remarks." (Dr. Harwood.) An edition of Erasmus's Paraphrase was printed at Berlin, 1777-1780, in 3 vols. 8vo. Erasmus was also author of a Latin version of the New Testament, which, together with his annotations, is printed in the sixth volume of Le Clerc's edition of his works, in 10 vols. folio. Leyden, 1703. The notes are chiefly grammatical, and designed to excite his contemporaries to the study of the New Testament in the original Greek.

3. Augustini Marlorati Novi Testamenti Catholica Expositio Ecclesiastica: sive Bibliotheca Expositionum Novi Testamenti, id est, Expositio ex probatis omnibus Theologis collecta, et in unum corpus singulari artificio conflata, quæ instar bibliothecæ multis expositoribus refertæ esse posset. Apud Henricum Stephanum, 1561, 1564, 1570. Genevæ, 1583, 1585, 1593, 1596, 1620. Heidelbergæ, 1604, folio.

The multiplicity of editions, through which this work passed, attests the high and deserved estimation in which it was formerly held, though it is now but little known. It contains Erasmus's Latin version of the New Testament, together with various expositions, collected from the writings of the fathers of the church as well as from later interpreters, whether of the reformed or Lutheran Communions, with which the author has intermixed his own observations.

4. Υπομινιματα in omnes Libros Novi Testamenti, in quibus et genus sermonis explicatur, et series concionum monstratur, et nativa sententia testimoniis piæ antiquitatis confirmata. Edita a Victorino Streigello. Lipsiæ, 1565, 2 vols. 8vo.

"This is another of the most valuable books of sacred criticism. The observations are neat, and the critical judgment of Victorinus Strigelius is excellent." (Dr. Harwood.)

5. Jesu Christi Domini Nostri Novum Testamentum, cujus Græco contextui respondent interpretationes duæ; una, vetus; altera Theodori Bezæ; cum ejusdem Theod. Bezæ annotationibus. Accessit etiam Joachimi Camerarii in Novum Fedus Commentarius, in quo et Figuræ Sermonis, et Verborum Significatio, et Orationis Sententia, ad illius Fæderis intelligentiam certiorem, tractantur. Cantabrigiæ, 1642, folio.

The best edition of a most valuable work. "Boza is undoubtedly the best critic on the Greek language of any commentator we have. There is no translation that I know of equal to his: and his remarks on Erasmus and the vulgar Latin are wrought up to the utmost degree of exactness. On the whole, it is an invaluable treasure, and deserves to be read with the utmost attention."
(Dr. Doddridge.) The Commentaries of Joachim Camerarius, which form a part of this work, are very useful: in them, the learned author expounds the text in a grammatical and critical manner only, according to the genius of the original languages, and without entering into any disputed points of doctrine. They are a reprint of Camerarius's Notatio figurarum sermonis in libris quaturor evangeliorum, et indicata verborum significatio et orationis sententia, ad illorum scriptorum intelligentiam certiorem. Lipsing, 1572, 2 vols. 4to.

- 6. Lucæ Brugensis Commentarius in Quatuor Jesu Christi Evangelia. Antwerp, 1606, 3 vols. folio.
- "A beautifully printed book, very scarce and valuable." (Dr. Harwood.)
- 7. Joannis Maldonati Commentarii in Quatuor Evangelia. Paris, 1617, folio.
- "A very ingenious commentator, distinguished for his elegant and neat Latinity." (Dr. Harwood.)
- 8. Martini Chemnitii Harmonia Quatuor Evangelistarum. Hamburg. 1704, best edition, folio.

See a notice of this work in p. 159. of this Appendix.

9. Joannis Parcær Commentarii in varios Novi Testamenti Libros. Londini, 1660, folio.

These notes are inserted in the fifth volume of the Critici Sacri: they are greatly valued as containing "many valuable observations, particularly illustrating the modes of diction which occur in the sacred classics, from profane writers." (Dr. Harwood)

Vol. II.—App. 4

10. Joh. Christoph. Wolfir Cure Philologice in Novum Testamentum. Basil, 1741; the best edition, 5 vols. 4to.

This is a very valuable compilation; as "Wolfius does not simply relate the sentiments of others, but frequently animadverts upon them with great critical discernment." (Dr. Williams.) A continuation of this work was published by John Christopher Koecher, entitled "Analecta Philologica et Exegetica in Quatuor Evangelia." Altenburg, 1766, 4to.

11. Le Nouveau Testament de N. S. Jésus Christ, traduit en François, sur l'Original Gree, avec des notes littérales, pour éclaireir le texte: par Messieurs de Beausobre et l'Enfant. Amst. 1741, best edition, 4to.

To complete this excellent work, there should be added, "Remarques historiques, critiques, et philologiques sur le Nouveau Testament, par M. Beausobre, 4to à la Haye, 1742." Though a post-humous work, it is very valuable, and contains many judicious observations briefly expressed, but which nevertheless comprise the substance of remarks offered by the best interpreters. An English translation of St. Matthew's Gospel from this French version, was printed in 4to. several years since, which was republished in 8vo. London, 1816.

12. Novum Testamentum Græcum editionis receptæ cum Lectionibus variantibus Codicum manuscriptorum, Editionum aliarum, Versionum, et Patrum, necnon commentario pleniore ex Scriptoribus veteribus Hebræis, Græcis, et Latinis, historiam et vim verborum illustrante. Opera et studio Joan. Jacobi Wetstenii. Amstelædami, 1751, 1752, 2 vols. folio. Editio altera, aucta et emendata, curante J. A. Lotze. Tom. i. Quatuor Evangelia complectens. Roterodami, 1832, large quarto.

The critical merits of these editions of the New Testament are considered in p. 12. of this Appendix. As a merely critical comment, this of Wetstein is unquestionably one of the most valuable: "almost every peculiar form of speech in the sacred text he has illustrated by quotations from Jewish, Greek, and Roman writers." (Dr. A. Clarke.) Almost every modern commentator of note has largely availed himself of the previous labours of Wetstein.

13. Joannis Bengelli Gn. mon Novi Testamenti, in quo, ex nativà Verborum Vi, Simplicitas, Profunditas, Concinnitas, et Salubritas sensuum cœlestium, indicatur. Ulmæ, 1763, 4to. best edition.

"This work contains an instructive preface, a perspicuous analysis of each book, with short notes, in the true taste of judicious criticism. His plan is a perfect contrast to that of Wolfius. Simplicem fere veritatem, sine sylva multarum opinionum, propono." (Dr. Williams.) Bengel's Gnomon is a very valuable substitute for the more expensive critical commentaries on the New Testament; he excels in showing the connection and harmony of Scripture, and how Scripture is to be interpreted by Scripture. The generally cheap price of this book greatly enhances its value.

14. 'H KAINH ∆IA⊖HKH. Novum Testamentum Domini nostri Jesu Christi, cum Scholiis theologicis et philologicis. 8vo. 2 vols. Londini, 1768: 2d edit. 1776; 3d edit. 1820.

The editor of this work was the Rev. Mr. HARDY. "It was a very useful companion to every biblical student, and has gone through two editions (the second in 1776), the first of which is the best; but it must be acknowledged that the Greek text in both is inexcusably incorrect." (Dr. Clarke.) The third edition of this work is the most correct: it is beautifully printed. The notes are chiefly extracted from Poole's Synopsis.

15. Christ. Gottfr. KÜTTNERT Hypomnemata in Novum Testamentum, quibus Græcitas ejus explicatur, et Scholiis, quæ ex Scriptis recentiorum quorundam magni nominis philologorum excerpta sunt, illustratur. Lipsiæ, 1780, 8vo.

16. Novum Testamentum Græcè, perpetua Annotatione illustratum. Editio Koppiana. Vols. III.—X. Gottingæ, 1778—1826, 8vo.

G. B. Koppe (from whom this edition derives its distinctive appellation), a man of extensive learning and uncommon critical acumen, in the year 1778, published a plan of a new edition of the New Testament, with a corrected text, short critical notes, and some excursus, or somewhat more extended philological ones on particular passages; and at the same time gave a specimen in the epistles of Paul to the Galatians, Ephesians, and Thessalonians. A second edition of this specimen appeared in 1791, and a third in 1823, corrected and enlarged by Professor T. C. Tychsen, which in the title-page is called Vol. VI. of the projected work. Koppe lived only to add another volume, numbered IV., on the epistle to the Romans, which was published in 1783. A third edition of this volume, with additional notes and philological excursus, by Dr. C. F. Ammon, appeared in 1825. Since the year 1783, at very irregular intervals, L. H. Heinrichs has published Vol. III. in two parts, containing the Acts of the Apostles (which is more particularly noticed in p. 134. infra), in 1809: Vol. VII. in two parts, 1792, containing the epistles to the Colossians, Philippians, Timothy, Titus, and Philemon; Vol. VIII., containing the epistle to the Hebrews, by Heinrichs, who published a second edition of it in 1823, and the Apocalypse in two parts, forming Vol. X., 1821. Of the Catholic Epistles, which are to form Vol. IX., D. J. Pott has published two fasciculi, the first containing the epistle of James, and the second containing the two epistles of Peter. The third fasciculus, which is to contain the epistles of John and Jude, has not yet appeared. In 1826, Potr published the first part of Vol. V., which is to comprise the two epistles to the Corinthians. Vols. I. and II., containing the four Gospels, are undertaken by persons, whom Heinrichs declares to be every way competent to the task. The plan of this work appears to be excellent. There is, first of all, at the head of the page, a corrected text, agreeing for the most part with that of Griesbach's edition, with a punctuation enmost part with that of Griesbach's edition, with a punctuation entirely new, and divided into paragraphs according to the sense, while the ordinary notation of chapters and verses is given in the margin. Then follow brief notes, strictly critical, assigning the reasons for the variations from the textus receptus; and below these, at the bottom of the page, there are notes of a philological nature, of considerable extent. These notes are precisely of the kind which are to be found in the best critical editions of the classics. Their sole object is to enable the reader distinctly and accurately to apprehend the meaning of the original writers. To illustrate a bhrase prehend the meaning of the original writers. To illustrate a phrase of doubtful meaning, first of all are brought forward the passages where the writer uses the same or a similar mode of expression; then other New Testament writers are appealed to; then the Greek translators of the Old Testament are cited; then the Apocryphal writers; and also Josephus and Philo; and, last of all, the classical authors are referred to. All doctrinal discussions are carefully avoided. To each book are prefixed prolegomena, in which questions relating to their author's authenticity, &c. are discussed: and to each book also are subjoined short excursus, or disquisitions, on passages of extraordinary obscurity, or on phrases of frequent occurrence, or which are used in a particular sense by the sacred writers. With regard to the execution of the plan thus detailed:—Koppe's two volumes are by far the best of the series: he is a remarkably cautious critic and judicious interpreter. But the second edition of his commentary on the Epistle to the Romans contains some very exceptionable notes by Professor Ammon: they are, however, carefully distinguished from those of Koppe. Both Heinrichs and Potts are, unhappily, tainted with that lax system of interpretation and excess of philological speculation which are the characteristics of the modern theologians and biblical critics of Germany." (Christian Monitor, vol. ii. pp. 642—644. Edinburgh, 1822, 8vo.)

17. G. F. HEZEL Novi Fæderis Volumina Sacra, Virorum Clarissimorum opera ac studio, è Scriptoribus Græcis, illustrata. Halæ, 1788, 8vo.

This work, which has never been completed, contains the Gospels of Matthew and Mark, cum Notis Variorum, and imbodies the labours of Wetstein, Raphelius, Palairet, Kypke, Alberti, Bos, and

- 18. Conjectures, with short Comments and Illustrations of various Passages in the New Testament, particularly in the Gospel of St. Matthew. To which is added a Specimen of Notes on the Old Testament. By Stephen WESTON, B.D. London, 1795, 4to.
- 19. Selecta e Scholis Lud. Casp. VALCKENARII in Libros quosdam Novi Testamenti, Editore Discipulo E. Van Wassenbergh, qui Dissertationem præmisit de Glossis Novi Testamenti. Amst. 1815-17, 2 vols. 8vo.

Valckenaer was one of the most distinguished critics of the last century. These extracts from his Scholia are wholly philological. To the first volume M. Wassenberg has prefixed a dissertation on those passages which he thinks were originally glosses, written in the margin of manuscripts, but which in the lapse of ages have become incorporated with the text. To the second volume he has also prefixed a Dissertation respecting the Trajections often necessary in the New Testament. Some of these Trajections or transpesitions are arbitrary enough. Bishop Jebb has given a specimen of them, with some just castigatory remarks, in his Sacred Literature, pp. 128-130.

20. H KAINH AIAOHKH. Novum Testamentum, cum Notis Theologicis et Philologicis. Londini, in ædibus typographicis A. J. Valpy, 1816, 3 vols. 8vo.

A work executed with equal correctness and elegance: there are a few copies on large paper, which are truly beautiful. The Greek is that of the received text, with the exception of some few greek is that of the federved text, with the exception passages, in which the editor acknowledges that he has followed Griesbach; and the Scholia are arranged in a similar order with those of Hardy's edition, noticed in p. 278. They are chiefly sethose of Hardy's edition, noticed in p. 278. They are chiefly selected from Grotius, Elsner, Raphelius, Bos, Palairet, Kypke, and Rosenmüller. To each book is prefixed a short account of its author, occasion, and object, drawn up in pure and elegant Latinity. For this valuable auxiliary to sacred studies, the biblical student is indebted to the Rev. Edward Valpy, B.D. It is no mean comindebted to the Rev. Edward Valey, B.D. It is no mean commendation of this commodious and valuable edition of the New Testament, that a late eminent prelate of the Anglican Church (Bishop Huntingford), who examined it, signified his approbation of every passage on which any controversy was likely to be occasioned; and stated that, had he edited it, it would have been similarly edited. larly edited.

Edward VALPY, B.D.] A new edition. London, 1826, 3 vols.

A new and greatly improved edition of the preceding work: as it is now accompanied with various readings, the reader will find a more particular account of it, as well as of the editions of the a more particular account of 18, as well as the New Testament, with various readings and philological notes, by the Rev. Drs. Burton and Blomfield, among the critical editions of the New Testament, in p. 19. of this Appendix.

22. Testamentum Novum Græcè. Cum animadversionibus Criticis, &c. a Joanne Severino VATER. Halæ Saxonum, 1824, 8vo.

See the title at length, and an account of the Notes, &c. of this edition of the New Testament, in p. 16. of this Appendix.

23. A Commentary or Exposition on the New Testament; with a Decad of Common Places. By John TRAPP. London, 1647, 2 vols, 4to.

A work containing many judicious observations, collected from various sources, but for the most part expressed in uncouth language. It is both scarce and dear.

24. A Paraphrase and Annotations on the New Testament, by Henry Hammond, D.D. London, 1702, folio, best edition.

The first edition of this valuable work appeared in 1653: it is In enrit edition of this valuable work appeared in 1655: It is in great and growing reputation. There are many good criticisms, but many that are much mistaken. Dr. Hammond "finds the Gnostics every where, which is his principal fault: many of Le Clerc's animadversions upon those places are very good; and his edition of his book in Latin I think much preferable to the origi-(Dr. Doddridge.)

25. A Paraphrase on the New Testament, with Notes, doctrinal and practical. By the Rev. Richard BAXTER. London, 1695, 8vo.—Reprinted at London, 1810, 8vo.

The paraphrase is inserted between the verses of the text, and in a smaller type. The annotations are at the end of the chapters, They are for the most part very short, and contain much sound sense and piety. Mr. Baxter's "practical writings," said Dr. Barrow, "were never mended, and his controversial ones seldom refuted."

26. A Paraphrase and Commentary on the New Testament; to which is added a Chronology of the New Testament, and an Alphabetical Table of Places mentioned in the New Testament, By Daniel Whither, D.D. London, 1761, 2 vols. folio: also 1833, in 2 vols. 8vo.

This is considered as the best edition: the work was first published in 1703; and the 10th edition, in 4to appeared in 1807. Divines of every denomination concur in pronouncing Dr. Whitby's commentary to be, upon the whole, the best upon the New Testament that is extant in the English language. It is inserted in almost every list of books that we have seen recommended to

27. Expository Notes, with Practical Observations on the New Testament of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ; wherein the Sacred Text is at large recited, the Sense explained, &c. &c. By William BURKITT, M.A. London, 1814, 4to.; also 1833, in 2 vols. 8vo.

The first edition of this deservedly popular work was printed early in the last century; and its practical utility has caused it to be several times reprinted in folio, besides the above-noticed edibe several times reprinted in folio, besides the above-noticed edition in 4to. It does not profess to discuss critical questions, but is very useful for the inferences it deduces from the sacred text. Burkitt (says Dr. Doddridge) "has many schemes of old sermons; his sentiments vary in different parts of the work, as the authors from whom he took his materials were orthodox or not." The Reverend Dr. Glasse published an edition of this work, a few years since, in 2 vols. 4to.; which was soon afterwards followed by an abridgment, in one thick volume, 8vo. for the use of the poor.

28. The Practical Expositor; or, an Exposition of the New Testament in the Form of a Paraphrase, with occasional Notes, and serious Recollections at the end of each Chapter. By John GUYSE, D.D. London, 1739-52, 3 vols. 4to. Various editions are extant, in 6 vols. 8vo.

Dr. Guyse was an eminent dissenting divine of the eighteenth century, and in his religious principles Calvinistic. His paraphrase has never been very popular, though it "is said to display a sound judgment, intimate acquaintance with the original, and considerable critical powers." (Chalmers's Biographical Dictionary, vol.

29. An Exposition on the Books of the New Testament, extracted from the Writings of the best Authors, ancient and modern. By John MARCHANT. London, 1743, folio.

30. The Primitive New Testament. Part I. containing the Four Gospels, with the Acts of the Apostles. Part II. containing XIV. Epistles of Paul. Part III. containing the seven Catholic 21. 'H KAINH AIAOHKH. The New Testament with English Notes, critical, philological, and explanatory. [By the Rev.] Epistles. Part IV. containing the Seven Catholic Epistles. Part IV. containing the Seven Catholic With a few Notes, by William Whiston]. 8vo. Stamford, 1745.

A book not of very common occurrence: to render it complete, there should be prefixed a harmony "of the Resurrection of Jesus Christ, according to Beza's double copy of the Four Gospels and Acts of the Apostles."

The first part is translated "according to the Greek part of the MS. of Seza, the imperfections of which are supplied from the Vulgar Latin;" the second part is "according to the Greek of the Clermont manuscript;" the third and fourth parts are said to be "all according to the Greek Alexandrian MS., according to the collation in Dr. Mills, corrected." The modern distinctions of clearters and recreate according to the chapters and verses are retained.

31. The Family Expositor: or a Paraphrase and Version of the New Testament, with Critical Notes, and a Practical Improvement of each Section. By Philip Dodden, D.D. London, 1760-62, 6 vols. 4to. Also in 4 vols. 4to. London, 1808; and various editions in 6 vols. 8vo.: also in one volume, superroyal 8vo. London, 1825.

The late Bishop of Durham (Dr. Barrington), in addressing his clergy on the choice of books, characterizes this masterly work in the following terms:—"In reading the New Testament, I recommend Doddridge's Family Expositor, as an impartial interpreter and faithful monitor. Other expositions and commentaries might be mentioned, greatly to the honour of their respective authors, for their several excellencies; such as, elegance of exposition, acuteness of illustration, and copiousness of erudition: but I know of no expositor who unites so many advantages as Doddridge; whether you regard the fidelity of his version, the fulness and perspicuity of his composition, the utility of his general and historical inforof his composition, the utility of his general and historical information, the impartiality of his doctrinal comments, or, lastly, the piety and pastoral earnestness of his moral and religious applications. He has made, as he professes to have done, ample use of the commentators that preceded him; and in the explanation of grammatical difficulties, he has profited much more from the philological writers on the Greek Testament than could almost have been expected in so multifarious an undertaking as the Family Ex positor. Indeed, for all the most valuable purposes of a Commen-tary on the New Testament, the Family Expositor cannot fall too early into the hands of those intended for holy orders." (Sermons books recommended by Bishops Watson and Tomline, and almost every other theological tutor.

An abridgment of the Family Expositor, upon a plan suggested by Dr. Doddridge himself, was published a few years since by the Rev. S. Palmer, entitled "The Family Expositor abridged, according to the plan of its author; containing his version, and the most useful explanatory notes, with practical reflections at the end of each section entire." 2 vols. 8vo. It forms a convenient companion to Mr. Orton's Exposition of the Old Testament, noticed in p. 115. of this Association.

this Appendix

32. The New Testament, carefully collated with the Greek, and corrected; divided and pointed according to the various subjects treated of by the Inspired Writers, with the common division into chapters and verses in the margin; and illustrated with Notes critical and explanatory. By Richard WYNNE, A.M. London, 1764, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Mr. Wynne seems to have made his divisions into chapters and verses, with a good deal of attention and judgment. As to the translation and many of the notes, they are so much taken from the Family Expositor of the late Reverend Dr. Doddridge, that the duty we owe the public obliges us to say, they are more the property of that learned critic than of our editor." (Monthly Review, O. S. vol. xxxi. pp. 406, 407.) The book, however, is useful, and 33. The New Testament or New Covenant of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, translated from the Greek, according to the present idiom of the English tongue. With Notes and References. By John Worsley. London, 1770, 8vo.

The design of this version is to depart as little as possible from the authorized translation, while the author has endeayoured (and with some degree of success) to bring it nearer to the original, and to make the form of expression more suited to our present language, He professes to have paid especial attention to the correct rendering of the particles, many of which, it is well known, are omitted in the authorized version. The notes are very brief, and princi-In the admortzed version. The notes are very brief, and principally intended to confirm and illustrate the more literal or various renderings at the bottom of each page. "This work may be very usefully consulted; and persons who are unacquainted with the original, may be able from hence to form their judgment concerning the translation in common use among us, and to improve their knowledge of the Scriptures." (Month. Rev., O. S. vol. xliii. p. 12.)

34. The Christian Expositor: being a brief Explanation of the New Testament, whereby the Holy Scriptures are rendered easy to be understood by the meanest capacities. By the Rev. James Ashton. London, 1774, 8vo.

"We think Mr. Ashton seems to have assumed rather too much in his title-page. We have looked over the volume, and find several pertinent illustrations; but we apprehend that this well-intended work will admit of a great deal of improvement." (Monthly Review, O. S. vol. lii. p. 365.)

35. An Exposition of the New Testament, intended as an Introduction to the Study of the Scriptures, by pointing out the leading sense and connexion of the Sacred Writers. By Wm. GILPIN, M.A. 2 vols. 8vo.

This justly-admired and ably-executed work has gone through several editions: it first appeared in one volume, 4to. plan of the author is, to give the whole substance of the New Testament, verse by verse, in such a kind of paraphrase as may make the historical parts run on in a pleasing style of narrative, and convey the doctrinal parts with such connection of the argument and illustration of the sense, as may induce even the idle to read the whole with pleasure. Sentences are occasionally thrown in for whole with pleasure. Sentences are occasionally thrown in for sake of explanation; but of this and every deviation from the apparent literal sense of the context, due notice is given in the notes; which are numerous, learned, and satisactory. any plan more likely to attract all kinds of readers to this best of studies; and we are happy to bear testimony that the plan is executed with good sense and without affectation." (British Critic, O. S. vol. iv. p. 122.)

36. A Translation of the New Testament. By Gilbert WAKE-FIELD, B.A. Second edition, with improvements. London, 1795, 2 vols. 8vo.

The first edition of this work was published in three volumes, The first edition of this work was published in three volumes, 8vo. 1792. For an account of the merits and defects of this version, see the Monthly Review, New Series, vol. viii. pp. 241—247. and vol. xx. p. 225. It was preceded, first, by A New Translation of the Gospel of Saint Matthew, with Notes critical, philological, and explanatory. 4to. London, 1782, of which a severe account is given in the same journal, vol. lxix. Old Series, pp. 48—59.; and, secondly, by A New Translation of those Parts only of the New Testament which are wrongly translated in our common version, 8vo. London, 1789. This is a small volume but more valuable for reference. 1789. This is a small volume, but more valuable for reference than the work above noticed; as it consists simply of corrections of passages mistranslated, without any comment or observations.

37. A Translation of the New Testament, from the original Greek. Humbly attempted by Nathaniel Scarlett, assisted by men of piety and literature. With Notes. London, 1798, 8vo.

This translation is executed in conformity with the tenets of the Universalists. "It is with sincere regret that we see so much piety Universalists. "It is with sincere regret that we see so much piety and good intention so very expensively misemployed as in the present volume. Nothing can be more injudicious than the whole plan and form of the work. What advantage can possibly be expected from printing the historical parts of the Testament like a play?... "It will hardly be credible to those who do not see the book, that this strange method is employed throughout, whenever it is practicable." (British Critic, O. S. vol. xiii. p. 435.)

38. An Attempt towards revising our English Translation of the Greek Scriptures, or the New Covenant of Jesus Christ, and towards illustrating the Sense by philological and explanatory Notes. By William Newcome, D.D., Archbishop of Armagh. 1796, 2 vols. royal 8vo.

This work, though printed so long ago as 1796, was not published till some time after the right reverend author's decease in 1800. In his preface it is stated that his original intention extended no further than to improve our authorized translation of the Greek Scriptures, following the text of Griesbach's critical edition, except in a few instances. Finding, however, that his plan would be defective without a comment on the text of such a difficult book, he proceeded to add a selection of annotations from a body of notes which he had formed or compiled, with occasional additions sup-plied by able commentators, or by his own study of the sacred writings. This version was (much to the mortification of some the archbishop's relatives) made the basis of the following work, which is here noticed, merely lest the author of these pages should be charged with designedly omitting it.

39. The New Testament in an IMPROVED VERSION, upon the basis of Archbishop Newcome's New Translation: with a corrected Text, and Notes critical and explanatory, &c. &c. &c. London, 1808, 8vo.

This version is avowedly made to support the Unitarian scheme; for though the late learned Archbishop Newcome's name is specified in the title-page, as a kind of model, his authority is disregarded whenever it militates against the creed of the anonymous garded whenever it militates against the creed of the anonymous editors. The errors and perversions of this translation have been most ably exposed by the Rev. Dr. Nares, in his "Remarks on the Version of the New Testament, lately edited by the Unitarians," &c. &c. 8vo. London, 1808 (2d edit. 1814); by the Rev. T. Rennell, in his "Animadversions on the Unitarian Translation by a Student in Divinity," 8vo. London, 1811; and by the Rev. Dr. Laurence (now Archbishop of Cashel), in his "Critical Reflections on some important Misrepresentations contained in the Unitarian Version of the New Testament," 8vo. Oxford and London, 1811; and especially in the "Vindication of the Authenticity of the Narratives contained in the first two chapters of the Gospels of St. Matthew and St. Luke," by a Layman. London, 1822, 8vo. The three last-mentioned treatises discuss various topics, which it did not fall within Dr. Nares's plan to notice. Two short but very able critiques on the Unitarian Version may also be seen in the Quarterly Review, vol. i. pp. 315—336., and the Eclectic Review for 1809, vol. v. pp. 24—39., 236—251. 40. The New Testament, translated from the Greek; and the Four Gospels arranged in Harmony, where the parts of each are introduced according to the Natural Order of the Narrative, and the Exact Order of Time. With some Preliminary Observations, and Notes critical and explanatory. By William TROMPSON, A.M. Kilmarnock, 1816, 3 vols. 8vo

This work the writer of these pages has never been able to procure: it is thus characterized by Mr. Orme:—" Mr. Thompson is entitled to respect, for his attempt to translate the New Testament, whatever opinion may be formed of his success. If a profound acquaintance with classical and biblical Greek, solidity of judgment, great nicety of taste, and acuteness of discernment, together with a command of pure and easy phraseology in our native tongue, be essential to a good translation of the Bible, this work will not stand the test. The author's attainments in all these respects were very moderate. The version is 'studiously made as literal as possible.' The English idiom is continually sacrificed to the Greek, so that grammatical propriety is often violated; and the desire to render the translation very faithful, and very clear, has often made it obscure and incorrect. He never departs from the received text in a single instance; so that, for him, Mill and Wetstein and Griesbach have all laboured in vain. The preliminary observations contain some feeble criticism on Dr. Campbell's Dissertations. The notes to the work are numerous, and sometimes long; but they rarely discover much ability. The piety of the author, and his attachment to the leading doctrines of the Gospel, are very apparent; and, with all its defects, some of the renderings are good, and many remarks occur which are worthy of attention." (Orme's Biblioth. Biblica, p. 430.)

41. Recensio Synoptica Annotationis Sacræ, being a Critical Digest and Synoptical Arrangement of the most important Annotations on the New Testament, exegetical, philological, and doctrinal; carefully collected and condensed from the best Commentators, both Ancient and Modern, and so digested as to form one consistent body of Annotation, in which each portion is systematically attributed to its respective author, and the foreign matter translated into English. The whole interspersed with a copious body of original Annotations. By the Rev. S. T. BLOOMFIELD, M.A. [now D.D.] London, 1827, 8 very large volumes, 8vo.

Copious as is the title-page of this elaborate work, it barely expresses the nature of its various contents. Purposely avoiding to treat on those subjects which are discussed in the Commentaries of Bp Mant and Dr. D'Oyly, of Dr. A. Clarke and of Mr. Hewlett, the annotations of Messrs. Elsley and Slade, the treatises of Bps. Tomline and Marsh, Michaelis's Introduction, and also in this work, Dr. Bloomfield has derived his exegetical and doctrinal annotations from the Scholiasts and Glossographers, as well as from Theophylact, Theodoret, Euthymius, and other ancient fathers of the church, especially the eloquent and erudite Chrysostom; while Elsner, Raphelius, Kypke, Wetstein, Koppe, Rosenmüller, Tittmann, Kuinüel, Whitby, Macknight, Doddridge, and numerous other critics and commentators, both British and foreign, have largely contributed to his philological illustrations. Nor has he omitted to avail himself of the valuable aids for the elucidation of the Scriptures which are contained in the works of Cartwright, Buxtorf, Lightfoot, Pococke, Surenhusius, Schoettgenius, Meuschen, and others. Those only who have been engaged in similar studies can appreciate the labour of Dr. Bloomfield's undertaking, to which he has devoted many years of patient research, amid the conflicting opinions of critics and theologians. There is scarcely a single difficult passage which is not elucidated; while the genuineness of some important texts, which had been impugned, is ably vindicated and established. Avoiding minor topics, on which real Christians may agree to differ in opinion, Dr. B. has laudably applied his learning to the defence of these cardinal doctrines of the New Testament,—the Deity and vicarious Atonement of Jesus Christ, and the Deity and Personality of the Holy Spirit. To those who have not the means of procuring the costly and voluminous publications of foreign commentators, these volumes will be most acceptable; while such as may possess them will here find a convenient manual of reference for their opinions on v

42. The New Testament of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ; translated out of the original Greek, and with the former Translations diligently compared and revised. Arranged in Paragraphs, such as the sense requires; the divisions of Chapters and Verses being noted in the margin; with various tables, &c. By James Nourse. New York, 1827, 8vo.

The common (or authorized) translation remains unaltered; the paragraphs are generally copied from those in Knapp's critical edition of the Greek Testament, noticed in p. 16. of this Appendix; though sometimes the paragraphs of Bengel's edition are preferred.

A critical analysis of the contents is placed at the head of each page. A few notes are given on the punctuation of several passages, together with a short Introduction, on the origin and proper use of the Divisions into Chapters and Verses; an outline of a Harmony of the Gospels, arranged from Archbishop Newcome's; a Table of the Order and Date of the Books of the New Testament, and an Index of Quotations from the Old Testament.

43. The New Testament of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. With an Introduction and Notes. By J. A. Cummings. Second edition, revised and improved. Boston, 1827, 12mo.

44. The New Testament: with a Plain Exposition for the use of Families. By the Rev. Thomas Boxs, M.A. London, 1827, 4to.

45. Analecta Theologica. A digested and arranged Compendium of the most approved Commentaries upon the New Testament. By the Rev. William TROLLOPE, M.A. London, 1829-34, 2 large vols. 8vo.

The object of this laborious and comprehensive work is, to compress into as condensed a form as is consistent with perspicuity, the opinions, illustrations, and expositions of the principal theologians and biblical critics. The several arguments are digested and arranged in such a manner that the merits of any question may be seen at one view, without reference to the authors themselves; the bulk and high price of many of whose works place them beyond the reach of junior biblical students, for whose use Mr. Trollope's publication is especially designed. Those writers, who have taken different sides in certain questions, are distinctly marked; and the student is directed to that interpretation of the several disputed texts which seems to be best supported, and most generally approved. It is a primary and very important feature of this work, that it gives the whole of the arguments on any contested topic in a conspicuous and connected form: whereas in some of those collections of notes which are much in use among junior students, the heads of such arguments only are given, leaving the inexperienced reader in a maze of conflicting opinions, and unable to form his own judgment without consulting the writers themselves; whose works in many cases he may not have the opportunity or the means of procuring.

46. The Christian Expositor, or Practical Guide to the Study of the New Testament, intended for the Use of General Readers. By the Rev. George Holden, M.A. London, 1830, 12mo. Price 10s. 6d.

This volume also forms a part of Mr. Holden's commentary on the entire Bible, the plan of which is stated in page 114. No. 57. supra. "In the prosecution of his undertaking the author has given an explanation of every verse, and even of every phrase in the New Testament, which appeared liable to be misunderstood; first, by a critical examination of the sacred text itself, and then by consulting the most eminent commentators and biblical critics, both British and foreign. Without any parade of sacred philology, he has concisely given the results of his investigation; and the readler, who has recourse to his pages for the interpretation of really difficult passages, will rarely, if ever, be disappointed." (Christian Remembrancer, August, 1830, p. 480.) "As a practical expositor of the New Testament, convenient for ready, and, we may add, satisfactory reference, this is one of the most useful works that has for some time appeared, connected with biblical literature. Mr. Holden gives us, instead of philology, two extremely different things; and such words and passages only, as admit of ambiguity, are selected for explanation. The task is accomplished with great intelligence and learning." (Monthly Review, July, 1830, pp. 468, 469.)

47. The Devotional Testament, containing Reflections and

47. The Devotional Testament, containing Reflections and Meditations on the different Paragraphs of the New Testament of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ; intended as a Help for the Closet and for domestic Worship. By the Rev. Richard Marks. London, 1830. 4to.

48. Explanatory Notes upon the New Testament, with occasional Remarks, critical and practical. By the Rev. G. Bliss. London, 1832, 12mo.

49. A New and Corrected Version of the New Testament; or, a Minute Revision and professed Translation of the original Histories, Memoirs, Letters, Prophecies, and other productions of the Evangelists and Apostles. To which are subjoined a few generally brief, critical, explanatory, and practical Notes. By Rodolphus Dickinson. Boston [Massachusetts], 1833, royal 8vo.

"Mr. Dickinson has reformed the titles of the several books of the New Testament, substituting for those generally received such as the following. History by Matthew; Luke's History of Apostolic and Ecclesiastical Transactions; John's General Address to Christians; John's Letters to an eminent Christian Woman; John's Letters Visions, and Prophecies. Whether there is not a ridiculous affectation in all this, let our readers judge. This work is announced on the title-page as a professed translation. By this we are, it is presumed, to understand, that it is not an actual translation, but a concoction of materials in the vernacular tongue, designed to pass as a new translation. And we are very willing to believe it a professed translation; for a pretty thorough examination has failed to show us the faintest traces of a critic's hand. Where ill-chosen and ill-arranged phraseology has not made the work utterly unintelligible, the sense is generally the same with that of the received version, with here and there a modification borrowed from Campbell or Macknight.... Apart from its literary execution, this professed translation has no distinctive character; and, as the author (in his preface) places his chief reliance on the rhetorical embellishments with which he has adorned the sacred text, we are constrained to award a verdict of unqualified condemnation.

"The notes which form the Appendix to this volume are principally selected from English and American writers. They are excerpted indifferently from writers of widely varying creeds.... He has introduced many annotations from works not professedly critical. He has elevated some men to the rank of commentators on Scripture, who surely never anticipated that honour. He gives us on the Logos a note from Jefferson, and several of the largest notes are credited to such men as J. Q. Adams, Chancellor Kent, and Wirt. The Free Enquirer, an infidel paper published at New York, furnishes several short remarks. And there are some original notes, tinged with the translator's usual grandiloquence." (American Monthly Review for March, 1833, vol. iii. pp. 221, 222, 223.)

50. The Village Testament, according to the authorized version, with Notes, Original and Selected: likewise Introductions and concluding Remarks to each book, Polyglott References, and Marginal Readings, Geographical Index, Chronological and other Tables [and two Maps]. By the Rev. William Patton. New York, 1833, second edition, 1834, 18mo.

A commodious edition of the New Testament, and neatly printed, with a minute but very distinct type. The notes have been compiled with much industry: a considerable portion of them is original.

- 51. The Pocket Commentary, consisting of Critical Notes on the New Testament; original and selected from the most celebrated Biblical Critics and Commentators. By David DAVIDSON. Second Edition. Edinburgh, 1834, 18mo.
- 52. A Pocket Expositor of the New Testament. By Thomas Кеуwовти. London, 1834, 18mo.

[ii.] Commentators on detached Books of the New Testament.

COMMENTATORS ON THE HISTORICAL BOOKS.

1. Novi Testamenti Libri Historici, Gracci et Latini, perpetuo Commentario illustrati, a Baldvino Walko. Lugd. Bat. 1653; et Amstel. 1662, 4to.

This may, with great propriety, be termed an edition of the four Gospels and Acts of the Apostles, cum notis variorum. The notes of Boza, Grotius, Drusius, Heinsius, and others, are here inserted in regular order, the reader being left to decide for himself, which interpretation he will prefer. As the book sells at an easy price, it may be advantageously substituted for the larger editions of those eminent critics, where they cannot be conveniently referred to, or procured.

2. A Paraphrase on the Four Evangelists. By Samuel CLARKE, D.D. London, 2 vols. 8vo.

To form a complete paraphrase on the New Testament, there are usually associated with this valuable work of Dr. Clarke, a "Paraphrase on the Acts and Epistles," 2 vols. 8vo. and a "Paraphrase on the Revelations," in one volume, 8vo. by T. Pyle, M.A. Their deserved popularity has caused them to pass through repeated editions. "Dr. Clarke's paraphrase on the Evangelists deserves an attentive reading; he narrates a story in handsome language, and connects the parts well together; but fails much in emphasis, and seems to mistake the order of the histories." (Dr. Doddridge.) Pyle's Paraphrase on the Epistles Dr. D. considered to be inferior in ability to that on the Old Testament already noticed.

3. Samuelis Friderici Bucheni Antiquitates Biblicæ ex Novo Testamento selectæ, consuetudines, ritus, formulas veterum examinantes. Vitembergæ et Lipsiæ, 1729, 4to.

A collection of notes—some of which are sufficiently prolix—on the four Gospels, elucidating them principally from the rabbinical writers.

4. Explanatory Notes upon the Four Gospels in a new method, for the use of all, but especially the unlearned English reader; in two parts; to which are prefixed three Discourses. By Joseph Traff, D.D. London, 1748. Oxford, 1805, 8vo.

The design of this very useful work is to take notice only of difficult texts, to correct the authorized version, and explain the diction of the sacred writings, but chiefly to reconcile apparently contradictory passages. The three discourses prefixed explain with much perspicuity many prophecies of the Old Testament that are cited in the New. The numerous impressions which this work has undergone sufficiently attest the high estimation in which it is deservedly held.

5. A Commentary, with Notes, on the Four Evangelists and the Acts of the Apostles; together with a New Translation of Saint Paul's First Epistle to the Corinthians, with a Paraphrase and Notes, to which are added other Theological Pieces. By Zachary Pearece, D.D., late Bishop of Rochester. London, 1777, 2 vols. 4to.

"On the whole, Dr. Pearce deserves to be ranked with other writers of eminence who have employed their philological learning in illustrating the sacred writings." (Monthly Review, O. S. vol. lvi. p. 205.) "To Dr. Z. Pearce, Bishop of Rochester, we are indebted for an invaluable commentary and notes on the four Gospels," &c. "The deep learning and judgment displayed in these notes are really beyond all praise." (Dr. A. Clarke.)

6. Pericopæ Evangelicæ. Illustravit Christ. Theoph. Kuinöel. Lipsiæ, 1796, 1797, 2 vols. 8vo.

This work contains critical and expository annotations on the Gospels for every Sunday in the year, according to the ritual of the Lutheran church, in which these portions of the New Testament usually form the subjects of the preacher's discourse. The passages selected are nearly the same as those used in the Liturgy of the Anglican church. The notes in this work are much enlarged and corrected in the ensuing article.

7. D. Christiani Theophili Kuinger Commentarius in Libros Novi Testamenti Historicos, Vols. I.—III. Lipsie, 1808—1812; Vol. IV. Lipsie, 1818, and various subsequent editions, all in 8vo. Londini, 1828, 3 tomis, 8vo.

This is one of the best philological commentaries on the historical books of the New Testament. "As a philologist, Kuinöel has exhibited a great deal of labour and care in the investigation of words and phrases.....In general, he is a sober, judicious critic, as to idiom, &c. Oftentimes he makes remarks with respect to the connection and scope of discourse that are valuable and important. In all these points of view he may be strongly commended to the student, who still should not be ready to give implicit credit to every thing which is said. By long and patient labour he has attained to making a summary of much important knowledge in his work." (Professor Stuart, in the Andover Biblical Repository for January, 1833, vol. iii. p. 133.) But there are some points on which the student cannot be too much upon his guard. Although now and then Kuinüel has successfully vindicated some important controverted passage from a neological interpretation; yet, in some cases, where there is apparently something of a miraculous nature which lies on the surface of the evangelical narration, he makes a shift, but with no great dexterity, to steer between the neologians and the orthodox, in order, as it would seem, to avoid giving offence to either. Professor Stuart (ibid. pp. 155—159.) has given several examples of these trimming interpretations, which we have not room to insert; and, with regard to the trinitarian controversy, he has shown that Kuinöel is what has been termed a high Arian. The Greek text is not inserted in the Leipzig edition of this commentary. Vol. i. contains the commentary on Saint Matthew's Gospel; vol. ii. those on the Gospels of Saint Mark and Saint Luke; vol. iii. that on Saint John; and vol. iv. that on the Acts of the Apostles. To each book are prefixed well-compiled prolegomena, in which the author's life, the authenticity of his narrative, the time, place, and the language in which he wrote, as well as his style and manner of writing, are fully discussed. The London reprint, from the press of Mr. Ri

8. The Harmony of the Four Gospels. By J. MACKNIGHT, D.D. 4to. 2 vols. 1756; 2d edit. 1763; 3d edit. 8vo. 2 vols. Edinburgh, 1804.

See a notice of this excellent work in p. 16. No. 13. of this Appendix.

9. The Four Gospels translated from the Greek; with Preliminary Dissertations and Notes. By George Campbell, D.D. F.R.S. Edinburgh; Principal of Marischal College, Aberdeen. 4to. 2 vols. London, 1790; 2 vols, 8vo. Edinburgh, 1807: 3d edit. London, in 3 vols. 8vo.

The extensive circulation of this valuable work, which has placed the author high in the rank of biblical critics, sufficiently attests the esteem in which it is held. Although his version has not altogether answered the expectations entertained of it, yet the notes which accompany it form an excellent philological commentary on the four Evangelists; and the dissertations are a treasure of sacred criticism. The narratives of the sacred writers are arranged in sections, regulated by the subject matter, and the divisions of chapters and verses are retained in the margin. Professor Campbell's work is in Bishop Tomline's list of books for students.

10. Annotations on the Four Gospels and the Acts of the Apostles. Compiled and abridged for the use of Students, 2d edit. London, 1812, 3 vols. 8vo.

Though published anonymously, this work is known to be the production of the Rev. Mr. ELSLEY, vicar of Burenston near Bedale; by whom the annotations on the Gospels only were first pub.

lished in 2 vols. 8vo. 1799. "Altogether, we say, without the smallest reserve, we never saw a book more admirably adapted for the use of students, more creditable to an author's sagacity, diligence, and erudition, or more likely to make the investigation of the New Testament easy and agreeable." (British Critic, O. S. vol. xvi. p. 236. See also Monthly Review, N. S. vol. xxx. p. 441., and vol. lxxvi. p. 381.)

11. Quatuor Novi Testamenti, Evangelia recensuit et cum Commentariis perpetuis edidit Car. Freder. Augustus Fritsche. Tomus I. Evangelium Matthæi complectens. Lipsiæ, 1825, 8vo. Tom. II. Evangelia Marci et Lucæ. Lipsiæ, 1830, 8vo.

The grammatical meaning of words is admirably investigated in this work; but the theological interpretations are in the very worst style of the neologian school of Germany.

12. Annotations on the Historical Books of the New Testament. By M. BLAND, D.D. Vols. I. and II. [comprising the Gospels of St. Matthew and St. Mark.] Cambridge and London, 1828-29, 8vo.

These annotations are designed for the use of students at the university, and of candidates for holy orders: and by them these volumes may be profitably consulted. Dr. Bland has drawn his materials from the stores of our best old English divines, and has occasionally illustrated and confirmed his interpretations of particular passages by apposite quotations from the fathers of the Christian church, and other ecclesiastical writers.

12*. An Exposition of the Gospels of St. Matthew and St. Mark, and of some other detached parts of Holy Scripture. By the Rev. Richard Watson. London, 1833, royal 8vo.

The sole object of this learned and original work is the elucidation of the Scriptures; and by this means to lay the foundation, rather than suggest those practical and pious uses to which they must be applied, if they make us "wise unto salvation." The author has aimed to afford help to the attentive general reader, whenever he should come to a term, phrase, or a whole passage, the meaning of which is not obvious, and to exhibit the true theology of the sacred volume. The notes, therefore, are brief upon the plainer passages, and most copious where explication appeared necessary. No real difficulty has been evaded. The author had contemplated the writing of expository notes on the entire New Testament; but lived only to complete his commentary on the Gospels of St. Matthew and St. Mark, and on Luke i.—xiii. 15. and Rom. i.—xiii. 21.

SAINT MATTHEW AND SAINT MARK.

- 13. Caroli Mariæ de Vett Explicatio Litteralis Evangelii secundum Matthæum et Marcum, ex ipsis Scripturarum fontibus, Ebræorum ritibus et idiomatis, veterum et recentiorum monumentis, eruta. Londini, 1678, 8vo.
- 14. Jacobi Elsneri Commentarius in Evangelia Matthæi et Marci. Zwollæ, 1767, et annis sequentibus. 3 vols. 4to.

SAINT MATTHEW.

- 15. A New Version of Saint Matthew's Gospel, with Select Notes; wherein the version is vindicated, and the sense and purity of several words and expressions in the Original Greek are settled and illustrated. By Daniel Scott, J.U.D. London, 1741, 4to.
- 16. Gottfridi Olearit Observationes ad Evangelium Matthæi. Lipsiæ, 1743, 4to.

Professor J. B. Carpzov mentions this as an excellent commentary on St. Matthew's Gospel.

- 17. J. C. Pores Commentarius in Sanctum Jesu Christi Evangelium secundum Matthæum, etiam collatum cum evangelio Marci, Lucæ, et Joannis, in iis quæ habent communia, necnon in sanctum Jesu Christi Evangelium secundum Marcum, Lucam. et Joannem. Mechliniæ, 1823, 12mo.
- 18. Eccardi Leichneri de tempore Magorum, hoc est, quo Magi ex oriente recens natum Christum Bethlehemi adorârint, Commentatio Analytica. Arnsteti. 1655, 12mo.
- 19. Commentatio de Vi et Momento Infanticidii Herodiani in Historia Jesu Christi. Auctore T. L. Danz. Jenæ, 1823, 4to.
- 20. H. P. T. VERHOEVEN Disputatio Theologica de Precatione Dominica. Lugduni Batavorum, 1829, 4to.
- 21. Commentatio de Solenni Jesu Christi in Urbem Hierosolymitaram Introitu. Auctore T. P. C. HUNDECOPER. Trajecti ad Rhenum, 1829, 8vo.
- 22. F. G. Nicolai Subingar Commentatio de Sensu Loci Matt. xxii. 37—40. Lugduni Batavorum, 1822, 4to.
- 23. De Consilio et Causis Proditionis Judæ Dissertatio. Auctore Josepho Ferenczy. Trajecti ad Rhenum, 1829, 8vo.

SAINT MARK.

24. Georgii Friderici Heupelii Commentarius in Evangelium Marci. Argentorati (Strasburg), 1716, 8vo.

Carpzov has indicated this Commentary as being an excellent one; we have never seen it.

SAINT LUKE.

25. A Critical Essay on the Gospel of St. Luke, by Dr Frederick Schleiermacher. With an Introduction by the Translator [the Rev. Connop Thirlwall, M.A.], containing an account of the Controversy respecting the Origin of the Three first Gospels since Bishop Marsh's Dissertation. London, 1825, 8vo.

Dr. Schleiermacher is justly considered as one of the most distinguished Greek scholars in Germany; of this work the reader will find a copious account, together with a refutation of Dr. S.'s hypothesis respecting the Gospel of St. Luke, in the British Critic and Theological Review for October, 1827, pp. 342—398. The translator's Introduction is an admirable disquisition for the variety of important information which it condenses into a small compass.

26. Sam. Frid. Nath. Monr Prælectiones in Lucæ Evangelium, edidit C. A. Donat. Lipsiæ, 1795, 8vo.

27. The Gospel of St. Luke, with English Notes. By the Rev. J. R. Majon, A.M. London, 1826, 8vo.

This work is avowedly designed for students, who may not have access to more bulky or more expensive publications. Mr. Major has availed himself of every accessible source for the elucidation of the evangelist; and has succeeded in comprising within the compass of a single volume that information, which the inexperienced student could not otherwise obtain without great research and expense. The notes have been compiled principally with a view to the divinity examinations in the university of Cambridge. The volume is beautifully printed.

28. Scholia in Lucæ Evangelium, ad supplendos reliquorum Interpretum Commentarios, scripsit Fridericus Augustus Borns-Mann. Accesserunt curæ secundæ ad Actorum cap. XIX. sqq. et de Glossematis Novi Testamenti cautè dijudicandis Dissertatio. Lipsiæ, 1830, 8vo.

These annotations on the Gospel of St. Luke are strictly philological, and illustrate numerous passages which preceding commentators had passed by. The dissertation on the Gospels, which some critics imagine to have crept into the text of the New Testament, is particularly valuable.

29. Adriani Leonardi Vander Boon Mesch Interpretatio Hymni Zachariæ, quam Lucas servavit, Evang. I. 67—79. Lugduni Batavorum, 1817, 4to.

30. Dissertatio Theologica inauguralis de Hymno Mariæ, quam....publico examini submittit Nicolaus Henricus Tatum Zubli. Lugduni Batavorum, 1829, 8vo.

The first part of this dissertation contains a grammatical interpretation of the Hymn of Mary (Luke i. 46—55.); and the second part investigates its sources, poetical structure, and the doctrine which it teaches, viz., the acknowledgment and celebration of the providence of God, and the advent of the Messiah who was promised to the patriarchs.

31. De Procuratore, Parabolà Jesu Christi ex Re Provinciali Romanorum illustratà, Commentatio Historico-Exegetica ad Luc. XVI. 1—9. Auctore C. G. L. Grossmann. Lipsiæ, 1824, 4to.

32. Chr. God. KLINCKHARDT, super Parabolâ Jesu Christi de Homine Divite et Lazaro in Evangelio Lucæ, cap. XVI. 19—31. consignatâ, Commentatio. Lipsiæ, 1831, 4to.

SAINT JOHN.

- 33. Caroli Wilhelmi Stronck Specimen Hermeneutico-Theologicum de Doctrina et Dictione Johannis Apostoli. Trajecti ad Rhenum, 1797.
- 34. Joannis Clarisse, Pro Evangelii Joannei AY©ENTEIA Dissertatio Critico-Theologica. Harderovici, 1806, 8vo.
- 35. Caroli Gottlieb Bretschneider Probabilia de Evangelii et Epistolarum Joannis Apostoli Indole et Origine. Lipsiæ, 1820, 8vo.
- 36. Caroli Gulielmi Stein, Authentia Evangelii Joannis contra Bretschneideri Objectiones defensa. Additur Specimen Novi Lexici Joannei. Brandenburgi, 1821, 8vo.

This publication contains a satisfactory vindication of the genuineness of the writings of Saint John, against the objections of Dr. Bretschneider; who, in his 'Probabilia,' had asserted, contrary to all evidence, that the writings which bear that apostle's name were compiled after his decease by some Gentile Christian in the beginning of the second century, who passed himself for the apostle!

⁴ In the Jena Literary Gazette for January, 1827 (Supplt. No. 1.), it is stated that Dr. Bretschneider, in the preface to the 2d edition of his Handbuch der Dogmatik (Manual of Dogmatic Theology), declares, that in his biblical criticisms he has, without any hesitation, used as genuine sources the writings of St. John; because the doubts respecting the genuineness of those writings, which he some time since laid before the public, were regarded by him merely as suggestions which might give occasion to a

- 37. H. A. Schott Programma, quo examinantur dubitationes quædam de authentia Evangelii Joannis nuperrime ex prioribus quatuor capitibus a Bretschneidero excitatæ. Jenæ, 1820, 4to.
- 38. Th. Ph. Ch. KAISER Commentationes III. de apologeticis Evangelii Joannei consiliis authentiam ejus commonstrantibus. Erlangæ, 1821-24-25, 4to.
- 39. A. F. G. M. GLASER Dissertatio Exegetico-Historica de Johanne apostolo, Evangelii, quod ejus nomen præ se fert, vero auctore, respectu recentiorum quarundam dubitationum atque criminationum. Helmstadii, 1823, 4to.
- 40. A. Th. CALMBERG, De antiquissimis Patrum pro Evangelii Joannei Ausuruiz Testimoniis. Lipsiæ et Hamburgi, 1823, folio.
- 41. Michaëlis Webert Authentia Capitis Ultimi Evangelii Johannis, hujusque Evangelii totius, et Primæ Johannis Epistolæ, Argumentorum Internorum Usu vindicata. Halis, 1823, 8vo.
- 42. Leonardi Usterii Commentatio Critica, in qua Johannis Evangelium genuinam esse, ex comparatis IV. Evangeliorum de cænâ ultimâ et de passione Jesu Christi narrationibus, ostenditur. Turici, 1823, 8vo.
- 43. De Authentiâ Capitis XXI. Evangelii Joannei, e sola orationis indole judicanda. Scripsit J. C. L. HANDSCKE. Lipsiæ, 1818, 8vo.
- 44. An Exposition of the Gospel of Jesus Christ according to John. By George HUTCHESON, Minister of the Gospel at Edinburgh. London, 1657, folio.
- A book not of common occurrence: it contains many valuable observations.
- 45. Commentarius Analytico-Exegeticus, tam literalis quam realis, Evangelii secundum Johannem, Authore Fred. Adol. LAMPE. Amstelædami, 1724-1726, 3 vols. 4to.

This is unquestionably the most valuable work on Saint John's Gospel that was ever published; every thing which the learned author could possibly collect, in order to illustrate the evangelist, being here concentrated. It is, however, a work better adapted to the mature scholar than to the student in divinity, who may not always be able to select with judgment from these ample tomes. Lampe also composed two quarto volumes of Dissertationes Philologico-Theologicæ, on Saint John's Gospel, which were published in 1737, by Dr. Gerdes. They are replete with solid erudition.

45*. Paraphrasis Evangelii Johannis, cum Notis et Cantabrigiensis Codicis Latino Textu, a Joanne Salomone Semlero. Halæ, 1771, 8vo.

Semler was one of the most celebrated biblical critics of Germany, during the last century: his writings, which illustrate with great ability many philological difficulties, bear a high price; but he espoused such rational dogmas, in certain points of doctrine, which are of fundamental importance, that the student cannot be too much on his guard against them.

- 46. Sam. Frid. Nathan. Mort Recitationes in Evangelium Joannis; animadversiones subject Tho. Imm. Dindorf. Prage, 1795, 8vo. Lipsiæ, 1808, 8vo.
- 47. Notes, Critical and Dissertatory, on the Gospel and Epistles of Saint John. By the Rev. R. Shepherd, D.D. F.R.S. London, 1796, 4to.

Though bearing the date of 1796, this volume was not published until the year 1801. See an analysis of it in the Monthly Review, N. S. vol. xxxviii. pp. 145—150.

48. Caroli TITTMANNI Meletemata Sacra, sive Commentarius Exegetico-Critico-Dogmaticus in Evangelium Joannis. Lipsiæ,

The author of this work was superintendent of the Diocese of Dresden. Without vouching for every opinion Dr. Tittmann has offered, we have no hesitation in saying that his work is, upon the whole, the most valuable commentary on Saint John's Gospel extant in the compass of a single 8vo. volume; and though it does not render Lampe's expensive work unnecessary, it may be advantageously substituted for this, where the student cannot obtain access to it.

- 49. Symbolæ ad Interpretationem Evangelii Johannis ex Marmoribus et Numis, maxime Græcis. Auctore Fr. Munter. Hauniæ, 1826, 4to.
- 50. Disputatio Theologica inauguralis de Pretio, statuendo Precationi Jesu, quæ continetur Cap. XVII. Evangelio Johannis, more minute and fundamental investigation of the proofs of such genuine ness, which proofs at that time had appeared to him to be still incomplete; and also because he trusted that this inquiry would be fully accomplished by the publications respecting it that have already appeared, as well as by those which were announced as preparing for publication.

The six following publications were also occasioned by Dr. Bret-schneider's Probabilia. Quam publico examini submittit Nicolaus Jacobus Aarland. Lugduni Batavorum, 1829, 8vo.

An academical dissertation for a doctor's degree in Theology, An academical dissertation for a doctor's degree in Theology, in the university of Leyden. After treating on the author of the sublime prayer, contained in the seventeenth Chapter of St. John's Gospel, Dr. Aarland proceeds to give an exposition of it, and concludes with a practical view of the example which it affords to Christians, with regard to the things for which they ought to pray, as well as the words and temper with which they ought to offer their supplications.

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

- 51. Dissertatio de Lucæ à Eurioria in conscribendo Actuum Apostolorum Libro. Scripsit Adrianus Cornelius de MEIJIER. Hagæ Comitum, 1827, 8vo.
- 52. An Attempt to ascertain the Chronology of the Acts of the Apostles and of St. Paul's Epistles. By the Rev. Edward BURTON, D.D. London, 1830, 8vo.
- 53. The Apostolical History of Mr. Cradock, Dr. Benson's History of the first planting of Christianity, and Mr. Bevan's Life of Paul, all of which have been mentioned in p. 62 of this Appendix, deserve to be noticed in this place, among those writers who have materially illustrated the Acts of the Apostles.
- 54. Casparis Stresonis Commentarius Practicus in Actorum Apostolorum, per Lucam Evangelistam descriptorum, capita priora sedecim. Amstelodami, 1658, 4to. Ejusdem, Commentarius in capita duodecim posteriora. Amstelodami, 1659, 4to. Hafniæ, 1717, 4to.

This work originated in the author's sermons (in Dutch) on the Acts of the Apostles: they were afterwards translated into Latin, and so arranged as to form a commentary on the Acts of the Apostles. Streso's work is commended by Walchius for its learning and piety.

55. Caroli Mariæ DE VEIL Acta Sanctorum Apostolorum ad litteram explicata. Londini, 1684, 8vo.

This is one of the scarcest of Dr. de Veil's expository publications: it was translated into English, and entitled A Literal Explanation of the Acts of the Holy Apostles. Written in Latine, by C. M. du Veil, D.D., now translated into English out of a copy carefully reviewed and corrected by the Author. To which is added a learned Dissertation about Baptism for the Dead. I Cor. xv. 29. Written in Latine, by the famous Fredericus Spanhemius, Filius, Lordon 1625 200. London, 1685, 8vo.

56. Joannis Pearsonti S.T.P. Cestriensis nuper Episcopi Lectiones in Acta Apostolorum. Londini, 1688, 4to.

These lectures are prefixed to Bishop Pearson's Opera Chronologica edited by Mr. Dodwell, Londini, 1688, 4to. They extend from the first to the ninth chapter of the Acts of the Aposles; and (as may be expected) contain many valuable critical and chronological observations for the elucidation of St. Luke's nar-

57. The History of the Acts of the Holy Apostles confirmed from other authors, and considered as full evidence of the Truth of Christianity. By Richard Biscoe, D.D. London, 1742, 2 vols. 8vo. Oxford, 1829, in one volume, 8vo.

This learned and elaborate work contains the substance of Dr. Biscoe's sermons preached at Mr. Boyle's lecture between the years 1736 and 1738. Dr. Doddridge frequently refers to it as a work of great utility, and as showing, in the most convincing manner, how incontestably the Acts of the Apostles demonstrate the truth of Christianity. The Oxford reprint is beautifully executed.

58. Acta Apostolorum Græce, perpetuâ annotatione illlustrata a Car. Hen. Heinrichs. Gottingæ, 1809, 2 parts or vols. 8vo.

This forms a part of Koppe's edition of the New Testament, with notes, mentioned in pp. 127, 123. of this Appendix. Some of the expositions in this work are characterized by that lax system of interpretation which is adopted by some modern expositors and critics in Germany, and against which the student cannot be too much upon his guard.

59. Actions of the Apostles, translated from the original Greek, by the Rev. John WILLIS, B.D. London, 1789, 8vo.

This work "is divided into several sections, to which are added notes, styled Proofs and Illustrations. Some of the author's alterations, we think, are real improvements; others, the contrary; some are very fanciful; and there are others for which we cannot at all account." (Monthly Review, N. S. vol. iii. p. 154.)

- 60. Sam, Frid. Nathan. Mort Versio et Explicatio Actuum Apostolicorum. Edidit, animadversiones recentiorum suasque adjecit, Gottlob Immanuel Dindorf. Lipsiæ, 1794, 2 vols. 8vo.
- 61. ΠΡΑΞΕΙΣ ΤΩΝ ΑΠΟΣΤΟΛΩΝ. Acta Apostolorum. Variorum Notis tum Dictionem tum Materiam illustrantibus suas adjecit Hastings Robenson, M.A. Cantabrigiæ, 1824, 8vo.

This beautifully executed edition of the Acts of the Apostles contains the text of Griesbach, from which the editor has very rarely deviated; and beneath it are placed critical and philological Scholia. "This edition is well calculated to illustrate the peculiar expressions and grammatical construction of the Acts of the Apostles, and the author" [editor] "has judiciously added to his own remarks those of the best critics and theologians. Within a small compass much is contained...We should imagine it well adapted to the purposes of college-lectures and of public schools, as intended by the writer;—and it is a book which the more advanced critic may add with advantage to his library." (Universal Review, vol. ii. p. 173.)

62. D. Paulus Apostolus in Mari, quod nunc Venetus Sinus dicitur, Naufragus, et Melitæ Dalmatensis Insulæ post naufragium Hospes; sive de Genuino Significatu duorum Locorum in Actibus Apostolicis, cap. XXVII. 27. cap. XXVIII. 1. Inspectiones Anticriticæ. Auctore Ignatio Georgio. Venetiis, 1730, 4to.

The author of this learned treatise supports the notion, which was afterwards maintained by Mr. Bryant, that the island on which St. Paul was wrecked was not Malta, but Melita in the Adriatic Sea, on the coast of Dalmatia.

- 63. M. C. G. Kuchler de anno, quo Paulus Apostolus ad Sacra Christiana conversus est, Commentatio. Lipsiæ, 1828, 8vo.
- 64, Arnoldi Gulielmi HASELAAR Dissertatio Exegetica de nonullis Actuum Apostolorum et Epistolarum Paulinarum ad historiam Pauli pertinentibus locis. Lugduni Batavorum, 1806, 8vo.
- 65. Specimen Academicum Inaugurale de Oratione Pauli Apostoli Athenis habita, quod.....publico examini submittit Janus Adolphus Anspach. Lugduni Batavorum, 1829, 4to.
-  Many valuable philological and historical illustrations of the Acts of the Apostles are likewise to be found in Johannis Ernesti Immanuelis Walchii Dissertationes in Acta Apostolorum. Jena, 1756-59, 3 vols. 4to.

COMMENTATORS ON THE WHOLE OR GREATER PART OF THE EPISTLES.

66. Joachimi Langir Commentatio Historico-Hermeneutica de Vita et Epistolis apostoli Pauli, ita adornata, ut isagogen generalem et specialem historico-exegeticam præbeat in Acta Apostolorum et Pauli Epistolas, necnon in ipsam Hermeneuticam Sacram. Halæ, 1718, 4to.

A most valuable work, which is not of common occurrence; both Walchius and Michaelis concur in stating that it throws great tight on St. Paul's Epistles, of which it presents very copious analyses. The Appendix contains similar analyses of the epistles of Peter, James, and Jude; and also numerous aphorisms on the Interpretation of Scripture, and particularly of the phraseology of St. Paul's Epistles. The latter were corrected, enlarged, and reprinted at Halle, in 1733, in a separate volume, the title of which is given at length in p. 98. No. 24. supra.

67. Jo. Francisci Budder Ecclesia Apostolica, sive de Statu Ecclesiæ Christianæ sub Apostolis Commentatio Historico-Dogmatica; quæ et introductionis loco in Epistolas Pauli cæterorumque apostolorum esse queat. 8vo. Jenæ, 1729.

Buddeus has briefly treated on the state of the Christian Church during the apostolic age, with great judgment, and has referred to a great variety of useful writers.

68, Gulielmi Estit in omnes Pauli et aliorum Apostolorum Epistolas Commentarius, Paris, 1679, folio,

The best edition of a most valuable work, which Romanists and Protestants alike concur to recommend as an excellent critical help to the exposition of the apostolic Epistles. The Prefaces of Estius are particularly valuable. A very useful abridgment of this work, as well as of the Commentary of Cornelius à Lapide, so far as concerns St. Paul's Epistles, was published by John Van Gorcum, at Antwerp, in 1620, 8vo. The best edition is that of Louvain, entitled—Epitome commentariorum Gulielmi Estii S. Th. Doctoris, et Corn. à Lapide, e Soc. Jesu Theologi, in omnes D. Pauli Epistolas, per Johannem à Gorcum, Presbyterum, collecta. Editio nova, D. Pauli textu et G. Estii Præfectionibus aucta. Lovanii, 1754, 8vo.

though not a commentary, in the strict sense of the term, the author cannot pass in silence Bishor Burgess's Initia Pawlina, sive Introductio ad Lectionem Pawli Epistolarum. Londini, 1804, 12mo. This little volume contains, I. Pauli Epistolarum A Philippenses Gracee et Anglice, cum brevibus notis Kutmeri; 2. Theophylacti Procumia Epistolarum; 3. Ejusdeum Interpretationem Epistola ad Philippenses; 4. Rosenmülleri Scholia ad eandem. Quibus præeunt Kutmeri Observata de Idiomatibus Novi Testamenti. Though not specified in the title-page, there are added two valuable extracts from Henry Stephens's and our learned combryman Gataker's Dissertationes de Stylo Novi Testamenti; "thus collecting some of the most valuable illustrations of the style of St. Paul's Epistles that can be offered to the attention of the student." (British Critic, O. S. vol. xxv. p. 413.) This valuable work is at present out of print, and extremely scarce and dear.

69. Explication des Epîtres de Saint Paul. Par Bernardin de Picquierx. Paris, 1706, 3 tomes, 12mo. 1714, 4 tomes, 8vo. Troyes, 1826, 4 tomes, 12mo.

This is an abridgment of a larger work, by the same author, intituled Epistolarum Pauli Apostoli Triplex Expositio. Parisiis, 1703, folio. The exposition consists of three parts, viz. 1. An analysis, exhibiting the order and connection of the text; 2. A paraphrase, expressing in few words the sentiment of the apostle; and, 3. A commentary, with notes on obscure or difficult passages. (Walchii Bibliotheca Theologica, vol. iv. p. 678.) To each epistle is prefixed a prefatory account of its occasion, scope, and argument; and each chapter concludes with devotional and practical inferences. The reprint at Troyes, in 1826, is very neatly executed.

70. A New Literal Translation, from the Original Greek, of all the Apostolical Epistles; with a Commentary and Notes, philological, critical, explanatory, and practical. To which is added, a History of the Life of the Apostle Paul. By James Mackeleht, D.D. Edinburgh, 1795, 4to. 4 vols. London, 1806, 8vo. with the Greek Text, 6 vols. 2d edition, with the Life of the Author. Without the Greek Text, in 3 vols. 4to. and 4 vols. 8vo.

This work, together with the harmony noticed in p. 60. of this Appendix, is in Bishop Tomline's list of books for clergymen. A specimen of it, containing the Epistles to the Thessalonians, was published in 4to. in 1787; and the work itself, we are informed in Dr. M.'s Life (vol. i. 8vo. p. xv.), was the unremitting labour of nearly thirty years, during which period seldom less than eleven hours a day were employed on it. "We apprehend that few persons who shall peruse this work with competent judgment and due respect for the sacred writings, will hesitate to acknowledge that Dr. M. is also entitled to approbation and applause, as a faithful translator, a learned and able commentator, and a pious divine." (Monthly Review, N. S. vol. xviii. p. 411.) "It is a work of theological labour not often paralleled, and an ample storehouse of observations to exercise not only the student, but the adept of divinity. If we do not always implicitly coincide with the author in opinion (which, in such various matter, cannot reasonably be expected), we can always praise his diligence, his learning, and his piety; qualities which confer no trifling rank on any scriptural interpreter or commentator." (British Critic, O. S. vol. vii. Preface, p. ii.)

71. A Paraphrase and Annotations upon all St. Paul's Epistles. Done by several eminent men at Oxford. Corrected and improved by the late Right Rev. and learned Dr. Fell, Bishop of Oxford. London, 1703, 3d edition, 8vo.

"Fell on the Epistles is very short; but most of his notes are worthy of remark. The collection of parallel Scriptures is judicious, and the translation in some places altered for the better." (Dr. Doddridge.)

- 72. A Paraphrase and Notes on the Epistles of Saint Paul to the Galatians, 1 and 2 Corinthians, Romans, Ephesians. To which is prefixed, An Essay for the understanding of Saint Paul's Epistles, by consulting St. Paul himself. By John Locke. London, 1783, 4to. (Works, vol. iii.): also various editions in 4to. and 8vo.
- 73. A Paraphrase and Notes on the Epistles of Saint Paul to the Colossians, Philippians, and Hebrews, after the manner of Mr. Locke. To which are annexed, several Critical Dissertations on Particular Parts of Scripture, &c. &c. By the late reverend and learned Mr. James Pierce, of Exon. London, 1773, second edition, 4to.
- 74. A Paraphrase and Notes on the Epistles of Saint Paul to the Thessalonians, Timothy, Philemon, and Titus; and the Seven Catholic Epistles by James, Peter, Jude, and John, &c. &c. By George Benson, D.D. London, 1752, 1756, best editions. 2 vols. 4to.
- "Locke, Pierce, and Benson make up a complete commentary on the Epistles; and are indeed all in the number of the most ingenious commentators I have ever read. They plainly thought very closely, and attended much to connection, which they have often set in a most clear view. But they all err in too great a fondness for new interpretations, and in supposing the design of the apostles less general than it seems to have been. It must be allowed that Benson illustrates the spirit of Paul sometimes in an admirable manner, even beyond any former writer. See especially his Epistle to Philemon." (Dr. Doddridge.)
- 75. A Practical Paraphrase on the Epistles of Saint Paul to the Romans, Galatians, and the Epistle to the Hebrews, after the manner of Dr. Clarke's Paraphrase on the Four Evangelists. London, 1744, 8vo.
- 76. The Epistles of Paul the Apostle translated, with an Exposition and Notes. By the Rev. Thomas Belsham. London, 1822, 2 vols. 4to. also in 4 vols. 8vo.

Mr. Belsham is one of the reputed editors of the "Improved Version" of the New Testament, noticed in p 129. supra. This exposition of St. Paul's Epistles (which is noticed here only that the author may not be charged with designedly omitting it) is executed on the same principles. Able critiques on it may be seen in the Eclectic Review for May and June, 1823, in the fourth volume of the New Edinburgh Review, in the thirteenth volume of the Quarterly Review (in reply to which Mr. Belsham published "A Vindication," in 1825), and, lastly, in the twenty-second volume of indication," Review. Some very acute and learned observations, exposing Mr. Belsham's erroneous interpretations, will be found in the Christian Remembrancer for the year 1827.

77. Gottlob Christiani Storn, Interpretatio Epistolarum Pauli ad Philippenses, ad Colossenses, et ad Philemonem, ac etiam in Epistolam Jacobi. 8vo.

These valuable philological commentaries on the above-mentioned Epistles are inserted in the first and second volumes of Dr. Storr's Opuscula Academica ad Interpretationem Librorum Sacrorum perti-nentia, 8vo. Tubingen, 1796, 1797. Vol. ii. of the same collection also contains some valuable historical notices, which materially contri-bute to elucidate Saint Paul's Epistles to the Corinthians. We are further indebted to the same learned author for a similar philological commentary on the Epistle to the Galatians, in vol. ii. of Velthusen's and Kuinöel's collection of Commentationes Theologicæ.

78. Versio Latina Epistolarum Novi Testamenti, perpetua Annotatione illustrata a Godofr. Sigism. IASPIS. Lipsiæ, vol. i. 1793 : vol. ii. 1797, 8vo.

A new edition of this work, very materially enlarged and corrected, was published at Leipsic, in 1821.

78*. Commentarius Perpetuus in decem Apostoli Pauli quas vulgo dicunt Epistolas Minores. Edidit Joannes Fridericus WEINGART. Gothæ, 1816, 8vo.

A useful and unpretending little volume, expressly designed for those who may not have the means of procuring larger and more expensive commentaries. The author professes to have selected his materials from the best commentators, both ancient and modern, with whose annotations he has interwoven his own remarks. He acknowledges his obligations to the previous labours of Koppe and Rosenmüller: and references are introduced to those author have particularly illustrated texts of more than ordinary difficulty.

79. Annotations on the Epistles, being a continuation of Mr. Elsley's Annotations on the Gospels and Acts, and principally designed for the use of Candidates for Holy Orders. By the Rev. James SLADE, M.A. London, 1816, 2 vols. 8vo.

80. A Paraphrastic Translation of the Apostolic Epistles, with Notes. By Philip Nicholas SHUTTLEWORTH, D.D. Oxford and London, 1829, 8vo.

This admirably executed work is offered by its learned author expressly for the use of inexperienced biblical students and of general readers. He states his design to be to "give breadth and prominence to those minute but necessary links of reasoning, which are often so cursorily glanced at by the writers as to escape the observation of persons not in the habit of pursuing an elaborate argument through its finest details; to fill up those lacunæ of inference, the implied purport of which, though necessarily suggested to the experienced dialectician, does not by the context present itself to others less exercised in this species of elliptical composition; and to supply that fluency of context, by which even the languid and desultory reader, when indisposed to the labour of intense thought, may be enabled to take a comprehensive view of whole chain of the argument and of the object of the writer." Pref. pp. xvii. xviii. The divisions of chapter and verse are very properly thrown into the margin; and numerous notes are inserted, illustrating the scope and bearing of the apostles' reasoning; which exhibit in a comparatively small compass the substance of much learned and laborious research.

81. H. A. Schott et J. F. Winzer Commentarii in Libros Epistolicos Novi Testamenti. Vol. I. Epistolos ad Galatas et Thessalonicenses continens. Lipsiæ, 1834, 8vo.

This work is executed upon the same plan as Kuinöel's Commentary on the historical books of the New Testament, which is noticed in p 131. of this Appendix. The Greek text is inserted in the commentary. Vol. I., which is all that has hitherto appeared, contains the commentary on the Epistles to the Galatians and Thessalonians, which is written by Dr. Schott.

82. A Harmony of the Epistles of the Holy Apostles, to which is added a Summary of the Entire. By the Rev. Peter ROBERTS, M.A. Cambridge, 1800, 4to.

Though not a commentary in the strictest sense of the word, this work affords so valuable a help towards ascertaining the doctrinal agreement of the Epistles, that it deserves special See a farther account of its plan and execution in page 62. of this Appendix.

83. Essays on some of the Difficulties in the Writings of St. Paul. By Richard WHATELY, D.D. [now Archbishop of Dublin.] London, Vol. II.—Afp. London, 1828, 8vo.

84. Apostolical Preaching considered in an examination of St. Paul's Epistles. By John Bird SUMNER, M.A. [now D.D. and Bishop of Chester.] London, 1815, 8vo. and numerous subsequent editions.

85. The Life of Paul the Apostle, with Critical and Practical Remarks on his Discourses and Writings. By Stephen ADDING-TON, D.D. London, 1784, 8vo.

86. General Observations on the Writings of St. Paul. By John Her, D.D. Buckingham, 1811, 8vo.

This volume was not printed for sale: it contains many pleasing remarks on the style and writings of the Apostle Paul.

ROMANS.

87. Jo. Jac. RAMBACHII Introductio Historico-Theologica in Epistolam Pauli ad Romanos. Adjecta est Martini Lutheri aurea præfatio, variis observationibus exegeticis atque apologeticis illustrata. Halæ, 1727, 8vo.

Though not a commentary on the Epistle to the Romans, this introduction may very advantageously be substituted for one. Professor Tholuck has justly characterized it as being "written with a thorough knowledge of the subject." (Introd. to his Exposition of the Epistle to the Romans, vol. i. p. 34. Edinburgh, 1833.) Not a single point is omitted that can throw any light on the author, time and place of writing, the external and internal state of the Christian church at Paper. Christian church at Rome, the scope and style and the canonical authority of this admirable epistle. The preface of Luther truly deserves the epithet of golden: it illustrates the peculiar phraseology of the apostle, and his arguments of the chapters are singularly perspicuous. In our analysis, &c. of Saint Paul's Epistle to the Romans, we have been largely indebted to Rambach's publication.

87*. Commentary on the Epistle to the Romans. By John CALVIN. To which is prefixed his Life by Theodore Beza. Translated by Francis Sibson, A.B. London, 1834, small 8vo.

88. A Paraphrase and Notes on the Epistle to the Romans. to which is prefixed a Key to the Apostolic Writings, or an Essay to explain the Gospel Scheme and the principal Words and Phrases the Apostles have used in describing it. By J. TAX-LOR, D.D. Second and best edition, 1747, 4to.

The first edition of this celebrated and learned work appeared in 1745: two others were printed in the years 1754 and 1769. Archbishop Magee pronounces the system developed in this key to be "nothing more than an artificial accommodation of Scripture phrases to notions utterly repugnant to Christian doctrine." Dr. Taylor's scheme (which was Arian) is examined by Archbp. Magee in the first volume of his Discourses on the Atonement, pp. 181—188. 199—201. 322—333. Dr. Taylor's work contains, how-181—188. 199—201. 322—333. Dr. Taylor's work contains, how-ever, several valuable philological illustrations of the Epistle to the Romans, of which we have availed ourselves in the course of this Introduction.

89. Clavis Apostolica: or a Key to the Apostolic Writings, being an Attempt to explain the Scheme of the Gospel, and the principal Words and Phrases used by the Apostles in describing it. By the Rev. Joseph Mendham, A.M. London, 1821, 12mo.

This small volume is a republication of a series of papers which In small volume is a republication of a series of papers which originally appeared in the sixth volume of the Christian Observer, in opposition to the principles of Dr. Taylor's Key to the Epistle to the Romans, and which the late Archbp. Magee justly pronounced to be "a series of valuable letters." (On the Atonement, vol. ii. p. 344.) "Mr. Mendham's work is well entitled to our approbation, not less for the temperate and judicious manner in which it is written, than for the importance of the subject to which its discussions relate." (Eclectic Review, N. S. vol. xxi. p. 527.)

90. A Paraphrase, with Critical Annotations, on the Epistles of Saint Paul to the Romans and Galatians. By Timothy En-WARDS, A.M. London, 1752, 4to.

We notice this work, which is judiciously compiled from the best We notice this work, which is judiciously compiled from the beat previous commentaries on these two Epistles, because it is occasionally to be purchased at a cheap rate. "The author appears to us to have been a person of learning, judgment, and candour, and well acquainted with the sacred writings. He endeavours, in the first place, to give his readers a distinct view of the whole Epistle, to discover the true occasion of the apostle's writing it, the main subject of it, the principal branches of which it consists, and the subdivision of them into their proper sections, paragraphs, and periods; and then to clear up the connection of these several particulars, the seeming perplexity of the arguments, and the hidden force of the reasonings, in order to set forth the true meaning and coherence of the whole discourse in a clear light." (Monthly Review, O. S. vol. vii. p. 412.)

91. Jacobi Welleri Adnotationes in Epistolam Pauli ad Romanos. Brunswick, 1754, 4to.

92. Jo. Sal. Semlert Paraphrasis Epistolæ ad Romanos, cum Notis, translatione vetusta, et dissertatione de duplici Appendice hujus Epistolæ, in cap. xv. xvi. Halæ, 1769, small 8vo.

Semler also published similar paraphrases on the following Epistles: viz. 1 & 2 Corinthians, Halæ, 1770, 1776; Galatians, ibid. 1779; James, ibid. 1781; I Peter, ibid. 1783; 2 Peter and Jude, ibid. 1781; Revelation, Neustadt, 1785, and 1 John, to which is added by Professor Noesselt a Disquisition, entitled Narratio de Semlero ejusque meritis in interpretatione S. S. 8vo. Riga, 1792. Semler totally rejects those doctrines concerning original sin, &c. which are received as orthodox by the Protestant churches. His works are all scarce and dear in this country,—so that the student will not sustain any loss who may not be able to procure them. Semler also published similar paraphrases on the following Epis-

93. A Paraphrase on the Eleven First Chapters of Saint Paul's Epistle to the Romans. By the Rev. Thomas Adam. London, 1771, 8vo.

"This appears to be the performance of a sensible man, who desires to deliver the true sense of Scripture as far as he can attain it, and to advance the cause of piety among men. His method is, to lay a small number of verses before the reader at one view, in which are inserted a few words to illustrate and explain them, and which are inserted a few words to illustrate and explain them, and then he adds several observations upon the sense of the passage, with some practical remarks. On the whole, this paraphrase, not abounding in criticism, as some might expect, appears however to be a candid, well-meant, practical, and useful performance." (Monthly Review, O. S. vol. xlv. pp. 400, 401.) What further recommends this useful work is, the low price at which it may frequently be procured, it having been frequently reprinted.

94. Chr. Frid. Schwidii Annotationes in Epistolam Pauli ad Romanos. Lipsiæ, 1777, 8vo.

95. Sam. Frid. Nath. Mort Prælectiones in Epistolam Pauli ad Romanos, cum ejusdem versione Latinâ, locorumque quorundam Novi Testamenti difficiliorum interpretatione. Edidit J. T. T. Holtzapfel. Lipsiæ, 1794, 8vo.

96. Epistola Pauli ad Romanos, Græce, ex recensione novissima Griesbachii, cum commentario perpetuo. Edidit Chr. Fr. BORHME. Lipsiæ, 1806, Svo.

97. Pauli Epistola ad Romanos. Interprete Ern. Godofr. Adolpho Böckel. Gryphiæ, 1821, 8vo.

98. Horæ Romanæ: or an Attempt to elucidate St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans, by an original Translation, Explanatory Notes, and New Divisions. By Robert Cox, M.A. London, 1824, 8vo.

"While possessing merit of a high order, it is entirely free from display. The simplicity of the author's plan, and the extremely judicious manner in which he has executed it, entitle him to a measure of our praise which we have not often an occasion of awarding." (Eclectic Review, N. S. vol. xxiii. p. 72.) See also the Quarterly Theological Review, vol. ii. pp. 72—76.

99. Notes on the Epistle to the Romans, intended to assist Students in Theology, and others, who read the Scriptures in the Originals. By Samuel H. Turner, D.D. New York, 1824, 8vo.

These "Notes" are strictly exegetical, not polemical; and are designed to explain the force and connection of St. Paul's arguments. This object is completely attained by Professor Turner, who has made considerable use of the labours of the German biblical critics, against whose extravagant interpretations and critiques he has, very properly, cautioned his readers. A translation of Koppe's Latin Introduction to the Epistle to the Romans is prefixed; and the work concludes with a well-written "Essay for the consideration of Theological Students."

100. The Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the Romans; with an Introduction, Paraphrase, and Notes. By C. H. Ternor, A.M. London, 1828, 8vo.

The design of this publication is, to bring together such information as may assist young students of divinity in obtaining a right understanding of St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans. By way of apunderstanding of St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans. By way of apparatus towards an examination of the Epistle, the author has prefixed, 1. A Chronological Table of the Acts of that Apostle, abridged from Bishop Pearson's Annales Paulini; 2. A brief Exposition of the occasion, date, and genuineness of the Epistle; 3. An Analysis of its contents; 4. A Critical Inquiry into the meaning of the theological terms, which in our authorized version are rendered justify and justification, faith, law, and works of the law, flesh, and impute; and, 5. A List of all the Passages of the Old Testament quoted in the Epistle to the Romans. The Greek text follows, according to Dr. Knappe's third edition (Halæ, 1824), and on the opposite page is given the author's paraphrase. The volume concludes with a collection of notes, in the composition of which Mr. Terrot has availed himself of the previous works of the most distinguished British commentators and divines, and also of the philological labours of the most eminent continental critics. "This work derives its chief commendation, not so much for what it has accomrives its chief commendation, not so much for what it has accomplished, as for the plan of study which it opens up to the young divine; showing, by a very successful example, the aid which may be brought to theological investigation from the stores of general literature, and especially from those other sources where the fruit of the tree of knowledge is not altogether unmixed." (British Critic, Aoril, 1829, vol. v. p. 346.)

101. A Commentary on the Epistle to the Romans, with a Translation and various Excursus. By Moses STUART, Professor of Sacred Literature in the Theological Seminary at Andover. Andover [Massachusetts], 1832. London, 1833, 8vo.

"If candour, integrity of purpose, and apostolic piety, united to deep research, persevering industry, and varied erudition, could qualify any man for the task of translating and expounding critically the most difficult of the Pauline Epistles, we believe that Professor Stuart possesses these endowments. Whatever be the errors in his and our author is the last man to claim infallibilityarise from the general infirmity of human nature; they are not introduce I either to support the views of a polemical partisan, or to maintain the hypothesis of an obstinate disputant. The publica-tion before us is eminently distinguished both for repeated acknowledgment of all the difficulties attendant upon the respective interpretations of the 'vexati loci,' and for unwearied patience in disentangling the web in which controversialists have loved to involve this sublime epistle."..."Mr. Stuart is original both in his translation and his comments. He at one time objects to Calvin, at another to Arminius: and we do not think that any partisan will have reason to quarrel with the Professor for a blind adherence to any 'set of opinions.'" (British Critic, for October, 1833, pp. 430, 431.)

"The Translation is covabed in all controlled the respective interpretation of the state of ledgment of all the difficulties attendant upon the respective inter-

"The Translation is couched in elegant language, and divided "The Translation is couched in elegant language, and divided with great care into sections, each of which has an appropriate, if not perfectly correct, title, and is subdivided into paragraphs as the sense requires. A great deal of the obscurity of the epistle, as it stands in the common version, is removed by the hypothesis that in chapter iii., and in several other places, Saint Paul quotes and answers a supposed objector. The queries and objections thus quoted and answered, Mr. Stuart has distinguished by quotation marks, which render the epistle at once more interesting and more intelligible. Mr. Stuart has also rendered the particles so skilfully, as to give the whole epistle the appearance, not of a parcel of dissectia intelligible. Mr. Stuart has also rendered the particles so skilfully, as to give the whole epistle the appearance, not of a parcel of dispecta membra, accidently thrown together, but of a connected and orderly treatise. He has also given a faithful representation of the original, as regards the use of the article. The Commentary is a work of great labour. The author seems seldom to have contented himself with second-hand observations, but to have consulted for himself all original authorities, and to have faithfully prepared himself to meet any probable or possible objection to his own views." (American Monthly Review, Nov. 1832, vol. ii. p. 393.)

This Commentary and Excursus are filled with interesting and valuable information. The work is intended for young students in divinity, and therefore we meet often with minute criticisms, which to the matured scholar and theologian may appear unnecessary, but which will be found highly useful to the beginner, as they will draw his attention to nice points of theology, and so tend to give him accuracy as well as extent of knowledge.

The London impression of 1833 is handsomely and very correctly printed under the editorial care of the Rev. Drs. J. P. Smith and E. Henderson.

102. Exposition of St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans; with Extracts from the Exegetical Works of the Fathers and Re-Translated from the original German of Dr. Fred. Aug. Gottreu Tholuge, Professor of Theology in the Royal University of Halle. By the Rev. Robert Menzies. Vol. I. Edinburgh, 1833, 12mo.

This work forms part of the Edinburgh Biblical Cabinet, noticed in p. 72. No. 2. supra. The learned author, Professor Tholuck, has had the distinguished honour of standing foremost among the has had the distinguished honour of standing foremost among the defenders of ancient orthodoxy against the modern neologians of Germany: and "the Commentary on the Epistle to the Romans is the most important work which has hitherto proceeded from his pen. The universal approbation it has received from the friends of evangelical truth, and the fierce hostility with which it has been assailed by the rationalist party in Germany" (where, notwithstanding it has passed through many editions), "afford the most satisfactory evidence of its distinguished worth." (Translator's preface, p. xii.) Professor Stuart, in the preface to his admirable work on the epistle to the Romans (p. vii.), has expressed the preface, p. xii.) Professor Stuart, in the preface to his admirable work on the epistle to the Romans (p. vii.), has expressed the highest approbation of Dr. Tholuck's labours, to which he acknowledges himself "most of all indebted." The purchaser of Professor Stuart's work with find it desirable to study Dr. T.'s Exposition in connection with it. The translator has ably performed his difficult task, and has enriched the volume with an instructive preface.

103. A Critical Exposition of the Ninth Chapter of the Epistle to the Romans, as far as is supposed to relate to the Doctrine of Predestination. By J. FAWCETT. London, 1752, 104. St. Paul's Wish to be accursed from Christ illustrated, and vindicated from Misconstructions. With an Appendix, containing a Collection of the most material Observations upon the Text by ancient and modern Writers. By Bartholomew KEELING. Oxford, 1766, 8vo.

105. De Consecutione Sententiarum in Pauli ad Romanos Epistola Commentatio. Auctore Ernesto Friderico Hoeppnero Lipsiæ, 1828, 8vo.

1 AND 2 CORINTHIANS.

106. Pauli ad Corinthios Epistolæ, Græce, perpetua annotatione illustratæ, a Fr. Aug. Guil. Krause, vol. i. complectens Epistolam priorem. Francofurti, 1792, 8vo.

107. A Paraphrase of Saint Paul's First Epistle to the Corinthians, with Explanatory Notes. By the Rev. J. G. Tolley, M.A. London, 1825, 8vo.

109. Commentarius in priorem Divi Pauli ad Corinthios Epistolam. Auctore Aug. Ludov. Christ. Heydenneich. Marburgi, 1827-28, 2 vols. 8vo.

The first volume contains the first eight chapters of St. Paul's First Epistle to the Cornithians. The remaining chapters are illustrated in the second volume. In the prolegomena the author has given a concise account of the city of Corinth, the introduction of Christianity, and the state of the Christian church, together with the occasion and argument of the epistle, its canonical authority and authenticity; and a list of the best commentators on this particular epistle. The commentary is principally philological.

109. Animadversiones ad Cap. III. et XIII. Epistolæ Pauli I. ad Corinthios. Scripsit Dr. Ant. Georg. Holmann. Lipsiæ, 1819. 8vo.

This tract elucidates certain words and difficult passages in the third and thirteenth chapters of St. Paul's first Epistle to the Corinthians.

110. Observationes ad Versus postremos Capitis XIII. prioris Pauli ad Corinthios Epistolæ recte intelligendos. Auctore A. Schott. Jenæ, 1823, 4to.

111. Commentatio Critica et Exegetica in Paulinæ Epistolæ ad Corinthios caput XIII. Scripsit Dr. L. G. PAREAU. Trajecti ad Rhenum, 1828, 8vo.

112. A Paraphrase on the Fifteenth Chapter of the First Epistle to the Corinthians, with Critical Notes and Observations, and a preliminary Dissertation; a Commentary, with Critical Remarks, on the Sixth, Seventh, and part of the Eighth Chapters of the Romans, &c. By John ALEXANDER. London, 1766, 4to.

See an account of this tract, in the Monthly Review, O. S. vol. xxxiv. pp. 443-451.

113. Pauli ad Corinthios Epistola secunda, perpetua annotatione illustrata, a Jo. Georg. Frid. Leun. Lemgoviæ, 1804, 8vo.

114. Epistola Pauli ad Corinthios posterior, Græce. Perpetuo Commentario illustravit A. G. Emmenling. Lipsie, 1823, 8vo.

115. Disputatio de alterà Pauli ad Corinthios Epistolà, et observandà in illà Apostoli indole et oratione, quam pro summis in theologià honoribus in Academia Rheno-Traject, publico examini submittit Herm. Jo. ROYAABDS. Trajecti ad Rhenum, 1818, 8vo.

This well compiled academical dissertation consists of three parts, in which the author examines, 1. The second Epistle to the Corinthians; 2. The character of Saint Paul; and, 3. The language and style of the apostle. The second division is particularly valuable.

116. C. F. A. FRITSCHE, De nonnullis Posterioris Pauli ad Corinthios Epistolæ Locis Dissertationes Duæ. Lipsiæ, 1824, 8vo.

117. Alberti Gerhardi Becker, Conjectanea in Locum Paulinum 2 Corinth. XII. 7-9. Magdeburgi, 1822, 8vo.

GALATIANS AND EPHESIANS.

118. Sam. Frid. Nath. Mort Acroases in Epistolas Paulinas ad Galatas et Ephesios. Lipsiæ, 1795, 8vo.

119. A Commentary on Saint Paul's Epistle to the Galatians, translated from the Latin of Martin LUTHER. 8vo. and 2 vols. 12mo.

There are also editions extant in folio and 4to. of this valuable work, which completely expose the doctrine of justification by works alone. We may apply to it in particular what Erasmus is recorded to have said of Luther's commentaries in general:—
"There is more solid divinity contained in one page than could be found in many prolix treatises of schoolmen and such kind of authors." (Middleton's Biographia Evangelica, vol. i. p. 230.) Walchius states that Protestants and Catholics have both concurred in their commendations of Luther's work. (Biblioth. Theolog. vol. iv. p. 607.)

120. A Paraphrase and Notes on the Epistles of Saint Paul to the Galatians and Ephesians, with Doctrinal and Practical Observations, together with a Critical and Practical Commentary on the Two Epistles of Saint Paul to the Thessalonians. By the late learned Samuel Canneller, D.D. London, 1777, 4to.

"The paraphrase clearly and fully expresses the meaning of the sacred writer; the notes are enriched by original quotations from Greek and Latin authors, in order to illustrate and confirm the learned commentator's own criticisms, and many doctrinal and practical observations are interspersed, with a view of farther explaining the tendency of the apostle's reasoning, and improving the moral temper and conduct of the reader." "The commentary on the two Episiles to the Thessalonians is more diffuse: the author has every where introduced references to original writers, with whom none were more conversant, and omitted no opportunity of subjoining practical reflections, adapted to the various passages which he had previously explained by learned and liberal criticism." (Monthly Review, O. S. vol. Ivi. pp. 161, 162.)

121. Interpretatio Epistolæ Pauli ad Galatas, auctore E. A. Borger. Lugd. Bat. 1807, 8vo.

122. Pauli ad Galatas Epistola. Latinè vertit, et Commentario Perpetuo illustravit Doctor et Professor G. B. Winer. Lipsim, 1821; Editio secunda, aucta et emendata, 1827; Editio tertia, aucta et emendata, 1829, 8vo.

While this sheet was passing through the press, a translation of this valuable work by the Rev. W. Cunningham was amounced as forming part of the Edinburgh Biblical Cabinet. Copions illustrations were to be added from the previous commentaries of Koppe, Borger, and others.

123. Gottlob Frid. Gude de Ecclesiæ Ephesinæ Statu imprimis ævo apostolico, Commentatio Historico-Exegetico-Critica. Accedit Vita S. Apostoli Pauli per Georgium Majorem descripta. Lipsiæ, 1732, 8vo.

124. Joannis Tarnovii Commentarius in Epistolas Pauli ad Ephesios, ad Philippenses, ad Colossenses, et ad Thessalonicenses, 4to. Rostochii, 1636.

PHILIPPIANS.

125. The Church at Philippi, or the Doctrines and Conduct of the early Christians illustrated: Intended to serve as an Historical Commentary upon St. Paul's Epistle to the Philippians. By Henry Samuel Barnes. London, 1834, 12mo.

126. Meinardi Henrici Schotani Analysis et Commentarius in Epistolam Paulli ad Philippenses. Franckers, 1737, 4to.

127. Antonii Friderici Buschingii Introductio Historico-Theologica in Epistolam Paulli ad Philippenses. Halæ, 1746, 128. Pauli Apostoli Epistola ad Philippenses, Græcè ex Recensione Griesbachiana nova Versione Latina et Annotatione perpetua illustrata, à J. G. Am-Ende. 8vo. Vitebergs, 1798.

129. Specimen Academicum Inaugurale de Cœtus Christianorum Philippensis Conditione primæva, ex Epistolâ iis ab Apostolo Paulo scriptâ præcipue dijudicandâ a Johanne Hoos. Lugduni Batavorum, 1825, 8vo.

The origin and state of the church at Philippi, the date, place where written, scope and argument of the Epistle to the Philippians, are discussed in this academical dissertation, which happily elucidates many passages of that epistle.

COLOSSIANS.

130. Expositio Epistolæ D. Pauli ad Colossenses, per reverendum in Christo Patrem, Joannem [Davenant] Episcopum Sarisburiensem jam primum edita: olim ab eodem, Dominæ Margaretæ in Academia Cantabrigiensi Professore Theologico, dictata. Cantabrigiæ, 1627, folio.

131. An Exposition of the Epistle of St. Paul to the Colossians, by the Right Rev. John Davenant, D.D., Bishop of Salisbury. Translated from the Original Latin, with a Life of the Author, and Notes. By the Rev. Josiah Allport. London, 1831-32, 2 vols. 8vo.

As Bishop Davenant's valuable exposition of St. Paul's epistle to the Colorsians had long become extremely scarce, Mr. Allport has conferred no small favour on biblical students, by rendering his work accessible to English readers. "The translation not only possesses the more ordinary and absolutely indispensable prerequisites of general accuracy and fidelity, but the more rare recommendations of considerable care, propriety, and even elegance."... "A very valuable feature of the present work is, that the Editor has appended (in the form of notes), biographical sketches of the Fathers and Schoolmen whose names so profusely adorn the pages of Davenant."... "His notes contain a great deal of curious and valuable information. The Sketch of the Life of Davenant deserves the highest praise: it is the only attempt that has ever been made to give any thing like a detailed account of the history and writings of that great and good man." (Eclectic Review, February, 1833.)

132. An Exposition upon the Epistle to the Colossians. Wherein not only the text is methodically analyzed, but the sense of the words, by the help of writers, both ancient and modern, is explained. By N. BYFIELD. London, 1615, folio.

1750, 8vo.

133. The Epistles of St. Paul to the Colossians, to the Thessalonians, to Timothy, and to Titus, and the General Epistle of St. James: a new Version from the Greek, and chiefly from the Text of Griesbach. By Philalethes. [John Jones, LL.D.] London, 1820, 12mo.

Of this translation, which in many instances is made to support the scheme of the modern Socinians, the reader will find an account in the Eclectic Review (N. S.), vol. xiv. pp. 277—283.

134. Isagoge in Epistolam a Paulo Apostolo ad Colossenses datam Theologica, Historica, Critica, accesserunt Enarratio cap. I. Coloss. v. 1—14. et Excursus epistolam spectantes tres. Confecit Gulielmus Военменул. Berolini, 1829, 8vo.

135. Gulielmi Boehmeri Symbolæ Biblicæ ad Dogmaticam Christianam sive Observationes in Sectionem Apostolicam Coloss. I. v. 18—23. Wratislaviæ, 1833, 8vo.

1 AND 2 THESSALONIANS.

136. An Exposition upon the two Epistles of the Apostle Saint Paul to the Thessalonians. By the Rev. Father John Jewel, late Bishop of Sarisburie. London, 1583, 12:no. Reprinted in 1811, 8vo.

This valuable Commentary on the Epistles to the Thessalonians is printed in the folio edition of Bp. Jewel's works (London, 1609), and also in the seventh volume of the compilation, entitled the "Fathers of the English Church."

137. Joannis Alphonsi Turretini Commentarius Theoreticopracticus in Epistolas Divi Pauli ad Thessalonicenses. Basileæ, 1739, 8vo. also in the second volume of the collective edition of Turretin's Works, in 4to.

138. The Greek of the Epistle of Saint Paul to the Thessalonians explained. By John Phillips. London, 1751, 4to,

"This work contains the Greek Text, but no translation. The notes are very considerable. They are philological, critical, and theological. It was designed as a specimen of a work upon all the Epistles, but which was never completed. It is exceedingly scarce." (Orme's Biblioth. Bibl. p. 349.)

139. Pauli Epistolæ ad Thessalonicenses. Recensuit, veterum recentiorumque notas selectas congessit, suasque adjecit, et tamquam specimen novæ editionis Epistolarum Pauli edidit F. Schleiermacher. Berolini, 1823, 8vo.

140. Specimen Academicum Inaugurale de Cœtus Christianorum Thessalonicensis Ortu Fatisque, et prioris Pauli iis scriptæ Epistolæ Consilio atque Argumento. Auctore Joanne Jacobo Burgerhoudt. Lugduni Batavorum, 1825, 8vo.

This Dissertation may be considered as a valuable introduction to the first Epistle to the Thessalonians: every topic which is necessary to the correct understanding of it, is satisfactorily discussed.

141. Epistolas Pauli ad Thessalonicenses commentario et delectis Patrum Ecclesiasticorum expositionibus, margini subjectis, illustravit Ludovicus Pelt. Gryphiswaldiæ, 1830, 8vo.

142. J. G. REIGHE Authentiæ posterioris ad Thessalonicenses Epistolæ Vindiciæ. Gottingæ, 1830, 4to.

1 AND 2 TIMOTHY, TITUS, AND PHILEMON.

143. D. Pauli Epistolæ ad Timotheum, Titum et Philemonem, Observationibus grammaticis, historicis, logicis, theologicis illustratæ ab Abrahamo Sculteto. Francofurti, 1624, 4to.

144. S. Pauli Apostoli Epistola utraque ad Timotheum, cum Commentario Joannis Coccess. Lugduni Batavorum, 1667, 4to.

145. Beckhaus (Joach, Frid.) Specimen Observationum Critico-Exegeticarum de Vocabulis ἀπαξ λεγομενος et rarioribus dicendi Formulis in prima ad Timotheum Epistola Paulina obviis, Authentiæ ejus nihil detrahentibus. Lingæ, 1810, 8vo.

146. A. Curtii de Epistolæ prioris ad Timotheum authentiâ, cum aliquo vitæ Paulinæ tempore conciliandâ Commentatio. Berolini, 1828, 8vo.

147. Commentationes de Epistolà posteriori Pauli ad Timotheum. Scripsit Johannes Bröchnen. Hafniæ, 1829, 8vo.

148. Petri von Haven Commentatio Analytica in Epistolam Paulli ad Titum. Halæ, 1742, 4to.

149. A Commentary on the Epistle of Saint Paul written to Titus. By Thomas Taxlor. Cambridge, 1612, 4to. 1658, folio.

Walchius speaks very highly of this commentary, both in a philological and in a practical point of view. (Bibl. Theol. Select. vol. iv. p. 723.) The learned author was a frequent preacher before Queen Elizabeth and King James I.

150. Henrici Hummelli Explanatio Epistolæ Apostoli Pauli ad Philemonem. Tiguri, 1670, folio.

151. Pauli ad Philemonem Epistola, Græce et Latine, illustrata a Lebr. Gottl. Schmidio. Lipsiæ, 1786, 8vo.

HEBBEWS

152. An Exposition of the Epistle to the Hebrews, with preliminary Exercitations. By John Owen, D.D. Folio, 4 vols. London, 1668-74, 8vo. 7 vols.

This work is particularly valuable for its illustration of the Epistle to the Hebrews by the aid of Rabbinical learning: it is replete with doctrinal and experimental remarks. A well executed abridgment of it was published in 4 vols. 8vo. 1790, by the late Dr. Edward Williams, of which a new edition was printed in 1815, 4 vols. 8vo.

153. Joannis Braunii Commentarius in Epistolam ad Hebræos, cum indicibus locupletissimis et quibusdam tabulis æneis elegantissimis. Amstel. 1705, 4to.

Professor Braun or Braunius is well known for several valuable pieces elucidating sacred antiquities. His commentary on the Epistle to the Hebrews, in the opinion of J. B. Carpzov, is one of the best ever edited. It is indeed truly valuable for its illustrations by the aid of Rabbinical learning: and the author is particularly able in refuting the perverse interpretations of the celebrated Socinian teacher, Schlichtingius.

154. An Exposition of the Epistle to the Hebrews, by Mr. Robert Duncan, minister of the Gospel. Edinburgh, 1731, 8vo.

A useful and cheap exposition of the Epistle to the Hebrews.

155. Joannis Benedicti Carpzovii Exercitationes in Pauli
Epistolam ad Hebræos ex Philone Alexandrino. Helmstadt,

A work of singular utility in explaining the phraseology of St. Paul's Epistle to the Hebrews.

156. A Paraphrase and Notes on the Epistle to the Hebrews. By the late Rev. James Peirce. With a Paraphrase and Notes on the last three chapters of the Hebrews left unfinished by Mr. Peirce, and an Essay to discover the author of the Epistle and Language in which it was originally written. By Joseph Hallet, jun. London, 1733, 4to.

This forms part of the work noticed in p. 134. No. 72. of this Appendix. "Some of the sentiments," says Professor Stuart, "differ widely from those of Owen, and are such as ought to be examined with great caution; but the work, as a whole, exceeds any English commentary which I have read. The author has a great deal of acuteness, and is by no means wanting in regard to a tact for criticism." (Stuart on the Epistle to the Hebrews, vol. i. p. 286. American edition, or p. 346. London edition.)

157. A Paraphrase and Notes on the Epistle to the Hebrews. To which is prefixed an Inquiry into:—the Author of this Epistle; when it was written; the manner of citing the Old Testament; and the method of reasoning in it, &c. By Arthur Ashley SYKES, D.D. London, 1755, 4to.

158. Joannis Augusti Ernesti Lectiones Academicæ in Epistolam ad Hebræos ab ipso revisæ, cum ejusdem excursibus theologicis edidit; Commentarium, in quo multa ad recentissimorum imprimis interpretum sententias pertinentia uberius illustrantur, adjecit Gotlib Immanuel Dindorf. Lipsiæ, 1815, royal 8vo.

These Academic Lectures of Ernesti were delivered by that eminent scholar and divine while he was professor of drvinity at Leipsic. They have been edited from his corrected copy, with various important additions by Professor Dindorf, who succeeded him in the Hebrew chair at Leipsic. These are included between brackets, with the initial letter D., and require to be read with caution, Prof. Dindorf's sentiments on the person of Christ not being the most correct. On some of the earlier chapters there are also some marginal observations of an anonymous pupil of Ernesti's, which are distinctly marked. Professor Stuart characterizes it as "a book of real worth in a critical respect, although not executed with much taste as to form and matter." (On the Epistle to the Hebrews, vol. i. p. 287. American edition; or p. 347. London edition.)

159. A Paraphrase and Commentary on the Epistle to the Hebrews. By Archibald Maclean. London, 1819, 2 vols. 8vo.

160. Epistola ad Hebræos, Latinè versa et largo explicata commentario, a Chr. Frid. Военмя. Lipsiæ, 1823, 8vo.

161. Epître aux Hébreux, divisée d'après les matières, avec des sommaires indiquant le contenu et l'objet de chaque division et sous-division, des notes, et des intercalations explicatives entremêlés au texte. Génève, 1824, 8vo.

161*. A Commentary on the Epistle to the Hebrews. By Moses Stuart, Associate Professor of Sacred Literature in the Theological Seminary at Andover, United States. Andover, 1827, 2 vols. 8vo. Second edition, revised and enlarged, 1833, in 1 volume, 8vo.

This masterly work originated in the arduous duties incident to the office which Professor Stuart has for some years filled, with equal credit to himself, and benefit to the Theological Seminary at Andover. To borrow the just character given of his labours by the English editor (the Rev. Dr. Henderson):—"It was impossible for any person who had perused the former works of our author not to hail with high anticipations the present production as a most valuable accession to biblical literature. Intimately acquainted with the minutie of Hebrew grammar; familiar with the diversified style of the sacred writers; trained by long study of the laws of biblical exegesis to a refined and matured tact in seizing the point, the bearing, the various shades and ramifications of meaning couched under the sacred phraseology; imbued with a sincere love of divine truth, and a profound reverence for its dictates; and, withal, endowed with a manly and richly cultivated intellect, he possesses qualifications peculiarly fitting him for the performance of a work replete with so many difficulties as that of a Translation and Critical Commentary on the Epistle to the Hebrews. The ordeal to which this important portion of Scripture has been subjected by the wild and extravagant hypotheses of some of the master-spirits of German theology, rendered it a matter of imperious necessity that some champion, completely accounted and disciplined to the battle, should step forward and take up the gauntlet which they have so fearlessly and vauntingly thrown down. If we mistake not, such a champion has here entered the field, and won the day. Questions respecting style, authorship, and interpre-tation, which men of such celebrity as Eichhorn, Bertholdt, De , and others, were considered to have completely set at rest, have been submitted to a fresh and rigid investigation; and in most instances triumphantly, in all more or less satisfactorily, the very reverse of their conclusions has been shown to be in accordance with the real facts of the case." (Preface to the English edition,

p. v.)
The topics discussed in the FIRST VOLUME, in forty sections, are—the form of the epistle; to what church or churches it was addressed; its antiquity and canonical authority; the external and internal evidence that it was written by the apostle Paul, who is most decisively shown to have been its author. The various objections of Bertholdt, Schulz, Seyffarth, De Wette, and Boehme, are discussed, and satisfactorily refuted: to them succeeds a confidence of the succeeds a confidence of the second sec sideration of the style of the epistle and of the hypotheses advo-cated by some learned men, who have severally ascribed it to Bar-nabas, Luke, Clement of Rome, and to Apollos. These hypotheses are shown to be destitute of foundation. The volume concludes are shown to be destitute of foundation. The volume concludes with a brief notice of the "Critical and Exegetical Helps" to the study of this epistle. The SECOND VOLUME commences with a new translation of the Epistle to the Hebrews, the object of which is to give a more exact view of the features of the original Greek than is presented by the authorized English version. tion is followed by an admirable continuous commentary upon the whole epistle. When difficulties demanded special and extended investigation, he has thrown the result of such investigation into excursus at the end, after the method pursued by Heinrichs, Koppe, Dindorf, and other German philologers and critics; because diffi-cult subjects can there be treated and studied with more convemience, and also more fully, than if intermixed with the usual series of exegetical notes. The London reprint has been edited with great care by the Rev. Dr. HENDERSON.

162. A literal Translation of St. Paul's Epistle to the Hebrews, from the original Greek, with copious explanatory notes. By the late Rev. George Vaughan Sampson, M.A. Edited by his son, the Rev. G. V. Sampson. London, 1828, 8vo.

163. Christiani Theophili Kuinöel Commentarius in Epistolam ad Hebræos. Lipsiæ, 1831, 8vo.

"With the idiom and spirit of Paul's writings, I cannot help thinking him to be but very moderately acquainted. On questions of higher criticism he details with a good deal of brevity and accuracy what others have said; but he adds nothing to the stock of thought already before the world." (Prof. Stuart, in the Andover Biblical Repository, January, 1833, vol. iii. p. 160.)

164. G. M. ANTHOR Commentatio Exegetico-Dogmatica in tres priores versus capitis primi Epistolæ ad Hebræos scriptæ. Coburgi, 1828, 8vo.

165. De Epistolæ, quæ dicitur ad Hebræos, Indole maxime peculiari Librum composuit Traugott Augustus Seyffarth. Lipsie, 1821, 8vo.

An elaborate investigation of the style, scope, &c. of the Epistle to the Hebrews; the main object of which is, to disprove the Pauline origin of this epistle. Dr. Seyffarth's hypothesis is completely refuted by Professor Stuart in his Commentary on the Epistle to the Hebrews, vol. i. § 28.

165°. Petri Hoffstede de Gnoot Disputatio qua Epistola ad Hébræos cum Paulinis Epistolis comparatur. Trajecti ad Rhenum, 1826, 8vo.

The Epistle to the Hebrews is here collated with the other writings of St. Paul: at the end there is an index, showing under various heads the coincidence between them. It is a very valuable 166. Essai Critique sur l'Authenticité de l'Epître aux Hébreux. Par Henry-Louis LAHABPE. Toulouse, 1832, 8vo.

This academical disquisition, which was publicly defended before the Theological Faculty at Montauban for the degree of Bachelor in Divinity, is partly translated and partly abridged with much judgment from the first Volume of Professor Stuart's Commentary on the Epistle to the Hebrews.

167. Vindiciæ Originis Paulinæ ad Hebræos Epistolæ, nova ratione tentatæ a Frid. Christ. Geleke. Lugduni Batavorum,

The object of this disquisition is to prove the Pauline origin of the Epistle to the Hebrews, from the coincidence of sentiments and expressions which the author conceives he has found between the Epistle to the Hebrews and some of Seneca's writings; which coincidence, he is of opinion, cannot be fortuitous, but is solely to be derived from Paul's intimate acquaintance with the Roman Philosopher. He further argues in favor of the historical tradition respecting Paul's intimacy with Seneca, and endeavours to show, from internal criteria of time, that the Epistle to the Hebrews was written during the continuance of that intimacy. The hypothesis written during the continuance of that intimacy. The hypothesis is maintained with great ingenuity, though it will not (we apprehend) carry conviction to the minds of its readers.

THE SEVEN CATHOLIC EPISTLES.

- 168. Gottlob Christiani Storn opusculum de Catholicarum Epistolarum occasione et scopo. (In the second volume of his collected Opuscula, pp. 367-415.)
- 169. A Practical Paraphrase on the Seven Catholic Epistles, after the manner of Dr. Clarke's Paraphrase on the Four Evangelists. By Samuel Collet. London, 1734, 8vo.
- 170. Epistolarum Catholicarum Septenarius, Græce, cum nova versione Latina, ac scholiis grammaticis atque criticis, opera Joh. Benedicti CARPZOVII. Halæ, 1790, 8vo.

In this work, the received Greek text of the Seven Catholic Epistles is retained, and the punctuation is corrected where the editor deemed correction necessary. The new Latin version, which is printed with the Greek text, is very close: and in his scholia or notes Professor Carpzov has vindicated his rendering of particular passages, or discussed various readings of importance; and has also illustrated the peculiar idioms occurring in these epistles, especially those of St. John.

SAINT JAMES, AND 1 AND 2 PETER.

- 171. Annotatio ad Epistolam Jacobi perpetua cum brevi Tractatione Isagogica. Scripsit Matth. Schreckenburger. Stuttgardiæ, 1832, 8vo.
- 172. Commentarius in Epistolam Jacobi. Conscripsit Car. Godofr. Guil. THEILE. Lipsiæ, 1833, 8vo.
- 173. A Practical Commentary, or an Exposition with Notes on the Epistle of James. By Thomas Manton. London, 1653, 4to.
- 173*. Sam. Frid. Nathan. Mont Prælectiones in Jacobi et Petri Epistolas. Edidit C. A. Donat. Lipsiæ, 1794, 8vo.
- etri Epistolas. Editat C. A. Donat. 174. A Commentary on the First Epistle of Peter, by Robert Glasgow. 2 vols. 8vo. Various LEIGHTON, D.D. Archbishop of Glasgow. 2 vols. 8vo.

This admirable commentary, which fills the first two volumes of Archbishop Leighton's works, is wholly practical, and has long been admired for its piety. Dr. Doddridge, in his paraphrase on this Epistle, has acknowledged himself deeply indebted to Archbishop Leighton for many important hints.

175. Huberti Philippi de Kanter Commentatio in locum 1 Petri V. 1—4. Lugduni Batavorum, 1823, 4to.

176. In secundam S. Petri Apostoli Epistolam Commentarius. Auctore Thoma SMITH, S.T.P. In pp. 177-372. of his Miscellanea. Londini, 1690, 8vo.

177. A Dissertation on 2 Pet. i. 16-21. in which the Force of the Apostle's reasoning is shown, and the connection of the whole passage is explained. By William PRIMATT. London, 1751, 8vo.

178. A Dissertation upon the controverted passages in St. Peter and St. Jude concerning the Angels that sinned, and who kept not their first estate. By Samuel HENLEY. London, 1778, 8vo.

1, 2, AND 3 JOHN.

179. Epistolæ tres Catholicæ S. Joannis Græce, notis illustratæ a Leonhardo Christophoro Ruhlio. Amstelodami, 1739, 12mo.

180. Sam. Frid. Nath. Mont Prelectiones Exegetice in tres Johannis Epistolas, cum nova earundem paraphrasi Latina. Cura C. A. Hempel. Lipsiæ, 1797, 8vo.

This work contains a free Latin version of St. John's three Epistles, as it was dictated by the late celebrated Professor Morus $^{\rm t}$ The Paraphrases of Dr. Benson on these Epistles have already been noticed in No. 74, p.134. of this Appendix.

in his Divinity Lectures, together with his observations on it, and | two critical Excursus, one of which relates to the disputed passage in 1 John v. 7, 8.

- 181. A Commentary upon the First, Second, and Third Epistles of Saint John. By Thomas HAWKINS. London, 1808, 8vo.
- 182. Joh. Jac. RAMBONNET, Specimen Academicum de Secunda Epistola Johannea. Trajecti ad Rhenum, 1819, 8vo.
- 183. Versio Latina Epistolarum et Libri Visorum Joannis Novi Testamenti, perpetua adnotatione illustrata a M. Godofr. Sigismund. IASPIS. Editio altera, novis curis emendata et aucta. Lipsiæ, 1821, 8vo.

JUDE.

- 184. An Exposition of the Epistle of Jude. By William JENKYN. London, 1652-54, 2 vols. 4to.
- 185. A Practical Commentary, or an Exposition, with Notes, on the Epistle of Jude. By Thomas Manton, B.D. London, 1658, 4to.
- 186. Hermanni Witsii Commentarius in Epistolam Judæ. Lug. Bat. 1703, 4to.
- A learned, elegant, and perspicuous illustration of the Epistle of
- 187. Epistola Judæ, Græce, commentario critico et annotatione perpetua illustrata, a Henr. Carl. Alex. Haenlein. Erlangæ, 1799, 8vo.
- 188. Collectanea, sive Notæ Criticæ et Commentarius in Epistolam Judæ. Accedunt de fonte Doctrinæ, et Dictionis Judæ genere et colere, Dissertationes huæ. Auctore M. T. LAURMANN. Groningæ, 1818, 8vo.
- 189. A. Jessien, de Αυθεντειά Epistolæ Judæ Commentatio Critica. Lipsiæ, 1820, 8vo.

THE REVELATION OF SAINT JOHN.

190. In the second tome or part of Mr. Hugh BROUGHTON'S works (pp. 408-522.), there is an exposition or interpretation of the Revelation of Saint John, entitled "A Revelation of the Holy Apocalypse." The learned writer expounds it chiefly of the corruptions of the Church of Rome.

191. Clavis Apocalyptica ex innatis et insitis Visionum Characteribus eruta et demonstrata a Josepho Mede.—Ejusdem Commentarius in Apocalypsin, et Appendix ad Clavem Apoca-

These excellent treatises "of the pious and profoundly learned" Joseph Mede (as he is justly styled in the title-page to the collective edition of his works) were originally published in 4to., but now form, together with some other disquisitions on prophecy, the second volume of the folio edition of his works. Mede is universally alvolume of the folio edition of his works. Mede is universally allowed to have led the way to a correct and rational interpretation of the Apocalypse. The examination of his Clavis occupies the chief part of Bishop Hurd's tenth sermon on the study of the prophecies; and that eminent prelate, after adverting to the numerous and abortive attempts to explain this mysterious book, which were made soon after the Reformation, has the following striking remark concerning Mede:—"The issue of much elaborate inquiry was, that the book itself was disgraced by the fruitless efforts of its commentators, and on the point of being given up as utterly impenetrable, when a sublime genius arose in the beginning of the last century, and surprised the learned world with that great desideratum—a key to the Revelations." (Works, vol. v. p. 270.) The tenth of Bishop Hurd's sermons on the prophecies discusses, after Mede, the interpretation of the Apocalypse. the interpretation of the Apocalypse

192. Clavis Apocalyptica, or the Key to the Apocalypse, educed and demonstrated from the natural and internal Characters of the Visions; for the use of those to whom God hath imparted the love and desire of searching into, and understanding that wonderful Prophecy. By Joseph Mede, B.D. Translated by a Clergyman of the Established Church. London, 1831, 12mo.

193. A Translation of Mede's Clavis Apocalyptica. By R. Bransby Cooper, Esq. London, 1833, 8vo.

193*. A Commentary on the Revelation of St. John. By R. ransby Cooper, Esq. London, 1833, 8vo. Bransby Cooper, Esq.

"The first of these publications will be a very acceptable present to the English student of the Bible; as, in having Mede's views set before him, he will certainly have those of the soundest writer on prophecy unfulfilled. The second work is also valuable, as the commentary is nearly founded upon Mede's views, and Mr. Cooper points out where he has gone beyond them." (British Magazine, June, 1833, p. 692.) set before him, he will certainly have those of the soundest writer on prophecy unfulfilled. The second work is also valuable, as the commentary is nearly founded upon Mede's views, and Mr. Cooper points out where he has gone beyond them." (British Magazine, June, 1833, p. 692.)

194. Anacrisis Apocalypseos Joannis Apostoli, quâ in veras interpretandæ ejus hypotheses diligenter inquiritur, et ex iisdem

ACT I. Jerusalem is taken, i. e. Judaism is conquered by the Christian Religion. (vii. 6.—xii. 17.)

ACT II. Rome is captured; i. e. Paganism is subdued by the Christian Religion. (vii. 6.—xii. 17.)

ACT III. The New Jerusalem descends from heaven; or the happiness of the life to come, which is to endure for ever, is described. (xx. 11.—xxii. 5.)

4 The Epilogue. (xxii. 6—21.)

interpretatio facta, certis historiarum monumentis confirmatur et illustratur, tum quoque quæ Meldensis Præsul Bossuetus hujus libri commentario supposuit, et exegetico Protestantium systemati in visis de Bestia ac Babylone Mystica objecit, sedulo examinantur. Auctore Campegio VITRINGA. Amstelædami, 195. A Perpetual Commentary on the Revelation of Saint John, with a Preliminary Discourse concerning the Principles upon which the said Revelation is to be understood. By Charles DAUBUZ M.A. New modelled, abridged, and rendered plain to the meanest capacity, by Peter Lancaster, A.M. London, 1730, 4to.

The best edition of an elaborate and very useful work, of which later writers have not failed to avail themselves. Daubuz's work was first printed in folio, 1720.

196. The Scripture Preservative against Popery; being Paraphrase with Notes on the Revelation of St. John. By Thomas Prie, M.A. London, 1735, 8vo. 1795, 2d edition.

This volume completes the Paraphrase on the New Testament, after the manner of Dr. Clarke. Mr. Pyle's Paraphrase on the Acts and Epistles is noticed in p. 131. No. 2. supra.

197. A Paraphrase and Notes on the Revelation of Saint John. By Moses Lowman. 2d edit. London, 1745, 4to. London, 1807, 8vo. 4th edition.

Bishop Tomline includes this work in his list of books for clergy-Bishop Tomline includes this work in his list of books for clergymen and biblical students. Dr. Doddridge has said of it, that he "has received more satifaction from it, with respect to many difficulties" in the book of Revelation, than he "ever found elsewhere, or expected to have found at all." (Works, vol. ii. Leeds edit. p. 37.) He has given an abstract of Mr Lowman's scheme of interpretation in his 229th lecture. (Works, vol. v. pp. 410—414.) Lowman's scheme of the seven seals is also approved by the late Rev. David Simpson, in his "Key to the Prophecies" (p. 582.), as more consistent with history than that of Bishop Newton, printed in the second volume of his dissertations on the prophecies. volume of his dissertations on the prophecie 198, BENGELIUS'S Introduction to his Exposition of the Apocalypse; with his preface, and the greatest part of the conclusion of it; and also his marginal Notes on the text, which are a summary of the whole exposition.

Translated from the high London, 1757, 8vo.

See an account of this work in the Monthly Review, O. S. vol. xviii. pp 25—28. The substance of Bengel's expository writings on the Apocalypse is given in the Rev. John Wesley's notes mentioned in p. 131 No. 12. of this Appendix.

199. The Revelations translated, and explained throughout, with keys, illustrations, notes, and comments; a copious introduction, argument, and conclusion. By W. Cooke, Greek Professor at Cambridge, &c. 1789, 8vo.

"A writer who can discover" (as Mr. Cooke has done) " the Jewish "A writer who can discover" (as Mr. Cooke has done) "the Jewish church in the Iliad, and Christianity in the Odyssey, may certainly find whatever he pleases in the Book of Revelation; but it is not equally certain that he is qualified to detect the fallacies of Joseph Mede, and to prove him mistaken, false, and erroneous. Though the author professes to 'have lighted the taper of God's truth from the kindled incense of prayers,' and though he may expect that it will 'flame like a fire-brand, fling and bounce, and run, singeing and scorching wherever it touches,' we have been so unfortunate as not to receive from this flaming taper a single ray to guide us through this region of darkness." (Monthly Review, N. S. vol. iii. n. 148.) p. 148.)

200. Commentarius in Apocalypsin Joannis. Scri Gothofr. Еленновм. Gottingæ, 1792, 2 vols. small 8vo. Scripsit Jo.

The hypothesis of the celebrated Professor Eichhorn is, that the The hypothesis of the celebrated Professor Erchhorn is, that the Revelation of Saint John is a prophetic drama, the true subject of which is the spiritual victory of Christianity over Judaism and Paganism. As this Commentary on the Apocalypse is not of very frequent occurrence in this country, the following abstract of his scheme may be not unacceptable to the reader. He divides the Apocalypse into four parts, viz. 1. The Title;—2. The Prologue itself;—3. The Drama itself;—and 4. The Epilogue.

Apocarypse into four parts.

Apocarypse into four parts.

1. The Prama itself;—and 4. The Epilogue.

1. The Prologue (i. 4.—ii. 22.), in which it is stated that the argument of the drama belongs to the Christians; Epistles to the churches being added, which in the symbolic style of the poem are represented by the number seven.

3. The Drama itself (iv. 1.—xxii. 5.) which consists of a prelude and three acts!!!

and three acts!!!
In the Prelude (iv. 1.—viii. 5.), the scenery is prepared and adorned. ACT I. Jerusalem is taken, i. e. Judaism is conquered by the

SECT. III. § 6.]

a. Of the Angel. (xxii. 6.)
b. Of Jesus Christ. (xxii. 7—16.)
c. Of Saint John, who denounces a curse against those who shall add to or diminish the predictions contained in this book (xxii. 16-20.), and concludes with an apostolical benediction. (21.)

The hypothesis of Eichhorn (we understand) was attacked and refuted by M. Lange, in his German translation of the Apocalypse. 201. A Commentary on the Revelations. By Bryce John-STONE, D.D. Edinburgh, 1794, 2 vols. 8vo. This work we have not had an opportunity of seeing: it is stated Williams to be "well calculated for general use, being written with great perspicuity, and in a popular practical strain.

(Christian Preacher, Appendix, p. 437.) 202. Reflections sur l'Apocalypse. Par E. Gibert, Minister de la Chapelle Royale, et Recteur de St. André dans l'Isle de Guernsey, 1796, 8vo. Plain, pious, and practical. The learned author has chiefly followed the exposition given by Bishop Newton in the second volume of his Dissertations on the Prophecies.

203. Practical Observations on the Revelation of Saint John, written in the year 1775. By the late Mrs. Bowdler. 2d edit. Bath, 1800, 12mo.

This work is expressly designed for those who have not leisure or inclination to examine the prophetical meaning of the Apocalypse.
"Many such readers will doubtless be found; and whoever takes up the book with a serious mind, will be edified by the good sense, piety, and modesty of the writer." (British Critic, O. S. vol. xvi. p. 561.)

204. A Commentary on the Revelation of Saint John, accompanied with Historical Testimony of its accomplishment to the present day. By the Rev. E. W. WHITAKER. London, 1802,

The present work is an enlarged edition of a small work on the prophecies, originally printed in 1795. The author "has the peculiar merit of compelling the historian Gibbon to give testimony, in almost every instance that falls within the limits of his chronology, to the fulfilment of the prophecies." The points insisted on by Mr. Whitaker, he "has succinctly handled, and reasoned upon each in such a manner as to render his work, if not decisive upon the subject, yet too important not to become a book of reference and authority to future commentators." (British Critic, vol. xxiii. O. S. Pref. p. iv. and p. 252.)

205. Brief Commentaries upon such parts of the Revelation and other Prophecies as immediately refer to the present times. By Joseph Galloway, Esq. London, 1802, 8vo.

206. The Apocalypse, or Revelation of Saint John, translated, with Notes critical and explanatory. To which is prefixed a Dissertation on the divine origin of the book, in answer to the objections of the late Professor Michaelis; with a biographical chart of writers in the early Christian church who appear to have afforded evidence in favour of the Apocalypse. By John Chappel Woodhouse, D.D. London, 1806, royal 8vo.

"This," said the late Bishop Hurd, "is the best book of the kind I have seen. It owes its superiority to two things, - the author's understanding, for the most part, the apocalyptic symbols in a spi-ritual, not a literal sense: secondly, to the care he has taken to fix the precise import of those symbols, from the use made of them by the precise import of those symbols, from the use made of them by the old prophetical and other writers of the Old and New Testament. Still many difficulties remain, and will remain to the time of the end." (Manuscript note of the late Bishop Hurd, on a blank leaf of a presentation copy of this work, in the library of Hartlebury. See Gentleman's Magazine, vol. lxxviii. part ii. p. 702.) After such commendation, any further observation is unnecessary. The text of the Apocalypse is handsomely printed in three columns, containing the Greek text of Griesbach's second edition of the New Testament, Dr. W.'s own translation from it, and the authorized version, from which he never departs but when the sense requires it. reader who is desirous of seeing analyses of this most excellent work, may consult the British Critic, O. S. vol. xxix. pp. 190—200.; and the Eclectic Review, O. S, vol. ii. part ii. pp. 214—222.

Annotations on the Apocalypse, intended as a sequel to those of Mr. Elsley on the Gospels, and Mr. Slade on the For the Use of Students in Prophetical Scripture. Epistles. By John Chappel WOODHOUSE, D.D., Dean of Litchfield. London, 1828, 8vo.

The commendations bestowed by the late Bishop Hurd upon Dr. The commendations bestowed by the late Bishop Hurd upon Dr. Woodhouse's larger publication (just noticed) are equally applicable to his present work, in which piety and philology are happily united. The notes are partly abridged from his former translation of the Apocalypse, and are partly new: the Greek text of the original, and the improved version of Dr. W., are here omitted; and the text of St. John, according to the authorized English version, is divided into parts and sections with a view to a more complete. divided into parts and sections, with a view to a more complete arrangement and illustration of this prophetic book, the genuineness and divine inspiration of which are most satisfactorily vindicated from the objections of the late learned Professor, Sir J. D. Michaelis, in a preliminary disquisition. Although Dr. Woodhouse offers his volume "as a sequel" to the compilations of Messrs. Elsley and Slade (noticed in p. 131, No. 10. and p. 135. No. 79. supra), it may be most advantageously consulted and studied as a distinct being sufficiently critical for the use of the scholar, at same time that its perspicuity renders it highly valuable to ordinary readers.

208. England Safe and Triumphant: or Researches into the Apocalyptic Little Book, and Prophecies, connected and synchronical. By the Rev. Francis Thruston, M.A. Coventry and London, 1812, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Among many interpretations of the Divine Book of the Revelation, here is one which expressly views in it the permanency of the church of England, and its prevalence over all other denominations of the Christian world! Much as we are inclined to believe that there is a strong foundation of truth in what this author urges, in conformity with other sound interpreters, or built on their positions, we cannot but think in many places, particularly towards the latter end of his work, he is rather too rapid in forming his deductions and conclusions; in some of which we confess ourselves unable to follow him." (British Critic, O. S. vol. xxxiii. pp. 593. 595.)

209. A Dissertation on the Dragon, Beast, and False Prophet of the Apocalypse; in which the number 666 is satisfactorily explained: and also a full illustration of Daniel's Vision of the Ram and He-Goat. By James Edward CLARKE. London, 1814,

"We cannot agree with the author in many of his explanations: yet we have read his work with some degree of satisfaction, and think he has succeeded in throwing additional light on some of the obscure subjects which he undertakes to illustrate." (Eclectic Review, N. S. vol. iv. p. 289.)

210. A Dissertation on the Seals and Trumpets of the Apocalypse, and the Prophetical Period of twelve hundred and sixty years. By William CUNINGHAME, Esq. London, 1813. Third Edition, 1833, 8vo.

For a copious analysis of this soberly written and truly valuable work (now very materially improved), see the Christian Observer, for 1814, vol. xiii. pp. 163—180.)

210*. On the Jubilean Chronology of the Seventh Trumpet of the Apocalypse, and the Judgment of the Ancient of Days, Dan. vii. 9.; with a brief account of the Discoveries of Mons. de Chesaux as to the great Astronomical Cycles of 2300 and 1260 years, and their difference, 1040 years. By William Cuning-HAME, Esq. London and Edinburgh, 1834, 8vo.

211. The Prophetic History of the Christian Revelation Explained; or a Brief Exposition of the Revelation of Saint John. By the Rev. George SCHMUCKER, Pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, York Town, Pennsylvania. Vol. I. Baltimore, 1817, 8vo. [This work has not been completed.]

211*. Apocalypsis Græce. Perpetua Annotatione illustrata à Joanne Henrico Heinrichs. Gottingæ, 1821. 2 parts or

Though published as a detached work, this commentary on the Apocalypse forms part of the Novum Testamentum Koppianum (noticed in p. 127. No. 16. of this Appendix), of which it constitutes the tenth volume. After Eichhorn, Grotius, Hug, and other modern continental critics, Dr. Heinrichs considers the Apocalypse as a sacred poem representing, in a dramatic form (the scenery of which is chiefly borrowed from the ancient prophets), the final triumph of Christianity over Judaism and Paganism; the three cities of Sodom, Babylon, and Jerusalem,—or the Matron, the Harlot, and the Bride,—being intended to represent those three systems. Heinrichs does not adhere to the artificial divisions of Eichhorn, of which we have given an abstract in page 140.

212. M. T. LAURMANN Prælectio de imaginum sive figurarum poeticarum in Apocalypsi Joannea, indole atque pretio. Groningæ, 1822, 8vo.

213. The Chronology of the Apocalypse, investigated and defended. By John Oventon. London, 1822, 8vo.

214. A concise Exposition of the Apocalypse, so far as the Prophecies are fulfilled; several of which are interpreted in a different way from that adopted by other Commentators. By J. R. PARK, M.D. London, 1823, 8vo.

The author of this work regards the Apocalypse as being alto-The author of this work regards the Apocalypse as being altogether a spiritual and not a political prophecy; that is, as relating exclusively to the progress of true religion, and not to the history of the Roman Empire. This general principle is derived from the excellent work of Dean Woodhouse, noticed in the preceding column, to which Dr. Park acknowledges his obligations, and which he has for the most part taken as his guide. "This concise exposition deserves to be recommended as a useful outline of the Apocalyptic Predictions and their fulfilment." (Eclectic Review, N. S. vol. xxii. p. 341.)

215. Dissertations introductory to the Study and Right Understanding of the Language, Structure, and Contents of the evidence we have shown in the present volume of this work (see pp. 381, 382.) is decidedly in favour of the late date of the Apocalypse. The remaining five dissertations contain many ingenious observations on the language and style of this prophetic book.

"There is much ingenuity displayed in these pages, and many remarks occur in them that are deserving of consideration; but we regret to be obliged to add, that the learned author has freuently ventured assertions wholly gratuitous, in order to support favourite hypothesis, to which he had obviously determined that every fact should be made to bend; and that he has conducted many of the discussions in the volume before us in a manner that must be pronounced, by every impartial reader, not only unfair, but in some instances disingenuous." The author "may fairly be represented as having brought under the notice of biblical students some very interesting topics, and he has furnished many ingenious and curious remarks on the several subjects of his Dissertations, although, in but too many cases, he has exhibited them in a crude and unsubstantial form. (Eclectic Review, N. S. vol. xxiii. pp. 343. 360.)

216. An Explanation of the Apocalypse or Revelation of St. John. By Alexander Smith. Washington City, 1825, 12mo.

The author of this publication (who is a general in the army of the United States of America) announced it in a pompous adver-tisement, in which he "certified on honour that he had discovered tisement, in which he "certified on honour that he had discovered the meaning of the Apocalypse, which, with the exception of a few passages in the second and third chapters, has never been approached by any expositor." The pamphlet (for it contains only fifty-seven loosely-printed pages, exclusive of the title-page) is published as the result of twenty years' study; and, as it is utterly unknown in this country, the following concise outline of its contents may perhaps gratify the curiosity of the reader. Contrary to all historical evidence, he affirms that the Apocalypse is not mentioned by any of the Fathers until about the close of the second century—that the several passages which are common to their century—that the several passages which are common to their writings and this book, are quotations from the former by the author of the latter, and not vice versa, as is commonly supposed, because the Book of Revelation is a much more masterly and perfect production than the others, and the world is in a state of progressive improvement, as the rude hut precedes the splendid palace; (General Smyth's book is therefore superior to all the productions of an-!)-that "the fall of the mystical Babylon is, unquestion-ABLY, the destruction of Byzantium by the forces of Severus, in the year 195; and this event is the beacon which we must keep in view, while searching for the other events, enigmatically related in this book,"-that Irenæus, bishop of Lyons, must have been the author of the Apocalypse, because he wrote several books, in one of which he mentioned the ancient copies of the Apocalypse, and was also acquainted with several persons who figured in the history of the destruction of Byzantium—that it is a compilation from the prophets, the theology of the Rabbins, the Pastor of Hermas, and the more ancient Apocalypses, applied by the writer to the history of his own time—and that it is a pious forgery, written in the spirit of insatiable revenge! The mystical number 666 he Instity of his own time and time the spirit of insatiable revenge! The mystical number 666 he finds in the name of Decimus Clodius Albinus, although the Latin numerals contained in that name amount only to 2318! Such is the outline of this author's plan, whose fallacy, ignorance, and presumption have been very severely and deservedly exposed in the Literary Journals of North America.

217. An Introduction to the Study of the Apocalypse; being an Attempt to make that portion of God's Word profitable to the Generality of Readers. To which is added a Brief Outline of Prophetic History, from the Babylonian Captivity to the com-mencement of the Nineteenth Century, selected chiefly from the best and most approved Writers on the Subject. By the Rev. Richard MURRAY. Dublin, 1826, 8vo.

218. The Apocalypse of St. John, or Prophecy of the Rise, Progress, and Fall of the Church of Rome; the Inquisition; the Revolution of France; the Universal War; and the Final Triumph of Christianity. Being a new Interpretation by the Rev. George Croly, A.M. London, 1827, 8vo.

This original and powerfully written volume is prefaced by a view of the injurious effects of Popery, and the benefits conferred by Protestantism upon the British empire, in the successive reigns from the time of Queen Elizabeth. The interpretation of the Apocalypse, which follows, adopts a plan different from that of all its predecessors. The author considers the whole as a fasciculus of prophetic visions seen at intervals, and relating to distinct por-tions of providential history. The first three chapters are exclu-sively addressed to the Church in the time of Saint John. The remainder of the Apocalypse contains a general view of Christian History from the reign of Constantine to the Millennium (chapters vi.—vii.); a detailed prediction of the penalties inflicted upon Europe for her persecution of the Reformed Church to the Millennium (chapters viii.—xi., xv., xvi.); a view of the progress of the Apocalypse. By Alexander Tilloch, LL.D. London, 1823, Romish Church from power to persecution, under different aspects (chapters xii.—xiv.); a prediction of the fall of the papacy, the universal war, the Millennium, the subsequent brief apostasy, the final judgment, and the close of the providential history of judgment, and the close of the providential instory of the work. The ninth chapter of the Apocalypse, which has hitherto been conceived to be a view of Mohammedism, Dr. Croly interprets as a prediction of the fall of monarchy in France, and of the atheistic war, in 1793. A general sketch of the leading events in the history of the Christian Church, from Constantine to the present time, completes the volume, which is evidently the result of great labour and research, and which abounds with most important historical information.

219. Alberti Christ. Van Eldik THIEME Commentatio de Septem Epistolis Apocalypticis. Lugduni Batavorum, 1827, 4to.

220. Initium Disputationis de Libri Apocalypseos Argumento, Sententia, et Auctore Publico examini submittit Henricus Engelinus WEYERS. Lugduni Batavorum, 1828, 4to.

The first part only of an academical Dissertation on the Apocalypse: it discusses the hypotheses of Grotius, Herder, Eichhorr and Heinrichs, respecting the author and argument of this book.

- 221. Lectures, Expository and Practical, on the Book of Revelation. By the Rev. Robert Culbertson. London, 1828,
- 222. Commentarius in Apocalypsin Johannis, Exegeticus et Criticus. Auctore Georgio Henrico Augusto EWALD 1828, 8vo.
- 222*. A Key to the Revelation of St. John the Divine; being an Analysis of those parts of that wonderful Book, which relate to the General State of the Christian Church, through all the times since it was written, and to the peculiar Signs of those Times. By the Rev. Philip Allwood, B.D. London, 1829, 2 vols. 8vo.
- 223. The Apocalypse of Jesus Christ, commonly called the Revelation of St. John the Divine, briefly, yet minutely, Explained and Interpreted, to the xixth Chapter inclusive; being the History of the Christian Church, until the Destruction of the Roman Empire at the Coming of our Lord with all his Saints. Consisting of a select Compilation from the most approved and learned Commentators, both ancient and modern. London, 1832, 8vo.
- 224. A Treatise on the Millennium; in which the prevailing Theories on that subject are carefully examined, and the true Scriptural Doctrine attempted to be elicited and established. By George Bush, A.M. New York, 1832, 12mo.

The opinion advocated by the author of this treatise is, that the Millennium is past; the predictions in the Apocalypse having been fulfilled by the triumph of Christianity over Paganism, in the conversion of Constantine to the Christian faith.

225. An Exposition of the Apocalypse, by the Rev. Alexander Keith, D.D., forms the chief part of his "Signs of the Times," noticed in No. 17. p. 100. supra, and another Original Exposition of this Book by the Rev. Dr. Lee in his "Six Sermons on the Study of the Holy Scriptures." No. 25. p. 98.

226. Explication Raisonnée de l'Apocalypse, d'après les principes de sa Composition, Par Philippe Basset. Paris, 1832-33, 3 tomes, 8vo.

227. The Book of the Unveiling. London, 1833, 12mo.

- § 7. EXPOSITORY LECTURES AND SERMONS ON THE SCRIP-TURES, AND ON DETACHED PORTIONS THEREOF.
- 1. Horæ Homileticæ, or Discourses (in the form of Skeletons) upon the WHOLE SCRIPTURES. By the Rev. Charles SIMEON, M.A. London, 1833, 21 vols. 8vo.
- 2. A Popular Commentary on the Bible, in a Series of Sermons, following, in the Old Testament, the Course of the first Lessons at Morning and Evening Service on Sundays. Designed for Parish Churches, or for reading in Private Families. By the Rev. James Plumtre, B.D. London, 1827, 2 vols. 8vo. [comprising the Old Testament. This work was never completed.]
- 3. Practical Lectures on the Historical Books of the Old Testament. By the Rev. Henry Lindsay, M.A. London, 1828, 8vo.
- 4. Sacred Biography; or, the History of the Patriarchs [and part of the History of Jesus Christ]: being a Course of Lectures delivered at the Scots Church, London Wall. By Henry HUNTER, D.D. London, 1783, &c. 7 vols. 8vo.; seventh edition, 1814, 5 vols. 8vo.; also 1826, 2 vols. 8vo.

signed to show the Divine Origin of the Jewish Religion, chiefly from Internal Evidence; in three parts. By the Rev. Richard GRAVES, D.D., Dean of Ardagh. London, 1815, 2 vols. 8vo. Third edition, Dublin and London, 1829, 1 vol. 8vo.

The first edition of this valuable work appeared in 1807: in this impression it is very materially improved, and is indispensably necessary to the biblical student.

- 6. Lectures on the Pentateuch. By the Rev. William MARSH, M.A. London, 1822, 8vo.
- 7. Expository Discourses on the Book of Genesis, interspersed with Practical Reflections, by Andrew Fuller. 2 vols. 8vo. London, 1806.

The late respected author of this work has long been known by his able publications on the absurdity of deism, and the immoral tendency of Socinian tenets. These "Expository Discourses," which are short, and fifty-eight in number, were originally delivered lectures to Mr. Fuller's congregation at Kettering. "The author selects a paragraph of convenient length, and furnishes a concise exposition of its leading circumstances, accompanied with a few practical reflections, and occasionally with a useful criticism. The paragraphs are not inserted at length, but referred to by the initial and final verses. Much originality of critical remark must not be and final verses. Much originally of critical remain mass as expected, nor must the reader be surprised if he often meet with a trite and obvious reflection: but we will venture to promise him, much more frequently, a manly, judicious, and useful train of observation, expressed in simple and vigorous language." (Eclectic Review, O. S. vol. ii. part ii. p. 896.)

- 8. Lectures on the Book of Genesis. By J. Rudge, D.D. London, 1823, 2 vols. 8vo.
- 9. Lectures upon some Important Passages in the Book of Genesis. By Henry Thomas Austen, M.A. London, 1820,
- 10. A Series of Sermons illustrating the History contained in the Book of Genesis. By the Rev. William BASSETT, M.A. London, 1822, 2 vols. 12mo.
- 11. Ten Lectures on the Philosophy of the Mosaic Records of the Creation, delivered in the Chapel of Trinity College, Dublin. By James Kennedy, B.D., Donellan Lecturer for the Year 1824. London and Dublin, 1827, 2 vols. 8vo.

The design of these elaborate lectures is, "to connect the biblical records of the creation, as closely as their language and arrange evidence which arises out of the comparison, of the inspiration of their author." Muny important geological from ment admit, with physical science; and to estimate the degree of their author." Many important geological facts are adduced, which concur to the confirmation and illustration of the Mosaic history.

- 12. Eight Lectures on the History of Jacob. By the Rev. Henry BLUNT, A.M. London, 1828, 12mo.
- 13. Lectures on the History of Joseph. By John DAVIES. Bath, 1823, 12mo.
- 14. The Book of Genesis considered and illustrated in a Series of Historical Discourses. By the Rev. Francis Close, London, 1826, 8vo.
- 15. The Christian Exonus: or the Deliverance of the Israelites from Egypt practically considered, in a Series of Discourses. By the Rev. R. P. Buddicom, M.A. London, 1826, 2 vols. 8vo.
- 16. Davidica. Twelve Practical Sermons on the Life and Character of DAVID, King of Israel. By Henry Thompson, M.A. London, 1827, 8vo.
- 17. Lectures on the History of Joseph. By George Lawson, D.D. Edinburgh and London, 1812, 2 vols. 12mo.
- 18. Lectures on the Book of RUTH. By G. LAWSON, D.D. Edinburgh and London, 1805, 12mo.
- 19. Lectures on the Book of ESTHER. By G. LAWSON, D.D. Edinburgh and London, 1809, 12mo.
- 20. An Exposition of the Book of PROVERBS. By the late George Lawson, D.D. Edinburgh, 1821, 2 vols. 12mo.
- "These works were chiefly intended for the instruction of Christians in the ordinary walks of life. They are pious and sensible, full of sound doctrine, and salutary admonition and instruction. There is rarely any thing of a critical nature to be found in them, which indeed was not the writer's object; but they every where discover a minute acquaintance with the Bible and the human heart, and a deep concern to profit the reader. The style is plain, and the illustrations [are] generally very brief." (Orme's Biblioth. Biblica, p. 287.)
- 21. Lectures on the Book of PSALMS. By the Rev. John EWART, M.A. London, 1822-26, 3 vols. 8vo.
- 22. An Exposition of the Book of Psalms, Explanatory, Critical, and Devotional, intended chiefly to aid private Christians | vols. 8vo. VOL. II .- APP. 4 L

5. Lectures on the Four last Books of the Pentateuch, de- | in the enlightened perusal of Compositions, in which the national history of the Jews and the personal experience of David are often blended with the Spirit of Prophecy. By the Rev. John Morison, D.D. London, 1832, 3 vols. 8vo.

As Bishop Horsley's posthumous work on the Book of Psalms (which has been noticed in page 120. of this Appendix) is chiefly adapted to the use of the scholar and biblical critic, while the well-known and splendid commentary of Bishop Horne has been thought by many to partake too much of the systematically pro-phetic and mystical interpretation; Pr. Morison has performed a very acceptable service to private Christians, as well as to critical students of the sacred volume, in his exposition of the Book of Psalms. The plan which he has adopted is in every respect deserving of commendation. Adhering strictly to the literal meaning of the text, he is careful at the same time not to overlook either its prophetical or typical character. The authorized version is properly retained, and the exposition follows each successive while the critical notes, often very instructive, are commodiously placed at the foot of the page. Dr. Morison is advantageously known as the author of a volume of Lectures on the Reciprocal Obligations of Life; in which some important topics of Christian Ethics, not commonly discussed from the pulpit, are concisely explained and earnestly enforced on Christian principles and motives.

- 23. The Portraiture of the Christian Penitent: a Course of Sermons on the Fifty-first Psalm. By the Rev. C. E. De Coetlogan, M.A. London, 1776, 2 vols. 8vo.
- 24. Sermons on the Fifty-first Psalm. By the Rev. J. Bull. London, 1824, 8vo.
 - 25. Sermons on the Ninety-first Psalm. London, 1826, 8vo-
- 26. A Practical Exposition of the Hundred and Nineteenth Psalm. By Thomas Manton, D.D. London, 1681, folio.
- 27. An Exposition of Psalm CXIX. By the Rev. Charles BRIDGES. London, 1827, 12mo.
- 28. A Practical Exposition of the Hundred and Thirtieth Psalm. By John Owen, D.D. London, 1669, 4to. and various subsequent editions.
- 29. Six Lectures on the Penitential Psalms. By Edward Berens, M.A. Oxford, 1823, 12mo.
- 30. Lectures on the Book of Ecclesiastes. By Ralph WARDLAW, D.D. Glassgow and London, 1821, 2 vols. 8vo.
- "This is a very elegant Commentary on an exceedingly difficult portion of Scripture." (Orme's Biblioth. Biblica, p. 459.)
- 31. Lectures on the Prophecies of ISATAH. By Robert MACculloch, D.D. London, 1791-1805, 4 vols. 8vo.

These lectures were delivered in the ordinary course of his pastoral labours by Dr. M., who was a minister in the church of Scotland. "They contain many ingenious elucidations of the text, and many judicious and useful reflections. The author appears to have taken much pains to understand the phraseology of the prophet, and to investigate his original design; he marks distinctly the leading divisions of the prophecies, and explains, at the beginning of each division, its peculiar object." (Monthly-Review, N. S. vol. xx. p. 226.) Dr. Macculloch has made great use of Vitringa's elaborate commentary on Isaiah.

- 32. Outlines of Lectures on the Book of DANIEL. Cox, LL.D. London, 1833, 12mo. Second edition, 1834, 12mo.
- 33. An Exposition of the Prophet JONAH, in Sermons. By George Abbot, D.D. London, 1613, 4to.
- 34. Lectures upon Jonas. By John Kine, D.D., Bishop of London, 1618, 4to.
- 35. Theological Lectures to the King's Scholars at Westminster Abbey, with an Interpretation of the New Testament, &c. &c. By John HEYLIN, D.D. London, 1749, 1761, 2 vols. 4to.

The first part of this work contains the interpretation of the four Gospels, the second part comprises the Acts of the Apostles and the several Epistles. "This interpretation, though far from being the several Epistles. "This interpretation, though far from being elegant, appears to us, in general, to be accurate and judicious, and shows that the author had carefully studied the original. The whole contains evident marks of solid judgment, critical skill, and considerable learning. In several parts of the work, indeed, the reader will perceive a small tincture of mysticism; and accordingly we are told, in the preface to the second part, that the author was deeply read in the writings of the mystic divines, and was styled by some the mystic doctor." (Monthly Review, O. S. vol. xxv. p. 33.) xxv. p. 33.)

- 36. Explanatory Notes and Practical Comments, being a Series of Short Lectures on the New Testament. By a Clergyman. Dublin and London, 1829-33, 2 vols. 8vo.
- 37. Lectures on the History of Jesus Christ. By James Bennett. London, 1825, 3 vols. 8vo. Another edition in 2

38. A Practical Exposition of the Gospels of St. Matthew, St. Mark, and St. Luke, in the form of Lectures, intended to assist the Practice of Domestic Instruction and Devotion. By John Bird Sumner, D.D., Bishop of Chester. London, 1831-32, 2 vols. 8vo.; also in 4 vols. 12mo.

39. The New Testament of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ; with a Commentary consisting of Short Lectures for the daily Use of Families. By the Rev. Charles GIRDLESTONE, M.A. Vol. I. [containing the Four Gospels.] London, 1833, 8vo.

"The Gospels are divided into sections, forming with the commentary a lesson of a convenient length for a single service. The explanatory matter is so digested as to complete, together with the text, exactly two pages; such topics being selected as may best serve the purpose of devotional edification at the hour of family worship. All controversial doctrines, all abstruse theories, and all learned discussions are carefully avoided; while the capacities and wants of an ordinary domestic circle, comprising for the most part the relations of parent and child, of master and servant, are kept steadily in view." (Christian Remembrancer, May, 1832, vol. xiv. p. 280.)

40. Lectures on the Gospel of St. Matthew, delivered in the parish church of Saint James, Westminster, in the years 1798, 1799, 1800, and 1801. By the Right Rev. Beilby Porteus, Bishop of London. London, 1802, 2 vols. 8vo.; 1823, in 1 vol. 8vo.

The multiplied editions of these admirable lectures sufficiently attest how highly they are esteemed. "They are" indeed "calculated alike to do good to the learned and the unlearned; the aged as well as the inexperienced, the grave and the reflecting, the gay and the thoughtless. They are learned without ostentation, pious without any tincture of enthusiasm, argumentative without pedantry, and perspicuous without losing sight of the graces of style and diction." (British Critic, O. S. vol. xx. p. 306.)

- 41. Sermons extracted from the Lectures of Bishop Porteus. By Thomas Baker, M.A. London, 1817, 8vo.
- 42. An Exposition of St. Matthew's Gospel, with suitable Lectures and Prayers. By the Rev. Thomas Adam. London, 1805, 2 vols. 12mo.; 1822, in 1 volume, 8vo.
- 43. Explanatory Lectures on the Gospel according to St. Matthew. By the Rev. John Perrose, M.A. London, 1832, 12mo.
- 44. Expositions and Sermons upon the first ten Chapters of the Gospel of Jesus Christ according to St. Matthew. By Christopher Blackwood. London, 1659, 4to.
- 45. The Catechist's Manual, and Family Lecturer: being an Arrangement and Explanation of St. Mark's Gospel, for purposes of Missionary and Domestic Instruction. By the Rev. Samuel Hinds, M.A. [now D.D.], Oxford, 1829, 8vo.
- 46. Lectures on the Gospel of St. John, as bearing Testimony to the Divinity of our Saviour. By C. J. Blomfield, D.D. [now Bishop of London.] London, 1823, 12mo.
- 47. Practical Lectures upon the ten first Chapters of the Gospel of St. John. By the Rev. J. R. Pitmann, M.A. London, 1822, 8vo.
- 48. Eighteen Lectures on the Gospel according to St. John. By Charles Abel Moyser, D.D. Oxford and London, 1823, 8vo.
- 49. Contemplations on the last Discourses of our Blessed Saviour with his Disciples, as recorded by St. John. By John Brewster. London, 1822, 8vo.
- 50. The Last Days of our Lord's Ministry; a course of Lectures. By the Rev. Walter Farquhar Hook, M.A. London, 1832, 8vo.
- 51. Nine Lectures on the History of Peter. By the Rev. Henry BLUNT, A.M. London, 1829, 12mo.
 - 52. Lectures on the Acts of the Apostles, explanatory and Rev. C. A. Moysey, D.D. [Bath,] 1830, 8vo.

38. A Practical Exposition of the Gospels of St. MATTHEW, practical. By Richard STACE, D.D. 2d edition. London, 1805,

53. Lectures on the Acts of the Apostles, delivered in the Parish Church of Stockton-upon-Tees, during Lent, in the Years 1803, 1804, 1805, and 1806. Illustrated with maps. By John Brewster, M.A. London, 1807. 2 vols. 8vo. Second edition. London, 1831, in one volume, 8vo.

"Both these authors profess to imitate the Bishop of London's (Porteus) excellent Lectures on St. Matthew's Gospel. By a mere comparison of bulk, it is evident that Dr. Stack's lectures must be more slight and cursory than those of Mr. Brewster; the one being twice the extent of the other." Dr. Stack's lectures "contain little more than a recapitulation of the subjects of the chapters in other words. Nor have we been able to discover any remarks in his book but what are so extremely plain and obvious, that they seem to be hardly worth committing to paper, much less to the press. Mr. Brewster proceeds in a very different style. He is full of illustrations from the fathers and divines of various ages; and his own remarks are not trite, but lively as well as just. Mr. B's lectures may be justly recommended, as approaching much more nearly to the model which both undertook to imitate, and as not only instructive, but pleasing and attractive." (British Critie, O. S vol. xxx. pp. 133, 134, 136. See also Eclectic Review, O. S. vol. ii. p. 408.)

54. Lectures on the Acts of the Apostles. By John Dick, D.D. Glasgow, 2d edition, 1822, 8vo.

The first edition of these Lectures was in two volumes, which were published at different times. Dr. Dick is advantageously known as the author of a sensible and well-written essay on the inspiration of the Scriptures. Speaking of the first volume of the first edition, some critics have remarked, that his discussion of the principal topics related in the Acts of the Apostles "is fully calculated to establish the faith of Christians in their holy religion, and furnishes them with some excellent practical rules for the regulation of their moral conduct. Upon the whole, we cheerfully recommend the present volume to the attention of the public." (Eclectic Review, O. S. vol. ii. pp. 438. 440.) The same critics (vol. v. part ii. p. 834.), speaking of the two volumes collectively, observe, that they contain altogether a useful illustration of many important passages of the Acts; they are full of good sense and orthodox divinity, conveyed in a perspicuous and easy style. The second edition of these Lectures has been carefully revised.

55. Twelve Lectures on the Acts of the Apostles. By Charles James Blomfield, D.D., Bishop of Chester [now of London]. London, 1829, 8vo.

To these very valuable lectures is annexed a new edition of the five lectures on the Gospel of St. John (No. 46.); and in an appendix is subjoined Dr. Tucker's "Brief and Dispassionate View of the difficulties attending the Trinitarian, Arian, and Socinian Systems."

56. Discourses on Passages selected from the Book of the Acts of the Apostles. By Henry Thompson, D.D. London, 1822, 8vo.

The object of these expository discourses is, from select passages in the first seven chapters of the book of Acts, to mark the fulfilment of prophecy in the qualifications, labours, and success of the first propagators of Christianity: and this design the author has successfully accomplished. For an analysis of the volume, with a well-merited commendation of its execution, the reader is referred to the Edinburgh Christian Instructor, for June, 1823, pp. 404—409.

57. Jo. Alphonsi Turretter in Paulli Apostoli ad Romanos Epistolæ capita priora undecim Prælectiones criticæ, theologicæ, et concionatoriæ. Lausannæ, 1741, 4to.

These lectures, which were first published after the author's death, are also to be found in the second volume of Turretin's collective works, printed at Leuwarden, in 1775, in quarto. They are truly excellent. The prolegomena discuss, with great ability, the date of the Epistle to the Romans, the place whence it was written, the state of the Christians at Rome, the causes of the difficulty of St. Paul's epistles generally, and of that to the Romans in particular; the controversies agitated at that time, and various other topics which are necessary to the right understanding of that epistle.

- 58. Lectures on the Epistle of St. Paul to the Romans, explanatory and practical. By Richard Stack, D.D. Dublin, 1806, 8vo.
- 59. Lectures, explanatory and practical, on the Epistle of St. Paul to the Romans. By the Rev. John Fry, A.B. London, 1816, 8vo.
- 60. Paulus Parochialis; or, a Plain and Practical View of the Object, Arguments, and Connection of St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans: in a Series of Sermons, adapted to Country Congregations. By the Rev. Wm. Lisle Bowles. Bath, 1826, 8vo.
- 61. Lectures on St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans. By the Rev. C. A. Moysey, D.D. [Bath,] 1830, 8vo.

- 62. Lectures, Explanatory and Practical, on the doctrinal part of the Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the Romans. By David Riterie, D.D. Edinburgh and London, 1831. 2 vols. 8vo.
- 63. A Practical Exposition of St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans, in a series of Lectures. By the Rev. Thomas Parry, M.A., Archdeacon of Antigua. London, 1832, 12mo.
- "The object of this volume is, to facilitate the understanding of the Epistle to the Romans, by tracing the connection of its various parts in an easy and familiar exposition. . . . But though the author has mainly endeavoured to render his work useful and attractive to general readers, who have little opportunity for consulting more claborate expositions, he has not altogether neglected the wants of the student or the candidate for holy orders. Readers of this class will find considerable information in the notes attached to each successive lecture; and the analysis of the epistle, and remarks on certain leading terms, contained in the appendix, afford ample matter to the more advanced theologian." (Christian Remembrancer, May, 1832, vol. xiv. p. 280.)
- 64. An Exposition of the Eighth Chapter of the Epistle to the Romans. Also, five Lectures on the Tenth Chapter of the same. By the Rev. C. D. MAITLAND, B.A. London, 1831, 8vo.
- 65. A Practical Exposition of St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans. By the Rev. Robert Anderson. London, 1833, 12mo.
- "We must now take leave of Mr. Anderson, which we do with the conviction that we have been conversing with one, all whose faculties are intensely devoted to the holy work of the ministry. It is perhaps too much to expect that this or any exposition of the Epistle to the Romans should meet with the unqualified and unanimous assent of the critical or theological world...... Of the work before us, however, we can honestly say, that it exemplifies, in almost every page, that holy earnestness, that ardent desire for the salvation of human souls, which is the crown and glory of all pastoral teaching and ministration." (British Critic for January, 1834, vol. xv. p. 96.)
- 66. Discourses, Explanatory and Practical, on the Ninth Chapter of Paul's Epistle to the Romans. By J. Jarrom. Wisbech, 1827, 12mo.
- 66*. Lectures on St. Paul's Epistles to the Corinthians. By the Rev. William Lothian. London, 1827, 8vo.
- 67. Lectures upon the whole Epistle of St. Paul to the PHILIPPIANS. By Henry AIRY, D.D., Provost of Queen's College, Oxford. London, 1618, 4to.
- 68. Expository Lectures on St. Paul's Epistle to the Philippians. By the Rev. John Acaster. London, 1827, 8vo.
- 68*. Lectures, Explanatory and Practical, on the Epistle of Saint Paul to the Philippians. By Manton Eastburn, M.A. New York, 1833, 8vo.
- 69. A Familiar Exposition and Application of the Epistle of Saint Paul to the Colossians, in a course of Eight Sermons; including an Examination of the General Nature and Use of the Epistles of the New Testament. By Thomas GISBORNE, M.A. London, 1816, 8vo.

For an analysis of this very useful little work see the Christian Observer for 1816, vol. xv. pp. 524—534.

- 70. Discourses, Practical and Experimental, on the Epistle to the Colossians. By Thomas Watson. London, 1834, 8vo.
- 70°. Four Lectures on the Epistle of Saint Paul to the Hebrews; shewing the Harmony between the Mysteries, Doctrines, and Morality of the Old and New Testament. By the Rev. William Jones, M.A. 8vo.

These valuable lectures form part of the fourth volume of "The Theological, Philosophical, and Miscellaneous Works" of the learned and venerable Mr. Jones, of Nayland.

- 71. Discourses Explanatory and Practical, on the Epistle of St. Jude. By William Mutr, D.D. Glasgow, 1822, 8vo.
- 72. Expository Discourses on the Afocaltyse, interspersed with Practical Reflections. By the late Rev. Andrew Fuller. London, 1815, 8vo.

This posthumous publication, consisting of thirty-one discourses delivered in the years 1809 and 1810, after undergoing several revisions, was finished by the learned author, a short time only before his decease. "There is however but little novelty in the work, but little to gratify the anxious curiosity of the age, or to elucidate the unfulfilled and more difficult parts of the Revelation. The general outline of the prophetic scheme is boldly sketched, and its various ramifications are marked with that precision which was common to the writer; but in general there is an extreme of modesty and diffidence, with scarcely any attempts to pass the usual boundaries of thought on these subjects, or any adventurous flight of speculation." (Morris's Memoirs of Mr. Fuller, p. 249.) An abstract of Mr. F.'s scheme of the Apocalypse is given in the same work. (pp. 250—260.)

73. An Exposition of the Book of Revelation. Being the substance of forty-four Discourses preached in the parish church of Olney, Bucks. By the Rev. Henry GAUNTLETT. London, 1821, 8vo.

This work "affords ample proofs of his" [the author's] "piety, good sense, and industry. His interpretations of the prophecies, whether fulfilled or expected to be so, are mostly supported by venerable authorities: and where he differs from them, it is with due modesty and candour." (British Review, vol. xvin. p. 396.)

- 74. A Paraphrase and [Expository] Comment upon the Epistres and Gospels appointed to be used in the Church of England, on all Sundays and Holidays, throughout the year. By George Stanhoff, D.D., Dean of Canterbury. London, 1705–1708, 4 vols. 8vo. and numerous subsequent editions.
- 75. Expository Discourses on the Gospels for every Sunday in the year, and the Principal Festivals of the United Church of England and Ireland. By John Hall, B.D. London, 1832, 2 vols. 8vo.
- 76. Practical Discourses upon our Saviour's Sermon on the Mount. By Offspring Blackall, D.D., Bishop of Exeter. London, 1717, 8 vols. 8vo.
- 77. Several Sermons upon the Fifth of St. Matthew; being Part of Christ's Sermon on the Mount. By Anthony Horneck, D.D. Third Edition. London, 1717, 2 vols. 8vo.

These discourses were published after the author's death by Dr. Klorneck. The bishop's character of the writings published by himself, is equally applicable to his Sermons on Matt. V. "There is a great vein of piety and devotion which runs through them: they savour of the primitive simplicity and zeal, and are well fitted to make men better." (Life, p. xxxix.)

78. Christian Blessedness; or, Discourses upon the Beatitudes of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. By John Norms. London, 1690, 8vo.

"Norris is a fine writer for style and thought, and commonly just." (Dr. Waterland's Advice to Students, Works, vol. vi. p. 320.)

79. Our Saviour's Divine Sermon on the Mount, contained in the Vth, Vith, and Vith chapters of St. Matthew's Gospel, explained: and the Practice of it recommended in diverse Sermons and Discourses. To which is prefixed a paraphrase on the whole Sermon on the Mount. By James Blair, M.A. London, 1722, 5 vols. 8vo.: also in 4 vols. 8vo. London, 1740, with a recommendatory Preface by the Rev. Dr. Waterland.

"His Commentary on Matt. v.—viii. is the best extant.—He appears to have been a person of the utmost candour, and has solicitously avoided all unkind and contemptuous reflections on his brethren.—He has an excellent way of bringing down criticisms to common capacities, and has discovered a vast knowledge of Scripture in the application of them." (Doddridge's Works, vol. v. 438)

80. Sermons sur le Discours de notre Seigneur Jésus Christ sur la Montagne. Par feu M. Jean Scipion Vernede. Amsterdam, 1779, 4 tomes, 8vo.

"His Sermons on the Mount are recommended, as containing an accurate description of the extent, the beauty, and sublimity of evangelical morals, and the force of the motives by which they are produced. They contain many useful and pious observations." (Cobbin's French Preacher, p. 560.)

81. Lectures upon our Lord's Sermon on the Mount. By James Brewster. Edinburgh and London, 1809, 8vo.

This volume "contains a statement of Christian morality, always clear, generally judicious, and sometimes discriminating, traced up to Christian principles, and followed up by an appeal to the conscience, at once calculated to convict the reader of his deficiencies, and to persuade him to adopt and act upon the author's statement." (Christian Observer for 1809, vol. viii. p. 780.)

- 82. Forty-five Expository and Practical Lectures on the whole of our Lord's Sermon on the Mount. By the Rev. E. Good. London, 1829, 8vo.
- 83. The Resurrection of LAZARUS. A Course of Sermons on the Eleventh Chapter of the Gospel according to St. John. From the French of Beausobre. By Henry Cotts. London, 1822, 8vo.
- "These Discourses are a paraphrase rather than a translation of the third and fourth volumes of the Sermons of M. de Beausobre. They are intended for the use of those who have leisure and opportunity to compare the leading evidences of Christianity in a connected series of discourses upon one of the most remarkable of our Saviour's miracles,—the resurrection of Lazarus." (Author's Preface)
- 84. Practical Discourses on the Nature, Properties, and Excellencies of Charit, above all the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit; as they are described in the thirteenth chapter of the first Oxford, 1725, 8vo.

Besides this volume, Dr. Hole also wrote six volumes of Discourses on the Liturgy of the Church of England (which are very rarely to be obtained complete), and two volumes on the Catechism. They are all characterized by good sense and sober piety.

85. A Discourse concerning the great Duty of Charity [an Exposition of 1 Cor. xiii.]. By Richard Caossinge, B.D. London. 1732, 8vo.

86. Explication des Caractères de la Charité selon St. Paul dans sa première Epître aux Corinthiens, ch. XIII. [Par Jacques Joseph Duguet.] Génève, 1824, 8vo.

A new edition, with a few trifling verbal corrections, of an admirable exposition of 1 Cor. XIII. which first appeared in the former part of the eighteenth century, and which is sometimes erroneously ascribed to Fénélon, Archbishop of Cambray. An English translation was published at London, intituled "The Characters and Prophets of True Charity displayed." By J. B. de Trevals.

87. Practical Discourses upon the PARABLES of our Blessed Saviour. With Prayers, annexed to each Discourse. By Francis BRAGGE, B.D. London, 1702-4, 2 vols. 8vo.

88. Practical Observations upon the MIRACLES of our Blessed Saviour. By Francis Bragge, B.D. London, 1702-6, 2 vols. Svo.

89. Discourses on the Miracles and Parables of our Blessed Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. By William Donn, LL.D. London, 1757, 4 vols. 8vo. Second edition, 1809, 4 vols. 8vo.

90. Discourses on the Parables of our Blessed Saviour, and the Miracles of his Holy Gospel. With occasional Illustrations. By Charles Bulkley. London, 1771, 4 vols. 8vo.

91. A Delineation of the Parables of our Blessed Saviour. To which is prefixed a Dissertation on Parables and Allegorical Writings in general. By Andrew GRAY, D.D. London, 1777, Second edition, 1814, 8vo.

This "Delineation will be of great use to the reader in the study of the parables of Jesus, and will enable him to comprehend their full force and meaning. The author has explained and illustrated them with perspicuity, and pointed out the several important instructions that may fairly be deduced from them." (Monthly Review, O. S. vol. lvii. p. 196.)

92. Lectures on Scripture Miracles. By William Bengo Coll-YER, D.D. London, 1812, 8vo.

93. Lectures on Scripture Parables. By William Bengo Coll-TER, D.D. London, 1815, 8vo.

94. Sermons on the Parables. By John FARRER, M.A. London, 1809, 8vo.

95. Sermons on the Parables and Miracles of Jesus Christ. By Edward GRINFIELD, M.A. London, 1819, 8vo.

96. Lectures on Parables selected from the New Testament. [By Mary Jane M'Kenzie.] Vol. I. London, 1822, 8vo., and numerous subsequent editions. Vol. II. London, 1823, 8vo.

97. Lectures on Miracles selected from the New Testament. [By Mary Jane M'KENZIE.] London, 1823, 8vo.

98. An Exposition of the Parables of our Lord, showing their Connection with his Ministry, their Prophetic Character, and their Gradual Developement of the Gospel Dispensation. With Preliminary Dissertation on the Parables. By the Rev. R. BAILEY, M.A. London, 1829, 8vo.

99. Discourses on the Parables. By the Rev. James KNIGHT, M.A. London, 1829, 8vo.

100. Discourses on the principal Miracles of our Lord, By the Rev. James KNIGHT, M.A. London, 1831, 8vo.

§ 7. TREATISES ON RECONCILING THE CONTRADICTIONS ALLEGED TO EXIST IN THE SCRIPTURES.

1. Michaelis Walthert Harmonia Biblica; sive brevis et plana Conciliatio locorum Veteris et Novi Testamenti, adparenter sibi contradicentium. Noribergæ, 1654, 4to.; 1696, folio.

This work first appeared at Strasburgh (Argentorati) in 1626, and has been repeatedly printed in Germany: the edition of 1696 is reputed to be the best and most correct. Walther's Harmonia Biblica is a work of considerable learning and industry, which illustrates many difficult passages with great ability. He has, however, unnecessarily augmented the number of seemingly contradictory passages; a defect which is common to most of the writers of this class.

2. Christiani MATTHIÆ Antilogiæ Biblicæ; sive Conciliationes Dictorum Scripturæ Sacræ, in speciem inter se pugnan-

Epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians. By Matthew Hole, D.D. | tium, secundum seriem locorum theologicorum in ordinem redactæ. Hamburgi, 1500, 4to.

- 3. Symphonia Prophetarum et Apostolorum; in quâ, ordine chronologico, Loci Sacræ Scripturæ specie tenus contradicentes conciliantur, ut et ad quæstiones difficiliores chronologicas et alias Veteris Testamenti respondetur, in duas partes divisa. Auctore D. M. Johannes Scharfio, Scoto-Britanno, Andreapolitano, pastore. Genevæ, 1525, 4to.
- 4. The Reconciler of the Bible: wherein above two thousand seeming Contradictions throughout the Old and New Testament are fully and plainly reconciled. By J. T. London, 1656, 8vo.
- 5. The Reconciler of the Bible enlarged, wherein above three thousand seeming Contradictions throughout the Old and New Testament are fully and plainly reconciled. By J. P. and T[homas] M[AN]. London, 1662, folio.
- 6. Johannis Thaddel Conciliatorum Biblicum. Amstelodami, 1648, 12mo. Londini, 1662, folio.

The last is reputed to be the best edition, and professes to be onsiderably enlarged. This work follows the order of the several poks of the Old and New Testaments. The remark before made, considerably enlarged. This work follows the order of the several books of the Old and New Testaments. The remark before made, on Walther's Harmonia Biblica, is equally applicable to Mr. Man's work, to the Conciliatiorum Biblicum of Thaddæus, and also to

7. The Dividing of the Hooff: or Seeming Contradictions throughout Sacred Scriptures distinguish'd, resolv'd, and apply'd, for the strengthening of the faith of the feeble, doubtfull, and weake, in wavering times. Also to bring the soul (by prayer and spirituall application) into more familiar acquaintance with the Lord Jesus, the onely David's-Key to unlock the cabinet of Jacob's God, to fetch out that secret why he should lay his hands thus crosse when he gave his children this blessing. Helpfull to every household of faith. By William Streat, M.A. London, 1654, 4to.

This work is occasionally found in booksellers' catalogues, where it is marked as both rare and curious. It is noticed here merely to put the student on his guard not to purchase it. The critical information it contains is very meagre; and the quaint title-page, which we have copied, sufficiently indicates the enthusiastic spirit of the author.

Joannis Pontasti Sacra Scriptura ubique sibi constans: seu Difficiliores Sacræ Scripturæ Loci, in Speciem secum pugnantes, juxta sanctorum ecclesiæ sanctæ patrum celeberrimorum-que theologorum sententiam conciliati. Parisiis, 1698, 4to.

M. Pontas was distinguished for his knowledge of casuistical theology. His design in this publication was to have reconciled all the seeming contradictions of the Scriptures; but he proceeded no farther than through the Pentateuch. It is a work of considerable learning and research.

9. The Harmony of Scripture; or an attempt to reconcile various passages apparently contradictory. By the late Rev. Andrew Fuller. London, 1817, 8vo.

This posthumous tract contains fifty-five judicious observations on so many apparently contradictory texts of Scripture. They were originally written for the satisfaction of a private individual.

- 10. Lectures on the Harmony of the Scriptures, designed to reconcile apparently contradictory Passages. By James Hayter Cox. London, 1823, 8vo.
- § 8. PRINCIPAL COLLECTIONS OF VARIOUS ESSAYS AND COM-MENTARIES ON DETACHED PORTIONS OF THE SCRIPTURES, AND OBSERVATIONS ON THE SCRIPTURES, CRITICAL, PHILO-LOGICAL, AND MISCELLANEOUS.
- [i.] Collections of various Essays and Commentaries on detached portions of the Scriptures.
- Bibliotheca Historico-Philologico-Theologica. Bremæ, 1719-26. Classes VIII. in 16 tomis, 8vo.
- 2. Museum Historico-Philologico-Theologicum. Bremæ, 1728 -29, 2 tomis, 8vo.
- 3. Bibliotheca Bremensis Nova, Historico-Philologico-Theologica. Bremæ, 1760-66, 6 tomis, 8vo.
- 4. Bibliotheca, Hagana, Historico-Philologico-Theologica, ad continuationem Bibliothecæ Bremensis Novæ, constructa à Nicolao Barker. Hagæ, 1768-74, 5 tomis, 8vo.
- 5. Museum Haganum. Historico-Philologico-Theologicum, a Nicolao Barket editum. Hagæ Comitum, 1774-80, 4 tomis, 8vo.
- 6. Symbolæ Literariæ Haganæ, à Nicolao BARKEY. Hagæ, Comitum, 1777-81. Classes II. in 6 fasciculis, 8vo.

- 7. Bibliotheca Historico-Philologica-Theologica [à Theodore Hasse et Frederico Adolpho Lampe, edita]. Amstelodami, 1721-25. 8 tomis, 8vo.
- 8. Miscellanea Duisburgensia, ad incrementum Rei Literariæ, præcipuè vero Eruditionis Theologicæ publicata [cura Danielis Gendes11]. Amstelodami et Duisburgi, 1735-36, 2 tomis, 8vo.
- 9. Miscellanea Groningana in Miscellaneorum Duisburgensium Continuationem, publicata a Daniele Gerdesio. Amstelodami, Duisburgi, et Groninga, 1736–45, 4 tomis, 8vo.
- 10. Symbolæ Literariæ, ex Haganis factæ Duisburgenses curante Joanne Petro Berto. Hagæ Comitum, 1783-86, 2 tomis, 8vo.
- Tempe Helvetica, Dissertationes atque Observationes Theologicas, Philologicas, Criticas, Historicas, exhibens. Tiguri, 1735-46, 6 tomis, 8vo.
- 12. Museum Helveticum, ad juvandas Literas in publicos usus apertum, Tiguri, 1746-52. Particulæ XXIV. in 7 tomis, 8vo.
- 13. Commentationes Theologicæ, editæ a Jo. Casp. Velteusen, C. Theoph. Kuingel, et Geo. Alex. Ruferti. Lipsiæ, 1794-99, 6 tomis, 8vo.

The first volume of this capital collection of critical tracts (in which various passages of the Old Testament are particularly illustrated) is now exceedingly scarce on the continent. A supplement to it was published by Messieurs Pott and Ruperti, at Helmstadt, entitled, Syldvoge Commentationum Theologicarum, in 8 vols. 8vo. 1800—1807.

- 14. Commentationes Theologicæ. Ediderunt, E. F. C. Rosenmüller, G. L. H. Fuldner, et F. V. D. Maurer. Lipsiæ, 1825-32, 2 tomis, 8vo.
- 15. The CLASSICAL JOURNAL, 8vo. London, 1810-29, 40 vols. 8vo. with Indexes.

Though principally devoted to classical literature, biblical criticism forms an important article in its journal; and many valuable clucidations of the Scriptures will be found in its pages.

16. The Biblical Repertory; or a Collection of Tracts in Biblical Literature. By Charles Honge, Professor of Oriental and Biblical Literature in the Theological Seminary at Princeton, New Jersey. Princeton and New York, 1825-28, 4 vols. 8vo.

This work consists of selections from the writings of the most distinguished Biblical and Oriental scholars, both British and continental. The subjects discussed are—the Criticism of the Sacred Text, Ancient Versions, Critical Editions, the Interpretation and Literary History of the Holy Scriptures, Biblical Antiquities, Exegetical Treatises on important passages of Scripture, Biographical Notices of Biblical Writers, Accounts of the most important Biblical Works, &c.

- 17. The Biblical Repertory and Theological Review, edited by an Association of Gentlemen in Princeton and its vicinity. Philadelphia, 1830–33, Vols. I.—V. 8vo. [This work is still in progress.]
- 18. The Biblical Repertory, conducted by Edward ROBINSON, D.D., Professor Extraordinary in the Theological Seminary at Andover. Andover, 1831-34, Vols. I.—IV. 8vo.

This truly valuable "Biblical Repertory" is also in progress. As its name imports, it is a collection of Essays and Tracts of permanent value, original and translated (especially from the writings of the most distinguished German critics); which relate principally to the literature of the Bible.

19. Essays and Dissertations on Biblical Literature. By a Society of Clergymen [of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of North America]. Vol. I. New York, 1829, 8vo.

This work, which has not been continued, consists chiefly of translations from the writings of German critics; against the neologian tenets published by some of whom the translators have supplied their readers with satisfactory antidotes. G. Michaelis, Storr the elder, Tittmann, Eichhorn, and Gesenius, are the authors from whom the materials of this volume have been derived.

- [ii.] Observations on the Scriptures, Critical, Philological, and Miscellaneous.
- 1. Fr. Lud. Abresch, Animadversiones ad Æschylum; accedunt Adnotationes ad quædam Loca Novi Testamenti. Medioburgi, 1743, 2 vols. 8vo.
- 2. Cornelii Adami Observationes Theologico-Philologicæ: quibus plurima Sacri Codicis Novi Testamenti præsertim, Loca ex moribus et ritibus diversarum gentium illustrantur. Gröningæ, 1710, 4to.

3. Cornelii Adami Exercitationes Exegetica de Israelis in Ægypto Multiplicatione et Oppressione; Nativitate et Institutione Mosis in Sapientia Ægyptiorum: Conversione sancti Pauli aliorumque magnorum peccatorum; malisque Roma pagana et hodiernæ Moribus. Accedunt Scholia ad decem loca ex Actis Apostolorum. Gröningæ, 4to.

Walchius speaks in very high terms of the erudition of both these publications. (Bibl. Theol. Select. vol. iv. p. 336.)

- 4. Joannis Alberti Observationes Philologicæ in Sacros Novi Fœderis Libros. Lugd. Bat. 1725, 8vo.
- Joannis Alberti Periculum Criticum: in quo loca quædam cum Veteris ac Novi Fæderis, tum Hesychii et aliorum, illustrantur, vindicantur, emendantur. Lugduni Batavorum, 1737, 8vo.
- 6. Caroli Aurivillii Dissertationes ad Sacras Literas et Philologiam Orientalem Pentinentes. Gottingen, 1790, 8vo.
- 7. Miscellanea Sacra; containing an Abstract of the Scripture History of the Apostles in a new method. With Four Critical Essays—1. On the Witness of the Holy Spirit: 2. On the Distinction between Apostles, Elders, and Brethren: 3. On the Time when Paul and Barnabas became Apostles: 4. On the Apostotical Decree, &c. &c. [By John Shute, Viscount Barnington.] A new edition, with large additions and corrections. London, 1770, 3 vols. 8vo. Also in the Rev. G. Townsend's edition of Viscount Barnington's Collective Works. London, 1828, in 3 vols. 8vo.

The merit of this work is generally allowed. Dr. Benson acknowledged himself much indebted to it in his history of the first planting of Christianity, and in some other of his works.

- 8. Jo. Hermanni Benner Otia Sacra, de Divinis quibusdam Oraculis occupata. Gissæ, 1736, 8vo.
- 9. The Sacred Classics defended and illustrated, by Anthony Blackwall. London, 1737, 2 vols. 8vo.

This work "gives many well-chosen instances of passages in the classics, which may justify many of those in Scripture that have been accounted solecisms. They illustrate the beauty of many others, and contain good observations on the divisions of chapters and verses, by which the sense of Scripture is often obscured." (Dr. Doddridge.)

- 10. Zachariæ Bogan Homerus 'Εβρειζων; sive Comparatio Homeri cum Scriptoribus Sacris, quoad normam loquendi. Oxonii, 1658, 8vo.
- In the preface to this learned work the author states that it is not his intention to institute any comparison between the sacred writers and their opinions and Homer, but simply between their idioms and ways of speaking. The author added to his book Hesiodius 'Eŝpaiζw'; in which he shows how Hesiod expresses himself nearly after the same manner as Homer.
- 11. De Constanti et Æquabili Jesu Christi Indole, Doctrina, ac Docendi Ratione, sive Commentationes de Evangelio Joannis cum Matthæi, Marci, et Lucæ Evangeliis comparato. Scripsit E. A. Borger, Lugd. Bat. 1816, 8vo.

A work of deep research. Its design is to demonstrate the credibility of the four evangelists by internal arguments, deduced from the mutual comparison of their writings.

- 12. Lamberti Bos Exercitationes Philologicæ in quibus Novi Fæderis loca nonnulla ex auctoribus Græcis illustrantur, aliorumque versiones et interpretationes examinantur. Francq. 1710, 8vo.; edit. 2. 1713, 8vo.
- Lamberti Bos Observationes Miscellaneæ ad loca quædam cum Novi Fœderis, tum exterorum Scriptorum Græcorum. Franequeræ, 1707, 8vo.
- 14. Lamberti Bos Ellipses Græcæ, editæ a Schaefer. Lipsiæ, 1808, or Glasgow, 1813, 8vo.
- 15. Critical Conjectures and Observations on the New Testament, collected from various Authors, as well in regard to Words as Pointing, with the reasons on which both are founded. By William Bowxen, F.S.A., Bishop Barrington, Mr. Markland, Professor Schultz, Professor Michaelis, Dr. Owen, Dr. Woide, Dr. Gosset, and Mr. Weston. A Series of Conjectures from Michaelis, and a Specimen of Notes on the Old Testament, by Mr. Weston, are added in an Appendix. 4th edit. London, 1812, 4to.
- For an account of the former impressions of this valuable work, see Monthly Review, O. S. vols. xlvi. p. 555. and lxvii. p. 113.; and for an account of the present edition, see the British Critic, O. S. vol. xl. p. 507. et seq. In the preface to which journal (p. vi.) it is truly observed that Mr. Bowyer's work "is for the learned only; and for those among the learned who can discriminate and judge for themselves. Conjectures on the sacred text are at best extremely hazardous; hence it is that the work, though valuable, can Rhenum, 1720, 1728. In two volumes, 8vo. deserve only a partial recommendation.

- 16. Observations upon the Plagues inflicted upon the Egyptians; in which is shown the peculiarity of those judgments, and their correspondence with the rites and idolatry of that people, &c. &c. By Jacob BRYANT, London, 1794; 2d edition, 1810, 8vo.
- "The same depth of thought, the same brilliancy of fancy, and the same extent of erudition, are proportionably conspicuous in this smaller production, as in the larger work of the Analysis" of Ancient Mythology. (British Critic, O. S. vol. iv. p. 35.)
- 17. Observations upon some Passages of Scripture which the Enemies to Religion have thought most obnoxious, and attended with difficulties not to be surmounted. By Jacob BRYANT. London, 1803, 4to.
- "On the whole, we have discovered in this work much learning, much ingenuity, and an uniform good intention; but truth compels us to add, that it displays a defect in judgment, and a too evident propensity to support a favourite hypothesis." (British Critic, O. S. vol. xxv. p. 58.)
- 18. Dav. Renaldi Bullerii Dissertationum Sacrarum Sylloge. Amstelodami, 1750, 8vo.
- 19. Résponses Critiques à plusieurs Difficultés proposées par les Nouveaux Incrédules sur divers Endroits des Livres Saints. Par M. Bullet. Besançon, 1819, 4 vols. 8vo. and 12mo.

These volumes were published at different times, many years since: the author of the fourth volume is not known. Many passages of Scripture which were the subject of cavil to Voltaire and the infidels of the last century are here elucidated; and their skep-tical objections are shown to be utterly destitute of foundation.

- 20. Joannis Buxtorfii Dissertationes Philologico-Theologicæ, et Abarbanelis aliquot Dissertationes. Basil, 1662, 4to.
- 21. An Examination of Scripture Difficulties. By William CARPENTER. London, 1828, 8vo.
- 22. Commentatio de Felice, Judeze Procurator. Joanne Daniele CLAUDIO. Jenæ, 1737, 4to.
- 23. Pauli Colomesii Observationes Sacræ. Londini, 1688, 12mo.
- 24. Four Hundred Texts of Holy Scripture, with their corresponding Passages, explained to the understanding of common people, and arranged under the following heads:—1. Texts which appear contradictory. 2. Not to be understood literally.

 3. Improperly translated. 4. Better translated otherwise. 5. Requiring explanation. 6. Wrested or perverted. 7. The Parables.—The whole compiled with a view to promote religious knowledge, and facilitate the reading of the Divine Writings. By Oliver St. John Cooper, A.M. London, 1791, small 8vo.
- 25. The Practical Expositor of the more difficult Texts that are contained in the Holy Bible: wherein the dreams in Daniel, and the visions of all the Prophets, and the two mystical Books of the Canticles and the Revelation are all clearly opened. By Richard Coore, D.D. London, 1683, 8vo.
- 26. Salomonis Devlingii Observationes Sacræ. 1735, 5 vols. 4to.
- 27. Ambrosii Dorhout, Animadversiones in Loca Selecta Veteris Testamenti. Leovardiæ, 1766, 2 vols. 8vo.
- 28. Joannis Doughtæi Analecta Sacra, et Nortoni Knatchbullii Animadversiones in Libros Novi Testamenti. Amstelodami, 1694, 8vo.
- 29. Drusii (Joannis) Animadversionum Libri Duo. Amstelodami, 1634, 4to.
- 30. Tobiæ Eckhardi Observationes Philologicæ ex Aristophanis Pluto. Dictioni Novi Fæderis illustrandæ inservientes. Accedit ejusdem generis Dissertatio, ex Homeri Illiade. Quedlinburgi, 1733, 4to.
- 31. An Inquiry into four remarkable Texts of the New Testament, which contain some difficulty in them, with a probable resolution of them. By John Edwards, D.D. Cambridge, 1692, 8vo.
- 32. Exercitations, Critical, Philosophical, Historical, Theological, on several Important Places in the Writings of the Old and New Testament. By John EDWARDS, D.D. London, 1702, 8vo.
- 33. H. F. Elsner Paulus Apostolus et Jesaias Propheta inter se comparati. Vratislaviæ, 1821, 4to.
- 34. Jacobi Elsner Observationes Sacræ in Novi Fæderis

- Rhenum, 1720. 1728. In two volumes, 8vo.
- 35. Jo. Aug. Ernestii Opuscula Theologica. 8vo. 2d edit. Lipsiæ, 1792.
- 36. Synopsis Selectiorum è Philologia Sacra Quæstionum. Disputatio I .- III. quam præs. M. Augusto Pfeissero publicæ อบริทรทอน sistit Samuel Fischen (in opp. Pfeifferi). Ultrajecti, 1704, 4to.
- 37. FLECK (F. F.) De Regno Christi Liber, Quatuor Evangelistarum Doctrinam complectens. Cum excursibus argumenti critici, exegetici, atque historici. Lipsiæ, 1827, 8vo.
- 38. Critical Essays on Genesis, Chap. XX., and on Saint Matthew, Chap. II. 17, 18.: with Notes. By the Rev. Charles Forster, B.D. Dublin and London, 1827, 8vo.

The professed aim of Mr. Forster, in the publication of these essays, is to lower the modern continental system of biblical interpretation. With this view, in the first essay, he examines, and most satisfactorily refutes, the hypothesis of Father Simon, on the supposed translocation of the twentieth chapter of Genesis. second essay, the learned author considers the connection between the prophecy of Jeremiah (xxxi. 15.) with respect to the voice of weeping heard in Ramah, and the account given by Saint Matthew (ii.) of the slaughter of the innocents at Bethlehem. His hypothesis is, "that Jeremiah diverted from its proper object to his immediate purpose the prophetic type, Gen. xxxv. 16—19, in the way of accommodation; and that the evangelist, by referring the prediction in Jer. xxxi. 15. to the massacre at Bethlehem for its true fulfilment, has accomplished the final design of the Holy Spirit in nulliment, has accomplished the final design of the Holy Spirit in permitting the temporary diversion of the foregoing place of Genesis by the prophet; viz. the authoritative reunion of this prophetic type with its real antitype, through the medium of a prophecy, couched in terms sufficiently affecting to do justice to the deeply tragical event, to which it was meant ultimately to be applied."—"The view, taken by Mr. Forster," of the connection between Jer. xxxi. 15. and Matt. ii., "is, we believe, original; and even those, who find difficulty in subscribing to this interpretation of Saint Matthew's allusion will have none (we think) in ed. of Saint Matthew's allusion, will have none (we think), in admitting its ingenuity, or the ability with which every suggestion in its favour is brought forward." (British Critic and Theological Review, vol. i. p. 345.)

- 39. C. F. A. FRITSCHE Conjectanea in Novum Testamentum. Specimen I. Lipsiæ, 1825, 8vo.
- 40. Nicolai Fulleri Miscellaneorum Sacrorum Libri Duo. Lugduni, 1625, 8vo.
- 41. D. G. GOETZII Variæ Celebriorum Medicorum, Observationes, quibus multa loca Novi Testamenti doctè illustrantur. Altdorf, 1740, 8vo.

Questions of considerable difficulty are in this work briefly but judiciously illustrated.

- 42. Jo. Jacobi Griesbachii Opuscula Academica, Edidit Jo. Philippus Gabler. Jenæ, 1824—25. 2 vols. 8vo.
- 43. Biblical Notes and Dissertations, chiefly intended to confirm and illustrate the Doctrine of the Deity of Christ: with some Remarks on the Practical Importance of that Doctrine. By Joseph John Gurney. London, 1830, 8vo.
- 44. Theodorii HACKSPANII Notæ Philologico-Theologicæ in varia et difficilia Veteris Testamenti. Altdorf, 1664, 3 vols. 8vo.
- 45. A free and impartial Study of the Holy Scriptures recommended; being notes on some particular texts, with discourses and observations on various subjects. By Jos. HALLET, junior. London, 1729. 1732. 1736. 3 vols. 8vo.

Many important topics of Scripture criticism and interpretation are discussed in these volumes. If the reader is not always convinced by the arguments of the learned author, he cannot fail of which pervade them. Those discourses which treat on the evidences of Christianity are peculiarly valuable, for the lucid and forcible reasoning displayed in them. The nature of personal identity, in particular, with its application to the resurrection of Jesus Christ, is admirably illustrated in two discourses contained in the case of relations. in the second volume.

- 46. Jo. Christ. HARENBERG Otia Gandershemensia Sacra, exponendis Sacris Litteris et Historiæ Ecclesiasticæ dicatæ. Traj. ad Rhen. 1740, 8vo.
- 47. Danielis Heinsii Exercitationes Sacræ ad Novum Testamentum. Cantabrigiæ, 1640, 4to.
- 48. Annotata in Loca nonulla Novi Testamenti. Edidit Wessel Albertus van Hengel. Amstelædami, 1824, 8vo.

The author of this erudite volume is a pastor of the Dutch Reformed Church, and also a professor at Amsterdam. The passages which are the subject of his researches are seventeen in number, and among the most difficult which occur in the New Testament. Libros, quibus plura illorum Librorum ex auctoribus potissimum M. van Hengel's method of interpretation is very severe and traces it in classical authors and parallel passages; discusses its various meanings; and states the grounds of the signification which he adopts; and, after having thus drawn up a dictionary of the verse, he re-construes it with scrupulous fidelity. of all these laborious inquiries is, the eliciting of a clear and simple meaning to every passage which he has undertaken to elucidate. (Revue Protestante, tom. i. p. 254.)

- 49. A. Th. HOFFMANN Observationes in Difficiliora Veteris Testamenti Loca, Particula prima. Jenæ, 1823, 4to.
- 50. Scripture Testimonies to the Divinity of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, collected and illustrated by the Rev. George Holden, M.A. London, 1820, 8vo.
- 51. The Scripture Testimony to the Messiah: an Inquiry, with a view to a satisfactory Determination of the Doctrine taught in the Holy Scriptures concerning the Person of Christ. By John Pye SMITH, D.D. London, 1818-21. 2 vols. in 3 parts, 8vo. Second Edition, much improved and enlarged, 1829, 3 vols. 8vo.
- 52. Discourses and Dissertations on the Scriptural Doctrines of Atonement and Sacrifice. By William MAGEE, D.D., [late] Archbishop of Dublin. A new edition. London, 1832, 3 vols.
- 50-52.—Each of these truly valuable works was published in defence of that cardinal doctrine of the Christian Revelation,—the supreme Deity of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ: claim a distinct notice in this place, on account of the very nume rous philological and critical explanations of important passages rous philological and critical explanations of important passages of Scripture which they contain. From frequently consulting them, the writer of these pages can with confidence state, that they are works of which the student will never regret the purchase: each contains most valuable matter peculiar to itself; and, together, they form the most elaborate defence and proof of the Deity of Jesus Christ extant in our language. The value of Arch. bishop Magee's and Dr. Smith's works is enhanced by their learned vindications of many important passages of the Sacred Scriptures from the erroneous interpretations of the modern Socinians, as well as the recent neologian commentators of Germany.
- 53. Joh. Friderici Hombergk Parerga Sacra; sive Observationes quædam ad Novum Testamentum. Trajecti ad Rhenum, 1712, 4to.
- 54. Specimen Exercitationum Criticarum in Versionem LXX. Interpretum, ex Philone. Auctore Claudio Frees HORNE-MANN.-Specimen primum, Gottingæ, 1773. Specimen secundum, Hauniæ, 1776. Specimen tertium, Hauniæ, 1778, 8vo.
- 55. Gerardi Horner Animadversiones Sacræ-Profanæ ad selecta Novi Fæderis, Scriptorumque exterorum Græcorum, Loca. Harlingæ, 1749, 8vo.
- 56. Petri Horner Miscellaneorum Criticorum Libri duo: quorum alter ex variis Græcis, Latinis, varia Sacrorum, exterorum Scriptorum complectitur: alter vocabuli фатим Originem, Usum, apud seniores et reliquos, ubi loci plures LXX. &c. illustrantur, emendantur, vindicantur, tractat. Leovardiæ et Harlingæ, 1738, 8vo.
- 57. Biblical Criticism on the first fourteen Historical Books of the Old Testament; also on the first nine Prophetical Books. By Samuel Horsley, LL.D., Bishop of St. Asaph. London, 1820, 4 vols. 8vo.

Besides the critical pieces mentioned in the title-page, these volumes (which are edited by the author's son, the Rev. Heneage volumes (which are edited by the author's son, the Rev. Heneage Horsley) contain three valuable disquisitions, published in the bishop's lifetime, viz. 1. A general view of the first three chapters of Genesis, together with an inquiry into the etymology and import of the Divine Names of Eloah, Elohim, El, Jehovah, and Jah; which originally appeared in the British Critic, for 1802, in a review of the late Dr. Geddes's remarks on the Hebrew Scriptures. 2. A Critical Disquisition on the Eighteenth Chapter of Isaiah; and, 3. The Translation of the Prophecy of Hosea (noticed p. 142. supra). These are inserted as revised by their author. At the end of the fourth volume are translations of several Sacred Songs, with Critical Notes on them, and on a few other Sacred Pieces, of which the bishop has not given versions. Pieces, of which the bishop has not given versions.

- 58. Jo. Jac. Hottinger, Opuscula, philologica, critica, atque hermeneutica. Lipsiæ, 1817, 8vo.
- 59. Conradi IKENII Dissertationes Philologico-Theologicæ in diversa Sacri Codicis utriusque Testamenti loca. Lugd. Bat. 1749, 1750, 2 vols. 4to.
- 60. Pauli Ernestii Jablonskii Opuscula, quibus Lingua et Antiquitas Egyptiorum, difficilia Librorum Sacrorum Loca, et Historiæ Ecclesiasticæ capita illustrantur. Edidit atque Animadversiones adjecit Jona Guilielmus Te Water. Lugduni Batavorum, 1804-6-9-13, 4 tomis, 8vo.

Besides his Pantheon Ægyptiacum, M. Jablonski wrote numerous

- rigorous. He first examines each word in every verse; he then | After his death corrected copies of these (many of which had become extremely scarce), together with numerous inedited disquisitions, were sent to prof. Ruhnkenius at Leyden; and finally were edited by prof. Te Water, with numerous valuable notes and in-The first volume contains the Egyptian Glossary, already noticed in p. 112. The second volume comprises six disquisitions on Egyptian Antiquities, one on the import of the word Διαδηκη, and three illustrations of Job xix. 25., Matt. xii. 36., and Mark ix. 49. The third volume contains several dissertations elucidating difficult passages of Scripture; and six, on subjects of ecclesiastical antiquity. The fourth volume is wholly filled with dissertations relating to ecclesiastical history and antiquity. All these pieces are replete with profound learning. This collection of Jablonski's Opuscula is not of common occurrence.
 - 61. Car. Aug. Theoph. Keilii Opuscula Academica ad N. T. Interpretationem Grammatico-historicam, et Theologiæ Christianæ Origines, pertinentia. Edidit J. D. Goldhorn. Lipsiæ, 1821, 8vo.
 - 62. Remarks on Select Passages in the Old Testament; to which are added eight sermons. By the late Benjamin KENNIсотт, D.D. London, 1777, 8vo.

For an account of this work, see Monthly Review, O. S. vol. lxxviii. pp. 477-489.

- 63. Petri Keuchenii Annotata in Novum Testamentum, cum Præfatione Joannis Alberti. Lugd. Bat. 1775, 8vo. best edition.
- 64. Morsels of Criticism, tending to illustrate some few Passages in the Holy Scripture upon Philosophical Principles, and an enlarged View of Things. By Edward King, Esq. F.R.S. and F.S.A. 4to. London, part i. 1784, part ii. 1800; also a second edition, 8vo. in 3 vols. London, 1800.
- "Mr. King's particular aim is, to provide answers to the more subtile opponents of Christianity, and to trace the completion of the sacred oracles." "We cannot take our leave of this valuable work without expressing our admiration of the singular union of ingenuity and piety which appears in every page. Few readers perhaps will follow the author's steps with the same alacrity with which he proceeds through the most curious and subtile inquiries; but all must readily grant, that such an application of ingenuity, diligence, learning, and philosophical knowledge, is in a high degree praiseworthy." (British Critic, O. S. vol. xvi. preface, p. iv. and p. 667.)
- 65. Geo. Chr. Knappii Scripta varii Argumenti, maximam partem exegeticam. Halæ, 1805, 2 vols. 8vo. Editio altera, Halæ, 1823, 2 vols. 8vo.
- 66. Jo. Bern. Koehleri Observationes philologicæ in loca selecta codicis sacri. Lugd. Bat. 1766, 8vo.
- 67. Wilhelmi Koolhaas Observationes Philologico-Exegeticæ in quinque Mosis Libros, aliosque Libros Historicos Veteris Testamenti. Amstelodami, 1751, 8vo.
- 68. Joannis Guilielmi Krafftii Observationes Sacræ: quibus varia Scripturæ Loca illustrantur. Marpurgi, 1753-55, 2 parts,
- 69. Jo. Tob. KREBSII de Usu et Præstantia Romanæ Historiæ in Novi Testamenti Interpretatione Libellus. Lipsiæ, 1745, 8vo.
- 70. Car. Frid. Krumbholzii Operæ Subsecivæ; seu Animadversiones Sacræ in Loca quædam Novi Fæderis Selecta. Norimbergæ, 1737, 8vo.
- 71. G. C. KÜCHLER De Simplicitate Scriptorum Sacrorum in commentariis de Vita Jesu Christi. Lipsiæ, 1821, 8vo.
- 72. Christiani Theophili Kuinoel Observationes ad Novum Testamentum ex Libris Apocryphis V. Lipsiæ, 1794, 8vo.
- 73. C. G. KÜTTNERI Hypomnemata in Novum Testamentum. Lipsiæ, 1780, 8vo.
- 74. Geo. Dav. KYPKE Observationes Sacræ in Novi Fæderis Libros. Vratislaviæ, 1755, 2 vols. 8vo.
- 75. Jo. Gothofr. LAKEMACHERI Observationes Philologicæ; quibus Varia Antiquitatis Hebraice atque Græce capita et nonnulla S. Codicis Loca novâ luce collustrantur. Helmstadii, 1729 -33, 10 parts, forming three volumes, 8vo.
- 76. Friderici Adolphi LAMPE Dissertationum Philologico-Theologicarum, tum earum quæ ad ulteriorum evangelii Johannis illustrationem pertinent, tum reliquarum varii generis et eruditionis multifariæ, Syntagma: cum Danielis Gerdesii præfatione. Amstelodami, 1737, 4to.
- 77. Caroli Henrici Langui Observationes Sacræ, quibus varia N. Test. Loca, ex antiquitatibus et Philologia Sacra illustrantur. Lubecæ, 1737, 8vo.
- 78. The Complete Works of Dr. LARDNER. London, 1789, 11 vols. 8vo. London, 1817, 5 vols. 4to. London, 1827, 10 vols. 8vo.

In the applause of Dr. Lardner all parties of Christians are united, dissertations on various topics of sacred and oriental literature. regarding him as the champion of their common and holy faith.

Archbishop Secker, Bishops Porteus, Watson, and Tomline, and Doctors Jortin, Hey, and Paley, of the Anglican church: Doctors Doddridge, Kippis, and Priestley, amongst the Dissenters; and all foreign Protestant biblical critics, have rendered public homage to his learning, his fairness, and his great merits as a Christian apologist. The candid of the literati of the Romish communion have extolled his labours: and even Morgan and Gibbon, professed unbelievers, have awarded to him the meed of faithfulness and impartiality. With his name is associated the praise of deep erudition, accurate research, sound and impartial judgment, and unblemished candour. The publication of his works constituted a new æra in the annals of Christianity: for, by collecting a mass of scattered evidences in favour of the authenticity of the evangelical history, he established a bulwark on the side of truth which infidelity has never presumed to attack. His "Credibility," and his "Collection of Jewish and Heathen Testimonies," may be said to have given the deistical controversy a new turn, and to have driven the assailants of the Gospel from the field of Christian antiquity, in which they esteemed themselves securely intrenched, into the by-paths of sarcasm and irony. How amply we are indebted to the elaborate researches of the learned and accurate Dr. Lardner, the numerous references to his writings in the course of the present work will sufficiently attest. The quarto edition has corrected indexes. The octavo edition of 1827 is sold at a very reasonable price, and its typographical execution is truly beautiful. Our references to Dr. Lardner's works are made to the quarto edition, and also to the octavo edition of 1789.

79. A Common-Place-Book; or Companion to the New Testament; consisting of Illustrations of difficult passages; apparent Contradictions and Inconsistencies reconciled; and the Conformity of some Important facts mentioned in Scripture, with the Statements of Profane Authors. By the Rev. S. Longhurst, B.A. Richmond and London, 1833, 8vo.

This compilation contains most of the passages in the New Testament, which have arrested the attention of the captious opposer or the ingenuous critic. The compiler has undertaken it "for the English reader, and for those who may have but little acquaintance with the technicality and intricacies of biblical criticism." This Introduction to the critical Study and Knowledge of the Holy Scriptures has been laid under a large contribution. The remainder of the compiler's materials are derived from Mr. Burder's Oriental Customs, the Commentaries of Ostervald, Doddridge, &c. Mr. Vally's very valuable edition of the Greek Testament, and the works of Josephus; and for those passages which are quoted in the New Testament from the Old, the compiler states that the Greek Septuagint and the Hebrew text have been carefully compared.

- 80. Joannis Henrici Matt (filii) Observationes Sacræ; quibus diversa utriusque Testamenti Loca ex linguarum Indole, et Antiquitatibus potissimum illustrantur. Francofurti, 1713-15, in 4 books or parts, 8vo.
- 81. Critical Notes on some Passages of Scripture, comparing them with the most ancient Versions, and restoring them to their original reading or true Sense. [By Nicholas Mann.] London, 1747. 8vo.

These "Notes" are not numerous, but they contain some good illustrations of confessedly difficult passages of Scripture: they were published anonymously.

- 82. C. B. Meisner De Νομφ Paulino Commentatio Exegetico-Dogmatica. Gratz, 1830, 8vo.
- 83. Jo. Dav. Michaelis Commentationes in Societate Regia Scientiarum Goettingensi per annos 1758—1762, prælectæ. Editio Secunda. Bremæ, 1774, 4to.
- 84. Johannis Georgii Michaelis Observationes Sacræ, in quibus diversis Sacræ Scripturæ utriusque Fæderis Locis selectoribus, ex Linguæ Ebrææ aliarumque Orientalium indole, priscorum item populorum ritibus et institutis, lux adfunditur: nonnulla etiam Antiquitatum Judaicarum capita ex Lege Mosaica et Magistrorum placitis excutiuntur, adque Sensum Spiritualem traducuntur. Trajecti ad Rhenum, 1738, 8vo. 2da editio. Arnhemii, 1752, 8vo.
- 85. Jo. Georg. Michaelis Exercitationes theologico-philologica. Lugd. Bat. 1757, 8vo.
- 86. De iis, quæ ad cognoscendam, Judæorem Palæstinensium, qui Jesu tempore vivebant, Christologiam Evangelia nobis exhibent, deque Locis Messianis in illis allegatis, scripsit Adamus Молант. Gottingæ, 1828, 8vo.
- 87. Observationes Selectæ in varia loca Novi Testamenti: sive Laur. Ramiresii de Pardo Pentecontarchus, Alexandri Morr in Novum Fædus Notæ, et Petri Possini Societatis Jesu Spicilegium Evangelicum: cum præfatione Jo. Alberti Fabricii et tab. æn. Hamburgi, 1712, 8vo.

One of the rarest little books of sacred criticism. Dr. Harwood calls this a very useful collection, containing many excellent notes on particular passages of the New Testament.

- 88. Sam. Frid. Nathan Morr Dissertationes Theologicæ et Philologicæ, vol. i. Lipsiæ, 1787; vol. ii. ibid. 1794; 2d edition, ibid. 1798. 8vo.
- 89. Miscellanea Hafniensia Theologici et Philologici Argumenti. Edidit Fridericus MÜNTER. Tom. I. II. Hafniæ, 1816-24.
- 90. Casp. Frid. Munthin Observationes philologicæ in Sacros Novi Testamenti Libros, ex Diodoro Siculo collectæ. Hafniæ et Lipsiæ, 1755, 8vo.
- 91. H. Muntinghe Sylloge Opusculorum ad doctrinem sacram pertinentium. Lugd. Bat. 1791, 1794, 2 vols. 8vo.
- 92. Augusti Hermanni Niemeteri de Evangelistarum in narranda Jesu Christi in vitam reditu Dissensione, variisque Veterum Ecclesiæ Doctorum in ea dijudicandâ et componendâ Studiis, Prolusio. Halæ, 1824, 8vo.
- 93. Jo; Aug. Noesseltt Opusculorum ad interpretationem sacrarum Scripturarum, Fasciculus I. 8vo. Halæ, 1785; Fasciculus II. ibid. 1787.—Ejusdem, Exercitationes ad Sacræ Scripturæ interpretationem. Halæ, 1808, 8vo.
- 94. Geo. Lud. ŒDERI Observationum Sacrarum Syntagma, 8vo. Weissenberg, 1729.—Ejusdem, Conjecturarum de difficilioribus SS. locis centuria, 8vo. Lipsiæ, 1738.—Ejusdem, Animadversiones sacræ. Brunswigæ, 1747, 8vo.
- 95. Eliæ Palatret Observationes Philologico-criticæ in sacros Novi Fæderis Libros. Lugd. Bat. 1752, 8vo.—Ejusdem Specimen Exercitationum Philologico-criticarum in Sacros Novi Fæderis Libros, 1775, 8vo.
- 96. Augusti Peeleferi Opera Omnia. Amstelodami, 1704, 2 vols. 8vo.

The first volume contains his Dubia Vexeta Scripturæ, 400 notes on difficult passages of Scripture, Ebraica atque Exotica Novi Testamenti e suis fontibus derivata, an explanation of Hebrew and other foreign words occurring in the New Testament, and ten dissertations on passages of peculiar difficulty in the sacred writings. The second volume consists of treatises on the criticism, interpretation, antiquities, &c. of the Bible.

- 97. Remarks on several Passages of Scripture, rectifying some errors in the printed Hebrew Text, pointing out several mistakes in the versions, &c. By Matthew Pilkington, LL.B. Cambridge and London, 1759, 4to.
- 98. Extracts from the Pentateuch compared with similar passages from Greek and Latin authors, with notes. By Edward POPHAM, D.D. Oxford, 1802, 8vo.
- Of this work the reader will find an analysis in the British Critie, O. S. vol. xx. pp. 289—294.
- 99. Porschberger (Christiani) Theocritus Scripturam illustrans; sive Sententiæ ac Phrases e Poetis Græcis ad illustranda Sacri Codicis Oracula. Dresdæ et Lipsiæ, 1744, 8vo.
- 100. Georgii RAPHAELII, Ecclesiarum Lunenburgensium Superintendentis, Annotationes in Sacram Scripturam; Historicæ in Vetus, Philologicæ in Novum Testamentum, ex Xenophonte, Polybio, Arriano, et Herodoto collectæ. Lugduni Batavorum, 1747. In two volumes, 8vo.
- 101. REINECKE (C. F. C.) De Constanti et Æquabili Jesu Christi Indole et Ingenio, Doctrinâ et Docendi Ratione: sive Commentatio de Evangelio Johannis cum Matthæi, Marci, et Lucæ Evangeliis conciliato. Hannoveræ, 1827, 8vo.
- 102. Fr. V. Reinhardi Opuscula Academica. Lipsiæ, 1808 -9, 2 vols. 8vo.
- 103. An Joannes in exhibenda Jesu Naturâ reliquis Canonicis libris repugnet, examinare conatus est F. W. Rettberg. Gottinge, 1826, 8vo.

The writer states the doctrine of St. John relative to the divine and human natures of Jesus Christ, and then compares them with the writings of the first three evangelists, and the remaining books of the New Testament. The conclusion to which the author arrives is, that the evangelist is not an impostor, and consequently that the writings bearing his name are his genuine productions.

104. Corrections of various passages in the English Version of the Old Testament, upon the authority of ancient manuscripts, and ancient versions, by the late W. H. ROBERTS, D.D., Provost of Eton College. Published by his son W. Roberts, M.A. London, 1794, 8vo.

"The biblical scholar will infallibly receive with pleasure these remarks, from a man of undoubted learning and ingenuity. The chief intention of Dr. Roberts seems to have been that of lessening the number of words supplied in Italic in our public version, as not answering literally to any words in the Hebrew, by showing that in some cases they are unnecessary, and that in some, the sense may be filled up by other means. There are also many remarks of a more general kind." In these observations, "candour, modesty, and ingenuity will be found adorning learning." British Critic, O. S. vol. iv. p. 648., and pref. p. vi.

SECT. III. § 8.]

105. Discours Historiques, Critiques, Théologiques, et Moraux, sur les Evénemens les plus mémorables du Vieux et du Nouveau Testament. Par M. SAURIN. Avec des planches. A la Haye, 1735-1739, 6 vols. folio.

Mr. van der Marck formed a design of representing on copper-plates the most memorable events in sacred history; and he en-gaged Mr. Saurin to write an explanation of the plates; this gave gaged Mr. Saurin to write an explanation of the plates; this gave rise to the discourses here published. There is an edition of them rise to the discourses here published. There is an edition of them in 11 vols. 8vo. They are deservedly held in the highest esteem.

106. Dissertations, Historical, Critical, Theological, and Moral, on the most memorable events of the Old and New Testament. Translated from the French of M. Saurin by John Chamberlayne. Vol. I. [all published] London, 1732, folio.

107. Dissertationes Philologico-Exegeticæ Everardi Scheidil.

Harderovici, 1769, 1770, 8vo.

108. Biblical Fragments. By M. A. Schimmelpenninck. London, 1821, 1822, 2 vols. 8vo.

These fragments are not critical elucidations of particular texts; but they are written with much elegance, and the authoress has introduced some of the finest practical and devotional thoughts of the Jansenist writers, particularly the accomplished and much tra-duced recluses of Port Royal. But her critical remarks on the authorized English version are not always correct.

109. Joannis Friderici Schleusneri Opuscula Critica ad Versiones Græcas Veteris Testamenti pertinentia. Lipsiæ, 1812, 8vo.

The Tracts contained in this volume are, 1. Observationes nonnullæ de Patrum Græcorum Auctoritate in constituenda Versionum Græcarum Veteris Testamenti Lectione genuina: the object of which disquisition is to prove that, in citing the words of the Old Testament, the Fathers were in many respects inaccurate, partly from their using faulty MSS., and partly from a failure of memory, which led them sometimes to substitute not only one word for another, but even to change whole members of a sentence: and, 2. Sylloge Observationum et Emendationum Conject. in Verss. Gr. Veteris Testa-110. Dissertationes Philologico-Critica. Singulas primum, nunc cunctas, edidit Christianus Friedericus Schnungen. Gothæ, 1790, 8vo.

The dissertations collected in this volume were, for the most part, published separately between the years 1772, 1775, 1781, are fifteen in number, and are highly valued on the continent. They comprise philologico-critical observations on the hymn of Deborah (Judg. v.), on various passages of the Books of Psalms and Job, on Isaiah xxvii., Ezekiel xxi., Habakkuk iii., and the prophecy of Obadiah; besides two valuable dissertations, on the difficulty of determining the age of Hebrew Manuscripts, and on the Arabic Pentateuch in Bishop Walton's edition of the Polyglott Bible.

111. Opuscula Exegetica, Critica, Dogmatica Scripsit, recognovit, variisque additamentis locupletavit H. A. Schott, Theol. Doctor et Prof. Ordin. Academiæ Jenensis. Jenæ, 1817, 1818, 2 vols. 8vo.

111*. Alberti Schultens Animadversiones Philologica et Criticæ ad varia loca Veteris Testamenti: in quibus, ope præcipuè Linguæ Arabicæ, multa ab interpretibus nondum satis intellecta illustrantur, quamplurima etiam nova explicanda modeste proponuntur. Amstelodami, 1709, 8vo.

This treatise was reprinted, together with other pieces of Prof. Schulten's, under the title of Opera Minora, Lugduni Batavorum et Leovardiæ, 1769, 4to. In this work Schultens has made great use of the Arabic language to illustrate Hebrew words and phrases. although he generally adduces passages from the grammarians and prose writers. The philological interpretations which he thus deprose writers. The philological interpretations which he thus deduces he places in contradistinction to those which the traditions of the rabbins had preserved.

112. Jo. Schulthessi, De Charismatibus Spiritûs Sancti. Pars prima De vi et natura, ratione et utilitate Dotis Linguarum, in primos Discipulos Christi collatæ, atque in posteros omnes deinceps ad finem usque sec. peren. Lipsiæ, 1818, 8vo.

113. C. Segaar Observationes Philologicæ et Theologicæ in Luca XI. Capita priora. Trajecti, 1766, 8vo.

114. Johannis Henrici à Seelen Meditationes Exegetica, quibus varia utriusque Testamenti loca expenduntur et illustrantur. Lubecæ, 1730-32-37, 3 parts, 8vo.

115. Gottlob Christiani Storn Dissertationes in librorum Novi Testamenti Historicorum aliquot locos, parts i.—iii. bingen, 1790-91-94, 4to.

116. Gottlob Christiani STORR Opuscula Academica ad interpretationem Librorum Sacrorum pertinentia. Tubingen, 1796, 1799, 1803, 3 vols. 8vo.

Besides various critical disquisitions of great merit, this work contains several commentaries on detached books of the New Testament.

VOL. II .- APP. 4 M

117. Car. Chr. TITTMANNI Opuscula Theologica. Lipsiæ, 1803, 8vo.

Various questions of sacred criticism are illustrated in this work with singular ability.

- 118. Dissertations on some Parts of the Old and New Testaments, which have been supposed unsuitable to the Divine Attributes. By Richard Twopenny, M.A. London, 1824, 8vo.
- 119. Dissertatio Theologica Judæo-Christianismo, ejusque Vi et Efficacitate quam exseruit in Rem Christianum seculo primo Quam....publico examini submittit. David Van Heyst. duni Batavorum, 1828, 4to.
- 120. Joannis Verpoortenii Fasciculus Dissertationum ad Theologiam, maxime exegeticam, et Philologiam Sacram. Coburgi, 1739, 8vo.
- 121. Verschulrii (J. H.) Opuscula, in quibus de variis S. Litt. locis, et argumentis exinde desumptis criticè et liberè disseritur. Edidit atque animadversiones adjecit J. A. Lotze. jecti, 1810, 8vo.
- 122. Campegii VITRINGE, patris, Observationum Sacrarum Libri iv. Francquere, 1700. Libri v. et vi. 1708, 4to.
- 123. Campegii Vithing x, filii, Dissertationes Sacre, cum animadversionibus Hermanni Venemes. Francqueres, 1731, 4vo.
- 124. Emonis Lucii VRIEMOET Observationum Miscellanearum, argumenti præcipue philologici et theologici, quibus multis locis S. Codicis aut nova aut uberior lux adfunditur, Liber. Leovardiæ, 1740, 4vo.

125. Silva Critica, sive in Auctores Sacros Profanosque Commentarius Philologus. Concinnavit Gilbertus WAKEFIELD, A.B. Cantabrigiæ, 1789-1795, 5 parts, 8vo.

The design of Mr. Wakefield, in the plan of this work, was the union of theological and classical learning-the illustration of the union of theological and classical learning—the filustration of the Scriptures by light borrowed from the philology of Greece and Rome, as a probable method of recommending the books of revelation to scholars. How ably this design was executed the reader may see in the different critical journals of that time, where Mr. W.'s peculiar notions on some points are considered. (See particularly the Monthly Review, N. S. vol. v. p. 54. et seq., vol. viii. p. 571, and vol. xvi. p. 235.) An Examen of his work was published by the C. A Heavilein in four small tracts private at Februs, in the A. Haenlein, in four small tracts, printed at Erlang, in 4to. 1798-1801.

126. WALCHII (Jo. Geo.) Observationes in Novi Fæderis Libros, quarum prima pars ea continet loca, quæ ex historia philosophica illustrantur. Jenæ, 1727, 8vo.

127. Vindiciæ Biblicæ: a Series of Notices and Elucidations of Passages in the Old and New Testament, which have been the subject of attack and misrepresentation by deistical writers. [By David WALTHER.] London, 1832, 8vo.

128. Scripture Vindicated: in answer to a Book entitled "Christianity as old as the Creation." By Daniel WATERLAND, D.D. London, 1730-1734, 8vo. also in the sixth volume of Bp. Vanmildert's edition of his works. Oxford, 1823, 8vo.

Though published in reply to Tindal's declamatory libel against revealed religion, this publication claims a distinct notice on account of its satisfactory elucidation and vindication of many, and some of them difficult, passages in the Old Testament. They are arranged, not in the desultory way in which Tindal introduced them the results of the state of the second seconds. them, to give point to his jests and sarcasms, but as the texts stand in holy writ; so as to form a regular series of expository illustrations. Part I. comprises the book of Genesis; Part II. carries on tions. Part I. comprises the book of Genesis; Part II. carries on the examination of texts from the book of Exodus to the second book of Kings; and Part III. extends through the remaining books of the Old Testament. Various passages in the book of Job, the Psalms, and the Prophets, charged by infidel writers with inconsistency, injustice, or absurdity, are here examined; and, occasionally, some collateral topics are entered into, tending to their further elucidation. Bp. Mant and Dr. D'Oyly have made considerable use of Waterland's labours. For an account of the controversies into which the publication of "Scripture Vindicated" compelled him to enter, the reader is roferred to pp. 153—173. of his Life by Bp. Vanmildert, forming vol i. part i. of his edition of Dr. Waterland's Works.

129. Biblical Gleanings; or a Collection of Passages of Scripture, that have generally been considered to be mistrans-lated in the received English Version, with proposed corrections; also the important various readings in both Testaments, and occasional notes, interspersed with a view to the illustration of obscure and ambiguous texts, with several other matters tending to the general elucidation of the Sacred Writings. By Thomas WEMYSS. York, 8vo.

The ample title-page of this work sufficiently indicates the design of the industrious compiler: in the compass of little more than 250 pages, it presents a variety of important corrections of a multitude of obscure or ambiguous passages in the sacred writings, compiled from the biblical labours of upwards of fifty of the most distinguished critics, both British and foreign. In the event of a new translation or revision of our authorized version of the Holy Scriptures, this little book cannot fail of being eminently useful. Its value would have been enhanced if the compiler had specified the sources or authors of each emendation.

130. An Illustration of the Method of explaining the New Testament by the early opinions of Jews and Christians concerning Christ. By W. Wilson, B.D. Cambridge, at the University Press, 1797, 8vo.

University Press, 1797, 8vo.

"Though not expressly presented to the public as a refutation of Dr. Priestley's 'History of Early Opinions,' and other works concerning the person of Christ, this performance is unquestionably to be received in this light. The author constantly keeps in view the arguments of this work just mentioned, and nearly passes over the same ground, in order to prove that the historical fact, relating to the opinions of the first Christians, is the reverse of that which the doctor has represented, and consequently that the inference respecting the true meaning of the New Testament is directly contrary to that of the unitarian hypothesis.—It would be injustice to the ingenious writer of this reply," to Dr. Priestley, "not to allow him, unequivocally, the praise of having written, in a perspicuous and correct style, a learned and well-digested tract, and of having conducted his part of the controversy with urbanity of having conducted his part of the controversy with ur and candour." (Analytical Review, vol. xxvi. pp. 368. 372.)

131. Joh. Dieterici WINCKLERI Disquisitiones Philologicæ, Scripturæ Sacræ quædam loca, et antiquitatis tam ecclesiasticæ quam profanæ momenta, illustrantes. Hamburgi, 1741, 8vo.— Ejusdem, Hypomnemata philologica et critica in diversa Scripturæ Sacræ, tam Veteris quam Novi Testamenti, illustrantes. Hamburgi, 1745, 8vo.—Ejusdem, Animadversiones Philologicæ et Criticæ ad varia Sacri Codicis utriusque Fæderis loca. Hildesiæ, 1750-52-53, 3 parts, 8vo.

All the publications of Winckler are both scarce and valuable: they are said, by Walchius, to illustrate many difficult passages of Holy Writ with great learning and industry. (Bibl. Theol. Select. vol. iv. p. 812.)

132. Hermanni Witsii Miscellaneorum Sacrorum Libri Quatuor. Lugd. Bat. 1736, 2 vols. 4to. 133. Hermanni Witsii Meletemata Leidensia; quibus con-tinentur Prælectiones de Vita et Rebus Gestis Pauli Apostoli, necnon Dissertationum Exegeticarum Duodecas; denique Commentarius in Epistolam Judæ Apostoli. Basileæ, 1739, 4to.

134. Hermanni Witsii Ægyptiaca et Δεκαφυλόν; sive de Ægyptiacorum Sacrorum comparatione cum Hebraicis Libri tres, et de decem tribubus Israelis Liber singularis. Accesit Diatribe de Legione Fulminatrice Christianorum sub imperatore Marco Aurelio Antonio. Basileæ, 1739, 4to.

135. Martini Caspari Wolfburgi Observationes Sacree in Novum Testamentum; seu Adnotationes Theologico-Critica in voces plerasque Novi Testamenti, ordine alphabetico, et Dicta præcipua tam Veteris quam Novi Fœderis. Flensburgi, 1717, 4to. Hafniæ, 1738, 4to.

136. An Impartial Enquiry into the case of the Gospel Demoniacks. By William WORTHINGTON, D.D. London, 1777, 137. Petri Zornii Opuscula sacra; hoc est, Programmata, Dissertationes, Orationes, Epistolæ, et Schediasmata, in quibus præter selectissima Historiæ Ecclesiasticæ et Literariæ capita, etiam plusquam sexcenta Scripturæ loca, partim ex atriusque linguæ sanctioris genio, partim ex Antiquitatum Hebraicarum Græcarum et Romanarum apparatu, illustrantur ac vindicantur. Altonaviæ, 1731, 2 vols. 8vo.

138. The Truth of Revelation, demonstrated by an Appeal to existing Monuments, Sculptures, Gems, Coins, and Medals. London, 1832, 12mo.

"This interesting book is clearly the production of a mind pious and cultivated, enriched by science and enlarged by various infor-mation; adapted especially to guard the young against the too welcome theories of skepticism: it will also afford to the general welcome theories of skephelsin: It will also allots to the general reader both gratification and improvement. It chiefly consists of striking facts deduced from the labours of modern inquiry, of allusions gleaned from literature, of memorials of past events over the relics of by-gone times, in sculptures, gems, and medals; and its object is, to apply these various materials to the illustration and establishment of the sacred records; as well as to express the conviction, that the foundations of a scriptural hope are not to be convicuon, that the toundations of a scriptural hope are not to be shaken by advancing knowledge, nor ultimately injured by the rash assaults of a class of men, who, aspiring to be deemed the votaries of philosophy, give too much reason for the suspicion, that the stimulus by which their industry is excited is the vain expectation of some discovery adverse to the Christian religion, rather than zeal for the promotion of science." (Eclectic Review, July, 1832, vol. viii. N. S. p. 14.)

CHAPTER VI.

CONCORDANCES AND DICTIONARIES, COMMON-PLACE BOOKS, INDEXES, AND ANALYSES OF THE BIBLE

SECTION I.

CONCORDANCES TO THE SCRIPTURES.

§ 1. CONCORDANCES TO THE HEBREW BIBLE.

1. Mariæ de Calasio Concordantiæ Bibliorum Hebraicorum in fontibus et hactenus non expositæ sunt in Lexicis aut Conet Latinorum. Rome, 1621, folio, in four volumes.-Londini, cordantiis, natura et sensuum varietas ostenditur. Cum anno-1747, et ann. seqq. Edente Gulielmo Romaine, folio, in four volumes.

The original of this work was a Hebrew concordance of Rabbi Nathan, a learned Jew, published at Venice in 1523, in folio, with great faults and defects. A second and much more correct edition of Nathan's work was printed at Basil by Froben. The third edition is the first impression of Calasio's Concordance, who has extended Nathan's work into four large volumes, by adding, 1. A Latin Translation of the Rabbi's explanation of the several roots, with additions of his own; 2. The Rabbinical, Chaldee, Syriac, and Arabic words derived from, or agreeing with, the Hebrew root in signification; 3. A literal version of the Hebrew text; 4. The variations between the Vulgate and Septuagint versions; and, 5. The proper names of men, rivers, mountains, &c.—Buxtor's Concordance (noticed below) was properly the fourth edition of Nathan's work, as Mr. Romaine's edition is the fifth. The last is a splendid and useful book.

2. Joannis Buxtorfii Concordantiæ Hebraicæ et Chaldaicæ. Basileæ, 1632, folio.

This is a work of great labour: it was abridged by Christian Ravius, under the title of Fons Zionis, sive Concordantiarum Hebraicarum, et Chaldaicarum, Jo. Buxtorfii Epitome. Berolini, 1677, tationibus J. G. Tympii et aliorum. Jenæ, 1734, 4to. editio

The particles of all languages, and especially those of the Hebrew, are not only of great importance, but very difficult to be fully understood. The Hebrew particles, indeed, were very imperfectly known, even by the best critics, before the publication of Noldius's work. His Concordance of them is so complete, that it has left scarcely any thing unfinished; and it is of the greatest importance to every biblical student and critic. The first impression appeared in 1650. The second is the best edition; and, besides the valuable notes, and other additions of J. G. and S. B. Tympius, it contains, by way of Appendix, a Lexicon of the Hebrew Particles, compiled by John Michaelis and Christopher Koerber. (Bibliographical Dictioner, vol. iii. 45) tionary, vol. iii. p. 45.)

4. The Hebrew Concordance adapted to the English Bible; disposed after the method of Buxtorf. By John TAYLOR [D.D.] of Norwich. London, 1754-57. In two volumes, folio.

This is one of the most laborious and most useful works ever published for the advancement of Hebrew knowledge, and the understanding of the Old Testament in its original language. It is, in fact, a Grammar, Lexicon, and Concordance, founded on the Concordance of Buxtorf, all whose errors Dr. Taylor has corrected. He 3. Christiani Noldii Concordantiæ Particularum Ebræo-Chaldaicarum, in quibus partium indeclinabilium, quæ occurrunt literally rendered, a literal translation is added. In general, all change or difference in the two texts is diligently remarked: and Dr. T. has added all the words (about one hundred and twenty-one in number), which Buxtorf had omitted; together with the particles out of Noldius. This invaluable work was published under the patronage of all the English and Irish bishops, and is a monument to their honour, as well as to the learning and industry of its author. The price of this Concordance varies from nine to twelve gumeas, according to its condition.

§ 2. CONCORDANCES TO THE SEPTUAGINT GREEK VERSION.

1. Conradi Кіпснені Concordantiæ Veteris Testamenti Græcæ, Ebræis vocibis respondentes, положитты. Simul enim et Lexicon Ebraico-Latinum. Francofurti, 1607, 2 tomis, 4to.

This laborious work, which is a Hebrew Dictionary and Concordance, is strongly recommended by father Simon, when treating on the best methods to be adopted in undertaking any new translation of the Scriptures. It contains all the Hebrew words in the Old Testament, introduced in an alphabetical order, and underneath is the Greek version of them from the Septuagint, followed by a collection of the passages of Scripture in which those words are differently interpreted. Considered as a first essay, Kircher's Concordance possesses considerable merit. It is, however, now superseded by

2. Abrahami Thommii Concordantiæ Græcæ Versionis vulgo dictæ Lxx. Interpretum. Amstelædami et Trajecti ad Rhenum, 1718, 2 vols. folio.

In this elaborate and valuable work, the order of the Greek Alphabet is followed; the Greek word being first given, to which are subjoined its different acceptations in Latin. Then follow the different Hebrew words, which are explained by the Greek word in the Septuagint version. These different Hebrew words are arranged under the Greek in their alphabetical order, with the passages of Scripture where they occur. If the word in question occurs in Aquila, Symmachus, Theodotion, or any of the other ancient Greek interpreters of the Old Testament, the places where it is found are referred to at the conclusion of the quotations from the Scriptures; and immediately after these all the passages in the Apocrypha are specified, where the word occurs. The work is terminated by a useful Index, a Hebrew and Chaldee Lexicon, a Greek Lexicon to Origen's Hexapla (by Montfaucon), and a succinct collation (by Lambert Bos) of the Frankfort and Roman editions of the Septuagint. This work is beautifully printed. (Bibliographical Dictionary, vol. iii. p. 42.)

§ 3. CONCORDANCES TO THE GREEK TESTAMENT.

1. Concordantiæ Græcæ Novi Testamenti, ab Henrico Stephano. Genevæ, 1594, folio. Et cum Supplemento, Geneæv, 1600, folio.

This Concordance is noticed here, to put the student an his guard, as it may generally be purchased at a low price. It is so carelessly executed, that some critics suppose Henry Stephens not to have been the editor of it: and that he lent his name to the work for pecuniary considerations.

2. Novi Testamenti Græci Jesu Christi Tameion, aliis Concordantiæ; ita concinnatum, ut et loca reperiendi, et vocum veras significationes, et significationum diversitates per collationem investigandi, ducis instar esse possit. Opera Erasmi Schmidli, Græc. Lat. et Mathem. Prof. Accedit nova præfatio Ernesti Salomonis Cypriani. Lipsiæ, 1717, folio. Glasguæ et Londini, 1819, 2 vols. 8vo. Londini, 1830, 48mo.

The best Greek Concordance to the New Testament. The Glasgow reprint of 1819 is beautifully executed. The London edition of 1830 was printed under the superintendence of the late Mr. William Greenfield. "By omitting the unimportant proper names, the indeclinable particles, the pronouns, and the verb substantive;—by substituting simple references for citation when the word occurs only four or five times, or when there are two or more passages strictly parallel, in which case one only is given and the others are referred to; alterations which detract nothing from the usefulness of the edition; the ponderous labours of Stephens and Schmidt are here screwed into something less than a pocket volume; and, what is more, for six shillings the biblical student may possess himself of a work at one time scarce and dear, in a form that will take up no room on his table, and which ought scarcely ever to be off of it." (Eelectic Review, February, 1832, vol. vii. N. S. p. 159.) This edition is very neatly printed.

3. A Concordance to the Greek Testament, with the English version to each word; the principal Hebrew roots, corresponding to the Greek words of the Septuagint; with short critical Notes, and an Index. By John Williams, LL.D. 4to. London, 1767.

"The lovers of sacred literature will find this work very useful in many respects: it is compiled with great pains and accuracy." (Monthly Rev. O. S. vol. xxxvi. p. 400.)

§ 4. CONCORDANCE TO THE LATIN VULGATE.

Sacrorum Bibliorum Vulgatæ editionis Concordantiæ, Hugone Cardinali auctore, ad recognitionem jussu Sixti V. Pont. Max. adhibitan, recensitæ atque emendatæ opera et studio Francisci Lucæ Brugensis. Antverpiæ, 1606, folio; 1612, 1617, 4to. Venetiis, 1612, 4to. Lugduni, 1615, 4to. Genevæ et Francofurti, 1625, 4to. Parisiis, 1635, 1638, 1646, 4to. Coloniæ Agrippinæ, 1684, 8vo. Avignon, 1786, 2 tomis, 4to.

The first attempt towards a concordance to the Latin Bible was made in the middle of the thirteenth century by Cardinal Hugo de Sancto Caro, of whose invention of the division of chapters an account is given in Vol. I. Part I. Chap. IV. p. 213. He is said to have employed five hundred monks of the Dominican order in selecting, and arranging in alphabetical order, all the declimble words of the Old and New Testaments; but the fact of so many monks being employed is questionable. It is supposed that the work was at first less voluminous than it afterwards became, and that it increased by frequent revisions and improvements. (Townley's Biblical Illustrations, vol. i. p. 483.) Le Long has given a list of several Latin Concordances (Bibl. Sacra, tom. i. pp. 457, 458. folio edit.); but the revision of Cardinal Hugo's work by Lucas Brugensis is considered to be the best of the numerous editions through which it has passed. That printed at Cologne is reputed to be the most beautiful; but the Avignon edition is the most complete.

§ 5. CONCORDANCES TO THE ENGLISH BIBLE.

1. A Concordace, that is to saie, a Worke wherein by the ordre of the letters of the A. B. C. ye maie redely finde any worde conteigned in the whole Bible, so often as it is there expressed or mencioned. By Jhon MARHECK. London, imprynted by Richard Grafton, m. D. I. folio.

The first Concordance to the English Bible: an account of it may be seen in Dr. Townley's Biblical Illustrations, vol. iii. pp. 118—120. It was preceded by a Concordance to the New Testament, compiled and printed by Thomas Gibson, about the year 1536.

2. A Complete Concordance to the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament, or a Dictionary and Alphabetical Index to the Bible. In two parts. By Alexander CRUDEN, M.A. London, 1763; 1810; 1824; 4to. Also various editions in royal 8vo. Philadelphia, 1830, imperial 8vo.

The first edition of this well-known and most useful Concordance appeared at London in 1737. The edition of 1763 is the third and last of those corrected by the author, and is usually considered as the best, from his known diligence and accuracy in correcting the press. The value of Cruden's Concordance has caused it to be repeatedly printed, but not always with due regard to accuracy. The London edition of 1810, however, is an honorable exception; every word, with its references, having been most carefully examined by Mr. Deodatus Bye (formerly a respectable printer), who voluntarily employed some years in this arduous task; for which he is justly entitled to the thanks of every reader of the Holy Scriptures. The London edition of 1824 is a reprint of that published in 1810. Another very accurate edition was printed a few years since at the press of Messrs. Nuttall and Co. of Liverpool, who employed a person to collate and verify every word and reference. The typography of the reprint at Philadelphia is very neatly executed; and its editor professes to have corrected more than ten thousand errors in the references, which had escaped the eye of the London editors.

3. A New Concordance to the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament; or a Dictionary and Alphabetical Index to the Bible, together with the various significations of the principal words, by which the true meaning of many passages is shewn. By the Rev. John Buttenworth. London, 1767; 1785; 1816; 8vo.

This is in a great measure a judicious and valuable abridgment of Mr. Cruden's Concordance. Singular pains were bestowed by its compiler, in order to insure correctness, by collating every word and reference in the proof sheets with the several texts of the Bible. The second edition of 1785 is considerably improved. The third impression of 1816 has some alterations in the definitions, made by Dr. A. Clarke; who has reprinted the original of the passages so altered. Those who cannot afford to purchase Cruden's work will find this of Mr. Butterworth extremely valuable.

4. A Concordance of Parallels collected from Bibles and Commentaries, which have been published in the Hebrew, Latin, French, Spanish, and other Languages, with the Authorities of each. By the Rev. C. Crutwell. 4to. London, 1790.

This is a very elaborate work, and will amply repay the labour of consulting; though the parallelisms are not always to be traced, and are sometimes very fanciful. But for this the industrious author is not to be censured, as he every where cites his authorities, which are very numerous.

New Testament. By the Rev. John Brown, of Haddington. London, 1808, 18mo. Glasgow, 1825, 18mo.

There are several editions of this Concordance extant, which being printed with diamond (or the smallest) type, it is from this circumstance commonly termed the diamond concordance. Its portability is its principal recommendation; as its very minute type requires no common strength of sight to read with pleasure. The edition of 1825 was revised by the Rev. Wm. Smith, of Glasgow; and is very neatly stereotyped on a clear and legible type at the Glasgow university press.

6. The Scripture Harmony; or Concordance of Parallel Passages, being a Commentary on the Bible from its own Resources; consisting of an extensive Collection of References from all the most esteemed Commentators, &c. &c. 4to. royal 8vo. and 18mo. London, 1818.

The contents of this compilation are comprised in three particulars: viz. I. The chronology, in which Dr. Blayney is followed, his being deemed the best fitted for general utility. 2. The various Readings, in the giving of which great care has been bestowed. These various readings are stated to be "printed on a plan, which to the unlearned reader will be more clear than the usual method, and which the narrow limits of the margin of a Bible could not admit: in this the very words of the text are printed at length, and the various readings are presented in a different type; so that while both are at one view before the reader for his choice, as the connection and analogy of faith may direct, the usefulness of the connection and analogy of lath may direct, the usefulness of the work is increased, because it becomes thereby adapted to every edition of the Bible;" and, 3. The Scripture References; a laborious compilation of half a million of Scripture references, chiefly from the Latin Vulgate, Dr. Blayney, Canne, Brown, Scott, and other valuable writers, who have devoted their services to this useful mode of illustrating the Scriptures. It is proper to remark, that in this compilation of references the publisher professes only to have collected a mass of texts from various authors of the that in this compilation of references the publisher professes only to have collected a mass of texts from various authors of the highest character for success in this useful and pious labour, and then to have arranged their varied contributions into regular order; the verse of the chapter under illustration is first marked; then follow the parallel passages in the book itself in which the chapter stands; afterwards the references are placed regularly in the order of the books of Scripture. The remark on Mr. Crutwell's Concerdance of Parallels may be arranged to the present work. Concordance of Parallels may be extended to the present work.

§ 6. CONCORDANCE TO THE FRENCH BIBLE.

Concordance, en forme de Registre, pour trouver facilement chaque passage du Nouveau Testament. Première Partie ; contenant les quatre Evangiles et les Actes des Apôtres. St. Petersburg, 1824, 8vo.

This concordance was announced to be in two parts or volumes. The first part only has been published: it is a concordance to the four Gospels and Acts of the Apostles, according to the French version of De Sacy. The second part is to comprise a concordance to the Epistles of Saint Paul and to the Catholic Epistles.

SECTION II.

DICTIONARIES OF THE BIBLE.

DICTIONNAIRE Historique Chronologique, Géographique, et Littéral de la Bible. Par Augustin Calmer. Paris, 1730, 4 tomes, folio.

A translation of this truly valuable work (which is the basis of A translation of this truly valuable work (which is the basis of all other modern dictionaries of the Bible), with occasional remarks, was published in 1732, in three folio volumes; which having become extremely scarce, an edition was published in 1801, in two thick 4to. volumes, by Mr. Taylor, with a volume of additions from books of voyages and travels, &c. under the title of "Fragments." A new edition, enlarged and greatly improved, was published in 1823, entitled,

2. Calmet's Dictionary of the Holy Bible, Historical, Critical, Geographical, and Etymological: wherein are explained the Proper Names in the Old and New Testaments; the Natural Productions, Animals, Vegetables, Minerals, Stones, Gems, &c.; the Antiquities, Habits, Buildings, and other Curiosities of the Jews; with a Chronological History of the Bible, Jewish Ca-Tables of the Hebrew Coins, Weights, Measures, &c. &c. Fourth edition, revised, corrected, and augmented with an extensive series of plates, explanatory, illustrative, and ornamental, under the direction of C. Taylor. London, 1823. Fifth edition, 1828-29, 5 vols. 4to.

This work is beautifully printed. Vols. I. and II. comprise the Dictionary, in an alphabetical series, the supplements of former editions being incorporated; Vols. III. and IV. contain 750 Fragments, with the Natural History of the Bible. The additions, 5. A Concordance to the Holy Scriptures of the Old and lew Testament. By the Rev. John Brown, of Haddington. ondon, 1808, 18mo. Glasgow, 1825, 18mo.

made under the title of "Fragments," are extracted from the most rare and authentic Voyages and Travels (ancient and modern) into Judea and other oriental countries; and they comprehend an assemblage of the most curious and illustrative descriptions, explanations. tory of Scripture incidents, customs, and manners, that could not possibly be explained by any other medium. It must not, however, be concealed that some of the editor's discussions in the Fragments be concealed that some of the editor's discussions in the Fragments are prolix, and that his mythological elucidations are sometimes more ingenious than solid. Bp. Mant and the Rev. Dr. D'Oyly have made great use of Calmet in the Notes to the Bible, published by the venerable Society for promoting Christian Knowledge; and in their list of books, to which they acknowledge their obligations, they particularly specify the "Fragments" annexed to this Edition of Calmet.—Vol. V. contains an Atlas of Plates and Maps, with their corresponding explanations, in alphabetical order. These engravings are very neatly executed, and many of them These engravings are very neatly executed, and many of them throw great light upon oriental customs. In addition to the various improvements in the fourth edition, the references and quotations in the fifth edition were verified and corrected; the explanation of the plates, which had hitherto been detached from the body of the work, were incorporated with the articles of which they form a part; the whole of the text was revised: and several new articles, besides occasional additions, were introduced. In its present improved state, Mr. Taylor's edition of Calmet's Dictionary is indispensably necessary to every biblical student who can afford to purchase it. An Index of Matters and of Texts cited and illustrated in the fewer bedding was availabled acceptable in 1997. trated in the fourth edition was published separately, in 1827

3. Calmet's Dictionary of the Bible by the late Mr. Charles aylor, with the Fragments incorporated. The whole condensed Taylor, with the Fragments incorporated. The whole condensed and arranged in alphabetical order, with numerous additions. [By Josiah Conden.] London, 1831; second edition, 1832, royal 8vo.

This abridgment comprises under one alphabet whatever is important or intrinsically valuable either in Calmet's Dictionary of the Bible, or in the Fragments collected by Mr. Taylor. The editor of the abridgment has judiciously omitted all those articles (and those only) which were not directly illustrative of the Holy Scriptures, and also many of the prolix and trivial discussions of the Fragments. The value of the work is enhanced by the insertion of numerous well executed wood-cuts; so that each article includes its appropriate illustration; an improvement which cannot but greatly facilitate the perusal of this cheap and beautifully executed volume.

3*. Calmet's Dictionary of the Bible.....American Edition, revised, with large additions, by Edward Robinson, D.D., Professor Extraordinary of Sacred Literature in the Theological Seminary, Andover. Illustrated with Maps and Engravings on wood. Boston [Massachusetts] and New York, 1832, royal 8vo.

In preparing this work for publication in North America, Professor Robinson has made numerous retrenchments of those mytholosor Robinson has made numerous retrenchments of those mythological and etymological discussions, which the English editor could not omit, without taking greater liberties with the labours of his predecessor than might have been justifiable. In place of these retrenchments, Dr. Robinson has made very numerous and important additions, condensed with singular perspicuity from the works of modern travellers in the East, and especially from the labours of the most distinguished German critics and commentators, which are comparatively little known to American readers. is beautifully printed.

3. A Dictionary of the Holy Bible, for the Use of Schools and Young Persons. By Edward Robinson, D.D. Illustrated with Maps and Engraving on wood. Boston and New York, 1833, 12mo.

Though avowedly designed for schools and young persons, this neatly executed publication may be very advantageously used by all who may be unable to procure larger works. To a considerable extent it is an abridgment of the preceding American edition of Calmet's Dictionary; but not a few articles are original, and composed from the best accessible sources. In the Historical, Biographical, and Geographical Index, annexed to the second volume of this work, we have derived many valuable hints and illustrations from both. De Behirsent Dictionaries of the File from both Dr. Robinson's Dictionaries of the Bible.

4. A Dictionary of the Holy Bible; containing an Historical Account of the Persons, a Geographical Account of the Places, and Literal, Critical, and Systematical Descriptions of other Objects, mentioned in the Writings of the Old and New Testament, or in those called Apocrypha. London, 1759, 3 vols. 8vo.

This useful compilation is principally abridged from Calmet's great Dictionary of the Bible. In chronology, the anonymous editor professes to have followed Archbishop Usher; in geography, Eusebius, Jerome, Roland, Maundrell, Whitby, and Wells, have been consulted; and on the sacred antiquities of the Jews, recourse has been had to Josephus, the Rabbins, and the Fathers. This work may sometimes be met with at a low price.

5. A Dictionary of the Holy Bible, on the plan of Calmet, but principally adapted to common readers: containing an Historical Account of the Persons; a Geographical and Historical Account of the Places; a Literal, Critical, and Systematical Description of other Objects, whether natural, artificial, civil, religious, or military; and the application of the Appellative Terms, mentioned in the Old and New Testament. By the Rev. John Brown, of Haddington, 2 vols. 8vo. various editions. Also, in one volume, 8vo.

The author was a minister in the Secession-church of Scotland; and in his doctrinal views Calvinistic. Allowance being made for some of his sentiments, his work may be advantageously substituted for the preceding, the price of which necessarily places it above the reach of many persons. The first edition of this work appeared in 1769; the best edition of Mr. Brown's dictionary is said to be the fifth, which costs about eighteen shillings. A professed abridgment of this work was published in 1815, in two small volumes, 18mo. The "Compendions Dictionary of the Holy Bible," first published by Mr. William Button, in 1796, and since reprinted with additions and corrections, in 12mo., is a judicious abridgment of Brown's Dictionary. "By means of a very small but clear type, a vast quantity of matter is comprised within the compass of this little volume. The book, without doubt, may be serviceable to many." (British Critic, Old Series, vol. x. p. 201.)

6. Dictionnaire Généalogique, Historique, et Critique de l'Ecriture Sainte, où sont refutées plusieurs fausses assertions de Voltaire, et autres Philosophes du dix-huitième siècle; par l'Abbé[Antoine Seriers], revue, corrigé, et publié par M. l'Abbé Sicard. Paris, 1804, 8vo.

Sacred geography and antiquities form no part of this work, which is specially devoted to a refutation of the sophistries and falsehoods of Voltaire and the infidel pseudo-philosophers of France, during the eighteenth century. The author, Antoine Serieys (according to M. Sicard), was one of the victims of the French Revolution in the beginning of September, 1792. This is not true. Serieys was a voluminous compiler and editor of various works, principally historical: at an early period of his life he had rendered some services to the Abbé Sicard, who, being unable to remunerate him, allowed him to make use of his name. Serieys lived seventeen years after the publication of this dictionary, and died at Paris in 1819. (Biographie Universelle, tom. xlii. pp. 69, 70.)

- 7. Dictionnaire Abrégé de la Bible de [Pierre] Chompre. Nouvelle Edition, revue et considerablement augmentée par M. Petitot. Paris, 1806, 12mo.
- M. Chompré was a distinguished classical teacher of youth, in the former part of the eighteenth century, at Paris; where he first published his abridged Dictionary of the Bible, in 12mo. The new edition by M. Petitot is considerably enlarged and improved by the addition of numerous articles, particularly those relating to the manners, legislation, and sects of the Hebrews, and a Chronological Table.
- 8. A Dictionary of the Bible; Historical and Geographical, Theological, Moral, and Ritual, Philosophical, and Philological. By Alexander Machen, A.M. London, 1779, 8vo.

A useful book in its day, but now completely superseded by later works: it may frequently be procured for a trifling price.

9. A Theological, Biblical, and Ecclesiastical Dictionary; serving as a general note-book to illustrate the Old and New Testament, as a guide to the Practices and Opinions of all Sects and Religions, and as a Cyclopædia of Religious Knowledge. By John ROBINSON, D.D. London, 1815, 8vo.

This work is very closely printed, and presents a digest, with references to authorities at the end of each article, of almost all that had been written on biblical literature previously to the date of its publication. "It is clearly the work of a man of much industry in collecting, and of much judgment in arranging his matter. To every theological student, who has not access to an extensive library, this volume will prove a very useful subsidiary; to many, indeed, who have neither attainment nor abilities for research, it will become necessary." (Brit. Crit. N. S. vol. vii. p. 305.) We cannot however help expressing our regret that, on some topics, Dr. R. should have referred to writers whose publications (though useful in some respects) are calculated to subvert the fundamental doctrines of the Gospel. His work is illustrated by several neatly-engraved maps. It may be proper to add that it is noticed with merited commendation in the Evangelical Magazine for 1817, vol. xxv. p. 486., and in the Antijacobin Review, vol. xlix. pp. 1—15.

10. The Biblical Cyclopædia; or, Dictionary of the Holy Scriptures, intended to facilitate an acquaintance with the inspired writings. By William Jones. 1816, 2 vols. 8vo.

The plan of this Biblical Cyclopædia is less extensive than that of Dr. Robinson's Dictionary, before which some parts of it appeared, though it bears date one year later than the latter work.

11. A Dictionary of the Holy Bible. Extracted chiefly from Brown, Calmet, &c., collated with other works of the like kind, with numerous additions from various Authors, and a considerable quantity of original matter. By the Rev. James Wood. Seventh Edition, London [1822], 2 vols. 8vo.

- 12. The Pocket Dictionary of the Holy Bible; selected and arranged from Calmet, Brown, Newton, Hurd, and other Writers. By W. GURNEY, A.M. London, 1826, 18mo.
- 13. The Scripture Lexicon: or a Dictionary of above four thousand Proper Names of Persons and Places mentioned in the Old and New Testament; divided into syllables, with their proper accents. By Peter OLIVER. Oxford, 1810, 8vo.
- 14. A Pocket Dictionary of the Holy Bible: containing an Historical and Geographical Account of the Persons and Places mentioned in the Old and New Testaments. By Archibald ALEXANDER, D.D. Philadelphia, 1830, 18mo.
- 15. A Biblical and Theological Dictionary, explanatory of the History, Manners, and Customs of the Jews, and neighbouring nations: with an account of the most remarkable places and persons mentioned in Sacred Scripture, &c. By the Rev. Richard Watson. London, 1831, royal 8vo.
- 16. Thesaurus Ecclesiasticus, e Patribus Græcis, ordine alphabetico exhibens quæcunque Phrases, Ritus, Dogmata, Hæreses, et hujusmodi alia huc spectant, à Johanne Casparo Suicero. Amstelodami, 1728, 2 vols. folio.

This is the best edition of a most valuable work; which, though indispensably necessary for understanding the writings of the Greek fathers, incidentally contains many illustrations of Scripture. It is said to have cost the learned author twenty years' labour: the first edition appeared at Amsterdam in 1682, in 2 volumes, folio.

SECTION III.

COMMON-PLACE BOOKS TO THE BIBLE.

1. Christian Institutes, or the Sincere Word of God collected out of the Old and New Testaments, digested under proper heads, and delivered in the very words of Scripture. By Francis Gastrell, D.D., Bishop of Chester. 12mo.

This valuable little work, which may perhaps be considered as a Concordance of parallel passages at full length, was first published in 1707, and has since been repeatedly printed in 12mo. It may be very advantageously substituted for any of the subsequent larger and more expensive works. The "Economy of a Christian Life," published by the Rev. W. Bingley in 1808, in 2 vols. 12mo. is similar in design, but upon the whole better arranged than Bp. Gastrell's little manual.

2. A Common-Place Book to the Holy Bible, or the Scriptures' Sufficiency practically demonstrated: wherein the substance of Scripture respecting doctrine, worship, and manners is reduced to its proper heads. By John Locke, Esq. A new edition, revised and improved by the Rev. William Donn, LL.D. 4to. London, 1805; 8vo. London, 1824.

Though this work is ascribed to the celebrated philosopher, Mr. Locke, we have not been able to ascertain whether it was really compiled by him. The second edition of it bears the date of 1697: an edition was published by the unfortunate Dr. Dodd, from which the present impression was made. It certainly is a very useful book.

3. A System of Revealed Religion, digested under proper heads, and composed in the express words of Scripture; containing all that the Sacred Records reveal with respect to Doctrine and Duty. By John Warden, M.A. London, 1769, 4to. 1819, 2 vols. 8vo.

This work is exceedingly valuable as a common-place book, or harmony of passages of Scripture. It was recommended by Dr. Robertson the historian, and other emiment divines of the Scottish church. In this work the author has collected all that the Scriptures contain relating to any one article of faith or practice under each respective head, in the very words of the sacred writers, with the occasional insertion of a brief note at the foot of a page, and a remark or two at the end of some few chapters. The texts are so arranged as to add to their perspicuity, and at the same time to illustrate the subject; and the chapters are so constructed and disposed that each may form a regular and continued discourse. The work is executed with singular ability and fidelity, and the reprint of it is truly an acquisition to biblical students.

4. An Analysis of the Holy Bible; containing the whole of the Old and New Testaments, collected and arranged systematically. By Matthew Talbot. Leeds and London, 1800, 4to.

This work has been justly characterized as "a book of good arrangement and convenient reference, and calculated to augment, by very easy application, our stores of sacred knowledge." (British Critic, O. S. vol. xviii. pp. iii. 88, 89.) It is divided into thirty books, which are subdivided into 285 chapters, and 4144 sections. This "Analysis" is of great rarity and high price.

5. Common-Place Book; or Companion to the Old and New Testaments; being a Scripture Account of the Faith and Prac-Christians; consisting of an ample Collection of pertinent Texts on the sundry Articles of Revealed Religion.
[By the Rev. Hugh Gaston.] A new edition, corrected, compared, and enlarged, by Joseph STRUTT. London, 1813; 1824,

The edition of 1813 is a reprint, with numerous corrections and additions, of a work originally printed at Dublin in the year 1763. The arrangement, though not equally good with that of some of the works above noticed, is clear; the selection of texts is sufficiently ample: and a useful index enables the reader to find passive the reader to fi sages of Scripture arranged on almost every topic he can desire.

The book is neatly printed: and as it is of easy purchase, it may be substituted for any of the larger common-place books already noticed. The edition of 1824 is considerably improved.

SECTION IV.

INDEXES AND ANALYSES OF THE BIBLE.

1. An Index to the Bible: in which the various subjects which occur in the Scriptures are alphabetically arranged: with Accurate References to all the Books of the Old and New Testament. Designed to facilitate the Study of these invaluable Records. Stereotype edition. London, 1811.

This useful index is printed in various sizes to bind up with Bibles; it is said (but on what authority we know not) to have been drawn up by the late Dr. Priestley.

2. The Analysis of all the Epistles of the New Testament, wherein the chiefe things of every particular Chapter are reduced to heads, for helpe of the Memory; and many hard places are explained for the helpe of the understanding. By John Dale, M.A. Oxford, 1652, 8vo.

3. The Scripture Student's Assistant; being a Complete Index and concise Dictionary to the Holy Bible: in which the various Persons, Places, and Subjects mentioned in it, are accurately referred to; and every difficult word completely explained. By the Rev. John BARR. Glasgow and London, 1829, 12mo.

4. Mosis P. Flachert Analysis Typica omnium cum Veteris tùm Novi Testamenti Librorum Historicorum, ad intelligendam rerum seriem et memoriam juvandam accommodata. Basileæ, 1587, folio; 1621, 4to. Londini, 1597, 4to.

5. Jacobi Brandmylleri Analysis Typica Librorum Veteris Testamenti Poeticorum et Propheticarum, Basiliæ, 1622, 4to.

6. Salomonis VAN TIL Opus Analyticum, comprehendens Introductionem in Sacram Scripturam, ad Joh. Henrici Heideggeri Enchiridion Biblicum IEPOMNHMONIKON concinnatum. Trajecti ad Rhenum, 1720, 2 vols. 4to.

A most minute Analysis of every Book and almost of every Chapter in the Scriptures. Heidegger's Enchiridion Biblicum, on which Van Til's work is a commentary, was first published at Zurich (Tigura) in 1681, and was frequently reprinted in Germany in the course of the last century. It contains prefaces to the different books of the Old and New Testament, together with very minute analyses of the different books. Where Heidegger's statements were correct, Van Til has corroborated them; where he was in error, the latter has corrected his mistakes, and supplied his omissions

CHAPTER VII.

TREATISES ON BIBLICAL ANTIQUITIES, AND ON OTHER HISTORICAL CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE BIBLE.

SECTION I.

GENERAL TREATISES ON BIBLICAL ANTIQUITIES.

1. Thesaurus Antiquitatum Sacrarum, complectens selectis- Religion, Sects, Arts, and Trades, &c. &c. By Claude Fleurt. sima clarissimorum virorum Opuscula, in quibus veterum Hebræorum Mores, Leges, Instituta, Ritus sacri et civiles, illustrantur; auctore Blasio Ugolino. Venetiis, 1744-1769, 34 tomis, folio.

An Analysis of the contents of this great Collection of Jewish Antiquities is given in Mr. Harris's Catalogue of the Library of the Royal Institution, pp. 11—20. 2d edition. "Many other books treating of Jewish antiquities have been published; but those who have a taste for such sort of reading, will find this collection far more useful to them than any other of the kind." (Bishop Watson.)

Modern Judaism: or, a Brief Account of the Opinions, Traditions, Rites, and Ceremonies of the Jews in modern times. By John Allen. London, 1816. Second edition, revised and corrected. 1830, 8vo.

The various traditions, &c. received and adopted by the modern Jews (that is, by those who lived during and subsequently to the time of Jesus Christ), are fully and perspicuously treated in this well-executed volume, which illustrates various passages in the New Testament with great felicity.

- 3. The Antiquities of the Jews, carefully compiled from authentic sources, and their customs illustrated by modern Travels. By W. Brown, D.D. London, 1820, 2 vols. 8vo.
- 4. Christ. Brünings Compendium Antiquitatum Hebræorum. 8vo. Francofurti, 1766.
- 5. Compendium Antiquitatum Græcarum è profanis sacrarum, collegit, naturali ordine disposuit, ad sacrarum literarum illustrationem passim accommodavit Christianus BRÜNINGS. Francofurti, 1759, 8vo.
- 6. Petri Cunmi de Republica Hebræorum Libri tres; edita à Jo. Nicolai. 4to. Lugd. Bat. 1703.

The best edition of a very learned work, which till lately continued to be a text-book whence the continental professors of Hebrew antiquities lectured.

7. The Manners of the Ancient Israelites, containing an account of their peculiar Customs, Ceremonies, Laws, Polity, statum, ecclesiasticum, politicum, et economicum, breviter deli-

London, 1809, 8vo.

For this third and best edition, the public are indebted to Dr. Adam Clarke, who has enlarged the original work with much valuable information from the principal writers on Jewish antiquities. The Abbé Fleury's work was translated many years since by Mr. Farnworth. The late excellent Bishop of Norwich (Dr. Horne) has recommended it in the following terms: "This little book contains a concise, pleasing, and just account of the manners, customs, laws, policy, and religion of the Israelites. It is an excellent introduction to the reading of the Old Testament, and should be put into the hands of every young person."

8. Moses and Aaron: or, the Civil and Ecclesiastical Rites used by the Ancient Hebrews. By Thomas Godwin. London, 1634; 1641, 4to.

This compendium of Hebrew antiquities is now rather scarce. It was formerly in great request as a text-book, and passed through many editions. A Latin translation of it was published at Utrecht in 1690, and again at Francker in 1710, in 12mo.

9. Apparatus Historico-criticus Antiquitatum sacri codicis et gentis Hebrææ. Uberrimis annotationibus in Thomæ Godwini Mosen et Aaronem subministravit Johannes Gottlob Carpzovius. 4to. Francofurti, 1748.

The most elaborate system of Jewish antiquities, perhaps, that is besides the annotations of Carpzov, it contains a Latin translation of Godwin's treatise.

10. Jewish Antiquities, or a Course of Lectures on the Three first books of Godwin's Moses and Aaron. To which is annexed a Dissertation on the Hebrew Language. By David Jennings, D.D. 8vo. 2 vols. London, 1766; Perth, 1808; and London, 1823, in one volume, 8vo.

This work has long held a distinguished character for its accuracy and learning, and has been often reprinted. "The treatises of Mr. Lowman on the Ritual (8vo. London, 1748), and on the Civil Government of the Hebrews (8vo. London, 1740), may properly accompany this work." (Bishop Watson.)

11. Antiquitates Hebraice secundum triplicem Judæorum neatæ a Conrado Ikenio. 12mo. Bremæ, 1741, editio tertia; 1764, editio quarta.

There is no difference between these two editions, excepting that the errors of the press in the third edition are corrected in the fourth. The first edition appeared in 1737. This book of Ikenius is valuable for its brevity, method, and perspicuity. It continues to be a text-book in some of the universities of Holland (and perhaps of Germany). In 1810 there was published at Utrecht a thick 8vo. volume of Professor Schacht's observations on this work, under the title of Jo. Herm. Schachtii Theol. et Philodol. Harderov. Animadversiones ad Antiquitates Hebraras olim delineatas a Conrado Ikenio Theol. Bremens. Patre mortuo, edulat Godfr. Jo. Scyngent. This volume only discusses the first of Ikenius's sections, on the ecclesiastical state of the Hebrews; it contains many valuable additions and corrections, with references to other writers. Independently of its being an imperfect work, this volume is too bulky to be of use to students generally, but would prove valuable in the hands of any one who should compose a new treatise on biblical antiquities.

12. Archæologia Biblica in Epitomen redacta a Johanne Jahn. Editio secunda emendata, 8vo. Viennæ, 1814.

An elaborate compendium of biblical antiquities, abridged from the author's larger work on the same subject in the German language (in five large 8vo. volumes), and arranged under the three divisions of domestic, political, and ecclesiastical antiquities. "Although it comes short, from the nature of the case, of the excellence of the original (German) work, for extent and variety of learning, and vividness and conciseness of statement, it is a book which is very rarely surpassed." (North Am. Review, N. S. vol. viii. p. 136.) At the end of the volume are upwards of sixty pages of questions, framed upon the preceding part of the work; the answers to which are to be given by students. A faithful English translation of "Jahn's Biblical Archæology" was published at Andover (Massachusetts), in 1823, and again in 1832, by Thomas C. Upham (assistant teacher of Hebrew and Greek in the Theological Seminary at that place), with valuable additions and corrections, partly the result of a collation of Jahn's Latin work with the original German treatise, and partly derived from other sources. The former part of the present volume of this Introduction (as our references will show) is much indebted to Jahn's Archæologia Biblica.

13. Archæologia Biblica breviter exposita a Four. Acker-Mann. Viennæ, 1826.

This is an expurgated edition of the preceding work, executed on the same principle as Professor Ackermann's edition of Jahn's Introductio ad Libros Veteris Federis, noticed in p. 87. of this Appendix, and with renewed declarations of the editor's profound submission to the Romish church. To render the work more complete, Dr. A. has subjoined a concise sketch of the History of the Jewish Nation, from the time of Abraham to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans. In revising the former part of this volume for the press, constant reference was had to this work.

- 14. Origines Hebrew: or, the Antiquities of the Hebrew Republic. By Thomas Lewis, M.A. London, 1724-5, 4 vols. 8vo.
- This is a laborious compilation from the most distinguished writers, whether Jews or Christians, on the manners and laws of the Hebrews.
- 15. Melchioris Leydekkeri de Republica Hebræorum Libri xii. Amstel, 1704—1710, 2 vols. folio.
- 16. Johannis Pareau Antiquitas Hebraica breviter delineata. Trajecti ad Rhenum, 1817. Edit, secunda, 1824, 8vo.
- An Appendix and Index to this summary of Hebrew Antiquities was published at Utrecht in 1825, 8vo.
- 17. Hadriani Relandi Antiquitates Sacre veterum Hebreorum recensuit, et animadversionibus Ugolinianis-Ravianis auxit, Georgius Joannes Ludovicus Vogel. 8vo. Halæ, 1769.

The best edition of a valuable little summary, which for many years continued to be the text-book of professors.

18. The History and Philosophy of Judaism; or a Critical and Philosophical Analysis of the Jewish Religion. By Duncan Shaw, D.D. Edinburgh and London, 1788, 8vo.

An ingenious treatise, which is divided into four parts: 1. On the Divine origin of the Law; 2. Of the duration of the Mosaic economy; 3. That the Gospel is the last dispensation of God's grace to mankind in the way of religious discovery; 4. Corollaries arising from the subject of the work: in the course of which the author takes occasion to vindicate the genius, divine origin, and authority of the Jewish religion, and its connection with the Christian, against the objections and misrepresentations of modern infidels.

- 19. Caroli Sigonii de Republica Hebræorum Libri vii.; editi à Jo. Nicolai. Lug. Bat. 1701, 4to.
- 20. Ernesti Augusti Schulzii Theologiæ Doctoris, et Professoris quondam in Academia Viadrina celeberrimi, Compendium Archæologiæ Hebraicæ. Cum figuris æri incisis, edidit, emendavit, addenda adjecit, notisque locupletavit Abr. Phil. Godefr. Schickedanz. Dresdæ, 1793, 8vo.

This is, perhaps, the best summary of Hebrew antiquities extant in the Latin language; but, unfortunately, it is incomplete, the author having executed only two books, which treat of the political and ecclesiastical antiquities of the Hebrews. Professor Schulze and his editor have diligently availed themselves of the labours of all previous writers on this topic, and have arranged their materials in a manner equally concise and valuable.

21. Ferdinandi Sтокси Compendium Archæologiæ Œconomicæ Novi Testamenti, ducentis thesibus comprehensum, et aliis aliisve notis illustratum. 8vo. Lipsiæ, 1769.

A small volume, of considerable rarity in this country; it treats of the private life and manners of the Jews, as mentioned in the New Testament, and may serve as a supplement to the imperfect work of Schulze, last noticed.

22. Lectures on Jewish Antiquities: delivered at Harvard University in Cambridge, A.D. 1802 and 1803. By David TAPPAN, D.D., late Hollis Professor of Divinity in that Seminary. Boston [Massachusetts], 1807, 8vo.

The nature and design of the Jewish Consitution, political and religious, are discussed in these lectures, which were published after the author's decease. The tendency of the Hebrew Ritual to promote the glory of God and the happiness of man is frequently illustrated in a pleasing and devout manner.

23. A. G. WAEHVERI Antiquitates Hebræorum et Israeliticæ Gentis. Gottingen, 1741, 2 tomis, 8vo.

This work is incomplete, the author having died before its publication; it contains much valuable information relative to the literature of the Jews.

SECTION II.

TREATISES ON PARTICULAR SUBJECTS IN BIBLICAL ANTIQUITIES.

§ 1. SCRIPTURE GEOGRAPHY.

- 1. Onomasticon Urbium et Locorum Sacræ Scripturæ; seu Liber de Locis Hebraicis, Græcè primum ab Eusebio Cæsariensi, deinde Latinè scriptus ab Hieronymo, in commodiorem vero ordinem redactus, variis additamentis auctus, Notisque et Tabulâ Geographicâ Judææ illustratus, opera Jacobi Bonferii, recensuit et animadversionibus suis auxit Joannes Clenicus. Accessit Brocardi Descriptio Terræ Sanctæ. Amstelodami, 1707, folio.
- 2. Samuelis Восилит Geographia Sacra; cujus Pars prior, Phaleg, de Dispersione Gentium, et Terrarum Divisione factă, in ædificatione Turris Babel: Pars posterior, Chanaan, de Coloniis et Sermone Phænicum, agit. Cadomi (Caen), 1646, folio. Francofurti ad Mænum, 1674, 1681, 4to. Also in the third volume of the folio edition of Bochart's Collective Works.
- 3. Johannes Davidis MICHAELIS Spicilegium Geographiæ Hebræorum exteræ post Bochartum. Partes i. ii. Gottingen, 1760, 1780, 4to.

Some observations on the first part of this learned work, which is not always to be procured complete, were published by John Reinhold Forster, entitled Epistola ad J. D. Michaelis, hujus spicitegium Geogr. Hebr. jam confirmantes, jam castigantes. Gottingæ, 1772, 4to. It is desirable to unite this with the work of Michaelis; but unfortunately both works are extremely rare and dear.

- 4. Friderici Spanhemm Introductio ad Geographiam Sacram, Patriarchalem, Israeliticam, et Christianam. Lugduni Batavorum, 1679, 8vo. Also in the first volume of Spanheim's Collected Works.
- 5. Hadriani Relandi Palæstina ex monumentis veteribus et tabulis adcuratis illustrata. Traject. Batav. 1714, 2 tomis, 4to.

This elaborate work is also to be found in the sixth volume of Ugolini's Thesaurus Antiquitatum Sacrarum.

An Historical Geography of the Old and New Testaments.
 By Edward Wells, D.D. 4 vols. 8vo. 2 vols. 8vo.

This learned work was originally published in four detached parts or volumes: it has frequently been printed at the Oxford press, and is too well known to require commendation; a new edition, revised and corrected from the discoveries of Sir William Jones and other eminent scholars, was published by the English editor of Calmet's Dictionary in 4to., in the year 1804. There are also copies in two or three vols. crown 8vo. Dr. Well's Geography of the New Testament was translated into German by M. Panzer, with numerous additions and corrections, in two vols. 8vo. Nuremberg, 1764.

7. Sacred Geography: or, a Gazetteer of the Bible, containing, in alphabetical order, a Geographical Description of all the Countries, Kingdome, Nations, and Tribes of Men, with all the Villages, Towns, Cities, Provinces, Hills, Mountains, Rivers,

Apocrypha. By Elijah Parish, D.D. Boston [Massachusetts],

This geographical dictionary of the Scriptures is chiefly compiled from the Onomasticon of Eusebius and Jerome, the Historical Geography of Wells, the great dictionary of Father Calmet, and the publications of various modern travellers. The book is very neatly printed, and has furnished many articles to our Geographical and Historical Index, in the present volume of this work.

- A Scripture Gazetteer and Geographical and Historical Dictionary. By J. S. Mansford. London, 1829, 8vo.
- 9. Jo. Matth. HASII Regni Davidici et Salomonæi Descriptio Geographica et Historica; unà cum Descriptione Syriæ et Ægypti. Norimbergæ, 1739, folio.
- 10. Car. Christ. Sigism. BERNHARDI Commentatio de Caussis, quibus effectum sit, ut Regnum Judæ diutius persisteret, quam Regnum Israel. Cum Tabulà Geographica. Lovanii, 1825, 4to.

This was a prize dissertation, composed (as the author states in his proemium) under considerable disadvantages, and with no other literary aid than the Scriptures and Havercamp's edition of Josephus. It is a very interesting publication, to which the first chapter of the present volume is indebted for some valuable observations.

11. Observationes Philologicæ et Geographicæ: sive Geographiæ Sacræ Specimen primum. Quo Urbes ac Regiones, quarum in Sacris Litteris fit mentio, breviter describuntur, iisdemque verus situs, justaque nomina redduntur. Amstelodami, 1747, 8vo.

The deficiencies of Calmet and some other writers on Geography, are supplied in this little work, which treats on the city of Jerusalem, the country of Elijah, the city of Hebron, the region of Ophir, the country of Abraham, the city of Eglain, and a few other

- 12. The History of the Destruction of Jerusalem, as connected with the Scripture Prophecies. By the Rev. George WILKINS, A.M. Second edition. Nottingham, 1816, 8vo.
- 13. Hadriani RELANDI de Spoliis Templi Hierosolymitani Liber singularis. Trajecti ad Rhenum, 1716, 8vo. edit. secunda, 1775. With a preliminary Disquisition and Notes by Prof. Schulze.
- 14. Ferdinandi Sтosch Syntagma Dissertationum Septem de Nominibus totidem Urbium Asiæ; ad quas D. Joannes in Apo-calypsi Filii Dei Epistolas direxit. Guelpherbyti, 1757, 8vo.
- 15. An HISTORICAL MAP of Palestine or the Holy Land, exhibiting the peculiar features of the country, and of all places therein, connected with Scripture History; interspersed with ninety-six vignettes illustrative of the most important circumstances recorded in the Old and New Testaments.

The size of this beautifully-executed map is 40 inches by 27‡. The vignettes will be found very amusing to young persons, while they serve to impress on the mind the leading points of sacred history and geography. The map is accompanied by a folio sheet of letter-press, containing explanatory references to the vignettes. The design of the latter is to imbody and connect with the names The design of the latter is to impody and connect with the names of places marked upon the map, the principal incidents in Jewish history—by placing the texts of Scripture in which such incidents are mentioned close to the name of the place where the transaction occurred. The sheet of letter-press also comprises a brief outline of the history of Palestine from the earliest period—the stations of the tribes—and Buhle's occonomical calendar of the country, exhibiting the state of the weather in the Holy Land throughout the different months of the year, and containing useful remarks on the various productions of the soil.

- 16. A New Map of Palestine and the Adjacent Countries; constructed from Original Authorities, showing their Ancient and Modern Geography, with the Routes of various Travellers. By Richard Palmen. London, 1828: on a large sheet, 24 inches by 28.
- 17. A Map, illustrating the Ministerial Journeys of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, constructed from the design of the Rev. J. C. CROSTHWAITE, A.M., by A. Arrowsmith. London, 1830.
- 18. A Map, illustrating the Travels of St. Paul, constructed from the design of the Rev. J. C. CROSTHWAITE, A.M., by A. Arrowsmith. London, 1830.
- "These two maps form a useful supplement to the Atlases to the Bible, hitherto published; for although almost all of them have Maps of Judæa adapted to the evangelical history, yet in no one of these do we recollect to have seen the several routes of our Saviour and of the great apostle of the Gentiles so clearly laid down as in Mr. Crosthwaite's maps. The addition of references to the various passages of the Gospels in which the ministerences to the the preceding editions as it respects the plates, though the text and typographical execution are equally valuable. From the costly price of this work, it is chiefly to be found in great public tibraries.

 2. The Natural History of the Bible: or a Description of all the Quadrupeds, Birds, Fishes, Reptiles, and Insects, Trees, Plants, Flowers, Gums, and Precious Stones, mentioned in the Sacred Scriptures. Collected from the best Authorities, and and Epistles, in which the routes of St. Paul are either mentioned Lakes, Seas, and Islands, mentioned in the Sacred Scriptures or or described, greatly enhances the value of these maps." (Christance of the Christan Remembrance, February, 1830, vol. xii. p. 100.)

- 19. A Map of Palestine in the Time of our Saviour, illustrative of the Books of the Evangelists. Designed and engraved by Thomas STARLING. London, 1832. Twenty-seven inches in length by twenty in width.
- 20. An Historical Map of Palestine, or the Holy Land delineated. By John Hunt. [Twenty-eight inches in length by twenty-two in width.] With a Companion to the same, consisting of Historical and Geographical Notices of the Principal Towns, &c. of that Country. London, 1832.
- 21. A Pictorial, Geographical, Chronological, and Historical Chart, being a Delineation of the Rise and Progress of the Evangelical or Christian Dispensation, from the Commencement of the Gospel Narrative to the Ascension of our Lord. Arranged, according to the "Harmonia Evangelica" of the Rev. Edward Greswell, B.D., by R. Mimpriss, and accompanied by a Key. London, 1832. Sixty-eight inches by thirty-six.

This admirably contrived as well as beautifully and correctly executed map is adapted to the divisions existing at the time of our Saviour's appearing on the earth; showing the situation of every place mentioned in the Gospels, with representations of the journeys of our Lord, and of the principal circumstances of the Gospel history, drawn upon the places where the events occurred, from designs of the old masters; with the view of showing the benevolent tendency of our Saviour's miracles. It contains 170 vignettes, and about 600 references in the body of the map, besides 50 large subjects in outline, in the margin; all of which are exquisitely engraved. The reference being subjoined to the depicted events, it forms a most valuable auxiliary in the lecture room, and a useful assistant in the study of divinity.

While this sheet was passing through the press, Mr. Mimpriss announced a similar Chart, designed to illustrate the Acts of the Apostles, in which the travels of the different apostles will be distinctly marked, and the sites of the several places will be acculaid down, from the geographical researches of the most learned modern travellers.

Most of the general treatises on sacred geography are illustrated ith maps. There is also an excellent map of Palestine in D'Anville's Ancient Atlas; it has been consulted for the maps accompanying this work, which have been drawn with great care, and corrected from the researches of modern geographers. The quarto Atlas, published by the late Rev. Thomas Scott, as an accompaniment to his commentary on the Bible, possesses the double merit of being correct as well as cheap. The Scripture Atlas, published by Mr. Leigh, is executed in a superior style, and has had a very extensive sale. Mr. Wyld's Scripture Atlas is a neat publication. Several small or pocket Atlases of the Bible have been published, which is included on the best when when the contraction. which indeed can only be used by those who have young eyes. Of these, Mr. Thomas Starling's "Biblical Cabinet Atlas" claims especially to be noticed for the beautiful execution of the maps, especially to be noticed for the beautiful execution of the maps, and the valuable tabular Geographical Index which accompanies them. "The Pocket Bible Atlas," containing eight neatly-executed maps, which was published at Edinburgh in 1832, (as its name implies) is expressly designed to be bound up with a pocket Bible. Various Treatises on Sacred Geography will be found in the fifth, sixth, and seventh volumes of Ugolini's Thesaurus Antiqui tatum Sacrarum.

It may be proper to add, that most of the questions relative to the history, geography, &c. of the Bible are noticed in Schleusner's valuable Lexicon to the Septuagint version, and also in his Greek and Latin, and in Messrs. Parkhurst's and Robinson's Greek and English Lexicons to the New Testament; where they are illus-trated with equal learning and accuracy

§ 2. NATURAL HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

1. Physica Sacra: hoc est Historia Naturalis Bibliæ a Joanne Jacobo Šcheuchzero edita, et innumeris inconibus æneis elegantissimis adornata. August. Vindel. 1731-1735, 4 vols. folio.

This is one of the most beautiful and useful works which has appeared on the natural history of the Bible: the engravings, in number, were executed by the most eminent artists of that day. A German translation appeared at Augsburg, at the same time with the Latin edition, to which it is preferred, on account of its having proof impressions of the plates. The French translation, published at Amsterdam, in 1732—1738, in 4 vols. folio, is inferior to both the preceding editions as it respects the plates, though the text and typographical execution are equally valuable. From the costly price of this work, it is chiefly to be found in great public

The Natural History of foreign countries was very little known at the time when the authorized version of the English Bible was executed: it is no wonder, therefore, that we find in it the names of animals, &c. which are unknown in the East. Our venerable translators, indeed, frankly acknowledge in their preface the obscurity experienced by them in Hebrew words occurring but once, and also in the names of certain birds, beasts, precious stones, &c. These difficulties have been materially diminished since their time, and especially within the last hundred and twenty since their time, and especially within the last hundred and twenty years; not only by the successful researches of eminent orientalists, who have applied their knowledge of the eastern dialects to the elucidation of Scripture, but also by the successful labours of Bochart, Celsius, Forskül, Scheuchzer, and other naturalists, historians of the Bible, as well as those of Shaw, Hasselquist, Russell, Bruce, and other distinguished travellers. To all these sources, together with many others which it is not necessary to enumerate, Dr. Harris acknowledges his obligations. Though he claims no praise but that of having brought into a regular form such information as he could collect from the best and most unexceptionable authorities; yet he is not a mere compiler. He has enlivened his general illustrations with many instructive and useful facts, observations, and reasonings: and in the course of his work he has introduced new translations of a great many detached passages and of some entire chapters of Scripture. Of these, future commentators will doubtless avail themselves, especially as Dr. H. has accompanied such translations with remarks and illustrations, correcting the errors which were the consequence of their being misunderstood, and pointing out the precision and force, the emphasis and beauty, which they derive from an accurate knowledge of the object in natural history to which they originally referred. A Catalogue is subjoined of the principal authorities quoted in his work, which is accompanied with useful indexes of matters and of texts illustrated, and particularly with an Index or List of the several articles, according to the English Translation, followed by the original Hebrew names, to which are subjoined the Linnæan or other modern scientific appellations. In a work embracing such variety of particulars, some articles must necessarily be found defective: these, however, are not very numerous. In conclusion, the writer of these pages cheerfully adopts the following just critique of a transatlantic reviewer:—" Dr. Harris is entitled to the thanks of the public, for having brought within a reasonable compass the most valuable materials on the subjects of which he treats; for having arranged them in a convenient method, and in general for having arrived at his own conclusions on the best evidence which the subjects admit." "On the whole, we dence which the subjects admit." "On the whole, we cheerfully recommend the work both to the learned and the unlearned reader, as containing all that can be known on the subjects which successively occur. Many of the articles will be read with great interest: and in those in which curiosity is most concerned the author, in a form as much abridged as their nature would admit, has exhausted all the learning of naturalists and travellers: and, as we believe, has generally come to the right results." (North American Review, vol. x. New Series, pp. 91, 92.) The London reprints are beautifully executed, especially the edition published in 1833, which is ornamented with neat engravings on wood. A German translation of this work was published at Leipzig, in 1825, in 8vo.

3. Samuelis Bocharti Hierozoicon, sive de Animalibus Sacrae Scriptura. 4th edit. folio, Lug. Bat. 1714; also in 3 vols. 4to Lipsiæ, 1793, and following years.

This last is unquestionably the best edition; it was published by Professor Rosenmüller, to whose researches biblical students are so largely indebted; and who has corrected it throughout, as well as enlarged it with numerous facts from the writings of modern translation. dern travellers. &c.

- 4. Hierozoici ex Samuele Bocharto, Itinerariis variis aliisque Doctissimorum Virorum Commentariis ac Scriptiunculis, ad plurimorum usus compositi, Specimina tria. Auctore Frid. Jacobo Schoden, Tubingæ, 1784-6, 8vo.
- 5. Jo. Henr. URSINI Arboretum Biblicum, in quo Arbores et Frutices, passim in S. Literis occurrentes, ut et Plantæ, Herbæ, et Aromata, notis philologicis, philosophicis, theologicis, exponuntur et illustrantur. Norimbergæ, 1699, 2 tomis, 8vo.
- 6. Olavi CELSII Hierobotanicon, sive de Plantis Sacræ Scripture Dissertationes Breves. Upsale, 1745-47; Amstelædami, 1748, 2 tomis, 8vo.
- 7. Hierophyticon, sive Commentarius in Loca Scripturæ Sacræ, quæ Plantarum faciunt mentionem. Auctore Matthæo HILLERO. Trajecti ad Rhenum, 1725, 4to.
- 8. Petri Forskal Descriptiones Animalium, Amphibiorum, Piscium, Insectorum, Vermium, que in Itinere Orientali observa-vit. 4to. Haunie (Copenhagen), 1775.—Ejusdem Flora Ægyptio-Arabica. 4to. Hauniæ, 1775. Ejusdem Icones Rerum Naturalium, quas Itinere Orientali depingi curavit. 4to. Hauniæ,
- M. Forskäl was a learned Swedish naturalist, who was sent in 1761, at the expense of his Danish majesty, to investigate the na- | Perplexorum, ad dubia et obscuriora Scripturæ loca rectius in-Vol. II .- APP.

Boston [Massachusetts], 1820, 8vo. London, 1824, 8vo. New dittion, greatly improved and corrected. 1833, crown 8vo.

The Natural History of foreign countries was very little known. lished by his colleague in the three works just noticed.

9. Scripture illustrated by Engravings, referring to Natural Science, Customs, Manners, &c. By the Editor of Calmet's Dictionary of the Bible. 4to. 1802.

Many otherwise obscure passages of the Bible are in this work Many otherwise obscure passages of the control of the happily elucidated from natural science, &c. Though it does not profess to be a complete natural history of the Scriptures, yet it profess to be a complete natural history of the Scriptures, yet it has illustrates that interesting subject in very many instances. It has been incorporated in Mr. Taylor's editions of Calmet's Dictionary, noticed in p. 340.

10. Scripture Natural History: or a Descriptive Account of the Zoology, Botany, and Geology of the Bible, illustrated by Engravings. By William Carpenter. London, 1828, 8vo.

"Without that pretence to originality which, in the present day, is as much distinguished by personal vanity as it is at variance with truth, Mr. Carpenter has, we think, presented to the public an interesting and useful work." (Christian Remembrancer, April, 1827, p. 261.)

11. Remarks on the Mustard Tree mentioned in the New Testament. By John Frost. London, 1827, 8vo.

12. Remarks on the Phytolacca Dodecandra, or Mustard Tree of the Scriptures. By the Rev. P. W. BUCKHAM. London, 1827, 8vo.

As the common mustard tree (Sinapis nigra of Linnæus) is an annual plant, which, in consequence of its herbaceous stem, rarely attains a greater height than three feet, cannot with propriety be termed a free, commentators have been much perplexed in their attempts to explain our Lord's Parable of the mustard tree. The object of Mr. Frost's pamphlet (which is an enlargement of a paper in the Journal of Science and the Arts, vol. xx. pp. 57—59.) is to show that the plant in question is a species of Phytolacca-proba-bly the Phytolacca dodecandra of Linnæus, which, though it has the smallest seed of any tree growing in Palestine, yet attains as great an altitude as any tree which flourishes in that country, and present an artitude as any tree which nourises in that country, and possesses properties analogous to those of the sinapis nigra. Mr. Frost's hypothesis is controverted with much learning and ingenuity by the Rev. Mr. Buckham, who argues that the tree intended is the common mustard tree, and who has collected numerous passages from ancient botanical writers, and from modern travellers and botanical authors, in support of his argument.

13. Joh. Gottlieb Buhle Calendarium Palæstinæ Œconomi-Goettingæ, 1785, 4to.

14. Georgii Friederici WALCHII Calendarium Palæstinæ Œconomicum. Præfatus est J. D. Michaelis. Goettingæ, 1785, 4to.

In the year 1785 the directors of the University of Gottingen proposed, as a prize-subject, the compilation of an Economic Caproposed, as a prize-subject, the compilation of an Economic Calendar of Palestine, from Itineraries, with a view to the better elucidation of the Sacred Writings. The prize was adjudged to the composition of M. Buhle; to which, in Michaelis's judgment, the Calendar of Walch was next in point of merit. Each of these publications contains much valuable matter peculiar to itself; and both together throw much light on the physical geography of Palestine.

A translation of Buhle's Calendar is inserted in the Fragments annexed to Mr. Taylor's edition of Calmet's Dictionary of the Bible, Nos. 455—468.

15. Henrici Ehrenfridi WARNEKROS Commentarius de Palæstinæ Fertilitate, præcipuisquæ illius dotibus cum Ægypto comparatis.—In the 14th and 15th volumes of the Repertorium für Biblische und Morgenlaendische Litteratür. 8vo.

An English translation of this valuable disquisition is printed in the first volume of Dr. Hodge's Biblical Repertory, published at Princeton (New Jersey) in 1825.

16. A Comparative Estimate of the Mineral and Mosaical Geologies, revised and enlarged with relation to the latest Publications on Geology. By Granville PENN, Esq. Second edition, London, 1825, 2 vols. 8vo.

The first edition of the "Comparative Estimate" was published in 1822, and a "Supplement" to it. In its present improved state Mr. Penn's work forms a most powerful proof and vindication of the harmony subsisting between geological discoveries and the Mosaic

17. Scriptural Geology, or Geological Phenomena, consistent only with the Literal Interpretation of the Sacred Scriptures, upon the subjects of the Creation and Deluge. [By the Rev. George Buee, B.A.] London, 1827, 2 vols. 8vo.

§ 3. POLITICAL ANTIQUITIES OF THE JEWS.

Treatises on the Laws, Government, Coins, &c. of the Jews.

1. Rabbi Mosis Maimonidis More Nebochim; seu Doctor

Buxtorfio, filio. Basileæ, 1629, 4to.

2. The Reasons of the Laws of Moses, from the "More Nevochim" of Maimonides. With Notes, Dissertations, and a Life of the Author. By James Townley, D.D. London, 1827, 8vo.

The More Nevochim, or "Instructor of the Perplexed," is considered as one of the most valuable productions of the learned Jewish Rabbi, Moses ben Maimon, better known by the name of Maimonides. "It is a critical, philosophical, and theological work, Maimonides. "It is a critical, philosophical, and theological work, in which he endeavours to explain the difficult passages, phrases, parables, allegories, and ceremonies of the Old Testament; and is rendered particularly important by 'an excellent Exposition of the Grounds and Reasons of the Mosaic Laws,' to which many of our most eminent biblical critics and commentators have been deeply indebted." It was originally written in Arabic, and translated into Hebrew by Rabbi Samuel Aben Tybbon. The Rev. Dr. Townley (to whose life of Maimonides, p. 17, we are indebted for the preceding particulars) has given an account of the various for the preceding particulars) has given an account of the various editions of the original work of Maimonides; among which that of 1629 is usually reputed to be the best.

Dr. T. has conferred no small obligation on biblical students in presenting this treatise of Maimonides to them in an English dress; and in addition to a memoir of the original Jewish author, he has enriched his translation with upwards of one hundred pages of valuable notes, together with nine dissertations on the Talmudical Writings, and on various other topics tending to elu-cidate the "Reasons of the Laws of Moses."

3. Wilhelmi Zepperi Legum Mosaicarum Forensium Explanatio. Herbornæ Nassoviorum, 1604, 8vo.

4. Lex Dei, sive Mosaicarum et Romanarum Legum Collatio. E Codicibus Manuscriptis Vindobonensi et Vercellensi nuper repertis auctam atque emendatam edidit, notisque et indicibus illustravit Fridericus Blume. Bonnæ, 1833, 8vo.

From the first chapter of the elaborate prolegomena prefixed by the editor to this curious and valuable work, we learn that its anonymous author was in all probability a clergyman of the Latin or Western Church, who lived in the former half of the sixth century, and who compiled this work with the express design of exhibiting the resemblances between the Jewish and Roman Laws, which last were derived from the Jewish Laws, and further to have that Christian both may not onclose the second to the contract of the contract o show that Christians both may and ought to make use of both laws. The second and third chapters of the prolegomena contain an account of the MSS and printed editions of this collection. A copious collection of various readings, from MSS and printed editions, is placed at the foot of each page of the collation, which follows the prolegomena. The volume concludes with indexes of follows the prolegomena. The volume concludes with indexes of matters, persons, and places occurring in the work, and of the authors who are cited in the notes.

- 5. Joannis Spenceri de Legibus Hebræorum Ritualibus et earum Rationibus Libri IV. Accessit Dissertatio de Phylacteriis Judæorum. Recensuit, et indices adjecit Leonardus Chappelow, S.T.P. Cantabrigiæ, 1727, 2 vols. folio, best edition.
- 6. Commentaries on the Laws of Moses. By the late Sir John David MICHAELIS, K.P.S. F.R.S., Professor of Philosophy in the University of Göttingen; translated from the German by Alexander Smith, D.D. London, 1814, 4 vols. 8vo.

The spirit of the political and ceremonial law, contained in the writings of Moses, is copiously investigated in this work. Valuable as these "Commentaries" of Michaelis are in many respects, it is much to be regretted that they are not free from that licentiousness of conjecture and of language, as well as tendency to skepticism, which are the too frequent characteristics of some distinctions of the content of guished modern biblical critics in Germany. Great caution, therefore, will be necessary in consulting this work.

- 7. Législation des Hébreux. Par M. Le Comte de Pasto-Forming Volumes III. and IV. of his Histoire de la RET. Législation. Paris, 1817, 8vo.
- 8. Histoire des Institutions de Moïse et du Peuple Hébreu. Par J. Salvadon. Paris, 1828, 3 tomes, 8vo.

The avowed design of this work, which is characterized by no The avowed design of this work, which is characterized by no small degree of levity on the part of its Jewish author, is, to represent Moses as an enlightened and liberal legislator: at the same time its whole tendency is, to discredit Christianity. M. Salvador devoted a portion of his work to show that the Lord Jesus Christ was legally condemned, according to the statements of the evangelists themselves. This unblushing attack of the Jew called forth M. Dupin the elder, one of the most eminent advocates at the French bar, who triumphantly repelled the profane assertions of Salvador in a masterly refutation, intituled, "Jesus devant Caiphe et Pilate." Paris, 1828, 8vo.

- A Dissertation on the Civil Government of the Hebrews: in which the true Design and Nature of their Government are explained. By Moses Lowman. London, 1740; 2d edition, 1745; 3d edition, 1816, 8vo.

telligenda, veluti Clavem continens. Latine conversus a Joanne showing that they were worthy of their Divine Author, being fitted for the accomplishment of the most important purposes. By Henry Fergus. Dunfermline and London [1811], 8vo.

This essay is detached from a History of the Hebrews, on which the author was employed; but which has not yet been published. "In the short account before us, Mr. Fergus has given evidence of his having studied the subject: and his pamphlet displays in a concise yet luminous manner the several topics which the civil and ecclesiastical government of the Hebrews includes." (Monthly Review, N. S., vol. lxvi. p. 37.)

- 11. Levyssohn (Davidis Henrici) Disputatio de Judæorum sub Cæsaribus Conditione, et de Legibus eos spectantibus. Lugduni Batavorum, 1828, 4to.
- 12. Joannis Seldeni De Synedriis et Præfecturis Juridicis Veterum Ebræorum Libri III. Amstelodami, 1679, 4to.
- 13. Petri Wesselingii Diatribe de Judæorum Archontibus ad Inscriptionem Berenicensem; et Dissertatio de Evangeliis jussu Imp. Anastasii non emendatis in Victorem Tununensem. Trajecti ad Rhenum, 1738, 8vo.
- 14. Thomæ BARTHOLINI de Cruce Christi Hypomnemata IV. Hafniæ, 1651, 8vo. Amstelodami, 1670, 8vo.
- 15. Dissertatio Philologica de Ritu dimittendi Reum in festo Paschatis Judæorum; conscripta à Joh. Conrado Hottingero. Tiguri, 1718, 8vo.
- 16. Jacobi Lydii Syntagma Sacrum de Re Militari. Dordraci, 1698, 4to.
- 17. Edwardi Brerewood Liber de Ponderibus et Pretiis Veterum Nummorum, eorumque cum recentioribus Collatione. Londini, 1614, 4to.: also in the first Volume of Bp. Walton's Polyglott.
- 18. Adriani Relandi De Nummis Veterum Hebræorum, qui ab inscriptarum literarum forma Samaritanorum appellantur, Dissertationes V. Trajecti ad Rhenum, 1709, 8vo.
- 19. Casparis Waseri De Antiquis Numis Hebræorum et Syrorum, quorum S. Biblia et Rabbinorum Scripta meminerunt, Libri II. Tiguri, 1605, 4to.
- 20. Casparis Waseri de Antiquis Mensuris Hebræorum, quarum S. Biblia meminerunt, Libri III. Heidelbergæ, 1610, 4to.
- An Essay towards the Recovery of the Jewish Measures and Weights, comprehending their Moneys; by help of ancient standards compared with ours of England. By Richard Cun-BERLAND, D.D. [afterwards Bishop of Peterborough.] London, 1686, 8vo.
- 22. Observationes ex Numis Antiquis Sacræ. Auctore Gottlob Sebastiano Margraaf. Vitembergæ, 1745, 4to.
- 23. Petri Zornii Historia Fisci Judaici sub Imperio Veterum Romanorum. Altonæ, 1734, 8vo.
- 24. Scripture Weights, Measures, and Money, reduced to the Imperial Standard of the Weights and Measures, and the Sterling Money of England. By Edmund VIALLS. London, 1826, 8vo. [A Pamphlet of 19 pages.]

§ 4. SACRED ANTIQUITIES OF THE JEWS.

- [i.] Treatises on the Ritual and Sacred Ceremonies of the
- A Rationale of the Ritual of the Hebrew Worship. In which the wise Designs und Usefulness of that Ritual are explained. By Moses Lowman. London, 1748, 8vo.
- 2. Jacobi Gronovii Decreta Romana et Asiatica pro Judæis, ad cultum divinum per Asiæ Minoris urbes securè obeundum, ab Josepho collecta in Libro XIV. Archæologiæ. Lugduni Batavorum, 1712, 8vo.
- 3. Bernardi Lamy de Tabernaculo Fœderis, de Sancta Civitate Jerusalem et de Templo ejus, Libri Septem. Parisiis, 1720, folio.
- 4. Salomonis Van Til Commentarius de Tabernaculo Mosis et Zoologia Sacra. Dordraci, 1714, 4to.
- 5. Johannis Buxtorffii patris, Synagoga Judaica: hoc est Schola Judæorum, in qua Nativitas, Institutio, Religio, Vita, Mors, Sepulturaque ipsorum graphicè descripta est. Hanoviæ, 1604, 12mo.; Basileæ, 1680, 8vo.
- 6. Campegii VITRINGA de Synagogâ Vetere Libri tres: quibus tum de Nominibus, Structurâ, Origine, Præfectis, Ministris, et Sacris Synagogarum agitur: tum præcipue Formam Regiminis et Ministerii earum in Ecclesiam Christianam translatam esse 10. A Short Account of the Laws and Institutions of Moses; demonstratur: cum Prolegomenis. Francquere, 1696, 4to.

goga. Pars Prima. Salisburgi, 1774, 4to.

A compilation from various German and other authors who have treated on Sacred Antiquities: it discusses the Canon of the Biblic received by the Hebrews, the Talmind, Targunis, Masoretic Books, and the Cabbala; the Schools and Sects of the Jews, and their Teachers or Doctors and Pupils.

- 8. The Temple Service as it stood in the Days of our Saviour. By John Lieurroor, D.D. London, 1649, 4to.; also in the folio and octavo editions of Dr. Lightfoot's Works.
- 9. The Temple Musick; or, an Essay concerning the method of singing the Psalms of David in the Temple, before the Babylonish Captivity. By Arthur BEDFORD. London 1706, 8vo.
- [ii.] Treatises on the Religious Notions of the Jews, on the Corruptions of Religion among them, and on the Sects into which they were divided.
- 1. The Main Principles of the Creed and Ethics of the Jews, exhibited in Selections from the Yad Hachazakah of Maimonides, with a literal English Translation, copious Illustrations from the Talmud, &c. By Hermann Hedwig BERNARD. Cambridge, 1832, 8vo.

The Yad Hachazakah of Maimonides is a compendium of the decisions of the Jewish Doctors taken from the Talmud, and founded on Scripture interpreted according to his preconceived notions. subjects selected by Mr. Bernard treat on the Deity, on angels, prophecy, idolatry, repentance, sin, free will, predestination, the life hereafter, rewards and punishments, and the love of God. The Hebrew text is beautifully printed without points; this is followed by a faithful English version end notes, and by a glossary of the rabbinical Hebrew words occurring in the text, to which are prefixed a well-written sketch of the life of Maimonides, and a collection of the abbreviations commonly used in rabbinical writings. Besides communicating to the English reader the sentiments, traditions, and sayings of the ancient rabbins quoted by Maimonides, this volume will materially contribute to supply the biblical student with the means, at present scarcely within his reach, of acquiring an accurate knowledge of rabbinical Hebrew. For a more minute analybis of this truly valuable work, the reader is necessarily referred to the British Critic for April, 1833, vol. xiii. pp. 282—292., and to the Christian Remembrancer for September, October, and November, 1832, vol. xiv. pp. 517—525. 581—594. 655—664.

- 2. A Dissertation on the Religious Knowledge of the Ancient Jews and Patriarchs concerning a Future State. [By Stephen ADDINGTON, D.D.] London, 1757, 4to.
- 3. Christologia Judæorum Jesu Apostolorumque Ætate, in Compendium redacta, Observationibusque illustrata a D. Leonhardo Bertholdt. Erlangæ, 1811, 8vo.
- 4. A Dissertation upon the Traditional Knowledge of a Promised Redeemer, which subsisted before the Advent of our Saviour. By Charles James BLOMFIELD, B.D. [now D.D. and Bishop of London.] Cambridge, 1819, 8vo.
- 5. Capita Theologiæ Judæorum Dogmaticæ e Flavii Josephi Scriptis collecta. Accessit παρεργον super Josephi de Jesu Christo testimonio. Auctore Carolo Gottlieb Bretschneider. Lipsiæ, 1812, 8vo.
- 6. Joannis Jacobi CRAMERI Goël Israel, sive Theologia Israelis: quâ Go lis Officium ac Mysterium, ad confirmandam Jesu Christi Deitatem et Officium, ex Hebraicis potissimum Scriptis proponitur, et varia alia Philologica ac Theologica pertractantur. Franequeræ et Lipsiæ, 2 tomis, 4to.
- 7. The Traditions of the Jews, or the Doctrines and Expositions contained in the Talmud and other Rabbinical Writings: with a preliminary Preface, or an Inquiry into the Origin, Progress, Authority, and Usefulness of those Traditions; wherein the mystical Sense of the Allegories in the Talmud, &c. is explained. [By the Rev. Peter STEHELIN, F.R.S.] London, 1742. În two volumes, 8vo.

This is a work of extreme rarity and curiosity; it bears a very high price, which necessarily places it beyond the reach of biblical students. But most of the information which it contains will be found in

8. Miscellaneous Discourses relating to the Traditions and Usages of the Scribes and Pharisees in our Saviour Jesus Christ's time. By W. WOTTON, D.D. London, 1718. In two volumes,

This is a very curious work. Volume I. contains a discourse concerning the nature, authority, and usefulness of the Misna; a table of all its titles, with summaries of their contents; a discourse on the recital of the Shema (that is, of Deut. vi. 4—9., so called from the first word, i. e. kear), on the Phylacteries and on the Mezuzoth

7. Mariani Kasenen Alaupade Studii Scripturistici in Syna-or Schedules fixed on gates and door-posts; together with a collec-tion of texts relative to the observance of the Sabbath, taken out of the Old and New Testaments and Apocryphal Books, with annotations thereon. Volume II, contains two treatises from the Misna, in Hebrew and English; one on the Sabbath, entitled Shabbath; and another, entitled Execus, conversing the matures practised by the Jews in the time of Jesus Christ to strengthen the observation Dr. Wotton has given copious notes to both these of the Sabbath. treatises, which illustrate many passages of Holy Writ.

> 9. Joannis Seldeni de Diis Syris Syntagmata II. cum Additamentis Andreæ Beyeri. Amstelodami, 1680, 8vo.

> The best edition of a learned treatise, in which the Syrian idols mentioned in the Bible are particularly discussed. This work is inserted in the twenty-third volume of Ugolim's Thesaurus Antiquitatum Sacrarum, which contains nearly thirty other treatises on the idols mentioned in the Scriptures.

- 10. Trium Scriptorum illustrium Syntagma de tribus Judæorum Sectis: in quo Nic. Serarii, Joannis Drusii, Jos. Scaligeri, Opuscula, quæ eo pertinent, cum aliis junctim exhibentur. Accedit Jac. TRIGLANDII Diatribede Secta Karæorum. Delphis, 1703, 2 tomis, 4to.
- 11. Epistolæ Samaritanæ Sichemitarum ad Jobum Ludolphum, cum ejusdem Latina Versione et Annotationibus. Accedit Versio Latina persimilium Literarum à Sichemitis ad Anglos datarum [à Christophoro Cellario]. Cizæ, 1688, 4to.

Both the preceding publications are inserted in the twenty-second volume of Ugolini's Thesaurus, in which are printed several treatises on the Jewish sects.

- 12. Mémoire sur l'Etat Actuel des Samaritains. Par M. Silvestre de SACY. Paris, 1812, 8vo.
- 13. Jo. Christ. FRIEDRICH Discussionum de Christologia Samaritanorum Liber. Accedit Appendicula de Columbà, Deà Samaritanarum. Lipsiæ, 1821, 8vo.
- 14. Guilielmi Gesenti Commentatio de Samaritanorum Theologiâ, ex fontibus ineditis. Halæ, 1823, 4to.

§ 5. DOMESTIC ANTIQUITIES, LITERATURE, AND SCIENCES OF THE JEWS.

- 1. Johannis Braunii de Vestitu Sacerdotum Hebræorum, Libri II. Lugduni Batavorum, 1680, 4to.
- 2. Commentarius Philologico-Criticus de Vestitu Mulierum Hebræarum ad Jesai. III. vs. 16-24. Quo vocabulorum abstrusissimorum tenebras ad facem dialectorum discutere conatus est Nicol. Guil. Schnoederus. Præmissa est præfatio Alberti Schul-TENS. Lugduni Batavorum, 1735, 4to.
- 3. Antonii BYNEI de Calceis Hebræorum Libri II. Dordraci, 1682, 12mo.; 1695, 4to.
- 4. Joannis NICOLAI Disquisitio de Substratione et Pignoratione Vestium. Giessæ, 1701, 12mo.
- 5. Joannis Nicolai Libri IV. de Sepulchris Hebræorum. Lugduni Batavorum, 1706, 4to.
- 6. J. G. PURMANN Archæologiæ Georgicæ Specimen: de Re Rustica H. bræorum. Francofurti ad Mænum, 1786-87, 4to.
- 7. Jo. Francisci Buddel Introductio ad Historiam Philosophiæ Ebræorum. Accedit Dissertatio de Hæresi Valentiniana. Halæ Sax. 1702, 8vo.
- 8. De Excellentia Musicæ Antiquæ Hebræorum, et eorum Musicis Instrumentis, Tractatus. [Auctore F. P. de BRETAGNE.] Monachii, 1718, 8vo.
- 9. Guilielmi Ader Enarrationes de Ægrotis et Morbis in Evangelio. Tolosæ, 1620, 8vo. Also in the 6th volume of the Critici Sacri.
- 10. An Historical Essay on the State of Physic in the Old and New Testament, and the Apocryphal Interval. With a particular Account of the Cases mentioned in Scripture, and Observations upon them. By Jonathan HARLE. London, 1739, 8vo.
- 11. Ricardi Mead Medica Sacra; sive de Morbis insignioribus, qui in Bibliis memorantur, Commentarius. Londini, 1749, 8vo.
- 12. Medica Sacra: or, a Commentary on the most remarkable Diseases mentioned in the Holy Scriptures. By Richard Mead. Translated from the Latin by Thomas STACK, M.D. London, 1755, 8vo.
- 13. A. J. WANBUCH Disquisitio Medica Choleræ, cujus mentio in Sacris Bibliis occurrit. (Num. cap. XI.) Vindobonæ, 1833.

§ 6. MISCELLANEOUS ILLUSTRATIONS OF BIBLICAL ANTIQUITIES, FROM VOYAGES AND TRAVELS IN THE EAST, AND FROM OTHER SOURCES.

1. Observations on Divers Passages of Scripture, placing many of them in a light altogether new, by means of circumstances mentioned in books of voyages and travels into the East. By the Rev. Thomas HARMER. London, 1816, 4 vols. 8vo. best addition

As books of voyages and travels are for the most part voluminous, the late reverend and learned Thomas Harmer formed the design, which he happily executed, of perusing the works of Oriental travellers, with the view of extracting from them whatever might illustrate the rites and customs mentioned in the Scriptures. His researches form four volumes in 8vo., and were published at different times, towards the close of the last century. The best edition is that above noticed, and is edited by Dr. Adam Clarke, who has newly arranged the whole, and made many important additions and corrections. In this work numerous passages of Scripture are placed in a light altogether new; the meanings of others, which are not discoverable by the methods commonly used by interpreters, are satisfactorily ascertained; and many probable conjectures are offered to the biblical student. The mode of illustrating Scripture from Oriental voyages and travels, first applied by Mr. Harmer, has been successfully followed by the laborious editor of the "Fragments" annexed to the quarto edition of Calmet's Dictionary of the Bible, and also by Mr. Vansittart in his "Observations on Select Places of the Old Testament, founded on a Perusal of Parson's Travels from Aleppo to Bagdad." Oxford and London, 1812, 8vo.

2. Oriental Customs; or an Illustration of the Sacred Scriptures, by an Explanatory Application of the Customs and Manners of the Eastern Nations. By the Rev. S. Burder, A.M. 6th edition, 1822, 2 vols. 8vo.

This is a useful abridgment of Harmer's Observations, with many valuable additions from recent voyagers and travellers, arranged in the order of the Books, Chapters, and Verses of the Bible. It was translated into German, by Dr. E. F. C. Rosenmüller (4 vols. 8vo. Leipzig, 1819), with material corrections and much new matter. Such of these as were additions to the articles contained in the "Oriental Customs," have been translated, and inserted, in the sixth edition above noticed. But those articles which are entirely new, being founded on texts not before brought under Mr. Burder's consideration, are translated and inserted in

- 3. Oriental Literature, applied to the illustration of the Sacred Scriptures; especially with reference to Antiquities, Traditions, and Manners, collected from the most celebrated writers and travellers, both ancient and modern, designed as a Sequel to Oriental Customs. By the Rev. Samuel Burder, A.M. London, 1822, 2 vols. 8vo.
- 4. Oriental Customs: applied to the Illustration of the Sacred Scriptures. By Samuel BURDER, M.A. London, 1831, 12mo.

This volume is designed for general readers and for young persons, as well as those of studious habits. It consists, partly of such selections from the two preceding works as are adapted for general perusal, and partly of original illustrations of the sacred Scriptures, derived from recent publications. These illustrations are methodically arranged under heads, but they follow the order of the books and chapters under each head.

5. The Eastern Mirror; an Illustration of the Sacred Scriptures, in which the Customs of Oriental Nations are clearly developed by the writings of the most celebrated travellers. By the Rev. W. Fowler. 8vo. Exeter, 1814.

An abridgment of Harmer's Observations, and the earlier editions of Burder's Oriental Customs, with a few unimportant additions.

6. Oriental Observations, and occasional Criticisms, more or less illustrating several hundred Passages of Scripture. By John Callaway. London, 1827, 12mo.

The author of this volume resided about ten years as a missionary at Ceylon. As the usages of the Ceylonese frequently bear a resemblance to those of the Jews, he has applied them to the explanation of the Sacred Writings. He has also introduced many hints from the fourth edition of Calmet, and from the illustrations of Scripture contained in Mr. Ward's History, &c. of the Hindoos. "The Notes are for the most part brief; and, when suggested by the author's personal observation, interesting and to the purpose." (Eclectic Review, N. S. vol. xxix. p. 265.)

- 7. Oriental Fragments. By Maria Hack. London, 1828, 12mo.
- 8. Illustrations of the Holy Scripture, in three Parts. By the Rev. George Parton. Edinburgh, 1819, 2 vols. 8vo.; reprinted at Philadelphia, 1821, 2 vols. 8vo. Edinburgh, 1825, second edition, 3 vols. 8vo.

The copious volumes of Professor Paxton differ in their plan from those of Harmer and Burder, and exhibit a more ample range of subjects. Not confining his details and remarks to the several classes of objects to which their researches were directed, he has aimed to make his work a general depository of knowledge, illustrative of the text of the Bible in the several particulars of Geography, Natural History, Customs, and Manners...." These copious volumes comprise a very ample collection of materials for the illustration of the Scriptures, and are well adapted for the use of those who are engaged in the work of public religious instruction; for whose benefit they are chiefly intended by the author, having been originally prepared for the students under his care. It is, indeed, a work which must interest and gratify every reader who makes the intelligent perusal of the Scriptures an object of his attention." (Eelectic Review, N. S. vol. xvi. pp. 515. 521.)

9. The Truth of Revelation demonstrated by an Appeal to existing Monuments, Sculptures, Gems, Coins, and Medals. By a Fellow of several Learned Societies. London, 1832, 8vo.

"This interesting book is clearly the production of a mind pious and cultivated, enriched by science, and enlarged by various information. Adapted especially to guard the young against the too welcome theories of skepticism, it will also afford to the general reader both gratification and improvement. It chiefly consists of striking facts deduced from the labours of modern inquiry, of allusions gleaned from literature, of memorials of past events, scattered over the relics of by-gone times, in sculptures, gems, and medals; and its object is to apply these various materials to the illustration and establishment of the sacred records;—as well as to impress the conviction that the foundations of a scriptural hope are not to be shaken by advancing knowledge, nor ultimately injured by the rash assaults of a class of men who, aspiring to be deemed the votaries of philosophy, give too much reason for the suspicion that the stimulus by which their industry is excited is the vain expectation of some discovery adverse to the Christian religion, rather than zeal for the promotion of science."....." It is full of interesting facts and observations; and one which we can cordially recommend, as adapted not less to please than to convince." (Eclectic Review, third series, vol. viii. pp. 14. 32.)

10. Scripture Costume exhibited in a Series of Engravings, representing the principal Personages mentioned in the Sacred Writings. Drawn under the Superintendence of the late Benjamin West, Esq. P.R.A., by R. Satchwell, with Biographical Sketches, and Historical Remarks on the Manners and Customs of Eastern Nations. London, 1819, elephant 4to.

11. Jewish, Oriental, and Classical Antiquities; containing Illustrations of the Scriptures, and Classical Records, from Oriental Sources. By the Rev. Daniel Guilford Wait, LL.B. [now LL.D.] Cambridge, 1823, 8vo.

The object of this work is to illustrate Biblical and Classical Antiquities from Oriental writings. This volume is exclusively devoted to a demonstration of the coincidence which subsists between these different departments of study: and that coincidence the author has satisfactorily shown by various examples.

- 12. Lettre à M. Ch. Coquerel sur le Système Hiéroglyphique de M. Champollion, considéré dans ses Rapports avec l'Ecriture Sainte. Par A. L. C. Coquerel. Amsterdam, 1825, 8vo.
- 13. Essai sur le Système Hiéroglyphique de M. Champollion le Jeune, et sur les Avantages, qu'il offre à la Critique Sacrée. Par J. G. H. Greffo, vicaire-général de Bellay. Paris, 1829, 8vo.

Many of the recent discoveries in Egyptian Hieroglyphics (the clue to which was first struck out by our late learned archæologist, Dr. Young) are here happily applied to the elucidation of the Holy Scriptures. In our first volume, pp. 88, 89, we have given a few instances which corroborate the credibility of the Old Testament. M. Greppo acknowledges his obligations to the previous publication of M. Coquerel; which has, in fact, furnished him with some of his best illustrations. In the first part of his volume Mr. G. gives an outline of Champollion's hieroglyphic system; and in the second part he applies it to the elucidation of various passages of the Old Testament, historical, chronological, and geographical. An English translation of M. Greppo's Essay, by Mr. Isaac Stuart, was published at Boston [Massachusetts], in 1630, in 8vo. Some valuable notes are added by his father, the Rev. Professor Stuart of Andover.

14. Illustrations of the Sacred Scriptures, collected from the Customs, Manners, Rites, Superstitions, Traditions, Parabolical and Proverbial Forms of Speech, Climate, Works of Art, and Literature of the Hindoos, during a Residence in the East of nearly fourteen years. By the Rev. Joseph Roberts, Corresponding Member of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland. London, 1834, 8vo.

This work was announced for publication while the present sheet was passing through the press. From the specimens communicated to the writer of these pages, he feels justified in recommending Mr. Roberts's "Illustrations," as supplying an important desideratum in biblical literature. They are arranged in the order of the books, chapters, and verses of the Bible, and furnish to very many difficult or obscure passages satisfactory explanations, which are not more original than they are entertaining and instructive. The work is brought out under the high auspices of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland.

SECTION III.

TREATISES ON THE GENEALOGIES MENTIONED IN THE SCRIP-

1. The Genealogies recorded in the Sacred Scriptures, according to every Family and Tribe. With the line of our Saviour Christ observed, from Adam to the Blessed Virgin Mary. By J[ohn] S[PEED]. London, 1615, 4to.

These Genealogical Tables were first published anonymously in 1611, when they were prefixed to the first edition of our authorized version of the English Bible. They are here ascribed to the industrious antiquary John Speed, on the authority of the Biographia Britannica (Art. Speed).

2. Scripture Genealogy from Adam to Christ; exhibiting, in a Series of thirty-six engraved Tables, a distinct View of the Nation, Tribe, Family, Lineal Descent and Posterity of every person mentioned in the Bible, so far as they can be traced from Sacred or Profane History. London, 1817, royal 4to.

The Tables contained in this elegantly executed volume are an improvement upon those of Speed. To the name of each person mentioned in every table chronological dates are affixed, on the very respectable authorities of Usher and Blair; and likewise references to passages of Scripture where the respective names are to be found. Altogether, this is a very useful and agreeable companion to the biblical student.

3. Genealogia Sacra: or Scripture Tables, compiled from the Holy Bible. By William Berry. London, 1819, 4to.

These Tables are neatly stereotyped, and are chiefly confined to the patriarchs and descendants of our first parents, with references to the chapters and verses of the several books of the Old and New Testament where the names are mentioned. The chronological dates are taken from Blair, Usher, and others. An alphabetical index is subjoined, which facilitates reference to this unassuming publication.

- 4. Jo. Michaelis Langur Dissertationes Theologicæ de Genealogia Christi ex patribus secundum carnem. Noribergæ, 1703, 4to.
- 5. The Genealogies of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, as recorded by St. Matthew and St. Luke, critically examined, explained, defended, and reconciled to each other, and to the Scriptures of the Old Testament. By Edward YABDLEY, B.D. London, 1739, 8vo.
- 6. The Genealogies of Jesus Christ in Matthew and Luke explained, and the Jewish Objections removed. London, 1771,
- 7. A newly-invented Table for exhibiting to the View, and impressing clearly on the Memory, the Genealogy of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, as given by St. Matthew and St. Luke: also the Difference of their Accounts explained: with Notes on the most illustrious persons from whom our Lord descended, and the Objections to Matt. i. 11, 12. answered, from all the best Commentators. By Robert Berkley Greene. London, 1822,

This Table is ingeniously constructed; the notes exhibit, in a small compass, the result of much laborious research.

8. The Genealogy of Jesus Christ, recorded by Saint Matthew and Saint Luke, harmonized, and the apparent contradictions reconciled. By Gervas Watson. Retford and London, 1833, 12mo.

SECTION IV.

TREATISES ON SACRED CHRONGLOGY.

1. LUDOVICO CAPPELLI Chronologia Sacra ab orbe condito ad Christum. 4to. Paris, 1655.

This work is reprinted by Bishop Walton, in the prolegomena to his edition of the Polyglott Bible.

- 2. Gerhardi Johannis Vossii Chronologiæ Sacræ Isagoge. Hag. Com. 1659, 4to.
- 3. Annales Veteris et Novi Testamenti, à primâ mundi origine deducta ad extremum Reipublicæ Judaicæ excidium, à Jacobo Usserio, Archiepiscopo Armachano. Genevæ, 1722, folio.

The best edition of a most valuable work. The chronology of Archbishop Usher is followed in the margins of all our large Bibles. His Annales first appeared at London, in 1650–54, in two vols. folio; and an English translation of them was published in 1658, in one volume, folio.

4. Joannis Pearsonti S.T.P. Cestriensis nuper Episcopi Latin of J. Opera Posthuma Chronologica, &c. viz. De Serie et Successione 1825, 8vo.

- Primorum Romm Episcoporum Dissertationes Dum: Quibus præfiguntur Annales Paulini, et Lectiones in Acta Apostolorum. Singula Prælo tradidit, edenda curavit, et Dissertationes novis Additionibus auxit H. Dodwellus, A.M. Londini, 1688, 4to.
- 5. A Translation of Bishop Pearson's Annals of Saint Paul; to which are added Geographical and Critical Notes, illustrative of the Life and Labours of that Apostle, taken from the most approved Annotations. By J. M. WILLIAMS. Cambridge, 1826, 12mo.
- Bp. Pearson's Annales Paulini have long been held in high estimation on account of the varied and profound learning of their Author. The English translation is enriched with a great number of annotations selected from the best sources: and among them the translator has largely borrowed from the present work.
- 6. The Scripture Chronology demonstrated by Astronomical Calculations. By Arthur Bedford, London, 1730, folio.
- 7. Chronologie de l'Histoire Sainte. Par Alphonse de Vic-Nolles. Berlin, 1738, 2 vols. 4to.
- 8. Chronological Antiquities; or the Antiquities and Chronology of the most ancient kingdoms from the creation of the world. By the Rev. John Jackson. London, 1752, 3 vols. 4to.
- 9. A New Analysis of Chronology, in which an attempt is made to explain the History and Antiquities of the primitive Nations of the World, and the prophecies relating to them, on principles tending to remove the imperfection and discordance of preceding systems. By the Rev. William Hales, D.D. London, 1809—1812, 3 vols. in four parts, 4to. Second Edition, revised and corrected, 1830, in 4 vols. 8vo.

The title of this work very inadequately describes its multifarious contents. Not only is it the most elaborate system of chronology extant in our language; but there is scarcely a difficult text in the sacred writings which is not illustrated. Dr. Hales follows the chronology of Josephus, whose genuine numbers he conceives that he has restored; and that, by a comparison with the Septuagint and the other texts, he has ascertained the true series of primeval times. The longer chronology, established by Dr. H. with great success, is it removes many of those difficulties with which the Scripture history is encumbered in that text. His "New Analysis" ought to have a place in the library of every biblical student who can procure it.

- 10. A Key to Scripture Chronology, made by comparing Sacred History with Prophecy, and rendering the Bible consistent with itself; illustrated with new Tables of Chronology, and various notes. By James Andrew, LL.D. London, 1822, 8vo.
- 11. The Chronology of our Saviour's Life; or an Inquiry into the True Time of the Birth, Baptism, and Crucifixion of Jesus Christ, By C[hristopher] Benson, M.A. Cambridge, 1819, 8vo.
- 12. Select Discourses, I. Of the Correspondence of the Hebrew Months with the Julian, from the Latin of J. David Michaels, Royal Professor of Goettingen. II. Of the Sabbatical Year. From the same. III. Of the Years of Jubilee, from an Anonymous Writer, in M. Masson's Histoire Critique de la République des Lettres, vol. v. Art. II. p. lx. &c. London, 1773, 12mo.

These discourses were translated by the celebrated printer, William Bowyer. (Nichol's Lit. Anecd of the 18th Century, vol. iii. p. 146.) The first discourse contains an ingenious attempt, by Professor Michaelis, to reconcile the discrepancies between the Mosaic Institutions and the Jewish Calendar; the writer of these pages has not been able to ascertain where it first appeared. This discourse has been reprinted in the Calendarium Palestinae (see the next article). The second discourse, which treats on the Sabbatical Year (it appears from Michaelis's Commentaries on the Laws of Moses, vol. i. p. 391.), is a translation of the ninth of his Commentationes Societati Regiæ Goettingensi, per annos 1758—1765, oblatæ. The substance of this discourse is inserted in his Commentaries, vol. i. pp. 387—416., with some additional observations. The design of the third discourse, on the years of Jubilee, is to show that the year of Jubilee was every forty-ninth year, being included in the seventh Sabbatical year; and that it probably began in the time of Seleucus Nicator. Mr. Bowyer's little volume is uncommonly scarce: a copy of it is in the very valuable library belonging to the President and Fellows of Queen's College, in the University of Cambridge, which has been examined for the present article.

13. Calendarium Palestine: exhibiting a Tabular View of the principal Events in Scripture History; the Jewish Festivals and Fasts, with the Service of the Synagogue; the Outlines of a Natural History of Syria.......To which are added an Account of the different modes of computing time, adopted by the Hebrews, and a Dissertation on the Hebrew Months, from the Latin of J. D. Michaelis, By William Carpenter. London 1825, 8vo.

This publication consists of two parts: -1. The Calendar of This publication consists of two parts:—I. The Calendar of Palestine, which presents in a concise form, various information relative to the Jewish year; and 2. "A Dissertation on the Hebrew Months [from the Latin of J. D. MICHAELIS]," which is reprinted from the preceding small volume of Mr. Bowyer. The Calendar of Palestine is also neatly printed on a large sheet, to be hung up in the study for perpetual reference.

14. Historiæ Universæ Tabulæ Ethnographico-Periodico-Synchronisticæ, ab rerum primordiis ad nostram diem, post doctissimorum virorum curas iisque ducibus ad præstantissima temporis putandi exempla juxta æram vulgarem dispositæ; adjectis clarissimarum gentium genealogiis copiosoque rerum quarumlibet indice: præmissa etiam ærarum inter se comparata delineatione, item totius historiæ adfiniumque doctrinarum notitia literaria, in usum historiæ amicorum adornatæ studio Francisci Josephi Dum-BECKII. Berolini, 1821, folio.

These chronological tables claim a place in the student's library, not only for their cheapness, but also for their utility. They are noticed here on account of the clear exhibition which they contain of sacred chronology and the affairs of those nations with whom the Jews had any intercourse. The modern events are brought down to the year 1820.

15. Les Fastes Universels, ou Tableaux Historiques, Chronologiques, et Géographiques, contenant, siècle par siècle, et dans des colonnes distinctes, depuis les tems les plus reculés jusqu'à L'origine, les progrès, la gloire, et la décadence de tous les peuples, leurs migrations, leurs colonies, l'ordre de la succession des princes, &c.

2. Le précis des époques et des événemens politiques ;

3. L'histoire générale des religions et de leurs différentes sectes ; 4. Celle de la philosophie et de la législation chez tous les peuples anciens et modernes;

5. Les découvertes et les progrès dans les sciences et dans les arts;
6. Une notice sur tous les hommes célèbres, rappelant leurs œuvrages ou leurs actions.

Par M. Buret de Longchamps. Paris, 1821, atlas 4to.

This work contains the most copious set of Chronological Tables at is extant in any language. That part of it which includes that is extant in any language. That part of it wh sacred chronology is displayed with great perspicuity.

SECTION V.

CONNECTIONS OF SACRED AND PROFANE HISTORY .- HISTORIES OF THE BIBLE, AND SCRIPTURE BIOGRAPHY.

-  Much valuable information relative to the history of the Moabites, Philistines, Babylonians, and other nations mentioned in the Scriptures, is exhibited by Vitringa, in his Commentary on Isaiah; by Bishop Newton, in his Dissertations on the Prophets; and by Reland, in his Palæstina; to whom, perhaps, may be added Rollin, in his Ancient History of the Greeks, Assyrians, &c. 8 vols.
- 1. THE Sacred and Profane History of the World connected, from the Creation of the World to the Dissolution of the Assyrian Empire. By S. Shuckford, M.A. 8vo. 4 vols. London, 1743, best edition. This well-known and valuable work has been several times reprinted.
- 2. The Old and New Testament connected, in the History of the Jews and neighbouring Nations, from the Declension of the Kingdoms of Israel and Judah to the time of Christ. By Humphrey PRIDEAUX, D.D. 8vo. 4 vols. London, 1749, 10th edit. reprinted in 4 vols. 8vo, 1808.
- 3. The Connection of Sacred and Profane History, from the Death of Joshua until the Decline of the Kingdoms of Israel and Judah. Intended to complete the works of Shuckford and Prideaux. By the Rev. M. RUSSELL, LL.D. London, 1827,
- 4. Histoire des Juifs depuis Jésus Christ. Par Jaques Bas-RAGE. A la Haye, 1716, 15 tomes, 8vo. best edition.
- 5. The History of the Jews since the time of Jesus Christ, translated from the French of M. Basnage. London, 1708, folio.
- "The learning and research manifested in this work are amazing; and on the subject, nothing better, nothing more accurate and satisfactory, can well be expected." (Dr. A. Clarke.)
- 6. The History of the Old Testament Methodized: to which is annexed a short History of the Jewish Affairs, from the end of the Old Testament to the birth of our Saviour. By Samuel CRADOCK. London, 1683; 1695, folio.

This work was translated into Latin, and published at Leyden, in 1685, in 8vo. Though now superseded by the improved edition of Stackhouse's History of the Bible, which is noticed in the present page, it may yet be consulted with advantage by the student who may not have access to that work. Mr. Cradock's volume may frequently be procured for a few shillings.

A Compleat History of the Holy Bible, in which are inserted the Occurrences that happened during the space of about four hundred years, from the days of the Prophet Malachi to the birth of our Blessed Saviour. The whole illustrated with Notes. By Laurence Howel, M.A. London, 1725, 3 vols. 8vo. A new edition, London, 1806, 3 vols. 12mo.

The new impression of this compendious History of the Bible was corrected and edited by the Rev. George Burder, M.A., by whom it has been so materially corrected and improved as almost to form a new work.

A New History of the Holy Bible, from the Beginning of the World to the Establishment of Christianity, with answers to most of the controverted questions, dissertations upon the most remarkable passages, and a Connection of Profane History all along. By Thomas Stackhouse, A.M. London, 1752, 2 vols. folio.

This work has always been highly esteemed for its utility and the variety of valuable illustration which the author has brought together from every accessible source. A new edition of it was published in 1817, in three volumes, 4to, with important corrections and additions, by the Rev. Dr. Gleig, one of the bishops of the Scottish episcopal church.

9. The History of the Hebrew Commonwealth, from the earliest times to the destruction of Jerusalem, A.D. 72; translated from the German of John Jahn, D.D. With a continuation to the time of Adrian. London, 1829, 2 vols. 8vo. 1l. 4s.

Though not so stated in the title-page, this is a reprint of the original work of the learned Professor Jahn, translated by M. Calvin E. Stowe, of Andover [Massachusetts], and published at New York in 1829, in one large volume, containing 692 pages. In a note, however, at the end of Professor Stuart's Preface, it is stated that the whole has been thoroughly revised; and such alterations made as seemed requisite to render the author's meaning clear and intelligible. This work of the late learned Professor Jahn contains the most succinct and critically arranged history of the Jews which is extant: it exhibits throughout manifest impresthe Jews which is extant; it exhibits throughout manifest impressions of the same care, diligence, deep research, and sound judg-ment, which characterizes his other treatises. The continuation is The continuation is ment, which characterizes his other freatises. The continuation is neatly translated from Basnage's History of the Jews, in French, and fills up a chasm in the history of that people, which it is desirable to have supplied. Professor Stuart, of Andover, recommends every theological student to make himself familiar with this work throughout. "It is impossible that he should not reap the benefit of such an acquisition." (Vol. i. Pref. p. ix.)

10. Christ. Noldin Historia Idumæa, seu de Vita et Gestis Herodum Diatribe. Franequeræ, 1660, 12mo.

This volume contains notices of eighty-three persons of the Family of the Herods; and the learned author has introduced many valuable notes illustrating the works of the Jewish historian, occasionally vindicating him from the censures of Baronius, arius, and other critics. This book is not of very common Serrarius, and other critics. occurrence.

11. Commentaries on the Affairs of Christians before the time of Constantine the Great: or an enlarged View of the Ecclesiastical History of the first three centuries. Translated from the Latin of Dr. Mosheim, by R. S. Vidal, Esq. London, 1813, 2 vols. 8vo.

12. Jo. Francisci Buddet Historia Ecclesiastica Veteris Testamenti. Editio tertia. Halæ, 1726-29, 2 vols. 4to.

13. Jo. Georgii Walchii Historia Ecclesiastica Novi Testamenti variis observationibus illustrata. Jenæ, 1734, 4to.

14. Ecclesiastical Annals from the Commencement of the Scripture History to the Sixteenth Century: being a compressed Translation (with notes) of the Introductio ad Historian et Antiquitates Sacras of Professor Spanheim, of Leyden; and containing a succinct notice of the principal events, and the the Elements of Chronology, Chronological Tables, and the Geography of Palestine. By the Rev. George Wright. London, 1828, 8vo.

Numerous ecclesiastical histories of the Old and New Testament were published on the Continent in the course of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries; an account of which may be seen in Walchii Bibliotheca Theologica Selecta, vol. iii. pp. 145—180. Among these, Professor Spanheim's "Introductio ad Historiam Sacram" enjoyed a high reputation. The most complete edition is to be found in the collection of his works. As these from their size and price, are not accessible to ordinary students, Mr. Wright has conferred a favour on them by presenting to them the substance of Spanheim's learned treatise in an English dress.

15. Scripture Characters: or, a Practical Improvement of the | and Death of Jesus Christ. With Considerations and Discourses Principal Histories in the Old and New Testament. By Thomas ROBINSON, M.A. London, 4 vols. 8vo. and 12mo. various editions.

An abridgment of this well-known and deservedly-esteemed work was published in 1817, in 12mo.

16. Female Scripture Characters, exemplifying Female Virtues. By Mrs. King. Tenth edition. London, 1826, 12mo.

The pious and accomplished authoress of this excellent work, which was first published in 1811, composed it expressly for the use of females, in order to supply the absence of Female Scripture. Characters in Mr. Robinson's volumes, in which two women only are introduced. Mrs. King's work is much and deservedly used in schools as well as in private families.

17. Female Scripture Biography; including an Essay on what Christianity has done for Women. By Francis Augustus Cox, M.A. London, 1817, 2 vols. 8vo.

18. Scripture Biography; or, Lives and Characters of the Principal Personages recorded in the Old and New Testaments. By John WATKINS, LL.D. London, 1809, 12mo.

19. Scripture Portraits: or, Biographical Memoirs of the most Distinguished Characters recorded in the Old Testament and in the Evangelists. By Robert STEVENSON. London, 1817-20, 4 vols. 12mo.

20. Biographie Sacrée, par A. L. C. Coquenel. Amsterdam, 1825-26, 4 tomes, 8vo.

These volumes, which are neither scientific nor elementary, are designed for well-informed but not learned readers: each article, in alphabetical order, contains a narrative of facts drawn from the Bible, an explanation of difficulties, a sketch of the character, and finally a short summary of the principal texts of Scripture, in which the person is mentioned, besides those which immediately relate to his history. The work is, upon the whole, executed with ability: the objections of infidels are fairly met, and satisfactorily answered, and many judicious reflections are interspersed.

21. A Critical History of the Life of David, in which the principal events are ranged in order of time: the chief objections of Mr. Bayle and others against the character of this prince, and the Scripture account of him, and the occurrences of his reign, are examined and refuted; and the Psalms which refer to him are explained. By the late Rev. Samuel CHANDLER, D.D. London, 1766, 2 vols. 8vo.

A book above all praise; it was occasioned by the publication, in 1762, of a vile and blasphemous tract, entitled "The History of the Man after God's own heart." Dr. Chandler has illustrated many of the Psalms in an admirable manner.

22. An Historical Account of the Life and Reign of David King of Israel: interspersed with various Conjectures, Digressions, and Disquisitions. In which, among other things, Mr. Bayle's criticisms upon the conduct and character of that Prince are fully considered. [By Patrick Delany, D.D.] London, 1741-42, 3 vols. 8vo.

A respectable and useful work, but greatly inferior to Dr. Chandler's masterly "Critical History of the Life of David:" it was published anonymously, and has been repeatedly printed; and may frequently be obtained at a low price.

23. The Great Exemplar of Sanctity and Holy Life according to the Christian Institution; described in the History of the Life or theological tutors.

upon the several parts of the story, and Prayers fitted to the several mysteries. By Jeremy TAYLOR, D.D., Bishop of Down and Connor, folio: also in 2 vols. 8vo. various editions.

This work is also to be found in the second and third volumes or the Collective Works of Bishop Taylor, eshted by the Rev. J. R. Pitman, with a memoir of the bishop's life and writings by the late Bishop Heber; who has given an able and interesting analysis of the Great Exemplar, and has pointed out some important particulars, "in which this great and good man has departed from the usual sense of the church, and the general analogy of Scripture." (Bishop Taylor's Works, vol. i. pp. cxxix.—cxxxix.) An abridgment of the 'Great Exemplar' was published by the Rev. W. Darnell, London,

24. The History of the Life of Jesus Christ, taken from the New Testament, with Observations and Reflections, proper to illustrate the Excellency of his Character and the Divinity of his Mission and Religion. By George Benson, D.D. London, 1764, 4to.

25. Observations on the History of Jesus Christ, serving to illustrate the Propriety of his Conduct and the Beauty of his Character. By David HUNTER, D.D. Edinburgh, 1770, 2 vols.

26. The Private Character of our Lord Jesus Christ, considered as an Example to all his Disciples, and a Demonstration of his Mission. By Thomas WILLIAMS. London, 1833, 12mo.

Both these works contain many ingenious and instructive remarks on the character and conduct of Jesus Christ, which are either not at all noticed, or but imperfectly considered by preceding writers who have discussed the evidences of the Christian Religion.

* In the present as well as in the preceding sections of this Appendix, the Author has endeavoured to bring forward the principal Commentators and Biblical Critics, both British and foreign. Many of them, indeed, are too costly to be purchased by the generality of biblical students; but a considerable portion, if not the whole of them, is to be found in our public libraries, and it is desirable to know in what works the best information is to be procured, even though we may not in every instance be able to purchase them, as well as to be on our guard lest we should be misled in buying cheap books which are of comparatively little utility. Ample as these lists are, they might have easily been enlarged, particularly with reference to the earlier works on Sacred Philology, if the limits of the present volume would have permitted it. The reader, however, who is curious in seeing what has been written on this subject, may (besides the authorities already referred to in p. 113. of this Appendix) consult the first volume of the classed Catalogue of the Library of the President and Fellows of Queen's College, Cambridge (London, 1827, royal 8vo.), pp. 22—91.; and also the Bibliotheca Piersoniana, or Catalogue of the Rev. Dr. Pierson's Library (sold by auction in May, 1815). The Sale Catalogues of the principal theological Booksellers of London, which are frequently interspersed with useful bibliographical notices, are particularly valuable, for the numerous commentaries and other works on sacred criticism which they contain, both British and foreign, especially the latter. especially the latter.

On the choice of commentators, it would be presumptuous in the author of this work to offer an opinion; the student will doubtless be regulated in his selection by the judgment of judicious friends

INDEX

TO THE

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL APPENDIX.

AARLAND (N. J.) De cap. xvII. Joannis, 133.

Aaron the Karaite, Commentaries of, 102.

Aaron Ben Elihu (Rabbi), Commentaries of, 102.

Abarbenel (Rabbi Isaac), Commentaries of, 102, 103.

Abbot (G.), Exposition of Jonah, 143.

Abenmelech (Solomon), Commentaries of, 102, 103.

Aben Ezra (Abraham), Commentaries of, 102.

Abentii (J. G.), Ars legendi et interpretandi Script. 98.

Abresch (F. L.), Animadversiones ad Nov. Test. 147.

Abyssinan Version of the Old and New Testaments, 56.

Acaster (J.), Lect. on Ep. to Philippians, 145.

Ackermann (F.), Introd. ad Vet. Fæd. 71.

— Prophetæ Minores, 126.

— Archæologia Biblica, 157.

Acta Apostolorum, Hearnii, 12.

Adam (T.), Paraphrase on the Epistle to the Romans, 136.

— Exposition of Matthew, 144.

Adami (Cornelii), Obs. Theol. Philol. 147

— Exercit. Exegeticæ, 147.

Addington (Steph.), Knowledge of Jews concerning a Future State, 161. Ader (G.), De Morbis Biblicis, 161.

Adler (J. G. C.), Bibliotheca Biblica, 5.

Nov. Test. Versiones Syriacæ, &c. 82. Adver (J. G. C.), Bibliothera Biblica, 3.

Nov. Test. Versiones Syriacæ, &c. 82.

Affican Version, 56.

Agier (le president), sur les Prophéties, 122.

— Prophetes, avec Notes, 122.

Ainworth (H.), Annot. on Genesis, &c. 115.

Airy (H.), Lectures on the Philippians, 145.

Alardi (Nic.), Bibliotheca Biblico-Harmonica, 58.

Albanian Version of the Bible, 47.

Alber (Jo. Nep.), Instit. Ling. Hebr. 87.

— Hermeneut. Sacr. Vot. Test. 98.

— Hermeneut. Sacr. Nov. Test. 98.

— Interpretatio Scripture, 109.

— Annotatio in 1 Jo. v. 7., 81.

Alberti (J.), Observationes ad Nov. Test. 147.

— Glossarium Graccum, 92.

— Periculum Criticum, 147.

Alculu, Commentaries of, 106. — Glossarium Gracum, 92.
— Periculum Criticum, 147.

Alcuin, Commentaries of, 106.
Alexander (J.), Paraphrase on 1 Cor. xv., 137.
— (A.) On the Canon, 69.
— Dict. of the Bible, 155.

Allen (John), Modern Judaism, 156.
Allix (Peter), Book of Psalms, 118.
Alt (J. C. G.), Grammatica Nov. Test. 91.
Altingii (J.), Fundamenta Punctationis, 85.
Allwood (P.), on the Revelation, 142.
— On Prophecy, 101.
— On the Numbers in Daniel, 125.
Am-Ende (J. G.), Versio Epistolæ ad Philippenses, 137.
American (North), Versions, 57, 58.
Amersfoord (J.), De Var. Lect. Holmesianis, 80.
Amharic Version of the Bible, 56.
Amner (R.), Essay on Daniel, 124.
Amthor (G. M.), Comment. in Heb. I.—III. 139.
Analyses of the Bible, notice of, 135.
Anderson (R.), On Epistle to Romans, 145.
Andrew (James), Hebrew Dictionary and Grammar, 89.
— Scripture Chronology, 163.
Anglo-Geneves New Testament, 36. and Bible, 36.
Anglo-Romish Versions of the Bible, 41. Notice of unauthorized additions to, and omissions from, the text, 41, 42.
Anglo-Romish Versions of the Bible, 41. Notice of unauthorized additions to, and omissions from, the text, 41, 42.
Anspach (J. A.), De Oratione Pauli 134
Vol. II.—App.

Ante-Hieronymian Versions of the Bible, 28.
Apocalypse explained, 142.
Apocrypha, Essay on, 69.
Apikorp (E.), On Prophecy, 201.
Aquilino (Alex. à), Pent. Hebr. Samar. Præstantia, 72.
Aquinas (Thomas), Catena of, 106.
Arabic Versions (Ancient) of the Bible, 26.
— (Modern), 48.
Arigler (A.), Hermeneutica Biblica, 97.
Aryda (A.), Grammatica Arabica, 96.
Armenian (Ancient), Version of the Bible, 27.
— (Modern), of New Testament, 51.
Arnald (R.), On the Apocrypha, 126.
Ashton (J.), Christian Expositor, 129.
Asiatic (Northern), Versions of the Bible, 51.
Assembly's Annotations, 110.
Augusti (J. C. G.), Libri, V. T. Apocryphi, 63.
Augustine, Commentaries of, 104.
Aurivillii (C.), Dissertationes Philologicæ, 147.
Austen (H. T.), Lect. on Genesis, 143. BABER (Rev. H. H.), Edition of the Codex Alexandrinus, 24.

Bagot (Bp. L.), on Prophecy, 101.

Bahrdt (C. F.), Comm. in Malachiam, 126.

Baieri (J. W.), Dissertatio De Var. Lect. Nov. Test. 78.

Bailey (R.), Exposition of the Parables, 146.

Baker (Tho.), Sermons on St. Matthew, 144.

Baptist Missionaries, Biblical Versions by, 48. et seq. Specimens thereof, 52—55.

Barhebreas (Greg.), Scholia in Psalmos, 118.

Barkey (N.), Bibliotheca Hagana, 146.

— Museum Haganum, 146.

Barr (John), Scripture Student's Assistant, 156.

Barrett (Johannis), Codex Rescriptus Matthæi, 16.

Barrington (Viscount), Miscellanea Sacra, 147.

Bartholini (Tho.), de Cruce Christi, 160.

Bashmouric Version, 26.

Bassage (J.), Hist. des Juifs, 164.

Basage Version, 46.

Basse (J. H.), Greek and English Lexicon to the New Testament, 92.

Basset (P.), Explication de l'Apocalypse, 142.

— (W.), Sermons on Genesis, 143.

Bate (Julius), Transl. of Pentateuch, 115.

Bauer (G. L.), Hermeneutica Sacra, 98.

— Scholia in Vetus Testamentum, 106.

Bautermeister (J. P.), in Sapientiam, Salomonis, 126.

Baster (R.), Paraphrase on the New Testament, 128.

Bayley (Corn.), Hebr. Grammar, 86.

Bayly (Anselm), Hebrew Grammar, 89.

Baynes (H. J.), Church at Philippi, 137.

Beausobre and L'Enfant (MM.), Introduction to the New Testament, 71.

Le Nouveau Testament, avec des Remarques, 127.

Becker (A. G.), Conjectanea in 2 Cor. xii., 137 ment, 71.

Becker (A. G.), Conjectanea in 2 Cor. xii., 137

Beckhaus (J.), Observationes Critico-Exegeticæ, 138.

Beckhaus (J.), Observationes Critico-Exegeticæ, 138.

Beckhaus (J.), Observationes Critico-Exegeticæ, 138.

Beckhaus (J.), Monogrammata Hermeneut. Nov. Food. 98.

Bedae Expositio Vet. Test. 106.

Bedell (Bp. W.), Irish Bible, 42.

Bedford (A.), Scripture Chronology, 163.

— Temple Music, 161.

Belgian Versions of the Bible, 45.

Bellamy (J.), Translation of the Bible, 114.

Bellermann (J. J.), Paleographia Hebraica, 77.

Belsham (Tho.), Epistles of Paul translated, 134.

Bengelii (J.), Gnomon Nov. Test. 127.

Apparatus Criticus, 79.

— Introd. to Apocalypse, 140

```
BIBLIOGRAPI

Benjoin (G.), Translation of Jonah, 126.
Benner (J. H.), Hermeneutica Sacra, 98.

Otia Sacra, 147.
Bennet (Tho.), Grammatica Hebrea, 87.
Bennet (J.), Hist. of Jesus Christ, 143.
Benson (G.), History of Christ, 165.

History of the First Planting of Christianity, 62.

Diss. on I John v. 7., 81.

Paraphrase, &c. on the Epistles, 134.
Benson (C.), Chronology of our Saviour's Life, 163.
Benson (C.), Chronology of our Saviour's Life, 163.
Benson (C.), Comment. on Bible, 154.
Berber Version, 56.
Berens (E.), on Penitential Psalms, 143.
Bergman (J. T.), Commentatio in Psalmum CX., 120.
Berlin (N. M.), Psalmi Latiné Versi, 119.
Bernard (H.), Main Principles of the Jews, 161.
Benhardi (C. C. S.), de Regnis Judææ et Israelis, 158.
Bernstein (G. H.), de Versione Syriaca, N. T., 82.
Berry (William), Genealogia Sacra, 163.
Berthead (C.), De II. Libro Maccabæorum, 69.
Bertholdt (L.), Christologia Judæorum, 161.
Bevan (J. G.), Life of Paul, 62.
Bevans (John), Vindication of Matthew and Luke, 76.
Bezæ (Theod.), Nov. Test. Latiné, 32.

— Annotationes ad Novum Testamentum, 127.
Bible, searcity of, in the dark ages, 29.; and attempts to communicate some idea of its contents to the poor and illitorate, 29, 30.

Bible, Lat. et Fr., 109.

(English), Bibliographical Notice of the authorized Versions of, 36—39.

Editions of, with Parallel References, 39—41.

Brief History of Romish Versions of, 41.
                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       BIBLIA GRÆCA, Valpii, 25.

— Glasguæ, 25.

— Von Ess, 25.

— Nova Versio Græca, 25.
                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      BIBLIA ÆTHIOFICA, 27.
BIBLIA ARABICA, 26.
BIBLIA ARMENICA, 27.
BIBLIA COPTICA, SAHIDICA et BASHMOURICA, 26, 27.
BIBLIA GOTHICA, 28.
BIBLIA LATINA, 27.
BIBLIA SYRIACA, 25.
BIBLIA SYRIACA, 25.
Biblia Ante-Hieronymiana, 27
— Flaminio Nobili, 27.
— Sabatier, 27.
— Blanchini, 27.
— Münteri, 27.
Hieronymi Versio, 27.
Biblia Vulgata, 27.
— Sixti V., 28.
— Clementis VIII., 28.
— a Didot, 28.
                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          BIBLIA ÆTHIOFICA, 27.
                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      - a Didot, 28.
     of, 36—39.

— Editions of, with Parallel References, 39—41.

— Brief History of Romish Versions of, 41.

— Index to, 156.

BIBLES in the Languages spoken in the British Isles, 32. 43.

— in the Languages spoken on the Continent, 43—48.

— in the Languages of Asia, 48—55.

— in the Languages of Africa, 56.

In the Languages of America, 56—58.
 in the Language.

Psalterium Hebraicum, 1477., 6.
Biblia Hebraica cum Punctis, 1488., 6.
Biblia Hebraica, 1494., 6.
Biblia Edit. Bombergiana, 7.
Biblia, 1547—1549., 7.
Biblia Buxtorfii, 7.
Biblia Heb. magna Rabbinica, 7.
BIBLIA POLYGLOTTA,
Compluti, 19, 20.
Antverpiæ, 20.
                                                                                                                                                 Antverpiæ, 20.
Lutetiæ Parisiorum, 20.
Londoni (Bishop Walton), 20, 21.
Reineccii, 21.
Londini (Bagster), 21.
                   BIBLIA TRIGLOTTA, 21.
BIBLIA DIGLOTTA,
                                                                                                                             Pagnini et Montani, 22.
De Biel, 22.
Bayley, 22.
                   BIBLIA HEBRAICA,
                                                                                                                                 Munsteri, 7.
                                                                                                                                Athiæ, 7.
Jablonski, 7.
                                                                                                                             Yan der Hooght, 7.
Michaelis, 7.
Houbigant, 7.
Kennicott, 7, 8.
Doederlein et Meissner, 8.
                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        Hierozoicon, 159.

Böckel (E. G. A.), Clavis in Græcos Interpretes Veteris Testamer &c., 94.

— Epistola ad Romanos, 136.

Boehme (C. F.), in Epist. ad Romanos, 136.

— Epist. ad Hebræos, 138.

— Epist. ad Hebræos, 138.

Boehmerus (G.), Isagoge in Epist. ad Coloss. 138.

— Symbolæ Biblicæ, 138.

Boettcher (J. F.), Paronomasia Paulina, 72.

Bogan (Z.), Homerus 'E6ρaïgʻov, 147.

Bohemian Bible, 47.

Bois (Joh.), Collatio Veteris Interpretis cum Bezâ, 82.

Boothroyd (B.), Translation of the Bible, 114.

— Biblia Hebraica, 8.

Borger (E. A.), Interpretatio Epist. ad Galatas, 137.

— De Jesu Christi Doctrina, &c., 147.

Bornemann (F. A.), Scholia in Lucæ Evangelium, 132.

Borrenstein (—), Easy Method of acquiring Hebrew, 86.

Bos (L.), Exercitationes Philologicæ, 147.

— Observationes ad Nov. Test., 147.

— Ellipses Græcæ, 147.

Böttcher (J. F.), de Paronomasia Pauli, 72.

Boullier (D. R.), Observ. in Job, 117.

Bowler (Mrs.), Observations on the Revelation, 141.

Bowyer (W. L.), Paulus Parochialis, 144.

Bowyer (W. L.), Paulus Parochialis, 144.

Select Discourses, 163.
                                                                                                                             Jahn, 8.
Boothroyd, 8.
D'Allemand, 8, 9.
Hahn, 9.
                                                                                                                              Montani, 9.
                                                                                                                      - Reineccii, 9.
- Simonis, 9.
- Leusdenii, 9.
                     BIBLIA GRÆCA,
                                                                                                                  Editionum Synopsis, 23.
Compluti, 23.
Aldi, 23.
                                                                                                               Loniceri, 23.
Hervagii, 23.
Brylingeri, 23.
Carafæ, 23.
Wechelii, 23.
Danielis, 23.
Cluveri, 23.
Grabii, 23, 24.
Breitingeri, 24.
Reineccii, 24.
Halæ, 24.
                                                                                                                   Loniceri, 23
                                                                                                                   Halæ, 24.
                                                                                                               - Holmesii, et Parsons, 24.
- Baber, 24.
- Oxonii 25.
```

```
Boys (T.), Tactica Sacra, 76.

Key to Psalms, 120.

Exposition of New Test., 130.

Bragge (Fr.), On Parables, 146.

On Miracles, 146.

Brandmylleri (J.), Analysis Vet. Test., 56.

Brauna (J.), Comment. in Epist ad Hebrwos, 138.

De Vestitu Hebrworum, 161.

Bree (W. T.), Help to the Study of Scripture, 113.

Breitingeri (J. J.), de antiquo MS. Psalmorum, 77.

Breitengeri (J. J.), de antiquo MS. Psalmorum, 77.

Bretzewood (E.), De Ponderibus Veterum, 160.

Bretzen (F. P. dey, De Musica Hebrworum, 161.

Bretschneider (C. G.), Lexicon in Nov. Test., 93.

Liber Jesu Sirachidæ, 63

Spicilegium ad Loxicon ad LXX., 94.

Probabilia de Evang, Joannis, 132.

Capita Theologiae Judworum, 161.

Brett (Tho.), Letter on English Bibles, 84.

Brewster (Ja.), Loctures on Matt. V. VI. VII., 145.

(Jo.), Contemplations on Christ's last Discourse, 144.
     Boys (T.), Tactica Sacra, 76.
                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              Bythneri (V.), Lyra Davidis, 9.
                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              Byfield (N.), Exposition of the Epistle to the Colossians, 137.
Bynæus, (A.), De Calceis Hebræorum, 161.
                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             CAJETANI (Cardinalis), Vet. Test. Latine, 31.
Calamy (B.), Vindication of 1 John v. 7., 81.
Calasio (M. D.), Concordantiæ Bibliorum, Hebraicorum et Latino-
                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        Calamy (B.), Vindication of 1 John v. 7., 81.
Calasio (M. D.), Concordantis Bibliorum, Hebraicorum et Latinorum, 152.
Calixti (G.), Schola Phrophetica, 124.
Callaway (John), Oriental Observations, 161.
Calmberg (A. T.), Testimonia pro Evan. Joan. ανθεντεια, 133.
Calmet (Aug.), Bibliotheca Sacra, 5.

— Diss. sur I Jean v. 7., 81.

— Dictionnaire de la Bible, 154.

— Dictionnaire de la Bible, 154.

— Dissertations vur la Bible, 69.

— Commentaire Littéral, 108.
Calvin (John), Commentaries of, 107.

— On the Ep. to the Romans, 135.
Campbell (G.), Translation of the Gospels, 131.
Capelli (Lud.), Patris, Critica Sacra, 78.

— Chronologia Sacra, 163.

— (Lud.), Filii, Arcanum Punctationis, 85.
Cardwell (Dr. E.), Curtis's Misrepresentations exposed, 84.
Carey (J.), Lexicon Gr. Lat. in Nov. Test., 92.
Carpenter (W.), Calendarium Palestinæ, 163, 164.

— Lectures on Biblical Criticism, 72.

— Scripture Difficulties, 148.

  Lectures on Acts, 144.

Breyther (C. A.), Diss. de Quattor Evangeliis, 82.

Bridge (C.), Exposition of Psal. CXIX., 144.

Brij-Bhassa Version, 50.
   Bullet (M.), Reponses Critiques, 148.

Bullom Version, 56.

Bulocha Version of the New Testament, 49.

Burder (Samuel), Oriental Expositor, 113.

Oriental Customs, 162.

Burges (Sir J. B.), on New Translation of Bible, 84.

Burgess (Tho. Bishop of Salisbury), on New Translation of Bible, 84.

Burgess (Tho. Bishop of Salisbury), on New Translation of Bible, 84.
                                           ole, 54.

Annotationes Millii et aliorum in 1 John v. 7., 80.

Selection of Tracts on 1 John v. 7., 82.

Vindication of 1 John v. 7., 81.

Letter to the Clergy of St. David's, 82.

Letter to Beynon, 82.
  Letter to the Caregy of St. David 8, 82.

Letter to Beynon, 82.

Introduction to the Controversy on 1 John v. 7., 82.

Hebrew Primer, and Elements, 88.

Initia Paulina, 134. note.

Burgherhoudt (J. J.), de Coetûs Christ. Thessalonicensis Ortu, 138.

Burkii (P. D.), Gnomon Psalmorum, 119.

in XII. Prophetas Minores, 125.

Burkitt (W.), Notes on New Test., 128.

Burnan New Testament, 51.

Burnon (Dr. E.), Chronology of the Acts, 133.

Buschingii, (A. F.), Introd. in Epist. ad Philippenses, 137.

Bush (G.), On the Millennium, 142.

Buslav (J. T.), de Lingua Evang. Matth., 72.

Butler (Charles), Hore Biblices, 72.

On 1 John v. 7., 81.

Butterworth (J.), Concordance, 153.

Buttorifi (Joh.), Patris, Concordantis Hebraicæ et Chaldaicæ, 152.
                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             Clarke (J. E.), Dissertation on the Dragon, Beast, &c. of the Rev. lation, 141.
Classical Journal, 147.
Claudii (J. D.), Commentatio de Felice, 148.
Clausen (H. N.), IV Evang. Tab. Synopticæ, 61.
Clerici (J.), Translatio et Commentarius Vet. et Nov. Test., 108.
— Ars Critica, 78.
— Harmonia Evangelica, 59.
Clemence (M.), Caractères du Messie, 101.
                152
                                                      Dissertationes, 148.
Grammatica Hebraica, 87.
Lexicon Hebraicum, 89.
Lexicon Chaldaicum, 89.
                                                        Tiberias, 85.
Synagoga Judaica, 160.
(Joh.) Filii, Anti-Critica, 78.
```

Close (Fr.), Genesis illustrated, 143.
Cocceii (Joannis), Commentarii, 108.
Cocceii (Joannis), Commentarii, 108.
Coella (D.), Observationes ad Zephaniam, 126
Coghlan (C. L.), Script. Comm. on Genesis and Matthew, 41.
Cole (J. W.), On the Prophecies, 122.
Collett (S.), Paraphrase on the Catholic Epistles, 139.
Collyer (David), Sacred Interpreter, 70.
Collyer (David), Sacred Interpreter, 70.
Collyer (W. B.), On Scripture Prophecy, 100.
Lect. on Miracles and Parables, 146.
Colomia (D.), Religion Chrétienne, authorizée par Auteurs Païens, 68.
Compendium Gramm. Heb., 88.
Compendium Gramm. Heb., 88.
Compendium Gramm. Heb., 88.
Comprehensive Bible, 114.
Concordance de IV. Evangélistes, 61.
— du Nouveau Testament, 154.
Conybeare (J. J.), On Spiritual Interp. of Scripture, 99.
Cook (John), Inquiry into New Test, 72.
Cooke (W.), Trans. of Revelation, 140.
Cooper (R. B.), Translation of Mede's Clavis Apoc., 140
— On the Revelation, 140.
Cooper (O. St. John), Four Hundred Texts of Scripture explained, 148.
Corrie Vargion of the Bible, 26.

Cooper (O. St. John), Four Hundred Texts of Scripture explained, 148.

Core (R.), Practical Expositor, 148.

Coptic Version of the Bible, 26.

Coquerel (A. L. C.), Biographie Sacrée, 165.

Sur le Système Hieroglyphique, 162.

Cosin (Bp.), Scholiastical Hist. of Canon, 68.

Costard (C.), Observations on Job, 117.

Cotes (H.), Sermons on Resurrection of Lazarus, 145.

Cotton (H.), List of Editions of the Bible, 84.

Five Books of Maccabees, 63.

On a French Translation of the New Test., 85.

Coverdale (Myles), Bible, 34.

Cox (F. A.), Female Scripture Biography, 165.

Lectures on Daniel, 143.

Cox (J. H.), On Harmony of Scripture, 146.

Cox (R.), Horæ Romanæ, 136.

Cradock (S.), Harmony of the Evangelists, 59.; and of the Apostolical History, 62.

Old Testament methodized, 164.

Cranmeri (J. J.), Theologia Israelis, 161.

Cranmer (Abp. Tho.), Great Bible, 34, 35.

Cranfeld (Thomas), Harmony of the Resurrection, 62.

Credies Version, 57.

Credies Version, 57.

Crotic Sacri, 108.

Croat Version, 46.

Crocker (J.), Hebrew Grammar, 86, 87.

Croly (G.), Apocalyose of St. John, 142.

Crutici Sacri, 108.
Croat Version, 46.
Crocker (J.), Hebrew Grammar, 86, 87.
Croly (G.), Apocalypse of St. John, 142.
Crombie (John), On Types, 99.
Crossinge (R.), On Charity, 146.
Crosthwaite (J. C.), Maps, 158.
Cruden (Rev. Mr.), Commentary on the Bible, 111.
Crusius (C. A.), Theologia Prophetica, 100.
Crutwell (C.), Concordance of Parallels, 153.
Culbertson (R.), Lectures on the Revelation, 142.
Cumberland (Bp. R.), Jewish Weights and Measures, 160.
Cumming (J. A.), New Test. with Notes, 130.
Cunœus (P.), De Republica Hebræorum, 156.
Cuninghame (W.), On the Seals, &c. of the Apocalypse, 141.
— Jubilwan Chronology, 141.
Curdish Version, 52.
Curtii (A.), De Authentia 1 Ep. ad Tim., 138.
Curtis (Tho.), On alleged existing Monopoly of the Scriptures, 84.

De Rossi (J. B.), Variæ Lectiones Veteris Testamenti, et Scholia Critica, 79.

- Specimen Hexaplaris Bibliorum Versionis Syro-Estran-gelez, 26.

Introd. alla Scrittura, 70.

Ermeneutica Sacra, 97.

Compendio di Critica Sacra, 72.

Dermout (J.), Collect. Crit. in Nov. Test., 80.

De Veil (C. M.), Explicatio Cantici Canticorum, 121.

Expositio XII Prophetarum, 125.

Explicatio Matthei et Marci, 132.

Acta Apostolorum Explicata, 133.

Des Voeux (A. V.), on Ecclesiastes, 121.

Deylingii (S.), Observationes Sacræ, 148.

Dick (J.), Lectures on the Acts, 144.

Dickinson (R.), New Testament, 130, 131.

Dickson (D.), Explication of Psalms, 118.

Dictionaries of the Bible, notice of, 154, 155.

Dieu (Ludovici de), Critica Sacra, 107, 108.

Rudimenta Linguæ Persicæ, 97.

Dimock (H.), Notes on Genesis, &c., 116.

— Rudmienta Lingua Fersica, 57.

Dimock (H.), Notes on Genesis, &c., 116.

Notes on Psalms and Proverbs, 119

Dindorf (J.), Novum Lexicon Linguae Hebraico-Chaldaicæ, 90.

Diodati (J.), Annotations on the Bible, 106.

Dobrowsky (Josephi), De Antiquis Hebræorum Characteribus Disconsisting St.

Dobrowsky (Josephi), De Artiquis Hebræorum Characteribi sertatio, 85.

Dodd (W.), Commentary on the Bible, 111

— Disc. on Miracles, &c., 146.

— Common-place Book to the Bible, 155.

Doddridge (Dr.), Family Expositor, 129.

— Harmony of the Gospels, 60.

Doederlein (J. C.), Scholia in Libros V. T. poeticos, 117.

— Esaias Latinè, 123.

Dombay (F. de), Grammatica Linguæ Persicæ, 97.

Dorhout (Ambr.), Animadversiones in Vet. Test., 148.

Dorn (J. A.), de Psalterio Æthiopico, 82.

Dorschei (J. G.), Biblia Numerata, 97

Doughtæi (J.), Analecta Sacra, 148.

D'Oyly (G.), and Mant (R.), Commentary on the Bible, 113.

Drack (M.), Bible de Vence, 108, 109.

Driesseni (A.), Divina Autoritas N. T., 78,

Drusii (J.) Commentarius in Prophetas Minores, 125.

— Historia Ruth, 116.

Adagia, 110.

— Animadversiones, 148.

— Adagia, 110.
— Animadversiones, 148.
— Præterita, 103.
— Parallela Sacra, 76.
Duguet (J. J.), Explication du 1 Cor. XIII., 146.
Du Hamel (J. B.), Biblia cum Annot., 108.
Dumbeck (F. J.), Historiæ Universæ Tabulæ, 164.
Duncan (R.), Exposition of Epistle to the Hebrews, 138.
Du Pin (L. E.), Prolegomènes sur la Bible, 68.
— Hist. of the Canon, 68.
— Hist. of the Canon, 68.
Durell (D.), Translation of the Prophecies of Jacob and Moses, 115.
— Remarks on Job, &c., 117.
Dutch Version of the Bible, 44, 45.

EASTBURN (M.), Lect. on Ep. to Philippians, 145.

Eckermann (J. C. R.), in Librum Job, 117.

Eckhardi (T.), Observationes Philologicæ, 148.

Edwards (John), Exercitations, 148.

— Inquiry into IV Texts, 148.

Edwards (Tho.), Translation of Psalms, 119.

— Dissertationes duæ, 72.

Edwards (Tim.), Paraphrase on Romans and Galatians, 135.

Egyptian Versions of the Bible, 26.

Eickhorn (J. G.), Commentarius in Apocalypsin, 140.

— Introduction to the Old and New Testaments, and to the Apocryphal Books, 71.

Eichhorn (J. G.), Commentarius in Apocalypsin, 140.

— Introduction to the Old and New Testaments, and to the Apocryphal Books, 71.

— De Prophetica Poësi, 76.

Eliot (J.), Virginian Bible, 56.

Elsley (J.), Annotations on the Four Gospels and Acts, 131, 132.

— Observationes ad Nov. Test, 148.

Elsneri (J.), Comm. ad Matth. et Marc., 132.

— Observationes ad Nov. Test, 148.

Elsneri (H. F.), Paulus et Jesaias comparatus, 148.

Elswich (J. H.), Dissertatio De Nov. Fæd. Critice, 78.

Emlyn (Tho.), Inquiry concerning 1 John v. 7., 81.

— Answer to Martin, 81.

— Reply to Martin, 81.

— Reply to Martin, 81.

Emmerling (A. G.), Ep. ad Corinth. cum Notis, 137.

Engelbreth (W. F.), Fragmenta Basmurico-Coptica Vet. et Nov. Test., 26, 27.

Ens (J.), Bibl. Sacra, 68.

Erasmi (D.), Nov. Test., 9, 10. 32.

— Paraphrasis in Nov. Test., 127.

Erdmann (F.), Curæ in Jeremiam, 124.

Ernesti (J. A.), Lectiones in Epist. ad Hebræos, 138.

— Opuscula Theologica, 146.

— Institutio Interpretis Novi Testamenti, 97, 98.

Glossæ Sacræ, 92.

Erpenii (T.), Grammatica et Rudimenta Arabica, 95

Esquimaux Version, 57.

```
Essay on Apocrypha, 69.
Essays on Biblical Literature, 147.
Esti (G.), Comment in Epistolas, 134.
Ethiopic Version of the Bible, 27.
 Estr. (G.), Comment. in Epistolas, 134.

Ethiopic Version of the Bible, 27.

Eusebii Onomasticon Scripture, 157.

Eustymii Commentarii, 105.

Ewalt (G. H. A.), Grammatik Hebraischer, 88.

Com. in Apocalypsin, 142.

Ewart (J.), Lectures on the Psalms, 143.

Ewing (Gr.), Greek Grammar and Levicon, 94

Eyre (George), and Strahan's (Andrew), Edition of the English

Bible, 39, 40.
 FABER (G. S.), Hore Mosaice, 115.
 Faber (G. S.), Hore Mosaice, 115.

— Diss. on Seventy Weeks, 125.

— Dissert. on Prophecies, 100.

— Sacred Calendar of Prophecy, 100.

Fabricii (J. A.), Codex Apoc. Vet. Test., 66.

— Codex Apoc. Nov. Test., 67.

Fabricy (Père), Des Titres Primitives de Revelation, 72.
 Fabricy (Père), Des Titres Primitives de Revelation, 72.
Falsifications of the Scriptures:—in the Anglo-Romish Bibles, 41.
42.; and the Romish-French Version, at Bordeaux, 45. notes.
Fannin (J.), Harmony of Christ's Prophecy, 61.
Farrer (J.), On the Parables, 146.
Fawcett (Dr. J.), Comment. on the Bible, 113.
Fawcett (J.), Exposit. of Rom. IX., 136.
Featherstone (C.), Haggeus the Prophet, 126.
Fell (Bp.), Paraphrase, &c. on Saint Paul's Epistles, 134.
Ferenczy (J.), De Proditione Judes, 132.
Fergus (H.), Institutions of Moses, 160.
Finnish Bible, 44.
   Finnish Bible, 44.
Finnish Bible, 44.
Fischer (S.), Synopsis Quæstionum, 148.
Fischer (J. F.), De Versionibus Græcis Veteris Testamenti, 82
Fitzgerald (Gerald), Hebrew Grammar, 86.
Flacheri Analysis V. et Nov. Test., 156.
Flacius (M.), Clavis Scriptura, 98.
Fleck (F. F.), De Regno Christi, 148.
Fleming (R.), Fulfilling of Scriptures, 100.
Fleury (C.), Manners of Israelites, 156.
Formosan Version of Gospels, 51
Forskil (P.), Opera, 159.
Forster (Cha.), Critical Essays, 148.
Fowler (W.), Eastern Mirror, 162.
Fox (F.), The New Testament with Parallel References at length, 40.
                       40.
 Francis (A.), Transl. of Song of Solomon, 122.
Franckii (A. H.), Prelectiones Hermeneuticæ, 98.

Manuductio ad Script. Sacr., 68.

Commentatio de Scopo Vet. Test., 98.

Introductio ad Lectionem Prophetarum, 100.

Christus S. Script. Nucleus, 98.
 Christus S. Script. Nucleus, 98.

Franks (J.). Remarks on Genesis, 116.

Franzii (W.), De Interpretatione Sacrarum Literarum, 98.

French (W.), and Skinner (Geo.), Version of the Psalms, 120.

On the Proverbs, 121.

Frey (J. S. C. F.), Hebr. Grammar, 86.

Hebr. Lat. and Engl. Dict., 90.

Frey (J. L.), Commentarius de Var. Lect. Nov. Test., 78.

Friedrichii (C. G.), Symbolæ ad Psalmum Centesimum, 120.

Christologia Samaritanorum, 161.

Fritsche (C. F. A.), Evangelia Quatuor, 132.

in 2 Cor. Dissertatio, 137.

Conject. in Nov. Test., 148.

Frost (J.), on Mustard Tree of New Test., 159.

Fry (J.), Translation of Job, 118.

Lyra Davidis, 120.

Canticles, 122.

Lectures on Epist. to Romans, 144.
   — Canticles, 122.

Lectures on Epist. to Romans, 144.

Fulke (W.), On the New Testament, 41

Fuller (A.), Expository Discourses on Genesis, 143.

On the Apocalypse, 145.

Harmony of Scripture, 146.

Fuller (T.), Comment. on Ruth, 116.

Fulleri (Nich.), Mis. Sac., 72. 148.
```

Geier (M.), Commentarius in Psalms, 119, 120.

Geier (M.), Commentarius in Psalmos, 118.

Commentarius in Proverbia, 120.

Commentarius in Ecclesiasten, 121.

```
Geier (M.), Prelectiones in Danielem, 124
Gell (Philip), on Hebrew Idiom, 86.
Gelpke (F. C.), Vindicia Originis Pauline Ep. ad Hebrees, 139
Genealogies, Treatises on, 105.
Genealogies, Treatises et, 103.
Genesis, Essay on, 116.
— Brief Observations upon, 116.
Georgi (A. A.), Fragmentum Johannis Coptico-Thebaicum, 26.
Georgia (Ign.), Paulus Naufragus, 134.
Gerard (Alex.), Institutes of Biblical Criticism, 72, 73.
Gerdesii (D.), Miscellanea Duisburgensia, et Groningana, 147.
  Gerdesii (D.), Miscellanea Duisburgensia, et Groningan German Bibles, 43, 44.

Gershom (Levi Ben.), Commentaries on Scripture, 102.

Gesenii (G.), Lexicon Hebræo-Latinum, 90.

Lexicon Heb. Lat. Manuale, 90.

Lexicon by Leo, 90.

Rudimenta Orientalia, 94.

Comment. de Samaritanis, 161.

De Pentateuchi Samaritani origine, 73.

Acceptes Organicarie, 73.
Comment. de Samaritanis, 161.

De Pentateuchi Samaritanis, 161.

De Pentateuchi Samaritani origine, 73.

Anecdota Oxoniensia, 73.

Gibbs (J. W.), Hebrew and English Lexicon, 90.

Manual Hebrew and English Lexicon, 90, 91.

Gibert (E.), Reflections sur l'Apocalypse, 141.

Gifford (—), Diss. on Song of Sol., 122.

Giggeti (A.), Thesaurus Linguæ Arabicæ, 96.

Gill (Dr.), Comment. on the Bible, 111.

Exposit. of Solomon's Song, 121.

Gilpin (W.), Exposit. of New Test, 129.

Girard (J.), Moyse Dévoilé, 99.

Girdlestone (W.), Obs. on Daniel, 124.

(C.), Comment. on New Testament, 144.

Gisborne (T.), Exposition of the Epistle to the Colossians, 145.

Glaire (J. B.), Grammaire Hebraïque, 88.

Lexicon Heb. et Chald., 91.

Glaser (A. F. G. M.), Dissert de Johanne Apostolo, 133.

Glassii (Sal.), Philologia Sacra, 73. 98.

Goadby (—), Illustration of the Bible, 111.

Godwin (Tho.), Moses and Aaron, 156.

Goetzii (G.), Observat. ad Nov. Test, 148.

Golii (J. G.), Lexicon Arabico-Latinum, 96.

Good (E.), On Sermon on the Mount, 145.

Good (J. M.), Translation of Job, 118.

— Transl. of Solomon's Song, 122.

Goode (W.), Version of Psalms, 120.

Gorcum (Jo. à), Epitome Commentariorum Estii, 134.

Gorham (G. C.), On Apocryphal Books, 69.

Gothic Versions of the Scriptures, Editions of, 28.

Gower (J. A.), Explanation of the Psalms, 120.

Grabe (J. E.), Collatio Codicis Cottoniani, 79.

Epistola de LXX Versione, 82.

Dissertatio de Vitiis LXX, 83.

Gramberg (C. P. W.), Libri Geneseos Adumbratio, 116.
  Grabe (J. E.), Collatio Codicis Cottoniani, 79.

— Epistola de LXX Versione, 82.

— Dissertatio de Vittis LXX, 83.

Gramberg (C. P. W.), Libri Geneseos Adumbratio, 116.

Graves (R.), Lect. on Pentateuch, 143.

Grawl (C.), sur la Langue Orig. de Matthieu, 73.

Gray (A.), Delineation of Parables, 146.

Gray (Bp.), Key to the Old Testament, 71.

— Connection of Sacred and Heathen Literature, &c., 73.

— Josiah and Cyrus, 73.

Greek Grammars and Lexicons, 91—94.

— Versions of the Old Testament (anonymous), Editions of, 25.

— (Modern) Version of the Bible, 47.

— (Ancient). See Biblia Græca.

Green (W.), Translation of Psalms, 119.

— Parts of Old Testament, 117.

Green (R. B.), Ecclesiates, 121.

Green (R. B.), Genealogy of Christ, 163.

Greenfield (W.), Polymicrian Lexicon, 17.

— Comprehensive Bible, 114.

Greenhill (G.), On Ezekiel, 124.

Greenhadish Version, 57.

Greegory (G.), Translation of Lowth's Lectures, 76.

Greppo (J. G. H.), Système Hiéroglyphique, 162.

Greswell (E.), Harmonia Evangelica, 61.

— Dissertations, 61.

Grey (Rich.), Last Words of David, 117.

— Libri Jobi, 117.

Grier (R.), Answer to Ward's Errata, 84.

Griesbachii (J. J.), Curre in Hist. Textus Epist. Pauli, 15.
```

Gurney (W.), Dictionary of Bible, 155. Gurney (J. J.), Biblical Notes, 148. Guthirii (A.), Lexicon Syriacum Novi Testamenti, 95. Guyse (Dr.), Practical Expositor, 128. Gyles (J. F.), Elements of Hebrew Grammar, 86. Gulge (D.). Practical Expositor, 128.

Guge (D.). Practical Expositor, 128.

Guge (D.). Practical Expositor, 128.

Hace (Maria), Oriental Fragments, 162.

Hacelei (Ir. (C. A.). Symbols Critice in Habacucum, 126.

Epistola Judes, 140.

Holes (Dr. W.), Analysis of Chronology, 163.

— On 1 John v. 7, 81.

Hall (Bashop), Contemplations, and Paraphrastic Exposition of the Bible, 190.

Hollifar (B. S.), On Prophecy, 101.

Hallifar (B. S.), On Prophecy, 101.

Homaker (H. A.), De Vita Prophetarum, 122.

Hamilton (Geo.), Introduction to the Study of the Hebrew Scriptures, 79.

— Observations on Rom. Cath. English Bible, 84.

— Letter to Dr. Murray, 84, 85.

Hammond (H.), Annot on the Frains, 18.

Handset (G.), On the Work Test., 18.

Handset (G.), Nov. Test. cum Scholiis, 127.

Haracelony, (C.), Amos expositus, 126.

Otin Sacra, 148.

Harle (J.), Wist. of Physic in Old and New Test., 161.

Harner (T.), Observations on Divers Passages of Scripture, 162.

— Outines of a new Commentary on Solomon's Song, 122.

Horrino, 19.

Horris (R.), Nat. Hist of Bible, 158, 159.

Harris (W.), Klements of the Chaldee Language, 89.

Horris (W.), Klements of the Chaldee Language, 89.

Horris (W.), Klements of the Chaldee Language, 89.

Horris (W.), Regnum Davidicum, 158.

Horris (M.), Regnum Davidicum, 158.

Hossi (J. M.), Regnum Davidicum, 158.

Hollifare (J. O.), Domental Regness of Script

Hoepfnerus (E. F.), in Pauli Epist. ad Romanos, 136.

Hoffmanni (A. T.), Observationes in Vet. Test., 149.

Grammatica Syriaca, 95.

(Immanuelis, Demonstratio Evangelica, 77.

Holden (G.), Christian Expositor, 114. 130.

Transl. of Proverbs, 121.

Transl. of Ecclesiastes, 121.

Dissert. on Fall of Man, 116.

Script. Testimony to Divinity of Christ, 149

Holden (L.), Paraphrase on Job, &c., 117.

Hole (M.), Discourses on 1 Cor. XIII., 145, 146.

Hollybuske (Johan), Newe Testament, 34.

Holmann (A. G.), In Epist. ad Corinthios, 137.

Hombergk (J. F.), Parerga Sacra, 149.

Hone (W.), Apocryphal New Test., 67.

Hoog (J.), De Cœtus Christian. Philippensium Conditione, 137.

Hook (W. F.), Last Days of Our Lord's Ministry, 144.

Horne (Bp. Geo.), on the Psalms, 119.

Horne (T. H.), Compendious Introd. to Bible, 70.

Horneck (A.), Serm. on Matt. V., 145.

Horneck (A.), Serm. on Matt. V., 145.

Horneck (P.), Animadversiones in Nov. Test., 149.

Miscellanea Critica, 149.

Horsley (Bp.), Translation of the Psalms, 120.

Disquisitions on Isaiah, 123.

Translation of Hosea, 126.

Biblical Criticism, 149.

Hottingeri (J. C.), de Ritu dimittendi Reum, 160.

Hottingeri (J. C.), Opuscula, 149. Biblical Criticism, 149.

Hottingeri (J. C.), de Ritu dimittendi Reum, 160.

Hottingeri (J. J.), Opuscula, 149.

Hottingeri (J. H.), Exercit. Anti-Morin., 78.

Gram. IV. Ling., 94.

Houbigant (C. F.), Biblia Latine, 31.

Prolegom. ad Scripturam, 70.

Notæ Criticæ, 109.

Howard (Luke), Book of the Church, 63.

Howel (Laur.), Hist of Bible, 164.

Hug (J. L.), Introd. to the New Test., 71.

de Antiq. Vaticani Codicis, 77.

Hughes (George), Exposit. of Genesis, 115.

Hugonis (Cardinalis), Concordantiæ, 153.

Hummelii (H.), in Epist. ad Philemonem, 138.

Hungarian Bible, 46.

Hunt (Geo.), Transl. of Job, 118. Hungarian Bible, 46.

Hunt (Geo.), Transl. of Job, 118.

— (John), Map of Palestine, 158.

— (Tho.), Observations on Proverbs, 121.

— De Usu Dialectorum, 98.

Hunter (David), History of Jesus Christ, 165.

Hunter (H.), Sacred Biography, 142.

Hurd (Bp. R.), On Prophecy, 101.

Hurwitz (Hyman), Hebrew Grammar, 87.

— Vindiciae Hebraicæ, 84.

Hutcheson (Geo.), Exposit. of John, 133.

Huydecoper (T. P. C.), De J. C. introita in Hierosolymam, 132.

Huyshe (Francis), on 1 John v. 7., 82.

Hwid (H. C.), De MS. Vindobonensi, 77.

IASPIS (G. S.), Versio Epistolarum, 32. 140. Icelandic Bible, 43. Ihre (Joh.), Fragm. Vers. Goth., 28.
— Scripta ad Vers. Goth., 28.
Ikenii (C.) Antiquitates Hebraicæ, 156, 157.
— Dissertationes, 149.
Ilgen (C. D.), Jobi Carminis Natura, 117.
Ilive (J.), Book of Jasher, 63—66.
Improved Version of New Test., 129.
Index to the Bible, 156.
Irish Bible, 42.
Italian Versions of the Bible, 45. Italian Versions of the Bible, 45.

Jablonskii (P. E.), Explicatio Vocum Ægypt, 96.

— Opuscula, 149.

Jackson (John), Chronological Antiquities, 163.

Jaeger (J. G.), Observationes in Proverbia Salomonis, 121.

Jahn (J.), Grammatica Hebraica, 87.

— Elementa Aramaicæ Linguæ, 95.

— Lexicon Arabico-Latinum, 96.

— Introductio ad Vetus Fædus, 71.

— Translated by Turner, 71.

— Hermeneutica Sacra, 98.

— Appendix ad Hermeneuticam Sacram, 98.

— Heb. Commonwealth, 164.

— Archæologia Biblica, 157.

James I's (King), or the authorized English version of the Bible History of, 36, 37. Testimonies of eminent authors to its value 37.—39. Editions of it, with parallel References, 39—41.

James (Tho.), Bellum Papale, 83.

Jameson (—), Exposit. of Pentateuch, 71.

Jansenii (Cornelii), Concordia Evangelica, 59.

Janssens (J. H.), Hermeneutique Sacrée, 70.

Jarrom (J.), Discourses on Rom. ix. 145. Jasher, forged book of, 63—66. Jebb (Bishop), Sacred Literature, 76. Jehh (Bishop), Sacred Literature, 76.
Jenour (A.), Isaiah translated, 123.
Jenkyn (W.), Exposition of Jude, 140.
Jennings (Dr.), Jewish Antiquities, 156.
Jerome, Commentaries of, 104.
— Latin Version of, 27.
Jessien (A.), de audenties Epist. Judæ, 140.
Jewell (Bp.), Exposition of 1 and 2 Thessalonians, 138.
Johnson (A.), On Engl. Transl. of Bible, 84.
Johnstone (B.), Commentary on the Revelations, 141.
Jonathanis Targum, 22.
Jones (G.), Hebrew Grammar, 86.
Jones (Jer.), New and Full Method of settling the Canon of the New Testament, 68.
Jones (John), Isaiah translated, 123. Jones (John), Isaiah translated, 123.
Jones (Dr. John), Epistles to Colossians, &c., 138.

— On 1 John v. 7., 82.
Jones (Ric.), Collatio Textus Syriaci, 25.
Jones (Ric.), Collatio Textus Syriaci, 25.
Jones (Rev. W.), On Figurative Lang. of Scripture, 99.

— Lect. on Epist. to Hebrews, 145.
Jones (Sir W.), Persian Grammar, 97.
Jones (W.), Biblical Cyclopædia, 155.
Joseph (Angeli à S.), Gazophylacium Linguæ Persarum, 97.

(Cherubini à S.), Bibliotheca Criticæ, Sacræ, 73.
Josephi (Rabbi), Targum, 22.
Josephi (Rabbi), Targum, 22.
Josephi (Rabbi), Bibliotheca Criticæ, Sacræ, 73.
Jubb (G.), de Ling, Heb. Studio, 85.
Junii et Tremellii Biblia Latina, 31, 32.
Justiniani (A.), Psalterium Pentaglotton, 19.
Juynboll (T. G. J.), De Amoso, 126. Jones (John), Isaiah translated, 123. Kaiser (C.), Comment. de Ling. Aramaica, 73. 95.

de Evang. Joannis Authentia, 133.

Comment. in Genesin, 116.

Kalinsky, (R. T. G.), Vaticinia Chabacuci illustrata, 125

Kals (G. J.), Grammatica Hebrao-Harmonica, 87.

Kanta (H. P.), On 1 Pet. v. 1—4., 139.

Kaserer (M.), Διαγραφη Studii Scripturistici, 161.

Keach (B.), Key to Scripture Metaphors, 99.

Keate (W.), On the 109th Psalm, 120.

Keeling (B.), On Saint Paul's Wish, 136.

Keilii (C. A. T.), Elementa Hermeneutices Novi Testamenti, 98.

Opuscula Academica, 149.

Keith (A.), Evidence from Prophecy, 200.

Signs of the Times, 200.

Kennedy (J.), On Mosaic Records of Creation, 143.

Kennicott (Dr.), Remarks on the Old Testament, 149.

Biblia Hebraica, 78.

On the Hebrew Text of the Old Testament, 73.

Diss. Generalis, 73.

Diss. Generalis, 73.

Diss. On Tree of Life, &c., 116.

Ker (J.), Cant. Sal. Paraphrasis, 121.

Kerkherdere (G.), Prodromus Danielicus, 124.

Kett (H.), On Prophecy, 100.

Keuchenii (P.), Annotata in Nov. Test., 149.

Keyworth (T.), and Jones (D.), Principia Hebraica, 89.

Analytical Part of Princip. Hebr., 89.

Pocket Expositor of New Test., 131.

Khassee Version of Gospels, 51.

Kidder (Bp. R.), Comment. on Pentateuch, 115.

Kilburn (W.), Dangerous Errors in Bibles, 84.

Kimg (Bp. A), Lectures on Jonas, 143.

King (Ep., Morsels of Criticism, 149.

King (Mrs.), Female Script. Characters, 165.

Kipling (Tho.), Codex Bezæ, 14.

Kirchert (Conrad), Concordantiæ Veteris Testamenti, 153

Kistemaker (J. H.), Canticum Canticorum illustratum, 122.

Kemm (J. C.), Critica Sacra Nov. Test., 78.

Konick (J.), On the Parables and Miracles, 146.

Knight (J.), Observa

Jarchi (Rabbi Solomon), Commentaries on the Bible, 102, 103.

Küchler (G. C.), De Simplicitate Script. Sacr., 149.

De Anno Pauli Conversionis, 134.

Kuhnii (A. F.), Spicilegium Observationum e Philone, 103.

Kuinöel (C. F.), Hoseas Illustratus, 126.

Observationes ad Nov. Test. ex Libris Apocryphis, 103. 149

Pericope Evangelicæ, et Comment in Libros Nov. Test Historicos, 131 Historicos, 131.

— Comm. in Ep. ad Hebræos, 139.

— Comment. Theologicæ, 147.

Küttner (C. G.), Hypomnemata in Novum Testamentum, 127. 149.

Kype (G. D.), Observationes in Nov. Test., 149. La Croze (M. V.), Lexicon Ægyptico-Latinum, 96.

La Harpe (H. L.), Essai sur l'Epître aux Hébreux, 139.

Laing (H.), Greek and English Lexicon to the New Testament, 93

Lakemacheri (J. G.), Observationes Philologicæ, 149.

L'Alouette (F. P.), Hierofexicon, 98.

Lampe (F. A.), Comment. in Evang. Johannis, 133.

— Bibliotheca Hist. Theol., 147.

— Dissertationes, 149.

Lamy (B.), Apparatus Biblicus, 70.

— De Tabernaculo, 160.

— Concordia Evange listarum, et Commentarius, 59. De Tabernaculo, 160.
Concordia Evangelistarum, et Commentarius, 59.
Langii (C. H.), Observationes Sacræ, 149.
Langii (J.), Comment. de Vita et Epistolis Pauli, 134.
Hermeneutica Sacra, 98.
Langii (J. M.), Genealogia Christi, 163.
Langia (J.), Institutiones Biblicæ, 73.
Lardner (Dr.), Credibility of the Gospel History, 68.
Supplement to his Credibility, 68.
Works, 149, 150.
Latin Versions of the Scriptures, Editions of, 27, 28. 31, 32.
Laurence (Abp.), On Griesbach's Classification of MSS., 79.
Book of Enoch, 66.
Ascensio Isaiæ, 67. Lee (Edw.), Disc. on Books of Ezra, 69.

Lee (Sam.), Sylloge Librorum Orientalium, 97.

— Hebrew Grammar, 86.

— Prolegomena in Biblia Polyglotta, 21

— Nov. Test. Syriace, 25.

— On the Study of Scripture, 98.

Leichner (E.), De Magis, 132.

Leigh (Edward), Critica Sacra, 92.

Leighton (Archbp.), Comment. on 1 Peter, 139.

Le Long (J.), Bibliotheca Sacra, 5.

— Disc. sur les Polyglottes, 5.

Lengerke (C.), Comm. de Ephraemo Syro, 83.

Leo (C.), Translation of Gesenius's Hebrew Lexicon, 90.

Leonis Judae, Biblia Latina, 31.

— German-Swiss Bible, 44.

Leopold (E. F.), Lexicon Heb. et Chald., 91.

Lettish Bible, 44.

Leun (J. G. F.), Notte ad 2 Cor., 137.

Leusdenii (J.), Clavis Hebraico Vet. Test., 91.

— Philologus, Ebreus, Ebreo-Mixtus, et Ebreo-Greecus, 73.

— De Dialectis Novi Testamenti, 74.

— Joel et Obadiah, cum Paraphar. Chald., 103.

— et Scaaf (C.), Nov. Test. Syriac., 25.

Levasasseur (B. M. F.), Livre de Job, 118.

Levi Ben Gershom (Rabbi), Commentaries of, 102.

Levysoshn (D. H.), De Judsorum Conditione, 160.

Lewis (John), History of English Translations of the Bible, 84.

— (Thomas), Origines Hebree, 157.

Leydekker (M.), de Republ. Hebr., 157.

Lichtenstein (A. A. H.), Paralipomena Critica, 74.

Lightfoot (Dr.), Hore Hebraice, 103.

— Observations on Genesis, 115.

— Chronicle of the Old Testament, 58.

— Harmony of the New Testament, 59.

— Works, 103. Chronicle of the Old Testament, 58.

Harmony of the New Testament, 59.

Works, 103.

Temple Service, 161.

Lilienthal (T. C.), Comm. Crit. de MS. Hebr., 77.

Lindberg (J. C.), Chrestomathia Hebraica, 88.

Linde (J. G.), Sapientia Jesu filii Sirachi, 63.

Lindsay (H.), Lectures on Hist. Books, 142.

Lipsius (C. H. A.), De Modorum Usu, 91.

Llewellyn (Thomas), Account of Welsh Versions of the Bible, 85

Locke (John), Common-place Book to the Bible, 155.

Paraphrase, &c. on the Epistles, 134.

Loescher (V. A.), Breviarium Theologiæ Exegeticæ, 98.

Loesneri (C. J.), Observationes in Nov. Test. e Philane, 103.

Longchamps (B. de), Fastis Universels, 164.

Longhurst (S.), Common-place Book to New Test., 150.

Lothian (W.), Leet. on Ep. to Corinthians. 145

Lower Saxon Bible, 43.

Lowman (M.), Paraphrase on the Revelation, 140.

— Civil Government of Hebrews, 160.

Lowth (Bishop), Translation of Isaiah, 122, 123.

— De Sacra Poesi Hebræorum, 76.

Luderi (C.), Dissertatio de Variis Lectionibus, 78.

Ludolphi (J.), Grammatica et Lexicon Linguæ Amharicæ vel Æthiopiæ, 97.

Lumsden (M.), Persian Grammar, 97.

Luther (Martin), Bible, 43.

— Commentaries, 107.

— On the Psalms of Degrees, 107.

On the Epistle to the Galatians, 137.

Lydii (J.), Syntagma de Re Militari, 160.

Lye (Ed.), Versio Gothica Evangeliorum, 28.

Lyons (Israel), Hebrew Grammar, 86.

Lysons (S.), Conjectures on Job, 118.

Lyra (Nicolai de), Commentarii, 105. 103. MAGREAN (A.), Dict. of Bible, 155.

Mac Corkle (W. and others), Collateral Bible, 40

Maccallock (R.), Lectures on Isaiah, 143.

Mac Ewen (W.), on the Types, 99.

M Kensie (M. J.), Lectures on Parables and Miracles, 146.

Macknight (J.), Harmony of the Gospels, 60, 131.

Translation of the Episites, 134.

Maclean (A.), Commentary on the Episite to the Hebrews, 138.

M Rac (D.), Revised Translation of the Bible, 134.

Maclean (A.), Commentary on the Episite to the Hebrews, 138.

M Rac (D.), Revised Translation of the Bible, 149.

Macit (Ang.), Uphile Part. Inedit., 28.

Mail (Ang.), Uphile Part. Inedit., 28.

Mail (Ang.), Exposition of Romans VIII. 145.

Major (J. R.), Gospel of Luke, with Notes, 132.

Mailand (C. D.), Exposition of Romans VIII. 145.

Mailand (C. D.), Exposition of Romans VIII. 145.

Malagasset Version, 56.

Malagasian Gospels, 50.

Maladvaian J.S., Scripture Gazetteer, 158.

Mant (R.), Comm. in Hoseann, 126.

Mans (R.), and Doyley (G.), Commentary on the Bible, 113.

— Version of Falins, 120.

Manton (Tho.), Comment on Jude, 140.

— On Psalm CXIX., 143.

Marbeek (John), Concordance, 153.

Marchant (J.), Exposit of Old Test, 115.

— Comm. in Cans. Schelomonis, 121.

— Commentarius in Prophetas Minores, 125.

Mardvan (G. S.), Observationes Sacres, 160.

Mariana (J.), Scholia in V. et N. Test, 106.

Mariana (J.), Scholia in V. et N. Test, 106.

Mariana (J.), Scholia in V. et N. Test, 106.

Mariana (J.), Scholia in V. et N. Test, 106.

Mariana (J.), Comm. in Psalmos, 118.

Marks (R.), Devotional Testament, 130.

— Cho.), Comment on Jude, 140.

— On 1 John v. 7., 81.

— Exposit on Nuclean Schola Minores, 125.

Marchant (J.), Comm. in Psalmos, 118.

Marks (R.), Devotional Testament, 130.

Marlock (J.), Comment in Vet N. Test, 106.

Marian (M.), Comm. in Psalmos, 118.

Marks (R.), Devotional Testament, 148.

Mathew (J. P.), Comme

Mede (J.), Clavis Apocalyptica, and translations thereof, 140.
Meijier (A. C.), De Lucæ ἀξισπιστία, 133.
Meisner (C. P.), De Νομφ Paulino, 150.
Meisner (J. H.), Vet. Test. Clavis, 91.
Mendham (Jos.), Clavis Apostolica, 135.
Merceri (J.), Comment. in Genesin, 115.
— Comment in Quinque Vates Priores, 103.
— Commentarii in Quinque Minores Prophetas, 125.
Merrell (S.), Harmony of the Kings and Prophets, 59.
Merrick (J.), Annot. on the Psalms, 119.
Meuschenius (J. G.), Novum Testamentum ex Talmude illustratum 103. Meuschemius (J. G.), Novum Testamentum ex Talmude illustratum 103.

Mexican and Mixtecan Version, 57.

Michaelis (C. B.), Tractato de Var. Lect. Nov. Test., 78.

Syriasmus, 95.

Michaelis (J. D.), Curæ in Vers. Syriac. Act. Apost., 25. 83.

Spicilegium Geographiæ Hebræorum, 157.

Harmony of the Resurrection, 62.

Diss. on 1 John v. 7., 81.

Introduction to the New Testament, 71.

Comment. on the Law of Moses, 160.

Observat. in Jeromiæ Vaticinia, 123, 124.

Commentationes, 150.

Epistolæ de LXX. Hebdomadibus Danielis, 124.

Grammatica Chaldaica, 89.

Grammatica Syriaca, 95.

(J. G.), Observationes Sacræ, 150.

Exercitationes, 150.

(J. H. and C. B.), Notæ in Hagiographa, 116, 117.

Middledorpf (H.), Curæ in Jobum, 25. 118.

Codex Syriaco-Hexaplaris, 26.

Middleton (T. F.), On the Greek Article, 92.

On 1 John v. 7., 81.

Mimpriss (R.), Harmony of Gospels, 61.

— Pictorial Chart, 158.

Mingarelli (J. A.), Ægyptiorum Codicum Reliquiæ. See Part I., 105.

Misschna, 102. Mingarelli (J. A.), Agyphoram 105.

Mischna, 102.
Mohawk Version, 57.
Mohegan Version, 57.
Moldenhawer (J. H. D.), Introductio in Libros Canonicos Vet. et Nov-Federis, 70.
Molkenbuhr (M. E.), Problema Criticum, 74.
Moncrieff (J.), on Heb. Vowel Points, 85.
Monsperger (Jos. Jul.), Institutiones Hermeneuticæ Vet. Test., 98.
Montali (J.), Lexicon Hebraicum, 89.
Montani (B. A.), Biblia Latina, 31.
Morah (A.), De Judæorum Christologia, 150.
Mori (S. F. N.), Prælectiones in Lucæ Evangelium, 132.
— In Evangelium Joannis, 133.
— Versio, &c. Act. Apostolorum, 133.
— Prælect. in Epist. ad Romanos, 136.
— Acroases in Epist. ad Gal. et Ephes., 137.
— Prælect. in Jacobi et Petri Epist., 139.
— Prælect. in tres Joannis Epist., 139.
— Prælect. in tres Joannis Epist., 139.
— Prælect. in tres Joannis Epist., 139.
— Dissertationes Theologicæ, 150.
Morini (J.), Exercitationes, Biblicæ, 74.
— Evarcitationes Ecclesiasticæ, 74. — Acroases, 97.

— Dissertationes Theologicæ, 150.

Morini (J.), Exercitationes, Biblicæ, 74.

— Exercitationes Ecclesiasticæ, 74.

Morini (Steph.), Oratio Inauguralis, 94.

Morison (J.), Exposition of Psalms, 143.

Moser (P. U.), Lexicon Hebraicum, 90.

Mosheim (Dr.), Commentaries on the Affairs of Christians, 164.

Moulinie (C. E. F.), Notice sur les Livres Apocryphes, 71.

Moysey (C. A.), Lectures on John, 144.

— On the Romans, 144.

Mudge (T.), Version of the Psalms, 118.

Muccke (S. T.), De Origine Versionis LXX. Interpretum, 83.

Muir (W.), Disc. on Epist. of Jude, 145.

Muis (S. de), Assertio Veritatis Hebr., 74.

Muller (J.), Hebr. Ling. Elementa, 88.

Munsteri (Sol.), Biblia Latina, 31.

Miinter (Frid.), De Indole Vers. N. T. Sahidicæ, 26. 83.

— Fragmenta Versionis Ante-Hieronymianæ, 27.

— Notitia Codicis Evang. Johannis, 77.

— Symbolæ ad Interpretat. Joannis, 133.

Miscell. Hafniensia, 150.

Munthii (C. F.), Observationes Philologicæ, 150.

Munthii (C. F.), Observationes Philologicæ, 150.

Muntinghe (H.) Sylloge Opusculorum, 150.

— Expositio Critices Vet. Fæd., 74.

Murray (R.), Introd. to Apocalypse, 142.

Murseum Helveticum, 147.

— Historico-Theologicum, 146. NARES (Robert), Veracity of the Evangelists, 74.

On Prophecy, 101.

Nary (C.), New Testament, 42.

Neale (James), Hosea, 126.

Negro-English Version, 57.

Newcome (Archbp.), Version of Ezekiel, 124.

Version of Minor Prophets, 125.

Translation of the New Testament, 129.

History of English Biblical Translations, 84.

Newcome (Archbp.), Greek Harmony on the Gospels, 60.

Newman (S.), Hebrew Grammar, 87.

Newton (Bp.), On Prophecy, 100.

Newton (Bp.), On Prophecy, 100.

Newton (Sir I.), Observations on Daniel, &c., 124.

Two Letters to Le Clerc, 80, 81.

Newton (J. W.), Hebrew Grammar, 88.

Nicholson (Bp.), David's Harp, 117.

Nicolson (Bp.), David's Harp, 117.

Nicolson (J.), De Substratione Vestium, 161.

Niemeyeri (A. H.), De Evangelistarum Dissensione, &c., 150.

Noble (J.), Rudiments of Hebrew, 89.

Notic (C.), Bibliothèque Sacrée, 6.

Noesselti (J.), Opuscula, 150.

Nolan (F.), Inquiry into the Integrity of the Greek Vulgate, and Supplement, 74.

On 1 John v. 7., 81.

Hebrew Grammar, 89.

Chaldee Grammar, 89.

Chaldee Grammar, 89. Observationes Philologicæ, 158.
Ockleii (Sim.), Introd. ad Ling. Orientales, 94.
Occumenii Commentaria, 105.
Ocder (G. L.), Observationes Sacræ, 150.
Olearii (G.), Observationes Sacræ, 150.
Oliver (P.), Scripture Lexicon, 155.
Oliver (P.), Scripture Lexicon, 155.
Oliverat (A.), Analysis of the Hist of Joseph, 86.
Onkeli vel Onkelosi Paraphrasis Chaldaica, 22.
Oriental Versions, Specemens of, 52—55.
Origens Hexapla, a Moutfaucon, 25.
— a Bahrdt, 25.
— baniel ex Tetraplis Origenis, 25.
— Comment in Scripturas, 104.
Orissa Version of the Bible, 49.
Orme (W.), Bibliotheca Biblica, 6.
— On the Controversy respecting 1 John v. 7., 82.
Orton (Job), Exposition of Old Test, 115.
Osiandri (Andrew), Harmoniæ Evangeliæe, 59. OBSERVATIONES Philologicæ, 158. Syriac Grammar, 95. (Chr.), Concordantiæ Particularum Ebræo-Chaldaicarum, 153 153.
Hist. Idumæa, 164.
Nonni, Metaphrasis Evang. Johannei, 104.
Norris (J.), Disc. on Beatitudes, 145.
Nourse (J.), New Test. translated, 130.
Novum TESTAMENTUM GRÆCUM.
Editionum Synopsis, 9.
Erasmi, 9, 10.
Cumpluti, 10. Colinæi, 10. Collatio Codicis Cottoniani, 79. Stephani, 10. Bezæ, 10. Elzevirii, 10, 11. Curcellæi, 11.
Waltoni, 11.
Felli, 11.
Milli, 11.
Wells, 11. Maestricht, 11, 12. Mace, 12. Bengelii, 12. Wetstenii, 12 Goldhagen, 12 Schoettgenii, 12. - Schoeugenn, 1 - Bowyer, 12. - Matthæi, 13. - Harwood, 13 - Woidii, 13. - Alteri, 13. - Birchii, 13, 14. Gwisshachii, 14 - Griesbachii, 14, 15. - Griesbachii et Schulzu, 15. - ex Griesbachii Recensione, 15. Knappii, 16. Reeves, 16. Schotti, 16. White, 16. Dakins, 16. Dakins, 16. Upsalæ, 16. Titmanni, 16. Hardy, 127. Koppe, 127, 128. Manuale, 16. Vater, 16, 17. Boissonnade, 17. Gratz. 16. Gratz, 16. Basileæ, 17. Van Ess, 17 Lloydii, 17. Leutsch, 17. Pickering, 17. Greenfield, 17. Duncan, 17. Scholzii, 18. Lachmanni, 18. Valpy, 18. Burton, 18, 19. Bloomfield, 19. Jaumann, 19. — Goeschep, 19.
— Goeschep, 19.
— Novi Testamenti Biblia Triglotta, 21, 22.
— Evangeliorum Synopsis, 60.
Novi Testamenti Versiones Latinæ.
— Erasmi, 32.
— Bezæ, 32.
— Iaspis, 32.
— Reichardi, 32.
— Sebastimi, 32. Reichardt, 32.
Sebastiani, 32.
Thalemanni, 32.
Noyes (G. R.), Version of Job, 118. of the Prophets, 120.
of the Prophets, 122.
Nugæ Hebraicæ, 86.
Vol. II.—App. 4 P

Orton (Job), Exposition of Old Test., 115.

Osiandri (Andrew), Harmoniæ Evangelicæ, 59.

— (J. A.), Oratio et Disputatio de Variis Lectionibus Nov Test., 78.

Ostervald (M.), La Sainte Bible, 108

Otti (J. B.), Spicilegium, 103.

Outlines of Persian Grammar, 97.

Overton (John), On Book of Enoch, 69.

— Chronology of Apocalypse, 141.

Owen (Dr. Henry), Modes of Quotation, 77.

— Present State of the Septuagint Version, 83.

— Brief Account of the Septuagint, 83.

— Critica Sacra, 74.

— Collatio Colicies Cottoniani, 79. Owen (Dr. John), Exposition of the Epistle to the Hebrews, 138.

On Psalm CXXX., 143.

Oxlee (J.), Letters to Nolan, 81.

Letters to Bp. Burgess, 82. PAGNINI (S.), Vet. et Nov. Test. Lat., 31.

Paleoropacica, 74, 75.

Palairet (E.), Observationes Philologico-criticœ in Nov. Test., 150.

Palestine, Historical Map of, 158.

Paley (W.), Hore Paulinie, 68.

Patlyrey (J. G.), New Test. conformed to Griesbach's Gr. Text, 15.

Palmer (R.), Map of Palestine, 158.

Pappelbaum (G. G.), De Cod. Ravian., 77.

Pappelbaum (G. T.), De Cod. MSS. Berolin., 78.

Pareau (J. H.), Threni Jeremiæ, 124.

— Antiquitas Hebraica, 156.

— Inst. Interp. Vet. Test., 98.

— De Mythica Interpr., 98.

T. — Comm. in I Cor. XIII., 137.

Parish (Elijah), Sacred Geography, 157, 158.

Park (J. R.), Exposition of the Apocalypae, 141.

— Controversy with a Jewish Rabbi, 126.

Parker (Abp. Maithew), Anglo-Saxon Gospels, 29.

— Holie Bible, 36.

Parkhurst (Rev. John), Hebrew and Chaldee Grammar, 88, 89.

— Hebrew and Chaldee Lexicon, 91.

— Greek Grammar to New Test., 91.

— Greek Grammar to New Test., 91.

— Greek and English Lexicon to the New Testament, 93.

Parry (R.), On the Epistle to the Romans, 145.

Parry (R.), On the Epistle to the Romans, 145.

Parry (R.), Legislation des Hebreux, 160.

Patrick (Bishop), Lowth, &c. Commentary on the Bible, 110.

Patton (W.), Village Testament, 77.

Pastoret (Conte de), Legislation des Hebreux, 160.

Patrick (Bishop), Lowth, &c. Commentary on the Bible, 110.

Patton (W.), Village Testament, 121.

Paul (St.), Ep. to Romans, &c., Paraphrase on, 134.

Paulus (H. E. G.), Specimina Vers. Arab., 26.

Parton (G.), Illustrations of Scripture, 162.

Pearce (Bishop), Commentary on the Four Evangelists, &c., 131.

Pearson (E.), On Prophecy, 101.

Pearson (E.), On Sinceral and Mosaic Geologies, 159

Penn (Gr.), On Mineral and Mosaic Geologies, 159

Persuc Version of the Old and New Testamen Pfeifferi (Aug.), Opera Omnia, 150.

Pfeifferi (J. E.), Institutiones Hermeneuticæ Sacræ, 98.

Pflacheri (M. P.), Analysis Vet. et Nov. Test., 156.

Phariz (J.), On 1 John v. 7., 81.

Phitalethes, Translation of certain Epistles by, 120.

Philips (W. T.), Hebrew Grammar, 87.

Philips (J.), On the Epistle to the Thessalonians, 138.

Philouis Judai Opera, 101, 102.

Philoxenian-Syriac Version, 26.

Pick (A.), Translation of the Minor Prophets, 125.

Picquigny (B. de), Explication des Epitres, 134.

Pilkington (Matthew), Evangelical History, 60.

Remarks on Scripture, 150.

Pilkington (James), On Haggai, 126.

Piscator (J.), Swiss Bible, 44.

Pitman (J. R.), Lectures on John, 144.

Planck (H.), Vera Natura Nov. Test., &c., 91.

Platt (T. P.), Catalogue of Ethiopic Biblical MSS., 78.

Evangelia Æthiopice, 27.

On Literal Interp. of Scripture, 98.

Platts (John), Self-interpreting Test., 40.

Plumptre (J.), Comment. on Bible, 142.

Pliischke (J. T.), De Radicum Linguæ Hebraicæ Naturå, 87.

Pococke (Dr.), Comment. on Joel, &c., 125.

Poli (Matthæi), Synopsis Crit. Sacr., 108.

Polish Bible, 46.

Polyglotts. See Biblia Polyglotta.

Pontexi (Joannis), Sacra Scriptura ubique sibi constans, 146.

Poole (M.), Annotations on Bible, 110.

Popham (E.), Illustrations of the Pentateuch, 150.

Porson (R.), Letters to Travis, 81.

Porteus (Bp.), Lect. on St. Matthew, 144.

Portuguese Versions of the Bible, 47.

Podten (J.), Sylloge Commentationum, 147.

Pradi (H.), et Villalpandi, (J. B.), Explanationes in Ezechielem, 124.

Prada (R. de), et aliorum Observationes ad Nov. Test., 150.

Primati (W.), Diss. on 2 Pet. i., 139.

Pritii (G.), Introductio ad Lectionem Novi Testaments, 164.

Prisatey (Dr. Jos.), Greek and English Harmony of the Evange lists, 60.

Notes on the Scriptures, 112, 113.

Privatii (G.), Introductio ad Lectionem Novi Testaments, 71. lists, 60.

Notes on the Scriptures, 112, 113.

Primatt (W.), Diss. on 2 Pet. i., 139.

Pritti (G.), Introductio ad Lectionem Novi Testamenti, 71.

Prunelle (M.), Prophéties d'Isaie, 123.

Psalms, Book of, with Arguments, 118.

Literal Translation of, 120.

Practical Illustration of, 120.

XCI., Sermons on, 143.

Pseudo-Jonalhanis Targum, 22.

Purmann (J. J.), Archæologia Georgica, 161.

Purver (A.), Translation of Bible, 111.

Pushtoo Version of Bible, 49.

Pyle (T.), Paraphrase on Old Test., 115.

Paraphrase on Revelation, 140. RAINOLDI (J.), Censura Apocr. Librorum, 69.

Rambachii (J. J.), Notæ in Hagiographa, 116, 117.

— Introductio in Epist. ad Romanos, 135.

— Institutiones Hermeneuticæ Sacræ, 99.

De Sensu Mystico, 99.

Rambonnet (J. J.), De 2 Johan. Epist., 140.

Randolph (Thomas), The Prophecies eited in the New Testament, Randolph (Thomas), The Prophecies cited in the New Testament 77.

Raphelii (G.), Annotationes in Scripturam Sacram, 150.

Ravii (S. E.), Exercitationes in Hubigantii Prolegomena, 70.

Reays (S.), Narratio de Josepho, 88.

Rechenbergii (Adami), De Variantibus Nov. Test. Lectionibus 78.

Reeves (John), Editions of the Bible, 107.

Reformer's Bible, 109.

Reichardi (H. G.), Novum Testamentum Latinè, 32.

Reineccii (Christ), Janua Hebrææ Linguæ, 87.

Lexicon Heb. Chald., 91.

Reinecki (C. F. C.), De Christi Indole, 150.

Reinhardi (F. V.), De Versione Alexandrina, 83.

Opuscula Academica, 150.

Reiske (J. J.), Conjecturæ in Jobum, &c., 117. 121.

Relandi (H.), Antiquit. Hebræorum, 157.

Palestina, 157.

De Spoliis Templi Hierosol., 158.

De Nummis Vet. Hebr., 160.

Reitberg (F. W.), De Scriptis Johannis, 150.

Reynolds (Bp. Ed.), On Ecclesiastes, 121.

Rhemish Testament, 41.

Richards (G.), On Prophecy, 100.

Richardson (John), Arabic Grammar, 95.

```
Richardson (John), Persian, Arabie, and English Dictionary, 97.
Richter (J. G.), De Critica Scripture Interprete, 78.
Ridley (Glouc.), De Syriacarum Nov. Test. Versionum Indole, 83.
Riggs (E.), Manual of the Chaldee Language, 89.
Rillet (A.), Sur le Texte Grec des Evangélistes, 75.
Rink (G. F.), Lucubratio critica, 80.
Ritchie (D.), Lectures on Romans, 145.
Rittershusii (C.), As Fatidicus, 125.
Roberts (P.), Clavis Bibliorum, 70.
Roberts (P.), Harmony of the Epistles, 62. 135.
—— Manual of Prophecy, 100.
Roberts (W. H.), Corrections of the English Version of the Old Testament, 70. 150.
Robertson (J.), Clavis Pentateuchi, 91.
—— Grammatica Hebrea, 87.
—— Translation of Bengel on the Apocalypse, 140
Robinson (H.), Acta Apostolorum, 133, 134.
Robinson (Th.), Theological and Biblical Dictionary, 155.
Robinson (Th.), Script Characters, 165.
Robinson (Th.), Greek and English Lexicon to New Testament, 93.
—— Dictionaries of the Bible, 154.
—— Biblical Repertory, 147.
Rodd (Thos.), Defence of Moses, 116.
Roediger (Æm.), Synopsis Evangeliorum, 61.
—— De Versione Arabica, 83.
Rolloci (R.), Comm. in Daniel, 124.
Romače Version of the Bible, 47.
Romanese Version of the Bible, 47.
Romodet (L. E.), Bible, avec des Notes, 108.
Rosenmülleri (E. F. C.), Vocabularium Vet. Test. 90.
—— Institutiones Linguæ Arabicæ, 96.
—— Scholia in Vetus Testamentum, 106.
—— Scholia in Vetus Testamentum, 106.
—— Scholia in Vetus Testamentum, 107.
—— Commentationes Theologicæ, 147.
—— De Versione Pentateuchi Persica, 83.
Rosenmülleri (J. G.), Scholia in Novum Testamentum, 107.
—— Hist. Interpretationes, 97.
Rossi. Vide De Rossi.
Rosenmülleri (J. G.), Scholia in Novum Testamentum, 107.
—— Hist. Interpretationes, 97.
Rudelbach (S.), de Typis, 99.
Rudge (J.), Lectures on Genesis, 143.
                  137.

Rudelbach (S.), de Typis, 99.

Rudge (J.), Lectures on Genesis, 143.

Ruhlii (C.), Epist. tres Joannis, 139.

Rus (J. R.), Harmonia, 59, 60.

Russell (Alex.), Connection of Sacred and Profane History, 164.

Russian Versions of the Bible, 46.

Ryan (R.), Analysis of Ward's Errata, 84.
         SABATIER (P.), Versiones Antiquæ Latinæ, 27.

Sacy (S. de), Grammaire Arabe, 95, 96.

Mém. sur les Samaritains, 161.

Sahidic Version of the Bible, 26.

Salgues (J. B.), Littérature des Hébreux, 74.

Salthenii (D.), Hist. Canonis, 69.

Salvador (J.), Institutiones de Moyse, 160.

Sampson (G. V.), Translation of Ep. to the Hebrews, 139.

Sanscrit Version of Bible, 49.

Sanfil (P. C.), De MS. Evangeliorum, 78.

Sarchi (P.), On Hebrew Poetry, 76.

Grammaire Hébraique, 88.

Sauberti (J.), Var. Lect. Evang. Matthæi, 79.

Saurin (M.), Discours Historiques, 151.

Discourses translated, 151.

Saxon Version of the Bible, 43.

Scarlztt (N.), New Test. translated, 129.

Schaaft (J. H.), Animadversiones ad Ikenii Antiq. Hebr., 157.

Schaeft (J. H.), Animadversiones and Ikenii Antiq. Hebr., 157.

Schaefer (J. N.), Institutiones Scripturisticæ, 75.

Scharpii (Joannis), Symphonia Prophetarum, 146.

Scheffer (G.), De Usu Philonis, 98.

Scheibel (J. E.), Codex Rehdigerianus, 27.

Scheidii (E.), Lexicon Hebraicum, 90.

Dissert Philol., 151.

Scheidii (J.), Glossarium Arab. Lat., 96.

Diss. ad Esaiam, 123.

Schelling (J. F.), Salomonis quæ supersunt, 120.

Animadversiones in Esaiam, 123.

Scheuchzer (J.), Physica Sacra, 158.

Schimmelpenninck (M. A.), Biblical Fragments, 151.

— On the Psalms, 120.

Schimderi (V.), Lexicon Pentaglotton, 95.

Schimderi (V.), Lexicon Pentaglotton, 95.

Schimder (V.), Lexicon Pentaglotton, 95.

Schimder (V.), Lexicon Pentaglotton, 95.

Schiemer (A. G. F.), Observat. in Esdram, 117.

Schleiermacher (F.), Essay on Gospel of St. Luke, 132.

— Pauli Epist. ad Thess., 138.

Schleusner (J. F.), Novum Lexicon in N. T., 92.
```

```
Schleusner (J. F.), Lexici Compend. a Jo. Carey, 92.

Lexici in Interp. Grace. Spicilegium, 94.

Lexicon in Vetus Testamentum Gracum, 94.

Opuscula Critica, 83. 151.

Comment. in Proverb. Salomonis, 121.

Schmeller (J. A.), Versio Francica Matthae, 28.

Schmidti (C. F.), Historia et Vindicato Canonis Novi Testamenti, 69.

    Simon (Père), Histoire Critique des Principaux Commentaires du Nouveau Testament, 97.
    —— Critique de 1 Jean V. 7., 80.
    —— Dissertations sur le Texte et Versions du Nouveau Testament, 75.

Simonis (J.), Lexicon Hebraicum, 90.

Analysis Lectionum Masorethicarum, 75.

Simpson (D.), Key to Prophecy, 100.

Sixti V. Biblia Latina, 28.

Slade (J.), Explanation of Psalms, 120.

Annotations on the Epistles, 135.

Sloss (J.), Doctrine of the Trinity, 81.

Smalley (Ed., On Genesis, 115, 116.

Smith (Miss E.), Translation of Job, 118.

Smith (Dr. J.), View of the Prophets, 122.

Smith (Dr. J.), View of the Prophets, 122.

Smith (Tho.), Diss. de 1 Jo. v. 7., et Defensio ejusdem, 81.

In 2 Pet. Commentarius, 139.

Smyth (A.), Explanation of Apocalypse, 142.

Samman Version of the New Test, 120.

Spanhemii (Fr.), Geographia Sacra, 157.

Ecclesiastical Annals, 164.

Historia Jobi, 117.

Spanish Versions of the Bible, 45, 46.

Speed (John), Script Genealogies, 163.
                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 ment, 75.
      Schmidti (C. F.), Filstoria et Vinderato Canonis Novi Festamenti, Annot in Epist ad Romanos, 136.
Schmidti (Erasmi), Concordantia Greca: Novi Testamenti, 153.
Schmidti (L. G.), Pauli Epistola ad Philemon, 137.
Schmidti (Sebastian), Commentarii, 108.
Biblia Sacra, 32.
    Schnucker (G.), Revelation explained, 141.

Schnurrer (C. F.), Dissert. Philol., 151.

Schoder (F. J.), Hierozoici Specimina, 159.

Schoetgenii (C.), Hore Hebr. et Talinnd. in Nov. Test., 103.

Lexicon Gr. Lat. in Novum Testamentum, 92.

Scholefield (James), An improved Translation of the New Test., 84.

Scholer (W.) de Parabolis, 100.

Scholtz (Christ.), Grammatica Ægyptiaca et Lexicon Ægyptiaco-Latinum, 96.

Scholz (J. M. A.), Curze Criticze in Historiam Textûs Evangelio.
      Scholz (J. M. A.), Curæ Criticæ in Historiam Textûs Evangelio-rum, 78.
                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   Ecclesiastical Annals, 164.

Jeanish Versions of the Bible, 45, 46.

Speed (John), Script. Genealogies, 163.

Spelman (Joh.), Psalterium Latino-Saxonicum, 29.

Spenceri (J.), de Legibus Hebresorum, 160.

Spitzner (A. B.), Vindiciæ Punctorum Vocalium, 75. 85.

Comment. de Parenthesi, 75.

Spohn (G. G.), Jeremias Vates illustratus, 124.

Spohn (F. A. G.), De Lingua Ægyptiaca, 96.

Spurstowe (W.), On the Promises of Scripture, 100

Stack (Dr.), Lectures on the Acts, 144.

On the Romans, 144.

On the Romans, 144.

It (T.), Medica Sacra, 161.

Stackhouse (Thomas), History of the Bible, 164.

Stalter (J. E.), Lexicon Heb. Lat., 91.

Stahelin (J. J.), In Gen. XLIX., 116.

Stange (J. F.), Anticritica in Psalmos, 119.

Stantoge (G.), On the Epistles and Gospels, 145

Starckii (J. F.), Comm. in Ezechielem, 124.

Starkin (T.), Map of Palestine, 158.

Stehelin (Peter), Traditions of Jews, 161.

Stein (C. G.), Authentia Evang. Joannis, 132.

Stephani (Henrici) Concordantiæ Novi Testamenti, 153.

(Roberti), Novum Testamentum, 10.

Stevens (Mrs.), Devotional Comments, 114.

Stevenson (R.), Scripture Portraits, 165.

Stickel (J. G.,) Comm. in Job. XIX., 118.

Interpretation Hebacuci, 126.

Stock (Bishop), Translation of Job, 117.

Translation of Isaiah, 123.

Stock (B.), Comment on Malsechi, 126.

Stock (G.), Other Minor Prophets, 125.

Stonard (J.), Diss. on Seventy Weeks, 125.

Comm. on Zechariah, 126.

Storr (G. C.), Observationes ad Ling. Hebr., 87.

Interpre Epistolarum Pauli, 135.

De Cetholicie Epistolici Ling.

    Biblische Kritische Reise, 78.

    Biblische Kritische Reise, 78.

Novum Testamentum, 18.

Schotani (M. H.), Comm. in Epist. ad Philippenses, 137.

Schott (H. A.), Libri Sacri Vet. Fæd. Latine translati, 32. 109.

Isagoge ad Novum Fædus, 72.

Comment. in Epistolas, 135.

De Authentia Evang. Joannis, 133.

Observationes in 1 Cor. XIII., 137.

Opuscula Expertica 151
— Observationes in 1 Cor. XIII., 137.

Opuscula Exegetica, 151.

Novum Testamentum, 16.

Schotti (A.), Adagialia Sacra, 100.
Schreekenburger (M.), Annot. ad Ep. Jacobi, 139.
Schroeder (N. G.), Institutiones Linguæ Hebrææ, 87.

De Vestitu Mul. Heb., 123.

Schultens (A.), Commentarius in Jobum, 117.

Proverbia Salomonis, 120.

Institutiones Linguæ Hebrææ, 87.

Animadversiones ad Vet. Test., 151.

Schultesii (J.), De Charismatibus Spiritus Sancti, 151.

Schultz (A. H. A.), De Parabolis, 100.

Schulz (D.), De Cod. IV. Evangeliorum, 78.

Schulzii (E. A.), Archæologia Hebraica, 157.

Schulzii (J. C. F.), Scholia in Vet. Test., 106.

Lexicon Hebraicum, 89.

Scientia Biblica, 40.
Lexicon Hebraicum, 89.

Scientia Biblica, 40.

Sclater (W.), Comment. on Malachi, 126.

Sclatovnic Version of the Bible, 29.

Scott (D.), Version of Matthew's Gospel, 132.

Scott (T.), Translation of Job, 117.

Scott (Tho.), Collation of Quotations from the Old Testament, 77.

— Commentary on the Bible, 111, 112.

Scripture Atlas, 158.

Scripture Genealogy, 163.

Scripture Genealogy, 163.

Scripture Harmony, 154.

Scripture; Genealogy, 163.

Scripture, on the Circulation of, 29.

Sculteti (Abr.), in Epist. ad Timotheum, &c., 138.

Seager (C.), Hebrew Lexicon, 90.

Scbastiani (L.), Novum Test., 32.

Seelen (J. H.), Meditationes Exegetice, 151.

Seemiller (S.), De MS. IV. Evang., 78.

— Hermeneutica Sacra, 99.

Segaar (C.), Observationes in Lucam, 151.

Seiler (G. F.), Sacred Hermeneutics, 99.

Seilas (J.), Hebrew Grammar, 87.

Seldeni (Jo.), De Synedriis Vet. Ebr., 160.

— De Diis Syris, 161.

Semleri (J. S.), Paraphrasis Evangelii Joannis, 133.

— Paraphr. Epist. ad Romanos, 135, 136.

— Apparatus ad Interpretationem Veteris Testamenti, 99.
        Scientia Biblica, 40.
                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      Comm. on Zechariah, 126.

Storr (G. C.), Observationes ad Ling, Hebr., 87.

Interpr. Epistolarum Pauli, 135.

De Catholicis Epistolis, 139.

Dissertationes ad Nov. Test., 151.

Opuscula Academica, 151.

Stosch (E. H. D.), De Canone Novi Testamenti, 69.

Stosch (F.), De Epistolis Apostolorum, 69.

De Canone Novi Testamenti, 69.

Archæologia Nov. Test., 158.

Dissert de Septem Asiæ Ecclesiis, 158.

Stowe (C. E.), Translation of Lowth on Hebrew Poetry, 76.

Straat (Wm.), Dividing of the Hooff, 146.

Street (S.), Version of Psalms, 119.

Stresonis (C.), Comm. in Act. Apost., 133.

Strigelii (Victorini), Argumenta et Scholia in XII Minores Prophetas, 125.
  De Dis Syris, 161.

Semleri J. S.), Paraphrasis Evangelii Joannis, 133.

— Paraphr. Epist. ad Romanos, 135, 136.

— Apparatus ad Interpretationem Veteris Testamenti. 99.

— Apparatus ad Interpretationem Novi Testamenti 99.

— Vindiciæ Var. Lect. Nov. Test., 81.

Septuagint Version, editions of. See Biblia Græca.

Serbian Bible, 47.

Serieys (Ant.), Dict. de l'Ecriture, 155.

Serrarii (Nic. et aliorum), Syntagma de Judæorum Sectis, 161.

Seuffarth (F. A.), De Epistolæ ad Hebræos Indole, 139.

Sharp Granville), On Hebræw Syntax, 89.

— On the Greek Article, 91.

Shaw (D.), Philosophy of Judaism, 157.

Shepherd (R.), Notes on the Gospel of John, 133.

Sherife (Mrs.), On the Psalms, 110.

Sherlock (Bp. Tho.), Use of Prophecy, 100.

Scuckford (Dr.), Connection of Sacred and Profane History, 164.

Shuttleworth (Dr. P. N.), Transl. of Apostolical Epistles, 135.

Sigonii (C.), Republica Hebræorum, 157.

Simon (C.), Horæ Homileticæ, 142.

Simon (Père), Histoire Critique du Vieux et Nouveau Testament, 75.

— Histoire Critique du Texte et des Versions du Nouveau Testament, 75.
                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               tas, 125.
                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        tas, 125.

"Yronunhara in Nov. Test., 127.

Stronck (C. W.), De Doctrina Johannis, 132.

Strutt (Joseph), Common-place Book to the Bible, 156.

Stuart (Moses), Hebrew Grammar, 86.

Heb. Chrestomathy and Course of Hebrew Study, 86.

Comment. on Ep. to Romans, 136.

Comment. on Ep. to Hebrews, 138, 139.

Dissertations on the best Mode of studying the Original Languages of the Bible, 85.
                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   Dissertations on the best Mode of studying Languages of the Bible, 85.

Elements of Interpretation, 98.

Stuck (M. C. J.), Hoseas Propheta, 126.

Suiceri (J. C.), Thesaurus Ecclesiasticus, 155.

Suidae et Phavorini Glossæ Sacræ, ab Ernesti, 92.

Sumner (Bp. J.), On Apostolical Preaching, 135.

Lectures on Matthew, Mark, and Luke, 144

Surenhusii (Guil.), Βιβλος Καταλλαγης, 76.

Michna, 102.

Surigar (F. G. N.), In Matt. XXII. 37—40., 132.

Susoo Version, 56.
```

```
Svanborg (A.), Joel, Latine versus, 126.
Swedish Bible, 44.
     Sweatsn Bible, 44.

Sykes (Dr.), Paraphrase, &c. on the Epistle to the Hebrews, 138.

Symonds (Dr.), Observations on revising the English Version of the Four Gospels and Epistles, 84.

Synge (—), Introd. to Hebrew Language, 87.

Syriac Versions of the Bible, 25, 26.
Leonis Judæ, 31.
                             Castalionis, 31.
Junii et Tremellii, 31, 32.
Schmidtii, 32.
                              Dathii, 32.
    Dathil, 52.
Schotti et Winzeri, 32.
Vulgatæ Versionis, Editiones variæ, 27, 28.
Teuberi (C. A.), De Utilitate Ling, Anglic., 85.
Thaddæi (J.), Conciliatorium Biblicum, 146.
Thalemanni (C. G.), Versio IV Evangeliorum et Act. Apostolo-
     rum, 32.

Theile (C. G. A.), Commentarius in Epist. Jacobi, 139.

Theiner (G. A.), Descriptio Codicis Pentateuchi Arabici, 78.

Theodoreti Commentarii, 104.
Theile (C. G. G.), Commentarius in Epist. Jacobi, 139.
Theiner (G. A.), Descriptio Codicis Pentateuchi Arabici, 78.
Theodoreti Commentarii, 104.
Theophylacti Commentarii, 105.
Thilo (J. C.), Acta S. Thomæ, 67.
— Codex Apocryphus N. T., 67.
Tholuck (F. A. G.), Exposition of the Ep. to the Romans, 136.
Thompson (J. S.), Monotessaron, 61.
Thompson (H.), Davidica, 143.
— Lectures on Acts, 144.
Thomson (Charles), Translation of the Bible, 113, 114.
— Synopsis of the Four Evangelists, 61.
Thomson (Robert), Diatessaron, 61.
Thomson (W.), New Testament translated, 130.
Thomson (W.), and Orme (W.), Hist. of Translation of Scriptures, 84.
Thomson (Mrs.), Illustration of the Psalms, 120.
Thruston (F.), England Safe and Triumphant, 141.
Thuani (J. A.), As Fatidicus, 125.
Thwaites (Ed.), Heptateuchus, &c. Anglo-Sax., 29.
Tigré Version, 56.
Tilloch (A.), Dissertations on the Apocalypse, 141, 142.
Tindal (W.), Translations of the Scriptures, 33, 34.
Tittmanni (C.), Meletemata Sacra in Evang. Joannis, 133.
— Opuscula Theologica, 151.
— Novum Testamentum, 16.
Tittmanni (J. A. H.), De Synonymis Nov. Test., 92.
— Translated by Craig, 92.
Todd (H. J.), Vindication of Authorized English Version of the Bible, 84.
Toepeler (T. E.), De Versione Alexandr. Pentateuchi, 83.
Toinardi (Nicolai), Harmonia, 59.
Tolley (J. G.), Paraphr. on 1 Cor., 137.
Torshell (Samuel), Design for a Harmony of the Bible, 58.
Tounley (James), Illustrations of Biblical Literature, 5.
— Literary History of the Bible, 5.
— Reasons of the Laws of Moses, 160.
Townsend (George), Harmony of the Old Testament, 59.
— Bible in chronological Order, 59.
```

```
Townsend (J.), On the Character of Moses, 115
      Townson (Dr.), Discourse on the Evangelical History, 61, 62.

Trapp (J.), Comment. on New Test., 129.

Notes on the Four Gospels, 131.

Travell (T.), Paraphr. on Psalms, 119.
   UGOLINI (B.), Thesaurus Antiquitatum Sacrarum, 156.

Uhlemann (M. F.), Canticum Canticorum, 122.

Unger (A. F.), De Parabolarum Natura, 100.

Unterkircher (C.), Hermeneutica Biblica, 99.

Uphilæ Versionis Gothicæ Editiones Variæ, 128.

Uri (J.), LXX Hebdomadum Danielis Computatio, 124, 125.

Urseni (J. H.), Arboretum Biblicum, 159.

Usserii (J., Armachensis Archiepiscopi), De LXX Interpretibus, 83

— Annales Vet. et Nov. Test., 163.

Usterii (L.), Comment. de Genuin. Joannis Evangelio, 133.
      VALCKENARII (L. C.), Selecta e Scholiis in Novum Testamentum, 128.
Vallæ (Laur.), Annot. in Nov. Test, 127.
Valpy (E.), Novum Testamentum, 128.

— Greek Testament, 18. 128.
Van-der-Boon-Mesch (A. L.), Specimen Hermeneuticum, 132.
Van Hengel (W. A.), Annotata in Nov. Test., 148, 149.
Van Heyst (D.), Diss. Theol., 151.
Vanmildert (Bp.), Principles of Scripture Interpretation, 99.
Vansittart (Mr.), Observations on the Old Testament, 162.
Van Ttl (S.), Malachias Illustratus, 126.

— Onus Analyticum, 156.
Vannildert (Bp.), Principles of Scripture Interpretation, 99.
Vansittart (Mr.), Observations on the Old Testament, 162.
Van Til (S.), Malachias Illustratus, 126.

— Opus Analyticum, 156.

— De Tabernaculo, 160.
Van Voorst (J.), De Usu Verborum, 92.
Vatabli (F.), Annot. in Psalmos, 119.
Vater (J. S.), Oracula Amosi, 126.

— Novum Testamentum, 16, 17. 128.
Vavassoris (F.), Comment. in Jobum, 117.
Velthusen (J. C.), Et aliorum Commentationes Theologicæ, 147.
Vence (Abbé), Bible, 108, 109.
Venema (H.), De Methodo Propheticâ, 100

— Dissert. in Genesin, 116.

— Comment. ad Psalmos, 119.

— Comment ad Psalmos, 119.

— Lectiones ad Ezechielem, 124.

— Dissert. ad Vaticinia Danielis, 124.

— Comment. ad Malachiam, 126.
Verhoeven (H. P. T.), 132.
Vernede (J. S.), Sermons sur Matt. V.—VII., 145.
Verpoortenii (J.), Dissertationes, 151.
Verschuirii (J. H.), Opuscula, 151.
Vialls (E.), Scripture Weights, 160.
Vignolles (A.), Chronologie de l'Histoire Sainte, 163.
Virginian Indian Version, 56.
Vitringa (C.), Commentarius in Jesaiam, 122.

— Typus Doctrines Propheticæ, 100.

— Anacrisis Apocalypseos, 140.

— Observationes Sacræ, 151.

— De Synagoga, 160.

Vogel (G. J. L.), De Dialecto Poetica Vet. Test., 76.

— Comment. in Job., 117.
Von Haven (P.), Comment. in Ep. ad Titum, 138.
Vorstii (J.), De Hebraismis Novi Testamenti, 75.

— De Adagiis Nov. Test., 100.
Vorstman (G.), Comment. in Psal. XVI., 120.
Vossius (J. G.), Chronologia Sacra, 163.
Vrimoet (E. L.), Observationes Miscell., 151.
Vullete (J. A.), Grammatica Arabica, 96.
     WAEHNER (A. G.), Antiquit. Hebr., 157.
Wahl (C. A.), Clavis Philol. Nov. Test., 93.
—— Clavis Minor, 93.
—— Comment. de Particula ει et Præpositione εις, 92.
```

Wait (D. G.), Jewish, Oriental, and Classical Antiquities, 162.

— Translation of Hug's Introd. to New Test., 71.

Wake (W.), Version of the Psalms, 119.

Wakefeld (G.), Translation or New Test., 129.

Silva Critica, 151.

Walexi (G.), Hist Eccl., Nov. Test., 164.

— Observationes in Nov. Test., 164.

— Observationes in Nov. Test., 161.

— Bibliotheca Theologica, 5.

Walchii (F. G.), Calendarium Palestinæ, 159.

Walchii (J. C.), Commentarius in Act. Apost., 134.

Walker (S. G.), Introd. to Hebrew, 87.

Waltachian Bible, 47.

Watter (H.), Letter to Bp. Marsh, 84.

Wather (O.), Vindiciae Biblica, 46.

Waltheri (Mich.), Harmonia Biblica, 16.

Watheri (Gienni), Prolegomena, 75, 76.

— Introd. ad Linguas Orientalles, 94.

— Dissert. de Linguas Orientalles, 94.

— Introd. ad Linguas Orientalles, 94.

— Warnuck (A. J.), Disquisitio Choleres, 161.

Wardurino), Errata of Protestant Bible, 84.

Warden (J.), System of Revealed Religion, 155.

Warden (J.), System of Revealed Religion, 154.

Warner (Robert), Chronological History of Jesus Christ, 61.

— Psalter, 120.

Waseri (C.), De Numis Hebreorum, 160.

— De Mensuris Hebreorum, 160.

— De Mensuris Hebreorum, 160.

Waterland (Dr. D.), Scripture Biography, 165.

Watson (G.), Genealogy of Christ, 163.

Watson (R.), Exposition of Matthew and Mark, 132.

Watson (T.), On Epsitel to Colossians, 145.

Weber (M.), Annot in Eps ad Romanos, 135.

Welley (J.), John Letter of Colossians, 141.

Warshey (P.), Biblical Gleanings, 161, 152.

Werney (F.), Biblical Gleanings, 161, 152.

Werney (F.), Biblical Gleanings, 161, 152.

Wetset (M.), Nover Test ament, 32, 33.

Wilmannatadii (Alb.), Nov. Test. Syriacch

Wilkins (G.), Hist. of Destruction of Jerusalem, 158.
Willan (R. & M.), United Gospel, 61.
Willett (Andrew), Comm. on Genesis, 115. Willan (R. & M.), United Gospel, 61.

Willett (Andrew), Comm. on Genesis, 115.

On Exodus, 116.

On Exodus, 116.

On Exodus, 116.

On Daniel, 124.

Williams (John), Concordance to the Greek Testament, 153.

Williams (J. M.), Translation of Bp. Pearson's Annal. Paulin., 163.

Williams (Tho.), Cottage Bible, 114.

Translation of Solomon's Song, 122.

Private Character of Christ, 165.

Willis (J.), Translation of the Acts, 133.

Wilson (Bp. Tho.), Commentary on the Bible, 111.

Wilson (Caroline), Gospel of the Old Test., 99.

Wilson (Cha.), Books of the Ayocrypha, 63.

Wilson (Jos.), Horee Prophetice, 124.

Wilson (Jos.), Horee Prophetice, 124.

Wilson (W.), Illustration of the New Testament, 152.

Winckleri (J. D.), Disquisitiones Philologice, 152.

Winer (G. B.), Epist ad Galatsa, cum notis, 137.

De Onkeloso ejusque Paraphrasi Chaldaica, 83.

Oratio de Interpr. N. T., 99.

Grammatik Neutest Idioms, 91.

Greek Gram. of New Test., 91.

Wintel (T.), Version of Daniel, 124.

Wiseman (N.), Horee Syriacæ, 83.

Witsii (H.), Comm. in Epist. Judæ, 140.

Miscellanea Sacra, 152.

Meletemata, 152.

Meletemata, 152. Miscellanea Sacra, 152.

 Meletemata, 152.

 Ægyptiaca, 152.

Witt (C. de), Dissert de Proverb. Salomon., 121.

Witty (J.), On Hist of Fall, 116.

Woide (Dr.), Codex Alexandrinus, 13.

Appendix ad Codicem Alexandrinum, 25.

Notitia Codicis Alexandrini, 77.

Levicon et Commerciae Forum 165. — Notitia Codicis Alexandrini, 77.

Lexicon et Grammatica Ægypt, 96.

Wolfburgi (M. C.), Observationes Sacræ, 152.

Wolfi (J. C.), Bibliotheca Hebræa, 5.

Curæ Philol. in Nov. Test., 127.

Wood (James), Dict. of Bible, 155.

Treatise on Types, 99.

Wood (Thos.), Mosaic Hist. illustrated, 116.

Woodfall's (G.) elegant and correct Editions of the English Bible, 39 40. 39, 40. 39, 40.

Woodhouse (J. C.), Translation, &c. of the Apocalypse, 141.

— Annot on Apocalypse, 141.

Wordsworth (Chr.), On Greek Article, 91.

Worsley (J.), New Test. translated, 129.

Worthington (W.), On the Fall, 116.

— On the Demoniacks, 152.

Wotton (Dr.), Discourses on the Traditions, &c. of the Pharisees, 151. 161 Wrangham (Fr.), Waltoni Prolegomena, cum Notis, &c., 75, 76 Wright (G.), Ecclesiastical Annals, 164. Wynne (R.), New Test. with Notes, 129. Wyssii (Casp.), Dialectologia Sacræ, 76.

Zahn (J. C.), Ulphilas Gothische Bibel-Uebersetzung, 28. Zanolini (A.), Lexicon Syriacum, 95. Zepperi (W.), Legum Mosaic. Explanatio, 160. Zornii (P.), Opuscula Sacra, 152. Hist. Fisci Judaici, 160. Zubli (N. H. T.), De Hymno Marise, 132.

